HOW FRANCE CAME BACK AFTER 1870

Amazing Recuperation Recalled by Financier.

EXPECTS LIKE RECOVERY NOW

Extremely Heavy Financial Load Imposed by Germany and Incurred Through War Is Met in Advance—Loans Are Oversubscribed—Bismarck Frightened by Rapid Recuperation—Prosperity Sets In.

By BARON JACQUES DE NEUFVILLE.

Of the Banking Firm of Neufville & Co. One of the topics of discussion all over the world today is the question of the reconstruction of France. Her record in 1871 might answer the question.

In May, 1871, France signed with the victorious Germans the treaty of Frankfurt, under which she surrendered Alsace-Lorraine. She obligated herself, besides, to pay as a war indemnity 500,000,000 francs within 30 days after the re-establishment of the authority of the Versailles government in Paris: 1,000,000,000 in 1871, 500,000,000 by May 1, 1872, and the last 3,000,000,000 by March 2, 1874.

On the other hand, the evacuation of the French departments (Seine, Seine et Marne, Seine et Oise, Oise) by the German troops was only to take place after payment of the third half-billion, and the German troops of occupation had the right of levying requisitions in the occupied departments, and even outside of these, should the French government fail to carry out the obligations undertaken by them for their maintenance.

The financial load imposed by the war was extremely heavy. It was necessary to face the expenses incurred during the war and to pay the billions indemnity, notwithstanding the losses caused to agriculture, commerce, and industry by the cessation of work. The losses in francs due to the war were estimated as follows:

Indemnity payable to Germany ..... 5,000,000,000
Interest on this indemnity ..... 801,145,078
Cost of issuing the loans ..... 275,504,203
Deficits for years 1870-71, 2,700,000,000
Actual loss of Alsace-Lorraine ..... 7,000,000,000
Total more than ..... 15,000,000,000

These charges were all the heavier because France had lost the 1,597,228 inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine, and the population of the remaining territory had decreased by 491,515.

The worst side of France's position was the maintenance of the German army of occupation in several departments, including the department of the Seine, which surrounds Paris. Therefore the first duty of the French government was to center all its energy on the execution of the financial clauses of the treaty so as to obtain the final evacuation of the German army.

Paying the Indemnity.

The government finally decided that the best policy was to issue loans as fast as possible to raise the money for the payment of the war indemnity, and meanwhile to reorganize the economic situation of France, letting trade and industry readjust themselves and increasing the taxes prudently and progressively so as not to disturb the investment power of the country and its reconstruction.

The main effort was made in the line of indirect taxation, customs duties, and taxes on articles such as sugar, coffee, alcohol, etc. In October, 1871, registry fees and stamps were increased; extra duties were charged on passengers' tickets and railway freights; the duties on matches were raised at first, and later on, a monopoly of this article was organized. In 1872 fresh alterations were brought into the system of taxation, and a tax on raw materials was passed, in spite of the discontent of manufacturers.

The first loan of two billions was voted on June 23, 1871, and on June 27 it was issued at 82.50.

"Everything had to be improvised," said Thiers. "The general management of the loan was hastily organized on the Louvre, and the wickets and offices for the subscriptions were placed in the Palais de l'Industrie. The treasury officials had to manage the best they could. On the 26th things were more or less ready, and on the morning of the 27th the subscribers were crowding the wickets." The number of individual subscribers was 331,905 and the capital subscribed amounted to 4,897,000,000, of which 2,225,000,000 was allotted.

The brilliant result of this first loan created the most favorable impression. The French people saw in it the first step toward the rehabilitation of France and the re-establishment of its credit.

Bismarck had insisted that the indemnity payments should be made only in the main commercial cities of Germany, and exclusively in gold, or in silver, or in banknotes of the banks of England, Prussia, the Netherlands, or Belgium, or in bills of exchange approved by German experts. To do this it was necessary to carry out exchange operations on a scale never witnessed before.

Nevertheless, the payment of the two first billions was completed between June, 1871, and March, 1872, somewhat in advance of the stipulated dates.

Germany Amazed.

Owing to the continual complaints coming from the occupied territories, and encouraged by the favorable results already obtained, the government decided to appeal at once to the nation with the hope of raising the whole of the three billions still needed for the liberation of the eastern departments, which were still occupied. The loan was voted in July, 1872. It was covered more than thirteen times. The number of subscribers was 934,276 and the subscriptions amounted to 2,592,000,000 francs of rente, or, in capital, 43,900,000,000 francs. This result caused universal joy, and gave France a fresh start with firm confidence in her future.

Finally, in March, 1873, the treaty of evacuation was signed, by which Germany was to move out of the eastern departments still occupied by her, and France undertook to pay and paid the last billion in several payments from May to September, 1873, that is to say, two years in advance of the terms of the peace treaty.

Thiers was hailed as the "Liberator of the Territory," and France, at last free of German occupation, could devote herself to her material reconstruction, which had begun the very day after her defeat.

France was gradually recovering, to the great astonishment of the enemy. The Germans were wondering how they could check such remarkable progress. From the end of 1871 the industrial and commercial activity, which had been suspended for more than a year, began to show an extraordinary development. Orders flowed into France from home and from foreign traders. All those who had been directly struck by war showed a confidence, a joy, and an instinctive need to repair their losses and fill up all the gaps. Faith in the future was uppermost, and all the signs of rapid recuperation were clearly visible; so much so that Bismarck was frightened by the rapid progress of "this conquered and disjointed power, which had never submitted and whose vitality appeared to him to be a permanent threat, which was for him both a stimulus and a remorse."

Renewed Prosperity.

In November, 1872, at the meeting of the assembly, M. Thiers made a detailed statement of the situation of the country; he drew attention to the wonderful progress of foreign trade, which amounted to 7,014 millions, as against 6,227 millions in 1869, which had been the most prosperous of all the years of the empire.

From 1872 to 1880, France enjoyed an ever-growing economic prosperity. The agricultural figures in some years were such as had never been seen before, even when France had two more rich provinces. Industrial farming was greatly developed in the north-east, and the yields were so remarkable that for a time it was thought the soil alone could heal all the wounds the nation had received.

In spite of the loss of Alsace-Lorraine the output of the coal mines, which had been 156,000,000 in 1869, reached the following figures:

In 1871.....164,000,000
In 1872.....212,000,000
In 1873.....290,000,000
The production of pig iron, which was 120,000,000 in 1869, reached:
In 1872.....147,000,000
In 1873.....190,000,000
The output of iron and steel was 245,000,000 in 1869. It reached:
In 1872.....314,000,000
In 1873.....362,000,000

The industrial production of textiles was increasing in the same proportion. In 1869 124,331,000 kilograms of cotton goods were manufactured. In 1874 there were 193,527,000 kilograms, and in 1876 there were 157,850,000. Exports of woolen goods were more than 262,000,000 in 1869 and 317,000,000 in 1876. Silk goods rose from 410,000,000 in 1869 to 478,000,000 in 1873.

Manufactured goods shipped outward rose as follows:

In 1869.....1,069,000,000
In 1871.....1,544,000,000
In 1872.....1,905,000,000
In 1873.....1,984,000,000

Wages increased almost everywhere between 1871 and 1880, taxes were collected with great ease, and, in spite of heavy charges, national wealth increased.

In 1871 France exhibited amazing recuperative powers. Today France can do the same thing again.

OLIVE BUTTER LATEST

California Specialists Perfect New Processes for Handling Olives.

Working in conjunction with the agricultural department at the California university, Charles A. Wetmore has perfected three new processes for handling olives.

One is to keep them indefinitely before extracting the oil or pickling them; the second is to extract oil in small quantities, by methods which can be used by any producer; the third is to produce a perfectly new food product for California, "olive butter," after the oil has been extracted.

KNIGHT IN 1908 IS NOW PAUPER

Pitiful Ending of Career of Sir Luke White, Once Member of Parliament.

BANKRUPT AND A WRECK

Some of His Poor Constituents Lost Their All by Inventing It to Him—War Makes Financial Distress Known.

London.—From a position of affluence, popularity and public service which won him a seat in parliament and a knighthood, Sir Luke White is ending his days as the inmate of a workhouse infirmary in Driffield. Clever enough to rise from poverty to a noted career, injudicious investments brought him low, and at the height of his political power he was forced to confess himself bankrupt. He carried down with him numerous trusting constituents, and his liabilities of $135,000 included $95,000 in loans from poor people who had confided their all to him. The shame of having thus wrecked the savings of those who believed in him completely unnerved him. Now he is dependent on public charity, his spirit utterly crushed, and he is one of the most pitiful figures in the north of England.

Began as Office Boy.

Born in Deighton, near York, in 1845, he was an office boy at fifteen for a solicitor, who paid him about 90 cents a week. After eight years in that service, of course with increasing income, he became managing clerk for another solicitor in Driffield. In another six years he was admitted to the bar as solicitor, and in the same year he succeeded to the practice of his employer, who had died.

He speedily became known as a local preacher and speaker for a large district, and he was highly popular and successful. For years he was chairman of the local board, and then of the urban district council. Then he went to the East Riding county council. In 1896 he was appointed one of the coroners for East Riding. He acted as election agent for Sir Angus Holden, Liberal member of parliament for the Buckrose division, and when Sir Angus died in 1900 White was chosen as his successor. In 1908 he was knighted.

He continued to divide his time between his attendance at Westminster and his business in Yorkshire, but as he gave more time to his parliamentary duties than to his private affairs, his practice suffered. The war brought out the fact that he was in financial distress, and last fall he resigned his seat and filed a petition in bankruptcy. It appeared in the bankruptcy proceedings that some of his poor constituents had confided their money to him to put into war loans.

Popular For Years.

Friends provided for him for awhile in a sanitarium near Scarborough. When that fund was exhausted he was removed to the workhouse infirmary, which almost adjoins the court in which he formerly practised. His tragic misfortune caused a great sensation in East Yorkshire; where for years he had been so well known and liked that in the town of Bridlington particularly his photograph hung on the walls of every other house. He had been eminently a poor man's lawyer.

His fate is now brought fresh to public notice by an action against Herbert Brown, a deputy coroner for the East Riding of Yorkshire, who is charged, jointly with Sir Luke, with having appropriated to the personal use of Sir Luke in 1907 $1,000 intrusted to them by Witham Hatfield for investment. Sir Luke escapes arraignment owing to his physical and nervous collapse.

NEW CURB ON DRUG TRAFFIC

Rules to Make More Effective Provisions of Harrison Law Being Framed.

COURT DECISIONS HELP OUT

Assist the Internal Revenue Bureau in Defining Its Power Clearly—Leave No Loopholes for Quacks or Unscrupulous Physicians.

Washington.—The bureau of internal revenue is framing new regulations to make more effective the provisions of the Harrison narcotic law as amended February 24, 1919. The regulations will describe more fully the details of registration and stamping of drug packages and will tend to enable the bureau to keep closer track of physicians who are prescribing drugs.

Court Decisions Help.

Recent decisions by the United States Supreme court have helped the bureau by defining its power clearly. The recent decision in the case of Bascom C. Thompson is the first to expound the legal rights of a physician in prescribing drugs. It declared a physician cannot prescribe drugs simply to relieve the cravings of an addict, and that prescriptions for that purpose can be issued only on a special blank furnished by the commissioner of internal revenue.

The bureau has been hampered in its pursuit of illegitimate traffic in drugs through the ignorance or indifference of the public to the extent to which drug habits have grown and the evils attendant thereon. Even in medical circles there are still old-fashioned doctors who do not appreciate the evils of the habit or the ease with which it is contracted.

The Harrison law has a moral object in view as well as the collection of revenue. Its constitutionality has been upheld by the Supreme court as no invasion of the police powers of the states, as it is a revenue act. The new regulations will emphasize the necessity for a physician to give his personal attention to curing a patient of the drug habit. Confinement for the patient will be insisted upon, without which, in the opinion of leading physicians, no patient can be cured effectively.

Leave No Loopholes.

The regulations will be issued soon. Every effort will be made not to interfere with the recognized medical necessity for the use of drugs, without at the same time leaving any loophole by which quacks or unscrupulous physicians may dispense drugs purely for the satisfaction of addicts and for gain to themselves.

Numerous cases have been brought to the attention of the bureau where physicians have prescribed drugs in alleged attempts to cure addicts, and have dispensed them by mail or express. This practice is a violation of the spirit of the law and is only a blind to cover illegitimate traffic.

The bureau intends to curb all activities which enable a physician to take undue advantage of his licensed power.

FRENCH HAD 100-MILE GUN

Chief Engineer of Navy Had Cannon Ready at Time of Armistice Signing.

Paris.—While giving evidence before a committee of the chamber of deputies investigating the Bley question M. L. Bourgeois, chief engineer of the navy department, said that at the time Paris was being bombarded by German long-range guns he had designed a cannon with a range of 100 miles, which could be put in position in an hour.

M. Bourgeois stated that before that time he had urged upon Albert Thomas, then undersecretary of state for war and munitions, the importance of bombarding the Bley iron works and had been asked to design a long-range cannon.

His plans, however, were sent from one committee to another and the order to manufacture it was not given until February, 1918. The gun was ready for action at the time the armistice was signed, he said.

Woke Up Wife to Ask Divorce.

Alleging that her husband would wake her up at all hours of the night and demand she get a divorce, Mrs. Robert Crossland of Terre Haute, Ind., one of the richest young women in the state, has been granted a separation from Robert Crossman on the ground of cruelty.

BANGOR "RUM HOUND" MAKES A QUEER FIND

Nothing Less Than Hens Which, Seemingly, Lay Quart Bottles of Whisky.

Other towns have hens that lay big eggs, but Bangor, Me., has a few biddies that it would seem, lay quart bottles of whisky.

Sheriff Fernandez and his deputies are trying to find out who owns these remarkable hens, but thus far all they know is that the flock has its habitat in a yard in Pine street. Deputies King and Noddin went up there browsing around for the stuff that congress abhors, and for a moment stood admiring the handsome biddies scratching in the straw of their inclosure.

There seemed to be an unusually liberal supply of straw. Rum hounds notice these little things. One hen was particularly active and energetic in her scratching, and presently she uncovered, right where one would look for eggs, a quart bottle of whisky worth in these dusty days at least $10.

Then the deputies took a turn at scratching in the straw and uncovered 24 more bottles. They are whistling a new tune around the county jail now. They call it "Whisky in the straw."

MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL IN AMERICAN SOCIETY

Miss Geraldine Graham, daughter of Mrs. William Miller Graham of Santa Barbara, Cal., is generally acclaimed as the most beautiful young woman in American society.

Must Tell Their Exact Age.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Judge F. H. Taft of the superior court has ruled that hereafter when women are asked their ages in his court they must not say, "I'm over twenty-one," but will be required to give the exact years.

American Soldier Dead Will Be Buried in U. S.

Three-fourths of the American dead in France will find their final resting place in American soil. Answering an inquiry from Senator Chamberlain as to the wishes of relatives, General Marsh, chief of staff, said it was estimated that replies from relatives thus far received showed not more than 25 per cent who expressed a preference that the soldier's body remain permanently in France.

With more than 4,000,000 soldier dead of allied and enemy countries buried in French soil, General Marsh said, that nation was desirous of proceeding slowly with the task of exhuming those that are to go to their home lands. No date has yet been set for beginning the return of American dead.

Commission Proceedings.

Special meeting of the City Commission held at the commission rooms, Thursday, Aug. 14, 1919.

Meeting was called to order by Mayor Wilson. Present—Wilson and Crowell. Absent—Gidley.

The City Commission of the City of East Jordan, Michigan, having under consideration the matter of paving of Esterly Street, from the east end of the present pavement to the east line of Fourth Street, of William Street, from the east line of Main Street, to the east line of Third Street and of Second St., from the north line of Garfield Street to the north line of Mill Street, Commissioner Crowell offered the following resolution and moved its adoption. Seconded by Mayor Wilson:

WHEREAS, a majority of the owners of frontage on Esterly Street, from the east end of the present pavement to the east line of Fourth Street, of William Street, from the east line of Main Street, to the east line of Third Street, and of Second Street, from the north line of Garfield Street to the north line of Mill Street have petitioned the City Commission of the City of East Jordan, Michigan, to change the paving on said streets from Tarriva pavement to Concrete pavement.

Be It Resolved, that the City Commission of the City of East Jordan, Michigan, grant the said petition and that the City Clerk be and hereby is instructed to give public notice of the letting of the contract for paving Esterly Street, from the east end of the present pavement to the east line of Fourth Street, of William Street, from the east line of Main Street to the east line of Third Street and of Second St., from the north line of Garfield Street to the north line of Mill Street, with cement according to the plans and specifications thereof, on file in the office of the City Clerk and that this Commission will meet on the 25th day of August A. D. 1919 at eight o'clock p. m., at its usual place of meeting for the purpose of opening and reading said bids. Said notice shall be published for two successive weeks in the East Jordan Enterprise and Charlevoix County Herald.

Adopted by the City Commission of the City of East Jordan on the 14th day of Aug., A. D. 1919, by an aye and nay vote as follows:

Ayes—Wilson, and Crowell.
Nays—none.

OTIS J. SMITH, City Clerk.

NOTICE TO PAVING CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals addressed to the City Clerk and endorsed proposals for constructing pavement will be received by the City Commission of East Jordan, Charlevoix County, Michigan, until eight o'clock p. m., of Monday, August 25th, 1919, and then and there publicly opened and read by the City Clerk for furnishing the necessary labor and materials for paving with concrete with the necessary drainage or otherwise improving certain portions of William Street, from the east line of Main St., to the east line of Third Street, of Second Street, from the north line of Garfield Street to the north line of Esterly Street, according to the plans and specifications therefore on file in the office of the City Clerk. Also bids for furnishing the necessary labor and materials for paving with concrete, with the necessary curbing, drainage or otherwise improving Esterly Street from the east line of the cement pavement now on Esterly Street to the east line of Fourth Street and Second Street from the south line of Esterly Street to the north line of Mill Street, according to the plans and specifications now on file in the office of the City Clerk.

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check on some solvent bank payable to the order of the City Treasurer in the amount of One Hundred Fifty Dollars ($150.00), as a guarantee that if the proposal is accepted a contract will be entered into and the required bond will be furnished for the performance of the work.

Plans and specifications can be seen, and forms of proposals obtained at the office of the City Clerk.

The Commission reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the Commission.
OTIS J. SMITH, City Clerk.

Is it Possible to Legislate Life and Brains?

Swift & Company is primarily an organization of men, not a collection of brick, mortar, and machinery.

Packing Plants, their equipment and usefulness are only outward symbols of the intelligence, life-long experience, and right purpose of the men who compose the organization and of those who direct it.

Will not Government direction of the packing industry, now contemplated by Congress, take over the empty husk of physical property and equipment and sacrifice the initiative, experience and devotion of these men, which is the life itself of the industry?

What legislation, what political adroitness could replace such life and brains, once driven out?

Stanolind Tractor Oil
Extra Heavy Polarine Oil

One of these three is the correct oil for your tractor.

Our Engineering Staff has prepared a chart showing which one will give the best results in your particular tractor. The nearest Standard Oil representative will be glad to show it to you.

KEEP 300 JOB BUREAUS OPEN

Welfare Societies Respond to Appeal of Federal Employment Service.

FIND WORK FOR SOLDIERS

Two Hundred and Sixty-four Offices Already Assured, With Replies From Five States Still to Be Received.

Washington.—So great has been the response of the country to the appeal of the United States employment service to assist in the maintenance of its soldiers' and civilian workers' placement organization in the field that with returns from five large states not yet received, and those from none of the other states complete, the continuance of 204 employment offices already is assured. Because of its limited appropriation the federal employment service is itself able to finance but sixty offices, and the outside support for the other 200 offices will be continued until congress acts upon the Nolan-Kenyon bills for a permanent national employment service.

Welfare organizations and chambers of commerce lead among the various agencies that are keeping federal employment offices open, supplying quarters, personnel and funds. The agencies which have been co-operating with the employment service since demobilization began also are continuing their support of the 2,000 emergency bureaus for returning soldiers and sailors.

Keep 300 Open.

John B. Densmore, director general of the United States employment service, predicted that when the returns from the states are complete it will be found that considerably more than three hundred federal offices will be open through voluntary contributions. From the end of March to June 30, he said, more than four hundred offices were kept in operation by outside funds in expectation that after the latter date the employment service would be able to resume their financing, but because of the reduced appropriation for the new fiscal year, he explained, continued support is being asked for the next five months, within which period, it is understood, congress will have acted on the measure for a permanent service.

"The response of the country indicates a general desire of all to give practical assistance to the soldier and civilian war worker seeking to re-establish himself," Mr. Densmore said. "It also shows that American communities, having learned the value of having a central public employment office during the last eighteen months, want those offices continued."

Locusts Get Goats' Goats.

San Diego, Cal.—Locusts have eaten practically all vegetation on Guadalupe Island, 175 miles south of here. Officers of the motorship Gryme, which arrived here, estimated 75,000 wild goats on the island will starve. The island belongs to Mexico. The locusts are the first to visit the island in more than fifty years.

THE LUCKY STONE

By ELIZABETH R. GREENE

Jerry was coming home. Anne's heart sang the words one minute, and sighed them dejectedly the next—for what would Uncle Nate say when Jerry told him of their love and future plans?

The troublesome question lay like a cloud upon Anne's happiness, as one by one her busy fingers tucked away exquisitely embroidered linens into the little hope chest in her room.

It was ridiculous to think that the petty quarrel over the loss of a "lucky" stone should wreck her happiness, but Anne knew that her uncle had a reputation for being "set," which, alas, he managed to live fairly well up to.

"But he won't spoil my life, just for an old 'lucky' stone!" argued Anne, one day to Aunt Jane, as they sat at their sewing.

Twelve years ago Uncle Nate had purchased at a fair in Buxton a glittering red bauble called a "lucky" stone.

Then one fateful day—Anne had never forgotten it—the magic stone had mysteriously disappeared out of Uncle Nate's pocket.

It had happened the day that he and Jerry's Uncle Cyrus had mowed the south field together. Anne remembered that her uncle had been overcome by the heat and helped to the house by his old pal, Cyrus. Lying on the lounge in the cool living room, Uncle Nate had lapsed into brief unconsciousness. Later that same day he had started them all by announcing the loss of the "lucky" stone.

Then one dreadful day Uncle Nate, tremulous with anger, had stamped into the kitchen and wrathfully declared to Anne and Aunt Jane that "Cyrus had stolen the 'lucky' stone!"

Thus matters stood when one May afternoon Anne walked slowly along the dusty road, from a trip in town.

That her uncle would never consent to her marrying Jerry, the nephew of his old enemy, Anne knew only too well; but Jerry, joyous, undaunted Jerry, still confidently believed that Uncle Nate could be "won over."

Absorbed in her thoughts, Anne took the narrow footpath leading across lots to Aunt Jane's, quite unconscious that a tall, khaki-clad figure was hurrying joyously after her.

The third time that Jerry whistled, Anne turned and looked behind her.

"Jerry—where on earth did you come from?" she cried joyously, as her lover flung an arm, wearing two gold service stripes, quickly about her.

"Glad to see me, little girl!" he asked eagerly.

"Yes," breathed Anne, "but—" She turned away her eyes. How could she make him understand the hopelessness of their love?

Jerry, seeing her unhappy face, quickly divined its meaning.

"Don't worry about Uncle Nate, sweetheart," he said cheerily. "I'm going right now to beard the lion—"

So together they crossed the pasture to the field where Uncle Nate was planting. Here Anne left Jerry to make his way alone to her uncle.

Anne was in the garden when Jerry, white and determined, strode up to her. "You were right, Anne," he said bitterly, "about Uncle Nate—"

"Oh, Jerry, I told you so!" faltered Anne, woman-like. "What did he say?"

"That 'no niece of his should marry the nephew of a thief'—"

Anne nodded. "You see, it's as I told you," she said. "Our only hope is to find the 'lucky' stone—"

"Anne, I'll not give you up for a dozen Uncle Nates. When will you marry me?"

"The day I'm twenty-one," she flashed, catching his spirit.

"But that's a whole year away!" Jerry looked disappointed.

"Yes; but perhaps we'll find the stone before—"

After Jerry had gone, Anne returned to the house. Despite her lover's assuring words, she felt depressed.

Presently soft footsteps sounded outside her door.

"Anne, dear."

Anne's answer was a sob. Then quietly Aunt Jane opened the door and came in. Tenderly she smoothed in silent sympathy Anne's silken hair that had escaped from its pins. There was no need of words between them.

But after Anne had had her "cry" she felt better.

Left alone, Anne proceeded to rearrange her disordered locks. Finding one of the pins missing, and thinking that perhaps it had slipped into the crevice in the back of the lounge she ran her fingers into the opening. Something hard touched her hand. Drawing it forth, a familiar red stone met her astonished gaze.

"The 'lucky' stone!" cried Anne incredulously; remembering suddenly that this was the lounge upon which her uncle had lain the day he had suffered from sunstroke, so long ago. The stone must have fallen from his pocket then and lodged in the lounge, where it had remained hidden all these years.

"You've kept your secret pretty well, old lounge," said Anne aloud, "but I've found you out at last."

Then with joyous steps she ran in search of Uncle Nate, who soon straightened matters with Cyrus, much to the comfort of Anne and Jerry, who together with Aunt Jane, Cyrus and Uncle Nate, celebrated the reunion which had brought boundless joy to all, especially Anne and Jerry.

JIMMY'S BOSS

By GLADYS PLUMMER

Jimmy Murphy's freckled forehead assumed perplexed lines as he opened his blue eyes and beheld a long room bordered by numerous small white beds, similar to the one he occupied, but was immediately smoothed by remembrance as a sharp pain shot through his left leg.

"A hospital," came from the thin, expressive lips.

"Yes, dear, a hospital."

Jimmy's head turned quickly to the pretty nurse sitting at his bedside. "You ran in front of an automobile and your left leg is broken. Keep up good courage, and in a few weeks you will be about again. I will tell the house doctor you are conscious," she continued, "and he will send word to your home."

"He'll have a job to find it, I guess," said the boy, then adding suddenly: "I must let my boss know, though."

"The head nurse will be here soon to fill out your bedside card. You give her your employer's telephone number, and she will deliver any message you wish," said Miss Ashby kindly. "I go off duty now and will see you again in the evening."

The boy's intelligent eyes watched the slim little figure of the nurse as she passed between the rows of beds and out through the large swinging doors.

Jimmy's head dropped back on the cool pillow, and a sigh of momentary, physical peace escaped him.

"She's just like the girl my boss always tells me about, and the tears are always hanging round the corners of his eyes when he talks about her," he mused.

"Better today, Jimmy?" asked Miss Ashby next morning, as she placed the thermometer in his mouth.

"I'm not going to whine, nurse," but his slight movement caused a barely perceptible twitching of the mouth.

The nurse bent over him, her cool hands bringing a wonderful peace.

"Say, nurse, you've got hair that looks like gold in the sunlight, too, haven't you?"

Jimmy's eyes glistened with the recollections of the man's description of the girl in his stories. "And eyes that look like violets growing in the fields," he continued.

"Oh, Jimmy, I do hope you are not getting worse."

The boy became serious at once. "Sure not," he said reassuringly. "I'm lots better. I was only thinking about a girl somebody told me about once. I'm thinking about something else, too, Miss Ashby. If I don't get to work by Monday I lose my job. The boss he sent word—and it's Saturday now."

"That's ridiculous, Jimmy. Don't worry about that."

"But you know, nurse, it's an awful hard beginning to a business career to lose your job. I wouldn't lose mine for anything."

"You cannot possibly go to work by that time, Jimmy. What is his address? I will go and see him myself."

Jimmy's eyes brightened. "It's the Cumberland building, room 24. He's alone about four o'clock in the afternoon, and that's the time I always ask favors."

"All right, Jimmy; don't worry about it any more. Good-by, and I will tell you all about it tomorrow."

His blue eyes never left the graceful figure as she left the ward.

"She's just sunshine and violets," he said to himself, and his contented brain was quiet.

The next morning as Miss Ashby was making Jimmy's bed he thought the violets shone brighter than ever in her eyes.

"It's all right, dear," she said. "The boss says you may stay until you are absolutely well. And, Jimmy—" she was not looking at the boy now—"you did not tell me his name, but I found that—that I knew him very well. He did not understand about your fear of losing your place. What did you mean, dear?"

Jimmy hesitated a moment, then said: "I wanted to do something for him, nurse. You see, he used to tell me a story every day when he came to bring me things, and every story had a girl in it. And one day I said to him: 'That's just like Miss Ashby.'"

"What do you know about Miss Ashby?" he asked; and then I told him you was my morning nurse.

"I used to see her; real often once, Jimmy," he said to me after a while.

"Not now?" I said. "If you'd seen her once, I shouldn't think you'd ever want to stop."

"I didn't," he said; "she won't see me."

"And then, Miss Ashby, I'll tell you. He never told me I'd lose my job if I wasn't there Monday. I kept thinking about all he had done for me, and I knew he wanted to see you badly; so I lied to get you to see him again."

The blue eyes closed; gentle lips pressed the brow. In her voice was the sweet tones of old.

"He's going to be my boss, too, Jimmy," she whispered softly in his ear, "and you are going to live with us."

Jimmy did not answer, but he knew how violets glowed when life was in them.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water.

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of combustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which inhabit the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and stomach-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach, should be urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

PALM FLOUNDER OFF FOR SOLE

Fishermen Are Said to Be Fooling Eastern Housewives.

NO TRUE SOLE ON THIS SIDE

Pseudopleuronectes Dignabilla Masquerading as His Distant and More Distinguished Relative Solea Vulgaris—Big Work Done by Federal Bureau in Rescuing Food Fishes Along Mississippi and Illinois Rivers.

Many a Washington family is enjoying an agreeable fish sold to them as genuine English sole. The wholesale dealers get it from New York. The story in Washington market goes to the effect that this fish, having been driven from the North sea by the racket of war and exploding mines, has come to America and is now being extensively caught along our eastern shores.

Government ichthyologists smile and say there never has been any solea vulgaris, or European sole, in American waters and very little at any time on our tables—none at all of late years. They suspect that the pseudopleuronectes dignabilla, a common flounder taken off the Georges Banks from Massachusetts to Nova Scotia, is masquerading as his distant and more distinguished relative. Or it may be that a flat fish with a longer name—glyptocephalus cynoglossus—is the impersonator.

Massachusetts fishermen have been catching during the present year, as they did last year for the first time in commercial quantities, this last fish, which they call sole or gray sole. The species has been identified as the craig fluke or pole, or deep sea flounder. It is found off both shores of the Atlantic ocean as far south as Delaware bay and Ireland and in deep water. It was first caught here in 1877 in Massachusetts bay. It is an excellent food fish, but it is nothing like the English sole.

The "lemon sole" of European waters is the true sole, and is never found on this side of the Atlantic. The fish of America most nearly related to it in appearance, but not in flavor, is a species of sole which is not eaten by man. Its common name is "hog choker," bestowed because it often sticks in the throats of swine that feed upon it in shallow pools left by the recession of the tides. The sale of this fish in market being out of the question, the experts say that it must be common American summer flounder that is being misrepresented to housewives and appearing on menus as filet de sole.

Rescuing Native Food Fishes.

Little is known in the East of the big work being done by the bureau of fisheries in rescuing food fishes along the Mississippi and Illinois rivers. The states of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois are particularly interested and are co-operating in the work, which extends down to Louisiana. Every year the two great streams overflow and the floods receding leave millions of fine young fish to perish beyond the banks in the pockets or pools that soon dry up.

Until recently no attention was paid to this waste. In the fiscal year of 1917 more than 9,000,000 fish were returned to the rivers or put into brooks or nearby lakes; in 1918 the number was 28,000,000; in 1919 it reached 55,000,000, and up to July 1 this year it was close to 100,000,000. Remote states are asking for a supply and the gain in the use of fish for food is marked all through the middle West.

Hundreds of thousands of black bass, pike and perch, and millions of carp, crappies, catfish and buffalo fish are yearly saved to restock the big rivers and grow up in the ponds, lakes and streams for miles around.

Methods of Saving Fish.

The rescue work is done in two ways. Where possible ditches are dug from the pools and the stranded fish drained back to the rivers. By far the greater number are caught in nets, emptied into buckets and restored to their native waters or shipped to distant places needing them. The total cost to the government is about $20,000 a year.

The Winona County Fisherman's association of Minnesota reports that the good effects are noted in improved fishing both for market and for sport. It is held that, assuming that if half of the fish rescued last year reach a pound in weight, there have been saved 17,000,000 pounds of excellent food.

This year the rescue of land-locked fish will be conducted on a much enlarged scale. Twelve crews of men will be at work. The season begins on August 1. The government will have entire charge, the state of Minnesota having agreed to co-operate, with headquarters at the Homer station, which will cover the entire district between Prescott and Sabula, Iowa. The forecast is that in the next few months 70,000,000 fish will be saved in this territory and half that number in the districts below.

ATHLETICS FOR MERCHANT 'GOBS'

Sports of All Kinds Provided for Men in Training.

BASEBALL IS MOST POPULAR

Basketball, Swimming, Rowing Races, Boxing and Track Contests Are All Encouraged as a Part of Training to Fit Men for Duties at Sea—Military Setting Up Exercises Given Under Direction of Athletic Trainer.

Athletics for merchant sailors were unheard of until the United States shipping board began to develop the country's trade fleets.

Now at the training stations, maintained by the board's recruiting service, where young Americans by the thousands have been fitted for service in merchant crews, it is the accepted rule to maintain a full schedule of athletic events, for the benefit of the apprentices in training.

These apprentices are all American young men, a majority of whom have played baseball at home, and all of whom are interested in the national game. At the training stations of the merchant marine, where they spend their time when ashore, in their two months' period of training, they find a fine ball team of merchant mariners to engage their attention.

The team plays similar teams in the army or the navy, and the merchant marine boys are given plenty of opportunity to root for their own service.

In addition to baseball, the merchant marine apprentices go in for basketball in season, for boxing, track events and rowing. They are taught to handle an oar in an eight-oared life boat, and having got to the point where catching crabs is reduced to a reasonable minimum, they are pitted in races against the navy.

Athletic Instructor a Soldier. Furthermore, they are given military setup, squad-righting and squad-leffing until they get the drill down pat. They also take the stiffest sort of calisthenic drill like veterans.

All this is done to keep the boys fit, physically and mentally, while they are in training for sea service.

The shipping board's athletic system has been developed in the last four months under Arthur F. Cooley, third officer of the training ship Meade, station ship at the Atlantic base of the recruiting service at Boston.

The personality of Third Officer Cooley, who also has the title of athletic director, is in keeping with his picturesque job. He is a soldier, with a long and varied career, a veteran of the Philippine campaigns, a crack shot with the big guns of the coast artillery, a baseball player, a football player and a drill master.

Born in Chattanooga, Tenn., 38 years ago, Mr. Cooley enlisted in the army for the Spanish war. After serving three years in the Philippines, fighting in Panay, Cebu and Negros, and playing ball in the Manila service league when fighting was not brisk, Cooley came back to his native land and played ball on the Third United States Infantry team in Kentucky.

Wins Commission. Transferred to Governor's Island, he next played in the Coast Defense team of New York.

In 1909 he went into the coast artillery and was stationed at Newport, R. I., as a platter in the big gun batteries of the coast defense.

The big broil brought Mr. Cooley shoulder straps. In 1917 he became a lieutenant in the army. For two years he served as assistant provost marshal at Boston.

January 10, 1919, Mr. Cooley joined the recruiting service of the United States shipping board as athletic officer at the Atlantic base, and fourth officer at the Meade, from which rating he was soon promoted to third officer.

Thousands of Cats Are Homeless by Prohibition

New York.—Another of the evils of prohibition has been discovered.

Seven thousand cats have been made homeless in New York by the closing up of the saloons, it is estimated. There were well over 7,000 saloons in New York and, outside the fashionable bars in the big hotels, it is estimated that every bar-room had its cat, some of them more than one.

Now that the saloons are closed the cats are homeless.

HOW TO MAKE HOG CRATES

Federal Department of Agriculture Has Many Queries From Shippers.

Washington.—More than 50,000 requests for information on how to make hog crates have been received by the United States department of agriculture.

A large number of the requests are from club members, and the percentage received from the South is regarded by officials of the department as an index to the extent of improvement the hog industry has made in that part of the United States.

The type of crate the department specialists have developed and are now recommending has several advantages. It can be easily handled, and provides comfort without loss of space for the hog in transit. A circular of the department tells how to build the crate.

PRICES MAY RISE DECLARES BOARD

Federal Reserve Bulletin Says Also Greater Shortage May Take Place.

INVESTING PUBLIC MUST AID

Shortage of Many Essential Materials and Commodities in World at Large—Foreign Recovery May Be Rapid.

Washington.—In warning that still higher prices and a greater shortage of supply may be expected in the United States if foreign purchases be permitted to continue on the basis of the last few years, the federal reserve board in its July bulletin declares that the war period in exportation has come to an end and that it is the duty of the investing public to finance shipments needed by Europe.

Shortage in World.
"There is a shortage of many essential materials and commodities in the world at large," the board says, "increased credit demand for goods for export necessarily implies relatively decreased supply of goods for domestic use. Demand and supply are automatically equalized by changes in price, but such changes are in the circumstances here under consideration necessarily upward. If a large export financing process is conducted by banks out of credit the result is to place the fluid credit of the country at the disposal of foreigners in purchasing and settling for domestic products which they obtain from American producers."

Such an addition to credits not based on genuine savings, the board points out, would mean inflation, implying an increased tendency toward the bidding up of prices. In order to avoid the recurrence of such a menace the board recommends that the basis for exports should be found in the investment market, that is in the savings of the people and not at the banks.

"The amount of export trade securities to be held by banks must necessarily be limited to a minimum figure," the board asserts.

Requirements of export financing probably have been overestimated, the board says, and adds that some part of the export demand would disappear probably when actual commercial security would be required for protection of shipments.

Recovery May Be Rapid.

"It is quite probable," the board remarks, "that, as European countries succeed in re-establishing themselves, their recovery toward a self-supporting basis will be much more rapid than has been expected. Far more time is required for the expenditure of great sums in the purchase of goods than is generally comprehended. Expenditures to be made for peace purposes or for reconstruction will require care and patience if they are to yield returns under competitive business conditions. They cannot be overhastily made, and this will in itself ease the urgency of the pressure for export financing. When all these elements have been eliminated there will remain a very great residue of urgent industrial requirements abroad, and these it is economically and otherwise sound and desirable to finance as promptly and effectively as possible that foreign demands for our goods may be maintained, our markets conserved and our general position in world trade protected."
