Quality Basis For Cream

Present System of Buying Cause Poor Quality.

Adopting unanimously a resolution recommending that the Michigan State Farm Bureau dairy department actively promote and assist in establishing cream pools in the state's important dairy districts for the collective marketing of cream on a quality basis, the Committee of Fifteen on Michigan dairy affairs meeting at the state farm bureau offices last week, took a long step forward in helping the state's dairy industry out of its present chaotic state, says the state farm bureau.

Deterioration in the quality of Michigan butter resulting in an increased consumption of substitutes is the industry's worst enemy, said the committee. It was pointed out that the present cream station system of buying, which pays the same prices for all cream—good or bad—is the cause of the poor quality of creamery butter in this state. The committee agreed that the producer must be given a financial incentive to raise the quality of his product before much improvement can be affected. By the proposed cream pool system whereby grade will eventually govern price, the committee believes the desired results can be obtained.

Several of the committeemen reported interesting facts regarding the success of co-operative cream pools and creameries in this state which are operating on a quality basis. They brought out that in all quality organizations the producers received from three to nine cents per pound of butter fat over the current market price, and in some cases as high as fifteen cents. Farmers creameries making the highest grade butter were shown to have markets for their product where price was no object.

The committee of fifteen is comprised of five men representing the Michigan State Farm Bureau, five representing the interest of the Michigan Milk Producers Association and five men for the co-operative creameries of the state.

NOTICE TO ELECTORS

The city charter provides that in case there are no more than two candidates for any one office, a primary election will not be necessary.

Therefore, the primary election called for March 21, 1921, will not be held.

OTIS J. SMITH,
City Clerk.

To Whom It May Concern.

Owing to a report current here concerning Jimmie Palmiter, now of France, wish to state the report is false entirely—signed, HENRY COOK.

We made a lot of noise until the government brought the boys back from France. But once here they were soon forgotten. Uncle doesn't need 'em any more.

School Entertainment Good

THE LOVE FLOWER AT TEMPLE THEATER SUNDAY, MARCH 20TH

The story has to do with Stella Bevan, whose father returns from serving an undeserved sentence in prison to find himself a social alien in his home town and the breach between him and his unsympathetic wife is widened by Bevan's affection, and his wife's hatred for his daughter by his first wife.

Bevan meets the man, Crane, who sets him "up" and Bevan and his daughter decide to go away and start over again. On their way Bevan is informed of his wife's infidelity and goes back to prove the charge. During a quarrel, the man in the case is shot. Crane immediately determines it a murder and intercepts the daughter on her way to the boat, but Bevan coming up from the rear makes a captive of the detective, until he and his daughter have embarked. They land on a South Sea uncharted island, where Stella meets a young chap on his way to the port from which she and her father had fled. In the knowledge of the mutual attraction which springs up between them, this boy does not understand her terror for him, but yields to her unexplained entreaties to go away.

The boy, Sanders, arrives at the port and Crane, who has heard rumors of a man and a girl living on a deserted island arranges passage back with the unsuspecting Sanders on his cargo vessel. On their arrival at the island, Stella, seeing Crane, refuses to talk to Sanders, believing that he has brought Crane there deliberately. She sinks Sanders' boat and attempts by various means to murder either Crane, or both Crane and Sanders, planning such ungodly to the extreme of including herself, so as to save her father from being taken back to the mainland and

Must Sell Their Products

Or Stop Production Says Petoskey Canning Co. Official.

The below article relative to the condition of the Petoskey Canning Company appeared this week in the Grand Rapids News. As the matter of a canning plant for East Jordan has received considerable attention by our citizens, this article is of interest.

"The Petoskey Canning and Preserving company's plant will be unable to run under any capacity this season unless two-thirds of the company's unsold last year's output, now stacked in the local warehouse, is disposed of by June 1," states Parker T. Frey, of Petoskey. He asserts the bulk of the output, which is left on the company's hands, consisting of fruits and vegetables, could be roughly estimated at about $50,000.

Mr. Frey, who is secretary-treasurer, general manager and largest stockholder in the Petoskey Canning and Preserving company, claims that the concern, in 1919, canned 17 tons of fruit and vegetable products. In 1920 the plant canned nearly 200 tons of fruits and vegetables. He also reported that plans had been under way, for some time, for utilizing food products other than agricultural, which, if materialized, meant no cessation of work through the winter months at the Petoskey plant.

"Heretofore the entire supply of canned fruits and vegetables manufactured by the local concern were disposed of in reasonable time," said Manager Frey, "but it is the general belief that the slump in sugar is one of the principal reasons for the decline on canned goods at present.

One hundred and ninety-three tons of the 200 tons canned last year were cherries of the choicest quality; and 15,000 cases of string beans. It was planned to can in the 1921 run 10,000 cases each of beets, squash, pumpkin, and small fruit, in addition to their regular output of the factory.

Twice as large an acreage as has been contracted for in previous years was already secured for the 1921 season. So far 320 acres were available, and apportioned thusly: 200 acres string beans, 40 acres of beets, 40 acres squash and 40 acres pumpkin. Unless the above mentioned unsold goods are sold by June 1, Mr. Frey said that all contracts with farmers would be declared void at that time.

Manager Frey relates that while on a business visit to Chicago, Cincinnati, and Detroit recently string beans, tomatoes, corn and all small fruits were selling at 25 per cent and more below cost to manufacture, and that one lot of string beans, which he had sold for future orders $2.25 per dozen No. 2 cans, were rejected on account of price with buyers label thereon and was forced to sacrifice same at 80 cents a dozen.

"Canners are willing to go without profit if they can only get manufacturers' cost," continued Mr. Frey, "and we believe if the wholesaler and retailer would do likewise, there would be more canned goods sold; whereas the wholesaler and retailer are still holding up high prices; for instance the selling of tomatoes at 25 a can which could be sold by them for 15 cents and still allow them a 25 per cent profit on each can."

Manager Parker T. Frey of the Petoskey Canning and Preserving company, is considered an authority in the canning business. For several years he was manager of the W. R. Roach & Co. canning plant, Kansas City, manufacturers of the Hart Brand goods. His father, E. S. Frey, was formerly general manager of the same concern and is now head of the Michigan Canned Foods company with headquarters in Book building, Detroit.

During the time the three men and this girl are marooned on the island, a complete understanding is reached between Stella and Sanders, and together they plot to save her father. No end of excitement is created when Crane attracts the attention of his assistants on the faraway mainland. But in a tremendous battle, Crane believes he has killed his man by casting him over a cliff. Bevan saves himself and with the detective the happy pair sail away, only to return later as man and wife to join him on the island.

The most lasting thing about the modern gown of a woman is the bill. Its style never changes.

Mid-Year Tests in Rural Schools

A Review by Com'r Stewart of the Mid-year Tests.

The reports of the mid-year tests are at last all at hand and carefully checked. Naturally the report of a single examination is not a criterion of the work of that school. The work cannot be judged by any single test. The daily work of the child, the oral recitations and the amount of work, as well as general quality of work done, all means much more than a single test. The teachers mark on different standards, some giving more for thought and originality and others being very exacting in demanding facts and data; some expect freedom and others mark closely with all questions considered of equal value, whereas some questions are more important than others; some mark spelling and penmanship in those subjects only while others mark off for ink blots or mis-spelled words in no matter what subject they may be found. This is as true of our marking system in city schools and colleges as it is true of our rural schools.

Nevertheless the reports are interesting as a study of tendencies and individual records. The highest mark recorded in the county is that of Jenny Kent, age 8, grade 2 in Clarion, Mona Bardwell, teacher. Jenny's average was 98 per cent. The Clarion School had the highest average in the county, 91.6 per cent. Second came Greentown with an average of 91.2 per cent and third McKinley with an 85.8 per cent average.

The percentage of failures would indicate a great deal of variation in the quality of work being done in the different subjects. Where the variation is slight the unevenness is probably due to the nature of the examination but in some cases the variation is very great. Only 4 per cent in the county failed in reading, 9 per cent in orthography and 9 per cent in grammar. 10 per cent failed in language, 11 in spelling, 12 in physiology, and 12 per cent in arithmetic. Thus three times as many failed in arithmetic as failed in arithmetic as failed in reading. But the irregularity is even more noticeable in the three remaining subjects. In civics 16 per cent failed, in agriculture 17, and in geography 19 per cent failed. This would seem to indicate that more stress is needed in civics, agriculture, geography, physiology, and arithmetic.

It is exceedingly difficult for any teacher in a one room school to teach 25 to thirty classes per day and give to all the emphasis needed. Many times the children will seem to know a lesson but there is not time to go through it all. Many times the children have a lesson but cannot drill under supervision unless thirty minute or three quarter hour periods are possible. Longer class periods are possible only in graded and consolidated schools and the teachers of the county are looking forward to the time when a system will be adopted which will enable them to do justice to their pupils.

EAST JORDAN WINS FROM PETOSKEY IN DEBATE THURSDAY.

(Petoskey News)

In a very closely drawn contest the Petoskey high school debating team lost to East Jordan Thursday evening at East Jordan. Both teams fought to the very last, such that the judges expressed that they had never listened to such excellent high school debating.

According to the judges both teams were evenly matched in argument, but East Jordan team was superior in delivery. Effective debating is based upon both argument and delivery.

East Jordan supported the affirmative side, contended that compulsory arbitration was necessary, fair and workable. Petoskey maintained that it was unwise, undesirable and impracticable.

The judges were Professor Larzere, of the Central Michigan normal; Mayor Perry Powers, of Cadillac; and Commissioner Hornsby, of Traverse City.

The team returned to Petoskey at noon Friday. The members reported excellent treatment and expressed their best wishes for East Jordan in the elimination debates that follow.

It's true, though, that prohibition is creating a lot of tight-wads in this country. Nobody wants to divvy up his little stock in reserve.

Home Rule for Counties Fails

Lacked Three Votes for Two-Thirds Majority in Senate.

(From Staff Correspondent)

Lansing.—The county commission form of government struck a snag in the senate when that body took up final consideration of Senator Phillips' joint resolution to submit a constitutional amendment to a state referendum at the November, 1922, election that would allow counties to vote on adopting a commission plan. Nineteen votes was all that could be mustered for the Phillips' resolution and it requires 22, a two-thirds vote of the entire senate, to submit a constitutional amendment. Ten votes were cast against the resolution and three senators were absent.

Cities Would Dominate Counties.

Senator McNaughton, of the rural districts of Kent, the county in which the idea originated, led the fight against the resolution, declaring that it meant counties would be dominated entirely by the cities in all counties like Kent which have large cities. A call of the senate was resorted to in order to keep senators in their seats for what was considered the most important roll call of the session up to that time.

The vote was: Yes, Senators Baker, Bolt, Brower, Condon, Eldred, Engel, Forrester, Hamilton, Hayes, Johnson, McArthur, McRae, Penney, Phillips, Ropelle, Smith (2nd Dist.), Smith (11th Dist.), Wilcox and Wood—19. No, Senators Amon, Bryant, Clark, Davis, Henry, McNaughton, Osborn, Ross, Sink and Vandenboom—10. Absent, Senators Hicks, Lemire and Tufts—3.

Following its failure of adoption the resolution was tabled after a reconsideration and its sponsors will make an effort to corral some more votes for it before endeavoring to take it from the table.

Agricultural Bill Passed.

The bill to create a state department of agriculture, third of the series designed to remodel the conduct of state business, went through the house of representatives the same day that it was reported out from the committee on agriculture, being passed both in committee of the whole and on third reading, under suspension of the rules.

In the new department, the bill provides, there will be consolidated all state bureaus that concern agricultural, livestock and horticultural matters and the state fair will be under its control. The department also is designed to bring closer relations between producer and consumer. The bill now is before the senate committee on agriculture. It is to be followed by two more administration measures, the conservation bill and the labor department measure.

Along the same lines there also is being prepared a measure to wipe out state institutional boards and have their duties transferred to the state administrative board and the departments under which their institutions naturally come. It further is planned to have one master accountant to keep track of the financial affairs of all the institutions and a "state farmer" who will look after the farms and the livestock owned by many of the institutions. Some of these farms now lose money for the state.

To Adjust Budget System.

The budget system that so far has not functioned as it was intended to will be looked after by the state administrative board as well and the service of the budget director will be dispensed with. It is planned to extend the system to include even the state university and agricultural college.

The bill to cover the deficiency budget of the state has been completed and introduced in the senate, cut down from $2,400,000 to $1,628,000. Part of the saving is the result of the drop in general market prices, institutional requests for funds all being based on last year's prices. Unauthorized salary raises helped materially to create the deficiency, according to the statement from the administrative board to the legislature. It is thought the present bill will carry the state through this year nicely, but there may be the necessity of a special session of the legislature next January to meet conditions then.

To make the state administrative board still more like a governor's cabinet, Rep. Dunn, of Highland Park, introduced a bill in the house to have the secretary of state, the state treasurer and the attorney general appointed by the governor, instead of elected.

Real Supervision Lacking.

One of the reasons for the movement to abolish institutional boards of control is found in the frequent investigations by legislators into conditions under present methods of management. Investigations into the conduct of the boys' industrial school, of the state pardon board and of the building of the new state office building all are going forward right now and legislators declare that too much state business is allowed to go on without real supervision by those who are supposed to supervise.

The senate has passed a bill to have the governor name a commission of seven persons to co-operate with federal authorities in furthering the cause of a Lake-to-the-Atlantic deep waterway. The senate also has passed a bill to have the state pay half the cost of killing off grasshoppers in places where they become a pest.

The governor has signed the acts raising the city school district tax to nine mills for school maintenance and six mills for new schools; and to provide for annual June meetings of the state board of equalization.

May Adjourn April 14.

A resolution has been introduced in the house by Rep. Frick, of Detroit, to set April 14 as the date of business adjournment of this session, with final adjournment May 3. General opinion is that unless many matters now in committee are dropped entirely the latter date will be about the earliest on which business adjournment can be taken.

Leading all topics of conversation in the legislative halls since the opening of the session of 1921 has been the proposal of Rep. Hart, of Detroit, to establish the death penalty for murder. For a few days it was thought that adverse sentiment expressed at public hearings had effectually stopped the measure for the session, but then along came the house committee that had the bill in charge and decided to report it out to the floor of the house.

The measure came out of committee without recommendation, but it was out. "The house will kill it in a hurry. Why should we hold it back?" was the gist of statements by committee members. But their report started all over again the whole argument as to life imprisonment or the death penalty for the crime of murder. The result still is to be recorded.

Manufacturers Oppose Tax.

Next in point of discussion comes the income tax proposals, the idea of Senator Penney of asking the federal government to whack up with the states on what it gets on its income tax returns meeting with the objection in many quarters that there is small chance of the federal government agreeing to do so. Farmers are demanding that some way be found to relieve the tax burden on land, and manufacturers are complaining that they are overburdened with taxes now and that a state income tax will merely be an extra levy on them.

Thus far the argument seems to be between the farmer and the manufacturer, with the salaried man still to be heard from. Statistics are being professed in the capitol regarding state income taxes in other commonwealths. They exist now in ten states, Connecticut, Delaware, New York, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin and range all the way from a direct tax of one half of one percent on all incomes, to taxes with exemptions similar to those of the federal government and to taxes on corporation profits alone. Definite action of some sort by the senate and house committees is expected to follow public hearings at which all corners will be heard on the whole subject.

Women Active at Capital.

Influence of women's organizations is being felt more in the present session than ever before. This is natural, of course, now that women have the vote, but it is interesting to observe that matters which women petitioners concern themselves now are principally those which women failed previously to get enacted. But no one is disposed to ignore them now. The bills on which petitions of women voters largely are based to date, include the bill to raise the age of consent to eighteen years; the bill to enlarge the benefits under the mothers' pension act; the censorship of moving pictures; and the so-called "eugenics bill." There is the usual battle on every one of these measures, all of which have been up in previous legislatures, but the chances of all are enhanced appreciably by the force of the women behind them now.

Whether by accident or by design the present body of lawmakers has set a record for coming legislatures to shoot at. Fewer bills have been introduced up to the crucial time of mid-March than ever before. From this time on it is not to be expected that any bill, except it is of great public moment, will be shoved ahead of those already in committee, and there will have small chance of getting on the floor of either house in time for enactment. And to date there have been less than 300 house bills and less than 150 senate bills introduced.

Less than a score of members supported it. The law was designed as a "protection against fire."

Tired Out?

Do you know that languidness, that "awful tired feeling," heaviness, lame or weak back, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints, rheumatic pains, lumbago, in the great majority of cases, indicate kidney trouble?

Foley Kidney Pills

act promptly and effectively to restore weak, overworked or diseased kidneys and bladder to a healthy condition.

Mrs. Robert Blair, 401 S. 20th Street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "I suffered two years with kidney and bladder trouble frequently getting backache. Mornings I would arise feeling very tired and having headaches, and saw floating specks before my eyes. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to try them. After taking them a few weeks I found my troubles disappeared. The backache stopped and my kidneys were restored to healthy, normal action. I am also free of those tired spells and headaches and my vision is no longer blurred. My recovery is entirely due to Foley Kidney Pills, which I gladly recommend."

Wilmington. — A bill of complaint has been filed in the United States district court here against the Atlantic Refining Co., a Pennsylvania concern, and the Superior Oil Co., a Delaware corporation, charging that the former, by reason of its control of the offices of the latter, had succeeded in obtaining transfer of many shares of stock of the Superior company at a price below its real value. ### Taking Liquor Not Stealing.

Atlanta, Ga.—Thieves may steal your liquor without fear of prosecution. That is what Judge John D. Humphries of the Fulton superior court ruled at the trial of a city detective charged with stealing liquor from a self confessed bootlegger. The judge ruled that liquor has no legal status and cannot be protected by the laws, consequently one cannot be arrested for stealing it. He said that the owner might prosecute as a violation of the prohibition law.

That army of new postmasters will be sure of receiving something more than merely their salaries. They will get their names in print.

If you doubt the proximity of spring just cast your eye at the robin, the painter, and the paperhanger. They are the birds that never fail.

We frankly admit, brethren, that prohibition has its good points. It furnishes a lot of good newspaper stories.

A lot of people who have praised Mr. Harding to the skies will soon be cursing him as energetically—when he appoints the other fellow.

IRON MOUNTAIN DEBATES EAST JORDAN HERE NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT.

The Iron Mountain High School is the only school left in the Upper Peninsula which is still in the race for the State Championship in debating. There are but eight schools left in the State, two of which are East Jordan and Iron Mountain.

The Iron Mountain High School comes to East Jordan next Friday night, March 25th, to debate the East Jordan High School in the second series of elimination debates. The loser of this debate will be eliminated from the State contest, and the winner will be included among the last four schools in the State. East Jordan takes the affirmative and Iron Mountain the negative. This will undoubtedly be the last debate held in East Jordan. If East Jordan should be fortunate enough to win this debate, it is more than likely that the next debate will be held in the southern part of the State and of course the final debate if held at Ann Arbor.

Iron Mountain comes nearly two hundred miles and the team has not yet been defeated this year.

This debate should be the climax of the debating season, and should be one of the most important debates which East Jordan has ever had.

THE CHURCH SERVING YOU

Have you ever considered what a part the Church has played in your life? The Church began her work for you before you were born. When love had sealed her claim upon your parents, add the time came when two lives were to be made one,—then the Church through the marriage service rendered the first definite service to you. Then after a while, your Mother with trembling heart received a gift from God, and you were born. Then the time came for you to be presented to God in baptism, and the Church served you again. And as your trembling feet were making their first steps in this way of life, the Church was helping all the while by righteous precept, loving admonition and the story of the Christ to keep your footsteps steady and true. And in those formative years of your life, when your character and life was being shaped and molded, the Church still served you by presenting to you the higher and better things of life.

And one day served you as she served your parents and you were united in marriage to the "best" wife in all the world. Little ones came to you and the old story was repeated again, the Church serving you and yours.

When sickness comes the Church visits you and comforts you. When trouble, defeat and disappointment cross your path, the Church stands by your side whispering encouragement and hope. And if perchance, you fall by the way-side of life and are wrecked upon shoals or shore, and are cast like a bit of drift-wood upon the waves,—the Church reaches out a helping hand to draw you upon the Rock of Ages.

And when you go down into the valley of the shadow, and earthly lights are fading the Church with the emblazoned cross of Christ lights up the darkness and gloom of the grave. And whenever other tie on earth is broken you will still hold to your heart the tie of your Church, your relationship to Christ through His Church.

Has the Church served you? You can show your appreciation and gratitude for the Church serving you by attending your Church.

The Gospel story of the wonderful plan of redemption never becomes stale to us. Last Sunday evening a sermon went forth on "Decision" and when the Altar-call was given three went forward, two for justification and the other one for sanctification. Each one seemed to receive a definite experience. Surely we feel to give God all the praise for giving the increase. A praying people always helps to keep up the revival spirit.

Remember, next week is Prayer-Week. PRAY.

Remember also, there are fifty-one other weeks that are just splendid for the same purpose. We are more liable to win the world to Christ on our knees than on our tip-toes.

An Adventure Romance

"There, there!" he said, patting Pamela on the back. "Who would have thought it, you adorable, lonely little girl?"

Pamela threw up her head and smiled through the sudden summer shower.

"I know it was ridiculous," she said. "But I couldn't help it. You made me like you all of a sudden, and I just had to, because you've had a bath and you look so clean inside and out." She kissed him as she spoke away.

"I see," said the astounded Mr. Millyuns, and beat it.

At two minutes after five the doorbell rang again. In spite of the fact that it was almost exactly the hour which Mr. Millyuns had set for the arrival of his wife and daughter, Pamela couldn't help hoping—but in vain. It was with a slightly resigned air that she received Mrs. and Miss Millyuns instead of Mr. Robert Randolph.

Mrs. Millyuns flew to her, set hands on her shoulders, searched her face with eager shrewd eyes, and said:

"Borden indeed told me the truth about you, my dear. May I kiss you?"

Pamela extended one cheek to the salute while her eyes wandered off to size up the tall, blonde, cool young person that she surmised must answer to the name of Eileen Millyuns. Being the product of two shorts, how on earth had she managed to grow so long? Her face was regularly beautiful, as though it had been carefully made to order like her clothes. She appeared as passive as a Palmer snowscape.

After a little skirmishing for position, the three ladies seated themselves in a triangle, into the center of which the well-trained Tomlinson ran a tea-wagon.

"Now," said Mrs. Millyuns, having emptied and put down her cup, "let's forget the sheer romance of the situation, my dear, and get down to practical problems. The first of all things, as you must realize, is the necessity of getting you a companion. Would you care to be our guest in Madison avenue until you can pick one out?"

"I would put clothes ahead of a housecat," murmured Eileen.

Her mother ignored the remark and kept her eyes fixed on Miss Thornton's perplexed face. That young lady seemed in no lack of something to say but rather in search of words and the plunging courage necessary to the saying. She drew a long breath and delivered herself of the following:

"Really, it's most awfully kind of you, but, as I told Mr. Millyuns, Tomlinson is such a dear that I am going to continue him as my companion."

"Tomlinson!" exclaimed Mrs. Millyuns, and then smiled indulgently for the first time during the interview, being under the impression that at last she had run into something appropriately naive in the hearing of her new charge. "Of course you can keep him on, but you must realize that you can't live here without a woman in the house."

"Oh, yes, I can," said Miss Thornton, a little breathlessly. "I have a feeling—I can't explain it exactly—that this apartment is a one-woman setting. As I said to Mr. Millyuns, I don't want to clutter it with females."

A silent laugh crept into the eyes of the marble-faced Eileen; something inside of her sat up and took notice. She glanced round the room and murmured:

"Mother, she's absolutely right. I'm for her."

"Right! Eileen!" exclaimed Mrs. Millyuns, flushing in her indignation at finding a traitor in the home camp. "I don't know what your generation is coming to. The impossible is never right."

Having taken up her suave cudgel, Eileen was in no haste to lay it down, and may it be pointed out right here that Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton had the rare faculty of enlisting the nearest bystander to assume her battles for her, thenceforth becoming a charmingly interested onlooker, ready to watch the tide of her own fortune from the vantage-point of an entirely impersonal detachment.

"That's where you slipped, mother," continued the quite-unruffled Eileen. "There's nothing impossible to our generation. Impossibilities are our food, drink and raiment. We're like those surprising orchid things that defy the usual laws and live on air."

"Yes," remarked Mrs. Millyuns; "any new air. But I didn't bring you here, Eileen, to be a stumbling-block to Pamela, who is suddenly faced with problems in the solution of which she deserves our sympathetic assistance."

"You've hit the nail on the head again, mother," parried Eileen. "You're not in sympathy with her, and I am; so you'd better hand over her check."

Trapped, Frook—"I want a leave of absence for the week-end to visit my sister in New York." Dean (quickly)—"How long have you known her?" Frook—"About two weeks."—Cornell Widow.

and tomorrow morning at ten I'll be here to help her cash and spend it—if necessary." She turned to Pamela with a twinkle of anticipation in her eyes. "How about it?"

Pamela smiled back her bubbling smile, and then suddenly grew grave.

"Do you think I could order by measure?" she asked, and, remarking the hurt astonishment on Eileen's face, continued in rapid but nevertheless halting explanation: "You see, it's Mr. Randolph. This is really his apartment, and he may be back almost any day. I—I don't want to miss him. I—I wouldn't be out when he comes, for anything."

"Eileen," interjected Mrs. Millyuns, but before she could make any further progress along that line, Eileen was on her feet and saying good-by among these other things:

"That's all nonsense. If Bobby found you here just as he left you, the first time he decided to turn up, he might never appear again. But if he finds you after two or three unsuccessful calls and just one day's shopping, he will never leave. Tomlinson will have to throw him out."

"Tomlinson couldn't," said Pamela, with calm complacency.

Gradually the sure shot made by Miss Millyuns began to take effect. The thought of new clothes—new smart suits, airy evening frocks, filmy undergarments, and solid-silk hose—stole Pamela from her intention of eternal vigilance and led her to say:

"After all, I will go with you, if it really isn't asking too much of you."

Thus was Mrs. Millyuns side-tracked for keeps, and on the following morning the two young ladies were wafted downtown in Mr. Millyuns' best limousine and proceeded to open a chain of credit-accounts, on the bare sly—so of Eileen and in the name of Miss I. P. Thornton, that spoke volumes for the former's exclusive taste in fashionable purveyors and financial ability to humor it. Possibly the two would have shopped up to the moment of the present writing had it not been for the fact that Pamela knew all about money from the short end.

"I have finished," she suddenly announced.

"Finished what?" asked Eileen.

"Finished shopping," said Pamela. "I've been keeping account, and I've spent almost the whole check."

"The whole check?" exclaimed Eileen. "Why, you haven't touched it. That's the beauty of charge accounts. You can keep your checks to look at. I've got some that father gave me three years ago."

Pamela smiled a smile of much wisdom and made for the nearest exit. As a matter of polite formality, when they reached Fifty-ninth street, she asked Eileen to come up for lunch from the bachelor's buffet in the basement, and she could not help a slight feeling of relief at the news that Miss Millyuns had promised herself elsewhere.

"But I'll break away and come for tea at five, if you'll let me," said Eileen. "I simply must help you try them all on."

"All right; do," said Pamela. Inwardly pleased that she would have some one beside Tomlinson upon whom to flash the first dazzling vision of her metamorphosis.

The first thing she did when she reached the apartment was to ask if Mr. Randolph had called; the next was to summon the office of Millyuns, Branch & Millyuns on the telephone to know what steps had been taken in the new search. She was somewhat surprised to learn that the entire firm had gone out to lunch in a body, and still more startled at the information, obtained three hours later from the same supercilious voice at the other end of the wire, to the effect that none of them had come back. She was young; she believed it.

There is no doubt that in five minutes more Mr. Gloom would have assumed full sway in the late apartment.

"I met Mr. Beamer," said Pamela, drawing back quickly her half-extended hand, "when I was a chorus-girl." She turned, with a winning smile to her recently beaming hostess. "I don't care to know him in pleasanter surroundings."

For one breathless second there threatened one of those silences that spell social disaster. Eileen took it upon herself to mash it in its extreme youth with a soft tap of her efficient hammer.

"Oh, must you really go?" she remarked to Mr. Beamer.

Did this spectacular debut strike the name of Imogene Pamela from the lists of the matronly elite of Manhattan? It did not. Invitations rained on her and found her unresponsive. Her would-be hostesses would have gone the length of submitting rostrums of proposed guests as though to royalty, except for the fact that each and every one of them wished to put her own nearest and dearest to the test of a sudden meeting with the most exclusive of New York's latest crop of buds.

Pamela refused and accepted these bids for the latest thing in sensations in the most erratic manner. No one could fathom just why she said, "No," and much less why she occasionally said, "Yes." The mystery only added to the demands for her company and the Nays soon began to show an overwhelming preponderance over the Ayes. Why? Simply because it was not in the power of any of the hostesses to call up the moody girl and say: "My dear, we are going to have just pork and beans for dinner tonight. Won't you join us?" Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph said he would drop in for pot-luck.

Yes; every time Pamela had accepted an invitation, it was in the rapidly waning hope that Mr. Randolph, beloved and once at the beck and call of these very people, would appear and come into his own. Could she fore all the customs officials in Gotham. Tomlinson was ordered to fill the cellar with wrapping-paper, tissue-paper, cardboard boxes and string, burning what was left over in the backyard.

As soon as sufficient space had been cleared for action, the two girls set to work, and were soon involved in such an orgy of "trying on" as only the healthiest stamina of youth could have endured without falling over in a dead faint from exhaustion. Even Eileen divested her person of everything but, and experimented with such dear garments as it seemed impossible Miss Thornton could get round to in the allotted time.

Having tried to show the public how charming was Pamela in and without her cheap clothes, no puerile and gasping effort will be made in these pages to measure the effect upon her of the latest creations of the raiment dream-gods of Fifth avenue. Suffice it to say that, in one hour's twinkling of the eye, she became such a radiant vision as chokes mere words down into the pit of a man's stomach, makes his jaw work like that of a fish on a hot sidewalk, fills his eyes with the pleading light of calf-love and inspires his hands with an overmastering desire to reach for it.

For two, four, six days, a week, two weeks, Pamela lived in breathless anticipation of the moment when she could burst upon the eyesight of one Robert Hervey Randolph, and when all these days—and weeks—passed without any news of him, her lips that were made to smile, to kiss, and to bless the air with words softly spoken and carried on the fragrance of clean young breath began to droop pitifully.

Mr. Millyuns' efforts in several directions had so far proved in vain. He had advertised in every paper in Gotham, from the New York Epoch to the pink Police Gazette; he had offered rewards; he had set traps and was now supporting a large corps of rapidly fattening individuals who called themselves "plain-clothes" men—a name that would have fitted them admirably had the last syllable been omitted. His net results were the information that Mr. Randolph, in a reprehensible state of intoxication and at seven o'clock of the morning of which he had disappeared, had exchanged his well evening garments at a second-hand emporium on Sixth avenue for a suit of thick and eighteen dollars in cash, stating, as he left the place, that he was thinking of going South for the rest of the winter.

After a minute and leisurely study of all the exits from Manhattan, the plain-clothes men had given it as their united opinion that Mr. Randolph had been speaking facetiously in his last-known remark and had probably not voyaged farther south than Canal street. They said if he would only try to leave New York they could find him at once, and settled down on a policy of watchful waiting for that event.

The efforts made by Mr. Millyuns in the direction of springing Miss Thornton on society went equally away, but were not quite so fruitless. His natural love of a smooth-running establishment on the slippery crust of Gotham's social plane would have been saved a severe bump if American parents were as careful to look up their guests' moral records as they are to study their ratings in Bradstreet's.

Unfortunately for Mr. Millyuns, it happened that a certain young scion of a once gentlemanly house was included in the first large dinner-party given to meet Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton. In the natural course of such events, the party youth stepped up for presentation, registering in his protuberant eyes a gleam of dubious surprise. What if he should say, "Hello, Vivienne?" Would it create a sensation?

Something else did; namely, Miss Thornton's modulated but terribly clear voice.

"I met Mr. Beamer," said Pamela, drawing back quickly her half-extended hand, "when I was a chorus-girl." She turned, with a winning smile to her recently beaming hostess. "I don't care to know him in pleasanter surroundings."

For one breathless second there threatened one of those silences that spell social disaster. Eileen took it upon herself to mash it in its extreme youth with a soft tap of her efficient hammer.

Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph said he would drop in for pot-luck.

Yes; every time Pamela had accepted an invitation, it was in the rapidly waning hope that Mr. Randolph, beloved and once at the beck and call of these very people, would appear and come into his own. Could she have surmised that on two separate occasions the knight-errant of her thoughts had actually seen her in her most ravishing bibulous evening tucker, had driven her to two familiar doors, taken her money with averted face and without inspecting the "clock," and had passed on to some quiet stand to dream over her new glory and read the latest batch of ads crying for news of the whereabouts and welfare of self—could she have known these apparently insignificant items in the daily life of the great city, she would have wept her lovely eyes out twice over.

Such being her state of heart, imagine her excitement when Mr. Millyuns called by appointment and retailed word for word the following conversation which he had participated in that very morning with Miss Madge Van Toller of East Ninth street:

"Oh, Mr. Millyuns, are you doing all that advertising for Bobby Randolph?"

"Yes, Madge; I certainly am, and if it doesn't bear fruit pretty soon I'll have to give up tobacco."

"Are you advertising for his own good? I mean is it important to him—not to you—for you to find him? Would he be really and truly glad to be found even against his will?"

"Er—yes—er—it is—er—he would—er—if he isn't sixteen kinds of a fool. I think I caught them all, my dear, but if I left any out, please repeat."

"Yes," admitted the lady question-mark; "your legal mind answered them all. Now tell me just your human self—if you were in Bobby's place, would you want to be found by you for the purpose that you want to find him for?"

Mr. Millyuns did not pretend for one second that he did not understand the preposterously worded query.

"You bet I would!" he answered promptly and emphatically. "Now tell me what you've got up your sleeve. Please, Madge; that's a dear girl! If you only knew how I'm worried seven times a day—"

"I'm trying to tell you," broke in Miss Van Toller, "but you talk so much I can't get in anywhere. Last night, a taxi brought me home from—er—from a drive, and the cabman was Bobby, looking simply stunning in one of those awfully high-collared, khaki, waist-effect woolly coats, chauffeur's cap, tan puttees, boots, and all—"

"Yes, yes," interrupted Mr. Millyuns; "I know now just how he looked. What was the license number of the car, and to which company did it belong?"

A long pause.

"Why, I didn't notice."

"Thanks awfully, my dear."

Sound of banging up the receiver.

"So there you are," said Mr. Millyuns to the very much excited Pamela. "We've got this far and, by a fluke entirely unconnected with the twenty-two sleuths I have been pensioning in advance of their lifelong service, Robert is driving one of the sixty-three thousand taxicabs that infest the streets of New York."

"Poor dear!" said Pamela, tears rising to her adorable eyes. Then she dismissed Mr. Millyuns, who would gladly have lingered. "I have to go out now. I'm so sorry, but thank you very, very much."

"Can't I drop you wherever you're going?" asked the very human mind of the leading legal authority on corporation hedge-rows and byways.

"Oh, no," said Pamela, translucent as love itself; "I shall go in taxis."

How many vulgar vehicles for hire were blessed by the transient presence of Miss Thornton during the next seven hours is a matter of gross mathematics and consequently beneath the ken of an intelligence that can chat along about nice things like Pamela and Robert Randolph for pure pleasure and subsequently sell the remarks for cold cash. Five minutes to spot a lively cab, five minutes to ticket the driver and pile him on the discard, two more to find her purse, three more to look innocent; then start all over again. Divide seven times sixty minutes by all that, and you've got her number.

Let us leave the statistical field and pass on to seven o'clock of the near-Christmas evening when Miss Thornton was momentarily out of a cab and strolling down the slope of the hump in West Fifty-seventh street. A mushy snow-rain had just begun to fall, giving anyone with the price a splendid excuse for taking a cab anywhere for anywhere. Before the portal of the Great Northern Lights squatted four taxis in a line. In the driver's seat of the rearmost of these, and consequently the last on the rank, a lank human being was buried in an enormous turned-up collar roofed by a chauffeur's cap set at an angle of slumber.

Pamela, the very moment her eyes fell on the recumbent figure, felt that short quick leap of the blood in her veins which is ordinarily termed a "hunch." She longed to step forward and raise the veiling headgear, but she dared not, for not only was the hotel-starter on the job but also the window-shades of the Poppy club next door were still elevated by special request, owing to the slippery state of the sidewalk in conjunction with the home-ward-bound stream of dress-models.

As a consequence, she was necessarily content with opening the car-door for herself and stepping in. The starter politely begged her to pass to the taxi at the head of the rank and just as politely she informed him that her feet were wet enough as it was. In the meantime, even her light weight on the running-board had startled the driver into wakefulness and, without going through any motions, he had heard the unforgettable tones of her voice.

The starter shrugged his shoulders, barked out an address in Fifty-ninth street and kindly offered to turn her over for him. The driver laid trembling hands on the wheel and cautious—

tion without disturbing the shielding angle of his cap. Far from his troubled mind were thoughts of snow, the slush and skidding. He threw in his clutch, started her with a jerk, rounded the cab in front successfully, skidded mightily thereafter, straightened her out, skidded again, and crashed, with a great splintering of spokes, broadside front on the curb directly before the delighted windows of the Poppy club.

Nothing would have happened to Miss Thornton had she been sitting back in a ladylike manner, but at the moment of the cab's collision with the imperturbable curb, she was otherwise occupied; in short, the glass being a bit frosted, she was standing up and trying to peek through the speaking-slot. As a consequence, when the door flew open with the shock, she also flew and volplaned to a landing on hands and knees in the very middle of the very wide sidewalk.

With a cry of, "Oh, miss!" the driver sprang toward her, but when, still on hands and knees, she looked up and gasped, "Oh, Randy—Mr. Randolph!" he turned and fled down the hill.

"Hi! You Slim Hervey!" yelled the starter. "Come back here an' sign up for the junk!"

In the meantime, which wasn't much more than the twinkling of an eye, three perennial near-youths dashed down the steps of the Poppy club to the assistance of the loveliest trouble that had ever sent out an S. O. S. signal in the face of ready help to the falling. Individually and collectively, they raised the curly-haired vision to its feet.

"It was Mr. Randolph," gasped the maiden, in evident distress, "and I've been looking for him for weeks."

"Not Bobby!" exclaimed Mr. Nearton.

"Not Hervey!" ejaculated Mr. Verries. "Not Randy!" interjected Mr. Berry. Pamela nodded three times, but her eyes failed to show wonder. Nowadays everybody she ran into seemed to know everybody she knew by his first name.

"Excuse me," said Mr. Nearton, intent on getting there first with a remark—any remark; "does he owe you money, too?"

The effect was electrical. Miss Thornton assumed a freezing dignity. She fixed Mr. Nearton with steady eyes.

"How much does Mr. Randolph owe you?" she asked.

"Only tw-twenty," babbled Mr. Nearton.

"Well, here it is," said Pamela, drawing a yellowback from her chateaug and thrusting it into Mr. Nearton's nervous hand. "I happen to owe Mr. Randolph a great deal more than that." Wherewith she turned and made for the corner and the nearest telephone booth.

Pamela was short of breath when she reached the telephone, but she managed to get Mr. Millyuns' residence on the wire and learned that he was detained at the office. She called up that safe den of the world-be undisturbed and connected with a new and strange drawl.

"You've got the wrong number, lady. This Mr. Millyuns went home early to celebrate his silver wedding."

"Will you put me through to Mr. Borden Millyuns," asked Pamela, in a sugar-sweet voice, "or do you really want to start looking for another job?"

"How do I know you know him—Miss Hurry, did you say? The office-boy ain't here, so I can't ask him. Leave me your number, an' I'll have him call you."

"Know him?" gulped Pamela, in a rage. "Why, I've k-kissed him!"

"Kissed Mr. Millyuns?" responded the voice, taking sudden notice. "Well, dearie, why didn't you say so?—thought you was one of them high-brow dames. If it's a matter of kissing the boss over the wire, why just you go to it. I won't listen—oh, no!"

And a moment later, Pamela, in a strenuous body:

"Oh, Mr. Millyuns, this is Pamela and I've found him! . . . Yes; Randy—Mr. Randolph. . . . No; he got away. . . . Yes. He's going under the name of Slim Hervey and he was driving the Village Cab company's No. 1898, and he smashed it on the curb just in front of that horrid Poppy club, and when he saw me, he ran. . . . Oh, you'll get him, won't you? Please hurry. And now, if you'll hang up, I have a few words to say to that new telephone girl of yours. . . . Oh, no! you needn't tell her; I can feel her sagging on the wire. . . . Oh, will you? Oh, thank you! It isn't as if she didn't deserve it."

PART IV.

The Account to Mars.

When Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph, alias Slim Hervey, chauffeur, vice Patrick O'Reilly, ex-driver of the Village Cab company's No. 1898, skidded that vehicle disastrously to the curb in front of the Poppy club and, as a result of his criminal negligence, in conjunction with Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton's reprehensible pecking occupation, hurried that young lady to the middle of the sidewalk on her hands and knees, he leaped from his seat on a spontaneous impulse to help her to her feet and administer every kind of first comfort that the occasion seemed to demand.

Two considerations, however, shot from the double-barreled blunderbuss of Riddle and Honor, caught him on the wing, as it were, and deflected his flight from west to east with a sharp turn due south at the corner of Fifty-seventh street and Sixth avenue. In the first place, out of the corner of his eye he had seen his one-time friends, Mr. Nearton, Mr. Verries, and Mr. Berry descending the shallow club front steps in an avalanche; in the second place, he suddenly recollected that Miss Thornton was an heiress, high above his present station and intent, as he had gathered from between the lines in various advertisements in the local press referring to the location of his person, on thanking and otherwise recompensing him for turning to the right in a matter of ten thousand dollars a year, unearned increment.

As he gazed for one too brief second down into the pleading eyes and adorably eager face of this lovable vision on her hands and knees, which it seemed unbelievable he had once held in his arms, only the oft-repeated, favorite poem of his nurse:

I could not love thee, dear, so much Loved I not honor more, kept him from facing the avalanche of ridicule and giving the eternally searching Diogenes with his lantern a run for his money. As previously stated, it was not to be. Mr. Randolph turned from the waiting arms of the sweetest temptation ever reneged by man and made his swift way to the sanctum of Mr. Tourke O'Shaughnessy, foreman-manager of the Village Cab company.

"Tourke," said Mr. Randolph, "I'm through. Smashed up the two off-wheels of my wagon on the curb in front of the Poppy club. Dock me thirty, please, and make out my pay check."

"Through, Slim? Whadda ya mean?" said Mr. O'Shaughnessy. "Think I'm goin' to sack you for a skid on a day like this? Pay for your fun, kid, but take another wagon."

Robert Randolph, alias Slim Hervey, shook his head.

"You don't understand," he said. "I—I've lost my nerve."

"Lost your nerve?" gasped Mr. O'Shaughnessy. "Whadda ya mean by tellin' me a lie like that? Come on, now; draw a map! Did ye kill the inside?"

"Oh, no," said Slim; "that's just it. I mean, the young lady is very much all right."

"I begin to get you," murmured Tourke. "Skirt on your track, eh?" A look of pity followed by one of loyalty crept into his eyes. "Look here, Slim," he continued: "I know that tryin' to trick a female is like playin' hockey with a stick of dynamite, but we got a lot o' high cards to draw. First shot out o' the box, all the boys here is for you. Then there's your friend, the Force. I want to tell you, Slim, you're the first driver I ever had that could flatten out a cop on a busy day an' make him think it was a joke."

"Thanks," said Mr. Randolph, but shook his head sadly.

"Now, listen," resumed Mr. O'Shaughnessy: "I'm goin' to have the boys up here as they come in and put 'em on. In the contract, you slip out for a make-up. Get Sally Painter round the corner to tone your face down to the color of your freckles, do a little job 'on' yer eyebrows, an' fix a deep scar in the upper lip of yer speakin' tube. Get me?"

of Mr. Robert H. Randolph had not a long procession of parcels begun to arrive in the nick of time. Tomlinson brought them into the bedroom, one, two, three at a haul, and Pamela herself cut the knots with Mr. Randolph's best nail-scissors and laid out the goods, filmy fold upon filmy fold.

By the time Eileen turned up the apartment looked like the stateroom of a millionaire young lady returning from Paris with nothing to wear and preparing to swear to it be-

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

Eat less meat if you feel Backache or have Bladder trouble—Salts fine for Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eating of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poisons, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The uric is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night. To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

THE importance for the business or professional woman of belonging to a club is a real one. Women's work both in business and the professions is still in a fluid condition. Changes are in progress, new standards are being established, and the effect of the vote is being felt. To get the benefit of these changes, a woman needs to know what is being done in her special neighborhood and by her group of workers. There is no better way of doing this than by joining a club, especially a club affiliated with the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

It is not only the direct contact with other women working in your own field that benefits you in such a club, but the contact with women in other branches. With that comes a widening of opportunity. The woman not happy in her work can often find another opening through her club acquaintances and club activities. She is constantly aware of what is going on, and she sees what is being done by other women. Together with them she can direct her effort to putting through proposed schemes for bettering the standing of women earners.

A good business club for women is an asset to any community. If there is no such club in your community, start one. Get the other women together, get in touch with the federation, and start your club. It will be an assistance to every business and professional woman in your town. (Copyright.)

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"DUN"
 LIKE "boycott," "jazz," "hummel" and a number of other words which are now acknowledged members of the English family, "dun" had its origin in a man of that name—a certain John Dun, who was constable in England during the early part of the last century.

Dun, as might be supposed, was a past master of his profession, a successful collector of debts. No job was too hard for him to tackle, no debtors too callous for him to prick their conscience or shame them into payment in one way or another. One of the constable's pet schemes was to call upon a debtor twice, and on each of his first two visits he would wear his ordinary clothes. Then, if the debtor still refused to pay and there was no doubt that obligation should be met, Dun would adopt the stratagem of dressing in some outlandish costume—a scarlet cloak or a pair of green tights—so as to make himself as conspicuous as possible. Thus attired and ringing a bell in order further to proclaim the person for his visit, he would return, and it was seldom that the debtor withstood more than one of these public announcements of his delinquency. Because Constable Dun was so successful in the collection of money due it became common in such cases to say, "You'll have to send Dun for your money" or "You'll have to Dun him to get it," and the expression persisted long after the constable himself was dead and forgotten. WHAT TO HAVE FOR DINNER.

A foreign pie, which is most savory, is one which will be often used after the first trial; it is:

French Meat Pie.
 Cut up fresh pork in small pieces and the same amount of veal, brown in a little hot fat and turn into a lined pastry shell. Cover up for ordinary pie with a top crust and bake slowly in a moderate oven. Of course the seasonings are added during the browning.

Roast Veal au Jus.
 Season a fillet of veal with salt, pepper and put in a pan with a piece of butter, a carrot, bay leaf and a clove. Put into a double roaster and bake in a moderate oven two and one-half hours. Remove the meat to a platter. Put a little water in the pan and simmer for five minutes. Strain and pour the gravy, unthickened, around the meat.

Cincinnati Chicken.
 Split lengthwise, a pork tenderloin, leaving the halves joined. Pound the meat of each side until about one-half inch thick. Spread with the following stuffing: One cupful of bread crumbs, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, a slice of onion chopped, one teaspoonful each of chopped parsley, pickles, capers and lemon juice, and one tablespoonful of minced olives. Mix in, to this one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter and one beaten egg. Arrange the stuffing so that it will keep the center and sew or tie the edges together so that it will resemble a plump bird. Bake with careful basting, until well browned.

Macaroon-Pudding.
 Soak one-dozen macaroons in one-fourth of a cupful of currant jelly and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice; set over hot water. Make a soft custard of one pint of milk, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, the beaten yolks of two eggs and one whole egg beaten. Flavor with almond extract. Add to the custard four more macaroons, heated in the oven until crisp, then rolled into crumbs. Pour this mixture into the serving dish, add the macaroons and jelly. Pile over them a meringue, made from the two egg whites and powdered sugar. Decorate with cubes of jelly and brown in the oven.

Canned Apricots Frozen.
 Remove the paper from a can of choice apricots and pack the can in ice and salt, using equal measures of each. Let stand one-half hour, then with a can opener cut round the top of the can one-half inch below the edge, take off the top and invert the can to remove the contents. Surround with a pint of marshmallow cream. The apricots should not be frozen too hard.

JACK IS THANKFUL

ONE night in the playroom all the toys sat looking at Teddy Bear, Dora Doll, Jumping Jack and Jack-in-a-Box and several others who had feet and legs.
 Of course, Jack-in-a-Box had no feet or legs, and that was always a very unpleasant subject for Jack to speak about, for all the boys who had them rather looked down on poor little Jack. But tonight those who had feet and legs sat in a row by the wall while the other toys looked at them and listened to their tale of woe.
 "It was just terrible!" said Dora Doll. "There we were in that big empty flower tub, where our little mother had been playing house when it grew dark. That was bad enough, but when it began to rain—oh, that was awful! My clothes were spoiled before I thought of danger, and then Teddy Bear began to fuss.

SALADS AND BEAUTY

ACCORDING to the way they are made, salads are either fattening or thinning. They play a great part in all menus for reduction, but in this case they are eaten plain or with a special dressing. If you wish to grow thin, eat fruit salads of all kinds but grape, banana or nuts, with the following dressing: Two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a pinch of salt and paprika, a quarter teaspoonful of dry mustard, a teaspoonful of chopped chives or parsley, and a teaspoonful of tomato catsup or Worcestershire sauce. The bowl is rubbed inside with an onion, and the ingredients are mixed together. Sometimes a hard-boiled egg is chopped in.

But if you wish to increase your weight, eat salads with plenty of olive oil mayonnaise. For this you take the yolk of an egg, beat it, add a pinch of salt, add olive oil drop by drop, always beating, with a few drops of lemon juice or vinegar to thin it as it grows too thick. After a time the oil may be added in tablespoonful quantities. The success of this most delicate of all dressings is that the mixing bowl must be quite cold, even being set in a dish of cracked ice, and at first the oil and vinegar must be added a few drops at a time. It must be beaten incessantly, an egg beater being easier than a fork for use.

 Salads are so good for the digestion that they should be included in the menu once a day at least. Potato salad is fattening, apple salad is good, though it neither adds nor subtracts flesh.

Counts Your Words.

DRINKING HOT WATER

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.
 If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated, if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and wastes from stomach, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.
 To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is unpleasant.
 Hot water and hot water act on the system—cleansing, sweetening and softening. So hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, nervous or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured to become real cranks on the inside.

"I have always envied all you who have feet and legs and knew you thought I was half madd; but when the rain began to fall and the cover of my box kept it from filling the box I began to feel sure I was safe. Of course, I was afraid the wind might blow and tip it over; but I was lucky, for it did not blow at all, and there I was sailing around as dry as ever. I was sorry I could not help any of you who were getting wet, but you all know that was impossible, for there is only just room in my box for me."
 "I should not be surprised if your spring rusted," said Dora Doll; "you must have felt the dampness, even if you did not get wet."
 "I do feel a little stiff in my spring," admitted Jack, "but I am sure it will do me no harm. It will soon wear off, and I shall never again be envious of you who have feet and legs."

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.
 But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.
 A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

 Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"I SEEN HIM."
 FREQUENTLY we hear a person say, "I seen him do it," and it is not always a person who has not been educated in the proper use of English. In the language of the grammarian, the speaker does not make proper distinction between "saw," the preterit, or past form of the verb "see," and the past participle of the same word. The principal parts of "see" are as follows: Present, "see"; past, "saw"; imperfect participle, "seeing"; perfect participle, "seen." Therefore, the sentence should have been worded, "I saw him do it," not "I seen him do it."
 We hear a person say, "I have saw" or "I would have saw"; in those cases, of course, the expressions should be, "I have seen," "I would have seen," since "seen" is the participle to be used after any form of the auxiliary or helping verb "have."

Home Rule for Counties Fail

Where there were more than 600 in the two houses combined, in the last legislature, which ran at about the average for the time since the new constitution was adopted in 1908.

Would Abolish Prison Boards.

One of the new bills to carry out the idea of reforming state administration generally has been introduced by Rep. Wells, of Cass county. It would place all prisons of the state under a board of three members, each of whom would devote his time to the work at a salary of $3,500 a year. The wardens would be named by and be subject to this board. The present boards of control would be abolished.

The application of city traffic laws to suburban and township conditions is the objective of several motor and vehicular bills that have been tossed into the legislative grist mill. One bill would require that all motor trucks, whether traveling in the city or country, be provided with mirrors to observe traffic following them.

Warning To Autoists

All automobile owners are requested to take notice that their cars must now be equipped with 1921 licences. Many are still using last year's plates, and hereafter no cars will be allowed to run within the city limits without 1921 plates.

PRISON MANAGER EMBEZZLED FUNDS

MARQUETTE PRISON OFFICIAL ADMITS DEFALCATION OF $12,000, CLAIM.

NOW HELD UNDER $10,000 BAIL

Legislative Committee Will Conduct Investigation of Muddled Condition of Accounts.

Marquette, Mich. — Alfred West, bookkeeper and manager of the industrial department of the Marquette prison since 1903, waived examination before Municipal Judge Button, when given a hearing last week on a charge of embezzling prison funds.

West was arrested on a complaint signed by T. B. Catlin, prison warden, who formally charged West with misappropriating $10,000, more or less.

West confessed to defalcation of approximately $12,000, it is asserted. Bail was set at $10,000 and West was placed in custody of the sheriff. He will be tried in circuit court in May.

The disclosures made last week are the first fruits of the audit of the prison books which has been in progress for the past six weeks under the supervision of J. J. Higgins, of Chicago and two assistants. West has been kept on the job while the audit was in progress, as the accounts of the institution were found to be in such a muddle that no one but he could find the beginning or end to the mass of jumbled figures.

One of the things which aroused the suspicions of the legislative committee that there was something wrong with the finances of the institution was that there had been no posting of the general ledger for nearly two years, when the committee visited the institution in January.

The auditors also have discovered that many of the vouchers and other memoranda which should form part of the files of the bookkeeping department of the prison are missing.

A legislative committee will conduct a searching inquiry into the financial and contractual affairs of the institution.

CHILD FALLS INTO MANHOLE

Body Swept Away By Rushing Water; Four Feet Deep.

Montreal.—Mrs. Joseph Manning was crossing St. James street when her two little daughters when the elder, Lily, 8 years old, stumbled and fell into an open manhole.

The child plunged head first into the sewer and was swept away by the rushing water, four feet deep at the spot. A man who saw the accident, ran to the next manhole, a short distance away, climbed down and waited to snatch the child if she swept by, but his efforts were in vain.

BAKER KILLED IN DOUGH MIXER

Employee Drawn Into Heavy Rolls and Body Broken in Two.

Pontiac.—Walter Black, 35, first assistant baker at the state hospital here, was instantly killed when his body was drawn into a dough mixer used in the bakery plant at the institution.

His body was crushed and broken in two across the chest. George Robertson, a helper, witnessed the tragedy, but was unable to assist Black.

FIUME SPURNS U. S. CONSUL

America Must First Recognize Country As Sovereign State.

Triest.—Wilbur Koblinger, American consul to Fiume, left that city for Trieste to await instructions from Washington, after having been refused recognition by the Fiume government. In its note, the provisional government says:

"We, as a sovereign state, cannot recognize an American consul until the United States formally recognizes Fiume as a nation."

POND NOW COVERS ROAD BED

Engineers Puzzled By Disappearance of 175-Foot Strip of Road.

Grand Rapids.—County engineers are puzzled over the disappearance of 175 feet of roadbed on the Grand Rapids-Lowell road. A pond now covers ground over which automobiles formerly passed. Muck, forced upward when the road sunk, has forced fences and trees out of the earth nearby. One theory is that the original pioneer roadbed of corduroy has rotted away.

Protest Pardon of Woman.

Flint.—Flint merchants have taken up with the Michigan Retail Drygoods association the matter of a protest to Governor Groesbeck against the parole of Mrs. Alma Mathieson, convicted shoplifter who was released from the Detroit house of correction after serving only three months of a two and one-half to five-year sentence. Testimony at the trial showed that she had beaten her 10-year-old daughter to compel her to steal merchandise from the stores.

DAISY ROBINSON

Daisy Robinson, the "movie" star, made her debut as a child—one of the fairies in the production of Peter Pan. Later she played juvenile roles in a Brooklyn stock company, when she was taken over by a large motion picture producing concern. She has appeared with some of the leading film players. She declares she likes comedy best.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

By C. N. Lurie

"IN" AND "INTO."

THE distinction between the uses of these two words, "in" and "into," can be expressed best by giving examples of proper and improper usage. Therefore, compare the two sentences which follow: "The man walked in the house" and "The man walked into the house." In the first case the action was confined entirely to the house; that is, the man was in the house, and he walked therein. But in the second case, the man was outside the house, and he entered it. "In" shows state of being, or position; "into" denotes action, movement, tendency or direction.

Do not say, "I fell in the water," but say, "I fell into the water." Following is a case in which the two words are used correctly in one sentence: "I threw the stone into the house, and it lies in the room."

"Come in the house," says the mother to the child. She should say: "Come into the house."

THE first stamp for letters as a revenue-producing agent was introduced into Great Britain by Sir Rowland Hill in 1840. For a while the stamps were simply bits of paper, which had to be pasted on the letter by the purchaser. The first adhesive stamp was the English "one-penny black." It was not until 1854 that perforated stamps came into use. Before this all stamps had to be cut apart.

Doe in Town.

Beavertown, Pa.—A large doe chased by dogs came down the main street here the other day, and taking a flying leap, landed in the garden of Fullmer's hotel. After a few minutes she again jumped the fence and trotted through the business streets, often stopping to look in windows. The doe returned to the garden and then to the woods.

37 REDS TAKEN IN DETROIT RAIDS

SENT TO NEW YORK FROM WHERE THEY WILL BE DEPORTED AT END OF WEEK.

DEPARTURE FROM DETROIT QUIET

Radicals Admit Membership in Communist Party But Make No Protest of Treatment.

Detroit.—Adjudged guilty of being members of the communist party and violating the law against anarchy, 37 men, some with their wives and children, were deported Sunday and began their journey to their native countries. The party left on the Wolverine for New York where they will sail on the Mongolia, March 19.

Some of the men admitted membership in the communist party. Membership cards were found in the possession of others, and some said they favored the overthrow of government.

Russia, Poland, Denmark, Mexico and Great Britain are the countries to which the men have been ordered deported. Those held guilty as anarchists were from either Russia or Poland.

No disturbance was made by the men on their way to the station and they remained quietly in their place in the train. No regret was expressed and they seemed satisfied with their lot. As the train pulled out of the Michigan Central station several of the men crowded to the platform and waved farewell to Detroit with smiles on their faces.

POISON WHISKEY PROVES FATAL.

Monroe Paper Mill Foreman Had Plagued Auto Party.

Monroe.—Poisoned whiskey claimed its first victim here when Charles McCarthy, 45, a foreman in a Monroe paper mill, died. Another man, a companion of McCarthy, is also said to be in a serious condition as the result of drinking some of this booze.

Two men, one of whom is an Indian, are being held by Monroe police, charged with being the vendors of the whiskey which killed McCarthy. According to the story told Monroe police, McCarthy bought the booze in Monroe to be used in an automobile party with several friends. While on his way to a friend's home, McCarthy partook of several drinks and was suddenly taken ill. He was taken to his home and before medical aid could be summoned he died.

NON-PARTISAN CHIEFS TARRED

Legion Posts Drive Former Senator and Aids From Kansas Town.

Great Bend, Kansas.—Details of the anti-partisan league demonstration in Barton county which reached a climax in the escorting from Great Bend of J. Ralph Burton, former United States senator from Kansas, and the tarring of J. O. Stevic and A. A. Parsons, officers of the league, revealed that Stevic and Parsons were compelled to apply a coating of tar to themselves after their clothing had been removed. After they had been forced by the crowd of several hundred men to roll on the ground, their clothing was returned and they were told to leave the county.

CLAIMS HAMON ACCUSED GIRL

Girl Faces Charge of Murder of Prominent Politician.

Ardmore, Okla.—The first real sensation of the Clara Smith Hamon murder trial was sprung when the prosecution revealed the deathbed statement of Jake L. Hamon, Oklahoma oil plutocrat and Republican national committeeman.

In his dying statement, the prosecution claims, Hamon told intimate friends that Clara Smith Hamon deliberately shot him. According to the prosecution, the young woman came into his room where he was lying in bed, and as she affectionately ruffled his hair with one hand, fatally shot him with an automatic pistol.

SEARCH FOR GUNMEN, FIND RUM

Surprise For Booze-Laden Cars Coming Into Genesee County.

Flint.—Bonded liquor valued at more than $2,000, seized in the southern part of Genesee county when sheriff's forces and state constabulary officers stopped every automobile in an effort to obtain Detroit gunmen, is in possession of Sheriff Homer Vette. Eight men are still incarcerated.

Offered Japan's Navy Plans.

Tokio.—Naval Lieutenant Tsuru Hamaguchi was arrested and handed over to a courtmartial in connection with an attempt to sell Japanese naval secrets to Captain Edward Howe Watson, naval attaché at the United States embassy here. Captain Watson, it is said, received two letters signed "Goto Yapaca," asking for an appointment, as the writer desired to sell for 1,000,000 yen Japan's mobilization plans against "a certain country." He reported the matter.

POTATO FARMERS NOW USE CERTIFIED SEED

Growers' Ass'n Adopts Program To Raise Standards.

Increased per acre production and generally higher standards are prospects for the future of Michigan's potato growing industry, if seed certification work now carried on by the State Potato Producers' Association gains the results expected.

More than 25,000 bushels of potatoes were certified by the Association for seed purposes last season, in spite of the fact that the work was started only a year ago, and the success of the movement to date indicates a great increase in certification in 1921. Certification of grain seed has been carried on in the state for several years by the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, and the potato men expect to develop parallel advantages.

"Building up, gradually, a higher strain of potatoes for Michigan growers by improving the seed stock is the aim of the Association's certification work," says H. C. Moore, secretary of the Association and extension specialist at M. A. C. "We are after the highest yielding strains and elimination of diseases. The certified seed provides local growers with the best of planting stock and also furnishes seed for shipment outside the state. Several thousand bushels have gone outside the state this year, chiefly to Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois."

Michigan ranks well at the top of the potato producing states, being rated with New York, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Maine as the country's leaders. Potatoes are also one of Michigan's leading crops, comparing very favorably with corn and wheat in value of production.

Producers of the certified potatoes get a price somewhat above the market price for their tubers, the difference covering added cost of production and sale. The Producers' Association handles the certification itself, although the Agricultural College furnishes men for the inspection work.

Our principal notion of a good thing is to find a way to annex it.
