Why East Jordan Should Build A Schoolhouse

A Complete Statement of Facts Covering the Proposed Bonding Proposition To Be Voted Upon Next Monday.

In view of the fact that on next Monday night there has been a special meeting called for the purpose of voting bonds to be used for additions and repairs to the present building. It is worth everyone's time to seriously study the conditions which make it necessary to spend money to build. First, the old half of the building contains four rooms which were occupied during the past year by the 2nd, 4th, 5th and 6th grades, respectively. There were 143 children seated in these rooms for 190 days. In each and every one of the rooms there are windows on three sides so that a pencil throws three shadows. It is impossible for anyone to sit in any seat in this building and write without a shadow being thrown upon the written line. So this year 143 children were forced to strain their eyes for 190 days in order to do written work in connection with their school work. Secondly, there is practically no ventilation in any of these rooms. On the cold days in winter when it is necessary to keep every window closed the children do not get fresh air. This is just the time when children are in danger of catching cold and when many children do have colds which may be caught by other children. When the rooms are not ventilated and children are forced to breathe the air over and over the danger of catching contagious diseases is greatly increased. During the Flu epidemic last winter it was very noticeable that it spread most rapidly in these rooms. Poor lighting and poor ventilation alone make it necessary that something be done to improve the conditions. Since children are forced to go to school they should not be forced to sit in a room in which their health and eyesight are in danger. Thirdly, the old half of the old building is in such condition that it is liable to fall down at any time. There are four large cracks in the brick wall which runs from the basement to the roof. Two of these cracks are near to and on opposite sides of the corners, thus producing a condition which makes it impossible for this corner to fall out. If the building is left as it is, it is only a question of but a very short time until it will be absolutely necessary to do something with it. Fourthly, The East Jordan High School is now on the North Central Association of Accredited Schools. This means that any graduate of the East Jordan High School may enter not only the University of Michigan and all other colleges of this state but also any college or university in the North Central states without an entrance examination. But the University of Michigan and the North Central Association are demanding certain things of schools which the East Jordan High School does not now possess, so that if the East Jordan High School is to continue its present high standard, provision must be made for an auditorium. Not only this but the manual training department which has grown very rapidly can no longer be provided for in the small room which is being used at present. The noise from the machinery makes it impossible to do work in the rooms above it. Also there is no finishing room and the boys have great difficulty in finishing the furniture under the present conditions. There is no place for the agricultural laboratory except the little room which was temporarily fixed up in the hallway of the basement. This room is altogether too small and inadequate to do satisfactory work in. The agricultural course is partly paid for by the State and it is especially valuable at this time because much of East Jordan's prosperity must come from the development of the adjacent farms. To make the agricultural course a success a larger laboratory must be provided.

WHAT IS PROPOSED

The firm of Robinson & Campau, architects of Grand Rapids, Michigan, has been engaged by the local Board of Education to study the condition of the school and to make suggestions. This firm has had wide experience in constructing school buildings and some of the very finest schools in the State of Michigan have been the result of their work, such as the South High School of Grand Rapids, the Hackley Manual Training School of Muskegon, the Kalamazoo High School, the Sturgis High School and the Manistique High School. They are as good architects as can be secured anywhere. They have made two recommendations. First, to tear down the old half of the old building and to construct in its place a high school building which will contain a session room, six class rooms, office and toilets. The new half of the old building will be joined to it and the rooms to be used for science, commercial and domestic science. An addition to the east of the present high school building will provide for manual training and agriculture and heating plant in the basement with the auditorium above. These two buildings combined with the heating plant will cost $30,000. But this cost will not be as great as it would be to combine both buildings into one large building for the reason that the high school session room and auditorium would have to be supported by much stronger walls than in the present plan. The present high school building under this arrangement would be used for the grades. The second plan provided for by these architects is to tear down the old half of the old building and to rebuild in the place of the portion torn down a new building containing four rooms, the same as now and to build an auditorium, agriculture and manual training building the same as in the first plan. This arrangement provides for the present high school building to be kept for the high school and the present grade building to be kept for the grades. The total cost of these will be $68,000.

COSTS AND COMPARISONS

The tax rate in East Jordan at the present time is about $8 per thousand. This is very low compared with most of the cities of the state of equal size. For instance, Boyne City is paying $18 per thousand school tax; Bellaire, $20 per thousand; Onaway, $20 per thousand.

and and Gaylord, $14 per thousand. Petoskey, Cadillac, Harbor Springs and Grayling all have a higher tax rate than has East Jordan. Now, if the entire $30,000 were voted and if this were paid for in eight years, the tax rate would be increased less than $10 per thousand per year. In other words, East Jordan can vote the entire $30,000 in bonds and pay the indebtedness within the next eight years and during this time the tax rate will be no higher than that of Boyne City at the present time. If less than the $30,000 is voted, of course the rate of taxation will be correspondingly less.

The boys and girls of East Jordan are worthy of just as much as are the boys and girls of Onaway, Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Grayling, Cadillac or any of the other cities which have excellent, up-to-date buildings. East Jordan can be made a good permanent town and one of the ways to accomplish this is to provide good permanent school buildings. The future of East Jordan depends upon things being done right now, and the needs of the school require prompt action also.

To Cucumber Growers

Striped beetle is doing considerable damage to plants in this region.

The following is recommended to eliminate the pest:—A mixture containing four pounds of slack lime and one pound of sulphur; air slacked lime, or wood ashes, dusted on vines will rid your patch. We recommend Bordeaux mixture as a general spray.

Re-plant as late as July 1st.

LIBBY, McNEIL & LIBBY.

The annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Shorthorn Breeders' association will be held in the town hall at Wolverine on Wednesday, July 2, 1919, beginning at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited to be present. Gilbert L. Hicks, of Alanson, is president, and S. S. Puckett, of Petoskey, is secretary.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.

There is always a "best" farmer in any community. If you are the best in your community, isn't it because you are the most progressive, the most willing to learn from the experiences of others, and the most willing to give of your experiences to others?

Warning has been issued that federal grades call for a heavy discount for wheat in which rye is mixed. If you want the government price for your wheat, cut the rye out of it.

During the week just passed the following owners of registered pure bred live stock have been visited. Fred Wagner, Henry Korthase, and Terry S. Barber all owners of registered Shorthorn sires, John Leist, owner of a registered Holstein sire and Frank Bird, a Holstein sire and registered Berkshire hogs; James Hart a splendid Guernsey sire; Colter Brothers with registered Duroc Hogs and a herd of Jerseys that for udder development and capacity can't be beat in this part of the state, and the Loeb Farm with its magnificent Holsteins and Belgian Horses.

The four Bourisaw brothers, of St. Ignace, followed the colors into the war in France but only two of them returned home, Henry and Edmund are back but Vital and Isaac are buried beneath the poppies of Flanders fields. The latter died of wounds received on his first day in battle and Vital was killed on almost the last day of the war.

WAS ON A TORPEDOED SHIP.

Thomas A. Breslin, 645 Broadway, Albany, N. Y., writes: "Having been on a torpedoed ship coming to this country from England, I had a cold ever since. I was advised by a friend to take Foley's Honey and Tar and before long I was cured." You can stop that cough or cold that has been lingering since Spring.—Hite's Drug Store.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Paul Hewlett, loitering at night in Madison square, New York, is approached by an Eskimo dog which seems desirous of attracting his attention. He follows the animal to Daly's gambling place. As he reaches the house a girl emerges, evidently in a state of great agitation, who displays a large amount of money. She is the owner of the dog. She is attacked by two men who seek to force her into an automobile. Paul, with the dog's help, drives them away, and the girl follows him to his friends in the city. He takes her to his rooms. She is bewildered and all he can learn from her is that her name is Jacqueline. He leaves her in his rooms.

CHAPTER II—Puzzling over the situation, Paul walks for a time, but a premonition that she is in danger sends him back to his home. There he finds a man dead, stabbed, and believes Jacqueline to have killed him. She is in a semi-stupor, and is unable to remember anything.

CHAPTER III—Hewlett carries the dead man down the fire escape and leaves him in a little-used back yard. From the name of the maker, on the dog's collar, he gathered that they came from Quebec and determines to take her there.

CHAPTER IV—After banking her money they visit a store, where Jacqueline makes some purchases necessary for the journey. There Paul meets a man known to him as Simon Leroux, who evidently knows Jacqueline and believes Hewlett does also. Leroux evidently is an enemy of Jacqueline, and Paul evades him and with the girl starts for Quebec.

CHAPTER V—They travel as brother and sister and on reaching Quebec Paul seeks the maker of the dog's collar, hoping through him to learn something of Jacqueline's identity. There he meets a priest, Pere Antoine. The priest tells him Jacqueline is the daughter of Charles Duchaine, a recluse, and is married.

CHAPTER VI—Next day Paul arranges with a Captain Dubois to sail for St. Boniface. From which point they can travel by sleigh to the Duchaine chateau. Leaving Dubois Paul is attacked and left unconscious in the street.

CHAPTER VII—Recovering consciousness Paul goes to the hotel and finds Jacqueline has left with a man who claimed to be a friend. Distracted, he hastens to Dubois' boat, where he finds Jacqueline, whom Dubois had rescued by a clever trick.

CHAPTER VIII—At St. Boniface Paul purchases dogs and a sled and they set out for the Chateau Duchaine.

CHAPTER IX—On the third day of the journey the dogs are poisoned. Paul knows this to be the work of Leroux and that he is being followed. Jacqueline shows a sudden fear of Paul and leaves him. He follows her but is stricken with snow blindness and in a helpless condition is met by Leroux and his cronies, Philippe and Louis. They force Paul to leave him to die in the snow. He is found by Pere Antoine.

CHAPTER X—Hewlett lies for days in the priest's hut, recovering his sight and strength. And when Pere Antoine leaves him he sets out for the chateau. He meets Jacqueline's Eskimo dog.

CHAPTER XI—Paul follows the dog and reaches a cave. Passing through it he sees the chateau close at hand.

CHAPTER XII—Hewlett makes his way into the house without being detected and there finds Charles Duchaine an aged imbecile. He meets Jacqueline.

I perceived that the top of the table was very curiously designed. It was marked off with squares and columns, and in each square were figures in black and red. Upon one end of the table at which the old man sat was a cup-shaped, circular affair of very dark wood—teak, it resembled—once delicately inlaid with pearl. But now most of the inlay had disappeared, leaving unsightly holes.

At the bottom of the cup were a number of metallic compartments, and the whole interior portion was revolving slowly at a turn of the old man's fingers.

The ball stopped and settled in one of the compartments, and the old man took a goldpiece from one of the squares on the table, transferred a little pile of gold from his right side to his left, and jotted down some figures upon his paper.

And suddenly I was aware of an abysmal rage that filled me. It seemed like an abominable dream. I had endured so much for Jacqueline, to find myself immersed in such things in the end. I stepped forward and swept the entire heap of gold into the center of the table.

"M. Duchaine!" I shouted. "Why are you playing the fool here when your daughter is suffering persecution?"

The old man seemed to be aware of my presence for the first time. He looked up at me out of his mild old eyes and shook his head in apparent perplexity.

"You are welcome, monsieur," he said, half rising with a courtly air. "Do you wish to stake a few pieces in a game with me?"

He gathered up a handful of the coins and pushed them toward me.

"You see, monsieur, I have a system—at least I nearly have a system," he went on eagerly. "But it may not be so good as yours. Come. You shall be the banker and see if you can win my money from me. But we shall return the stakes afterward."

"M. Duchaine!" I shouted in his ear. "Where is your daughter?"

"My daughter?" he repeated in mild surprise. "Ah, yes; she has gone to New York to make our fortune with the system. But make your play, monsieur."

In desperation I thrust a goldpiece upon one of the numbers at the head of a column. The wheel stopped, and the ball rolled into one of its compartments. The old man thrust several gold pieces toward me.

I staked again and again and won every time. Within five minutes the whole heap of gold pieces lay at my side.

The dotard looked at me with an expression of imbecile terror.

"You will give them back to me?" he pleaded.

"I thrust the heap of coins toward him. "Now, M. Duchaine," I said; "in return for these you will conduct me to Mlle. Jacqueline."

"I am here, monsieur," answered a voice at the door, and I whirled, to see Jacqueline confronting me.

CHAPTER XIII.

Some Plain Speaking.

I took three steps toward her and stood still. For this was Jacqueline, but it was not my Jacqueline. It might have been Jacqueline's grandmother when she was a girl—this haughty belle with her high waist and side curls, and her ruffled-skirt and aspect of cold recognition.

She did not stir as I approached her but stood still, framed in the doorway, looking at me as though I were an unwelcome stranger. My outstretched arms fell to my sides.

"Jacqueline!" I cried. "It is I, Paul! You know me, Jacqueline!"

Jacqueline inclined her head. "Oh, yes; I know you, monsieur," she answered. "Why have you come here?"

"To save you, Jacqueline!"

She made me a mocking courtesy. "I am infinitely obliged to you, monsieur, for your good will," she said; "but I do not need your aid. I am with friends now, M.—M. Paul!"

"Do you want to see me, Jacqueline?" I asked, watching her through a whirling fog.

"No, monsieur," she answered chillingly. "No, monsieur!"

"Do you wish me to go?"

She said nothing, and I walked unsteadily toward the door. She followed me slowly. I went out of the room and pulled the door to behind me. I knew that after it had closed I should never see Jacqueline again.

She opened it and stood confronting me, and then burst into a flood of impassioned speech.

"Why have you followed me here to persecute me?" she cried. "Are you under the illusion that I am helpless? Do you think the friends who rescued me from you have forgotten that you exist? You took advantage of my helplessness. I do not want to see you. I hate you!"

"You told me that you loved me, and I believed you, Jacqueline," I answered miserably, watching the color flame into her lovely face. And I could see she remembered that.

"When I was ill you used me for your base schemes," she went on with cutting emphasis. "And you—you followed me here. Have you not had money enough? Do you want more?"

I seized her by the wrists. Thus I held her at arm's length, and my fingers tightened until I saw the flesh grow white beneath them. The intensity of my rage beat hers down and made it a puny thing.

"Jacqueline! Only a few nights ago you said you loved me; that you would never send me away until I wished to go. What is it that has happened to change you so, Jacqueline?"

I had her in my arms. She struggled feebly and I let her go.

"How dare you, monsieur!" she panted. "Go at once, or I shall call for aid!"

So I went into the passage. But before I reached the end of the little hall Jacqueline came running back to me.

"Monsieur!" she gasped. "M. Paul! For the sake of—of what I once thought you, I do not want you to be seen. You are in dreadful danger. Come back!"

"No, Mme. d'Epernay," I answered, and she winced again, as though I had struck her across the face.

"For my sake," she pleaded, catching at my arm, and at that moment I heard a door slam underneath and heavy footsteps began slowly to ascend the stairs.

"No, madame," I answered, trying to release my arm from her clasp.

"Then for the sake of—our love, Paul!" she gasped.

I suffered her to lead me back into the room. As she drew me back and closed the door behind me I heard the footsteps pause and turn along the corridor.

I knew that heavy gait as well as though I already saw Leroux's hard face before my eyes.

"Monsieur!" She gasped.

The room was completely dark. I heard Leroux tramp in and his voice mingling with the click-click of the ball in the roulette wheel.

"Who is here?" he demanded. "I am," answered Jacqueline.

"Maudit!" he burst out explosively. "Where is d'Epernay? I am tired of waiting for him!"

"I have told you many times that I do not know," answered Jacqueline.

"How long will you keep up this pretense, madame?" cried Leroux angrily. "What have you to gain by concealing the knowledge of your husband from me?"

"M. Leroux, why will you not believe that I remember nothing?" answered Jacqueline. "After my father had turned M. Louis d'Epernay out of his home, whither he had come to beg money to pay his gambling debts, you brought him back. You made my father take him back in. He wanted to marry me. But I refused, because I had no love for him. But you insisted I should marry him, because he had gained you the entrance to the seignory and helped you to acquire your power over my father."

"Go on," growled Leroux, biting his lips. "Perhaps I shall learn something."

"Nothing that you do not already know, monsieur," she flashed out with spirit. "My father came here, long ago, a political fugitive, in danger of death. You knew this, and you played upon his fears. You drained him of his last penny, and then offered him ten thousand dollars to gamble with in Quebec, telling him of the delights of the city and promising him immunity; the girl went on remorselessly. And for this he was to assign his property to Louis, thinking, of course, that he could soon make his fortune at the tables. And Louis was to marry me, and in turn sell the seignory to you. And so I married Louis under threat of death to my father."

"Oh, yes, monsieur, the plan was simple and well devised. And I knew nothing of it. But Louis d'Epernay blurted it all out to me upon our wedding night. I think the shame of knowing that I had been sold to him unhinged my mind, for I ran out into the snows."

"Now you know all, monsieur, for I remember nothing more until I found myself travelling back with M. Hewlett in the sleigh. You say I was in New York. Well, I do not remember it."

"And as for Louis d'Epernay, I know nothing of him—but I will die before he claims me as his wife!"

And then I had the measure of Leroux. He laughed and he beat down her scorn with scorn.

"You have underestimated your price, madame," he sneered. "Since you have learned so much I will tell you more. You have cost me twenty thousand dollars, and not ten; for besides the ten thousand paid to your father Louis got ten thousand also, upon the signing of the marriage contract. So swallow that, and be proud of being priced so high! And the seignory is already his, and I am waiting for him to return and sell me the ground rights for twenty-five thousand more, and if I know Louis d'Epernay he will not wait very long to get his fingers round it."

"Listen to me, Simon Leroux," said Jacqueline, standing up before him, as indomitable in spirit as he. "All your plots and schemes mean nothing to me. My only aim is to take my father away from here, from you and M. d'Epernay, and let you wrangle over your spoil. There are more than four-legged wolves, M. Leroux; there are human ones, and, like the others, when food is scarce they prey upon each other."

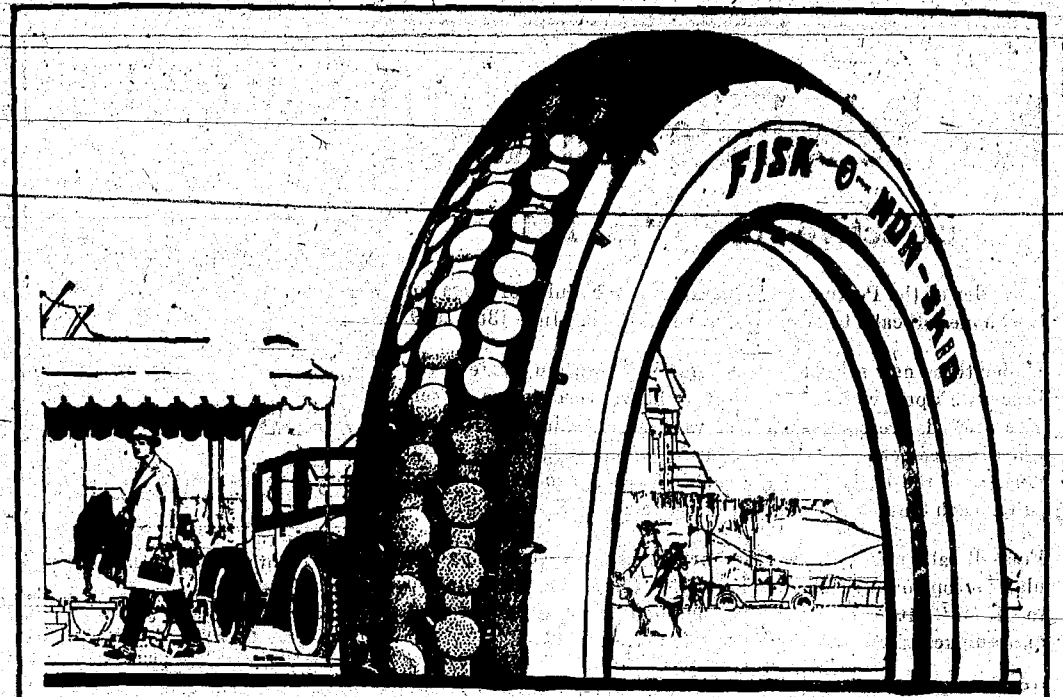

"Pardieu, I like your spirit!" exclaimed Simon, staring at her with frank admiration.

And Jacqueline's head dropped then. Unwittingly Simon had pierced her defenses.

But he never knew, for before he had time to know the graybeard rose upon his feet and rubbed his thin hands together, chuckling.

"Never mind your money, Simon," he said. "I'm going to be richer than any of you. Do you know what I did with that ten thousand? I gave it to my little daughter, and she has gone to New York to make our fortunes at

New Telephone Toll Rates

Effective June 13th, 1919

By order of the Postmaster General, new schedules of rates for telephone toll calls became effective 12:01 a. m., June 13th, 1919.

Under these new schedules the "station to station" rate is the base rate upon which all rates for the various classes of service offered, are computed. This rate is determined by the air line distance between toll points and is computed, for the initial period, on the basis of 5c for each 6 miles up to 24 miles and 5c for each 8 miles beyond that distance.

For toll calls where the calling party does not specify a particular person to be reached at the called telephone, the "station to station" rate is charged. This method provides the cheapest and quickest form of telephone toll service.

"Station to station" calls should be made as far as possible by giving the telephone number of the called telephone. Where the number is not known and telephone directory information is not available, the name and address under which the telephone is listed together with the information that it is a "station to station" call should be given to the toll operator.

For toll calls where the calling party specifies a particular person to be reached at the called telephone and the connection is established and conversation held with that person, the "person to person" rate is charged. As this service requires a greater amount of operating effort, the rate for such calls is about one-fourth greater than the "station to station" rate. (Minimum "person to person" rate 15c).

For toll calls on a "person to person" basis, where the calling party, in placing the call, designates a definite time at which he will talk and the conversation is held, the "appointment" rate is charged. As this service involves the making of the appointment in addition to the operating effort necessary for a "person to person" call, the "appointment" rate is about one-half greater than the "station to station" rate. (Minimum "appointment" rate 20c).

For toll calls made on a "person to person" basis where messenger service is required to secure attendance of the designated person at the called telephone the "messenger call" rate applies. This rate is the same as the "appointment" rate, plus any necessary charge for messenger service.

In connection with all toll calls other than those made on a "station to station" basis where the connection is established but the conversation is not held, because of any reason beyond the control of the telephone company a "report charge" is made equivalent to about one-fourth of the "station to station" rate. (Minimum "report charge" 5c, maximum $2.00).

Reduced rates, applying only to calls made on a "station to station" basis are quoted for toll service between the hours of 8:30 p. m. and 4:30 a. m. The rate between 8:30 p. m. and 12 midnight ("evening rate") is about one-half the "station to station" day rate, and between 12 midnight and 4:30 a. m. ("night rate") about one-fourth the "station to station" day rate. The minimum night rate is 25c. Where the "station to station" day rate is 25c or less no reduction is made for evening or night service.

The time at which connection is established at originating point governs the rate determining whether the day, evening or night charge applies on "station to station" service.

Day rates apply on all calls other than those made on a "station to station" basis, whether they are made during the day, evening or night.

"Collect Calls" or calls for which the charges are reversed (that is, collected from the subscriber at the called station) are allowed only in connection with "person to person" calls.

Mr. Daly's gaming house. No, there she is!" he suddenly exclaimed. "She has come back!"

Leroux wheeled round and looked from one to the other.

"Diable! So that was the purpose of your visit to New York?" he asked the girl. "So you have not quite forgotten that, madame! Where is the money?"

Jacqueline's lips quivered. I saw her glance involuntarily toward the door behind which I was standing.

And suddenly the last phase of the problem became clear to me. Jacqueline thought I had robbed her.

I stepped from behind the door and faced Leroux. "I have that money," I said curtly.

I saw his face turn white. He staggered back, and then, with a bull's-bellow, rushed at me, his heavy fists aloft.

But he stopped short when he saw my automatic pistol pointing at his chest. And he saw in my face that I was ready to shoot to kill.

"You thief—you spy—you treacherous hound, I'll murder you!" he roared.

The dotard, who had been looking at me, came forward.

"No, no, I won't have him murdered, Simon," he protested, laying a trembling hand on Leroux's shoulder. "He has almost as good a roulette system as I have."

CHAPTER XIV.

Won—and Lost.

We must have stood confronting each other for fully a minute. Then Leroux dropped his hands and smiled sourly at me.

"You seem—temporarily—to have the advantage of me, M. Hewlett," he said. "I respect your pertinacity, and now at last I am content in having discovered the motive of your enterprise. I thought you were hired by Carson. If you had been frank with me we might have come to an understanding long ago.

"You may leave us, Mme. d'Epernay," he said to Jacqueline. "No doubt your absence will spare your feelings, for we are going to be frank in our speech."

"I thank you for your consideration, M. Leroux," replied Jacqueline, and walked quietly out of the room.

Leroux sat down heavily.

"I will put down my cards," he said. "I have you here in my power. I have four men with me. This dotard—he glanced contemptuously at old Duchaine—has no bearing on the situation. You can, of course, kill me; but that would not help you. Where is Louis d'Epernay?"

"I have never seen the man," I replied.

Leroux glanced incredulously at me. "I don't know why you are lying to me," he said. "It is not to your advantage. You must have known that she was in New York; Louis must have told Carson, and he must have told you. And Louis must have told you the secret of the entrance, unless—"

"Listen to me!" I cried furiously. "I will not be badgered with any more questions. I have told you the truth. I met Mme. d'Epernay by accident, and I escorted her toward the chateau and followed her after you kidnapped her, to protect her from you."

He scowled at me ferociously, and then he began studying my face. I returned stare for stare. Finally he banged his big fist down upon the table.

"Well, it doesn't matter," he said, "because whatever your purpose you cannot do any harm. And you understand that she is a married woman. So you will, no doubt, agree to take your money and depart?"

"I shall go if she tells me to go," I answered; but even while I spoke my heart sank, for I had little hope.

"That is easily settled," answered Leroux. "I will bring her back and you shall hear the decision from her own lips."

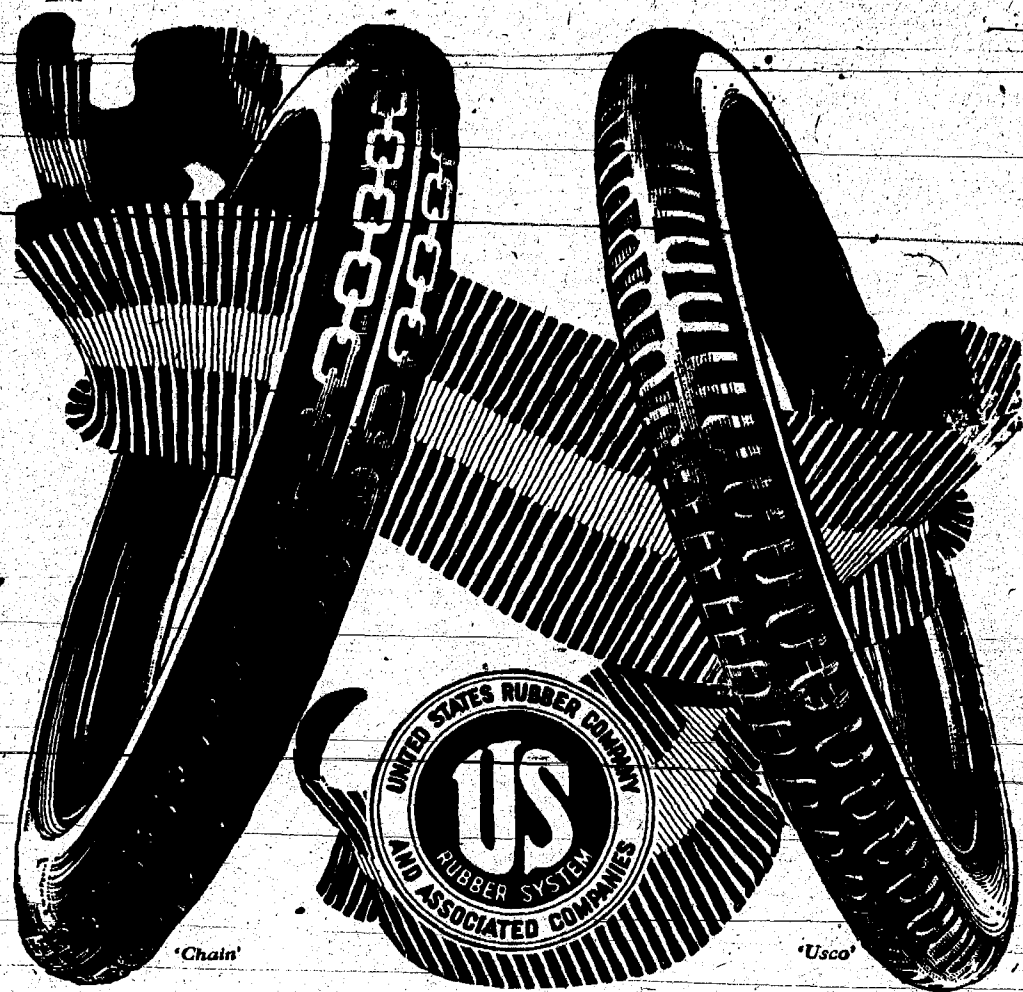

He left the room, and I sat there alone beside the dotard, listening to the click of the ball and the chink of the coins and the roar of the twin cataracts above.

There had been a sinister smoothness in Leroux's latest mood. I did not trust the man, for all his bluntness. I suspected something, and I did not intend to relax my guard.

Leroux came back with Jacqueline before I could decide.

"If you bid him, madame, M. Hewlett is willing to take his departure," said Leroux to her. "Is it your wish that he remain or go?"

School Commissioner's Notes

May L. Stewart, Commissioner

Township Commencement Exercises and Contests completed. The parents have voted them the best thing yet and ask "What can we do next year along similar lines?"

Thru default of township organization the local officers failed to report outcome of contests in Boyne Valley, Melrose, Evangeline, South Arm and Eveline. The contests were none-the-less successful and we merely regret that more could not have joined the large crowds in attendance.

The schools of the county now holding first place are Boyne Falls, Curfew—Wildwood, Springvale, Horton Bay, Hopyard, Norwood, Johnson, Ironton, Rock Elm, Knop, and McKinley.

Eighty-three names of children entitled to free tickets to fair have been reported to commissioner of schools. Will all teachers having omitted this report care for this at once in order that all promises made to boys and girls may be fulfilled in September?

Murray, Bay Shore, Maple Grove, Burgess, Johnson, Marion Center, Ironton, and all of Boyne Valley, Melrose, and Evangeline have contributed to the New Educational Hall fund. St. James expects to send to Sec. Wilson the proceeds from the school play of June 15th.

Rural school teachers will attend summer school as follows: Julia Jacobs and Loreta O'Donnell in Kalamazoo; Mrs. Fred Willis in Ferris Institute; Emily Meggison, Eva Latham, Mabel Thayer, Orthella Porter in Mount Pleasant; Thelma Spees, Glen Lake; Golda and Sylva Jensen, Lillian McNyle in Ypsilanti. The commissioner will attend the University for a six weeks' term.

House Enrolled Act 43 just received from Representative Chew adds to the list of days on which the schools must have appropriate exercises the following: Oct. 27th, Roosevelt's Birthday; Sept. 17th, Adoption of Federal Constitution; Nov. 11th, Armistice or Liberty Day; Oct. 21, Will Carleton's Birthday. The House Bill concludes with the following words as introduced by Rep. Chew: "Any teacher neglecting to perform the duty hereby imposed shall be liable to have his or her certificate revoked by the county commissioner of schools or by the Superintendent of Public Instruction."

Standard School Plates were presented during the past month to Undine and Wildwood, making a total of nine state approved schools in this county. The adjoining county of Cheboygan is still ahead of us. There are five or six schools contemplating changes during the summer months and much rivalry is displayed in seeing which can be first acknowledged as a "Good" school—100 per cent in health requirements. These with the two new buildings being erected will possibly place us even with our northern neighbors.

The shortage of teachers still threatens to force us to have some of the smaller schools close and transport their children to neighboring districts. Perhaps after all this is only a blessing in disguise. Seventeen school directors have as yet received not even one application.

A recent visit with the commissioner of Wexford county in Cadillac discovered the amazing fact that only twenty teachers have contracts as yet in that county. That leaves a shortage of eighty in that county. Most of the districts are endeavoring to consolidate with the hope of good service in spite of the times. We understand that this is with the entire approval of the state department.

A splendid boys' and girls' Club has been organized in Norwood with an enrollment of twenty-two. This was organized by Miss Golda Jensen who cared for this in addition to preparing a large school for every possible entry in the school contest. They will work for the summer months under the leadership of Roscoe Smith who is greatly interested in the work.

We say three cheers for Norwood—with a fine club, with the valedictorian, with one of the five first aid shelves in the county, with a first place in all school work totals, and with a spirit that will carry you right off your feet. (And the school building lacks but one item in the standard school requirements.) We say three cheers for Miss Jensen. She has been on the job.

Will the parents who have been in touch with the school work the past year remember the teachers whose schools have first place, remember that the other schools all have first place in something if entered in contest as almost every one was—and think of their exceeding interest in their work which prompted them to the tasks before them and render them a heartfelt thank-you? And the chairmen of the school-day work—published in a previous issue? Everyone did double-work to make the year a true success in spite of hardships and they have succeeded. To them the boys and girls, we should also turn in gratitude.

There will be no more notes during June and July, possibly during the first two weeks of August, although items sent in will be saved for future publication. The commissioner will be studying in Ann Arbor. All correspondence will be cared for as usual thru the East Jordan office.

May we wish our readers a pleasant, a joyous summer with health and success whether that success means aims accomplished or needed rest?

Expenses of Telephone Company Increased 89.3%

Mr. Geo. M. Welch, General Manager of the Michigan State Telephone Company, declares that the increased rates authorized by the Postmaster General are needed to meet an emergency unparalleled in the history of the Company.

No dividends have been paid on the common stock since 1915. From 1915 to 1918, inclusive, new business requiring added capital increased the revenue of the Company 29.5% while expenses, not including depreciation nor interest charges, increased 89.3%.

If the Company had paid a reasonable return on the investment for the year 1918 it would have needed $2,823,592 more than it did earn. As a matter of fact it did not earn enough to wholly take care of its depreciation.

The General Manager calls attention to the problem in Michigan that faced the Postmaster General when the Government took over the operation and direction of the Telephone lines last August. With a continuing deficit increasing monthly because of the increasing costs of materials and labor, added revenue had to be obtained in order to prevent the Government from having to make up the loss.

For this reason an application was made before the Michigan Railroad Commission for increased rate schedules. The rates asked for were not claimed to be adequate but it was thought that they would produce the minimum amount with which the Company could continue doing business and were so low and the amount of added revenue so small that no one could conscientiously challenge them. Since that time costs have still further advanced and conditions have changed so that the rates now authorized by the Postmaster General will not meet immediate needs.

Mr. Welch says that for six years there has been a continued effort to adjust telephone rates in Michigan. Because of rapidly changing conditions each schedule proposed has become obsolete before the regulatory bodies considering it had finally passed upon it. While charges for all other products and services have advanced—telephone rates have not increased although the cost of furnishing service has been steadily going up. With this change in rates the increase in charges for telephone service are not proportionately as great as the increase in price for all other commodities.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Porter, Secretary of the Board of Directors of School District No. 2, Boyne Valley Township, Boyne Falls, Michigan, until 12 o'clock noon, Thursday, June 26th, 1919, for the construction of a new school building for said district in accordance with drawings and specifications prepared therefor by Averton E. Munger, architect, Bay City, Michigan.

SHE FEELS YOUNGER AND STRONGER

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs. Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills. The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

There's some cure for about everything except brainlessness.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if kidneys feel like lead or bladder bothers you—Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then set fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithine, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney troubles while it is only trouble.
