The "Inn" To Be Re-opened

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kenny To Have Charge.

The former Red Cross Headquarters, and prior to that known as Taylor's Inn, will be re-opened as a hotel in the near future under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kenny.

They recently returned from Pontiac where they have been spending the winter months and have leased the above building and grounds of W. P. Porter. This week they are moving their household effects there. Considerable repair work and re-adjusting will be necessary before the opening, but it is planned to have same ready in a month or so.

The "Inn" was at one time a very popular stopping place among the traveling fraternity, and under the capable management of Mr. and Mrs. Kenny it will again "come in to its own."

OTTO BRETZ PASSED AWAY LAST MONDAY

Otto Hazen Bretz passed away at the home of his brother, Frank, in this city, Monday May 3rd, following a ten-day illness from pneumonia.

Deceased was born Oct. 22, 1898, at Syars, Mich., his parents being David A. and Mary Bretz. He resided with his parents at above place until some four years ago when he came to East Jordan and entered the industrial field. On June 20, 1917, he enlisted with East Jordan's Company 1, 33rd M. N. G. Later he was transferred to the Supply Company 125th U. S. Infantry, and saw service with this unit in overseas fighting. At the close of the war he was honorably discharged and returned to East Jordan where he has since made his home. Besides his parents he leaves to mourn his loss three brothers, Valentine, Frank and Paul, and one sister, Miss Gertrude.

Funeral services were held from the Presbyterian Church Wednesday afternoon conducted by Rev. John Duncan and was largely attended. Fellow-members of the American Legion and the Knight Pythias attended in a body, and as a mark of esteem the business places of our city were closed during the funeral hour. Interment at East Jordan cemetery. The pall-bearers were brother-members of the American Legion.

RESOLUTIONS

Rebec-Sweet Post—Am. Legion

Whereas,—God in His all-wise Providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our friend and esteemed comrade, Otto Bretz,

Be it resolved,—That we the members of the Rebec-Sweet Post of the American Legion of which he was an honored member do wish hereby to commemorate his true character, his cheerful comradeship, and his devoted application to duty.

Be it further resolved,—That we hereby desire to tender our whole and heartfelt sympathy to the sorrowing friends.

Rebec-Sweet Post Am. Legion,
—Committee.

Obituary—John Sherman

John Sherman, a well-known resident of South Arm Township, passed away at the Lockwood Hospital, Petoskey, Friday morning, April 30th, where he had gone for treatment.

Deceased was born in Tuscola County, Mich., June 23rd, 1858. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, one son, and three daughters.

Funeral services were held from his late home in South Arm, Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. John Duncan. Interment at the Jones Cemetery.

Charles Darwin's Childhood.

Doctor Butler, the headmaster at Shrewsbury school, had often to call Charles Darwin (the most famous naturalist of the nineteenth century) to task for inattention and laziness during his studies. The only thing that seemed to interest him was the collecting of caterpillars, worms, and all sorts of creeping things, and the making of his own and his brother's life by dangerous chemical experiments.

It is always the man who can get credit for the asking who doesn't want it.

Pearson Named To Convention

Charlevoix County Man Wins Vote At District Meeting.

The Eleventh congressional convention held May 3rd at Cheboygan named as delegates to the national convention at Chicago, in June, William J. Pearson of Charlevoix county, and G. W. McLain, of Delta county. Alternates names were J. C. Harmon, of Schoolcraft county, and Harry Austin, of Alpena.

A keen contest developed early in the day, and up to within a few minutes before the convention convened the result was in doubt. The roll call developed a Pearson-McLain combination arrayed against a Gustin-Harmon union of interests, in which the former proved the winner.

The roll calls were open, and by counties, the convention rejecting a proposition calling for a secret ballot. The convention by acclamation then named the losers, as alternates, the day's work closing with general harmony.

Resolutions presented by Dr. C. J. Gray, chairman of the committee on resolutions, were adopted. They commended the state and national Republican policies. An amendment to instruct the delegates for General Wood was withdrawn as it appeared to be doomed for sure defeat. The general opinion of the convention was to the effect that the state and not the district should be the unit, and that Senator Johnson was entitled to the two votes, in view of his victory in the state primary. Supt. M. R. Keyworth of this city placed Mr. Pearson in nomination. East Jordan was represented by Mr. Keyworth, L. G. Balch, and Horace Hipp.

Mr. Pearson conducted a whirlwind campaign as his candidacy was not definitely announced until the morning of the day.

AIRGRAMS BEAT WIRELESS

Messages Carried by Planes Make Greatest Paris-London Speed.

"Airgrams" are supplanting telegraphic and wireless messages between London and Paris. Lord Montague of Beaulieu, flight expert, says that airgrams, or messages carried by airplane, between European points separated by distances up to 500 miles, travel both more quickly and more cheaply than by telegraph and wireless.

London newspapers are receiving daily air news and "feature" articles from their Paris correspondents. Handed to the pilot at 11:30 in the morning, the dispatches are delivered in the newspaper offices at three in the afternoon, whereas transmission by telegraph between the two capitals requires about five hours.

BALKY JUROR THRASHED

Man Who Refused to Convict Negro Slayer Whipped and Ducked.

When a dissenting juror refused to agree to the verdict of guilty in the trial at Monroe, La., of Alvin Calhoun, negro, following the murder of N. H. Arnold at Tallulah, La., he was publicly whipped and then dipped in a mud hole.

When the jury returned to its quarters in the courthouse, escorting the mud-covered, dissenting juror, a verdict of guilty was agreed upon. It is said that the dissenting juror was later waited upon by a committee and ordered to leave Tallulah. Calhoun confessed the murder of Arnold, according to county officials.

Simple Meals Ordered in Germany.

Keepers of restaurants in Germany have been warned by Food Minister Schmidt that they must serve simpler menus, it being pointed out that the masses are unable to get rations, while diners in restaurants get a variety of food.

Valuable Spanish Products.

Spain is an important producer of a number of essential oils, including spike, rosemary, thyme, sage, pennyroyal, and geranium. The plants grow wild and distillation is carried on by large steam distilleries as well as by many small direct-fire stills.—Exchange.

Secret of Leadership.

The secret of the world's leadership is right in our keeping. To understand men we look at ourselves. To know what is without, we must study what is within. To lead others we must lead ourselves. Our power will soon grow. So will our influence.—Exchange.

DON'T OVER-LOOK THESE

LET'S REMEMBER:

1. That the greatest income per acreage on farms in Charlevoix county is as high as it is on farms selling for three times as much in the southern part of the state.

2. That there are farmers living around East Jordan who put more money in the bank last year than the entire yearly income of one of Detroit's renowned ten-dollar-a-day workmen.

3. That a young man starting on a farm near East Jordan can with a fair degree of intelligence and an average amount of labor become independent in ten years; that this same young man starting to work in a Detroit factory can with a fair degree of intelligence and an average amount of labor hold at the end of ten years the same job he started with.

4. That we always hear about the few in the city that get the high wages but we never hear about the many who get low wages plus the others who don't work at all.

5. Not one laboring man in ten accumulates wealth. Scarcely one farmer in ten fails to accumulate something.

6. That a man on a farm can work for himself; that a man in the factory must work for somebody else.

7. That a house and lot and a garden plus four dollars a day in East Jordan is equivalent to an apartment and eight dollars a day in Detroit.

8. So far as ten dollars per day are concerned many think they are called but few are chosen.

9. That on a summer's Sunday the green grove, the smooth lake, or a trout stream is almost as pleasant as a 4 by 8 room on the south side of a rooming house.

10. That if northern Michigan is the playground for millionaires it ought to be a fairly good place for poor people.

Mothers' Day Proclamation

BY THE GOVERNOR

Although its observance dates back but a few years, Mothers' Day has already become a national institution and is fittingly and tenderly celebrated by all classes and conditions of people throughout the land.

It is well we should pause amid the hurry and bustle of life and let our thoughts go back to the days of long ago, as we cherish the memory of the mothers who have left us. While they were with us their chief concern was our welfare and comfort and happiness, and the mothers of today are animated by the same spirit of devotion and sacrifice. Indeed, nowhere else in human life is the spirit of unselfish service so well exemplified as in the devotion of mothers to their homes and families.

Therefore, that we may pay a special tribute of affection to the mothers who still live and honor the memory of those who have gone from us, I, ALBERT E. SLEEPER, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate and set aside and I call upon our people, both young and old, to gather in their several places of worship and take part in services appropriate to the day, and, by the wearing of a red flower for the living mother and a white for the dear departed, to symbolize their love and reverence for the mothers of the nation.

Let me suggest too that absent sons and daughters take this occasion to visit, if possible, the mother in the old home, or, where such a visit is impossible, that they send a message of cheer and greeting. By this may mothers know that in the rush of affairs they are not forgotten.

In accordance with a resolution of the Congress of the United States, I further request the people of Michigan on the day aforesaid to display the United States flag in their homes and in other suitable places, as a fitting expression of their desire to pay homage to American motherhood.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this Thirtieth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-fourth.

ALBERT E. SLEEPER,
Governor.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Pension Bureau will take steps promptly to make effective the provisions of the law.

No declaration will be required from those mentioned in the foregoing clauses No. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9 (a), 10, 11, 12, and 13.

Declarations will be required in every case for original pension; also in claims under clauses 3, 7, 9 (b), and 9 (c).

Where declaration is required, pension, if allowed, will begin from the date of filing; under clauses 3 and 7 pension, if allowed, will commence when the disability is shown to exist after approval of this Act.

Where no declaration is required, increase of pension will commence from date of approval of said Act.

Where a remarried widow filed an application under the Act of September 8, 1916, pension, if allowed, will commence when her original application was filed. In all such cases the claimant should notify the Pension Bureau by letter or otherwise.

Claim agent or attorney not to be recognized except in claims for original pension, and in such cases not more than $10 shall be paid for services, and only on order of the Commissioner of Pensions.

Declarations will be furnished on request.

Payments at the increased rates will be made at the date of the quarterly payment due July 4, August 4, and September 4, 1920, to those then entitled, and thereafter regularly. Earlier payment can not be made on account of necessary labor and changes.

GAYLORD M. SAITZGABER,
Commissioner of Pensions.

Charlevoix Hospital Ready

Formal Opening Was Held Wednesday of This Week.

The formal opening of the Charlevoix Hospital was held in this city, Wednesday, May 5th, and from now on the hospital will be officially open to the public.

Doctors from the entire section were present at the occasion. The first event of importance was a meeting of the A. C. E. Medical Society. This society is composed of the physicians of Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

The purpose of this meeting was to organize the Northwestern Michigan Clinical Society which will be composed of the doctors north of Cadillac to the Straits. Physicians from Traverse City, Cadillac and other northern Michigan towns were present.

At 1:00 p. m., the visitors were escorted to the Bartlett where a banquet was served in their honor. Mayor Simon M. Rose delivered the address of welcome.

The hospital is now open fully to patients and will handle the sick for this section. Miss Nellie Boss of Ellsworth, is in charge of the hospital with Miss Sylvia Sutton of this city and Miss Johnson of Petoskey, as assistants. Martha Campbell is in charge of the kitchen and George Glasgow is engineer and keeper.

The hospital Board announces that endowments amounting to $2000 a year have been given the hospital by Mrs. Aiken of Nashville, Tenn., one of our summer visitors and Mrs. Hollingsworth of Kalamazoo. Charlevoix Courier.

EGG LAYING HONORS HELD BY QUEEN BEE

Daily Production Runs Into Thousands.

East Lansing, May 5th.—That the tremendous number of eggs laid by the queen honey bees shortens their lives and makes it advisable to use young queens in order to lessen the danger of swarming, is the opinion of B. F. Kindig, Department of Entomology at M. A. C. and State Inspector of Apiaries. Queen bees are said to lay as high as 3,000 eggs a day during the period of greatest production, a daily total weighing more than the bee herself.

"When an old bee begins to break down under the strain of her great egg laying, the colony instinctively realizes the fact and prepares to supersede her. This fact tends to increase the number of swarms, for many of the swarms, when queens are allowed to remain in the bee yard for more than two years, are doubtless due to the impulse to supersede. By keeping only younger, stronger queens this tendency can be overcome to an appreciable extent."

The rapidly advancing price of sugar is forcing a serious problem upon the beekeepers of the state. Scrap sugar, dependant upon by bee men for food during certain seasons of the year, is said to be practically unobtainable. This means that beekeepers must either go on the open market and purchase cane sugar at the prevailing high prices or else watch for possible damaged sugar which can sometimes be found at freight houses or wholesale houses. Even this latter class of sugar is in great demand by candy manufacturers, and the beekeepers have to compete with them to get it.

Tremendous losses in bee yards last winter are said to be due largely to insufficient stores of food, and beekeepers are urged to lay in their sugar early this year.

Cathedral Remembers Grass Hill.

Of the world's cathedrals, probably the most curious is that which crowns a hill in Uganda. In appearance it resembles nothing so much as a mountain of grass, although on closer inspection one is able to see that mud and wood have been extensively employed. The structure can accommodate 4,000 people.

It's a pity that some women can't think as fast as they can talk.

EX-KAISER OWES FALL TO ILL-STARRED GEM

So Some Folks Believe in View of History of "Blaze of Glory."

An ill-starred diamond, which last shone as central gem in the crown of Prussia, is now credited with having been a factor in bringing about the ruin of the Hohenzollern dynasty. It is known as the "Blaze of Glory."

According to the tale about it, the diamond was given by King Solomon to the Queen of Sheba, having been plucked by him from his turban for her adornment. Curious carvings on two sides of it are supposed to be heraldic tokens of the two ancient lovers. Tales of the gem were carried into Persia, where they excited the greed of the nomadic King El-Hakim II., who robbed the Queen of Sheba's grave to secure it for himself. Within two weeks thereafter he was slain in his palace, and thereafter, through the centuries, rulers and princes who acquired the gem came to grief.

The margrave of Brandenburg, whose house started the Prussian dynasty, found the gem on a Jewish merchant in one of the margrave's raids into Silesia, and seized it, declaring that he would place it in the crown of a great kingdom he was to establish. The merchant was instantly slain when he ventured to remind the captor of the evil influence of the diamond. It seems to have been handed down the Prussian line until finally it reached the one-time emperor now in retreat in Holland.

It is said that Herr Zunkelhorn, a learned antiquary, who had learned the fateful history of the gem and who in some way had forecast that ruin would come to its owner between the years 1918 and 1922, implored the young emperor to rid himself of it before his coronation, and that to this entreaty William replied:

"You must understand that I am crowned by the Spirit of God and the will of my people. The Hohenzollerns must endure forever. No curse of evil can harm our dynasty."

So he kept the gem in his crown, and tradition seems to have justified itself.

Auto-Driven Grindstone Beheads Man.
Coupling his automobile with a grindstone to get quicker results, Jesse Steelman, a wealthy farmer of Seville, N. J., started the engine and began to sharpen an ax. There was a crash, the grindstone broke into many pieces. One large section struck Steelman on the neck, beheading him.

THE NAVY BEAN

THE navy bean is a lowly form of vegetation carrying a retreating forehead and a threatening price tag. The straits to which the aristocracy of this country are reduced is shown by the fact that a few years ago, the navy bean was about as popular a form of diet as the half-soled round steak, whereas now it is more sought after than a red-haired girl who has been left four farms and an armful of bank stock. It is a pitiful sight to see a one-proud family whose members have always lived on pork tenderloin and pineapple ice now struggling feverishly to digest the tenacious navy bean, after it has been run through a hay cooker over night.

The navy bean never found its way to the dining table of the rich until the European war broke out in several spots. Practically all of the navy beans raised in this country were fed to the regular army and to people of the middle class with small incomes and cork-lined stomachs. When a man enlists in the army or navy he is supposed to entrust his belongings, including his stomach, to the fatherly care of the government, and it has been found by long experience that the egg-shaped navy bean will sustain life longer and at less expense than any other article of food except pure timothy hay.

"The price is now prohibitive to all except the idle rich."

A year or two ago a quart of navy beans could be bought for a few cents and when properly prepared would cause the stoutest appetite to languish along about the fifth round. But so many of these beans have been shipped abroad that the price is now prohibitive to all except the idle rich. It is stated that when the Russians ran out of ammunition they loaded their rifles with the American navy bean and discharged them at the foe with gratifying results, but this is an unwarranted reflection upon one of the grandest articles of food which ever tickled the human palate.

Justice

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MUCH of the serenity of this world is wrapped within the ordinary principles of Justice. And the simplest thing of it all is that Justice for each one of us lies within each one of us. Just as soon as we become convinced of the Justice of a Man or a Cause or a Fact, we become immediately reconciled to the personal relationship which that Man or Cause or Fact has toward us. And if our Viewpoint is correct, without hesitation, we trust the Just Man, we become a part of the Just Cause—we take ownership of the Just Fact.

Justice is the twin-brother of Truth. And if our attitude toward the Truth —which is a composite of the highest things in life—is correct, to have Justice within us and to distribute it to those about us, is the highest Happiness.

There is nothing that so arouses the indignation and red-blood of a man is to feel that injustice is being done to anyone anywhere. For Justice is instinct as deeply rooted in our consciousness as our sense of Right and Wrong, of which indeed it is part and parcel. So that—

For you to fully feel Justice in the outer world, you must first be Just toward yourself, when it will be reflected in your opinion and judgment of Justice as a working principle toward other people.

If things about you appear to be all out of kink, the most foolish thing you can possibly do is to begin to criticize outside forces and outside conditions. Begin right where you are and take account of yourself. Muster your many abilities and powers together. Take account of their activities. Is each doing its share? Reorganize. Get started on a new plane and you will be surprised at what a great amount of Justice there is everywhere and at all times.

LOST ARGUMENTS.

When in my wisdom I have said That it is time to go to bed Or crossed their wills with rules and laws There comes a pout, and then a pause, And then an argument ensues In which it seems I always lose.

When I announce that too much ple is bad for them, they ask me: "Why?" And when I start to prove my case They taunt me to my very face, And in debate, in which they're strong, They soon convince me I am wrong.

Time was my judgment they'd accept All my commands they bravely kept, But now they've reached the reasoning age, The answering back and questioning stage; Their little minds are keen and swift While helplessly I seem to drift.

No mere command with them will go The reason why they want to know, They wear me out. They argue back And puncture with their sure attack The case I've made, 'til with a grin I end their talk by giving in.

'Twould drive a great logician wild To argue with a healthy child. A thinking boy of four or five Could floor the wisest man alive, And any bright-eyed little girl Can set the calmest brain awirl.

And yet I'm glad those madcap elves Are dally thinking for themselves. I'm glad they have opinions strong On what is right and what is wrong, And oh, I hope, when older grown, In life's debates they'll hold their own.

LIVE FROG FOSSIL MYTHS

California Expert Explains How These Stories Arise.

Reports printed in California and Nevada newspapers recently of the discovery of live frogs embedded in the solid rock which was supposed to have held them for 1,000 years or more were characterized by Dr. John Van Denburgh of San Francisco, member of the California Academy of Sciences and an authority on frog life, as "variations of an old myth."

Such stories, Dr. Van Denburgh said, probably have their origin in the fact that fossils sometimes found at the end of a fissure in rock or of a burrow dug into hard packed earth appear to be embedded in the rock or rocklike formation, the finder failing to observe the channel of entry.

Fair Sex Will Form Street Gang in Pennsylvania, Men Being Scarce.

With the streets of the borough badly in need of repairs and no men to do the work, Thomas Rouse, president of Gilberton borough, Pa., has appointed Mrs. Mary Ross assistant supervisor and appealed to the women of the town to apply for places on a gang being organized to work on the streets.

The women are to receive $3 for an eight-hour day. Women were employed on the streets of Gilberton during the war and the plan worked out so successfully that it was decided to employ the women again.

BRITISH SELL WAR STORES

Vast Quantity of Material to Be Disposed Of.

AIRPLANES IN JOB LOTS

Everything Between Battleships and Egg-Cups Included in Catalogue—Submarines, Rolling Stock and Whole Camps Will Go to Highest Bidder—Illustrates What a Tremendous Commercial Undertaking Modern War Has Developed.

Two complete battleships, half a dozen submarines, Handley-Page and De Havilland airplanes, 50,000,000 rounds of ball cartridges, guns, aerial bombs, pistols, a paddle steamer, a train ferry capable of carrying 30 ten-ton wagons, a road bridge complete and locomotives are but a few of the many varied articles offered by the British ministry of munitions in what is without doubt the biggest sale in history.

The catalogue of goods is a romance in itself. Brought out as a bi-monthly magazine, it is issued officially by the ministry under the title of the Surplus, at 6 cents a copy, each number taking up something over 200 pages of closely printed matter.

Only a cursory glance is necessary to realize, apart from the usual supply of equipment, ammunition and foodstuffs, what a tremendous commercial undertaking modern war has developed.

During the war the ministry of munitions acted as a sort of general stores to supply millions of fighting troops on all fronts, from France to India, the North sea to the Suez canal. No item, however small, was too insignificant, no item too tremendous a scale to be included in these wonderful stores.

One Whole Camp for Sale.

The ministry was solely responsible for the supply of army huts, building material and factories, machinery, machine tools and engineering stores; army boots, water craft, textiles, chemicals and metals, foodstuffs and motor vehicles, and so on ad infinitum.

In the fifteenth issue of Surplus, published on the first day of the new year and announced as "the official organ of the surplus government property disposal board," there are no fewer than nineteen sections of different classes of material to be disposed of.

The admiralty are offering floating docks, yachts, trawlers, drifters, steam whalers, salvage steamers, motor launches, coastal motor boats and old naval steam, sailing and pulling boats.

One "item" offered for sale is the entire Milford military camp. This lot includes regimental institutes and dining rooms, medical inspection and hospital huts, a timber-built motor garage; altogether about 400 huts, buildings and stable erections. In this case, purchase can be made either by private offer or public tender. Another item is the Biggin Hill airfield, complete with buildings, plant and materials, including 60 carbide flares, 60 hurricane lamps, 12 stone forks, diaphragm pumps, etc.

At the other end of the scale, there are all kinds of furniture from a galvanized washbowl to an oak wardrobe, and a portable cast-iron copper with removable pan to an egg cup, chairs, couches and butter dishes. Even so humble an article as brown paper is included in this wonderful catalogue.

Humble household commodities are equally plentiful. About 4,355 tins of chicken broth are for sale, together with pork and beans, marmalade and half pound packets of fruitarian cake.

Still Useful as Fighters. The obsolete warships for sale are battleships Jupiter and Exmouth, both of which "crack" played their part in the anti-submarine patrol in the great war. As the ministry of munitions tactfully suggests, falling purchase for some private little war or other, they might prove very useful for scrapping or conversion.

With the battleships are offered the British submarines A-4—one of the earlier class—A-8, A-12 and O-2, five torpedo boats, the destroyer Dove and the old war-vessels Pembroke and Firebrand, now lying at Chatham.

Purchasing a battleship or two is not so complicated a matter as most people would imagine. After filling up a form and supplying the necessary check, the ship is the buyer's to do what he likes with.

Again, if the purchaser requires a factory complete with railway sidings it can be supplied, for there are no fewer than nineteen for sale in various parts of the country. The ministry has a round dozen of airdromes on their hands.

A coast guard station in Dorset, overlooking Weymouth Bay, is on offer. Then there are huts and buildings in forty-seven districts.

There are bridges, hydraulic presses, all kinds of plants and machinery, steam engines, petrol tractors, about 120 different kinds of tradesmen's tools, textile goods, civilian overcoats and suits, leather goods, medical goods, furniture, etc., for sale.

Acquitted Defendant; Passed a Jury at San Francisco not acquitted John Gillis on a charge of assault, but passed the hat and sword which they gave him.

Books are frequently referred to as tools and as the key to the treasure trove of knowledge. The American Library is daily demonstrating in U. S. Public Health Service Hospitals that convalescent soldiers and sailors find returning health and increasing strength in good books.

BOOKS BRING AID TO SOLDIER SICK FARM DWELLERS ASK FOR BOOKS

American Library Association Serves Ten Thousand Men in Nation's Hospitals. Announcement of the "Books for Everybody" Movement Brings Letter Flood.

EFFORTS BRING RESULTS. INFORMATIVE WORKS SOUGHT

Works on Vocational Training Circulated Among Men Who Must Take Up New Callings Because of Their Injuries. Requests for Reading Matter Range From Volume on Drainage to Collins' "Book of the Stars."

Hospital library service maintained by the American Library Association during the war was credited with great value in aiding in the recovery of many sick and disabled men.

There are still in our hospitals more than 10,000 former service men. Of these nearly 8,000 are in Public Health Service hospitals, the remainder in civilian hospitals. Books, magazines and newspapers are sent to these men from the American Library Association. In the larger hospitals, containing over 300 patients, special libraries are placed. To the smaller hospitals, through the co-operation of many public libraries, library visitors are sent to visit the wards once or twice a week and learn the book needs of the patients.

A special effort is made to supply to ex-service men in hospitals the books in demand as a result of the training given by the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

More Books for Blind. The A. L. A., in co-operation with other agencies already interested in work for the blind, is printing books in the new Braille type. Because of the newness of the revised Braille adopted for teaching to the American war blind, literature printed in it is limited to fewer than 200 books. Though the total number of blinded soldiers is small, their need of books is great, and the "magic of print" can do much to restore hope and usefulness to them.

Not only for former service men who are sick or disabled is the association working. The value of books proved so great to men in camps that efforts are still being made to connect discharged soldiers and sailors with libraries wherever they may be. Hundreds of letters have reached A. L. A. headquarters from former service men telling of the lack of library facilities in particular localities to which those men have returned.

Direct Service Provided.

In many cases there is a state library commission, or a nearby library to which a man can be referred for the books he needs, but if there is no such organization through which he can be served, books for almost any serious purpose may be borrowed directly from the A. L. A. War Service, 24 West Thirty-ninth street, New York city. The only expense in connection with these loans is prepayment of return postage on books borrowed.

The A. L. A. has published lists of books to help ex-service men who are studying to advance themselves in their work. "Five Hundred Business Books," "One Thousand Technical Books" and reading courses on practical subjects are now in preparation.

Other Work Being Done.

Other branches of work which the A. L. A. War Service is carrying on include service to the Merchant Marine, Coast Guard and lighthouses, service to industrial communities which are resultant from the war, service to United States forces overseas. This work is carried on with money received from the United War Work funds, the use of which is limited by the conditions of the gift to these specific purposes.

The service of the Merchant Marine department provides free library service to seamen on American merchant ships in the form of "crews' libraries," bookcase boxes, each containing about 80 books. These libraries are exchangeable at principal ports. Books and magazines are sent also to men in coast guard stations, in lighthouses and on lightships.

The announcement of the entrance of the American Library Association upon the "Books for Everybody" movement and still later news accounts of the activities of the organization along these lines resulted in a widespread appeal from residents of the rural districts of the country for books on farming. Whether the American farmer is simply evidencing his ambition to do a good job better or whether the better crops of his neighbor, who has attended an agricultural college or school, has spurred him on is a matter difficult to determine. But the fact remains the farmer is asking for books.

The great majority of American farmers are either without libraries and book service or they are inadequately served. One of the points which the American Library Association in its "Books for Everybody" movement is strongly urging is the extension of the county library system in states where enabling acts have been passed—some twenty-one in number—and the proper legislation in others which have not yet taken the step. The system, with its central library and radiating lines to stations in the remotest sections of the county, assures good books to every man, woman and child who cares to reach out a hand and grasp one.

Letters Show Need of Service.

The American Library Association is not giving its entire attention to the urban dweller, nor is it neglecting the centers of population for the rural districts and communities. It is, however, unquestionably eager to create a steady flow of informative reading to rural America. That the need for such service exists and that it is anxiously sought is evidenced in every letter of this nature received by state library commissions and by the A. L. A. A few excerpts have been selected because they seem to express most truly the needs of thousands of others.

When Lydia Carlson, whose farm is beyond Mason, Wis., asked for copies of "Productive Farm Crops," "Productive Vegetable Growing" and "Principles of the Practice of Poultry Raising" she echoed the book needs of her neighbors. Then she revealed the fact that her eyes are not always in the furrows by asking for a copy of Collins' "Book of the Stars."

What Others Desired.

There was a pressing need behind the letter from James Dunn, who lives ten miles from Convent, La., the nearest town, which has a population of only 600 people. He asked for a copy of "Practical Farm Drainage." The task of keeping his acres dry was beyond him. Walter Williams of Osseo, Wis., wanted to know if he could make fuel alcohol from frozen potatoes and spoiled fruits, and if he could, were there any books on the subject. The requests run the whole range of farm operations. Some wish to know how to treat scale, others desire facts on hog-raising. Books giving information on crop rotation are in demand.

The American Library Association is raising a $2,000,000 fund to finance the "Books for Everybody" movement which during the next three years will be carried on in co-operation with existing libraries and library agencies. The money is not being raised through the medium of an intensive drive but through the individual efforts of the librarians, library trustees and friends of libraries.

TOURISTS SHUT OUT OF ITALY

Shortage of Hotel Room Is Keeping Them Away.

COUNTRY NEEDS THEIR MONEY

Never Before Were There So Few Americans, Whose Money Was Reckoned on to Relieve Kingdom's Financial Straits—Venetian Palace Is Set Apart for Entertaining Visitors, but There Is No Provision for Lodging.

Luigi Luzzatti, formerly minister of finance and Italy's most prominent financial expert, tells the New York World correspondent, he is much worried about the lack of American tourists in Italy. He says the money they would bring in would go a long way toward solving the country's financial difficulties. Italian cities are crowded but with Italians. Never were there so few American and other tourists.

"Americans are not encouraged to come," he explained. "All our cities and many small towns which attract Americans by their beauty and history are short of hotels because during the war they were taken over by big banks and large industrial concerns.

No Room for Visitors.

"Italy used to gain more than a thousand millions a year from tourists. Where can we lodge them now? Where can we find sleeping room even for the crowds of Americans who want to see our beautiful country, our splendid art treasures, and perhaps buy some we can spare? I have asked big hotel-keepers this question and their answer is that there is no room in Italy for American tourists, that government must help build hotels or give back those it sequestered, that big business houses must resell hotels they bought for offices if the tourist trade is to flourish once more.

Minister of Treas. vry Schanzer shares Signor Luzzatti's opinion as to the need for attracting as many Americans to Italy as possible. He said in the chamber of deputies that the tourist trade is essential to the national budget. The budget for 1919-20 shows a deficit of $563,000,000 and that of 1920-21 fore-shadows a deficit of $520,000,000. The money now being spent so lavishly in Italian hotels by native war profiteers does the country no good. American gold is wanted and Minister Schanzer promised the chamber to do his best to attract Americans into the country again.

Venetian Palace for Banquets.

When the next prominent American statesman visits Rome officially he may have trouble in finding a room and bath but he will be sumptuously entertained to luncheon, dinner and tea by the Italian government, which has prepared the historic Venetian palace for the purpose of receiving distinguished strangers.

The Palazzo di Venezia, as the Romans call that magnificent place, was built by the Venetian republic in the fourteenth century to house the republic's ambassadors to the Papal state. When Venice became Austrian property the Hapsburg monarchs took possession of this palace in Rome and turned it into the seat of their embassies to the pope, and afterward to the Quirinal as well.

During the late war the Italian government expropriated it as Italian property and housed there the thousands of art treasures brought from Venice and the Venetian plains when the Austrians and Germans invaded Udine and Belluno. Those works of art have now gone to their proper places again and the Italian government has restored the famous palace to its ancient splendor, making its huge rooms and halls look as they did when Pope Paul II and Cardinal Lorenzo Cybo occupied them in the fourteenth century and beginning of the fifteenth.

IRRIGATED LAND OPEN

Ten Thousand Acres in Wyoming and Nebraska.

Approximately 10,000 acres of reclaimed land in Wyoming and Nebraska will be open to homestead entry early in March, according to an announcement made in Washington by the reclamation service.

The North Platte valley tract, part of a project of which hundreds of thousands of acres already have been reclaimed by storing up the waters of the North Platte river behind the Pathfinder dam, will be opened on a water service rental basis for the first three years.

The 10,000 acres in this tract constitute the largest area of reclaimed land opened to homesteaders in more than five years.

Merchant Left Store to His Clerk.

Henry Sanders, veteran clothing merchant of Brazil, Ind., who died a few days ago, left a will in which he bequeathed all his life insurance, his store and all his personal property to John Mooney. Mooney went into the store as a clerk 15 years ago. He received all property that Mr. Sanders, who was a bachelor, had.

The Strange Case of Cavendish

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "The Devil's Own," "My Lady of the North," etc.

(Copyright, by Randall Parrish)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Frederick Cavendish, New York man of wealth, receives a letter from an old friend, Jim Westcott, urging him to come at once to Colorado. Deciding to go, he employs a lawyer, Patrick Enright, to draw up a will leaving most of his estate to charity, with a mere pittance to John Cavendish, his nephew and only relative, a dissolute youth. That night Frederick Cavendish is murdered in his apartment. No will being found, John Cavendish inherits the estate.

CHAPTER II.—Two months later Enright informs John Cavendish of the existence of the will, and offers for $100,000 to say nothing of it. John agrees. Stella Donovan, newspaper writer, learns from Frederick Cavendish's valet that he is not satisfied the body found was that of his employer. She is directed by Farris, city editor, of the Star, to follow up the case.

CHAPTER III.—Stella learns of the murder and traces up also of John Cavendish's infatuation for Celeste La Rue, chorus girl, and that Enright is a friend of the La Rue girl. A conversation Stella overhears between Celeste and John Cavendish convinces her Frederick Cavendish is alive, the victim of a conspiracy engineered by Enright to secure his fortune, and that Celeste knows where he is hidden. Ned Beaton, notorious gunman, is also mentioned. Celeste is about to leave for Haskell, Colorado, and Stella is ordered by Farris to proceed there at once.

CHAPTER IV.

Miss Donovan Arrives.

When the long overland train passed a moment before the ancient box car that served as the depot for the town of Haskell, nestled in the gulch half a mile away, it deposited Miss Donovan almost in the arms of Carson, the station agent, and he, wary of the wiles of women and the ethics of society, promptly turned her over to Jim Westcott, who had come down to inquire if the station agent held a telegram for him—a telegram that he expected from the East.

"She oughtn't to hike to the Timmons house alone, Jim," Carson said. "This yere is pay day up at the big mines, an' the boys are havin' a h— of a time."

In view of this disclosure, Miss Donovan welcomed the courteous acquiescence of Westcott, whom she judged to be a man of thirty-one, with force and character—these written in the lines of his big body and his square, kind face.

"I'm Miss Stella Donovan of New York," she said directly.

"And I," he returned, with hat off in the deepening gloom, "am Jim Westcott, who plugs away at a mining claim over yonder."

"There?" laughed the girl frankly. "We're introduced. And I suppose we can start for the Timmons house."

As her words trailed off there came the sound of yelling, sharp cries, and revolver shots from the gulch below where lights twinkled faintly.

Laughing warmly, Westcott picked up her valise, threw a "So-long" to him, and disappeared into the darkness of the gulch.

"The 'Drunken Fool,' He Muttered Quietly.

Carson, and with Miss Donovan close behind him, began making for the distant lights of the Timmons house. As they followed the road, which paralleled a whispering stream, the girl began to draw him out skilfully, and was amazed to find that for all of his rough appearance he was excellently educated and a gentleman of taste.

Finally the reason came out. "I'm a college man," he explained proudly. "So was my partner—same class. But one can't always remain in the admirable class, and three years ago he and I came here prospecting.

Actually struck some pay-dirt in the hills yonder, too, but it sort of petered out on us. It was broken in two by some upheaval of nature. We were still trying to find it when my partner's father died and he went East to claim the fortune that was left. I struck the vein again—when my last dollar was gone. That was a month ago. I wired my old partner for help, but—" He stopped, listening intently.

They were nearing a small bridge over Bear creek, the sounds of Haskell's revelers growing nearer and louder. Suddenly they heard an oath and a shot, and the next moment a wild rider, lashing a foaming horse with a stinging quirt, was upon them. Westcott barely had time to swing the girl to safety as the tornado flew past. "The drunken fool!" he muttered quietly. "A puncher riding for camp. There will be more up ahead probably."

His little act of heroism drew the man strangely near to Miss Donovan, and as they hurried along in the silent night she felt that above all he was dependable, as if, too, she had known him months, aye years, instead of a scant hour. And in this strange country she needed a friend.

"Now that I've laid bare my past," he was saying, "don't you think you ought to tell me why you are here?"

The girl stiffened. To say that she was from the New York Star would close many avenues of information to her. No, the thing to do was to adopt some "stall" that would enable her to idle about as much as she chose. Then the mad horseman gave her the idea.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, "I forgot I hadn't mentioned it. I'm assigned by Scribber's Magazine to do an article on 'The Old West, Is It Really Gone?' and, Mr. Westcott, I think I have a lovely stall."

A few moments later she thanked Providence for her precaution, for her companion resumed the story of his mining claim.

"It's mighty funny I haven't heard from that partner. It isn't like him not to answer my wire. That's why I've waited every night at the depot. No, it's not like 'Pep,' even if he does take his leisure at the College club."

Miss Donovan's spine tingled at the mention of the name. "Pep," she murmured, trying to be calm. "What was his other name?"

"Cavendish," Westcott replied. "Frederick Cavendish."

A gasp almost escaped the girl's lips. Here, within an hour, she had linked the many eastern clues of the Cavendish affair with one in the West. Was ever a girl so lucky? And immediately her brain began to work furiously as she walked along.

A sudden turn about the base of a large cliff brought them to Haskell, a single street running up the broadening valley, lined mostly with shacks, although a few more pretentious buildings were scattered here and there, while an occasional tent flapped its discolored canvas in the night wind.

They went forward, Westcott watchful and silent, the valise in one hand, the other grasping her arm. The narrow stretch of sidewalk was jammed with men, surging in and out through the open door of a saloon, and the two held to the middle of the road, which was lined with horses tied to long poles. Men reeled out into the street, and occasionally the sharp crack of some frolicsome revolver punctuated the hoarse shouts and bursts of drunken laughter. No other woman was visible, yet, apparently, no particular attention was paid to their progress. But the stream of men thickened perceptibly, until Westcott was obliged to shoulder them aside good-humoredly in order to open a passage. He released her arm and suddenly gripped the shoulder of a man passing. He was the town marshal.

"Say, Dan, I reckon this is your busy night, but I wish you'd help me run this lady through as far as Timmons; this bunch of loghorns appear to be milling, and we're plum stalled."

The man turned and stared at them. Short, stockily built, appearing at first a little almost grotesque under the broad brim of his hat, Stella, recognizing the marshal, was conscious only of a clean-shaven face, a square jaw and a pair of stern blue eyes.

"Oh, is that you, Jim?" he asked, briefly. "Lord, I don't see why a big boob like you should need a guardian. The lady? Pardon me, madam," and he touched his hat. "Stand back there, you fellows. Come on, folks!"

The little marshal knew his business, and it was also evident that the crowd knew the little marshal. Drunk and quarrelsome as many of them were, they made way—the more obstreperous sullenly, but the majority in a spirit of rough good humor. The three passed straight through the surging mass in the man-crowded lobby of the disreputable hotel.

At the desk, wide-eyed with excitement, Miss Donovan took a service-worn pen proffered by landlord Pete Timmons, whose gray whiskers were as unkempt as his hotel, and registered her name.

"A telegram came today for you, ma'am," Peter said in a cracked voice, and tossed it over.

Miss Donovan tore it open. It was from Farris. It read: "If any cines, advise immediately. Willis digging hard. Letter of instruction follows. FARRIS."

The girl folded the message, thrust it in her jacket pocket, then turning to the marshal and Westcott, gave each a firm hand.

"You've both been more than kind," she said gratefully.

"H—, ma'am," Dan deprecated. "That warn't nothin'!" And he hurried into the street as loud cries sounded outside.

"Good-night, Miss Donovan," Westcott said simply. "If you are ever frightened or in need of a friend, call on me. I'll be in town two days yet, and after that Pete here can get word to me." Then, with an admiring, honest gaze, he searched her eyes a moment before he turned and strolled toward the rude cigar case.

"All right, now, ma'am?" Pete Timmons said, pecking up her valise. The girl nodded, and together they went up the rude stairs to her room, where Timmons paused at the door.

"Well, I'm glad you're here," he said, moving away. "I've been waitin' for you to show. I may be wrong, ma'am, but I'd bet my belt that you're the lady that's been expected by Ned Beaton."

"You're mistaken," she replied shortly.

As she heard him clatter down the stairs Miss Stella Donovan of the New York Star knew that her visit would not be in vain.

The miner waited, leaning against the desk. Timmons came down the stairs, eager to ask questions.

"Lady friend o' yours, Jim?" he asked. "If I'd a knowed she was comin' I'd a saved a better room."

"I have never seen her until tonight, Pete. She got off the train and Carson asked me to escort her uptown—it was dark, you know."

"What do you suppose she's come yere for?"

"Not the slightest idea; I take it that's her business."

"Sure; but a feller can't help wonderin'; can he? Donovan," he mused, peering at the name; "that's Irish, I take it—hey?"

"Suspiciously so; you are some detective, Pete. I'll give you another clue—her eyes are Irish gray."

He sauntered across to the stove, and stood looking idly at the card-players, blue wreaths of tobacco smoke circling up from the bowl of his pipe. Some one opened the street door, letting in a babel of noise, and walked heavily across the office floor. Westcott turned about to observe the newcomer. He was a burly, red-faced man, who had evidently been drinking heavily, yet was not greatly under the influence of liquor, dressed in a checked suit of good cut and fashion, but hardly in the best of taste. He bore all the earmarks of a commercial traveler of a certain sort—a domineering personality, making up by sheer nerve what he might lack in brains. But for his words the miner would have given the fellow no further thought.

"Say, Timmons," he burst forth noisily, and striding over to the desk, "the marshal tells me a dame blew in from New York tonight—is she registered here?"

The landlord shoved the book forward, with one finger on the last signature.

"Yep," he said shortly, "but she ain't the one you wuz lookin' for—I asked her that, first thing."

"Stella Donovan—huh! That's no name ever I heard; what's she look like? Dark or light?"

"Waal, sorter medium, I should say; brown hair with a bit o' red in it, an' a pair o' gray eyes full of fun—some girl, to my notion."

The questioner struck his fist on the wood sharply.

"Well, what the devil do you suppose such a woman has come to this hole clear from New York for, Timmons? What's her game, anyhow?"

"Blessed if I know," and the proprietor sent himself on a high stool. "I didn't ask no questions like that; maybe the gent by the stove there might give yer all the information yer want. He brought her up from the depot, an' kin talk English. Say, Jim, this yere is a shorthorn from New York, named Beaton, an' he seems ter be powerfully interested in skirts—Beaton, Mr. Jim Westcott."

The two men looked at each other, the miner stepping slightly forward, and knocking the ashes out of his pipe. Beaton laughed, assuming a semblance of good nature.

"My questions were prompted solely by curiosity," he explained, evidently not wholly at ease. "I was expecting a young woman, and thought this new arrival might prove to be my friend."

If he expected this shot to take effect he was disappointed, for the grin never left Beaton's face.

"Ah, a good joke; a very good joke, indeed. But you misunderstand; this is altogether a business matter. This young woman whom I expect is coming here on a mining deal—it is not a love affair at all, I assure you."

"I thought possibly you might care to question me regarding my acquaintance with the young woman?" Westcott went on, his voice hardening slightly. "If so, I have not the slightest objection to telling you that it consists entirely of acting as her escort from the station to the hotel. I do not know why she is here, how long she intends staying, or what her purpose may be. Indeed, there is only one fact I do know which may be of interest to you."

Beaton, surprised by the language of the other, remained silent, his face turning purple, as a suspicion came to him that he was being made a fool of.

"It is this, my friend—who she is, what she is, and why she happens to be here, is none of your d—n business, and if you so much as mention her name again in my presence you are going to regret it to your dying day. That's all."

Beaton, glancing about at the uplifted faces of the card players, chose to assume an air of indifference, which scarcely accorded with the anger in his eyes.

"Ah, come now," he blurted forth, "I don't mean anything; there's no harm done—let's have a drink, and be friends."

Westcott shook his head.

"No, I think not," he said slowly. "I'm not much of a drinking man myself, and when I do I choose my own company. But let me tell you something Beaton, for your own good. I know your style, and you are mighty apt to get into trouble out here if you use any Bowery tactics."

"Bewary tactics!"

"Yes; you claim to live in New York, and you possess all the earmarks of the East side bad man. There is nothing keeping you now from roughing it with me but the sight of this gun in my belt, and a suspicion in your mind that I may know how to use it. That suspicion is correct. Now you go back to your barroom, where you will find plenty of your own kind to associate with. It's going to be dangerous for you to hang around here any longer."

Beaton felt the steady eyes upon him, but was carrying enough liquor to make him reckless. He stepped backward, feigning a laugh, watchful to catch Westcott off his guard.

"All right, then," he said, "I'll go get the drink; you can't bluff me."

Westcott's knowledge of the class alone brought to him the man's purpose. Beaton's hand was in the pocket of his coat, and as he turned, apparently to leave the room, the cloth bulged. With one leap forward the miner was at his throat. There was a report, a flash of flame, the speeding bullet striking the stove, and the next instant Beaton, his hand still helplessly imprisoned within the coat pocket, was hurled back across a card table, the players scattering to get out of the way. All the pent-up dislike in Westcott's heart found expression in action; the despicable trick wrought him to a sudden fury, yet even then there came to him no thought of killing the fellow, no memory even of the loaded gun at his hip. He wanted to choke him, strike him with his hands.

"You dirty coward," he muttered fiercely. "So you thought the pocket trick was a new one out here, did you? Come; give the gun up! Oh! so there is some fight left in you? Then let's settle it here."

It was a struggle between two big, strong men—the one desperate, unscrupulous, brutal; the other angry enough, but retaining self-control! They crashed onto the floor, Westcott still retaining the advantage of position, and twice he struck, driving his clenched fist home. Suddenly he became aware that some one had jerked his revolver from its holster, and, almost at the same instant a hard hand gripped the neck-band of his shirt and tore him loose from Beaton.

"Here now—enough of that, Jim," said a voice sternly, and his hands arose instinctively as he recognized the gleam of two drawn weapons fronting him. "Help Beaton up, Joe. Now, look yere, Mr. Bully Westcott, and the speaker shook his gun threateningly. "As it happens, you have jumped on a friend o' ours, an' we naturally propose to take a hand in this game—you know me!"

Westcott nodded, an unpleasant smile on his lips.

"I do, Lacy," he said coolly, "and that if there is any dirty work going on in this camp it is quite probable you and your gang are in it. Now listen; you've got me covered, and that is my gun, which Moore has in his hand. I cannot fight you alone and unarmed; but I can talk yet."

"I reckon yer can, if that's goin' ter do yer any good."

"So the La Rosta Mining company is about to be revived, is it? Eastern capital becoming interested. I've heard rumors of that for a week past. What's the idea? Struck anything?"

Lacy, a long, rangy fellow, with a heavy mustache, and a scar over one eye, partially concealed by his hat-brim, grinned at the others as though at a good joke.

"No, nuthin' particular as yet," he answered; "but you hev, an' I reckon that's just about as good. Tryin' ter keep it dark, wasn't yer? Never even thought we'd caught on."

"Oh, yes, I did; you flatter yourselves. I caught one of your stool-pigeons up the gulch yesterday, and more than ten days ago Moore and Edson made a trip into my tunnel while I happened to be away; they forgot to hide their trail. I knew what you were up to, and you can all of you look for a fight."

"When your partner gets out here, I suppose," sneered Lacy.

"He'll be here."

"Oh, will he? Well, he's a h— of a while coming. You wired him a month ago, and yer've written him twice since. Oh, I've got the cases on you all right, Westcott. I know you haven't got a cent left to go on with, and nowhere to get any except through him." He laughed. "Ain't that right? Well, then, yer chances look mighty slim ter me just at present, ol' timer. However, there's no fight on yet; will yer behave yerself, an' let this man Beaton alone if I hand yer back yer gun?"

"There is no choice left me."

"Sure; that's sensible enough; give it to him, Moore."

He broke the chamber, shaking the cartridges out into his palm; then handed the emptied weapon over to Westcott. His manner was purposely insulting, but the latter stood with lips firmly set, realizing his position.

SALTS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys at once when Back Hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

"Miss Donovan is a Lady."

Carson, and with Miss Donovan close behind him, began making for the distant lights of the Timmons house. GERMAN DRAWS DISMAL PICTURE

Lot of the Educated Classes is Sorry One.

SHRINK FROM MANUAL LABOR

Deprived of Offices and With Professions Overcrowded They Balk at Work—An Official Warning Against Studying Medicine is Issued—Engineers Are Advised to Dig Ditches—Students Find Little Encouragement.

The economic distress of Germany has made the lot of the educated classes a sorry one, and those who are about to begin their studies have little to encourage them to persist along those lines. A dismal picture of the effect of their present disabilities is drawn by Josef Hofmuller in the Sueddeutsche Monatshefte, from which it was summarized in the Frankfurter Zeitung and has been printed in this country in School Life, the official publication of the Bureau of Education.

Three immediate effects of the war are presented as deterrents to the exercise of really ambitious effort. As the higher military career is now out of the question, the military calling ceases to exist for graduates of the higher educational institutions. This makes thousands of positions formerly occupied by officers non-existent. The wiping out of the German navy affects similarly the positions formerly held by naval officers. More than that, many of the young officers who otherwise would have remained in the military service are compelled to resign and look for positions in civil service.

Then there is another factor. Through the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine, the German-Polish, the German-Czechish, and the German-Danish territories, the offices hitherto held by Germans are lost to them. Moreover, the German officials in those provinces become dependent on similar places which must be vacated for them in Germany. This aggravates the outlook of a larger number of young officials, who will thus be placed in subordinate positions under them.

The third element which will affect the educated classes is pointed out to be the impoverishment of Germany which will cause the practice of strictest economy in all branches of state and public organizations, and will affect the number of positions, the salaries, the chances for a pension, and the like. The impoverishment is shown also to be trenching on the so-called free callings. It must find expression in a tremendous deflection of capital and a large emigration of labor. The various technical callings, the large branches of industry, the banks, the insurance agencies, private officials down to the lowest-salaried office clerks, will be thus affected, it is said. Retrenchments are also expected in the luxury, and primarily in the literary and artistic callings like architecture, music, literature, journalism, opera, stage, and various other theatricals, but also in the more expensive and therefore better recompensed house industry.

Professions Are Overcrowded. "The so-called better professions are already overcrowded as result of the oversupply of labor," says the writer. "This surplus will be increasing in the course of the next few years in the measure as the number of positions will be each month decreasing."

"In the year 1914 the Bavarian kultur-minister, von Kindling, speaking about the prospects of the teaching profession, gave the following official data regarding the length of time it took candidates to be appointed to offices: Philologists, (ancient) 10 years; mathematicians, 18; philologists, (modern) 13; students of German literature, 10; natural scientists, 18; draftsmen, 12. It is surprising how anybody yet finds courage to take up teaching when it is necessary to wait for an appointment till the thirty-fifth birthday. Besides, the salary of an assistant is 15 marks per month and the length of service in that capacity approximately five years. A young person must thus expect to draw 25 marks per month only when he reaches the age of 34. (At the present time a maltster in a brewery draws 300 marks a month.)"

Warnings against the taking up of medical studies issued by the Munich military board of physicians appear to the press at the present time. The prospects of physicians have been most discouraging by a wide extension of health insurance which restricts private practice by the ever-increasing quack treatment, the immigration of German physicians from abroad, and from the endangered territories in the west and east, and by the abolition of the posts of ship physicians. Since the beginning of the war 5,000 physicians were certified in an emergency. Because of a considerable oversupply the physicians suffer materially from financial stress."

The lot of the lawyers, the writer points out, is not a happy one, for young lawyers are already asking for out-of-work donations. The few fortunes receive 300 marks per month, and only recently gymnasium graduates were advertising in the newspapers and were glad to secure secretarial positions. In some district court for an annual salary of 2,400 marks. As for the church, many officers have already applied for admission, but the prospect for advancement are uncertain and will become more so in the future as a result of the heavy taxation and the prospective separation of church and state.

Turned Away Daily. "Engineers," says the writer, "among whom were some with high attainments were told by a good authority to whom they applied for advice to try to find work as ditch diggers. An American would do it immediately. But can Germans show so much pluck? Every bank director asserts that he turns off daily dozens of applicants, among them a large number of former officers. We must take into account that in the future the now numerous banks and bank branches will be greatly reduced. There will be in the future fewer banks, as there will be fewer government positions, fewer courts, gymnasia, real schools, factories; for each position in these banks, courts, schools and factories there will be, however, more applicants.

"Nor will houses be erected as before. The cheap houses, so much in need at present, will be built after a certain model; there will be no money for large state, community, or private buildings. Everywhere the same thing will be repeated—workmen will find rooms easily, but not so the engineers; there will be need for a large number of locksmiths and engine fitters, also mechanics, but not for men with technical education; bricklayers are desirable, but not architects. These are the conditions that the war did not bring about but that it did accentuate. Considered closely, the outlook is not so very discouraging. The watchword reads 'Hands—not heads!' The Germans will adjust themselves to these conditions with great difficulty, as until very recent times they were bent on developing their minds at the expense of their hands. With an overdeveloped organized system we had too many universities and too many schools of a higher type.

The German people are more inclined to have their fate rationed out rather than to take it into their own hands. The great number of higher institutions simply strengthened this fatal inclination. Incredible things were expected on the strength of a one-year certificate; in reality these privileges were worth nothing more than mere cards without the corresponding amount of merit. Instead of letting the young persons practice as soon as possible, we lengthened the courses of study wherever we could. There was no end to university studies."

PLANES TO RACE IN ALASKA

Trail to Be Broken for Mail Service to Seattle.

Landing sites, floats and other facilities, are being sought in Juneau, Ketchikan and other southeastern Alaska cities for seaplanes which will participate in a proposed air race between Seattle and southeastern Alaska next summer.

The Aero Club of the Northwest, with headquarters in Seattle, is making arrangements for the race. Prizes totaling $25,000 may be offered, according to advices reaching Juneau.

Already two well-known aviators, Cliff Durand, formerly prominent automobile race driver, and Capt. Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, non-stop, trans-Atlantic flyer, have stated they may enter the race.

Alaskans are hoping that the airplane racers will break trail for airplane mail service to Alaska from Seattle. Mail to the States at present is shipped as freight and weeks could be saved in some places if airplanes were used.

WAR RISK INSURANCE PERMANENT PROPOSITION

Director Declares That Incorrect and Misleading Statements Are Being Circulated.

Director R. G. Choimeley-Jones of the bureau of war risk insurance announces that misleading and incorrect statements relative to the permanency of government insurance are being circulated by individuals apparently engaged in attempted "twisting" of insurance. A specific and typical report received by the director was to the effect that some of these individuals had boarded a naval vessel at Philadelphia and had told the sailors that government insurance would not be good after five years.

"Government life insurance for veterans of the great war is a permanent proposition," said Director Choimeley-Jones. "Misleading statements have been made to the effect that government insurance will cease at the end of five years after the war, or that it will be turned over to private companies. Such statements are absolutely false and without foundation. There is, however, a requirement that the temporary term insurance held during the war which increased in cost from year to year, be changed or converted into one of the six permanent forms of government life insurance—ordinary life, 20-payment life, 30-payment life, 20-year endowment, 30-year endowment, or endowment at age of 62, within five years after the formal declaration of peace by proclamation of the president, if the insured desires to continue to be protected. This permanent insurance does not increase in premium cost as the insured grows older.

"Improper conduct by the individuals I have referred to is in direct opposition to the attitude of the great life insurance companies which is embraced in a statement by the secretary of one of the large companies, who recently said:

"Of course a life insurance company can not grant insurance at less than cost, but the government offers insurance to soldiers and sailors at less than it would cost the government to grant that insurance (that is because the government bears all expenses of management, etc.). The government is justified in this liberality in consideration of the fact that these soldiers and sailors have risked their lives, or have been willing to risk their lives, for the benefit of the nation. All this being so, it is obviously expedient for soldiers and sailors to take all the insurance offered by the government at the low rate charged."

YOUNG MOTHER'S PLIGHT

War Department Reported Husband Dead; Married Second Time.

A pathetic aftermath of the world war was enacted at the Union railroad station at Baltimore, Md., a few days ago, when Esther M. Weaver, a young woman of twenty-four years, was taken in charge by an officer in the rest room, as she was abandoning her baby there. She was taken to the central police court, where counsel assigned her, after investigation informed the judge that the young woman's first husband had gone to the world war, and the war department had reported him killed in action. Subsequently he returned, to find her married to another man. The second husband resigned her to her rightful husband, and the couple went to Stedman, Pa., to reside. Later Mrs. Weaver went to Baltimore, Md., where she found she was about to become a mother, and the child, by her second husband, was there born. Mr. Weaver not being informed of the fact of birth, the court discharged the young mother and she went away with her child.

When you have been accused by the skin, you know you are in a bad way. Look in the twentieth chapter of Job and you will find the line: "My bone cleaveth to my skin and my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

HAITIANS STILL SAVAGES

Marine Tells of Hair-Raising Episodes—West Indian Isle. John Page of Sac City, Ia., declares that savagery and cannibalism are common in the republic of Haiti. Page served there with the marines and has told relatives and friends here of some hair-raising episodes that marked service for Uncle Sam in the West Indian isle, indicating that as much excitement was experienced there as anywhere in the world war zone.

Page claims that he discovered that the citizens of the republic are really savages, believing in voodooism, involving witchcraft, snake worship and human sacrifice. Cannibalism and other South Sea Island practices are indulged in in the interior, according to his statements.

PRINCESSES HUNT JOBS

Hungarian Women of Royal Birth Would Be Governesses.

Several Hungarian princesses, refugees in Switzerland, finding themselves poor through the low exchange rate, are seeking positions as governesses and companions. But the people generally hesitate to employ them, fearing they will instill extravagant ideas in their children.

One Hungarian princess, despairing of failure to obtain a position, departed for Zurich recently to take up employment as a waitress. A number of princely and aristocratic Hungarian families here are awaiting funds to emigrate to America, where they hope to find wealth and happiness.

An Interesting Story

The evolution of the telephone pole, once a scraggy, then a towering tree in the wilderness and now bearing the wires that carry the messages of millions, is material for more than an every-day story. The cutting, the trimming, the hauling, rafting and drifting over the white rapids and across still lakes, all this is unusually interesting.

This year we will use thousands of these towering trees—straight cedar poles—and thousands of crossarms to help maintain and expand your telephone service. Does the lifting of the receiver bring to you the thought of what all this means in money and effort? In 1915 these poles cost $5.43 each and today they cost $13.05.

The hire of the woodsman and white-water burler, the tools they use, the hauling to the railroad, the freight charges, the setting up and equipping of the pole for your service, all cost greatly more now than in 1915.

This is only an instance of how our costs have grown out of all proportion to our income.

These poles, the crossarms, the wire and the labor, by the way, are Michigan products and your service is operated by a Michigan company, headed by Michigan men. Michigan business is largely dependent upon the telephone.

Why You Should Buy Guaranteed Roofing

When you buy roofing you want durability as well as shelter. You want to know that it will last long enough to make its average cost per year a reasonable figure.

That is why Certain-teed should appeal to you. For, when properly laid, Certain-teed Roofing is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to weight.

The guarantee adequately protects your investment, but it does not accurately measure Certain-teed's life. In fact no one knows just how durable Certain-teed is, because in no case has it ever been known to wear out on the roof.

And Certain-teed is more than durable. It is weather-proof, fire-retarding and spark-proof. It effectively shelters your property.

With all these advantages, Certain-teed Roofing costs less to buy, less to lay and less to maintain, than any other type of good roofing.

See your dealer about Certain-teed. He either has it or can get it quickly from a nearby Certain-teed distributing center.

MODERN "ENOCH ARDEN"

Comes Back and Will Get Wife Who Married Again.

"Enoch Arden" is home in Seattle permanently. This time "Enoch Arden" is Richard Sorensen, who enlisted early in the war and was reported "killed in action."

Mrs. Beulah Irene Sorensen, his wife and the mother of sixteen-year-old Allen Sorensen, waited hopefully for verification of her husband's death. It came in the form of letters from those who "saw him last." All hope apparently gone, Mrs. Sorensen was married June 17, 1919, to G. C. Jackson.

A few days ago a telegram reached her from New York and it was signed "Dick." The "killed in action" report was false. The two husbands left the choice to her. Her choice was "Dick," and she has started annulment proceedings against her second husband. The suit is an amicable one, it is understood.

The artful female is ever trying to improve nature's handiwork.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Getting the Second 5,000 Miles Out of Tires

There's the rub. Because either the first 5,000 were not built into them, or practical care was not given them. We have the tires you want—the largest selling tires in the world—GOODYEAR'S. They have the miles built into them. When we sell you one of them we tell you the simple rules that will bring out the miles, and the trick is done.

If you don't believe it, try us. Note these types and prices. Other sizes also in stock:
