EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, JUNE 17, 1921.

No. 24

The New High School Building

Most Modern and Up-To-Date of Any in State.

East Jordan may proudly boast of having one of the most modern and up-to-date high school buildings of any city of its size in the state of Michigan.

The building provides for a maximum attendance of 350 students. The departments in addition to the regular high school academic subjects are commercial, manual training, agriculture and household arts.

The building has many unique features. In the first place, it is a one story building. The walls are constructed of brick and hollow tile. Skylights are used in all of the rooms which are more than twenty-four feet wide.

This gives not only adequate but perfect lighting. The gymnasium and auditorium are in the center of the building. The gymnasium serves as the stage of the auditorium. This enables athletic contests to be played in the gymnasium and witnessed by spectators seated in the auditorium. When the gymnasium is used as a stage, velvet velour curtains are suspended from the ceiling in such a manner as to make the stage any size or shape desired.

The gymnasium may also be shut off from the auditorium by heavy doors which run on a track.

In the household arts department electricity is used for cooking. Fourteen 1100 Watt hot-plates are used. These have proved to be the most satisfactory cooking apparatus known.

The only basement there is to the building is for the heating plant. A fan system of hot air is used—the air being drawn in from the roof, forced through the furnaces and then into the rooms. In the furnaces are humidifiers which moisten the air for the rooms and exhaust the impure air from the rooms into the attic and from there through the roof by means of ventilators. It is possible to change the air in the entire building in ten minutes. If the furnace is hot in the morning, the fan can be turned into any room, and in just a few minutes the air is comfortable. During the summer time the fan is used to change the air in the rooms, thus keeping the rooms cool during the hot days. The heating system has been found to be exceedingly economical.

As a convenient building in which a school can be easily organized, the East Jordan High School is especially to be commended. High school students are not put to any inconvenience of running up and down stairs which is always a source of confusion. The auditorium is on the main floor and there are no stairs to climb which is always an inconvenience to the public. The corridors are so constructed and the toilets so placed that the entire school is easily inspected. The manual training department is set far enough away from the classrooms so that the noise of the machinery is not a disturbance. Showers and lockers are placed in connection with the toilets just across from the gymnasium which adds to the convenience. The entire building is so planned that it makes it easy to have athletic contests, to put on school entertainments, to enter into debating and oratory and all other functions which are worth while.

East Jordan ought always to be prominent in those school activities which not only appeal to the public but which are of inestimable value in the training of young people.

The East Jordan High School

The East Jordan High School, constructed during 1920, stands as a monument to the public spirit of East Jordan citizens, to their devotion to public education, to their generous and patriotic desire to provide adequately for their children, and to their commendable zeal in promoting the community's welfare.

Crowd Can Be Seated

Not Necessary to Remain Away from Exercises Tonight Even if You Have No Ticket.

There is still a block of seats held in reserve for those who have not yet received checks for seats at the exercises tonight at the auditorium. About 150 more can still be seated. No one need stay away tonight because he hasn't a ticket. Come early and get seats in the gymnasium for which tickets have not been given out.

ADA E. HOBBS

Principal and English

The work of Miss Hobbs both as Principal and teacher of English has been of a uniformly high grade. Miss Hobbs coached the Senior play and directed the work in oratory and declamation.

Miss Hobbs goes to Bay City next year and her parting will be a distinct loss to the East Jordan High School.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT

The Commercial department of the East Jordan High School has very ably demonstrated its value in training young people for commercial positions. A year ago a large class of young people finished the commercial work and practically every one went into a responsible commercial position making a success there. This year the commercial department has made a record which even surpasses that of a year ago. Those who are graduating from the commercial department are very efficient in both shorthand and typewriting and every one has received a Palmer Penmanship diploma.

In the commercial contests held at Traverse City this year, East Jordan won first place in advanced shorthand and beginning typewriting.

The record of the commercial department has been a splendid one and it now offers to young people a most excellent opportunity for preparation in both shorthand and book-keeping.

SUPT. M. R. KEYWORTH

Supt. Keyworth came to East Jordan from Gaylord some three years ago to take charge of our Public Schools. His work here has met with the unqualified endorsement of our citizens. He goes to take charge of the Hastings Schools this fall with the sincere good wishes of our entire community.

Program Tonight

Tonight at the high school auditorium will be the combined Commencement exercises of the Class of 1921 and the Dedicatory exercises of the new high school building. Citizens may expect an unusual program.

Mr. Harold Jarvis of Detroit, Michigan's famous and beloved tenor singer, will sing some of the songs that have made him famous. Mr. Jarvis will appear at least four times on the program.

Professor C. O. Davis of the University of Michigan, known as an educator throughout the United States, will speak upon a topic upon which he is regarded as authority, "The High School as a Social Center." More and more in every community the high school is coming to be regarded as an educational institution which ought to reach more than just the high school students. The people of the entire community ought to receive educational assistance through the channels of the high school. The East Jordan High School is so constructed as to make it useful as a community agent. Mr. Davis will be here to explain the various ways in which this can be accomplished.

Mr. E. E. Gallup, State Supervisor of Agricultural Education, visits the East Jordan schools once or twice a year. Mr. Gallup is one of the largest leaders in agricultural education. As a thorough-going American he has great faith in the American public school system. His address on "The American Spirit in the Public Schools," will be a great patriotic message.

Tonight is to be the banner night in the history of the East Jordan schools.

RUTH M. PALMATIER

Household Arts

Miss Palmatier has had charge of the Household-Arts department for two years. She has been instrumental in building up this department from a little work in sewing to a complete department which includes both sewing and cooking. Miss Palmatier has accomplished splendid results.

If nobody ever has given you a fair chance, why haven't you gone out and taken a fair chance?

There still exists the brand of parents who take pleasure in punishing a child for the things they have done.

The Class of 1921

The Senior Class of East Jordan High School of 1921 is next to the largest class ever graduated from the local school. The members of the class have been very active in affairs of the school.

John Gunderson, who has been prominent in all school activities and especially in athletics, graduates this year. So do Paul Franseth and Floyd Liskum, both having made remarkable records in debating. In fact all of the members of the Senior class have been prominent enough in the activities of the school as to be missed. Rosabelle Danto, who has successfully led the singing in assembly, and Martha Wagbo, the school artist, both finish this year.

Several members of the Senior class will be in school next year, others will enter commercial lines.

The Seniors report that they will be occupied next year as follows:

- Rosabelle Danto.....Undecided
- Doris Nice.....Undecided

SCHOOL EXHIBIT

Last Monday evening from 6:30 to 7:30, just before the Class exercises of the Senior class of 1921, an exhibit was open to the people of all the work of the schools from the Kindergarten to the High School. This exhibit was tastily arranged and showed in a very remarkable manner the fine work that has been done throughout the school.

The work in drawing and penmanship, under the supervision of Miss Darling, was excellent. No less so, however, was the work in arithmetic, language, spelling and other subjects.

In the high school there was a fine manual training exhibit of the furniture made by the students this year. The History, English and Commercial exhibits were very commendable and in the science department the notebooks made during the year were on display. In the Household Arts department the sewing which was done in this department was to be seen. The work of the Junior High in history reading, geography, English and arithmetic was all splendid.

The prevailing opinion was that this was the best exhibit yet given by the local school.

This exhibit will be preserved for display at the Fair this fall.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

East Jordan has been fortunate in having a Board of Education composed of progressive and forward looking men. They have been interested in all of the affairs of the school and have been enthusiastic in promoting its welfare. These men have the vision to see the educational possibilities of this community, and of course they were the leaders in securing the new high school building. All of them are reliable business men in whom the people can place great confidence.

The members are as follows:—Ira D. Bartlett, President; C. H. Pray, Secretary; L. A. Hoyt, Treasurer; W. P. Porter and Roy Webster, Trustees.

ORATORY

The East Jordan High School has won marked distinction this year in oratory. Virginia Pray, the school's representative, won first place in the sub-district contest at Harbor Springs. She then won first place in the district contest here at East Jordan. She then went to Howell, Mich., for the final State contest and while she did not win first place there, she made a splendid showing.

Miss Pray has still another year in high school and next year will stand a splendid chance to bring state honors to East Jordan.

Class of 1921

Splendid Class Gave Excellent Program Last Monday Night.

The Class of 1921 gave an unusually fine Class Day program at the Auditorium last Monday night. The auditorium was packed to the limit, fully 650 people being in attendance. The program contained many unique features which indicates that the Class of 1921 possesses not a little originality.

The girls of the class sang very prettily the song, "Merry June". The boys followed with the noble song, "Your Flag and My Flag."

Rosabelle Danto was the class salutatorian and welcomed parents, citizens, teachers and schoolmates with choice language fittingly delivered.

Irene Eicher delivered the class history written by Martha Wagbo in the style and manner akin to the language of the bible. The history is elsewhere printed in this issue.

Vernon Alexander delighted everyone by reading a poem of his own composition relating to the class.

Christa and Pauline Hoover sang very beautifully a duet "Sunset."

Paul Franseth, the high school's famous debater, of course gave the class oration. He maintained usual high standard in both composition and delivery.

Alice Malpass, in a most original and novel manner, gave the class prophecy by introducing a telephone conversation some years in the future with Rosabelle Danto. She uniquely brought in each member of the class and very cleverly assigned each to a more or less ludicrous position in life.

La Verne McCalmon and Doris Nice added to the merriment of the occasion in the manner in which they created and presented gifts to the class.

A duet to the music of Schubert's Serenade was sung by Rosabelle Danto and Alice Malpass.

John Gunderson very solemnly read the class will in which the Seniors disposed of numerous and various articles and customs which have been sources of either annoyances or merriment during school days.

Juanita Secord gave the valedictory which was well written and delivered and made a very appropriate closing for the exercises.

The entire program was well received and immensely enjoyed. It was another excellent achievement for the high school.

NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT STUDENTS

All students planning on attending the East Jordan High School next year should file application for tuition signed by parent or guardian with the director of the district in which the student resides before the fourth Monday in June, which is the 27th.

A great man is one who is able to conceal the fact that he is commonplace.

DAVID R. HOOVER

Manual Training and Mathematics This is Mr. Hoover's first year at East Jordan. Although handicapped by not having been able to use the Manual Training room for the first few months of school until the new building was ready, he has nevertheless turned out a large amount of excellent work.

Mr. Hoover teaches at Ann Arbor next year.

Michigan News
Tersely Told

Battle Creek—The graduating exercises of the Sanitarium Training school here closed when 53 graduate nurses received diplomas from Dr. J. E. Kellogg.

Owosso—Mrs. Della Bruno, 78, has brought suit for divorce against Anthony Bruno, 69, who, she alleges, has given her only $15 with which to buy clothes since their marriage in 1894.

Beaumont Harbor—Beaumont Harbor voters, by a vote of almost two to one, discarded the existing aldermanic system and adopted the commission manager form of government at the polls.

Grand Haven—Mr. and Mrs. George Woodhouse and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson were arrested at Spring Lake by Federal officers charged with stealing bank checks from an express company. They were taken to Chicago.

Menominee—Fred E. Reiff, former division traffic superintendent for the Michigan State Telephone Co. in the upper peninsula, has been appointed to succeed the late M. L. Saunders as division commercial superintendent.

Pontiac—When his clothing caught in the belt of a machine at the Wolverine Sand & Gravel plant at Clarkston, William McMillan, 33 years old, a foreman, was killed. McMillan's body was drawn into a pulley and his chest was crushed.

Cadillac—The typhoid situation is so serious here, that the city has offered to pay for inoculation of persons who feel they cannot afford to pay the bill. Rigorous measures are being taken to stamp out the disease and prevent its spread.

Owosso—A toy gas balloon, one of six sent up by an Owosso automobile sales company, floated to Holly and was picked up there by Miss Agnes Rachel. Each of the balloons had a tag on it good for $25 in trade with the company. Holly is 25 miles from here.

Cadillac—The offer of $25,000 for the plant of the Osceola Light & Power company at Reed City by the village council was refused by E. J. Haynes, of this city, majority stockholder. The company offered to sell for $40,000 after the dam went out in March.

Muskegon—James Mauterstock, 48, of Wolf Lake, driver of the car in which Orley Thompson and Loren Adams lost their lives was arraigned in justice court for manslaughter. The examination was postponed and Mauterstock was held to $5,000 bail which he furnished.

Grand Rapids—The city commission has cancelled $11,000 in old taxes assessed against descriptions for which land did not exist, against several small parcels of lands not owned either by individuals, the city, or the state and against railroads for claims dating back as far as 1874.

Muskegon—Moonshine saved the life of Marion Adams, 16 years old, when she swallowed poison because her father scolded her for being out late, according to the city physician. A police sergeant was told by the physician to give her whisky. He gave her moonshine and now she is recovering.

Flint—Jitney buses have been ruled off streets on car line routes here by the city council. The main object of the council's action was to relieve the traffic congestion on streets where street cars are operated and also to open up new territory not now being served by any transportation conveyances.

Monroe—Richard Gosser, Tony Paul, Lee Wigley and James Kennedy, of Toledo, pleaded guilty in Circuit Court to holding up George Karmel, 18 years old, at Erie, Mich., several weeks ago. Kennedy was sentenced to serve from five to 15 years at the Jackson State Prison and the others were given from one and one-half to 15 years in the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia.

Kalamazoo—Any monument to be erected in honor of Joseph Guyton, the first American killed in the world war, should be constructed at Ewart, the hero's home, and not at Detroit, or Lansing, according to a resolution passed by the Kalamazoo post of the American Legion. This resolution called on Senator Newberry to aid passage of the bill which would provide for erecting the monument at Ewart.

Grand Rapids—A 100-year-old treaty will be used as a defense by W. J. Masquusky, 76, an Indian, held at the county jail for trial in district court on an indictment charging him with impersonating a federal agent. The treaty was signed March 25, 1891, by President James Monroe and Secretary of State, John Quincy Adams. It acceded to the members of the Ottawa, Chippewa and Pottawatomi tribes land situated in the vicinity of the Kalamazoo and St. Joseph rivers.

Pontiac—The decision of the State Supreme Court in the suit of the Township of Avon and others against the Detroit United Railway, in which the Smith Rate Law of 1919 was upheld, did not cause any surprise here. Inasmuch as the same facts had been previously passed on by the court, it was considered unlikely that it would reverse itself in this case. The object in securing a ruling, according to Judge Glen C. Gillespie, who pressed the case in behalf of the municipalities, was that it might be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

Marshall—Milo James, 29 years old, of Homer, was drowned while fishing in a mill pond in that town.

Grand Rapids—An ordinance prohibiting writing, printing or distribution of red literature in the city has been adopted by the city commissioners.

Wakefield—The Sunday Lake mine, which has been the only mine in operation in Wakefield, has closed for an indefinite period, throwing 200 men out of work.

Escanaba—John S. Lindsay, contractor, will build the Delta-Menominee tuberculosis sanitarium in Powers, Mich., on a 60-acre site. His bid was $118,576.

Ann Arbor—State Senator Charles A. Slink, of this city, has received a gold medal from the Belgian government for his work here as a member of the Belgian relief committee.

Grand Rapids—The Grand Rapids, Grand Haven & Muskegon Railway company has made effective a 10 per cent reduction in its wage scale, placing it at 40, 45 and 50 cents an hour.

Mt. Clemens—The appeal of Lloyd Prevost, convicted of the murder of Stanley Brown, has been stricken from the June docket of the supreme court and will go over until the October term.

Leroy—Among the improvements here is the building of a half-mile of hard road, the enlarging of the triangle at the intersection of the Mackinaw trail and Main street for the benefit of traffic.

Adrian—The Smith-Rorick alienation of affections case was concluded after the jury had been out 12 hours. Mr. Smith, the plaintiff, was awarded a verdict of $100, damages for the loss of his wife's love.

Marcellus—Carroll S. Jones, veteran Cass county banker, died at his home here of heart trouble. He was cashier of the G. W. Jones bank since it was organized, 44 years ago and was known in southern Michigan.

Olivet—Prof. V. J. Searle, of Ripon, Wis., has been selected to head the department of business administration at Olivet College next year. He will succeed Dr. Richard B. Clark, who recently resigned to go to Centre College.

Shelby—Henry W. Reid, 87 years old, is dead. He was one of the pioneers of Oceana County, coming to Stony Lake when it was the principal trading post in the county. He held many local offices, among which was that of village president.

Algonac—Two Michigan residents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Lewis, of Algonac, lost their lives in the La Junita, Colo., flood, according to telegrams received by Mrs. William R. Hamilton, of Algonac, a sister of Mrs. Lewis. Both victims were drowned.

Muskegon—Moving pictures are now being shown at all school houses in Muskegon County by Karl H. Keefer, community council secretary. This is made possible by a device attached to an automobile. The car furnishes the power to operate the picture machine.

Pontiac—Pontiac's new valuation, according to figures just prepared by the board of review, is $43,623,107, an increase of $1,015,553 over that of a year ago. The city taxes collected in July will be based on a rate of $19.215 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Muskegon—A jury accepted the defense of Oscar Carlson, 20 years old, in the suit brought by Laura Crombie, 30, a war widow of Grand Rapids, for breach of promise. Carlson admitted the contract to marry, but told the jury the plaintiff's temper caused him to break his promise.

Owosso—Patrolman C. D. Miles, who was shot in the left hip by a burglar whom the officer caught robbing Byerly's grocery store, will recover. Letters in the officer's side pocket of his coat deflected the course of the bullet, preventing a more serious wound. The burglar escaped.

Ann Arbor—Dr. C. W. Edmunds, assistant dean of the medical school of the University of Michigan, has been elected to the Association of American Physicians, the highest honor of its kind in the country. Members are chosen from the United States and Canada and the number is limited to 150.

Flint—Members of the Genesee County Medical Society will establish in Flint a clinic where mental defectives may be examined and treated after they have been arraigned in local courts. The society has named a committee to investigate psychiatric work in other cities and at the larger penal institutions of the country.

Grand Rapids—Ernest Ludlow, a patrolman, was held up by a burglar who poked a gun into his side and was marched away by the robber, who later escaped. Ludlow found the stranger in a barber shop as he was trying doors. When the officer attempted to put him under arrest, the burglar pulled a gun, ordered Ludlow from the shop and compelled him to march down the street.

Ann Arbor—Social service workers from all over the state, who have been here attending the meeting of the state hospital association and the Michigan State League of Nursing Institutes, voted to form an organization to be known as the State Association of Medical Social Service Workers, appointing Miss Alice Walker of Harper hospital, Detroit, temporary chairman. A committee of organization was appointed and authorized to draw up a resolution, which will be presented for adoption at the time the social workers meet here in October.

MARKET REPORT

PUBLISHED BY U. S. BUREAU OF MARKETS, WASHINGTON, D. C.

May
Prices generally lower. Receipts light but equal to limited demand. Allalls down about 25 Kansas City. Stock yard buying steady market at Chicago. Heavy receipts at Cincinnati being absorbed by good buying at the lower prices.

Wheat—Wheat continues weak, other feeds fairly steady, output in ample supply. Demand exceedingly light. Brewers' grains and cottonseed meal quoted 1¢ lower than a week ago. Corn leads unchanged. Stocks generally remain in excess of requirements.

Grain
July wheat sold at a new high point on the 3rd encouraged by bullish crop reports and estimates and large export business. Export demand was then cut off on account of the continued advance and a further decline in sterling exchange and prices dropped until the 5th when there was a sharp upturn on fears that heavy rains in Southwest would delay harvest and damage quality. September wheat showed considerable firmness on the 6th and 7th caused by exporters being slow and buying September to change hedges.

Chicago—In Chicago cash market No. 2 red winter wheat $1.53; No. 2 hard $1.41; No. 2 mixed corn $1.01; No. 1 yellow corn $1.00; No. 2 white oats $1.00. For the week Chicago July wheat down 8¢ at $1.44 3/4. July corn down 1¢ at $1.00 1/2. July wheat down 1-4¢ at $1.35; Kansas City July 6 1-4¢ at $1.37; Winnipeg July 4¢ at $1.74. Chicago September wheat $1.17 3/4; September corn $1 1/4.

Dairy Products
Active storing demand has kept butter markets firm with price tendency upward. Receipts continue heavy. Fancy grades especially in demand. Butter closing prices 92 score: New York 32 1/2; Chicago 31; Philadelphia 33; Boston 33.

Cheese—Cheese markets steady to firm. Current production not yet showing quality necessary for active storing demand and movement of all medium grade goods into consumptive channels has had some tendency to keep prices down.

Prices at Wisconsin primary markets
Average prices: Wisconsin 14; Longhorns 14; Young Americas 14 1/2.

Live Stock and Meats
Hog prices at Chicago declined 5¢/300 per 100 lbs. the past week. Best steers steady, butcher cows and heifers down 25¢. Veal calves up 50¢. Spring lambs down 50¢; aged lambs 50¢/75¢; yearlings and ewes 55¢/60¢.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

DEVIL WORSHIP

A N. AMERICAN explorer has just returned to civilization after a visit to the interior of Ecuador and the homeland of the Jibaro Indians.

This tribe of head-hunting savages have lived in the same territory since long before Columbus discovered the Americas and have kept wholly free from the influence of civilization.

The most striking evidence of their failure to advance in the centuries which have passed over them is the report of the explorer that the Jibaros do not believe in a God, but that they do worship devils.

It is practically the universal history of the developments of all peoples from the savage state to that of civilization, that the belief in devils precedes that of a belief in God.

Before they conceive or defy a ruler in the realm of good they establish a kingdom of evil and nominate a being supreme in the management of one or all forms of danger and misfortune.

Herbert Spencer in his analysis of human worship bases religion on the Unknown, declaring that the savage first worships those powers which he does not understand.

It is the savage's inability, because of his savagery, to trace cause from effect that leads him to assign to totally unrelated things the cause for what he observes.

And since it is those things which harm or threaten him with harm which most concern him he establishes first his devil causes rather than his God causes.

He hears in the thunder the voice of a devil living in the sky who punishes with the swift lightning and with fire.

He sees a devil in the wild beast that kills his cattle. There is a demon power that helps his enemies of another tribe.

The white man's gun is an invention of some evil spirit and the drought which spoils his crop and the deluge which overflows his lands are evidences to him of the activities of some powerful and unfriendly spirit which he must in some way appease.

In some of the earliest written history of this country, the narrative left by Captain John Smith of Virginia, there is much space devoted to the devil worship of the Indians of that territory and the sacrifice of children to quiet the wrath of the evil ones.

All through tradition and history from Set, the demon of death and evil in the mythology of early Egypt down to the Hopi Indian dances which take place yearly in Arizona, there has been a continuous story of devil worship and rites and rituals intended to appease his wrath and gain his friendship.

PRESIDENT URGES FULL ATTENDANCE

WANTS EVERY YOUNG MAN WHO CAN, TO REPORT AT WAR TRAINING CAMPS.

INDIVIDUAL AND NATIGN BENEFIT

Expresses Hope That System of Voluntary Military Training Will Be Established in U. S.

Washington. — President Harding urges every young man who can possibly arrange to do so to attend one of the citizens' military training camps to be conducted by the war department this summer. In a statement made public early this week he expressed the hope that during his administration arrangements will be completed for giving military training to at least 100,000 young men each year.

The text of the statement said: "I hope every young man who can arrange it will attend one of the citizens' military training camps to be conducted this summer by the war department in each of the nine army corps areas.

"In this way he will increase his worth to the nation and obtain individual benefits of priceless value to himself and to the community in which he lives.

"I hope to see established during my administration a comprehensive system of voluntary military training for at least 100,000 men each year. Every young man who is willing to prepare himself for the defense of his country should be given an opportunity to do so.

"Our present national defense law established an economical and democratic military policy thoroughly consistent with our national traditions. It provides for a small regular army to be augmented by great citizen forces in the event of national emergency.

"This is our traditional military policy. But whereas in the past these larger war forces have been extemporized after the occurrence of an emergency, the new law wisely provides that the framework of their organization shall be established and developed in time of peace, insofar as this is practicable through the voluntary service of our patriotic young men.

"The army of the United States as defined in the new law comprises the regular army, the National Guard and the organized reserves. Every patriotic citizen should encourage development of these forces, each within its proper sphere."

GROWERS SUE HEALTH BOARD

Allege $1,000,000 Damages for Warning Against Ripe Olives.

Detroit.—Members and officials of the Detroit health board were named defendants in a $1,000,000 damage suit filed in federal court late last week by the Curtis corporation, producers of ripe olives and other products.

The bill of complaint charges that the company was damaged to this amount because of the health board's warning against the eating of ripe olives following the deaths of five persons who were said to have eaten olives on Oct. 18, 1919, at the Murray W. Sales' home in Grosse Pointe.

OHIO EDITOR NAMED DRY CHIEF

Appointment of Roy Haynes Was Announced Recently.

Washington. — Formal announcement of the appointment of Roy Haynes, a Hillsboro, Ohio, editor, as national prohibition commissioner has been made.

The new commissioner is editor of the Hillsboro Dispatch, and was one of the first Ohio editors to suggest the nomination of Mr. Harding for president. He has been a factor in Ohio Republican politics for a number of years, and in 1912 was a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress.

MRS. BERGDOLL PAYS $23,000

Mother of Draft Evaders Saves Herself From Going to Jail

Philadelphia.—Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, mother of the Bergdoll brothers, convicted army deserters, saved herself and her four co-defendants charged with conspiracy to aid Grover C. and Erwin R. Bergdoll to evade army service, from going to jail by paying $23,000 in fines recently imposed by the United States District court here.

Would Cool Spurred Passion.

Chicago.—When Senorita Francesca Sapiro, who came from Mexico, spurned professions of love made by Peter Lopas, her countryman, Peter, employed at a hotel, entered the ice chest and stretched himself on a cake of ice, flanked by two other cakes. The butcher found the disappointed lover unconscious. As he regained consciousness Peter tried to shoot himself four times, but the cartridge failed to explode. The police are caring for him.

Mother's Cook Book

"Man may be the head of the family, but, far better than that, woman is the heart of it."

MEALS FOR THE DAY.

COMBINATIONS are not always good in leftovers, unless great care is used in blending them. The following, though unusual, proved very good. A cupful or two of veal broth with noodles was the basis of this dish. A baking dish was well greased with the fat from a piece of steak, also a small bit of cold steak was minced and put into the dish, with some of the cooked veal, also minced, then the noodles and the jellied soup, a dish of creamed onions (which were also leftovers) were chopped and added, and the whole covered with leftover mashed potato, moistened with milk. Bake until the potato is slightly brown and serve from the dish. Add such seasonings as are needed when arranging the food in the pan.

Liver With Onion Sauce.

Parboil sliced calf's liver until well heated, turning in the boiling water; drain and dip in flour well seasoned, and fry in hot bacon fat until well cooked. Fry a cupful of chopped onions in the remaining fat, until a slight brown; add a tablespoonful of vinegar and pour over the liver.

Potato Spring Salad.

Cook the potatoes with their skins on; cool and peel, then cut in dice; add a handful of minced chives or a finely shredded onion. Now add finely minced, tender uncooked dandelion greens. Mix all together and pour over hot bacon fat with the bacon minced in it; stir and mix well, then add a little boiling hot vinegar, salt and pepper and serve hot.

Wilted Cucumbers With Sour Cream.

Slice the cucumbers after peeling them and let them stand in salted water until wilted. Rinse in fresh water, ice cold, and dry on a cloth. Season with salt and pepper and serve with thick sour cream. There are many people who consider cucumbers unwholesome if not soaked in salt water until all the crispness is removed. Cucumbers are indigestible for some people just as the lovely strawberries distresses some stomachs, but a fresh, crisp cucumber dressed with a good salad dressing is a most delectable vegetable for the normal appetite.

Peanut Butter Loaf.

Pour three cupfuls of cold water over one-half cupful of rice and stir with a fork until the boiling point is reached; let boil one minute, drain on a sieve, rinsing with cold water; return the rice to the fire with two cupfuls of boiling water and a teaspoonful of salt; cover and cook until the rice is tender. Add a cupful of peanut butter, half a teaspoonful of paprika, an egg beaten light, and one-half cupful of milk. Mix all together well and shape in a mold on a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with half a cupful of cracker crumbs mixed with two tablespoonfuls of fat. Bake one-half hour; serve hot with tomato sauce. One may use a mixture of pecans, walnuts and almonds ground.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"TINKER'S DAM."

RELYING solely upon the phonetic sound of this expression, it appears to be distinctly profane and a number of writers have fallen into the error of spelling "dam" as if it were the word derived from the same source as "condemn."

To say that a person or a thing is "not worth a tinker's dam" is, however, not related in any manner to profanity, but gets its meaning from the fact that a tinker's dam was a wall of dough or soft clay raised around a spot which a plumber, in repairing, desired to flood with solder. The material of which this dam was made could be used only once and was then thrown away as utterly worthless. Meanwhile, it had served the purpose of stopping or damming up the molten metal. The colloquial simile is, therefore, derived from this short period of usefulness and not from any widespread use of the word "damn" on the part of tinkers or plumbers. (Copyright.)

HIGH SCHOOL AS A SOCIAL CENTER

When the new high school was planned, the idea of having a building which the public may make great use of was always in mind. The auditorium is not directly connected with the class rooms, thus any public or social gathering may be held there even during school hours. The gymnasium may be shut off from the auditorium and still leave sufficient room for a stage.

The Household Arts department is just across from the gymnasium and provisions are made there for serving a banquet to a large number at one time. Thus it is possible to make use of the building for a public meeting or for a banquet. In fact, both may be carried on simultaneously.

Many organizations in East Jordan have already made use of the high school for various purposes. The Masons, K. of P.'s, the farmers Co-operative Association, the Catholic Church, the Improvement Club, the Study Club and the farmers under the direction of County Agent Wing have already made use of the building on one or more occasions. There have been banquets, plays, business meetings, institutes, and welfare gatherings. Many of these have been held during the day. The auditorium fills a long needed requirement for East Jordan. As time goes by it should continue to be used more and more for social, business and educational purposes.

HOUSEHOLD ARTS DEPARTMENT

The Household Arts department of the high school is very complete. The kitchen contains fourteen electric hot-plates which have proved excellent for cooking. There is a complete equipment of cooking utensils so that fourteen can work at the same time. In addition to this there is equipment to serve a complete banquet for one hundred twenty-five people.

The sewing-room contains tables and machinery and other apparatus for excellent work in sewing.

The dining-room while not yet finished will serve to make the department very complete. In addition to this there are eight tables to be used to serve lunches and they will be placed in the corridors next to the Household Arts department.

SCHOOL PLAYS AND ENTERTAINMENTS

The gymnasium which is easily transformed into a stage for the auditorium makes an ideal place for giving school plays and entertainments. The fact that the stage is adjustable and that there is an abundance of room behind the curtains makes it possible to give school entertainments in which many children may participate.

The Christmas entertainment given this year by the grade children was pronounced by everyone as being the finest yet seen in the East Jordan School. Later on an entertainment consisting of a one-act play called "Neighbors" and a cantata, "The Happy Family of Father Time" was given. Both of these were first class. The Senior play, "Assisted by Sadie" was generally conceded to be one of the best given by any Senior class. The various grades have given one-act plays in assembly.

JOHN DUNCAN—Latin and English

Mr. Duncan came to the East Jordan High School in January. He has proved himself to be an excellent teacher, a fine leader of boys and girls, a loyal worker in the school, and an all-around helper.

In view of the fact that the assembly was not open until the first of the year the record of the school in dramatics and entertainments has been very good.

There are great possibilities for extending this type of work very much the coming year.

MRS. M. C. BLOUNT
Junior High School

Mrs. Blount came to the East Jordan High School as a teacher of history but during the past year has had charge of the Junior High School. Mrs. Blount has a great hold on the children. Mrs. Blount teaches geography, history and reading and her work is of an unusually high grade.

Mrs. Blount returns to the East Jordan High School next year.

BASKETBALL

Although the East Jordan High School has not played basketball for several years, the results in basketball during the past season were even better than could ordinarily be expected from an experienced team. However considering the fact that only one boy in the East Jordan High School had ever played in an interscholastic game before, the record of the boys is remarkable.

The first game in the new gymnasium was played on February 4 between Elk Rapids and East Jordan. The score was 41 to 11 in favor of East Jordan. Other games were played with Bellaire, Kalkaska, Charlevoix, and the Boyne City American Legion team. The local high school won over half of these games.

At the tournament held at Petoskey all of the schools in Northern Michigan were represented. In the elimination contest at this tournament the local school defeated Bellaire, Traverse City Catholic High School, and Onaway and lost to Harbor Springs in playing for second position. This entitled the boys to go to the State contest. They played at the University gymnasium and lost to Lake Linden.

Although the East Jordan team was a light team they were noted for their team work and aggressiveness. Coach Speltz is certainly to be congratulated over the fine showing which the boys have made.

Class Poem--1921

VERN ALEXANDER

Large and brawny with slick lying hair,
Lawrence, tiller of fields, who wins at the fair,
And drives a wild Ford with its wheels
In the air,
While his Ma' reprimands him, "Less speed to the fair."

Next comes Mr. Barrie, of the dark curly locks,
Who sports a bow tie and green arrow socks—
With his soft tenor voice makes a hit
When he can
Now you will agree he's a young ladies man.

Coy, flirting Miss Gladys, is the one perchance,
She likes to go Fording, and better to dance,
As an actress she's charming, there's no doubt of that,
In fact, there're a number of things she's got pat.

Miss Danto, the scholar, whose scholastic renown,
Is very well known in this small quiet town,
Who tells us in English of queer writers whose works
Are to our ears and eyes mostly meaningless quirks.

Irene loves the woodland and every green glade,
When Tommy is with her to sit in the shade,
And Tom has a Fordlet that is itching to go,
Where the woodland is calling and pink posies grow.

Then there's Paul, our greatest debater in school,
And who in a contest is wonderfully cool,
Since he knows he can beat them, all up to a paste
By merely presenting the facts in the case.

Now Johnny, our athlete, is a most wonderful gent,
But he hasn't a lady, for he can't keep a cent,
Though he works every evening and holidays all,
Still his pockets are empty, nothing in them at all.

Liskum, our catcher, in the game of baseball,
Is strikingly handsome, but not very tall,
When he's out on the side lines, with his loud call,
He flirts with the ladies, 'Oh not at all.'

Then there's Martha Lorraine, who's a wonderful cook,
And has many a recipe set in a book
She thinks not at all of the pies she has burned,
But only of all the high praise she has earned.

There's LaVerne, who, we think, is full-blooded Irish,
With eyes as snappy as a person could wish,
And a wee, winning smile with her bonny red hair,
But a terrible temper that's certain to flare.

Stanley McKinney, who's a tall skinny guy,
Has removable teeth that just take the girls' eye—
And who writes on the blackboard, when Miss Hobbs is not by,
To show him the wherefore of his errors and why.

There's Alice, our singer, with a wonderful voice,
She's a beautiful looker and Wange-man's choice,
When they go out on picnics in the late afternoon,
They sometimes extend them to the pale of the moon.

Marie is Scotch Irish and says hardly a word,
But in our class meetings, she's sure to be heard,
She's to be a sweet nurse in a hospital ward,
Come on, all you fellows, let's hand in our card.

Juanita's commanding in all that we know,
In getting her lessons she's not a bit slow,
She says she is Irish, but we do not think,
That she knows a Shillalah from a bottle of ink.

Emma Omland is quiet and lonely and blue,
For she has not a fellow and nothing to do,
But her hopes are soaring as high as the clouds,
She craves a Ford limousine running through crowds.

Marian Pickard is pretty, has laughing blue eyes,
She's lovely and gentle, an angel disguised,
Meets all situations with a smile that delights,
Is noted for flirting and staying in nights.

Martha Wagbo is quiet with modest brown eyes,
You can't read their meaning, you can only surmise,
When she gives you a smile, though says hardly a word,
Your heart is much lighter and soars like a bird.

Lyle works at the buzz saw that trims off his nails,
Has fun with his Overland, pays lots of bills,
But Pa has grown tired of searching his sock,
And Lyle's riding career will soon strike on a rock.

And Doris, our critic, who is last but not least,
Has a will to command when she is displeased,
She gives us opinions on all that we do
But in our class parties wants nothing that's new.

SATE B DARLING

Penmanship and Drawing
Miss Darling's work in penmanship and drawing has been very good. The East Jordan Schools students are uniformly good writers throughout.

Although this is the first year that East Jordan has had work in drawing for some time, the results are particularly gratifying.

THE EAST JORDAN ATHLETIC FIELD.

Within the past year the block of land directly east of the high school building has been purchased by the Board of Education and the street which separated the two pieces of property has been closed by the city. This makes a large athletic field and playground directly a part of the school. Over one hundred pine stumps have been taken out of this land and there remain a few yet to be removed. With just a little more work, the athletic field will be in splendid condition for football and baseball.

It is planned to put the field in the very best of condition and later on to add a track and tennis courts.

The splendid athletic field added to the new high school building gives an educational plant and a complete equipment which is not surpassed by any school in northern Michigan.

KATE SIBLEY
Commercial

Miss Sibley has popularized the Commercial department to an extent hitherto unapproached in the history of the East Jordan High School. Everybody in Miss Sibley's room works hard from the joy of working.

Miss Sibley goes to Hastings next year.

DEBATING

The school year of 1920-21 has been a most successful year for the East Jordan High School debating team. Five boys have participated in debating this year—John Gunderson, Cayle Hudkins, Arthur Secord, Floyd Liskum, and Paul Franseth. All the debates were held under the auspices of the Michigan High School Debating League. The question for debate was: "Resolved, That the adjustment of disputes between employers and employees should be made a part of the administration of justice." The East Jordan High School debated both sides of the question with various schools.

The local school won all the debates in this section, defeated the winner of the Upper Peninsula, the winner of the district south of us, and was one of the last two teams left in the state still undefeated. At the final debate with Kalamazoo Normal High School at Ann Arbor Kalamazoo won.

The teams defeated by East Jordan this year represented high schools in the following places: Boyne City, Charlevoix, Gaylord, Pellston, Cheboygan, Petoskey, Saginaw, Iron Mountain and Allegan. All of these debates except two were won with an unanimous decision.

The East Jordan High School, by winning the State championship two years ago and second place in the state contest this year, has become known all over the state of Michigan for her debating teams. Debating has given the school a prestige that scarcely anything else could give.

In addition to this debating has been of immense value to the local school because it has given a stimulus to public speaking. The students in the East Jordan High School do not hesitate to take part in activities in which they have to speak in public. East Jordan has made a splendid record and no doubt next year will again be on the map with a wonderfully strong team.

BASEBALL

The East Jordan High School has been uniformly successful this season in baseball having won the northern Michigan championship. The local team has defeated the high school teams of Charlevoix, Mancelona, Boyne City, Traverse City, and Central Lake one or more times each and has not been defeated by any of these teams at any time this year.

The splendid pitching of John Gunderson of course was the main factor in the success of the team. His record is without a doubt the best of that of any high school pitcher in this section of the State if not in the whole State. During the entire season there has been but one earned run off him. The remainder of the team have been aggressive and have made an excellent showing in batting. All of the boys have been hard workers, out to practice every time, and trying every minute. They have succeeded in making a record this year that will be very hard for East Jordan or any other high school to duplicate.

THE BOOK OF MARTHA AND ST. IRENE

CLASS CHRONICLE OF 1921

BY MARTHA WAGBO
Chapter 1

1. And it came to pass that in the year of nineteen hundred and seventeen a certain group of people were gathered together on the side of the Jordan toward the sun rising in order that they might receive great learning.

2. That there might be unity and peace, they chose unto themselves a leader, Bernice, daughter of McGowan; and a keeper of the Treasury, Doris Coykendall; and a recorder, Martha Lorraine. And Miss Horton was appointed to give counsel and advice unto them.

3. There also came to join this assemblage a youth from afar, by the name John, son of Gunderson. Being a youth of great valor, and skilled in the art of throwing balls, he found great favor in the sight of his masters and fellow men. And it came to pass that he proved himself so skillful that he was chosen captain with one consent, and many were the victorious combats he led.

Three years thereafter the children of Charlevoix and the children of Boyne City and the children of Traverse City came to combat against them and each in turn was delivered unto his hand.

5. Among this assemblage were also men gifted in the art of oratory, and as time went on their eloquence waxed great and they went over the state speaking and great multitudes came from afar to hear them.

6. Some of their number were poets and the greatest of these was Vernon Alexander.

At the beginning of the fourth year there came from Central Lake a little blue-eyed damsel named Marian. She was exceedingly fair and comely and it came to pass that Paul was greatly pleased in her, but notwithstanding his oratorical powers she was never heard to say "Yes".

8. Of all the wise patient teachers, Mr. Speltz, instructor in the way of sciences, was probably the most long-suffering and slow to anger. But alas, after examination he too, would appear in sackcloth and ashes bemoaning the loss of precious pearls cast.

9. Notwithstanding the good example afforded by the Seniors, the underclassmen were sometimes found to err, and one day, a great commotion was brought about and it was found that one of their members had with evil intent, slain and cast the foul carcass of

10. And it came to pass that as the end of the fourth year drew near, the Seniors commanded that all men go and bring in fish, and a great feast was prepared, and many were bidden to come and partake thereof.

11. When they were all assembled, the chief master arose, and saw that it was good, and spake unto them saying, "Verily, I say unto you, this is a great thing. And it behooves me that ye do likewise in the years to come hereafter.

12. When at last the Seniors were ready to leave this place of learning, their Exodus was celebrated with great festivities and rejoicing.

RANNEY NOTES.

(Edited by Mrs. B. E. Waterman)

Mrs. Fred Nachazel has been sick the past week and under Dr. Parks' care.

PENINSULAR

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

Old Mr. Wangeman has sold his farm at Boyne Falls and moved his household goods to the farm of his son, F. H. Wangeman where he will make his home.

The Board of Review, A. B. Nicloy and J. Saunders, met at the home of Supervisor F. H. Wangeman two days last week.

Mr. Burch of Ogemaw Co., a Grange lightning rod and insurance agent was through this section, Monday.

Mrs. Ira Mecker is quite poorly with stomach trouble at present.

Rex Sandford is in Eldridge, Iowa, driving a motor truck for his cousin, who is a surveyor there.

John Seiler's mother is very ill again with a cold on her lungs.

Mrs. Shaw and daughter from Iowa are visiting her brother John Seiler and her mother Mrs. Galen Seiler.

The little daughter of Mrs. Shaw was taken ill Saturday morning and a doctor from East Jordan was called. She is a little better at present.

Mr. and Mrs. David Gaunt were dinner guests of the former's sister Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Gregory of Boyne City were dinner guests of the latter's brother Sunday.

A ball team from Boyne City came to Hayden Point Sunday and had some lively practice with the Lone Scouts. The Scouts were ahead in the 7th inning when the game broke up. They expect to come again June 19.

The Lone Scouts have some new bats and balls and are pretty well rigged and will be glad to practice with other young ball teams at Hayden Point.

A very severe electric and rain storm struck this section Sunday evening and broke the drouth which had shortened the pastures and had begun to affect other things. The rain was almost a cloudburst and did damage all with the good. We were all hoping for rain but did not speak for anything as speedy as this.

The neighbors are helping Jesse Wright with his farm work as he is unable to do any heavy work, although he can drive the car.

Derby Hayden, who has been working for F. H. Wangeman for the past two months was paid off Saturday evening and is spending the week at home so as to attend the last day of school at the Star school, Wednesday, after which he will look for a job elsewhere.

A great many acres of ground that was marked, Saturday, ready to plant potatoes Monday will have to be dragged and marked again because of the heavy rain Sunday evening.

H. B. Russell and C. A. S. Hayden are batching it in the C. A. S. Hayden cottage in Boyne City and motoring to and from their work on the good roads.

David Gaunt motored to Charlevoix Monday and saw where two barns had been struck by lightning and burned to the ground, Sunday evening.

The good roads gang are removing the old bridge at Advance now.

School will close Wednesday p. m., June 15th at the Star school with a picnic at the school house.

Mrs. George Staley is sufficiently recovered from her recent illness as to be able to drive to Boyne City Monday on school business for the Star Dist., of which she is treasurer. She was accompanied by her little adopted daughter, Gadia.

Elton Jarman and Edward Gurvin planted potatoes for A. B. Nicloy Friday and Saturday, and for A. G. Reich earlier in the week.

Corp. Sedgman Laid to Rest

Funeral Services Held Saturday From M. E. Church.

The remains of Corporal Clinton B. Sedgman, who was wounded in overseas service and later died in a hospital there, were brought to this city last Friday evening, and funeral services were held Saturday afternoon from the Methodist Church. The remains were laid to rest in Sunset Hill Cemetery. During the funeral hour the business places of our city were closed.

Clinton B. Sedgman was born Jan. 22, 1887 in Wilson township, Charlevoix County, and grew to manhood in this city. He entered the U. S. Service May 27, 1918 at Charlevoix, and was promoted to Corporal in Co. E, 338 Inf., 85th Div., at Camp Custer.

He sailed overseas July 16, 1918 and on Sept. 7th was transferred to Co. D, 18th Inf., 1st Div., as Corporal. He was wounded on Oct. 4th in the Mense Argonne Battle and died later in the hospital.

He leaves to mourn his loss a mother and father of this city, four sisters—Mrs. Violet Thayer of Charlevoix; Mrs. Wm. Cole of Ellsworth; Mrs. Harry Keaton and Mrs. Floyd Alexander of Flint, and two brothers—Sidney of this place and Guy of Flint, besides other relatives and a host of friends.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation of the many acts of kindness extended to us by friends during the funeral of our soldier son and brother, Clinton Sedgman.

THE SEDGMAN FAMILY.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gorman wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown them through the death of their baby girl and also for the beautiful flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gorman.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

By C. N. Lurie

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

TO EXPECT AND TO THINK.

DO NOT use the word "expect" in the sense of suppose, believe or think. For example, the use of the word "expect" in the following sentence is incorrect: "I expect that your lessons are done." The verb "expect" means "to look forward to as probable or certain; to await, to feel assured of something before it occurs; to anticipate;" as, "I expect to go to church next Sunday, if the weather is fine." Usually we use "expect" when we look forward to an event with interest or desire. "One should not say, 'I expect it is,' still less, 'I expect it was.' We cannot expect the present or the past," says one authority.

"England expects that every man will do his duty," was the signal hoisted by the famous British naval commander, Lord Nelson, at the mast-head of his flagship, before engaging the French fleet in the battle off Trafalgar.

THE SANDMAN STORY

OLD FOX'S REVENGE

OLD GRANDPA FOX, as he was called by all the young wood animals, had been bothered so much by the youngsters that he was at his wits' end to know how to punish them.

One day he was sitting outside his door dozing in the sun when Billy Squirrel and his brother climbed into the tree over Grandpa Fox and let down on a string a wiggly turtle, which scared old Grandpa so he tumbled out of his chair.

Another day he fell asleep in his chair and when he awoke and picked up his pipe, which had fallen on the ground, what had Tommie Rabbit and the Squirrel boys done but filled the pipe with black pepper, so poor Grandpa Fox almost sneezed his head off.

Another time they stole his spectacles and put in a magnifying glass, so that everything looked so big to him that he was afraid to move.

But the limit of his patience was reached when they tied strings to all the sticks of wood and when Grandpa Fox went out to get his wood in for the night as fast as he picked it up those bad youngsters would tug at the string and down it would fall.

Grandpa Fox could not see real well in the half-light and it took him a long time to find out what was happening, but when he did he snapped off the string from the sticks in a hurry, you may be sure, looking very angry. He knew better than to talk, for that was just what the youngsters wanted, and Grandpa Fox, having been young himself, had not forgotten his youthful tricks.

"I'll fix those youngsters," said Grandpa, as he sat smoking by the fire that night, "I may be getting old, but I think I can scrape up a thought or two that will pay them off in good shape."

For a long time after that Grandpa Fox was very busy every evening, and if the Squirrel brothers and Tommie Rabbit had watched they might have noticed the light burning late in Grandpa's cabin.

He chuckled as he worked, and though it was very delicate work Grandpa felt it would be well worth all the trouble and care he was taking.

A basket of big nuts stood on one side of his chair and from these Grandpa Fox was very carefully taking all the meat, leaving the shells in two pieces, which fitted perfectly together when empty.

These he filled with pepper—red pepper, too—and then glued the shells so nicely that even an expert could not have told they had been opened.

These, of course, were being prepared especially for the Squirrel brothers.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"WHERE AM I AT?"

IT IS not correct to use the word "at" or the word "to" after the word "where," as in the sentences, "Where were you at last Sunday?" and "Where were you going to?" Say, instead, "Where were you last Sunday?" and "Where were you going?" This is one example of many in English in which the speaker or writer uses too many words to express his meaning. The sentence, "Where am I at?" attracted much attention about 20 years ago when it was used by a speaker in the house of representatives. The member was making a long speech, filled with long sentences. Not much attention was being paid to him, and he "lost his place" while uttering one of his long sentences. So he turned to the speaker and asked: "Mr. Speaker, where am I at?" The reporters took advantage of the opportunity to poke fun at him, and the phrase was repeated and laughed at all over the United States.

THE ADDING MACHINE.

THE Babylonians had the first recorded mechanical aid to addition, a "pebble-board" with small stones which were shifted about. The Chinese abacus, with its beads on wires, is also very ancient. Pascal, in 1641, invented the first adding machine with dials. In 1820 C. X. Thomas brought out the first successful all-round calculating machine.

"Dad," said the financier's son, running into his father's office, "lend me $600."
"What for, my boy?"
"I've got a sure tip on the market."
"How much shall we make out of it?" asked the old man cautiously.
"A couple of hundred sure," replied the boy eagerly. "That's a hundred each."

EQUAL PAY

THERE is one big issue to settle in the world of business and labor, the issue of equal pay for equal work. Evidences of injustice are found everywhere. One woman held a position in a college for which she was paid $1,800 a year. She resigned because she needed a higher salary; a man took the position. He gets a salary of $5,000. The United States government also pays women less than men in many positions.

There are several reasons for this state of affairs. The fact that women were not voters is one of them. That will now cease to be a deterrent.

Then, women do not insist on being justly remunerated. Women are still new in business. It is something of a wonder to them that they are considered worth a salary at all. They accept what is offered, and make no kick when it is less than their brother gets for a similar position.

Then, unfortunately, women often do not give as good an account of themselves as men. Many women do as well as men, a few do better, but many do not do as well. It is these who make it possible to exploit the rest.

It lies with women, finally, as to whether or not they shall receive equal pay. It should be demanded by every woman. Also, the training of women for earning a living must be improved, and the standards of her work bettered.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ASSASSIN."

IN 1090 there was founded in Asia a secret society known as the "Fedavis" or "Devoted Ones," the members of which were pledged to implicit blind obedience to the orders of their superiors, no matter what direction these orders might take. Hassan ben Sabbah, the Persian, who founded the dreaded order, was extremely explicit in the rules he laid down for the government of the organization, which was partly religious and partly secular in nature. The members of the lower sections of the society were kept in total ignorance of the teachings and aims of the body to which they belonged, and it was impressed upon them that unflinching obedience was their only key to success in this life and happiness in the next.

In order to give them a foretaste of the joys which were in store for them, provided they followed instructions, Hassan ben Sabbah directed that they be given a specified ration of hashish, or hemp—a narcotic which produced effects analogous to those resulting from the use of opium—and from this practice the members of the society became known as hashishin or hemp-eaters. Europeans slightly altered the word to "assassin" and applied it to anyone guilty of murder, this crime being a favorite among the Fedavis.

A FEW SALADS.

A SALAD is a part of the menu, which, if well prepared, is the chief attraction. A well made salad should be an ornament as well as a food. The following are unusual but good:

Russian Salad.
Cut crisp, tender celery into bits, add a small can of Russian caviar, and the same quantity of anchovies as caviare. Add as much tomato pulp as celery and mix with mayonnaise. Serve in tomato cups.

Spanish Salad.
Cut into dice three slices of stale bread. Add an equal quantity of cold cooked potatoes, three tomatoes sliced and one onion chopped fine. Rub the salad bowl with the cut side of a clove of garlic, put in the salad and pour over plenty of French dressing.

Onion Salad.
Slice a large Spanish onion and let stand in water for two hours; drain, put into a chopping bowl and chop; arrange in a nest of lettuce with minced parsley and put over a highly seasoned French dressing.

Strawberry Salad.
Arrange tender white lettuce in a salad bowl in cup shapes or as individual salads on plates. Fill each lettuce cup with fine ripe strawberries; add a tablespoonful of seasoned mayonnaise in each cup.

Pea and Walnut Salad.
Take equal quantities of cooked peas and English walnuts broken in bits. Sprinkle with French dressing, let stand half an hour and mix with mayonnaise dressing. Serve in lemon cups or on lettuce.

Shad Roe Salad.
Cook the roe in salted acidulated water with a slice of onion for twenty minutes. Drain, cool, cut into slices and sprinkle with French dressing. Add a cucumber, diced, and a few diced olives. Mix with mayonnaise dressing and serve on lettuce; garnish with shredded green peppers.

No Actresses Before 1656.
There are so many actresses today that it is hard to believe there was a time when there was none.

Yet, before 1656 A. D., no civilized country could boast a woman "star." There was no law against it, but it was considered a disgrace for a woman to appear on the stage, and woman's parts, as in the Chinese theater of today, were taken by boys or men.

Rose Coleman broke the ice in 1656. She appeared in "The Siege of Rhodes," and her success was so great that scores of English women followed her example, and France, Germany and other nations followed suit in haste.

AT THE TABLE

All can rule the great that cannot reach the small.—Spenser.

AVOID any little mannerism that indicates extreme fussiness or finicalness of taste. The person who appears to be examining minutely every morsel that he takes on his fork makes one feel that he is suspicious that the food is not entirely what it ought to be. So, too, the person who samples every viand very carefully before beginning in earnest to eat is too finical to be a pleasant table companion.

Large pieces of bread are broken into smaller pieces before being buttered and carried to the mouth.

Cake may be broken and eaten like bread or crackers or it may be eaten with a fork.

Celery, olives, radishes, salted nuts, bon bons, preserved ginger and other trifles are eaten from the fingers, but berries, melons, and grape-fruit must be eaten with a spoon. Bananas are generally eaten with a fork, peaches, apples and pears are peeled, quartered and cut into small pieces and then picked up with the fingers.

Grapes and small plums are eaten from the fingers, and the stones or skins taken into the hand and carried to the plate, never dropped from the lips. Prune seeds are best pressed out with the spoon before the fruit is eaten, and then laid to one side on the plate.

Bones of fowl, game or chops must not be taken in the finger, but green corn may be eaten that way.

Artichokes, source of much grief to the inexperienced diner, if served hot or cold with sauce must be broken apart, leaf by leaf, and the tip dipped in the sauce, and eaten from the fingers. The heart is cut up and eaten with a fork.

Finger bowls are provided merely to moisten the finger tips, not for a general handwashing.

Your host who inquires what portion of poultry or game, raw meat or well done you prefer will thank you for a definite answer. If you really have no preference say so definitely. Do not enumerate various cuts that appeal to you.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky level.

LUCRETIA

THOUGH Lucretia was the name borne by the notorious daughter of Borgia, it is one of the quaintest and most old-fashioned of names in this country. It is a far cry from ancient Rome to modern New England, but the name fits completed the transition with very few changes to mark the successful stages of its evolution.

There are two theories among etymologists in regard to the original source of Lucretia. Some contend that it comes from the Latin word Lucrum, meaning "gain," and for that reason Lucretia is said to signify gain.

On the other hand, there is much evidence to prove that its real source is in the Latin word for "light," lux. Many feminine names have been derived from this root and the same word has supplied surnames without number.

It is believed, therefore, that the noted old gens Lucretius from which Lucretia is directly descended, was only another of the derivatives of lux. "Lucre," combining the fleece under the midnight lamp, the famous old Roman tale, inspired Shakespeare to write one of his earliest poems. Despite her notoriety, Lucretia Borgia probably established the name of Lucretia in Italy, and in early modern times it was one of the few classical names to be revived.

France has a Lucrece, which is popular, and England imported Lucretia in the eighteenth century.

Lucretia's talismanic stone is the red-hearted ruby. It has the power to bring her strength of body, an invincible spirit and success in every undertaking. Tuesday is her lucky day, and 6 her lucky number.

As to Names.

The late Champ Clark was christened James Beauchamp Clark, but he voluntarily dropped the first name, and later because people would insist on mispronouncing "Beauchamp," he rechristened himself with the name by which he was generally known. His case reminds us of the old darkey's plan. The latter was asked: "What have you named your baby, Rastus?" "Sam Pro Tem Johnson, sah."

"What's the Pro Tem for?"

The Wreckers

It was along about ten o'clock when the boss closed his desk with a bang and said we'd better say it off for the night. I walked up-town with him and as we were passing the Bullard he turned in to ask the night clerk if Collingwood was in his room. The answer was six; that the young New Yorker hadn't been seen since dinner. On the way out we saw Mr. Van Britt at the telegraph alcove. He was handing in a thick bunch of telegrams for transmission, and he rather pointedly turned the sheet face down upon the marble slab when we came along, as much as to say "it's none of your business what I'm doing."

It struck me as sort of curious that he should have so much wire correspondence when he claimed to be taking a rest, and why he was so careful not to let us get a glimpse of what it was all about. But the whole thing was now so horribly muddled that a little mystery more or less on anybody's part couldn't make much difference; and that was the thought I took to bed with me a little later after we reached our rooms in the railroad club.

CHAPTER XVII

The Beginning of the End

However much the Hatch people may have wanted to avoid publicity regarding the change of ownership and policies in the Storage & Warehouse reorganization, the prompt announcement of a general strike of the employees was enough to make every newspaper in the state sit up and take notice.

We had the Mountaineer at the breakfast-table in the club grill-room on the morning of the day when the strike was advertised to go into effect. There was a news story, with big headlines in red ink, and also an editorial. Cantrell didn't say anything against the railroad company. His comments were those of an observer who wished to be straight-forward and fair to all concerned, but his editorial did not spare the silly local stockholders whose swapping and selling had made the coup possible.

Cantrell, himself, mild-eyed and looking as if he'd got out of bed about three hours too early, drifted into the grill-room and took a seat at our table before we were through.

"I wanted to be decent about it, Norcross," he said, forestalling anything that the boss might be going to say about the editorial in the Mountaineer. "I'm trying to believe that the men higher up in your railroad councils haven't fathered this Hatch scheme of consolidation—which is more than some of the other pencil-pushers will do for you, I'm afraid. Thanks to your publicity measures, everybody believes that you still hold the whip-hand over the combination with your ground leases. I'm not asking what you propose to do; I am merely taking it for granted that you are going to stick to your policy, and hoping that you will come and tell me about it when you are ready to talk."

"I shall do just that," the boss promised; and I guess he would have been glad to let the matter drop at this, only Cantrell wouldn't.

"I lost three good hours' sleep this morning on the chance of catching you here at table," the editor went on. "A little whisper leaked in over the wires last night, or, rather, early this morning, that set me to thinking. You haven't been having any trouble with your own employees lately, have you, Norcross?"

"Not a bit in the world. Why?"

"There is some little excitement, with the public taking a hand in it. There were indignation meetings held last night in a number of the towns along your lines, and resolutions were passed protesting against the action of the new combination in cutting wages, and asserting that public sentiment would be with the C. S. & W. employees if they are forced to carry out their threat of striking at noon today. The whisper that I spoke of intimated that the protest might extend to the railroad employees."

"There's nothing in it," said the boss decisively. "I suppose you mean in the way of a sympathetic strike, and that is entirely improbable. I imagine very few of the C. S. & W. employees belong to any of the labor unions."

"A strike on the railroad would hit you pretty hard just now, wouldn't it?" Cantrell asked.

Mr. Norcross dodged the question. "We're not going to have a strike," he averred; and since we had finished our breakfast, he made a business excuse and we slid out.

When we reached the office we found Mr. Van Britt on hand, reading the morning paper.

"You don't get around as early as you might," was the little millionaire's comment when the boss walked in and opened up his desk. "I've been waiting nearly a half-hour for you to show up. Seen the papers?"

The boss nodded.

"I don't mean the strike business; I mean the market quotations."

"No; I didn't look at them."

"They are interesting. P. S. L. Common went up another three points yesterday. It closed at 98 and a fraction. You know what that means, Graham. It means that Uncle Breckenridge and his crowd are already joyfully discounting your coming resignation. Somebody has given them a wire tip that you are as good as down and out, and unless a miracle of some sort can be pulled off, I guess the tip is a straight one. Strong as he is, Chadwick can't carry you alone."

"Drop it," snapped the boss irritably. And then: "Have you come to tell me that you have reconsidered that foot letter you wrote me last night?"

"Not in a million years," returned the escaped captive airily. "I am here this morning as a paying patron of the Pioneer Short Line. I want to hire a special train to go—well, anywhere I please on your jerkwater railroad. The Eight-Fifteen will do, with Buck Chandler to run it."

"Pshaw! take your own car and any crew you please. We are not selling transportation to you."

"Yes, you are; I'm going to pay for that train, and what's more, I want your written receipt for the money. I need it in my business. Then, if Chandler should happen to get gay and dump me into the ditch somewhere, I can sue you for damages."

"All right; if you will persist in joking with me it's going to cost you something. How far do you want your train to run?"

"Oh, I don't know; anywhere the notion prods me—say to the west end and back, with as many stops as I see fit to make, and perhaps a run over the branches."

I saw the boss make a few figures on a pad under his hand.

"It would cost anybody else, roughly, something like five hundred dollars. On account of your little joke it's going to cost you a cold thousand."

Mr. Van Britt took out his check-book and a fountain pen and solemnly made out the check.

"Here you are," he said, flipping the check over to the boss's desk. "Now shell out that receipt, so that I'll have it to show if anybody wants to know how much you've gouged me. Since you're making the accommodation cost me a dollar a minute, how long have I got to wait?"

Mr. Norcross said something that sounded like "d-n," scribbled a memorandum of the thousand-dollar payment on a sheet of the scratch-pad and handed it over, saying: "The order for the car includes my cook and porter, and something to eat; we'll throw these in with the transportation, and if the car is ditched and you sue for damages, we'll file a cross-bill for hotel accommodations. Now go away and work off your little attack of lunacy. I'm busy."

The C. S. & W. strike—as our wires told us—went into effect promptly on the stroke of noon, and a train from the west, arriving late in the afternoon, brought Ripley.

"The conditions all along the line are almost revolutionary," was Ripley's summing-up of the situation. "Generally speaking, the public is not holding its responsible as yet, though of course there are croakers who are saying that it is entirely a railroad move, and predicting that we won't do anything to interfere with the new graft."

"Cantrell says the public sentiment is altogether on the side of the C. S. & W. strikers," the boss put in.

"It is; angrily so. There is hot talk of a boycott to be extended to everything sold or handled by the Hatch syndicate. I hope there won't be any effort made to introduce strike-breakers. In the present state of affairs that would mean arson and rioting and bloody murder."

"I wired you once more about those ground leases, Ripley. Do you still think you can make them hold?"

"If Hatch breaks the conditions, we'll give him the fight of his life," was the confident rejoinder.

"But that will mean a long contest in the courts. The Supreme court is a full year behind its docket, and the delay will inevitably multiply your few 'croakers' by many thousands. But that isn't the worst of it. Hatch has a better hold on us than the law's delay." And to this third member of his staff Mr. Norcross told the story of the political trap into which Collingwood and the New York stock-jobbers had betrayed the railroad management.

Ripley comment was a little like Hornack's; less profane, perhaps, but also less hopeful.

"Good Lord!" he ejaculated. "So that is what Hatch has had up his sleeve? I don't know how you feel about it, but I should say that it is all over but the shouting. If the Dunton crowd had been deliberately trying to wreck the property, they couldn't have gone about it in any surer way."

"That is the way it looked to me, Ripley, at first; but I've had a chance to sleep on it—as you haven't. The gun that can't be spiked in some way has never yet been built. I have the names of the eleven men who were bribed. Hatch was daring enough to give them to me. Holding the affidavits which they were foolish enough to give him, Hatch can make them swear to anything he pleases. But if I could get those affidavits I'd go to these men separately and make each one tell me how much he had been paid by Bullock for his vote."

"Well, what then?"

"Then I should make every mother's son of them come across with the full amount of the bribe, on pain of an exposure which the dirtiest politician in this state couldn't afford to face. That would settle it. Hatch couldn't work the same game a second time."

We were closing our desks to go to dinner when Fred May came in to say that a delegation of the pay-roll men was outside and wanting to have a word with the "Big Boss." Mr. Norcross stopped with his desk curtain half drawn down.

"What is it, Fred?" he asked.

"I don't know," said the Pittsburgher. "I should call it a grievance committee, if it wasn't so big. And they don't seem to be mad about anything. Bart Hoskins is doing the talking for them."

"Send them in," was the curt command, and a minute later the inner office was about three-fourths filled up with a shuffling crowd of P. S. L. men.

The chief looked the crowd over. There was a bunch of train and engine men, a squad from the shops, and a bigger one from the yards. Also, the wire service had turned out a gang of linemen and half a dozen operators.

"You Men Don't Want to Let Your Sympathies Carry You Too Far."

"Well, men, let's have it," said Mr. Norcross, not too sharply. "My dinner's getting cold."

"We'll not be keepin' you above the hollow half of a minute, Mister Norcross," said the big, bearded freight conductor who acted as spokesman. "About this C. S. & W. strike that went on today: we ain't got no kick comin' with you, n'r with the company, Mister Norcross, but it looks like it's up to us to do somethin', and we didn't want to do it without hittin' square out from the shoulder. There ain't nobody knows yet what's goin' to be done, but whatever it is, we want you to know that it ain't done ag'inst you n'r the railroad company."

The boss had handed wage earners too long not to be able to suspect what was in the wind.

"You men don't want to let your sympathies carry you too far," he cautioned. "When you take up another fellow's quarrel you want to be pretty sure that you're not going to hit your friends in the scrap."

Hoskins grinned understandingly, and I guess the boss was a little puzzled by the nods and winks that went around among the silent members of the delegation; at least, I know I was.

"That's all right," Hoskins said. "Be in the big boss, you've got to talk that way. But what I was aimin' to say is that there'll be a train-load 'r two of strike-breakers-a-careerin' along here in a day 'r so, and we ain't figurin' on lettin' 'em get past Portal City, if that far."

"That's up to you," said Mr. Norcross brusquely. "If you start anything in the way of a riot—"

"Excuse me. There ain't goin' to be no riotin', and no company property mashed up. Mr. Van Britt, he—"

It was right here that an odd thing happened. Con Corrigan, a big, two-fisted freight engineer standing directly behind Hoskins, reached an arm around the speaker's neck and choked him so suddenly that Hoskins' sentence ended in a gasping chuckle. When the garrulous arm was withdrawn the conductor looked around sort of foolishly and said: "I'm thinking that's about all we wanted to say, ain't it, boys?" and the deputation filed out as solemnly as it had come in.

I guess Mr. Norcross wasn't left wholly in the dark when the tramping footfalls of the committee died away in the corridor. That unintentional mention of Mr. Van Britt's name looked as if it might open up some more possibilities, though what they were I couldn't imagine, and I don't believe the general manager could, either.

After that, things rocked along pretty easy until after dinner. Instead of going right back to the office from the club, Mr. Norcross drifted into the smoking-room and filled a pipe. In the course of a few minutes, Major Kendrick dropped in and pulled up a chair. I don't know what they talked about, but after a little while, when the boss got up to go, I heard him say something that gave the key to the most of what had gone before, I guess.

"Have you seen or heard anything of Collingwood since yesterday?"

The good old major shook his head.

"They're tellin' me that he's over in his rooms at the Bullard, drinkin' himself to death. If he wasn't altogether past redemption, sah, he would have had the decency to get out of town befo' he turned loose all holts that way; he would, for a fact, Graham."

At that, Mr. Norcross explained in just a few words why Collingwood hadn't gone—why he couldn't go. Whereupon the old Kentuckian looked graver than ever.

"That that spells trouble, Graham. Hatch is simply invitin' the unde-taken. Howie isn't what you'd call a dangerous man, but he is totally irresponsible, even when he's sober."

"We ought to get him away from here," was the boss' decision. "He is an added menace while he stays."

I didn't hear what the major said to that, because Little Rags, Mr. Perkins' office boy, had just come in with a note which he was asking me to give to Mr. Norcross. I did it; and after the note had been glanced at, the chief said, kind of bitterly, to the major:

"You can never fall so far that you can't fall a little farther; have you ever remarked that, major?" And then he went on to explain: "Perkins, our Desert Division superintendent, says that the 'locals' of the various railroad labor unions have just notified him of the unanimous passage of a strike vote—the strike to go into effect at midnight."

"A strike?—on the railroad? Why, Graham, son, you don't mean it!"

"The men seem to mean it—which is much more to the purpose. They are striking in sympathy with the C. S. & W. employees. I fancy that settles our little experiment in good railroading definitely, major. Dunton doesn't want a receivership, but he'll have to take one now. The bottom will drop out of the stock and break the market when this strike news gets on the wire, and that will end it. I wish to God there were some way in which I could save Mr. Chadwick; he has trusted me, major, and I—I've failed him!"

CHAPTER XVIII

The Murder Madman

I knew what we were up against when we headed down to the railroad lay-out, the chief and I, leaving the good old major thoughtfully puffing his cigar in the club smoking-room. With a strike due to be pulled off in a little more than three hours there were about a million things that would have to be jerked around into shape and propped up so that they could stand by themselves while the Shore Line was taking a vacation. And there was only a little handful of us in the headquarters to do the jerking and propping.

It was precisely in a crisis like this that the boss could shine. From the minute we hit the tremendous job he was all there, carrying the whole map of the Short Line in his head, thinking straight from the shoulder, and never missing a lick; and I don't believe anybody would ever have suspected that he was a beaten man, pushed to the ropes in the final round with the grafters, his reputation as a successful railroad manager as good as gone, and his warm little love-dream knocked sky-winding forever and a day.

Luckily, we found Fred May still at his desk, and he was promptly clamped to the telephone and told to get busy spreading the hurry call. In half an hour every relief operator we had in Portal City was in the wire-room, and the back-breaking job of preparing a thousand miles of railroad for a sudden tie-up was in full swing. Mr. Perkins, as division superintendent, was in touch with the local labor leaders. Persuading and insisting by turns, Mr. Norcross fought out the necessary compromises with the unions. All ordinary traffic would be suspended at midnight, but passenger trains en route were to be run through to our connecting line terminals east and west, live stock trains were to be laid out only where there were feeding corrals, and perishable freight was to be taken to its destination wherever that might be.

The strikers agreed to allow the mail trains to run without interruption, with our promise that they would not carry passengers. Hoskins and his committee bucked a little at this, but got down when they were shown that they could not afford to risk a clash with the Government. This exception admitted, another followed, as a matter of course. If the mail trains were to be run, some of the telegraph operators would have to remain on duty, at least to the extent of handling train orders.

With these generalities out of the way, we got down to details. "Fire-alarm" wires were sent to the various cities and towns on the lines asking for immediate information regarding food and fuel supplies, and the strike leaders were notified that for sheer humanity's sake, they would have to permit the handling of provision trains in cases where they were absolutely needed.

By eleven o'clock the tangle was getting itself pretty well straightened out. Some of the trains had already been abandoned, and the others were moving along to the agreed-upon destinations. Kirgan had taken hold in the Portal City yard, and by putting on extra crews was getting the needful shifting and car sorting into shape, and the Portal City employees, acting upon their own initiative, were picketing the yard and company buildings to protect them from looters or fire-setters. Mr. Van Britt's special, so the wires told us, was at Lesterburg; and it was likely to stay there; and Mr. Van Britt, himself, couldn't be reached.

It was at half-past eleven that we got the first real yelp from somebody who was getting pinched. It came in the shape of a wire from the Strathcona night operator. A party of men—"mine owners" the operator called them—had just heard of the impending railroad tie-up. They had been meaning to come in on the regular night train, but that had been abandoned. So now they were offering all kinds of money for a special to bring them to Portal City. It was represented that there were millions at stake. Couldn't we do something?

Mr. Norcross had kept Hoskins and a few of the other local strike leaders where he could get hold of them, and he put the request up to them as a matter that was now out of his hands. Would they allow him to run a one-car special from the gold camp to Portal City after midnight? It was for them to say.

Hoskins and his accomplices went off to talk it over with some of the other men. When the big freight conductor came back he was alone and was grinning good-naturedly.

"We ain't aimin' to make the company lose any good money that comes a-rollin' down the hill at it, Mister Norcross," he said. "Cinch these here Strathcona hurry-boys for all you can get out of 'em, and if you'll lend us the loan of the wires, we'll pass the word to let the special come on through."

It was sure the funniest strike I ever saw or heard of, and I guess the boss thought so, too—with all this good-natured bargaining back and forth; but there was nothing more said, and I carried the word to Mr. Perkins, directing him to have arrangements made for the running of a one-car special from Strathcona for the hurry folks.

Past that, things rocked along until the hands of the big standard-time clock in the dispatcher's room pointed to midnight. Norris, who was holding down the commercial wire, came over to the counter railing just then with a New York message. I saw the boss' eyes flash and the little bunchy muscle-swellings of anger come and go on the edge of his jaw as he read it, and then he handed it to me.

"You may indorse that 'No Answer' and file it when you go back to the office," he said shortly, and then he went on talking to Donohue, telling him how to handle the trains which were still out and moving to their tie-up destinations.

NOT THE ONLY ONE

There Are Other East Jordan People Similarly Situated.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of East Jordan residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question.

Erle Farmer, railroad engineer, East Jordan, says: "Seven years ago I had an awful lame back. I had a sore feeling right across the small of my back that stayed with me for days. I had stitches in my back when I wasn't able to move at all and my back was always lame. When I stooped over I could hardly get up again. I surely was in a poor shape. Mornings I felt so tired I hardly had enough strength to get up. Black specks came before me and were so thick at times I couldn't see. Through the night I often had to get up and the secretions were not only painful but always filled with dark sediment. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a few boxes at Gidley & Mac-Drug Store and they fixed me up in good shape."

AUSTRIAN MUSIC SUFFERS BY WAR

Large Royalties From United States Held Up.

CUSTODIAN NOW HOLDS FEES

Leo Fall and Franz Lehar Are Trying to Get Possession of Their Money—Are Millionaires on Paper, but if Royalties Are Paid in Crowns at the Pre-war Rate It Will Mean Heavy Losses—Works of Enemy Authors Now Unprotected.

Austria is an export country for dramatic literature, chiefly comic plays and musical comedies and for music in general. Before the war the success of certain types of plays of Viennese origin, especially operettas, depended entirely on the reception in the United States and England. Royalties of many thousands of dollars used to flow regularly to Vienna from overseas. When the United States entered the war this was stopped and all royalties were treated as property of alien enemies and put under the supervision of the public trustee. Since the conclusion of peace several well-known Austrian authors—among them Leo Fall and Franz Lehar—have repeatedly tried to get into the possession of their money, which increased in value from day to day with the rising exchange rate of the dollar. Hitherto all these efforts appear to have failed.

It has been reported here that America intends to release the sequestered property of private persons of formerly hostile countries. But it has become doubtful whether they would derive much benefit from the realization of this promise, as it is intended, according to the latest news, to pay the money not to the different owners direct, but to the Austrian government, which is supposed to receive the sum in dollars and to hand them over to the interested parties in crowns at the pre-war rate of exchange.

Millionaires in Paper Crowns.

Although a profitable transaction for the state, this would be but a poor consolation for the ultimate receivers of the money, considering that the crown has today less than one one-hundredth part of its normal value. The patience of writers and composers, who were once accustomed to incomes in dollars, is therefore put to a hard proof. Theoretically they are multimillionaires in crowns, but practically it is quite uncertain whether they will ever see these millions.

Still, they would soon forget this bad luck if they could find a sufficient compensation in new connections with the United States. As soon as the war was over American theatrical managers and publishers' agents made their appearance in Vienna and purchased Austrian literary and musical works. It looked at first as if with the reopening of the gates of the dollar paradise a new period of prosperity had arrived for popular authors. But there arose another difficulty. This time it was the copyright question. America takes the position that the copyright agreements were violated during the war by Germany and Austria and that they have not yet been re-established. This means that in the United States the works of German and Austrian authors are now unprotected.

Trying to Protect Authors.

A big American publisher's firm has recently sent a circular letter to several Austrian and German authors of the foremost rank, in which it alludes to this difficulty. The firm says that it has done what it could to bring about a favorable decision in America and that it has so far in vain invited the German authors and their Austrian colleagues to lodge a joint protest with their respective governments.

The American government, the letter proceeds, will not protect the German and Austrian works until American works are assured the same protection in these two countries. As things stand at present it is dangerous for American publishers to risk much money for printing German or Austrian works, because in case of success any other firm could come out with a copy of the edition. To remove this condition the firm in question declares the closest co-operation of the German and Austrian authors is indispensable.

In the meantime an attempt is being made to assure some of the most popular Austrian authors their royalties, whose payment has been prevented by the war. It is said that in the case of Lehar alone they amount to about $30,000, or from 5,000,000 to 8,000,000 paper crowns.

PASTOR A WORKMAN

Will Leave Preaching for a Factory to Study Tollers.

The Rev. Joseph Meyer, Jr., pastor of the Budd Park Christian church at Kansas City, Mo., the other day arranged to lay aside his ministerial garb indefinitely and enter a Kansas City factory as a laborer in order that he might learn about men.

The minister's resignation was placed in the hands of the congregation one night.

He explained that he believed a close association with men who toil physically would make him a better pastor.

SECRETS WILL OUT

A new use has been found for ether, and the criminal element of our population is not pleased. In time their uneasiness may develop into a panic. It has been demonstrated by practical experiment that a small amount of ether administered to a person—an amount sufficient to place him under its influence and yet leaving him conscious—will cause that person to respond readily to any question, to babble his inmost secrets.

Just what effect information secured in this manner will have in law is not known, as its admissibility is yet to be ascertained. But the fact remains that this opens up a possible way of detecting crime and of solving many of the mysteries that now baffle the police of the country.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE TEMPLE THEATRE NEXT WEEK

The theatre will be open every night next week starting Monday with Viola Dana in "The Off Shore Pirate" and Snooky the Humanzee in "You'll Be Surprised" making two special features combined into a very strong show that is built to make you laugh. Viola Dana is one of the Temples most popular stars and Snooky the monkey ranks for first honors in the comedy line, it will be a great show for the whole family and will make you forget your troubles.

Tuesday, beautiful Grace Darmand in "The Beautiful Gambler" the story of the frenzied days before Nevada prohibited games of chance you can't help being thrilled by this breathless photoplay.

Wednesday, Wm. Russell in "Cheater Reformed". This is a wonderful picture with a good moral lesson and interesting from start to finish. On the same program is the second episode of the "Lion Man" making seven reels of a program that is made to entertain you.

Thursday, Elaine Hammerstein in "The Point of View" the story of a girl who changed her view of life and won happiness instead of sorrow, a picture that will live long in your mind.

Friday, Tom Moore in "Toby's Bow" you park your troubles outside when you see Tom Moore in this picture. Its crammed full of giggles, smiles, laughs and roars.

Saturday will mark the starting of a new serial with Eileen Sedgwick in "The Diamond Queen" which promises to be the best chapter play seen here to date. There will also be a two reel Western "The Fighting Actors" the News weekly and a comedy making a six reel program.

Sunday, Douglas Fairbanks returns in "When the Clouds Roll By" which is a genuine novelty, he simply carries you off your feet, new and original in story and action, full of pep and comedy.

DISCOVERER OF HUBAM CLOVER VISITS STATE

That Michigan increase plots of Hubam clover, the new crop which has attracted so much attention from growers all over the country, compare very favorably with those in any other states, is the opinion expressed by Prof. H. D. Hughes of Iowa, the discoverer of the crop. Professor Hughes visited the plots at the Michigan Agricultural College last week, and was enthusiastic about the work with the new crop in the state. Michigan increases are said to be larger than those anywhere else in the country.

Alabama and Iowa, two of the leading Hubam states, have both suffered difficulties with the new clover this year. Excessive rains in the southern state, frosts in Iowa damaged stands this spring.

"Late seedings of Hubam were somewhat injured in Michigan by draughts" says Prof. J. F. Cox of the Michigan Agricultural College, "but earlier seedings are generally in good shape. This crop often makes a disappointing appearance during the first month of growth because of the fact that it starts tardily. This has caused many growers with really excellent stands to think the crop a failure and put in another crop.

"Remarkably rapid growth of the Hubam plants after being once established will carry them past ordinary weeds, however, and if plants are present from one inch to a foot apart in the rows, clean cultivation should be given and a good seed crop expected. "Those fortunate enough to have stands of this new crop may feel certain of a strong demand for seed."

If you expect things to go wrong you seldom will be disappointed.

Garden Notes

(By M. A. C. Horticultural Dept.)

Keep potato and tomato plants well sprayed with Bordeaux Mixture to protect them against the blight.

Cultivation of the new strawberry bed should be thorough and frequent and continue as long as the plants are growing in the fall.

All seed stalks of rhubarb plants should be cut out promptly, as soon as they appear. Seed production exhausts plant food, which should otherwise be used by the plant.

Don't continue cutting the asparagus bed too late in the season. Remember that the plants must be given time to store up food in the roots for producing next year's crop.

It is a good plan to apply a good top dressing of manure to the asparagus bed at the end of the cutting season. It may then be thoroughly cultivated into the soil and will not interfere with early growth in the spring.

Why do peony buds often form but never develop into flowers? This is often due to a poor dry soil. Fertilize well, mulch the plants during hot weather, and give them plenty of water during the blooming season. Try it.

NO ROOM FOR CRITICISM

In the city of London there are hundreds of thousands of people unemployed—five million of them in Great Britain.

Empty stomachs are as numerous as the leaves upon the trees.

One section of London is gaunt and filled with misery. There is no work, no money and but little bread.

In another section—the center of aristocracy and fashion—gayety reigns supreme. Immense sums of money are spent on the pleasures of a single night. It flows continually in the production of social excitement.

There is no want, no hunger, no lack of bread there.

But are we Americans in a position to criticize England's aristocracy for its frivolity in the face of unemployment and misery? We are not.

Millions are out of employment in this country. Our cities swarm with homes where the larders are empty and little stomachs are more so.

Yet in Atlantic City a prize fight is to be pulled off between an American and a Frenchman—between Dempsey and Carpentier.

Men will journey from every state in the union to see that fight. They will pay from $10 to $1,000 a seat to see two men beat each other up.

A broken nose smeared with blood will elicit no feeling of pity or concern only renewed howls of joy or chagrin.

There will be no empty stomachs at that fight. No little children crying for bread will witness that gory contest of brutality.

The money spent for the privilege of seeing that fight would furnish a royal feast for all of the people in the United States who now hunger for bread.

Indeed, it will not allay the suffering of one.

No, we are in no position to criticize the English, or any other nation of people, so far as squandering our substance and neglecting our unemployed are concerned.

Did you ever know a woman on seeing a baby didn't remark, "Isn't he cute?"
