Saginaw H. S. Debates E. J.

Big Debate Staged Next Monday Night.

The debating team of the Saginaw High School, which is representing Saginaw in the state contest this year, will debate the East Jordan High School here at East Jordan next Monday night, January 31.

The question for debate is the same as East Jordan has debated heretofore this year: "Resolved, That the adjustment of disputes between employers and employees should be made a part of the administration of justice."

In this debate Saginaw takes the affirmative side and East Jordan the negative side.

This is probably the only time this year that East Jordan will have the negative side of this question here at East Jordan.

The Saginaw High School is one of the largest high schools in the state of Michigan, and no doubt this team will be one of the strongest add best that has ever appeared at East Jordan.

The debate will be held in the high school auditorium, will begin at 7:30, and the price of admission for all will be twenty-five cents.

CITY'S LEADING INDUSTRY HIT

Something Always Taking the Joy Out of Life.

"All dressed up and no place to go" might be applied to some of the Charlevoix boys who enjoy sitting in a game of stud, two-pair or "rummy." State Police Paul Lutter threw a wrench in the "works" of Charlevoix's leading winter occupation last Friday night when he raided John Fragan's pool room and tobacco store.

Kutter visited Fragan's place of business, sat around awhile, and then made a killing. The proprietor and five other men were caught red handed playing stud poker, and the sextet was placed under arrest and on the following morning were taken before Justice Collins, who fined them $10.00, with costs amounting to $4.50.

Since the raid one faces unknown dangers by merely making a suggestion, if the question can be construed in any manner of starting a "quiet" little game. Even the slot machines have disappeared and it had not been for the storm on Sunday, an increased attendance at the various churches might have been apparent.

Reminds one of the pre-election days when candidates for city offices, especially that of mayor, wend their way to the house of worship.—Charlevoix Courier.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear son, Henry E. Sutton, who departed this life one year ago today—January 27, 1920. God has taken home our darling, placed one bud among his flowers. In life we loved so dearly; in death we do the same and often sit and think of you wishing you were with us again.

His parents,
Mr. and Mrs. EUGENE SUTTON and Brother Carl.

If you want to change your wife's opinion, just tell her that her dearest friend thinks exactly as she does.

PASSES AWAY SUDDENLY WHILE ATTENDING OUR PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Charles Ivan, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sonnabend, passed away suddenly from leakage of the heart while attending our public schools last Friday forenoon.

The lad, who was in the second grade, had been out with the other boys for the recess period, and evidently had over-taxed himself playing. While in the hall hanging up his wraps, he became unconscious, a physician was summoned and efforts made to revive him, but he had passed away.

He leaves, besides his parents, three sisters.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God Chapel, Monday forenoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Burgess, interment at Elmwood Cemetery, Jordan township.

WILSON TOWNSHIP FARM BUREAU HOLDS MEETING

Meeting of Wilson Twp. Farm Bureau, January 12, 1921.

Meeting was called to order by President Brintal, there being fifty present, not including children. After a few remarks by the president, H. J. Korhase was called upon to give a talk. Remarks were rendered on the needs of the farmer, also that he has never taken his part in the political field. W. F. Tindale explained how, until the last few years, the farmer had given his time to producing and never studied the need of a better system of marketing. Lately many efforts are being made by the producer to stop the speculation on farm produce and for a more economic handling. County Agt. Wing explained how the county agent was instructed and the method used to reach the farmers in the county. President of the county executive committee, R. O. Otto, gave a very interesting report of the Dairy Convention held at Lansing. He gave reasons why we should have a protective tariff on foreign produce, also that the farmer should form a closer relationship in their locals as well as in the county at large, if they expect to get any good from their organization. Otto Kunert gave a talk on the pure fabric law.

The following motions were made to be sent our representative for use at the State Convention: Moved and seconded that we ask for an amendment to the voter's law, that all who vote on the raising of public funds must be taxpayers. Moved and seconded that we favor the pure fabric law, i. e., all manufactured goods must be labelled as to what they contain. Moved and seconded that we favor a protective tariff on all foreign produce shipped into the United States. Moved and seconded that we approve of the action taken by our county agents and county representatives in regard to grasshopper control, i. e., we ask the state to refund half of all money raised and used for the control of grasshoppers to the county in which it was used.

Resolved that our county representative send to each local secretary a report of all the meetings he attends. Moved and seconded that we have our meetings the last Wednesday of each month and that our next one be in the day time with a pot luck dinner.

F. E. Newville,
Secretary

Boyne City Treas. Robbed

Young Man Takes Nearly $3000 From Safe.

Walter Jones, about twenty years of age, who lives with his parents between the Pleasant Valley road and Deer Lake, was arrested Saturday afternoon, at the W. W. Bailey farm, charged with grand larceny.

He was before Justice Hammond later in the day and was bound over to the Circuit Court in default of a $2,000 bond. He was taken to the county jail at Charlevoix, Sunday.

Walter, who has been in trouble before, was in the Bailey Pharmacy Saturday while the clerk, Marion Dockstaeter, was alone. He asked permission to use the telephone, which is located very near the safe, in which was reposing a weeks collection of city taxes. It was after his departure that Marion noticed the theft, which amounted to $2822.59, and chief of police Vaughn was summoned. The Chief questioned him regarding those who had been in the store and at once became suspicious of Jones, whose past record he was familiar with. He conferred with Prosecuting Attorney Rueggesser who advised him to go after the young man at once.

As Mr. Vaughn was not personally acquainted with Jones he prevailed on L. R. Barnes, Cashier of the First National Bank, to accompany him, and they went at once to the Bailey farm where Jones was employed under the management of Wellington Bailey, a brother of W. W.

Jones was found in a bedroom changing his clothes and was at once ordered to throw up his hands. Search revealed a wad of crumpled bills in his pocket, after which it is claimed he confessed to having taken the money and directed the officer to a spot behind a bill-board, near the Bellamy Opera House, where the checks and money orders were recovered.

It is reported that under Jones' pillow in the bedroom, quietly reposed a fully loaded, heavy caliber revolver. —Boyne Citizen.

WERE NICE FOLKS BUT NOT WANTED

From out of the north they blew or were blown, seven of them, three men, two women and two children, one an infant.

Their history, so far as it concerns Traverse City, originates at Niles. It was from there they started last fall. The first port of call was Elk Rapids. The crop of odd jobs was killed off by a heavy frost, so it was time to move on again. They were fine people, but the P. M. agent at Elk Rapids was perfectly willing to pay the fares of the women to East Jordan. The men bummed their way.

It was the same at East Jordan. They were a fine addition to any community—but the county agent, willingly paid their fares back to Niles. He hated to lose them, but he didn't feel it was fair to Niles to keep them.

Thursday night they tumbled off the P. M. Train from the north and promptly served notice on M. H. Carroll, local agent, that they were to be his guests for the night, not having any money and not caring much for hotels anyway.

Mike looked over the crowd and the depot. One looked no worse than the other, so he told them to bed down there.

When Mr. Carroll came down Friday morning he was amazed. Although blankets were scattered about the floor indicating that the whole outfit had slept some. Mr. Carroll said they must have worked all night to carry in the stuff that was scattered about the floor. When he arrived the baby was having its morning bath in the drinking fountain; the men were having their morning "chow," not caring where the by-products went, and the belle had stuck a knife into the wall to hold a mirror and was combing her hair. They were nice folks, but Mike saw that they made the early morning train south.

"I presume," Mike said this morning, "You think this is a depot. Well it isn't—it's a boudoir."—Record-Eagle.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the many acts of kindness and sympathy extended us in our bereavement—the sudden death of our little son.

Special Blanks for Farmers' Tax

Internal Revenue Bureau Makes It Easier to Fill Out Forms.

Thousands of farmers whose net income for 1920 equaled or exceeded the exemptions of $1,000 for single persons and $2,000 for married persons will be required to file on or before March 15, 1921, income tax returns for the year 1920.

As an aid to farmers the Bureau of Internal Revenue has prepared a special form, 1040F, for the recording sales of live stock, produce, and a summary of income and expenses. This form should be attached to the taxpayer's individual return on Form 1040 or 1040A. Full instructions for making out the forms are contained in each.

Under gross income a farmer is required to include all proceeds derived from the sale of farm products whether produced on a farm or purchased for resale. When he exchanges his produce for groceries, clothing, or other merchandise he must include in his income the value of the articles received and exchanged. Profit received from the sale of farm land or rent received for the use thereof must also be included.

NET INCOME

In determining his net income, upon which the tax is assessed, the farmer may deduct all necessary expenses incurred in the operation of his farm during the year. These include cost of cultivation, harvesting and marketing of his crops, the cost of seed and fertilizer used, amount spent in repair to farm buildings other than the dwelling, and to fences and machinery. The cost of farm tools used up in the course of the year, wages paid to employes other than domestic servants, and rent paid for farm-land and buildings (other than dwelling) and deductible items.

Farmers who keep no records or only records of cash receipts and disbursements should make their returns on the basis of actual receipts, but farmers who keep complete accounts and who take inventories at the beginning and end of the year to determine their profits should report on the accrual basis. Both methods are fully explained on Form 1040F, copies of which may be obtained from the offices of collectors of internal revenue.

THINGS TO FORGET

If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,

A leader of men marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away in a closet, and guarded, and kept from the day

In the dark; and whose showing, whose sudden display
Would cause grief and sorrow and life-long dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy

Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

WEEKLY TOLL OF THE FIRE DEMON

Statistics say that the United States loses each week by fire:

- 1,600 Dwellings.
- 3 Theaters.
- 3 Public buildings.
- 12 Churches.
- 10 Schools.
- 150 Apartment buildings.
- 26 Hospitals.
- 2 Hotels.
- 3 Colleges.
- 3 Department stores.
- 2 Asylums.
- 2 Jails.

The weekly total value of this destruction averages almost $10,000,000, but worse than that is the toll in human life. Each week more than 300 lives are sacrificed to the ravages of fire.

This enormous waste of life and property is due to carelessness and improper fire prevention and protection methods in a large majority of cases.

Start Work on Reform Plans

Administrative Board Made Up Elective Officers, Aim of the Governor.

Lansing—Both branches of the legislature adjourned late last week but before voting adjournment, steps toward obtaining immediate action on Governor Groesbeck's plan for reorganization of the state government were taken. Gov. Groesbeck in conference with Lieut-Gov. Thomas Reed and Fred L. Warner, speaker of the house, decided to abandon plans for a steering committee made up of members of both houses, and bills were presented providing legislation to work out the changes as outlined in the governor's inaugural message.

Centralized Responsibility.

As now proposed, the bill to create the administrative board would abolish the budget commission, the office of budget director, the office of state purchasing agent and provide for a state architect to supervise the construction and repairing of state buildings. The bill for the auditing of the state's accounts provides that the auditor-general shall be the auditor of all accounts pertaining to state institutions.

Under the plan outlined, the administrative board would be composed of the governor, who shall act as chairman, the secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor-general, highway commissioner and superintendent of public instruction. In this way administration of state affairs will be centralized in the elective officers. In both houses, the bills have been referred to the committee on state affairs. A two-thirds vote is necessary for passage of the measures, and both become effective upon passage and approval.

Control of Fair Voted.

The board of directors of the Michigan State Agricultural Society at a meeting held in Detroit last week, voted unanimously in favor of state management and control of the State Fair and John S. Haggerty was named as chairman of a committee of five to open negotiations with the Legislature to formulate arrangements. The Detroit meeting of the board of directors was attended by 20 of the 24 directors. Gov. Groesbeck recommended in his message that the state take over the State Fair and operate it for the best interests of the state. It is generally accepted that the governor's proposed department of agriculture, besides absorbing the duties of other state agencies, will also take over the State Fair and make it a true exhibition of the state's standing and progress in agricultural pursuits. The transfer to the state will involve real estate assessed at $2,000,000 and buildings, valued in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. Many new additions are also looked for under state control.

Board Members Resign.

Informal announcement has been made of the resignations of I. Roy Waterbury and William H. Wallace from the board of agriculture. The terms of both expire next December and should their resignations be accepted, it will mean the naming of their successors in next spring's election. Nominees will be named at the Republican State convention to be held Feb. 17, in Detroit. The upper peninsula is making a bid for a place on the board for John A. Doelle, Marquette, secretary-manager of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau. Others mentioned are T. F. Marston, Bay City and C. B. Cook, county agent for Oakland.

During the adjournment period many of the committees were away on inspectional trips, and with the reconvening of the session this week, the legislature was faced with much legislation to provide for changes recommended. Senator John W. Smith, chairman of the committee on penal institutions, has a plan for a complete revision of the system for handling men and women in the state prisons. Sen. Smith's plan has the approval of Gov. Groesbeck.

Against Presidential Primary.

Senator Arthur E. Woods, Detroit, will introduce a bill asking the repeal of the Michigan presidential preference primary act. Immediate abolition of the Michigan Community council, regardless of whether the legislature investigates its affairs, is urged in the senate by Senator Herbert Baker and in the house by Representative Charles Culver, both of Detroit.

Senator Wood's bill to repeal the presidential primary has already been introduced in the senate and is expected to result in a long discussion. Governor Groesbeck will appoint a committee of three members to negotiate with the federal government towards retention of Camp Custer, according to a resolution by the senate. Quick action is necessary if the state is to succeed, as announcement was made last week by Secretary of War Baker that the federal government would not postpone the sale as it was now costing $7,500 a day to maintain it.

Michigan's bank account is behind just $8,292,715.05, according to official figures in the office of Auditor-General C. B. Fuller, a deficit which he points out can only be made-up by direct taxation.

Compensation For Mothers.

Gov. Groesbeck appointed Attorney Joseph A. Moynihan as Wayne County Circuit Judge to fill the unexpired term of George P. Codd, Congressman-elect. The Governor was visited by a committee of Detroit club women interested in legislation providing aid for dependent mothers, and he instructed them to see that a bill is properly drawn up and submitted to the attorney-general and then the legislature and assured them of his hearty co-operation in the matter.

The justices of the supreme court have filed protests against the proposed removal of the state law library to the new office building, claiming it will be inconvenient. The Michigan Farm Bureau has invited its members to give their views on the proposed soldiers' $30,000,000 bonus bill, also the state income tax.

New bills are not going into the legislative hopper very rapidly thus far. The most discussed new measure of the first week was Rep. Peter Lennon's bill to prohibit aliens from owning firearms. The intent of the bill is to prevent foreigners of criminal tendencies from possessing sawed-off shotguns. Flint, which is in Rep. Lennon's district, has had considerable trouble with such foreigners. It is questioned, though, whether the constitutionality of the bill would be sustained if it is enacted.

Would Regulate Train Crews.

The railroad workers again have had their "full crew" bill presented to the legislature. Senator Byron Hicks introduced it. Under the terms of the bill freight trains of fifty cars or more must have a full crew of six men. The provisions add one flagman to the crew now operating such trains. When a freight train is composed of less than fifty cars, a crew of five men would be allowed. On passenger trains the bill fixes the number of the crew at five. Flagmen must have at least a year's experience in railroad work before being permitted to work on passenger trains.

Rep. Strom, of Kent county, has introduced a moving picture censorship bill, to provide for a board of three censors with an office in Detroit. The bill is similar to that which failed of passage in the last legislature. Moving picture interests are preparing to combat the bill. Notice will be placed on all pictures shown in movie houses that the films have been censored by the Detroit officer assigned to that duty. The battle over a state censorship gives promise of surpassing that of the last session in bitterness and also is more likely of final passage because of the number of women who are backing the proposal and who now are voters.

Deportation of Dependent Aliens.

Rep. G. Oliver Frick, of Detroit, who used to be the federal immigration inspector in Detroit, has introduced a bill providing for the investigation and deportation of aliens now being supported in public and semi-public institutions of the state. Rep. Frick declares that the measure, if made law, will save the taxpayers of Michigan hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. The bill would require the heads of state institutions to make and file with the auditor general a report showing all aliens under their charge, which information can be turned over to the federal immigration officials for action.

Immediate reforms in the handling of state-money are needed, it has been decided at a meeting of members of the house ways and means committee and the senate finance committee, with Gov. Groesbeck. It is proposed to put an end to the practice of institutions going into debt on the ground that emergencies demand it, the state then having to make up a deficit. If the plan is followed out it will be necessary for the institutions to present the "emergency" to the state officials before they are allowed to make expenditures. The big deficit now existing in the state funds is blamed on the failure of the last legislature to make provision for certain running expenses of institutions, the theory being that the new budget commission would be able to take care of them. But the debt to the general fund that existed was not wiped out, states Auditor General Fuller.

Toads Aid Horticulturists.
 In Europe toads are carried to the cities to market and are purchased by the horticulturists who by their aid are enabled to keep in check the multiplication of the insects that prey upon their fruits, flowers, etc.

Contingents
 The disconcerting thing about toads is a friend of mine once said that if you own toads is that it reminds him of his wife who is to tell about them, as if she were a cat.

It's no use growling at the weather man. He can't do any more than us. Both worse than we are.

There's a fellow around these parts who repeatedly proclaims his willingness to die for his country, but he never sets a date.

Henpecked husbands have a great habit of telling other people how to control their wives.

With the advent of longer dresses our city friends ought to be able to recognize their own wives when they meet them.

"TOO OLD" NOT ALWAYS TRUE

Many middle-aged men and women look old before their time, and when there are two workers for one job, the younger looking is favored. Kalamazoo—Residents of Groniger avenue are protesting against the name as one of unpatriotic flavor, and they demand that the city commission make a change. If on investigation, it is found that the word is of German origin the change will probably be ordered.

Flint—Definite assurance that Flint will get one of the plants of the new Durant Motors corporation was contained in a telegram received from W. C. Durant. "You may say to the people of Flint that one of the plants of the Durant Motors corporation will certainly be located in Flint," the telegram said.

Kalamazoo—Fred King, who called at the county jail to see a friend who was a prisoner, was attracted by the warm appearance of a blanket he saw in the cell cot. King pushed the blanket through the outer bars of the cell to the ground and left the place hurriedly to pick it up and carry it away. His actions in leaving the jail aroused the suspicions of a deputy. Now King will remain for some time in the jail and will during his stay be furnished with a similar blanket. But he must leave it behind him when he is discharged.

KAMCHATKA: ALASKA'S POOR RELATION.

The Kamchatkan peninsula and the Siberian country between it and the Arctic ocean have attracted international attention since the report of its lease to a syndicate of Americans for the development of its natural resources. This region is a sort of half-sister to Alaska, which was also once Russian territory.

Alaska, the more comely sister, fared forth, so to speak, was sold into the family of the wealthy Uncle Sam, and has had a life rich in excitement and adventure. Kamchatka, the more homely sister, remained under the Russian roof-tree on the west side of Bering sea, and has lived in seclusion.

Kamchatka and the country north to Bering strait contain a large area of tundra or Arctic plains; soft, spongy morasses during the few months of summer; frozen, snow-covered wastes in winter. In the higher land impenetrable underbrush springs up in summer. What little travel is possible at this season is done on the backs of sturdy ponies who must wade up the shallow streams or wad through the sticky swamps. In winter travel is easy. Teams of dogs and reindeer whisk laden sledges over the frozen surface of the streams and across the snow of the tundra at a rate, under favorable circumstances, of 75 miles or more a day. Trails that are virtually highways are beaten down by the teams of the natives bringing their furs—the chief present resources of the country—to the trading posts.

In the summer the curse of the moist regions of the north strikes the Kamchatkan country; swarms of mosquitoes and flies thicken the air and make life miserable for all living things. The nomadic natives flee with their herds of reindeer to the seacoast, where the breezes give some relief.

Though the climate of Kamchatka is rigorous, a Westerner is likely to consider the food of the country more so. Bowls of boiled fishes' eyes are the most popular delicacy in the lower peninsula where the silver herds of salmon run up most of the streams. To the north reindeer meat in some form is the universal piece de resistance, the tongues and marrow bones being prized in particular.

"Cold storage" eggs contribute to Kamchatka's tables. The eggs are obtained from the nests of gulls and other wild fowls and are buried in pits on the frosty north side of a hill until needed. Frozen berries also eke out the winter fare.

"Soup balls," carried by winter travelers, are likely to prove a compensation to western palates. They are small balls of reindeer "sausage" surrounded by a crust of dough, the whole about the size of an English walnut. These balls freeze and are carried in bags like marbles. A handful dropped into a kettle of boiling water produces within a few minutes a delectable and sustaining dish.

The Kamchatkan peninsula proper is about 750 miles in length, and the distance from its roots to Bering strait is an equal distance. Kamchatka lies in the same latitude as the British Isles, while the country north to the Arctic ocean is in the latitude of Norway. The Kamchatka region is bathed by cold arctic currents instead of the warm Gulf stream, and its climate is therefore much colder than that of Britain and Scandinavia.

KOBE, OSAKA AND YOKOHAMA.

Eastern questions will hereafter become for many members of congress more realistic and understandable and therefore sympathetically treated, since their visit to the commercial cities of Japan during their trip through the Orient.

Kobe, Osaka and Yokohama proudly displayed for American observation their busy factories with their interesting products, and bustling docks where junkies plying inland waters and foreign-bound steamers are gorging and disgorging freight.

The busy city of Kobe may be entered after a charming trip through the inland sea, that picturesque landlocked basin with four channels to the outer sea, a fairland of islands covered with temples and trees which is famous in Japanese song and story. One writer has called it the Gem of the World. Certainly it is one of the most beautiful sea routes in the world.

Kobe, with its 2,741 acres of excellent harbor, which in modern, up-to-date fashion has been divided systematically into sections for junks, merchant vessels and for dreadnaughts of the Japanese navy, is the most attractive of the treaty ports, and has within the last few years shot ahead of Yokohama in the volume of its commerce, its total trade being about 40 per cent of the whole trade of the country. It ships copper, rice, straw hamp, chip brails for hats, matzings, camphor, tea, and cotton yarn, and yearly enough passengers land on its docks to make a city the size of Seattle, Kansas City or Providence. This port, which is now so attractive tively situated on the hill slopes ranging down to the sea, was merely a group of fishing huts about fifty years ago when it was first opened to foreign commerce.

Osaka, which has been styled because of its numerous canals and bridges, the Venice of the East, is one of the three imperial cities, and has a population of a million. Here is located the Japanese mint, covering 40 acres, a shipyard having a 1,000-foot frontage, and important factories which make cotton cloth, glass, iron and steel products, boots and shoes, matches and tobacco products. Most of the trade of Osaka, however, since the harbor is unsuited for large vessels, is with the interior.

Japan's other important port, Yokohama, was where Commodore Perry first entered the country in 1854. As the ship steams out from the city and the picturesque little towns about the harbor fade into the haze, the majestic form of Fujiyama, the sacred mountain still towers in the distance. For those who have climbed its rugged height in the dark before dawn to see the sun rise in splendor over its rim and have peered into the crater of the old volcano, the picture is one they will be glad to bring home with them in their hearts.

GUATEMALA: LAND OF UPHEAVALS AND PROGRESS.

A condition of upheaval, not necessarily from political causes, is nothing new to the republic of Guatemala. This country has wonderfully rich and fertile soil and its climate rarely is equalled.

The city of Guatemala, which is now partially rebuilt, was the scene of one of the most violent earthquakes known in Central American history. This earthquake extended over several months during the latter part of 1917 and the early months of 1918. It began November 17, 1917. On Christmas night in the parks of the city, beneath a full moon in an untroubled sky, the populace huddled watching in fear and misery their homes, the trees, and the earth as well, creep, writhe and twist.

On the night of January 24, the moon again beamed from a cloudless sky upon these people as they saw nearly every remaining edifice in their city tumble in whirlwinds of dust. The tremors seemed to center under the very city itself, and spectators have said that they feared that the earth would give away and a volcano form in the very heart of the city. Houses and bell towers crumbled, water mains were broken, the sewage oozed up in the streets and, in the cemeteries, skeletons were shaken out of their coffins.

One can take a steamer from New Orleans and in three days reach Puerto Barrios, on the Gulf of Amatique, along the sunny eastern shores of the country, where stately palms wave in greeting.

Along this seacoast and farther inland large banana plantations cover thousands of acres. This one comparatively small country raises for its own and the outside world's consumption about ten million bunches of bananas a year. The valley of the Motagua river is considered one of the most densely vegetated regions of the world.

But the most important crop of the state is coffee. In 1918 Guatemala produced about one hundred and ten million pounds of coffee, more than seventy million pounds of which were exported to the United States.

In the mountains of southwestern Guatemala live pure-blooded Indians who have won admiration of travelers for their physique, cleanliness and scrupulous honesty. One visitor tells of trying to buy a ring from an Indian girl, who refused to sell because the jewel was not pure gold, and she did not wish to sell a stranger an imitation!

These Indians wear beautiful shawls with no fringes, dyed in brilliant colors. When brought to this country specimens have withstood repeated washing and the colors have retained their marvelous luster.

ZARA: FAMOUS FOR ITS MARASCHINO AND ITS CHURCHES.

Zara, where Gabriele d'Annunzio landed troops to strengthen his position at Fiume, is ceded to Italy under the terms of the Rapallo agreement between Italy and Jugoslavia. This city, noted for its churches and its maraschino, is described in a communication to the National Geographic society by Kenneth McKenzie as follows:

"Starting from Fiume, one sails down the channel called Quarnero, leaving Istria and the Gulf of Quarnero to the right. The Island of Arbe, about half way to Zara, has an old cathedral with a Twelfth-century tower. Coming from Trieste, one skirts the western shore of Istria, stopping perhaps at Rovigno and at Pola. The stay of an hour enables one to get a hurried glimpse of the great amphitheater and other Roman remains of Pola, under Austrian rule, an important naval station and strongly fortified. The language here is chiefly Italian. Istria would well repay the time devoted to a trip of several days; but we pass on, stopping at one or two of the islands, to Zara, the most northerly town of importance in Dalmatia.

"Zara is noted all over the world for its maraschino. Aside from this, however, the town has many attractions to offer. On landing from the steamer in the land-locked harbor, we find ourselves in front of a gate in the town wall. Over the gate is the winged lion of St. Mark, often met with here and elsewhere in Dalmatia, and a symbol of the former dominion of the republic of Venice. Passing through the gate, we enter the narrow paved streets of a typical Italian city, such as we may imagine it to have been two or three centuries ago, except that the hotels are more comfortable. There are many medieval churches in the town, interesting architecturally, and containing works of art. The cathedral in particular, a majestic Romanesque church, is richly adorned outside with many archedes of little columns and inside with marbles and paintings. It is in the best Italian style of the Middle Ages. Its campanile is a landmark.

"Wandering among the narrow streets, we come upon several open squares and market places, where in the morning scores of peasants may be seen in their brilliant-colored costumes. There are Roman remains, too—columns and statues.

"Leaving Zara, the steamer comes out of the harbor, encircles the point of land on which the city stands, and skirts low-lying shores, passing among innumerable islands. All at once a narrow opening appears; we go through it, and find ourselves in the spacious harbor of Sebenico, with the town rising from the water to a fort crowning the hill."

A ONE-MAN FLAG—THE PRESIDENT'S.

Most folk know of some of the perquisites that will accrue to the next President of the United States, such as a band which is at his disposal—the Marine band—and the White House conservatories which provide the first lady of the land with flowers, but it is not so generally known that one of the honors bestowed upon the chief executive is a special flag.

This flag is not seen frequently. It does not float over the White House. Its use is reserved, for the most part, for occasions when the President appears in his ex-officio capacity as commander in chief of the army and the navy.

The President's flag consists of the coat-of-arms as they appear on the President's seal, against a blue background, and flanked by four stars. Its history and use are described in the monograph on "Flags of the World" of the National Geographic society as follows:

When the President visits a vessel of the United States, the President's flag is broken at the main the moment he reaches the deck, and is kept flying as long as he is on board. If the vessel can do so, a national salute of 21 guns is fired as soon as possible after his arrival on board. Upon departure, another salute of 21 guns is fired, the President's flag being lowered with the last gun of the salute.

When the President is embarked in a boat he usually directs that his flag be displayed from the staff in the bow of his barge. When he passes in a boat flying his flag, vessels of the navy parade the full guard, four ruffles are given on the drum, four flourishes are sounded on the bugle, the National Anthem is played by the band, and officers and men salute. When the President is embarked in a ship flying his flag, all saluting ships, on meeting her at sea or elsewhere, and all naval batteries, fire a national salute on passing.

Previous to the present order there were two designs displayed on flags and on colors to be used in the presence of the commander in chief of the army and the navy. The navy design was of an earlier date than that of the army, and consisted of the coat-of-arms of the United States, as shown in the Great Seal, upon a blue ground. This happened to be almost identical with the infantry colors. The President's colors were designed to be distinctive from the infantry colors, and consisted of a blue ground with a large crimson star, outlined heavily with white. Within the star was to be seen the coat-of-arms of the United States, and outside the star within its angles were powdered small stars to the number of states in the Union.

Can Can.

All the world before long will be canning American style, if the present rate of progress keeps up. Last year France asked the loan of some canning specialists from the United States Department of Agriculture to teach them the purely American art of home canning. The results were so gratifying that the same group were asked to return this year to give further instruction. They went, and their work everywhere in France was attended with gratifying results.

The director general of agriculture in the little duchy of Luxembourg hearing of the method of preserving fruits and vegetables being taught the French, asked if the American canning experts could be sent to Luxembourg when they were through in France. This was arranged, and the first two weeks in September found the Americans teaching in Luxembourg how to can and dry garden products and how to can meat and fish. From Luxembourg the demonstrators went to Holland where at Amsterdam and other places a series of lectures were given. At the request of the British Department of Agriculture, the canning specialists then went to England and gave demonstrations before the English institute workers. One group is now in Denmark and another in Egypt. Whichever American canning methods are taught the response and appreciation is most gratifying.

PREDICTS CUT OF BILLION IN TAX.

OHIO CONGRESSMAN SAYS BIG REDUCTION IN FEDERAL EXPENSES LOOMS.

CRITICIZES EXC. SS PROFITS TAX.

Short Period of Deflation is All That Stands in Way of Period of Prosperity.

Detroit.—"The present congress is going to cut charges on the government treasury to the very bone," declared Congressman Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, principal speaker at the 30th annual banquet of the Detroit Real Estate board.

"Four billions, the estimate made by the secretary of treasury as necessary to be raised by taxation during the year, should be cut down a billion dollars by reducing the cost of government," said Mr. Fess. "The reduction of the army to a reasonable size, the discontinuance of a naval program that contemplates dreadnoughts costing $40,000,000 and the elimination of superfluous jobholders in Washington will make this possible."

Congressman Fess characterized the excess profits tax as the "most foolish piece of legislation ever drawn." He advocated its repeal and the elimination of high ranges in the income tax suggesting instead an increase in the corporation tax from 10 to 15 per cent, an increased tax on tobacco and cigars, increased postage, a stamp tax and restoration of import duties similar to those in the Aldrich bill.

A short period of deflation is all that stands between the country and a period of prosperity ahead, he said. Slowly deflating prices, better relationship between labor and capital, and increased production revealed a healthy trend.

Let Your Voice Be Heard

Farmers sometimes have been hampered by ill-advised action in Washington. Congress and department heads have seemed out of touch with rural thought and deeds. Other interests have absorbed too much of the attention of national officials.

This has happened because the single farmer can seldom make his voice heard. It is time that Congress gave more heed to the great agricultural population. And when farmers' wants are expressed through a common spokesman, backed by an increasing number of farmers, Washington must listen and act.

The Grange has such a spokesman at Washington. Through him it has forestalled many moves hurtful to agriculture. Government officials know its arguments are sound and free from radicalism.

Many issues vital to the success of farming will come before the new Administration and Congress. The Grange offers you the chance to make your voice heard.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN, too, maintains a Washington representative to watch after the farmers' interests. His articles will keep you in close touch with governmental activities of vital importance to farmers. And that is only one of the ways by which its national farm news service will aid you. Every week it brings a dozen keen articles, interesting fiction, helpful editorials and enjoyable humor.

The Voice of the Pack

BY EDISON MARSHALL

(Copyright, 1920, Little, Brown & Company)

The man looked back at the girl, smiling into her eyes. Lennox lay as if asleep, the lines of his dark face curiously pronounced. And the girl, because she was of the mountains, body and soul, answered Dan's smile. Then they knew that all of them knew the truth. Not even an inexperienced ear could have any delusions about the pack song now. It was that oldest of wilderness songs, the hunting-cry—that frenzied song of blood-just that the wolf pack utters when it is running on the trail of game. It had found the track of living flesh at last.

"There's no use stopping, or trying to climb a tree," Dan told them simply. "In the first place, Lennox can't do it. In the second, we've got to take a chance—for cold and hunger can get up a tree where the wolf pack can't." He spoke wholly without emotion. Once more he tightened the traces of the sled.

"I've heard that sometimes the pack will chase a man for days without attacking," Lennox told them. "It all depends on how long they've gone without food. Keep on and try to forget 'em. Maybe we can keep 'em bluffed."

But as the hours passed, it became increasingly difficult to forget the wolf pack. It was only a matter of turning the head and peering for an instant into the shadows to catch a glimpse of one of the creatures. Their usual fear of men, always their first emotion, had given way wholly to a hunting cunning; an effort to procure their game without too great risk of their own lives. In the desperation of their hunger they could not remember such things as the fear of men. They spread out farther, and at last Dan looked up to find one of the gray beasts waiting, like a shadow himself, in the shadow of a tree not one hundred feet from the sled. Snowbird whipped out her pistol.

"Don't dare!" Dan's voice cracked out to her. "He didn't speak loudly; yet the words came so sharp and commanding so like pistol fire itself, that she was startled into her consciousness and choked back the nervous reflexes that in an instant might have lost from one of their three precious shells. She caught herself with a sob. Dan strained at the wolf, and it melted into the shadows.

"You won't do it again, Snowbird?" he asked her very humbly. But his meaning was clear. He was not as skilled with a pistol as she; but if her nerves were breaking, the gun must be taken from her hands. The three shells must be saved to the moment of utmost need.

"No," she told him, looking straight into his eyes. "I won't do it again."

He believed her. He knew that she spoke the truth. He met her eyes with a half smile. Then, wholly without warning, fate played its last trump.

Again the wilderness reminded them of its might, and their brave spirits were almost broken by the utter remorselessness of the blow. The girl went on her face with a crack of wood. Her snow shoe had been cracked by her fall of the day before, when running to the fire, and whether she struck some other obstruction in the snow, or whether the cracked wood had simply given way under her weight, mattered not even enough for them to investigate. As in all great disasters, only the result remained. The result in this case was that her snowshoe, without which she could not walk at all in the snow, was irreparably broken.

"Fate has stacked the cards against us," Lennox told them, after the first moment's horror from the broken snowshoe.

But no one answered him. The girl, white-faced, kept her wide eyes on Dan. He seemed to be peering into the shadows beside the trail, as if he were watching for the gray forms that now and then glided from tree to tree. In reality, he was not looking for wolves. He was gazing down into his own soul, measuring his own spirit for the trial that lay before him.

The girl, unable to step with the broken snowshoe, rested her weight on one foot and hobbled like a bird with broken wings across to him. No sight of all this terrible journey had been more dreadful in her father's eyes than this. It seemed to split open the strong heart of the man. She touched her hand to his arm.

"I'm sorry, Dan," she told him. "You tried so hard."

Just one little sound broke from his throat—a strange, deep gasp that could not be suppressed. Then he caught her hand in his and kissed it—again and again. "Do you think I care about that?" he asked her. "I only wish I could have done more—and what I have done doesn't count. Just as in my fight with Cranston, nothing counts because I didn't win. It's just fate, Snowbird. It's no one's fault, but maybe, in this world, nothing is ever anyone's fault." For in the twilight of those winter woods, in the shadow of death itself, perhaps he was catching glimmerings of eternal truths that are hidden from all but the most far-seeing eyes.

"And this is the end?" she asked him. She spoke very bravely.

"No!" His hand tightened on hers. "No, so long as an ounce of strength remains. To fight—never to give up—may God give me spirit for it till I die."

And this was no idle prayer. His eyes raised to the starry sky as he spoke.

"But, son," Lennox asked him rather quietly, "what can you do? The wolves aren't going to wait a great deal longer, and we can't go on."

"There's one thing more—one more trial to make," Dan answered. "I thought about it at first, but it was too long a chance to try if there was any other way. And I suppose you thought of it too."

"Overtaking Cranston?"

"Of course. And it sounds like a crazy dream. But listen, both of you. If we have got to die, up here in the snow—and it looks like we had—what is the thing you want done worst before we go?"

Lennox's hands clasped, and he leaned forward on the sled. "Pay Cranston!" he said.

"Yes!" Dan's voice rang. "Cranston's never going to be paid unless we do it. There will be no signs of incendiarism at the house, and no proofs. They'll find our bodies in the snow, and we'll just be a mystery, with no one made to pay. The evidence in my pocket will be taken by Cranston, some time this winter. If I don't make him pay, he never will pay. And that's one reason why I'm going to try to carry out this plan I've got."

"The second reason is that it's the one hope we have left. I take it that none of us are deceived on that point. And no man can die tamely—if he is a man—while there's a chance. I mean a young man, like me—not one who is old and tired. It sounds perfectly silly to talk about finding Cranston's winter quarters, and then, with my bare hands, conquering him, taking his food and his blankets and his snowshoes and his rifle, to fight away these wolves, and bringing 'em back here."

"You wouldn't be harem-hand," the girl reminded him. "You could have the pistol."

He didn't even seem to hear her. "I've been thinking about it. It's a long, long chance—much worse than the chance we had of getting out by straight walking. I think we could have made it, if the wolves had kept off and the snowshoe hadn't broken. It would have nearly killed us, but I believe we could have got out. That's why I didn't try this other way first. A man with his bare hands hasn't much of a chance against another with a rifle, and I don't want you to be too hopeful! And of course, the hardest problem is finding his camp."

"But I do feel sure of one thing: that he is back to his old trapping line on the North Fork—somewhere south of here—and his camp is somewhere on the river. I think he would have gone there so that he could cut off any attempt I might make to get through with those letters. My plan is to start back at an angle that will carry me between the North Fork and our old house. Somewhere in there I'll find his tracks, the tracks he made when he first came over to burn up the house. I suppose he was careful to mix 'em up after once he arrived here, but the first part of the way he likely walked straight toward the house from his camp. Somewhere, if I go that way, I'll cross his trail—with in 10 miles at least. Then I'll back-track him to his camp."

"And never come back!" the girl cried.

"Maybe not. But at least every-thing that can be done will be done. Nothing will be left. No regrets. We will have made the last trial. I'm not going to waste any time, Snowbird. The sooner we get your fire built the better."

"Father and I are to stay here?"

"What else can you do?" He went back to his traces and drew the sled 100 yards farther. He didn't seem to see the gaunt wolf that backed off into the shadows as he approached. He refused to notice that the pack seemed to be steadily growing bolder. Human hunters usually had guns that could blast and destroy from a distance; but even an animal intelligence could perceive that these three seemed to be without this means of inflicting death.

"Keep the Fire Burning."

A wolf is ever so much more intelligent than a crow—yet a crow shows little fear of an unarmed man and is wholly unapproachable by a boy with a gun. The ugly truth was simply that in their increasing madness and excitement and hunger, they were becoming less and less fearful of these three strange humans with the sled.

It was not a good place for a camp. They worked a long time before they cleared a little patch of ground of its snow mantle. Dan cut a number of saplings—laboriously with his ax—and built a fire with the comparatively dry core of a dead tree. True, it was feeble and flickering, but as good as could be hoped for, considering the difficulties under which he worked.

The dead logs under the snow were soaked with water from the rains and thaws. The green wood that he cut smoked without blazing.

"No more time to be lost," Dan told Snowbird. "It lies in your hands to keep the fire burning. And don't leave the circle of the fire light without that pistol in your hand."

"You don't mean," she asked, unbelieving, "that you are going to go out there to fight Cranston—unarmed?"

"Of course, Snowbird. You must keep the pistol."

"But it means death; that's all it means. What chance would you have against a man with a rifle? And as soon as you get away from this fire, the wolves will tear you to pieces."

"And what would you and your father do, if I took it? You can't get him into a tree. You can't build a big enough fire to frighten them. Please don't even talk about this matter, Snowbird. My mind's made up. I think the pack will stay here. They usually—God knows how—know who is helpless and who isn't. Maybe with the gun, you will be able to save your lives."

"What's the chance of that?"

"You might—with one cartridge—kill one of the devils; and the others—but you know how they devour their own dead. That might break their famine enough so that they'd hold off until I can get back. That's the prize I'm playing for."

"And what if you don't get back?"

He took her hand in one of his, and with the other he caressed, for a single moment, the lovely flesh of her throat. The love he had for her spoke from his eyes—such speech as no human vision could possibly mistake. Both of them were tugging and breathless with a great, sweet wonder.

"Never let those fangs tear that softness, while you live," he told her gently. "Never let that brave old man on the sled go to his death with the pack tearing at him. Cheat 'em, Snowbird! Beat 'em the last minute, if no other way remains! Show 'em who's boss, after all—of all this forest."

"You mean—?" Her eyes widened.

"I mean that you must only spend one of those three shells in fighting off the wolves. Save that till the moment you need it most. The other two must be saved—for something else."

She nodded, shuddering an instant at a menacing shadow that moved within 60 feet of the fire.

"Then goodbye, Dan!" she told him. And she stretched up her arms. "The thing I said—that day on the hillside—doesn't hold any more."

His own arms encircled her, but he made no effort to claim her lips. Lennox watched them quietly; in this moment of crisis not even pretending to look away. Dan shook his head to her entreating eyes. "It isn't just a kiss, darling," he told her soberly. "It goes deeper than that. It's a symbol. It was your word, too, and mine; and words can't be broken, things being as they are. Can't I make you understand?"

She nodded. His eyes burned. Perhaps she didn't understand, as far as actual functioning of the brain was concerned. But she reached up to him, as women—knowing life in the concrete rather than the abstract—have always reached up to men; and she dimly caught the gleam of some eternal principle and right behind his words. This strong man of the mountains had given his word, had been witness to her own promise to him and to herself, and a law that goes down to the roots of life prevented him from claiming the kiss.

Many times, since the world was new, comfort—happiness—life itself have been contingent on the breaking of a law. Yet in spite of what seemed common sense, even though no punishment would forthcome if it were broken, the law has been kept. It was this way now. It wouldn't have been just a kiss such as boys and girls have always had in the moonlight. It meant the symbolic renunciation of the debt that Dan owed Cranston—a debt that in his mind might possibly go unpaid, which no weight of circumstance could make him renounce.

His longing for her lips pulled at the roots of him. But by the laws of his being he couldn't claim them until the debt incurred on the hillside, months ago, had been paid; to take them now meant to dull the fine edge of his resolve to carry the issue through to the end, to dim the star that led him, to weaken him, by bending now, for the test to come. He didn't know why. It had its fount in the deep wells of the spirit. Common sense can't reveal how the holy man keeps strong the spirit by denying the flesh. It goes too deep for that. Dan kept to his consecration.

He did, however, kiss her hands, and he kissed the tears out of her eyes. Then he turned into the darkness and broke through the ring of the wolves.

APRIL III.

Dan Fasting was never more thankful for his unerring sense of direction. He struck off at a forty-five-degree angle between their late course and a direct road to the river, and he kept it as if by a surveyor's line. All the old devices of the wilderness—the ridge on ridge that looked just alike, inclines that to the casual eye looked like downward slopes, streams that vanished beneath the snow, and the snow-mist blowing across the face of the landmarks—could not avail against him.

A half dozen of the wolves followed him at first. But perhaps their fierce eyes marked his long stride and his powerful body, and decided that their better chance was with the helpless man and the girl beside the flickering fire. They turned back, one by one. Dan kept straight on and in two hours crossed Cranston's trail. He didn't doubt but that he would find Cranston in his camp, if he found the camp at all. The man had certainly returned to it immediately after setting fire to the buildings, if for no other reason than for food. It isn't well to be abroad on the wintry mountains without a supply of food; and Cranston would certainly know this fact.

Dan didn't know when a rifle bullet from some camp in the thickets would put an abrupt end to his advance. The brush grew high by the river, the elevation was considerably lower, and there might be one hundred camps out of the sight of the casual wayfarer. If Cranston should see him, musing across the moonlit snow, it would give him the most savage joy to open fire upon him with his rifle.

Dan's keen eyes searched the thickets, and particularly they watched the sky line for a faint glare that might mean a camp fire. He tried to walk silently. It wasn't an easy thing to do with awkward snowshoes; but the river drowned the little noise that he made. He tried to take advantage of the shelter of the thickets and the trees. Then, at the base of a little ridge, he came to a sudden halt.

He had estimated just right. Not two hundred yards distant, a camp fire flickered and glowed in the shelter of a great log. He saw it, by the most astounding good fortune, through a little rift in the trees. Ten feet on either side, and it was obscured.

He lost no time. He did not know when the wolves about Snowbird's camp would lose the last of their cowardice. Yet he knew he must keep a tight grip on his self-control and not let the necessity of haste cost him his victory. He crept forward, step by step, placing his snowshoes with consummate care. When he was one hundred yards distant he saw that Cranston's camp was situated beside a little stream that flowed into the river and that—like the mountaineer he was—he had built a large lean-to reinforced with snowbanks. The fire burned at its opening. Cranston was not in sight; either he was absent from camp or asleep in his lean-to. The latter seemed the more likely.

Dan made a wide detour, coming in about thirty yards behind the construction. Still he moved with incredible caution. Never in his life had he possessed a greater mystery over his own nerves. His heart leaped somewhat fast in his own breast; but this was the only wasted motion. It isn't easy to advance through such thickets without ever a misstep, without the rustle of a branch or the crack of a twig.

Certain of the wild creatures find it easy; but men have forgotten how in too many centuries of cities and farms. It is hardly a human quality, and a spectator would have found a rather dully fascination in watching the little motions, the passionless face, the hands that didn't shake at all. But here were no spectators—unless the little band of wolves, stragglers from the pack that had gathered on the hills behind—watched with lighted eyes.

Dan went down at full length upon the snow and softly removed his snow shoes. They would be only an impediment in the close work that was sure to follow. He slid along the snow crust, clear to the mouth of the lean-to.

The moonlight poured through and showed the interior with rather remarkable plainness. Cranston was sprawled, half-sitting, half-lying on a tree-bough pallet near the rear wall. There was not the slightest doubt of the man's wakefulness. Dan heard him stir, and once—as if at the memory of his deed of the day before—he cursed in a savage whisper. Although he was facing the opening of the lean-to, he was wholly unaware of Dan's presence. The latter had thrust his head at the side of the opening, and it was in shadow. Cranston seemed to be watching the great, white snow fields that lay in front, and for a moment Dan was at loss to explain this seeming vigil. Then he understood. The white field before him was part of the long ridge that the three of them would pass on their way to the valleys. Cranston had evidently anticipated that the girl and the man would attempt to march out—even if he hadn't guessed they would try to take the helpless Lennox with them—and he wished to be prepared for emergencies. There might be sport to have with Dan, unarmed as he was. And his eyes were full of strange conjectures in regard to Snowbird. Both would be exhausted now and helpless.

Dan's eyes encompassed the room: the piles of provisions heaped against the wall, the snow shoes beside the pallet, but most of all he wished to locate Cranston's rifle. Success or failure hung on that. He couldn't find it at first. Then he saw the glitter of its barrel in the moonlight—leaning against a grub box possibly six feet from Cranston and 10 from himself.

His heart leaped. The best he had hoped for—for the sake of Snowbird, not himself—was that he would be nearer to the gun than Cranston and would be able to seize it first. But conditions could be greatly worse than they were. If Cranston had actually had the weapon in his hands, the odds of battle would have been frightfully against Dan. It takes a certain length of time to seize, swing, and aim a rifle; and Dan felt that while he would be unable to reach it himself, Cranston could not procure it either, without giving Dan an opportunity to leap upon him. In all his dreams, through the months of preparation, he had pictured it thus. It was the best at last.

The gun might be loaded, and still—in these days of safety devices—unready to fire; and the loss of a fraction of a second might enable Cranston to reach his knife. Thus Dan felt justified in ignoring the gun altogether and trusting—as he had most desired—to a battle of hands. And he wanted both hands free when he made his attack.

THAT BAD LACK

Do you have a dull, steady ache in the small of the back—sharp, stabbing twinges when stooping or lifting—distressing urinary disorders? For bad back and weakened kidneys? East Jordan residents, recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor. Read this East Jordan woman's statement.

Mrs. Maurice Gorman says: "About six years ago I had kidney trouble. Many a morning I got up feeling tired and worn out. My back felt so weak and lame I found it hard to go on with my work. I was in awful misery when I stooped over and my back often felt as if it would snap in two when I attempted to straighten up. I often felt depressed and irritable and worried a good deal, too. I became very nervous over my poor condition. I often had dizzy feeling when black specks floated before my eyes and I could hardly see. I was all worn out from lack of rest. My kidneys were irregular in action. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I tried them. A few boxes, which I purchased, rid me of the trouble in a fine manner."

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Bring Back its Color and Lustre with Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients. A large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK HOT TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teaspoon full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB RHEUMATISM FROM STIFF AGING JOINTS

Rub Soreness from joints and muscles with a small trial bottle of old St. Jacobs Oil

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism! It's pain-only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia.

Lumber up! Get a 35 cent bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pain, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

DON'T COUGH

You can stop that distressing cough—stop it quickly and surely. Foley's Honey and Tar is the best known and most successful family cough medicine on the market. It loosens the phlegm and mucous; soothes the raw inflamed surfaces, eases the soreness and gives quick relief. Contains no opiates.

G. F. Fiero, Bedford, Ind., writes that "My wife left me with a severe cough. I lost my weight and got so thin I looked as though I never would get well. I tried Foley's Honey and Tar and after taking two bottles, I am now well and back to my former weight."

"The thing we should dread is not the day of judgment, but the day of no judgment."

"Religion is the reaction of the soul to the impulse of God."

"Judgment is not a final act, it is a continuous process."

"Conscience never takes a vacation."

"Salvation isn't a fire escape from hell to heaven."

"Religion is natural and constitutional. Take away the Bible, destroy every creed and catechism, and burn down every Synagogue, the God above the stars, and the Soul below the stars will remain."

Remember, people of East Jordan and vicinity, here is an opportunity that you cannot afford to let pass by—hearing the gospel preached in its pristine purity and power. Whether you are rich or poor, young or old, educated or illiterate, a nicey-nice kind of person or an out and out sinner, a backslider or a hypocrite, in fact it matters not how deep in sin you may be or what your past life has been, bear in mind, here the time, place and privilege is offered you to prepare to meet God in peace. If you are not a child of God, we feel perfectly safe in saying, you should be.

Sermon subject Sunday evening, Jan. 30th—"Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision, for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." (Blackboard illustration.)

Be sure and come next Monday and Tuesday nights and enjoy hearing the two connecting messages on that interesting subject: "The Tabernacle With Its Furnishings, In Type And Anti-type." (Blackboard illustration.) And then come all the other nights and Sunday mornings too.

Welcome to our services.

WINTER SAID TIME FOR FARM INVENTORY

That late winter is the best time of the year for taking farm inventories, the first of February, March, or April being given as exact dates, is the statement of H. M. Eliot, Farm Management Specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College.

"The farmer's field work has not yet begun at this season," says Mr. Eliot, "and he has more time for inventory taking than at any other period. Another factor that makes it advisable to inventory at this time is the fact that feed and grain supplies are relatively low, making it easier to figure the supplies on hand. For these reasons I would advise February, March, or April first as the date upon which to take the annual inventory."

The practice of checking all farm equipment by the inventory system is becoming more and more common in Michigan. In this way a farmer can find out not only the total value of his farm plant, but also the increase from year to year in the value of equipment, etc. Often much of a farmer's savings and profit go into added equipment, live stock, or payments, and are not easily determined without a careful inventory each year.

Farm account books, containing complete inventory blanks are distributed by the Farm Management Department of M. A. C., East Lansing, at cost, which is forty-cents a copy.

Calendar—Oddities.
January always begins on the same day of the week as October, and the same is true of April and July, September and December. Also February, March and November begin on the same day of the week. This, however, is true only in years of 365 days. A century can never begin on Wednesday, Friday or Saturday.

Getting Sense.
There comes a clear day when one realizes that clothes are to keep the weather off you, that food is to give you health, that home is shelter and inspiration; that, aside from being clean and inoffensive, one's personal appearance does not signify very much; that the main thing in life is to be going along toward the goal of your ideals. That isn't getting old, it's getting sense. From then on Time is not master, but friend.—Collier's.

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your bladder troubles you.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sore and paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water acids and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to cleanse and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

Don't try to tell the other fellow his business. He may ask you if you have any of your own.

WHEN WORKING FORCES ARE CUT

In times of business depression the poorest workers are laid off first and efficient men and women retained. Backache, stiff muscles, aching joints, swollen hands and feet, rheumatic pains and other symptoms of kidney trouble keep many persons below par. JUSTICE BROOKE TAKEN BY DEATH

MEMBER MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT STRICKEN SUDDENLY ON LEAVING DETROIT.

HAD WORKED WAY UP IN LIFE

Practiced Law in Canada and Detroit, Appointed Circuit Judge in 1900, Justice in 1908.

Mt. Clement—Justice Flavius L. Brooke, of the Michigan Supreme Court, was stricken with heart disease last Friday afternoon while en route from Detroit to his home in St. Clair on a Rapid Railway interurban car and was dead when he was taken into the Allene Hospital here.

Mrs. Brooke, who was Mrs. Elizabeth M. Moore before her marriage to Justice Brooke, November 24, last, was with her husband when he was stricken and remained at his side.

Justice Brooke had just passed his sixty-second year and was apparently in good health. He was on the bench at Lansing all week.

Justice Brooke was born at Simco, Ont., Oct. 7, 1858, his father having been born in England and his mother in New York state. He received his education at Albert University, Belleville, Ont., and at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, his schooling being the result of his own efforts and the surmounting of obstacles and hardships, it is said, such as few men of his position have had to face. He worked as a farmer boy during the summer that he might attend school during the winter.

Obtaining a minor clerkship in the law offices of Atty.-Gen. Mowat, of Toronto, he was finally admitted to the bar in 1884 and the year following moved to Detroit.

Here he was associated with the law firm of Col. John Atkinson and Judge Isaac Marston, later becoming a member of the firm of Atkinson, Carpenter & Brooke.

Judge Brooke, in politics, was always an active Republican, becoming a Circuit Judge in 1900 and serving until 1908 on the Wayne bench, when he became a Supreme Court justice, serving in 1915 as chief justice.

Punishment For "Lobbyists."

Washington—Bills to define and punish lobbying were introduced in the senate by Senators Kenyon, Republican, of Iowa, and Overman, Democrat, of North Carolina. The Kenyon bill would require all those engaged in "lobbying" in congress to register with the clerk of both the senate and house and state the purpose of activities for or against any legislation. Failure to comply with the provisions of the bill would be punished by a fine of $500 to $5,000.

BOAT NEARLY TURNED OVER BY BIG RUSH OF "PICTURE BRIDES"

New York—Between 300 and 400 "picture brides" arriving here on the Greek liner Magallanella almost caused the vessel to turn over when it was met in the bay by small boats containing many of the prospective bridegrooms. The women who were of Greek, Russian, Italian and Armenian nationalities, rushed back and forth across the deck of the ship as the men called to them. Officers of the ship finally rounded the women all up in the center of the boat and kept them there until it was docked. Re-serves had to be called to the dock to keep the waiting bridegrooms in check.

FORD RECOUNT GAIN NOW 1,926

About Half of Precincts Counted; Final Announcement Soon.

Washington—The Senate review of the Ford-Newberry contest was featured by a gain for Ford of 49 votes in the First ward of Mt. Clemens, when that number of split Democratic ballots marked for Ford were found to have been counted as straight Republican.

Ford's net gain to date is 1,926 in a total of 1,375 precincts. He has gained in every county so far, with the exception of Midland, Charlevoix and Iosco. Approximately half the ballots cast in the 1918 election have been counted. Final announcement of the result of the recount is expected by Saturday.

Newberry polled 220,054 votes and Ford 212,487, according to the returns of the State Board of Canvassers.
