Tax-Payers Raise Funds

Money All Collected For The Clark Seed House.

Last Saturday night sufficient money was paid in from tax-payers to make up the sufficient amount necessary for the purchase of the Clark Seed House building, for the Velvet Gum Company. The building had been purchased previously and the amount of money needed to complete the payment was borrowed, but now the entire amount needed for the purchase of the building has been turned in. This building was purchased at $4500. The tax-payers of East Jordan are to be congratulated upon their generous response. This was raised without any personal solicitation whatever and practically every taxpayer in the city of East Jordan paid his apportioned amount. The Velvet Gum Company greatly appreciates the fine spirit shown by East Jordan people in the raising of this money.

The people of East Jordan are demonstrating the fact that they are doing their bit toward making East Jordan a larger and more prosperous city. Other industries are bound to come here for when the people want more industries and are willing to make a sacrifice to secure them the city is bound to grow.

MRS. ROBERT H. TAYLOR PASSED AWAY AT THE SOO

The funeral of Mrs. Robert H. Taylor, who passed away at the Soo May 11th, was held from the Methodist Church in East Jordan last Thursday, the 13th, conducted by the pastor, Rev. M. E. Hoyt. Interment at East Jordan cemetery.

Below is an article taken from the Soo Evening News of the 11th inst., relative to her death—

Mrs. Eva Mae Taylor, aged 32, wife of Robt. Hector Taylor died this morning at 6 o'clock at her home 704 Easterday Avenue following a stroke of apoplexy Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Taylor had been ailing for several months having had slight attacks for which she treated unsuccessfully here and at Ann Arbor. She had been confined to her bed recently however and yesterday she was about her home duties not feeling at all badly. After she was stricken she was able to converse with her husband and it was hoped that she would recuperate in nice shape. This morning, however, she suddenly was stricken with a sharp pain in her head and passed away almost immediately.

Mrs. Taylor was formerly Miss Eva Mae Heller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Heller of East Jordan, Mich., at which place she was born 32 years ago the third of this month. She came to the Soo July 1st, 1914, and since that time served as stenographer in the office of S. T. Handy and of the City manager. She was married to Mr. Taylor on December 27th, 1917.

A large circle of friends mourn the death of Mrs. Taylor, who had a beautiful character and an ability to make and keep friends. She was a member of the Central Methodist Church and of the Rebekah Lodge. Surviving are her husband, her parents, and two brothers Clifton and Karl, both of East Jordan.

Music In Church.
For almost a thousand years Gregorian chant, without any instrumental or harmonic addition, was the only music used in connection with the liturgy of the church. The organ in its primitive and rude form was the first instrument to be introduced into church and for a long time was the sole instrument to accompany the chant.

Lives Up to the Symptoms.
"You can nearly always tell a man who is suffering from this 'unrest,'" said Jud Tunkins, "by the way he manages to put in more time resting than anyone else in the neighborhood."

Intelligent Apes.
At the foot of Mount Kowang, in North Manchuria, there live strange animals called "fun-nanban-kau." They are larger than ordinary apes and live in spacious caverns in the rocky sides of the hills. During the spring and summer they store up sufficient food for the winter.

Senior Play Next Monday

A Funny Farce Will Be Staged At Temple Theatre.

The Senior High School play called "A Strenuous Life" will be presented next Monday night at Temple Theatre. This play consists of 14 characters, 9 boys and 5 girls. All are members of the senior class. The play itself is a rollicking comedy full of action every minute. The large number of characters and the diversity of parts make it a most enjoyable production.

The price of admission will be fifty and seventy-five cents and the seats may be reserved free at Hunsbergers. This is the last school entertainment of the year and the last time that the senior class will participate in any school activity. Don't fail to patronize this fine production.

Liked the Name.
One of the government-owned dwellings near the Union station, Washington, is occupied by a stout colored woman who has converted it into a small hotel for folks of the darker race. Over the door is a signboard with the inscription, "The Annex." I asked the woman to what other hotel was her place an annex. "Oh," she replied, "dat's jes de name of my hotel. Dar ain't no other hotel 'nected with it. I jes picked de word 'Annex' 'cause it sounds high-toned like."—Washington Herald.

Anything is Possible.
While one man says of a thing: "It is impossible!" and contents himself with saying so, another one passes him and does it. This has been the history of the world's progress ever since time began. We cannot say of anything that it is impossible in this marvelous world of invention and endeavor. We can only say: "It has never yet been done."

Selfness Gains Nothing.
Men should see life as more than a means of personal advancement. Selfishness may achieve, but the knowledge that one will soon be forgotten in the wind of yesterday. It's the man who lives for the common good that has left a name on humanity and whose name is a noble name in the very foundations of history. Call it Utopia if you will. Facts show that men must die to really live. And men who give themselves to human betterment live as they raise others from unreasonable drudgery to honorable toil and common comforts.

April 20, 1864

By Miss O'Reilly

Three years ago today
We raised our hands to heaven,
And on the rolls of muster
Our names were thirty-seven.
There were just a thousand bayonets,
And the swords were thirty-seven,
As we took the oath of service
With our right hands raised to heaven.

O 'twas a gallant day
In memory still adored—
That day of our sun-bright nuptials
With the soulless of the sword!

Shrill rang the fife, the bugles blared,
And beneath a cloudless heaven
Twinkled a thousand bayonets,
And the swords were thirty-seven.

And of the thousand bayonets
Two hundred march today;
Hundreds lie in Virginian swamps
And hundreds in Maryland clay;
And other hundreds, less happily drag
Their shattered limbs around
And envy the deep, calm, blessed sleep
Of the battlefield's holy ground.

As for us—one night a week ago
Our remnant, just eleven,
Gathered around a banqueting board
With seats for thirty-seven;
There were two limped in on crutches
And two had each but a hand
To pour the wine and raise the cup
As we toasted "Our Flag and Land!"

And the room seemed filled with whispers
As we looked at the vacant seats,
And with choking throats we pushed aside
The rich but untasted meats.
Then in silence we brimmed our glasses
And rose up—just eleven,
And bowed as we drank to the loved and the dead
Who had made us thirty-seven!

It matters not whether their bodies are here or in France, it is their Memorial day, and the American people pause from their activities to pay them tribute, together with the dead of other wars. Some day perhaps, it will be possible to place flowers upon the graves of all of our men who fell in the great fight. But wherever they rest these men will be honored by the people of the whole country and Memorial day now takes on a new significance greater than in its inception.
Perhaps some time the lands of our allies will adopt this custom and establish May 30 as the day of commemoration of gallant deeds and unselfish service and sacrifice.

Day for Introspection.
Americans could not these days do better than commune with their own past and make the acquaintance of the nation's heroes. The memory of the boy who died at Shiloh, or at Chateau Thierry is worth more to the nation than all the teaching of all the cubist social reformers. For those boys did something, set an example, and built their lives into the life of the country. Unknown their names may be, but they are immortal, and their sacrifice is part of the inheritance of every American, and should be precious. We found America in the cantonments and on the battlefield, and not in a dirty Bohemia. Surely,
Memorial day will carry some such message as this to every loyal heart and every clear-thinking mind. It ought to be reverently observed, with a grateful sense of God's mercies to this land which has meant, and still means, so much to the world. "Thank God," said Daniel Webster in his speech on the completion of the Bunker Hill monument, "I—also am an American!"

The Day of the G. A. R.
If there is anything in Memorial day it lies in preserving the traditions of a mighty host in blue that marched to do the work of the nation.
If there is anything in loyalty, in patriotism, in hope of the future, it lies in assuring every man, woman and child of the gratitude of the republic.

MARY PICKFORD AND GODSONS OF BATTERY C, 143D F. A.

Karl Ross Post of the American Legion of Stockton, Cal., Proudly Claims Film Star as Godmother, and Appreciates the Many Kindnesses Shown Them by the Movie Queen.

THE Karl Ross post of the American Legion, Stockton, Cal., claims Mary Pickford as its "godmother," and the little motion picture star does not seem inclined to dispute the claim, having recently addressed a very motherly letter to her boys whom she addressed as godsons.

This post included the Battery C men of the 143d Field Artillery, of which little Mary was godmother.

"Our Mary was an ideal godmother," said Tod Clawdsley, editor of the San Joaquin Legion. "She did a thousand and one nice things for our regiment. She autographed 1,200 smileage books and gave them to us; sent every soldier a sweater; sent us thousands of cigarettes at Camp Kearney and had 70,000 of them waiting for us at Camp Merritt when we returned from France. She provided us with auto busses to return from far out in the country to a dance at Los Angeles, and she did a lot of other splendid things, including giving our regimental standard.

"Mary was honored colonel of the 143d Field Artillery. We have been told that no other in the U. S. ever had the privilege of formally inspecting a regiment of American troops except visiting royalty—no other woman, that is.

"When we made a 500-mile hike from Camp Kearney to Los Angeles, Mary met us at the city gates dressed in a full colonel's uniform and led us through the city. That night she led the grand march at the big Shrine Auditorium military ball.

"Our regiment, every man of the 1,200, 'chipped in' to buy her a beautiful loving cup when she visited us at Camp Kearney. So you can see that the little film star was 'ace high' with the boys. Incidentally, I can tell you that she is a mighty sweet little lady to talk to—unaffected and pleasing.

"The American Legion is very active in California just now. We have 45,000 members. The local post put on a huge carnival-circus recently. Forty-eight posts of the San Joaquin Valley met and perfected a valley athletic association to handle baseball, boxing, swimming, etc.

"Our post gave $1,000 to the Stockton Advertising club last month to aid in bringing the Pacific Coast Advertising clubs here, in convention. This sort of action on the part of the Legion has brought out reciprocal support from organizations. Our post is aiding in the Mission's Restoration campaign, and takes part in every movement for civic betterment."

So it is quite evident "Little Mary" has just cause to be proud of her "godsons."

WAR MEDALS BEDECKED HERO

John Bowe Has Enough Medals to Completely Cover His Brave and Manly Breast.

John Bowe, First Vice Commander of the Minnesota Department of the American Legion, is one of the famous soldiers of fortune, who fought in both the Spanish-American and the late war, and is now quietly awaiting in Canby, Minn., for another opportunity to win other decorations in another war.

In his fifty years John Bowe has been an adventurer in business as well as in war. He started the first cash market for farm produce in Canby, and organized the first cement block and tile factory when that industry was looked upon as a poor risk. He built the first cold storage building in his native city.

Nor are those his only "firsts." He was the first subscriber to the Farmers' Mutual Telephone Company, first depositor in the Postal Savings Bank, first president of the Yellow Medicine County Fair Association, first president of John Swenson's Memorial Hospital. And was mayor of Canby.

As might be expected of one who thus broadly sensed his duties as a citizen, he served with the 13th Minnesota in the Spanish-American war and in the Philippine insurrection, having been present at the capture of Manila and ten other engagements.

When the world war broke out, Bowe could not wait for America to enter, but joined the French army, connected with the Second Foreign Legion, and the 170th and 163d regiments of the line, the 92nd territorial and the 1st Regiment, Foreign Legion. He was never commissioned.

He spent three years in France, and two years in the trenches. He was wounded in the attack on Champagne, October 19, 1915, returned to the front and was finally invalided home.

One would never guess that this quiet, unassuming man, as he goes about his business in this peaceful Minnesota town, is Legionnaire Bowe, and you'd never know that on the horizon blue of his uniform he may wear a croix de guerre and enough medals to cover the breast of his coat.

In awarding the croix de guerre, the French government said he "volunteered always for the most dangerous missions and the most perilous posts," and the Serbian medal was bestowed for "distinguished and brilliant conduct under fire."

Bowe has written of his thrilling experiences of two years in the thick of the fight in his book "Soldiers of the Legion."

"Looking back to my life over there now," said Bowe, "it was a busy, entertaining, exciting time while it lasted. But the comrades are all dead or scattered—the glory, the romance is gone—it hardly seems natural or possible, more like a dream or nightmare. The suffering and the exertion overshadow the few short hours of furlough in Paris or London.

"We couldn't afford to lose," he said. "The price paid was terrific, but it was worth it, provided we can keep the advantages gained. One thing that gets my goat is the self-complacency of those people here at home—they have no conception of what is or has been going on in Europe, and don't seem to realize that we are just as vitally interested in world problems as the people of Europe.

"We see too many politicians in office standing idly by while the resources of the country are being wasted. We see two groups at Washington sparring for an issue for the next election, evidently trying to lose the advantages the soldiers gained. But I have an unlimited faith that we shall square ourselves to meet the new day.

"And the American Legion is going to have no small part in squaring the ship of state for the new day."

Verboten.

Coming back from France, some 1,800 men spent 18 days on a small liner that had no mess hall for the soldiers. Ordinarily, they got their chow and went on deck to eat it, but when it rained they were not even allowed above decks. They were never certain just where they could go, because guards kept popping up everywhere with the remark, "You can't sit there," or "You can't stand here." One day a doughboy who had gone on deck with his mess only to be sent below again slipped on the nonskid ladder. The food flew everywhere and the soldier landed at the bottom in a sitting position. As he sat there collecting his faculties, a guard hurried up.

"You can't eat there, buddy," he announced.

Women Form Many Branches.
Units of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion are being rapidly organized, 445 having been chartered up to March 26.

This Is a Funny Play, Full of Action and Sparkling Wit. Entire Cast Composed of Seniors.

Cornish Tin Miners.
The men who work in the Cornish tin mines are a class by themselves, and all their differences are adjusted by the stannary courts, as they are called from the Latin word stannum. These curious courts have existed in their present form since the middle of the thirteenth century, and, in a simpler form, much earlier; and the miners claim to be free from all other jurisdiction, "except in matters affecting the land, life or limb."

Standard English Pound.
The original English pound was derived from the weight of 7,680 grains of wheat taken from the middle of the ears and well dried. This remained the standard from the time of William the Conqueror to the time of Henry VIII, in whose reign the avoirdupois pound of 7,000 grains came into use. This was established as the standard pound during the reign of Queen Elizabeth and has been continued to the present day.

Prolific Mesquite Tree.
A historical mesquite tree, cut down in Honolulu, Hawaii, October 23, 1919, which served as a valuable source of seed, and had been a landmark attracting the interest of thousands of tourists traversing the Pacific ocean, had, during the ninety-two years of its existence, been the progenitor of thousands of trees which now cover throughout the Hawaiian island group approximately 90,000 acres of mostly barren land which formerly was worthless.

FISK CORD TIRES

GOOD mileage, good looks, good traction—all to an extreme degree—are features of these tires. In their making and in their selling, the Fisk Ideal is a vital factor.

The Fisk Ideal: "To be the best concern in the world to work for, and the squarest concern in existence to do business with."

SEIZE CANNED BEANS

Federal Inspectors Charge Canners With Misbranding.

Long Cranberry Beans Labeled as "Red Kidney Beans" Taken by Officials.

Washington.—Seizure of a large shipment of canned beans, labeled as "Red Kidney Beans," but which were long cranberry beans, was made recently in Chicago on information furnished by federal food inspectors. Officials of the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture, who are charged with the enforcement of the federal food and drug act, have received information that large quantities of the low-priced long cranberry bean have been put up under the label of the high-priced red kidney bean and are being sold to consumers at the higher price. Inspectors have been instructed to report for seizure all shipments so misbranded coming within the jurisdiction of the federal food and drug act.

The long cranberry bean costs the canner only about half as much as does the red kidney bean, yet investigation has shown that when the long cranberry bean is sold under the label of the red kidney bean the price to the consumer is as much as that of the genuine red kidney bean.

The long cranberry bean, which is imported in large quantities from Japan, is an excellent article of food, and there is no objection to its sale and use under a truthful label, say the officials. The bean looks and tastes very much like the genuine red kidney bean, and if sold under its own name could soon establish a market on its own merit, but because its cost is so much less than the red kidney bean, its sale under the name of the higher-priced bean is demoralizing to the trade and unfair to the consumer. The officials have inaugurated a campaign to seize all interstate shipments of beans which in this particular violate the food and drug act.

"TROT ALONG" BASKET

Shoppers tired of carrying home parcels will be delighted with this "trot-along" shopping help, which is simply a basket mounted on wheels, with a walking stick for a handle. It has become very popular in London. The "trot-along," though strong enough to carry heavy parcels, can be easily handled by a child, as the illustration shows.

BUILD AIR DEFENSE STATION

United States Government to Have Base for Land and Sea Planes on Staten Island.

New York.—Construction of an aerial coast defense station has been begun at New Dorp, Staten Island, to serve as a base for land and seaplane patrol aircraft.

The station, which will be known as Miller field in honor of Capt. James E. Miller, killed in action in France, also will be equipped with directional wireless apparatus to guide patrolling craft in foggy weather.

The field comprises 450 acres, with an ocean frontage of 1,750 feet. The plans, which were made during the war, call for 82 buildings, including barracks, officers' quarters, mess halls, post exchanges and administration buildings.

Find Rare Variety of Sugar on Firs

Washington.—Discovery of the growth of sugar on fir trees in British Columbia is announced in the American Forestry Magazine. The discovery resulted from investigations by Prof. John Davidson of the University of British Columbia at Vancouver.

Specimens are said to have indicated the presence of a large percentage of an extremely rare variety of sugar. Indians have made use of the sugar for many years, the article states.

THE UNFORGOTTEN.

Myriads of dead in earth's warm bosom slumber,
Tenderly blanketed by verdant sod,
A myriad more, beneath old ocean's thunder,
Silent await the final act of God.
For God remembers—he who notes the sparrow—
The piteous pale ones who pass away,
On earth forgotten, as all joy and sorrow,
And love forgotten are in life's brief day.
But they who die upon the field of glory,
Whether on ocean's plain or Marathon,
They are the unforgotten; and their story
Rings down the ages until time is done.

HALL OF HEROES

Worthy Memorial Projected for National Capital.

To Be Dedicated to Soldiers of the Republic Who Have Given to it Their Last Full Measure of Devotion.

It now seems probable that one of the tangible fruits of the world war, in the form of memorials, will be an immense convention hall to be located in the national capital, which strangely enough has no really suitable meeting place for large audiences. If the building, for which plans have been accepted and a splendid site secured through the co-operation of congress, is erected, it will be designated as a memorial both to the soldiers of '17 (and '18) and of '76. The reason for thus linking the heroes of the present with those of colonial days is that George Washington himself is responsible for the idea of a memorial, having included in his will a bequest of $25,000 for the purpose. This was in the form of stock certificates, and was one of two gifts which congress gave him in view of the fact that he would accept no compensation of the usual sort for his services. In setting aside this gift in his will, Washington designated that it be used for the diffusion of knowledge.

While the original stock certificates have long since become of little value, the idea has never been lost sight of, and an organization was formed to raise money for the memorial. Our sharing in the great war interrupted the work of this society, but on the other hand the coming of peace has given it a new incentive, and so it is proposed to complete the fund (already $350,000 in cash, with many contingent promises in addition) and erect a great convention hall in honor of our boys in khaki and the Revolutionary heroes. A splendid site has been granted by congress for the Sectional View of Memorial Hall building—that now occupied by the old Pennsylvania railway station.

It provides for a main auditorium with a floor space of 38,500 square feet, with a gallery of 10,000 square feet, the two having a seating capacity of 7,000, and so suitable for inaugural balls, public receptions, etc., as well as conventions. Grouped about the main auditorium are smaller halls. The second floor is to have a banquet hall with a capacity of 600 persons and rooms designed to serve as permanent offices for patriotic societies.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Day of Solemn Observance.
Those who cannot bring themselves to a cessation of their normal pursuits long enough to join in the memorial services, to bow their heads in a momentary tribute to American valor, at least can refrain from making the event the occasion of a holiday. They owe this much to the dead and to the families whose hearts are saddened. American sentiment can be shown in no better way than by observing May 30 as a real Memorial day.

U. S. IS QUICKER SHIPBUILDER

Great Britain, However, Has More Tonnage Under Construction in Its Yards.

London.—An analysis of Lloyd's register returns for the quarter that ended December 31, made by the American Chamber of Commerce in London, indicate that, for the first time since the United States became a shipbuilder on a large scale, British shipyards show signs of regaining their former supremacy.

The tonnage now building in the United Kingdom, says the American chamber, exceeds by 27,732 tons that under present construction in the United States, where the decrease in the building of new tonnage amounts to 504,000 tons, as compared with the figures for September last.

The American chamber remarks that the tonnage under construction may not be so good a basis for judgment as the amount of tonnage actually launched, and that the United States is putting ships on the water more rapidly than Great Britain.

REFUSE $5,000,000 FOR ART

German Government Cannot Sell Altar Piece to America—Belongs to Belgium.

Berlin.—An offer of $5,000,000 has been made by an American to the German government for sections of the famous altar piece painted by Jan and Hubert Van Eyck, formerly in the Cathedral of St. Bavon, Ghent, and now in the Berlin museum, says the Tageblatt.

It is said the government cannot accept the offer, as the treasure must be returned to Belgium, under the terms of the Versailles treaty.

Germany, however, must pay the Hohenzollern family for this work of art as a part of the settlement for the taking over of royal holdings, the newspaper says.

Laborers Buy $25 Shirts.

New York.—Louis B. Tim, silk shirt manufacturer, reports silk shirts selling at $25, "and the peculiar thing about it," he said, "is that we sell more of these shirts to workmen than we do to millionaires."

You can't bluff a pretty girl by telling her there are microbes in kisses.

ARTISTS DON'T WANT CARD

Vote Shows Them Opposed to Plan to Unionize Profession, Says Announcement.

New York.—American artists are not in favor of a union, according to the Society of Independent Artists, which made public the result of a questionnaire among its 650 members on the subject. The artists were asked to register their approval or disapproval of a union similar to the recently organized union of French graphic and plastic artists in Paris.

The detailed vote was not announced, but the attitude of those opposed to the proposition was stated by Walter Wesley Dow of Columbia university, who said:

"We have more societies than we know what to do with. It simply makes additional trouble and takes time that artists would prefer to give to their work."

PIERCES STEEL 13 INCHES

Test Showing of 16-Inch Explosive Is Thought to Establish a Record.

Washington.—Boring its way through more than 13 inches of armor belt steel, a 16-inch projectile produced at the new naval ordnance plant at South Charleston, W. Va., the third shell fired out of a test group of five, met every requirement in a test at the Indian Head (Md.) proving grounds, and established what naval officers believe to be a record in big shell production.

The 16-inch projectile, which weighs 2,100 pounds, against the 1,400 pounds of the 14-inch shell, will be turned out in quantities for the guns of the dreadnaughts.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

THE man who tempers economy with wisdom directs the expenditure of his money judiciously. He is more concerned with ultimate values than with mere cheapness of price.

It is to this type of person among motorists that the Paige car most appeals.

We, of the Paige Company, have always taken the view that unless a car has the qualities essential to comfort, lasting satisfaction and pride of ownership, it would be dear at any price.

So we built the Paige Glenbrook according to our ideas of what a real motor car should be—a car which would be not only a reliable vehicle of transportation but also a car of beauty, comfort and power.

The Tricolor.
This really owes its origin to Mary Queen of Scots. It was she who, according to tradition, gave the tricolor device to Paris—the white to represent the house of her royal husband, and the dauphin, the blue for Scotland, and the red for the red-coated Swiss of the royal bodyguard. The Revolutionists in 1789 adopted Mary's colors for their own.

Pacific Ocean Once South Sea.
The South sea is the name originally given and sometimes still applied to the Pacific ocean. In 1583 Balboa crossed the Isthmus and arrived on September 20 at a mountain, from the summit of which, looking south, he beheld the expanse of the ocean stretching out before him, while the northern part was closed from view. He named it, therefore, the South sea.

MICKIE SAYS

MIGHTY THRONG OF HEROES

No Disparagement to Say the World Has Never Seen Army Superior to "Boys in Blue."

Now that the last great war has been fought that will ever be fought, the question as to which was the greatest army the world has seen can be settled.

In our judgment there can be no doubt that history will say unqualifiedly that the greatest army in every respect the world has seen was the army that fought and won the Civil war in the United States between 1861 and 1865.

Old and bent on the highways,
Their tattered flags on the breeze,
Never leaped at the jaws of death
Such fighting men as these;
Never saw flame of rampart
When battle tides ran red,
The like of these old gray soldiers
Who seek today their dead.

They are fast disappearing now—only the thin blue line remains of that great host of freemen who filled the world with their story. But, when the last man of them all shall have stood at salute before the Great Captain at the gates of jasper, God will have folded in his heavens the mightiest throng of heroes that heaven itself has yet welcomed to its shining highways.

War Flags Carry Thrills

There are war flags that carry a thrill in each frayed stripe and tarnished star. From the garrison standard, lowered at Fort Moultrie in 1860, when Major Anderson and his command evacuated that post to occupy Fort Sumter, to the flag raised at Richmond in 1865, each powder-marked, bullet-torn emblem represents a chapter of national history written in indelible red, white and blue.

Dignified Protest

It is told of an old negro servant of roguish propensities, as many a darky is, that on one occasion he was unjustly reprimanded by his master for the disappearance of a certain article of value. His reply was: "Marso Andrew, I has enuff to answer for wid the accusations what is jest, widout havin to be sponisible for dem what aint so."

Happiness consists in the enjoyment of little pleasures, scattered along the common path of life, which is the eager search for some great and exciting joy, we are apt to overlook—Exchange.

MEMORIAL DAY

A Proclamation By The Governor.

Time has greatly thinned the ranks of the brave men in whose honor Memorial Day was instituted fifty-two years ago, but it cannot dim the luster of their heroic deeds. While this Government shall endure their splendid achievements will be held in grateful remembrance. They won the cause that was more than all their victories. They saved the Union; and they established liberty not only throughout this broad and blessed land, but when the four years of agony were over a new witness to human freedom and to human brotherhood went forth from these shores and the light sped all around the globe. Their glory shall not fade.

In the war with Spain and in the great World War, the sons and the grandsons of the men who fought at Shiloh and Antietam and Gettysburg nobly upheld the honor and the traditions of the American army and navy; and, while we look back with pride and satisfaction upon the achievements of the heroes of the Civil War, we may take equal pride in the more recent achievements of American soldiers and sailors and marines.

Therefore, that we may pay a tribute of respect and esteem to the surviving veterans of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the recent World War, and honor the memory of the men who gave up their lives in all these wars, I, Albert E. Sleeper, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby issue this my Proclamation and sincerely urge the observance of

Sunday, May 30th, 1920, as Memorial Day

And I earnestly appeal to the people of Michigan for hearty co-operation in plans for the observance of the day in their respective communities, and for special provision this year for the comfort and convenience of the old soldiers. Age is telling on them physically but the same undaunted spirit is there as of yore.

On that day flags should be displayed at half-staff until noon and then hoisted to the top of the staff.

In this connection it is proper to point out that the law of the State provides that whenever the 30th day of May shall fall on a Sunday the following day shall be deemed a public holiday. See Howell's Annotated Statutes, Second Edition, Section 2965.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this fifteenth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-fourth.

ALBERT E. SLEEPER,
Governor.

A unique church has recently been completed in Santa Rosa, Cal. Every piece of timber in it, except the floor, was cut from one tree—a giant redwood, 18 feet in diameter. The tree, which produced 78,000 feet of timber, grew on a high mountain range near Greenville, 15 miles from the Pacific ocean, and when cut was found to be about eight hundred years old.

The Strange Case of Cavendish

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "The Devil's Own," "My Lady of the North," etc.

(Copyright by Randall Parrish)

He drew her back into the denser undergrowth and they looked out through the leaves to where the road circled in toward the bridge. The hoof-beats of horses alone broke the silence.

CHAPTER VI.

Viewed From Both Sides.

The carriage emerged into full view. Beside the driver it contained three passengers—Beaton on the front seat, his face turned backward toward the two behind, a man and a woman.

The girl seized Westcott's arm while she directed his gaze with her free hand. "Look!" she cried. "The woman is La Rue. And the man—the man is Enright! He is the lawyer I told you of—the one whose hand is not clear in this affair. And he is here!"

"Good!" Westcott exclaimed. "I'm glad they're both here. It means that there will be more to observe, and it means that there will be action—and that, too, quick! They are out here for a definite purpose which must soon be disclosed. And, Miss Donovan, I may be a little rock-worm and a little bit out of style, but I think their presence here has something to do with the whereabouts of Fred Cavendish."

The girl looked straight into his honest, clear eyes. His remark opened a vast field for speculation. "You think he is alive, then?" she said earnestly. "It is an interesting hypothesis. Perhaps—perhaps he may be in this neighborhood, even. And that," she added, her Irish eyes alight, "would be more interesting still."

"I hadn't finished my argument when that carriage appeared," Westcott answered. "Do you remember? Well, that might be the answer. Beaton has been in this neighborhood ever since about the time of that murder in New York. Nobody knows what his business is, but he is hand-in-glove with Bill Lacy and his gang. Lacy, besides running a saloon, pretends to be a mining speculator, but it is my opinion there is nothing he wouldn't do for money, if he considered the game safe. And now, with everything quiet in the East, and no thought that there is any suspicion remaining, Beaton sends for the woman to join him here. Why? Because there is some job to be done too big for him to tackle alone. He's merely a gunman; he can do the strong-arm stuff, all right, but lacks brains. There is a problem out here requiring a little intellect; and it is my guess it is how to dispose of Cavendish until they can get away safely with the swag."

"I wonder how this was ever planned out—if it be true?"

"It must have originated in some cunning, criminal brain," he admitted thoughtfully. "Not Beaton's, surely; and, while she is probably much brighter, I am inclined to think the girl is merely acting under orders. There is somebody connected with this scheme higher up—a master criminal."

Miss Donovan was no fool; newspaper work had taught her to suspect men of intellect, and that nothing, however wicked, low or depraved, was beyond them.

"Enright!" she said definitely. "Obviously now. I've thought so from the first. But always he worked so carefully, so guardedly, that sometimes I have doubted. But now I say without qualifications—Enright, smooth Mr. Enright, late of New York."

"That's my bet," Westcott agreed, his hand on her shoulder, forgetful of his intense earnestness. "Enright is the only one who could do it, and he has schemed so as to get John into a hole where he dare not emit a sound, no matter what they do to him. If they can only succeed in keeping Frederick safely out of sight until after the court awards the property to his heir, they can milk John at their leisure. It's a lawyer's graft, all right."

"Then Frederick may be confined not far away?"

"Likely enough; it's wild country. There are a hundred places within fifty miles where he might be hidden away for years. That is the job which was given to Beaton; he had the dirty work to perform, while the girl took care of John."

Westcott's theory of the situation, his quick decision that Frederick Cavendish still lived, completely overturned Stella's earlier conviction. Yet his argument did not seem unfair or his conclusion impossible. Her newspaper experience had made her aware that there is nothing in this world so strange as truth, and nothing so unusual as to be beyond the domain of crime.

"What do you think?" he asked gently.

"Oh, I do not know; it all grows less comprehensible every moment. But whatever is true I cannot see that anything remains for us to do, but wait and watch the actions of these people; they are certain to betray themselves."

"Well, I am going to busy myself and take a scouting trip to La Rosita."

"Is that Lacy's mine?"

"Yes; up the gulch here about two miles. I am to see you again—alone?"

"We must have some means of communication; have you any suggestion?"

"Yes, but we'll take for our motto, 'Safety first.' We mustn't be seen together, or suspected in any way of being friends. The livery-stable keeper has a boy about twelve, who is quite devoted to me; a bright, trustworthy little fellow. He is about the hotel a good deal, and will bring me word from you any time. You need have no fear that I shall fail to respond to any message you send."

"I shall not doubt." She held out her hand frankly. "You believe in me now, Mr. Westcott?"

"Absolutely; indeed I think I always have."

"Always think so, please, no matter what happens. I was nearly wild until I got the note to you; I was so afraid you would leave the hotel. We must trust each other."

He stood before her, his hat in hand, a strong, robust figure, his bronzed face clearly revealed; the sunlight making manifest the gray hair about his temples. To Miss Donovan he seemed all man, instinct with character and purpose, a virile type of the out-of-doors.

"To the death," and his lips and eyes smiled. "I believe in you utterly."

"Thank you. Good-by."

He watched her climb the bank and emerge upon the bridge. He still stood there, bareheaded, when she turned and smiled back at him, waving her hand. Then the slender figure vanished, and he was left alone. A moment later, Westcott was striding up the trail, intent upon a plan to entrap Lacy.

They would have felt less confident in the future could they have overheard a conversation being carried on in a room of the Timmons house. It was Miss La Rue's apartment, possessing two windows, but furnished in a style so primitive as to cause that fastidious young lady to burst into laughter when she first entered and gazed about. Both her companions followed her, laden with luggage, and Beaton, sensing instantly what had thus affected her humor, dropped his bag on the floor.

"It's the best there is here," he protested. "Timmons has held it for you three days. If you feel like kicking about this room, you ought to see some of the others—mine, for instance, or the one Timmons put that other woman in."

"Oh, yes," she said, finding a seat and staring at him. "That reminds me. Did you say there was a girl here from New York? Sit down, Mr. Enright, and let's talk. How's the door, Ned?"

He opened it and glanced out into the hall, throwing the bolt as he came back.

"All right, Celeste, but I wouldn't talk quite so loud; the partitions are not very tight."

"No objections to a cigarette, I suppose," and she produced a case.

"Thanks; now I feel better—certainly, light up. Well, Ned, the first thing I want to know is, who is this other New York skirt, and how did she happen to blow in here just at this time?"

Beaton completed the lighting of his cigar, fingering the match carelessly out of the window.

"Oh, she's all right," he said easily. "Just an innocent kid" writer for Scribner's who's trying to make good writing about the beautiful scenery around here. Her name is Donovan. Her father's a big contractor and has money to burn."

"Did you ever hear the beat of that, Enright? Noddy as about to feather his nest. Well, go on."

"That's about all I guess, only she ain't nothin' you need be afraid of."

"Sure not, with a watch dog like you on guard. But if you ask me, I don't like the idea of her happening in here just at this time. This is no place for an innocent child," and she looked about, her lip curling. "Lord, I should say not. Do you happen to remember any New York contractor by that name, Mr. Enright?"

The rotund lawyer, his feet elevated on the window-sill, a cigar between his lips, shook his head in emphatic dissent.

"Not lately; there was a Tim Donovan who had a pull in the subway excavation—he was a Tammany man—but he died, and was never married. What's the girl look like?"

"Rather slender, with brown hair, sorter coppery in the sun, and gray eyes that grow dark when she's interested. About twenty-three or four, I should say."

"Did you get her full name?"

"Sure, it's on the register—Stella Donovan."

Enright lowered his feet to the floor, a puzzled look on his face, his teeth clinched on his cigar.

"Hold on a bit till I think," he muttered. "That sounds mighty familiar—Stella Donovan! By the Lord, I've heard that name before somewhere; ah, I have it—she's on the New York Star. I've seen her name signed to articles in the Sunday edition. I'll bet she's the girl."

"A New York newspaperwoman; well, what do you suppose she is doing out here? After us?"

Enright had a grip on himself again and slowly relit his cigar, leaning back, and staring out the window. His mind gripped the situation coldly.

"Well, we'd best be careful," he said slowly. "Probably it's merely a coincidence, but I don't like her lying to Beaton. That don't look just right. We'll lay quiet and try the young lady out. Beaton here can give her an introduction to Miss La Rue, and the rest is easy."

Westcott's purpose in visiting the La Rosita mine was a rather vague one. His thought had naturally associated Bill Lacy with whatever form of devilry had brought Beaton to the neighborhood of Haskell, and he felt convinced firmly that this special brand of devilry had some direct connection with the disappearance of Frederick Cavendish. Just what the connection between these people might prove to be was still a matter of doubt, but as Miss Donovan was seeking this information at the hotel, all that remained for him to do at present was an investigation of Lacy. The careful review of all Miss Donovan had told him only served to increase his confidence that his old partner still lived. No other conception seemed possible, or would account for the presence of Ned Beaton in Haskell, or the hurried call for Miss La Rue. Yet it was equally evident this was not caused by any miscarriage of their original plans. Apparently every detail of the crime, which meant the winning of Frederick Cavendish's fortune, had been thus far successfully carried out. The money was already practically in their possession, and not the slightest suspicion had been aroused. It had been a masterpiece of criminal ingenuity, so boldly carried out as to avoid danger of discovery.

Every step had been taken exactly in accord with the original outlines, except possibly that they had been hurried by Cavendish's sudden determination to return West, and his will disinheriting John. These had compelled earlier action, yet no radical change in plans, as the machinery was already prepared and in position. Luck had been with the conspirators when Frederick called in Enright to draw up the will.

Enright! Beyond doubt his were the brains dominating the affair. The whole foul thing lay before Westcott's imagination in its diabolical ingenuity—Enright's legal mind had left no loophole. He intended to play the game absolutely safe, so far, at least, as he was personally concerned.

The money was to go legally to John without the shadow of a suspicion resting upon it; and then—well, he knew how to do the rest; already he had a firm grip on a large portion. Yes, all this was reasonably clear; what remained obscure was the fate of Frederick Cavendish.

Westcott came back from his musings to this one important question. The answer puzzled him. If the man was dead why should Beaton remain at Haskell and insist on Miss La Rue's joining him? And if the man was alive and concealed somewhere in the neighborhood, what was their present object? Had they decided they were risking too much in permitting him to live? Had something occurred to make them feel it safer to have him out of the way permanently? What connection did Bill Lacy have with the gang?

Westcott rose to his feet and began following the trail up the canon. He was not serving Cavendish, nor Miss Donovan by sitting there. He walked rapidly, but the sun was nearly down by the time he reached the mouth of his own drift.

While waiting word from the East which would enable him to develop the claim, Westcott had thought it best to discontinue work, and hide, as best he could, from others the fact that he had again discovered the lost lead of rich ore. To that end, after taking out enough for his immediate requirements in the form of nuggets gathered from a single pocket, which he had later negotiated quietly at a town down the railroad, he had blocked up the new tunnel and discontinued operations. He had fondly believed his secret secure, until Lacy's careless words had aroused suspicion that the latter might have seen his telegrams to Cavendish. His only assistant, a Mexican, who had been with him for some time, remained on guard at the bunkhouse and, so far as he knew, no serious effort had been made to explore the drift by any of Lacy's satellites. Now, as he came up the darkening gulch and crunched his way across the rock pile before the tunnel entrance, he saw the cheerful blaze of a fire in the Mexican's quarters and stopped to question him.

"Senior—you?"

"Yes, Jose," and Westcott dropped on a bench. "Anything wrong? You seem nervous."

"No, senior. I expected you not to-night; there was a man there by the big tree at sunset."

"One of the La Rosita gang likely. Don't fight them, Jose. Let them poke around inside if they want to; they won't find anything but rock. Got a bite there for me?"

"Si, senior, plenty."

"All right, then; I'm hungry and have a bit of work ahead. Put it on the table here and sit down yourself, Jose."

The Mexican did as ordered, glancing across at the other between each mouthful of food, as though not exactly at ease. Westcott ate heartily, without pausing to talk.

"You hear yet Senior Cavendish?" Jose asked at last.

"No," Westcott hesitated an instant, but decided not to explain further. "He must be away, I think."

"What you do if you no hear at all?"

"We'll go on with the digging ourselves, Jose. It'll pay wages until I can interest capital somewhere to come in on shares."

Westcott stared into the fireplace; then the gravity of his face relaxed into a smile.

"Things are growing interesting, Jose," he said cheerfully. "If I only knew just which way the cat was about to jump I'd be somewhat happier. There seemed to be more light than usual across the gulch as I came up—what's going on?"

"They have put on more men, senior—a night shift. Last night I went in our drift clear to the end, and put my ear to the rock. It was far away, but I hear."

"No, no, Jose; that's impossible. Why, their tunnel is over a hundred yards away; not even the sound of dynamite would penetrate that distance through solid rock. You heard your heart beat?"

"No, senior," and Jose was upon his feet gesticulating. "It was the pick-strike, strike, strike; then stop an' begin, strike, strike, strike again. I hear, I know."

"Then they must be running a lateral, hoping to cut across our vein somewhere within their lines."

"And will that give them the right, senior?"

Westcott sat, his head resting on one hand, staring thoughtfully into the dying fire. Here was a threatening combination of forces.

"I am not sure, Jose," he answered, slowly. "The mining law is full of quirks, although, of course, the first discoverer of a lead is entitled to follow it—it's his. The trouble here is, that instead of giving notice of discovery, I have kept it a secret, and even blocked up the tunnel. If the La Rosita gang push their drift in, and strike that same vein, they will claim original discovery, and I reckon they'd make it stick. My letters and telegrams east to Cavendish went wrong, and the news has come back here to those fellows. They know just what we've struck and how our tunnel runs; I was fool enough to describe it all to Cavendish and send him a map of the vein. Now they are driving their tunnel to get in ahead of us."

He picked up the lamp and turned. At the same instant a sudden red glare flamed in the black of the open window, accompanied by a sharp report. The bullet whizzed past Westcott's head so closely as to sear the flesh, crashed into the lamp in his hand, extinguishing it, then struck something beyond. Westcott dropped to the floor, below the radius of dim light thrown by the few embers left in the fireplace, and revolver in hand sought to distinguish the outlines of the window frame. Falling in this, he crept noiselessly across the floor, unlatched the closed door, and emerged into the open air.

Cautiously he circled the black cabin, every nerve taut for struggle, every sense alert. He found nothing to reward his search—whatever the coward had been, he had disappeared among the rocks, vanishing completely in the black night. The fellow had not even waited to learn the effect of his shot. It was not until he came back to the open door that the miner thought of his companion. What had become of Jose? Could it be that the Mexican was hit? He entered, shrinking from the task, yet resolute to learn the truth. A black, shapeless figure, scarcely discernible as a man, lay huddled beneath the table. Westcott bent over it, feeling for the heart and turning face upward. There was no visible mark of the bullet wound, but the body was limp, the face ghastly in the grotesque dance of the flames. The assassin had not wasted his shot—Jose Salvati never saw Mexico again.

Westcott straightened the body out, crossing the dead hands, and covered the face with a blanket stripped from a bunk. The brief burst of flame died down, leaving the room in semi-darkness. The miner was conscious only of a feeling of dull rage, a desire for revenge. The shot had been clearly intended for himself. The killing of Jose had been a mere accident. In all probability the murderer had crept away believing he had succeeded in his purpose. If he had lingered long enough to see anyone emerge from the hut, he would naturally imagine the survivor to be the Mexican. Good! This very confidence would tend to throw the fellow off his guard; he would have no fear of Jose.

He reached beneath the blanket and drew forth the dead Mexican's revolver, slipped the weapon into his own belt, opened the door and went out, closing it tightly behind him. Jose could lie there until morning. While the darkness lasted he had work to do. His purpose settled, there was no hesitancy in his movements. His was the code of the West; his methods those of the desert and the mountains, the code and method of a fighting man.

A dim trail, rock strewn, led to the spring, where it connected with an ore road extending down the valley to Haskell. Another trail across the spur shortened the distance to the La Rosita shafthouse. But Westcott chose to follow none of these, lest he run into some ambush. Slowly and silently, cautious to dislodge no rolling stone, and keeping well concealed among the rocks, he finally descended to the level of the shaft, feeling confident that his presence was not discovered.

HEAVY MEAT EATERS HAVE SLOW KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backache or have bladder trouble—Takes glass of Salts.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become over-worked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headache, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Making Talk. Much vitality is wasted in useless talk. Some people, when they meet are embarrassed if there is a moment's halt in the conversation. That is foolish. Talk less and think more.

The Worth of a Brick

In the right place and when needed a brick is worth a whole lot. Just a few years ago you could buy common brick at $7 a thousand. Today we are compelled to pay $22 per thousand—and we use a lot of them.

The clay costs more, getting it out, shaping, burning, shipping, unloading, all cost much more because the demand is high, largely due to the widespread resumption of building which was held up by the war. Labor costs, too, are a factor, a big factor, today.

The brickmaker and bricklayer right now earn more than ever before.

Then we must use cement along with the brick in our manholes and buildings, and that is away up, the increase in five years being more than 100 per cent.

Clay conduit, which we buy by the dozen carloads has increased nearly 300 per cent. Tearing costs have advanced from $4 to $12 a day. Trenching costs are up proportionately.

All these items greatly increase the cost of your telephone service, but our rates did not increase proportionately. How are we to pay the bill?

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

CHARMS FAIL INDIAN

Did Not Protect Him When He Blew Out Gas.

Kayuse Chief on His Way to Washington Dies in Chicago Hotel.

Chicago.—The tribe of Kayuse Indians on the reservation in Umatilla county, near Pendleton, Ore., are awaiting assurance from their chief, U. M. Sum Kim, that their lands will not be taken from them. They will learn that he died in a hotel at 608 South Wells street, asphyxiated by gas. It is believed that he blew out the flame. His charm of four-snake heads failed to protect him.

Chief Sum Kim was on his way to Washington to appear before the Indian board of commissioners to plead that his people be protected from a firm that is attempting to take parts of their land away through court proceedings for failure to pay an alleged debt, it is said.

Adam Bird, owner of the hotel, detecting the odor of gas, traced it to the Indian's room. The South-Clark-street police were summoned, but it was found he was dead. Tied to a string around his neck were four small charms bags. Within them were the dried heads of four snakes. He had worn a sombrero, boots, yellow duck trousers and a black shirt. He carried four blankets. The body was taken to the Central undertaking rooms at 818 Federal street.

Among the papers found were those of a law firm demanding that the chief appear before them and straighten out a money matter, threatening court procedure if he failed to do so. The chief carried affidavits proving his side and a map and blue prints showing the land owned by the tribe. Traveling orders and appearance papers for a hearing before the commissioners were also found.

IN CHILDISH LOVE

Flowers Were Laid on Graves of Soldiers in 1865.

Old Chronicles Credit John Redpath With Idea That Led to the Present Beautiful Custom of Memorial Day.

In the early part of April, 1865, a man named John Redpath was acting as superintendent of schools in the city of Charleston, S. C. John Redpath was a newspaper-reporter with the Northern armies during the Civil war, and had been with General Sherman on his march to the sea, sending out the first newspaper report of the surrender of the city of Charleston. He was a man very much interested in education; that was why he was trying to better school conditions, which, after four years of the Civil war, were very bad. There was one school in which he was particularly interested, which was conducted in an old church.

As he walked to this school one morning he went past a place that had been famous as a race course, but was now used as a cemetery for the soldiers who had died in battle. He looked over the fence of the cemetery, and it made his heart sad to see the way the graves of the brave men were neglected. He wished that something might be done for them.

When he reached the school he addressed the children, telling them that it made him unhappy to see the badly cared-for graves, and asking them to try to find time to gather a few wild flowers for the cemetery.

"We'll gather armfuls of posies, and just hide the graves from sight—so that they'll never look bad again," one little pupil cried.

The enthusiasm of the youngster who had jumped to her feet and suggested the "armfuls of flowers" was not forgotten by John Redpath. As he went about his work during the next few days he thought of it often, and finally a beautiful plan grew in his mind.

He would set apart a day when all the graves in the soldiers' cemetery would be decorated with flags and flowers.

At that time Charleston was still under military rule and was governed by Colonel Woodford of the Union army. John Redpath went to Colonel Woodford and told him about the plan, asking him to appoint the day a military and civil holiday. The date decided upon for the decoration was May 1, and on that day over 10,000 men, women and children were present at a memorial service, and then marched to the cemetery, where the children dropped flowers on the graves while everyone sang patriotic songs.

Such was the first Decoration day.

From that time on the custom of decorating all the graves of the soldiers on one day grew to be popular. The custom of decorating the graves of the dead soldiers did much to wipe away the bitterness felt between the people of the North and South. Francis Miles Finch expressed just such a thought in his Decoration day poem, which every child in school has read, "The Blue and the Gray."

John Redpath lived to be an old man, and saw the custom that he founded become one of the most pleasing and popular holidays. Later in life he founded the Redpath Chautauque bureau, which is still popular and has been the means of giving entertainment and education to thousands and thousands of people.—Utica Globe.

Some people plan festivities for Memorial day instead of planning to take part in one of the memorial services. The day should be kept sacred by all—it is not too much to give one day to show honor to the brave dead.

Belongs to All the Brave. Memorial day is observed as a memorial not alone for the men of Civil war or those who fell during the war with Spain. It is observed for all these and for the thousands who went abroad to fight for liberty and never returned.—Hallowed is the ground where they rest, whether they be the old soldiers or the new.

REED FOUND IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Communist Long Sought on Charge of Conspiring Against United States.

MAKES ESCAPE VIA NORWAY

Lenine Welcomes Him as Envoy From United States Communist Party—Lived in Kremlin as Guest of Authorities.

Washington.—John Reed, close friend of Lenine and Trotzky, who is under indictment in Chicago for alleged conspiracy to overthrow the United States government, arrived in Soviet Russia by way of Finland last December, it is learned. Since his indictment recently federal and Illinois state agents have been searching for Reed all over the United States.

On being told of Reed's presence in Russia—it is not known yet whether he has left there—the state department was interested to learn the channel through which he obtained a passport. The department is informed that he shipped as a sailor from an American port to Norway. From there he traveled on foot to Stockholm. There he stowed himself away, or was stowed away, on a vessel about to sail for Helsinki.

The adventurous Mr. Reed narrowly escaped arrest in Helsinki, but, disguising himself as a Russian peasant, he crossed the frontier into Russia. He was received in Moscow as the official envoy of the American Communist party, and as such attended the meetings of the third International, and made a speech at the All-Russian Soviet convention in the middle of December.

Lived at the Kremlin.

In Moscow Mr. Reed lived at the Kremlin as the guest of the people's commissars.

He was in constant communication with Lenine and Trotzky, it is stated, and visited the Red army at the front.

Mr. Reed was in Moscow until the middle of January. Of that the state department is quite certain. His reception in Russia was the warmer because two years ago Trotzky appointed him bolshevik consul general at New York. Mr. Reed never assumed that office, for, as it turned out, the appointment was made to facilitate his return to the United States.

It would seem that Reed anticipated that he would be indicted and so sought more hospitable shores. In the course of the widespread search for him as a fugitive from justice a man suspected of being Reed was arrested near Poughkeepsie, N. Y. This man proved that he was Harrison B. Ellis, that he had not been in Chicago for 15 years and had never uttered or written unpatriotic opinions.

Eighty-Five Indicted.

Eighty-five big and little leaders of the Communist party in America were indicted in Chicago on the same charge as Reed on January 23 last. Among them were Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes of New York City, a member of the executive committee of the Communist party; Nicholas J. Hourwich of New York city, publisher of Novy Mir, the most prominent Russian newspaper in the United States, who formerly employed Leon Trotzky; Isaac E. Ferguson, chief counsel for the party, and Louis E. C. Fraine, editor in chief of all Communist propaganda in this country, who is in Mexico, it is believed.

The authorities here regard Reed, although he was graduated from Harvard, as one of the most earnest young Communists in America. Before the indictment which hangs over him was found, federal and state courts had indicted Reed for alleged seditious utterances and writings. But the indictments were quashed, or, on being tried, he was acquitted.

Use Stones as Money, Says This U. S. Marine

San Francisco.—Stones, flat smooth ones, with holes drilled in the center, constitute the form of money the Yaps use, according to Marine Corps Sgt. Albertos Bresnahan, who just returned from the Orient and who was a visitor recently at the Island of Yap, a tropical isle in the Pacific, used as a trans-Pacific cable station.

"A Yap dollar stone weighs two pounds," adds the marine. "When the natives get on top of a mountain and pitch pennies it reminds one of a landslide."

An "Old Profession" Might Supply the Present Shortage, Californian Says.

San Francisco.—Here is an advertisement that appeared in a daily paper here recently:

WANTED—Position in kitchen or general household by man that has been keeping bar for twenty-eight years. The applicant, John Kornahrens, according to a newspaper interview, suggested that as household help is lacking the "members of a noble old profession might come to the rescue."

Lowe's

It's great fun to Vernicol—you'll like it

Get out that old chair, table or other piece of furniture you have discarded just because its finish is marred. You can youthify it in a jiffy with Lowe Brothers Vernicol and make it worthy of any room in your home.

Vernicol is a varnish stain. Comes in a can; goes on with a brush. Made to revive furniture that has lost its smile.

Dip your brush in the can and apply. That's all there is to it. Scratches disappear as if by magic. You'll want to do over everything in the house. Which you can. Vernicol wears and wears—and wears. That's why it's as good for floors as furniture. Made in all the popular finishes. Come in and ask for color card.

WHAT IT WILL DO FOR YOU

Safeguard the health of your family by warming the home to a comfortable temperature in any weather—flooding it with an abundant supply of pure, warm, ever-changing, moist air, permanently free from dust, gas, or smoke.

IT will burn any kind of fuel, coal or wood, or whatever is most available, and save from 1-4 to 1-3 the fuel bill.

WHY THE NAME "PIPELESS."—It heats your entire home, large or small, upstairs or down, old or new, with but one register, located directly at the top of heater, doing away with the usual heat-pipes and registers to each room.

It accomplishes this upon one of nature's own principles, as old as time—the law of gravity.

18,232 State Farms Are Idle

State Survey Shows Many Leave Farms For Life In Cities.

Lansing, May 16.—The number of men that have left the farms of Michigan during the past three years is three times as great as the number of Michigan men that died or were killed in the Civil War. It would require the present male population more than fifteen years of age of Lansing and Flint to replace them.

There are enough vacant houses in Michigan to house conveniently the population of Grand Rapids. The number of farm houses vacated within the past twelve months could easily accommodate all of the people in the city of Jackson with homes; 8.74 per cent of the farms of the state are wholly idle this year, an area of approximately 1,688,000 acres, equal to about five ordinary counties.

The total men and boys over fifteen years of age on the farms of the state is 230,000, or 82.5 acres to be worked by each man and boy.

These figures are based upon a complete survey made during the past four weeks by the Michigan crop reporting service under the joint supervision of Coleman C. Vaughan, secretary of state, and Verne H. Church, field agent, United States bureau of crop estimates, and aided by the office of the superintendent of public instruction.

A blank was mailed to each rural school district asking for a report upon the farms of that school district. The compilation of these reports shows that 18,232 farms are idle this year as compared with 11,831 last year. While the abandonment, which in many cases is temporary because of the lack of tenant farmers, is least in the best farming sections, it is found to be a community movement. Many districts show no abandonment, but where families began leaving the act seems to be contagious until in some cases one-third to one-half of the school district had migrated to the city. In the south central district only 4.7 per cent of the farms are idle and in some counties only 3 per cent. In the northwest district of the lower peninsula 19.4 per cent are idle and occasional counties report 25 per cent or more.

Useful Kerosene.

Housewives, with but few exceptions, do not properly value kerosene. As a lubricant a drop or two will set things going which refused to go before. As a cleanser it can often be used with great advantage in place of soap and water. Floors can be more quickly and more thoroughly cleaned with a well-oiled mop than with soap and water, leaving a bright, shining surface.

A Learned Capital.
Aarau, capital of the Swiss canton of Argovia, possesses one of the hardest working libraries in the world. Though the library consists of only 80,000 volumes—which is not so large as public institutions go in the United States—the population of the capital itself is only 10,000. With eight volumes per inhabitant, the library of Aarau has just cause to boast of itself as a miniature Athens.

FIERY, ITCHY ECZEMA IS HEALED RIGHT UP WITH THIS SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even erythema, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth. It never fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

MEMORIALS OF TWO WARS

Tree, With Its Scythes and Flags, Living Memorials of Those Who Loved Their Country.

In 1861, when the unpleasantness between the North and South broke out, Wyman J. Johnson of Waterloo, N. Y., came in from the fields one day, hung his scythe in a tree and said to his parents: "I am going to enlist in the Union army; let the scythe hang there until I return." Johnson, after serving three years, died of wounds in 1864, and his scythe was never taken down, and it still is in the tree, a fitting memorial to one who gave his life for his country. Early in 1918, two brothers, Raymond and Lynn Schaffer, on departing to join the American army and navy, respectively, also hung their scythes in this tree. In memory of Johnson, and in honor of the Schaffer brothers, flags are kept continually floating over the three scythes.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.
