Tony Zoulek Barns Burn

Loss Is Heavy. No Insurance Carried.

Fire of an unknown origin completely destroyed the barns and out-buildings on the Anthony Zoulek farm Wednesday night about eleven o'clock. The barn and grainery contained considerable farm machinery and these, together with the buildings are a total loss as no insurance was carried. It was with difficulty that the horses were rescued and about 100 chickens were burned.

The family were sleeping and were awakened by the crackling of the flames to find all the buildings ablaze and the dwelling fire in several places. It was with considerable difficulty that the dwelling was saved. Tony and his brother, Ted Zoulek, were quite badly burned about the arms and feet in their effort to save property.

Mr. Zoulek sold his farm north of the city and adjoining the County Farm a few months ago and purchased the former Fred Kowalske farm located west of Monroe Creek. He was just nicely getting squared away in his new location and the loss is a serious one.

BOYNE CITY TO CELEBRATE FOURTH

Have Plans Under Way For Monster Celebration

The Boyne Citizen in a recent issue, contains the following article regarding its Fourth of July celebration:

"Last year the county celebration of the Fourth was held at Charlevoix, next year it will be at East Jordan but this year it will be held at Boyne City and it is up to our citizens to make it a success.

"Aside from the usual features which attend a Fourth of July celebration, a commendable feature of this year's entertainment will be the home coming and get-together movement which is expected to more closely unite the citizens of Charlevoix county."

Under an agreement entered into last year, the three cities of the county were to celebrate once every three years, Charlevoix last year, Boyne City this year and East Jordan next year.

East Jordan citizens should co-operate with our neighboring city of Boyne City to make this event a notable one. It is a county affair under the present system, and East Jordan will celebrate next year. Let us remember the golden rule.

Also on the same program is the second chapter of "The Lion Man" a chapter play that is new and out of the ordinary which can't be beat for entertainment.

WARNING TO CITY WATER USERS

It is a violation of the City ordinance to use a hose for sprinkling without a nozzle attached. The ordinance also states that in case of fire, every tap in the city must be closed at once.

Owing to the dry weather, the practice of using a hose without a nozzle is becoming so flagrant and must be discontinued.

SHORTAGE OF TEACHERS IN RURAL SCHOOLS A SERIOUS PROBLEM

The shortage of teachers among the rural schools of Charlevoix County is more acute than ever before. Various causes have been instrumental in bringing about this condition. In the first place, the teachers who left the profession to take up other lines of work, are not "coming back" as was predicted. Many of the teachers who put off going to school during war times when everything was high are now leaving their schools to finish their normal training.

Under the provisions of the law passed by legislature at its winter session, no one can enter the teaching profession after 1925 without at least a year of normal training, and after 1929 the MINIMUM amount of training for a teacher will be two years.

With the scarcity of teachers as marked as it is at present, it is likely that wages will remain at about the present level for four or five years, and then gradually rise, as the new laws begin to take effect.

There were no third grade certificates issued at the April examinations, and it is not likely that any will be granted this August, because the six weeks of normal training which these applicants have had is not enough to fit them to pass the tests, which are based on one year normal training. Students graduating from high school this year, who plan on making teaching their chosen profession, are, for the most part, planning on a full year, or more at the State or County Normal before entering on their work.

At the present time there are twenty seven rural schools in this county with neither a teacher nor an applicant for their school. Counting all teachers available at the present time, good, bad or indifferent, as well as prospects not yet investigated, there are just ten. This leaves a total of seventeen actual vacancies in our rural schools, with not even prospects for a teacher. The smaller of these can easily transport to neighboring schools, and that is really their wisest plan. It is to be hoped, that the mists will clear away somewhat before fall, and that our largest schools, at least, may be able to get teachers.

Garden Notes

(By M. A. C. Horticultural Dept.)

Did you plant any sweet corn for late summer and fall use? Try a planting of Golden Bantam now. It should mature ears large enough for table use before killing frosts occur.

Remember that the strawberry is a shallow rooted plant. For this reason cultivation should not be too deep. A good dirt mulch an inch or two in depth is sufficient.

It is often easier to prevent "garden troubles" than to cure them after they appear. Keep the plants vigorous and healthy by frequent cultivation and proper fertilizing, thinning and spraying.

If the currant worm becomes serious when the fruit is nearly ripe, fresh hellebore should be used. As a spray, apply at the rate of 4 ounces in 2 or 3 gallons of water; or the plants may be dusted with a mixture of 1 pound of the material in 5 pounds of flour or air slaked lime.

Don't leave vacant spaces in the garden where the early crops have been grown. An ideal vegetable garden is one that produces a continuous supply of a variety of crops throughout the season. Plan during June for crops that will mature during the late summer and fall months.

Nine Hundred In Attendance

Fine Program at Commencement and Dedicatory Exercises.

The Commencement and Dedicatory Exercises at the school house last Friday night surpassed even what had been anticipated. Although the night was the hottest of the season, over nine hundred people were in attendance. The exercises lasted over two and one half hours, but so interesting were they that the intense heat did not lessen the attention of the audience.

Harold Jarvis of Detroit delighted all with his beautiful songs. Probably no other singer ever appeared in East Jordan who created such a favorable impression, and who received such universal praise as Mr. Jarvis. Two of his songs, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "No Night There," both sung by request were particularly greatly enjoyed.

Prof. C. O. Davis of the University of Michigan spoke on "The High School as a Social Center." Mr. Davis has made a special study of this subject and he explained very clearly how the East Jordan High School can be of immense benefit to this community.

E. E. Gallup of Lansing spoke on "The American Spirit in the Public School." Mr. Gallup emphasized team work, co-operation, and self-sacrifice in school and out of school. He also discussed in a very clear manner the future of agriculture and the relation of the high school to it.

Ira D. Bartlett, on behalf of the Board of Education, presented the twenty graduates with their diplomas and also expressed an appreciation of the work done by Contractor Rogers in planning and constructing the building, and also of the work in general accomplished by Supt. M. R. Keyworth.

RESORT INSPECTION STARTS THIS WEEK

Thorough inspection of summer resorts in the northern part of the state is insured this summer—through co-operation of the food and drug division of the department of agriculture with the state department of health—by the traveling laboratory truck which left this week to start the season's survey in Mason County.

In addition to W. C. Brockway, assistant state sanitary engineer, and George Stucky, bacteriologist, the personnel of the "lab on wheels" will include O. E. Strickland and B. Proulx, special food and drug inspectors.

Testing of all milk and water supplies as well as performing diagnostic bacteriology for physicians, will fall to the bacteriologist. Surveys of the sanitary conditions of resorts, inspection of sewage and garbage disposal systems, water supplies, drainage, fly and mosquito control, sanitation of bathing beaches, bath houses and pollution of streams and lakes, will be carried out by the sanitary engineer. Slaughter houses, meat markets, soft drink and confectionary stands, restaurants, bakeries, stores, creameries, and dairies will be inspected by the food and drug specialists.

The itinerary of the motorized laboratory includes the coast and most of the interior counties from Mason County north around the northern shore of the Lower Peninsula, and as far south along the eastern coast as time will permit.

Combined earnings of Michigan summer resorts in 1920 have been approximated at $100,000,000, giving the business a ranking of second or third among the state's industries. It was to aid in the safeguarding of the health of state's citizens and visitors and to protect the resort industry that the traveling laboratory and technicians spent three months in the field last season at an expense of less than $2,000, the scope of the service being broadened this summer to keep pace with the demand for the work.

Peninsula Grange

A large supper was given Saturday evening by the losing side of the contest which was held during February, March and April, nearly all members of the Grange were present.

The hall was decorated in red and orange in honor of the winning side, the Reds, and the losing side, the Orangemen. Everybody enjoyed the supper which was served at 7:30 o'clock. After the supper the Grangers enjoyed a pleasant evening of dancing and visiting.

DAIRY DEMONSTRATION TRAIN TO RUN IN AUG.

A dairy demonstration train, to be known as the "Better Sires" special, will run in Michigan during the month of August, according to announcement by O. E. Reed, head of the Dairy Department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Several organizations are cooperating in "putting on" the train. The Michigan Holstein-Friesian Association is furnishing the cattle to be carried on the special; the N. Y. C. railroad, through its agricultural division, is furnishing the rolling stock; M. A. C. is routing the tour and furnishing lecturers and specialists to handle the work of the demonstrations; and local development bureaus and county farm bureaus are handling local arrangements.

About twenty counties will be covered, according to tentative plans of the committee in charge. The train will be made up at East Lansing, swinging up the eastern side of the state and coming back down the west side. Two demonstrations cars of dairy products and feeding stuffs; two carloads of purebred stock for demonstration and exchange purposes; a flat car for lecture and show work; and a special women's car of milk products will be included in the train.

U. S. SPECIALISTS AID MICHIGAN CROP TESTS

Specialists from the United States Department of Agriculture are co-operating with farm crops men at the Michigan Agricultural College this year in the handling of numerous crops experiments which are expected to be of great value to growers of the state.

Dr. A. J. Peters, in charge of clover investigations for the government, is furnishing the college crops department with strains of imported and American legume seed, and has made arrangements for cooperative development of forage crops on light soils of the Upper Peninsula.

Seven acres of flax increase plats on the M. A. C. farm are being checked by R. L. Davis, of the flax department of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Work with peas at the East Lansing and Upper Peninsula experiment station grounds are being handled by H. N. Vinal. Cooperative bean tests are under way with Wilbur Brotherton handling the government end; while J. G. Willier, corn specialist, is working with the college staff on variety and ear row tests with corn.

"As a result of this cooperative plan" says Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the M. A. C. Crops Department. "Michigan is enabled to take advantage of the great resources of the U. S. Department in carrying on test work in the state. Extensive work with beets and other crops is in prospect. We are planning to push the cooperative end of the experimental program hard."

SUMMER HINTS TO CAR OWNERS GIVEN BY STUDEBAKER DEALER

Tells How to Get Maximum Efficiency from Automobiles During Months When They Are Used Most—Advice to Motorists Covers a Number of Important Points.

With the summer motoring season here and the call of the open road at hand the time of year when owners use their cars more than at any other season they are naturally more eager than usual to so operate their cars that they will get the maximum of efficiency. As an aid in this direction, timely advice is given to owners by Fred G. Craig local distributor of Studebaker cars. In an interview on service, he says:

"In general, motor car owners should bear in mind that the heat of summer, combined with the harder and more consistent use to which they put their cars at this season of the year, causes more evaporation than at other times. This applies not only to water in the radiator but also to oil.

"During the hot weather months attention should be frequently given to the radiator; the owner should see that it is kept filled; and at intervals it should be flushed out and filled with clean water. In connection with efficient operation of the cooling system, fan belt adjustment should be made, the fan is needed in summer. The position of the spark lever should be watched to see that it is kept in an advanced position, thus assuring better cooling of the motor.

"Minor parts, such as spring shackles wheel bearings, steering connections and universal joints require oiling more often in the summer. It is well that a heavier grade of lubricating oil be used in the motor, than in colder weather, and oil should be drained from the motor at intervals not to exceed every 1,000 miles. Better performance will result when this is done.

"Careful attention should be directed to the brakes to see that they are kept in as nearly perfect condition as possible, for during the summer they get greater usage, with more traffic to contend with and more cars on the road.

"Tire pressure should be watched more closely on tires that have been in use for a long period, because tires expand more in hot weather. The owner should have a tire gauge and use it in inflating. In taking long trips the owner should be provided with a good spare tire, and should go over all tires during the trip to see that they have no defects.

"Every owner wants to have his car in the best possible condition during the summer months, for it is then he uses his automobile most. To get the maximum efficiency, he must exercise greater care in going over the car."

WHEN TO STOP ADVERTISING

A certain trade journal once requested a number of its largest advertisers to give their opinions concerning the best time to stop advertising, and the following replies were received.

When population ceases to multiply and the generations that crowd on after you and never heard of you, stop coming on.

When you have convinced everybody whose life will touch yours that you have better goods and lower prices than they can get anywhere else.

When you perceive it to be the rule that men who never advertise are outstripping their neighbors in the same line of business.

When men stop making fortunes right in your sight solely through the use of legitimate advertising.

When you can forget the words of the shrewdest and most successful business men concerning the cause of their prosperity.

When every man becomes so thoroughly a creature of habit that he will certainly buy this year where he bought last year.

When you would rather have your own way and fail than take advice and win.

When nobody else thinks it pays to advertise.

Few things are harder than having faith in the masses when they don't have faith in you.

If you have nothing to recommend you but your dignity, you are not as important as the rattle of a Ford door.

If you put off until tomorrow the things you should do today, occasionally somebody will come along and do them for you.

Chicago.—Raymond Lee Hoover, of Louisville, Ky., who claims to be a "first cousin" to Secretary Herbert Hoover, is held in the county jail on charges of bigamy brought by Mrs. Pearl Holbert Hoover, his second wife.

Hoover was put in the same cell occupied by "Cousin" Everett Harding. Jail officials said they intended to reserve the place for "cousins" of statesmen.

An effort to change the basis of membership in the state body, fostered by the smaller lodges two years ago, was discussed at a heated session and tabled for another year.

BONUS MEASURE PASSED BY HOUSE

CONFERENCE HELD TO BRING LEGISLATORS TO TERMS ON BOND ISSUE.

BONUS PAYMENTS START JULY 1

State Income Tax Amendment Will Be Submitted to Electors in November, 1922.

Lansing—One of the bitterest battles which marked either the regular or special sessions was ended with the passage by the house late last week of the soldiers' bonus enabling act, with the serial bond amendment left out.

Payments to veterans of the World War are scheduled to begin July 1. The bonds which had been printed after the regular session adjourned, have been advertised for sale by the administration board, which has general supervision of the bonus payments.

The house had stood out for the issuance of serial bonds to mature at the close of three 10-year periods, and the senate insisted that the bonds be issued as provided in the original bill as straight 30-year securities. The stand taken by the two houses resulted in the appointment of a conference committee of three senators and three representatives to reach an agreement.

Income Tax Goes to Voters.

During the course of the conference, the committee questioned bond experts and state officials familiar with the process of floating state loans, in an effort to decide whether claims that the bonds could not be sold if issued serially were substantiated by facts.

The Lennox income tax amendment was passed by the senate with amendments which were concurred in by the house and the amendment will be submitted to the electors of the state in November, 1922.

The amendment, as it will appear on the ballot is: "Provision may be made by law for a tax of not to exceed 4 per cent upon or with respect to net gains, profits and incomes, from whatever source derived, which tax may be graduated and progressive and which may provide for reasonable exemptions. For the purpose of such tax, property and persons and firms and corporations may be classified."

Raise in Salaries Spurned.

By a vote of 64 to 20, the house declined an increase in salaries paid members of the legislature. It failed by three of the required two-thirds majority. The measure, which had already been passed by the senate, was the second salary proposition before the 1921 legislature.

A constitutional amendment resolution raising the salary of the members from $800 to $1200 was passed at the regular session but when the governor received it for his signature, it was discovered that the measure called for submission of the question at an April election in a year when no such election is held.

STATE BARS SALE OF STOCK

Hints Action Against Eureka-Croesus Company if Law Was Violated.

Lansing—The Michigan securities commission has disapproved sale in Michigan of stocks of the Eureka-Croesus Mining company, of Nevada, which has applied for permission to sell over 500,000 shares of a new issue at a par of $1.

It is understood that upwards of $700,000 shares of an earlier issue of this company's stock is held in Detroit and 160,000 shares elsewhere in Michigan.

Action by the commission was followed by an intimation from the attorney-general's department that proceedings may be started as a result of the advertising of the stock in Michigan, if it can be proven that stock was actually sold in Michigan.

TO PROBE DROWNING OF SOLDIER

Body of Albert Lancore Recovered in Cheboygan River.

Petoskey, Mich.—The mysterious disappearance of Albert Lancore, 35, of Mackinac Island, last November, was solved last week at Cheboygan when the body was discovered floating in the Cheboygan river.

The churning of the water by a passing steamer brought the badly decomposed body to the surface.

Lancore was a member of the 328th field artillery. His death will be probed.

Ex-Ambassador's Wife Dead.

Southboro, Mass.—Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, wife of the former United States ambassador to Italy, died here last week. She was 63 years of age. Mrs. Page was married first to Henry Field, of Chicago, in whose memory she dedicated the Field Collection in the Chicago Art Institute. She became the wife of Thomas Nelson Page in 1893. The former ambassador was at the bedside when death came. Mrs. Page was buried last week in Washington.

MR. FOX AND THE STOATS

IT WAS winter time in the woods, and the Four-Footed club sat around the fire talking over their affairs, for they had cooked the last turkey and the last of the wood was now burning.

"In all my long experience," said Mr. Fox, "I have never known food to be so scarce, and what there is of it is so poor I doubt sometimes if Mr. Man can be feeding his fowl as he should."

"I think Mr. Dog gets more than his share," said Mr. Coon, "for he seems strong enough. He can run just as far as ever I can see."

"I should not be surprised if he were to blame," said Mr. Possum, "for our hard luck; maybe he eats up everything that Mr. Man gives to the poultry, he is so strong and big. Very likely he takes it away from those poor things."

"No, it isn't Mr. Dog who is to blame if I am a guesser," said Mr. Fox, setting back in his chair and taking from his mouth his corn-cob pipe, "but I think I can tell you who is to blame for our not having anything in our pantry."

But Mr. Fox wished to be asked, and did not stop smoking until Mr. Coon could stand it no longer, and asked: "Who is taking our food? Tell us, if you know!"

"Well, perhaps I should not say he is taking it right away from us, but certainly if he and his family were not around we would have no trouble in getting plenty to eat."

"But who is it?" asked Mr. Possum, sitting on the very edge of his chair, with impatience. "Who is it, Mr. Fox? Tell us that!"

When Mr. Fox had begun to fill his pipe, he said: "It is Mr. Stoat and family. Yes, that whole stuck-up family are to blame, and when I think of that miserable, sneaking lot I think I should do something desperate!"

"But I do not see how they take away our supply," said Mr. Coon. "I have never seen them around here."

"No, of course not," said Mr. Fox.

"But don't you know that the whole Stoat family has new white coats, and that it can get around in the snow without being seen much easier than I can, or either of you fellows?"

"That Stoat family," said Mr. Fox, "when I was a youngster, used to be called the weasel family, and when they are not dressed in those fine white coats of theirs they wear a very homely brown one, and are a very common-looking family; and they need not put on airs with me."

"I thought of a plan to drive away that Stoat family," said Mr. Fox, "but I must have some help, and there is no chasing in it; so you two need not get uneasy."

"I want you to go with me up to Mr. Man's barn. There are plenty of rats in there, and there is also a big pail of black paint, and that is where we put it over Mr. Stoat and family."

Just what happened inside the barn Mr. Fox and his friends never knew. But when the Stoat family came out they could be plainly seen against the white snow, for every one of that family was black.

Whether the farmer tracked them by the pail or whether they felt so disgraced by having their fine white coats spoiled Mr. Fox and his friends never knew; but they disappeared from around those parts and the farmyard was not so carefully guarded after that.

Facts about your name, its history, meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

THE USE OF "THE."

THIS little word, which is called by grammarians the definite article, is often misused, being placed in sentences where it does not belong, and being left out where it should be used. Often such misuse causes misunderstanding of the meaning of the writer or speaker. For example, suppose you say, "The president and secretary of the lodge attended the meeting." This is correct if the offices of president and secretary are united in one person; that is, if there is one man who is both president and secretary. But if there are two men, one of whom is the president and the other is the secretary, the sentence should read, "The president and the secretary of the lodge attended the meeting." The article should be repeated; then there is no room for misunderstanding the speaker or the writer.

When we say, "The black and white horse," we mean one horse which is marked with the two colors; but when we say, "The black horse and the white horse," we mean two horses, one black and one white.

How It Started

CHIMNEYS.

ALTHOUGH the use of fire is so old that its origin is lost in the mist of the oldest mythology, it was not until comparatively recent times that the principle of the chimney to make a fire "draw" well came into use. The original house was merely equipped with a hole in the roof for the escape of the smoke. The late middle-ages furnish us with the first records of an actual, more or less scientifically built, chimney.

CAMERON DAM DEFENDER PARDONED; MAY SUE STATE

JOHN DIETZ.

Madison, Wis.—It is expected that John Dietz, "defender of Cameron Dam," who was pardoned recently by Governor Blaine, will sue the state of Wisconsin for false imprisonment. The pardon was granted after Dietz had served ten years of a life sentence for the shooting of a deputy who with scores of others had surrounded the Dietz cabin home in an effort to capture the occupant. Dietz attracted a great deal of attention by refusing to engage counsel at his trial and pleading his own case.

WOULD BAN MILK COMPOUND

Dairymen Urge Law to Forbid Its Manufacture and Sale.

Lansing—Charging that filled condensed milk compound, said to be made of skim milk and vegetable oils, was a menace to the dairy industry of the state, and that when the compound has been sold to the public as milk, a fraud has been perpetrated, directors of the Michigan Dairy association in meeting here adopted a resolution favoring legislation to prevent its sale and manufacture.

Figures were submitted tending to show that 86,000,000 pounds of compound were made last year and that cocoanut oil replaced 7,000,000 pounds of American butter fat last year.

The association accepted Saginaw's invitation for the second annual convention and dairy show next February.

BACK FRIDAY AS M. A. C. HEAD

Michigan University Professor Is Boosted by Farm Bureau.

Lansing.—The state farm bureau executive committee has gone on record as favoring selection of Professor David Friday, of the economics department of the University of Michigan, as president of the Michigan Agricultural college. The resolution advocating election of Professor Friday declares that he is better equipped than any other available candidate to do the work now confronting the college.

No definite action in the matter was taken by the board of agriculture at its meeting last week. It is probable that a successor to President Kedzie, who has resigned, will be named at the July meeting when the new members elected in April take their seats.

WIFE'S LIE CAUSE OF SHOOTING

Passerby Killed Because She Called Him Robber of Home.

Milwaukee.—Because she lied to her husband, Mrs. Thomas Foran, 24 years old and pretty, and her helpmate are in jail charged with first degree murder. They are blamed for the death of Joseph Wamser, killed by Foran when pointed out by the woman as the man who had ransacked their home and stolen $20.

For several days the case puzzled the police, until Mrs. Foran broke down and told her story. She said she needed $20 to buy clothes for the children, and fearing to ask her husband, decided to take it and blame it on robbers.

A. F. L. REJECTS ONE BIG UNION

Convention Sustains Report of Its Committee on Question.

Denver, Colo.—The American Federation of Labor has repudiated the "one big union" idea.

Without discussion, the forty-first annual convention of the federation sustained the action of its committee on organization in non-concurring on a resolution calling for "one body of workers through amalgamations, federations and protective agreements."

Deny Agreement with Irish.

London—The Russian mission in London declared on behalf of the soviet government that the alleged treaty which the British government asserted had been drawn up for signature by the Russian government and the "Republic of Ireland" was a pure invention. No treaty or agreement, either with the Sinn Fein or any other party in Ireland, the mission asserted, was ever made by the Russian republic or by any of its isolated institutions.

372 OFFER BLOOD TO MOTHER

Firemen Match Coins to Decide on Choice for Transfusion.

Cleveland.—An appeal for volunteers for a blood transfusion was answered by 372 of 500 members of the Cleveland fire department on duty at the time. The call went out to save the life of Mrs. David Wilson, who was left in a serious condition from a Caesarian operation when twins—a boy and a girl—were born. The boy died but the girl probably will survive.

Three of the firemen's blood was found suitable. Coins were matched to see who would be accepted and Charles L. Trinkler won.

BAKER MAY HEAD FARM LOBBY

Michigan Senator Receives Mention as Hampton's Successor.

Washington.—According to officials of the Farmers' National Union, State Senator Herbert F. Baker, of Cheboygan, will probably be elected managing director of that organization to succeed George P. Hampton who died recently. Mr. Baker has long been associated with the organization as an officer.

Grant Slocum, of Detroit, is also mentioned as a possible choice of the union, the largest single lobby of any interest in Washington.

15 ESCAPE OVER PRISON WALL

One Negro Saws Way Through Bars and Liberates Others.

Jacksonville, Fla.—At least 15 colored men escaped from the Duval county jail here when one sawed through the door of his own cell and released the others.

Making their way to the jail yard the gang pushed an automobile against the wall and scaled it. No trace has been found of the fugitives, one of whom was awaiting trial on a charge of murder.

BOARD VINDICATES OFFICIAL

Bar's Charges of Misconduct Against Agent Are Disproved.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Complete vindication from charges of official misconduct has been given George Thayer, Kalamazoo county agent, by the state board of corrections and charities. Thayer had been accused by the county bar association of having taken children into custody without waiting for issuance of warrants and of having ordered physical examinations without permission of the court.

PENINSULAR

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

Star School closed Wednesday with a picnic at the schoolhouse. A bountiful dinner was served cafeteria style in the shade of the schoolhouse. A freezer of ice-cream disappeared mysteriously. No one knows anything about it but a good number of the ball players were taken suddenly ill. Of course they did not lay it to too much ice-cream. As there were two more freezers full everyone had plenty. The teacher, Miss Beryl McDonald leaves the Star school for the Walker school in Eveline township.
Mrs. Jas. McClure and son, Tracy, of Boyne City attended the Star school picnic, Wednesday.
Mr. and Mrs. Mose Lalonde attended the picnic at the Star school Wednesday, June 15.
The Jas. Arnott family and the Ray Loomis family made a surprise party on Fred Wurn Thursday the occasion being his birthday.
Ball players from Boyne City practiced at Hayden point Sunday.
A large number from this section attended the ball game between the Afton and Peninsular Sunday.
The Lona Scouts who were to have played ball with a team from Boyne City at Hayden Point Sunday skipped out and attended the ball game at Peninsular Grange leaving their captain, Lyle Jones in an embarrassing position. Like the brave scout he is he met the visiting team alone and as there were enough from Boyne City to make up the game. There was not much harm done but it was a dirty Irish trick.
The Yellows of Peninsular Grange banqueted the Reds at their hall Saturday evening. The tables were spread from 7:30 until nearly midnight and just groaned with good things all the time and the way things disappeared would lead anyone to think that the Reds had saved their appetites for at least a week. As all things must come to an end the party broke up about midnight.

We had another rain Friday and Saturday so there is plenty of moisture and the hot weather is making everything grow in fine shape.
Geo. Jarman is working for Mr. Sanderson on the South Arm Lake this week.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"GROG."

AT FIRST glance there would appear to be little connection between the word "grog," applied to heavy silks and ribbons, and "grog," the sailor's slang for drink. But both of them were connected with Admiral Edward Vernon of the British navy, the man who gained fame for the capture of Porto Bello during the war with Spain in 1739 and for whom Mount Vernon, the home of Washington, was named.
To the men of the British navy, however, he owes his greatest fame to the fact that he was the first to order rum and water served to the men of his squadron, beginning this practice on board his own ship, the Burford. Previous to this time, the admiral had acquired the name of "Old Grog," from his habit of strolling along the quarter-deck in a "groggram" cloak—"groggram" being the British sailor's corruption of the term "gros-grain." Because of the nickname of the man who originated the serving of rum in the navy, the drink was called "grog"—and "grog" it is, to this day.

Oil Furnes Put Town to Sleep.

A curious result of a railroad accident in which 8,000 gallons of naphtha were spilled, is reported from Roelofs, Pa. The oil ran into a pit and the odor was so penetrating that cattle died and one man succumbed. As time went on the inhabitants of the town were attacked by a sleeping sickness and everyone began to drowse. A number of the residents moved out of town until the naphtha had dried up.—Scientific American.

Of course, I read the message; I knew there was nothing private about it so far as I was concerned, since it had been given me to put away in the files. This is what I read:

"To G. Norcross, G. M.,
"Portal City.

"Your administration has been a conspicuous failure from the beginning. Compromise with employees on any terms offered and prevent strike at all costs. That done, you are hereby directed to wire your resignation to take effect one week from today."
"B. Dunton, President."

It had hit us at last; not a decent request, mind you, but a blunt, brutal demand. The boss was fired. No word had come from Mr. Chadwick, and there could be but one reason for his silence. In some way, perhaps through the late boosting of the stock, the New Yorkers had squeezed him out. We were shot dead in the trenches.

I didn't understand how the chief could take it so quietly, unless it was because he had been hammered so long and so hard that nothing mattered any more. Anyhow, he was just standing there, talking soberly to Donohue, when once more the Strathcona branch sander began to click furiously, snipping out the headquarters call.

Donohue cut in and we all heard the Strathcona man's new blurt. The way he told it, it seemed that one member of the party that had chartered the special to come to Portal City had got left, and this man was now in the Strathcona wire office, bidding high for an engine to chase the train and put him aboard.

At first the boss said, "No," short off, just like that; adding that it wouldn't be keeping faith with the strike committee. But at that moment Hoskins blew in again, and when he was told what was on the cards, he took a little responsibility of his own.

"Go to it, Mister Norcross, if there's any more money in it for the railroad," he told the boss. "I'll stand for it with the boys." And then to Donohue: "Who'll be ruinin' this chaser engine?"

"It'll be John Hogan and the Four-Sixteen," said Donohue. "There's nobody else at that end of the branch."

The arrangement, such as it was, was fixed up quickly. The man who was putting up the money seemed to have plenty of it. He was offering five hundred dollars for the engine, and a thousand if it should overtake the special that side of Bauxite Junction.

I guess the heat unraveled itself pretty clearly for all of us; or at least, it seemed plain enough. A mining deal of some kind was on, and this man who was left behind was going to be left in another sense of the word if he couldn't but in soon enough to break whatever combination the others were stacking up against him.

In just a few minutes we got the word from the Strathcona operator that the money was paid and the chaser engine was out and gone. Kirgan had come in to say that our kind-natured strikers had thrown a guard into the shops and were patrolling the yard, when Fred May showed up, making signals to me. I heard him when he edged up to the boss and said:

"There's a lady in the office, wanting to see you, Mr. Norcross."

"Holy Smoke!" said I to myself. I knew it couldn't be anybody but Mrs. Sheila, at that time of night, and I saw seventeen different kinds of bloody murder looming up again when I tagged along after the boss on the trip down the hall to our offices.

The guess was right, both ways around. It was Mrs. Sheila, and she had the major with her. And the air of the private office was so thick with tragedy that it made the very electric lights look dim and ghostly. Mrs. Sheila didn't have a bit of color in her face, and her eyes had a big horror in them that was enough to make your flesh creep.

I won't attempt to tell all that was said, partly by the good old major and partly by Mrs. Sheila. But the gist of it was this: Collingwood had continued his booze fight in his rooms at the Bullard until he had worked himself up to the crazy murder pitch. Then he had gone on the warpath, hunting for Hatch. He learned that Hatch and a bunch of his Red Tower backers had gone to Strathcona on a mining deal, and had started to drive to the gold camp in an auto to get his man.

Before leaving Portal City he had written a letter to Mrs. Sheila, telling her what he was going to do, and that when he got through with it, she would be free. The letter, which had been left at the hotel, had been delayed in delivery—had, in fact, just been sent out to the major's house by the night clerk who had found it.

Long before the story could get itself fully told, the different gaps in it were filling themselves up for me—and for Mr. Norcross, as well, I guess.

When Mrs. Sheila came to the auto-drive part of it, the boss whirled and shot an order at me.

"Jimmie, chase into the dispatcher's office and find out the name of the man who chartered that following engine!" he snapped; and I went on the run, remembering that in the strike excitement and hustle it hadn't occurred to anybody to ask the man's name or that of the particular "mine owner" who had chartered the special train.

Donohue got the Strathcona operator in less than half a minute after I fired my order at him, and the answer came almost without a break:

"Charter of special train was to R. Hatch, of Portal City, and of engine 416 to man named Collingwood."

Gosh! but this did settle it! I didn't run back to the office with the news—I flew. It was like firing a gun amongst the three who were waiting, but it had to be done. The major groaned and said, "Oh, good God!" and Mrs. Sheila sat down and put her face in her hands. The boss was the only one who knew what to do and he did it: vanished like a shot in the direction of the dispatcher's office.

In about fifteen of the longest minutes I ever lived he came back, shaking his head. I knew what he had been doing, or trying to do. There was one night telegraph station on the branch—at a mining camp half-way down the grade on Slide Mountain—and he had been trying to get word there to stop the wild engine.

"He has either bribed or bullied his engine crew," he told the major. "I wired and had a stop signal set for them at the Antonio mine, but they overran it, going at full speed down the hill."

It was plain enough now what Collingwood was trying to do. The murder mania had got a firm hold of its weapon. Collingwood knew that Hatch was on the special, and he was going to chase that one-car train until it made a stop somewhere and then smash into it for blood. After Mr. Norcross had talked hurriedly for a minute or two with the major he went back to the dispatcher's room and I went with him.

The boss grabbed up an office time-card and began to study it hurriedly and to jot down figures. I wondered if he wasn't tempted—just the least little bit in the world, you know.

Here was a thing itself up—a thing for which he wasn't in the least responsible—and if it should work out to the catastrophe that nobody seemed to be able to prevent, the chief of the grafters, and probably a number of his nearest backers, would be wiped off the books; and Collingwood's death, which, in all human probability, was equally certain, would set Mrs. Sheila free.

He must be thinking of it, I argued; he couldn't be a human man and not be thinking of it. But he never stopped his hasty figuring for a single instant until he broke off to bark out at Kirgan, who was standing by:

"Quick, Mart! I want a light engine, and somebody to run it! Jump for it, man!"

Kirgan, big and slow-motioned at most times, was off like a shot. Then the boss hurried back down the hall to his own office, and again I tagged him. The old major was standing at a window with his hands behind him, and Mrs. Sheila was sitting just as we had left her, with the big terror still in her eyes and her face as white as a sheet.

"We can't stop him without throwing a switch in front of him, and that would mean death to him and his two engineers," said the boss, talking straight at the major, and as if he were trying to ignore Mrs. Sheila. "I'm going to take a long chance and run down the line to meet them. There's a bare possibility that I can contrive to get between the train and the engine, and if I can—"

Mrs. Sheila was on her feet and she had her hands clasped as if she were going to make a prayer to the boss. And it was pretty nearly that:

"Take me!" she begged; "oh, please take me. It's my right to go!"

"I saw that the chief was going to turn Mrs. Sheila down—which was, of course, exactly the right thing to do. But just then the major shoved in.

"There'll Be Nothing in the Way."

"Sheila knows what she's talking about, Graham," he said quietly. "When you-all find Howie, you'll have a madman on your hands—and she's the only one who can control him at such times—God pity her!—Take us both, sub."

I suppose Mr. Norcross thought there wasn't any time to stand there arguing about it.

"As you will," he snapped at the major; and then to me: "Break for it, Jimmie, and tell Kirgan to get a car—any car—the first one he can find!"

I broke, and came pretty near breaking my blessed neck tumbling down the stairs. Kirgan had found his engine and had picked up a yard man to fire it. I told him what was wanted, and in less than no time he had pulled out an empty day-coach from the washing track. While he was backing in with it, Mr. Norcross came down the platform with the major and Mrs. Sheila. He let the major help Mrs. Sheila up the steps of the coach and ran forward to call out to Kirgan:

"Donohue is clearing for you, and there'll be nothing in the way. Run regardless to Timber Mountain—'Y.' You have six minutes on the special's time to that point, if you run like the devil!" And then, as he was climbing to the cab, he ripped out at me: "Jimmie, you go back and stay with them in the car. Hurry or you'll be left!"

CHAPTER XIX

Under the Wide and Starry Sky

I sure had to be quick about obeying that "get-aboard" order of Mr. Norcross. Kirgan had jerked the throttle open the minute the word was given. I missed the forward end of the car, and when the other end came along my grab at the hand-rod slammed me head over heels up the steps. Kirgan was holding his whistle valve open, and the guarding strikers in the yard gave us room and a clear track. By the time we had passed the "limit" switches we were going like a blue streak, and I could hardly keep my balance on the back platform of the day-coach.

You can guess that I didn't stay out there very long. The night was clear as a bell and pretty coolish, with the stars burning like white diamonds in the black inverted bowl of the sky. It was mighty pretty scenery, but just the same, after Kirgan had fairly struck his gait on the long western tangent, I claved my way inside. It was a lot too blustery and unsafe on that back platform.

The major and Mrs. Sheila were sitting together, near the middle of the car. I staggered up and took the seat just ahead of them, and the major asked me if Mr. Norcross was on the engine. I told him he was, and that ended it. What with the rattle and bang of the coach, the howling of the speed-made wind in the ventilators, and the shrill scream of the spinning wheels, there wasn't any room for talk during the whole of that breath-taking race to the old "Y" in the hills beyond Bauxite.

Knowing, from what Mr. Norcross had said, the point at which we were going to side-track and wait for the special and the wild engine, I grew sort of nervous and worked-up after we had crashed through the Banta yard and the day-coach began to sway and lurch around the hill curves. What if the special had been making better time than the boss had counted upon? In that case, we'd probably hit her in a head-onder somewhere on one of those very curves. And with the time we were making, and the time she'd be making, there wouldn't be enough left for either train to be worth picking up.

A mile or so short of the "Y" siding I went up ahead and handed myself out to the forward platform to see if I couldn't get a signal past the storming engine. I got it now and then, on the swing of the curves, but there was nothing in sight. Just the same it was mighty scary, and I took a relief breath so deep that it nearly made me sick at my stomach when I finally realized that Kirgan had shut off and was slowing for the stop at the further switch of the old "Y."

What was done at the switch was done swiftly, as men work when they have the fear of death gripping at them. If the special should come up while we were making the back-in, the result would be just about the same as it would have been if we had met it on the curves.

With our own engine silent, I could hear a faint sound like the far-away fluttering of a safety-valve. We were not ten seconds too soon. The special was coming.

Mr. Norcross, who was still in the engine cab, shot an order at Kirgan.

"Fling your coat over the headlight, and then be ready to snatch it and get off!" he shouted. "If they see it as they come up, it may stop them!" Then, catching a glimpse of me on the ground: "Break the coupling on the coach, Jimmie—quick!"

As I jumped to obey I understood what was to be done. The fireman at the switch was to let the special go by, and then the boss—just the boss alone on the engine—was to be let out on the main track to put himself between the chaser and the chased. It was a hair-raising proposition, but perhaps—just perhaps—not quite so suicidal as it looked. With skilful handling the interposed engine might possibly be kept out of the way by backing, and its warning headlight shining full into the eyes of the men in the 416's cab would surely be enough to stop them—if anything would.

I had just finished uncoupling the day-coach and the boss was easing our engine ahead a bit to make sure that she was loose, when the car door opened behind me and the major and Mrs. Sheila came out in the front vestibule. It was Mrs. Sheila who spoke to me, and her voice had borrowed some of the big terror that I had seen in her eyes while she was sitting in the office at Portal City.

"Where—whereabouts are we, Jimmie?" she asked.

Before I could open my mouth the black shadows of the crooked valley beyond the switch were shot through with the white, shimmering glow of a headlight beam, and a second later the special flicked into view on the curve of approach.

As we looked, there was a short, sharp whistle yelp, the brakes gripped the wheels, the one-car train, with fire grinding from every brake-shoe, came to a jerking stop a short car-length on our side of the switch, and a man dropped from the engine step to go sprinting to the rear. And it was plain that neither the engineer nor the man who was running back saw our outfit waiting on the leg of the old "Y."

Kirgan was the first one to understand. With a shout of warning, he jumped and ran toward the stopped train, yelling at the engineer for God's sake to pull out and go on. Back in the hills beyond the curve of approach another hoarse murmur was jarring upon the air, and the special's fireman, who was the man we had seen jump off and go running back and who, of course, didn't know that we had our man there, was apparently trying to reach the switch behind his train to throw it against the following engine to shoot it off on the "Y."

By this time the boss was off of our engine and racing across the angle of the "Y" only a little way behind Kirgan. He realized that his plan was smashed by the stopping of the special, and that the very catastrophe we had come out to try to prevent was due to happen right there and then. Whatever our man waiting at the switch might do, there was bound to be a collision. If he left the points set for the main line, the wild engine would crash into the rear end of the stopped special; and if he did the other thing, our engine and coach standing on the "Y" would get it.

"Get the people out of that car!" I heard the boss bellow, but even as he said it the pop-valve of the stopped engine went off with a roar, filling the shut-in valley with clamorings that nothing could drown.

Two minutes, two little minutes more, and the sleep-solden bunch of men in the special's car might have been roused and turned out and saved. But the minutes were not given us. While the racing fireman was still a few feet short of the switch the throwing of which would have saved the one-car train only to let the madman's engine in on our engine and coach, and our man—already at the switch—was too scared to know which horn of the dilemma to choose, the end came. There was the flash of another headlight on the curve, another whistle shriek, and I turned to help the major take Mrs. Sheila off our car and run with her, against the horrible chance that we might get it instead of the special.

But we didn't get it. Ten seconds later the chasing engine had crashed headlong into the standing train, burying itself clear up to the tender in the heart of the old wooden sleeper, rolling the whole business over on its side in the ditch, and setting the wreckage afire as suddenly as if the old Pullman had been a fagot of pitch-pine kindlings and only waiting for the match.

If I could write down any real description of the way things stacked up there in that lonesome valley for the little bunch of us who stood agape at the awful horror, I guess I wouldn't need to be hammering the keys of a typewriter in a railroad office. But never mind; no soldier sees any more of a battle than the part he is in. There were seven of us men, including the engineer and fireman of the special, who were able to jump in and try to do something, and looking back at it now, it seems as if we all did what we could.

That wasn't much. About half of the people in the sleeping-car—six by actual count, as we learned afterward—were killed outright in the crash or so badly hurt that they died pretty soon afterward; and the fire was so quick and so hot that after we had got the wounded ones out we couldn't get all of the bodies of the others.

As you'd imagine, the boss was the head and front of that fierce rescue fight. He had stripped off his coat, and he kept on diving into the burning wreck after another and yet another of the victims until it seemed as if he couldn't possibly do it one more time and come out alive. He didn't seem to remember that these very men were the ones who had been trying to ruin him—that at least once they had set a trap for him and tried to kill him. He was too big for that.

After we had got out all the victims we could reach, there was still one more left who wasn't dead; we could hear him above the hissing of the steam and the crackling of the flames, screaming and begging us to break in the side of the car and kill him before the fire got to him. Kirgan had found an ax in the emergency box of our day-coach, and was chopping away like a madman.

The minute he got a hole big enough, the big master-mechanic dropped his ax and climbed down into the choking hell where the screams were coming from. Our fireman picked up the ax and ran around to the other side of the wreck where Jones, the engineer of the special, and his fireman were trying to break into the crushed cab of the 416.

The old major, the boss, and I stood by to help Kirgan, and the minute his head came up through the chopped hole we saw that he needed help. He had tried the screaming man loose, somehow, and was trying to drag him up out of the smoking furnace. It was done, amongst us, some way or other. Kirgan had wrapped the man up in a Pullman blanket to keep the fire from getting at him any worse than it already had, and as we were taking him out the blanket slipped aside from his face and I saw who it was that the master-mechanic had risked his life for. It was Hatch, himself, and he died in our arms, the major's and mine, while we were carrying him out to where Mrs. Sheila was tearing one of the Pullman sheets that I had got hold of into strips to make bandages for the wounded.

With the chance of saving maybe another one or two, we couldn't stay, to help the brave little woman who was trying to be doctor and nurse to half a dozen poor wretches at once. But she took time to ask me one single breathless question:

"Have they found him yet?—you know the one I mean, Jimmie?"

"No," I said. "They're digging away at that side now," and then I ran back to jump in again.

Though the fire was now licking at everything in sight, Kirgan, who had taken the ax from our fireman, had managed to cut some of the car timbers out of the way so that we could see down into the tangle of things where the cab of the 416 ought to have been. There wasn't much left of the cab. The water-gauge was broken, along with everything else, but in spite of the reek of smoke and steam we could see that Hogan and his fireman were not there. But down under the coil that had shifted forward at the impact of the collision we could make out the other man—the murder-mania—lying on his back, black in the face and gasping.

That was enough for the boss. It looked like certain death for anybody to crawl down into that hissing steam-bath, but he did it, wriggling through the hole that Kirgan had chopped, while two or three of us ran to the little creek that trickled down on the far side of the "Y" and brought back soaking Pullman blankets to try to delay the encroaching fire and smother the steam-jets.

I couldn't see very well what the boss was doing; the smoke and steam were so blinding. But when I did get a glimpse I saw that he was digging frantically with his bare hands at the shifted coal, and that he had succeeded in freeing the head and shoulders of the buried man, who was still alive enough to choke and gasp in the furnace-like heat.

Kirgan stood it as long as he could—until the licking flames were about to drive us all away.

UP TO PRESIDENT TO DECLARE PEACE

CONFLICT BETWEEN SENATE AND HOUSE LIKELY TO RESULT IN HARDING DECLARATION.

WOULD PREVENT LONG STRUGGLE

Deadlock Over Disarmament And Peace Measures Holding Up Other Legislation.

Washington.—With the senate and house deadlocked over the manner in which the nation is to get back on a peace basis and apparently little hope of the jam being broken, the suggestion has been put forward in influential quarters that President Harding may yet find it necessary to end the war with Germany by issuance of a presidential proclamation declaring merely that the nation is again at peace.

The departure of Senator Lodge, the Republican majority leader, for Massachusetts, to be gone all this week made it virtually certain that the senate and house cannot get together to take up the peace situation for at least a week. And there is no indication that success will attend their efforts when they do get together.

House leaders, long chafing under the senatorial dominance in matters of foreign affairs, are prepared to fight all summer in support of the Porter resolution. The senate, jealous of its prerogatives where such matters are concerned, is apparently equally determined that the Knox resolution shall prevail.

If no common ground can be found on which to merge the two resolutions, President Harding may be forced to take action himself in order to carry out the campaign pledge of a speedy ending of the technical state of war.

Senator Knox has stated that constitutionally the president would be well within his rights should he take such a step. The next step would be to direct the secretary of state to enter into negotiations with Germany and Austria for a formal treaty of peace.

The deadlock existing in the peace situation has a parallel in that of disarmament. Chairman Porter of the house foreign affairs committee has announced that the disarmament resolution will not be called up in the house this week, as had been intended. The reason assigned was the absence of so many members.

The congressional log jam over these measures and differences over others are effectually blocking progress toward the accomplishment of a taxation and tariff program for which the special session was called.

STATE TO PROBE FOREST FIRES

Kalkaska Prosecutor to Conduct Grand Jury Inquiry.

Kalkaska.—Following disclosures made to prosecuting attorney J. L. Boyd, of Kalkaska county, by Deputy Fire Warden Charles Parker and Ed. Deuell, the prosecutor has ordered a grand jury inquiry to determine responsibility for five incendiary fires and several of careless origin which have been sweeping Kalkaska county in the last several days.

Justice James Greacen will preside at the "John Doe" inquiry, prosecutor Boyd having acted under section 196 of the public acts of 1917.

According to Charles Peterson, state forest fire warden, and Director John Baird, of the conservation commission, this is the first time in the history of the state that grand jury proceedings have been initiated in behalf of the conservation movement.

Des Moines, Ia.—The forty-seventh annual convclave of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, ended with a banquet given in honor of Ernest A. Cutts, Savannah, Ga., new imperial potentate. It is estimated that more than 90,000 Shriners were here for the three-day convclave.

FOUR KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

34 Others Hurt When Bridge Over Nebraska Creek Collapses.

Omaha, Neb.—Four persons were killed, and 34 were injured, eight seriously, when Chicago and Northwestern train No. 606, from Lander, Wyo., to Omaha, was wrecked by collapse of a bridge over Big Cottonwood creek, near Whitney, Neb.

One Killed in Train Collision.

New Albany, Miss.—One man was killed, four others slightly injured and 15 freight cars with their contents were almost wrecked when a collision between two freight trains on the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad exploded a carload of dynamite at Wallerville, four miles south of here. The force of the explosion hurled one of the engines completely over the other and buried it in the ground. Trees and telegraph lines along the road were leveled.

$10,000 BAIL FOR ALLEGED SLAYER

LIVINGSTON OFFICIALS CHARGE LAWSON WITH SHOOTING WIFE IN 1919.

BODY OF VICTIM WAS EXHUMED

Statement That Shooting Was Accidental Questioned Because of Alleged Discrepancies.

Howell, Mich.—Willard A. Lawson, of Detroit, was brought here and arraigned before Justice R. D. Roche, charged with the murder of his wife on Sept. 27, 1919, while hunting ducks in a swamp near Island Lake, Livingston county. He pleaded not guilty and demanded an examination, which was set for July 6. Justice Roche fixed bail at $10,000, which attorneys for the defendant endeavored to arrange. An alleged discrepancy in stories told by Lawson of the circumstances connected with his wife's death and the theory of the prosecution that a wound such as the one which killed Mrs. Lawson could not have been inflicted accidentally in the manner he described, are the principal links in the chain of evidence so far revealed by the officials.

Lawson's statement to former Prosecutor Lyons, a 17-page document, is said to have set up the claim that the two were sitting in a rowboat, that he had his gun elevated, following birds in flight, when the weapon, an automatic, was accidentally discharged. When the body was exhumed, an autopsy revealed that the shot entered the back of the woman's neck, through a single small hole, and took a course downward, it is declared.

Harry C. Aspin, of 702 West Dayton street, Flint, a brother of the dead woman, who signed the warrant, has informed the officers that his sister and Lawson did not get along well during the six years of their married life. Aspin also declared that Lawson's explanation to members of the family of the fatal shooting differed materially from his explanation to the officers in the 17-page sworn statement.

The body of Mrs. Lawson was exhumed a short time ago from a cemetery at Auburn, Mich., in the course of an investigation made upon the request of relatives under direction of the attorney-general's department and Special Prosecuting Attorney Glenn C. Yelland, of Livingston county. It was this investigation which led to the issuance of the warrant.

FIVE KILLED IN D. U. R. CRASH

Twenty Others Injured In Interurban Collision at Chelsea.

Chelsea, Mich.—Five persons were killed and a score of others seriously injured, some perhaps fatally, the second section of a west-bound limited on the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago road ploughed its way through the wooden first section, as it stood at Warsaw siding, near Lyman Center. Miss Vina Johnson, of Ann Arbor, died after every means had been taken to save her life.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Pierce, of Highland Park, and two others were found dead in the debris. Those in the second section, which was of steel construction, were badly shaken up, no fatalities resulted. The first section was badly smashed.

ILLINOIS CONGRESSMAN DEAD

Representative Mason Had Served in Both Houses of Congress.

Washington.—Representative W. E. Mason was unexpectedly taken by death at his home here following a sudden relapse of heart trouble. He was 71 years old and had also served as U. S. senator from Illinois from 1897 to 1903. He was serving his second term as representative.

In June, 1917, Rep. Mason attracted considerable attention by declaring that he would offer a bill to repeal the Conscription law, or to amend it so as to provide that conscripted troops should not be sent abroad without their consent.

OFFICIALS PLAN WESTERN TRIP

Secretaries Denby and Fall Will Visit Island Possessions.

Washington.—Plans for an extensive western trip, including all Pacific states, Alaska and Honolulu, beginning next month, have been made by Secretaries Denby and Fall. Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations, will accompany the party.

On the return trip the officials will tour the Gulf coast.

Insanity Plea Defers Hanging.

Chicago.—The sheriff's office had to abandon plans for a third hanging scheduled for this month, when Harry Ward, convicted of murder, followed the example of Gene Geary and Carl Wanderer and through his attorneys filed a petition in court alleging he has become insane since his conviction. The state supreme court in a recent decision in the Geary case held that it was mandatory for the court to grant a jury trial to determine the question of sanity.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?
By C. N. LURIE
Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

THE USE OF "ANY."
"I KNOW the family well, and the youngest son is brighter than any of them." This sentence is incorrect and should be changed to "I know the family well, and the youngest son is brighter than any other one of them," or "brighter than any of the rest of the family."

When the sentence first quoted is analyzed—that is, taken apart and examined critically—it seems to say that the youngest son is brighter than himself; for, of course, he is one, or any one, of the family. Such a statement is absurd, and to express clearly the meaning of the writer or speaker it is necessary to insert some word or words (such as "other" or "the rest of") to show the comparison between the member of the family under discussion and the rest of the family.

If you say "The blacksmith is stronger than any man," you imply that the blacksmith is not a man. Say, therefore, "The blacksmith is stronger than any other man."

How It Started
EXPLOSIVES.
IN THE early days of warfare combatants were hurled at the enemy to help demoralize his ranks. Many experiments were conducted with the idea of producing highly inflammable material. Roger Bacon, a monk, in the Thirteenth century, while experimenting on this subject, happened to use pure instead of impure saltpetre, with the result that he nearly wrecked the place, but from this discovery came our modern powders and high explosives.

Egg Strangely Marked.
A new-laid egg was put in a pan to boil and when the white began to whiten, says an Ontario reader, she noticed a dark spot appear. The dark spot was so like a tiny mouse that when she showed the egg still in the pan to three men they thought it was a mouse.

Galbraith, Jr., of Cincinnati, national commander of the American Legion, was killed almost instantly and two other officers of the Legion were injured, when the steering gear of the automobile in which the three were riding snapped and the machine plunged over an embankment on the northwest side of this city. Mr. Galbraith suffered a fractured skull.

Col. Galbraith was elected national commander of the Legion at the national convention held last September at Cleveland. He was 47 years old and was born in Waterdown Arsenal, Massachusetts.
