Good Music and Attractions

Boyer City Marine Band To Be at County Fair.

The Fair Association wishes to announce the engagement of the Boyer City Marine Band for fair week September 12th to 16th. This organization is one of the best of its kind in this part of the state and will furnish music each afternoon of the fair and will play a concert in conjunction with Fisher's Orchestra and the New Metropole Orchestra of East Jordan each evening of the fair. The Association decided to hire this band instead of getting a third orchestra as it was thought that it would make the musical program more balanced.

The free attractions at this year's fair will be of equal merit of those of former years. The Steiner Trio have come very well recommended and were purchased from the same agency which furnished the Mexican act last year. They are a Comedy Triple Bar Acrobatic Act and have been playing the state fairs and larger county fairs for several years past. They introduce many novelties and their act is a laugh from start to finish.

Martin and Genett will put on as a free attraction for this year's fair something that is entirely new. This act carries its own special scenery and is an acrobatic act depicting the trouble between a chauffeur of a Ford car and his passengers at the garage. This act is recommended as being extremely funny and one calling for unusual acrobatic skill.

Mr. Herman Happy has just been engaged to put on an open air movie film each night of the fair. His films are good Western pictures and comedy and he will furnish moving picture entertainment for at least one hour each evening.

The Moving pictures, Martin and Genett, the Steiner Trio and the band and orchestra concerts together with the merry-go-round, side shows, and concessions and dancing in the Educational building will furnish the entertainment for the evening fair.

EXHIBITORS URGED TO GET THEIR ENTRIES IN ORDER FOR THE FAIR.

The Fair Association wishes to remind exhibitors that the Charlevoix County Fair under a ruling of the State Department requires that you bring a certificate that your cattle have been tested and have been found free from tuberculosis. Your county agent can give you all these particulars and you should get in touch with him at once as he will have a state man in the county testing cattle just before the fair. Exhibitors in other departments are urged to get their exhibits in order and make their entries as early as possible.

Early entries save confusion at the Secretary's office during the fair and save your time when you bring the articles to the grounds. There is an entry blank in each Premium List and if this is not sufficient you may get an extra one by applying at the Secretary's office in East Jordan. If you have any live stock, poultry, ducks, geese, turkeys, vegetables, grains, or fruits worthy of exhibit you should realize that it is your personal duty to exhibit these articles at the fair. It helps the other fellow who hasn't been as successful as you. It creates an incentive in him to raise better products. It will help to make your county a better and richer county and doubtless you will be able to get ideas which will aid to your success. Try it this year and see if it doesn't help you.

BABY HEALTH CONFERENCE A FEATURE AT COUNTY FAIR

Mothers, this will be of especial interest to you. Throughout the entire fair the Michigan Department of Health will carry on a baby health conference. This conference will be held in the Educational Building at the fair grounds. All babies and children under six years of age will be examined free of charge by Dr. Bradley of the United States Children's Bureau, Washington, D. C. The people of the county are very fortunate that they may avail themselves of Dr. Bradley's services as he is a leading child specialist in the United States. If you have a baby or child under six years old plan to have him weighed and examined at the fair. Make this Baby Health Conference of personal value to you.

Ole Hagerberg Near Death

Gets Arm and Neck on 2200 and 110 Volt Wires.

In a near-fatal accident Saturday afternoon Ole Hagerberg connected a 2200 Volt electric light wire and a 110 with his right arm and neck—and lives to tell the story.

The accident took place on the electric light pole in front of the postoffice and was witnessed by hundreds of afternoon shoppers. Mr. Hagerberg, who is employed as lineman for the Electric Light Co., had gone up the pole to re-connect the Empey building with electricity. The heavy lead-wires carrying the high voltage are placed in such a position as to be out of the way of the linemen making repairs on the on the low-voltage wires. For some reason Mr. Hagerberg went a step too high and adjusting the heavy life belt, started to make the connection. Just what happened is a little hazy but it seems that some of his friends across the street called to him and he started to wave his hand, his right wrist striking the heavy voltage wire. He had polished off the 110 wire and, in the mix-up this got across the back of his neck forming the circuit. This froze him to the wires and rendered him unconscious. The weight of his body pulled him away from the wires causing an explosion.

Supt. Balch, who was nearby, heard the explosion and immediately rushed to his aid. Climbing the pole he righted Mr. Hagerberg's body, which was hanging head-down from the life-belt. Ladders were brought and he was taken to the ground and rushed to a physicians office.

It was found that the current had passed from his wrist to the neck, inflicting severe burns, but that the injuries were not fatal. The wrist burn is a bad one and for several days a nurse had to be in constant watch for fear of an artery breaking.

At present he is resting easily, and if all goes well, will be on the streets again in a week or so.

DAIRY TRAIN PLACES SEVENTY PURE BREEDS

There are seventy more pure bred dairy bulls on Michigan farms as a result of the Better Sires Special train which wound up its three week's tour of the state late in August. Fifty-one scrubs were taken in on exchange for the animals placed, and educational work carried on by the train is expected to result in the placing of many more blooded sires on Michigan farms. The train was put on cooperatively by M. A. C., the State Holstein-Friesian Association, and the N. Y. C. and Penn. railroads.

Hitting 25 counties and making 47 different stops, the train covered the northern part of the lower peninsula in its swing. Nearly 14,000 farmers by actual count, turned out for the various meetings held at the different stops, Gladwin, with 980 at its meeting, holding the record for the biggest gathering.

Honors for turning in the scrubbiest sire went to Reed City, Osceola County. This scrawny individual provided much amusement when he was lined up beside College Bunter Boy, the pure bred M. A. C. Holstein bull carried on the train. While Holsteins were carried on the train, the educational work applied to all breeds alike, and the college expects to handle similar trains for other breeds in the near future.

Ideal dairy type, better sires in relation to the dairy industry, care and feeding, and the relation of the better sires movement to home life on the farm were among the subjects touched at each meeting along the route. A special exhibit car for women, containing milk products and home material; agricultural movies, and other features attracted attention. Sweet clover and alfalfa were pushed because of their special value for the dairy farmer, while bull associations were cited as the best means of placing good sires in a community.

Several city commercial and business clubs helped place bulls in their districts by buying from the train and raffling to farmers.

Ball Games Big Feature

Fair Association Offers A $500 Purse for Games.

Those attending the County fair this year will see the best, most exciting and most closely contested game of base ball ever played in this section. The following teams have been invited by the Fair Association to participate in the base ball tournament for the championship of Northern Michigan and incidentally to determine what teams shall get a part of the $500.00 offered in prizes for baseball games. The Charlevoix, East Jordan, Pellston, Mancelona and Boyer City League teams and Gaylord, Loeb Farms and Traverse City Independent teams. It is anticipated that all of these teams will accept their invitation and that there will be two baseball games each day of the fair. The team winning FIRST will receive $200; the team winning SECOND place will receive $150; the team winning THIRD place $100 and the team winning FOURTH, $50.00.

The Association has constructed this summer a good, clay diamond. This is in front of the grand stand and close enough to it that the games can be followed from the grand stand. Bleachers to accommodate 650 people are now under construction. The diamond will be fenced off, and a big score board constructed and everything done for the convenience of both players and spectators. An admission of 25 cents will be charged for a seat in the grand stand or the bleachers.

FAIR MANAGEMENT SECURES MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Management of the Charlevoix County Fair wishes to announce that it has at last been able to secure a merry-go-round for the fair, Sept. 12th to 16th. Freight rates are so high that it is extremely difficult to get a merry-go-round as far North as this, but after much correspondence the merry-go-round belonging to the Osceola County Fair at Evart, Michigan has been engaged. The Association feels that this will be especially good news to the children. In the same connection, we wish to announce that prospects are very bright that each child attending the fair will have an opportunity of getting a ride on a real live shetland pony. If negotiations for this feature are successful, we will make further announcement next week.

HORSE UPKEEP COSTS SHOW 70 DOLLAR DROP

It will cost the average Michigan farmer about seventy dollars less to keep a horse next year than it did during the twelve months ending May 1, 1921, according to statistics just released by H. M. Eliot, head farm management department of the Michigan Agricultural College.

Direct cost of upkeep averaged $163 a horse last year, while $94 is given as the average expense per animal on the basis of present feed prices. Statistics upon which these estimates are based were gathered on a so-called farm accounting route in Wayne and Monroe counties. A careful check on 118 horses on 25 different farms was kept by a field man from the college, who cooperated with the individual farmers in keeping records. The data was compiled by F. T. Riddell, of the M. A. C. experiment station.

Items entering into direct costs on horse maintenance included: grain (oats and corn) $56.70; roughage (corn stover, hay mixed, pasture and bedding) $105.91; miscellaneous (decreased inventory, horse purchases, depreciation, etc.) $25.15. From this total was deducted $11.03 for horse sales, and $13.74 for manure value, leaving the cost per animal $163. In addition, the average investment per horse and equipment is placed at $168 by the college statisticians.

Man labor to keep a single horse is placed at 93.5 hours, with 26 cents an hour the average wage.

Similar cost accounting work on gas power and other general farm costs is being carried out by the college, and results for comparative work will be available in the near future.

PROBES CAUSE OF ADRIAN ESCAPES

GOVERNOR TOLD GIRLS HEARD RUMOR THAT HAIR CUTTING WOULD BE RESTORED.

26 RUNAWAYS IN SIXTY DAYS

Average Before Abolition of Severe Punishment Said to Have Been Two Each Month.

Lansing.—Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck has begun a thorough investigation of the reported collapse of discipline at the Adrian School for Girls, 26 escaping within 60 days.

The reason assigned for the inmates leaving the home was that the board had forbidden hair-cutting as one form of punishment for infractions of the rules.

The governor will confer with Marl T. Murray, secretary of the board of corrections and charities, and, if necessary, with the board of control.

It was said that the school authorities had uncovered a plot whereby 25 girls had planned to leave the school.

Many of those who escaped during the last month were apprehended.

"The acting superintendent of the school denies that the abolition of hair-cutting as a means of punishment was the reason for the wholesale escapes," said the governor.

"I have been told that the superintendent has the situation well in hand. This does not mean there will be no investigation. I shall confer with Mr. Murray as to conditions at the school and will also take the matter up with the board."

The governor said he had been informed that the girls escaped because they feared that with the leaving of Miss Hazel Bailey this month, as superintendent, the old forms of punishment would be restored.

The order forbidding the superintendent to clip the hair of returned runaways was made July 24. Before the time the regulation was abandoned, the average number of escapes from the institution was two per month. This week's runaways brought the average for the last two months to 13 a month.

Under the present ruling, which came from a woman member of the board, institutional authorities are powerless to cope with the problem of escaped inmates. The girls, after their return, are placed in what is known as the "demoted cottage" but this carries no special terrors as the girls there are not deprived of regular recreation and they get the same food as is served at other cottages.

Officers say the girls know no punishment is in store for them in the event of their capture and three returned runaways, who were gone from the institution two days before their capture, brazenly defied the officers, upon their return to "do anything." Since the order became effective the "demoted cottage" has been filled to capacity.

ERIN PROPOSES SECOND PARLEY

Rejects Britain's Proposal But Would Negotiate Principle.

London.—The British government's peace proposals were laid before the Dal Eirann, which rejected them unanimously, but it is willing to negotiate on the principle of government by consent of the governed, Eamonn De Valera says in his reply to Mr. Lloyd George, the British prime minister.

The letter proposes that Great Britain and Ireland appoint representatives with plenary powers to negotiate details on this principle. "We have not sought war, nor do we seek war, but if war be made upon us we must defend ourselves, and we shall do so," said Mr. De Valera's letter. "We long to end the conflict between Great Britain and Ireland," he adds.

K. of C. to Reward Patriotism.

New York.—The Knights of Columbus announced that the organization would make an annual award for patriotism, similar to the Nobel prizes in science and humanities. It will be bestowed upon a person in the United States, not necessarily a citizen, who in the judgment of a committee "shall have done the deed or spoken or written the word that will stand out as the greatest contribution of the year to the promotion of the American spirit of patriotism."

Jud Tunkins. Jud Tunkins says the genuine optimist is recognized by his cheerfulness at work and not by the exuberance of his recreation.

HOMAGE PAID TO RED ARROW DEAD

TRAFFIC ON DETROIT STREETS HALTED IN MEMORY OF DEEDS OF 32ND.

BLAINE ADDRESSES REUNION

Wisconsin Governor Recalls Opening of First Offensive Move By "Les Terribles."

Detroit.—To their sleeping friends in France, the men whom they marched beside and called buddies, veterans of the Thirty-second division, paid the homage of a three-minute silence here last Sunday.

It was a voluble silence, though that may be a paradox. Men stared into vacancy—as memories retraced the months; there was the slow tolling of bells; a woman here and there dabbed at her eyes with handkerchief. A new atmosphere seemed to fall upon Washington boulevard as the division offered its tribute to those of its number who gave for freedom the youth in their hearts.

At the first bomb announcing that the Red Arrows had begun their service, traffic in the downtown district came to a standstill, and the scene was like a Christmas show-window of immovable toy people. The heavy motor through halted in Grand boulevard, as if the echoing bomb had been a signal from the crowd's nest.

Exactly three years ago—Sunday, Governor John J. Blaine, of Wisconsin, recalled in the principal address of the memorial services, General Haan took command of the sector at Juigny and began five days of hell for the Thirty-second. Exactly three years ago the sixty-third brigade, composed of Michigan men, was placed in the line and went over the top, with the sixty-fourth brigade, composed of Wisconsin men, in support.

"This morning and the night previous," said Governor Blaine; "under cover of darkness the Wisconsin men of the thirty-second have moved up to Detroit to support the Michigan men in this national peace reunion and jubilee of the thirty-second."

Anent the fact that the division was largely a formation of Michigan and Wisconsin national guardsmen, Governor Blaine said he considered it a misfortune, both from the standpoint of the American army as a whole and the state units, that more divisions were not organized along the same lines and permitted to do battle together.

OPPOSED TO BANK RATE CUT

Mellon Declares Senator Sheppard's Suggestion for Change.

Washington.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has written a letter to Senator Sheppard, of Texas declaring that the reduction of discount rates of federal banks to 3 1/2 per cent on Liberty bonds and 4 1/2 per cent on agricultural and commercial paper is out of the question.

A suggestion that the rates be reduced to these levels from the present rates of 5 1/2 per cent in some districts and 6 per cent in others was by Senator Sheppard in a communication to Mr. Mellon.

FIRE DAMAGES STR. LEVIATHAN

Flames Sweep Piers 5 and 6 of Hoboken Embarkation Port.

New York.—Fire which swept piers 5 and 6, of the United States army embarkation port at Hoboken, set fire to the giant liner, Leviathan, and forced the ambulance corps to remove the bodies of 500 American dead from the rear portion of pier four in order to save them from the flames.

All the fireboats from New York and fire fighting machinery from every municipality in Hudson county, were put to work before the fire was extinguished.

Grain
Following lower prices the first three days of week under liquidation by long and lack of support sentiment turned bullish on good export and milling demand and Chicago September wheat closed at $1.20 1-8, showing a net advance of 3 1-2 cents for the week. Chicago September corn rose 1 1-2 cents, closing at 54 1-4 cents. The market closed with underdone strong, due in part to passage of legislation to aid exports. Export demand at seaboard only fair on the 26th and sales smaller on account of inability to obtain cash grain. Country receipts small; offerings to arrive limited. Industrial corn demand good, but export demand less active. Country corn offerings limited.

In Chicago cash market No. 2 red winter wheat $1.22; No. 2 hard $1.22; No. 2 mixed corn 55¢; No. 2 yellow 56¢; No. 3 white oats $2 3-4c. Weather has been favorable for production and receipts are slightly heavier but there has been a revival of trading on account of buyers letting stocks get low on a falling market.

Closing prices 92 score: New York 41 1-2c; Chicago 37 1-2c; Philadelphia 41 1-2c; Boston 42 cents.

Fruits and Vegetables

Camels are made for Men who Think for Themselves

Such folks know real quality—and DEMAND it. They prefer Camels because Camels give them the smoothest, mellowest smoke they can buy—because they love the mild, rich flavor of choicest tobaccos, perfectly blended—and because Camels leave NO CIGARETTE AFTERTASTE.

Like every man who does his own thinking, you want fine tobacco in your cigarettes. You'll find it in Camels.

And, mind you, no flashy package just for show. No extra wrappers! No costly frills! These things don't improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons.

But QUALITY! Listen! That's CAMELS!

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—With his two daughters, Alix and Cherry, the latter just eighteen years old, and his niece, Anne, Doctor Strickland, retired, is living at Mill Valley, a short distance from San Francisco. His closest friend is Peter Joyce, something of a redneck. Visiting in the vicinity, Martin Lloyd, mining engineer, falls in love with and secretly becomes engaged to Cherry.

CHAPTER II.—While the family is speculating as to Lloyd's intentions, Cherry brings him to supper, practically announcing her engagement to him.

CHAPTER IV.

Meanwhile the hot train sped on, and the drab autumn country flew by the windows, and still the bride sat wrapped in her dream, smiling, musing, rousing herself to notice the scenery.

When Martin asked her if she liked to be a married woman, traveling with her husband, she smiled and said that it seemed "funny." For the most part she was silent, pleased and interested, but not quite her usual unconcerned self. After dinner they had a long, murmured talk; she began to droop sleepily now, although even this long day had not paled her cheeks or visibly tired her.

At ten they stumbled out, cramped and overheated, and smitten on tired foreheads with a rush of icy mountain air.

"Is this the place?" yawned Cherry, clinging to his arm.

"This is the place, Baby Girl; El Nido, and not much of a place!" her husband told her. "That's the Hotel McKinley, over there where the lights are! We stay there tonight and drive out to the mine tomorrow. I'll manage the bags, but don't you stumble!" She was wide-awake now, looking alertly about her at the dark streets of the little town. Mud gulleched beneath their feet, planks tilted. Beside Martin, Cherry entered the bright, cheerful lobby of a cheap hotel where they were smoking and spitting. She was beside him at the desk and saw him write on the register, "J. M. Lloyd and wife." The clerk pushed a key across the counter; Martin guided her to a rattling elevator.

She had a fleeting thought of home; of Dad reading before the fire, of the little brown room upstairs, with Alix, slender in her thin nightgown, yawning over her prayers. A rush of reluctance—of strangeness—of something like terror smote her. She fought the homesickness down resolutely; everything would seem brighter tomorrow, when the morning and the sunshine came again.

There was a brown and red carpet in the oblong of the room, and a brown bureau, and a wide iron bed with a limp spread, and a peeling brown washstand with a pitcher and basin. The boy lighted a flare of electric lights which made the chocolate and gold wallpaper look like one pattern in the light and another in the shadow. A man laughed in the adjoining room; the voice seemed very near.

Cherry had never been in a hotel of this sort before. It seemed to her cheap and horrible; she did not want to stay in this room, and Martin, tipping the boy and asking for ice-water, seemed somehow a part of this new strangeness and crudeness. She began to be afraid that he would think she was silly, presently, if she said her prayers as usual.

In the morning Martin hired a phaeton and they drove out to the mine. Cherry had had a good breakfast and was wearing a new gown; they stopped another phaeton on the long, pleasant drive and Martin said to the fat man in it:

"Mr. Bates, I want to make you acquainted with my wife!"

"Pleased to meet you, Mrs. Lloyd!" said the fat man, pleasantly. Martin told Cherry, when they passed him, that that was the superintendent of the mine, and seemed pleased at the encounter. Presently Martin put his arm about her and the bay horse dawdled along at his own sweet will, while Martin's deep voice told his wife over and over again how adorable and beautiful she was and how he loved her.

Cherry listened happily, and for a little while the old sense of pride and achievement came back—she was married; she was wearing a plain gold ring! But after a few days that feeling vanished forever and instead it began to seem strange to her that she had ever been anything else than Martin's wife.

For several days she and Martin laughed incessantly and praised each other incessantly, while they experimented with cooking and ate delicious spicy meals.

By midwinter Cherry had settled down to the business of life, buying beans and lard, and sugar and matches at the store of the mine, cooking and cleaning, sweeping, and making beds. She still kissed Martin good-by every morning and met him with an affectionate rush at the door when he came home, and they played the Hundred evenings after evening after dinner, quarreling for points and laughing at each other, while rain sluiced down on the porch. But sometimes she wondered how it had all come about, wondered what had become of the violent emotions that had picked her out of the valley home and established her here, in this strange place, with this man she had never seen a year ago.

Of these emotions little was left. She still liked Martin, she told herself, and she still told him that she loved him. But she knew she did not love him, and in such an association as theirs there can be no liking. Her thoughts rarely rested on him; she was either thinking of the prunes that were soaking, the firewood that was running low, the towels that a wet breeze was blowing on the line; or she was far away, drifting in vague realms where feelings entirely strange to this bare little mining camp and this hungry, busy, commonplace man, held sway.

The first time that she quarreled with Martin she cried for an entire day, with the old childish feeling that somehow her crying mattered, somehow her abandonment would help to straighten affairs. The cause of the quarrel was a trifle; her father had sent her a Christmas check and she immediately sent to San Francisco shop for a clock that had taken her fancy months before.

Martin, who had chanced to be pressed for money, although she did not know it, was thunderstruck upon discovering that she had actually disposed of fifty dollars so lightly. For several days a shadow hung over their intercourse, and when the clock came, as large as a banjo, gilded and quaint, he broke her heart afresh by pretending not to admire it.

But on Christmas eve he was delayed at the mine and Cherry, smitten suddenly with the bitterness of having their first Christmas spoiled in this way, sat up for him, huddled in her silk wrapper by the air-tight stove. She was awakened by feeling herself lowered tenderly into bed and raised warm arms to clasp his neck and they kissed each other.

The next day they laughed at the clock together, and after that peace reigned for several weeks. But it was inevitable that another quarrel should come and then another; Cherry was young and undisciplined, perhaps not more selfish than other girls of her age, but self-centered and unreasonable. She had to learn self-control and she hated to control herself. She had to economize—when poverty possessed neither picturesqueness nor interest. They were always several weeks behind in the payment of domestic bills, and these recurring reminders of money stringency maddened Cherry. Sometimes she summed it up, with angry tears, reminding him that she was still wearing her touseau dresses, and had no maid, and never went anywhere—!

But she developed steadily. As she grew skilful in managing her little house, she also grew in the art of managing her husband and herself. She became clever at avoiding causes of disagreement; she listened, nodded, agreed, with a boiling heart, and had the satisfaction of having Martin's viewpoint veer the next day, or the next hour, to meet her own secret conviction. Martin seemed satisfied, and all their little world accepted her as a matter of course. But under it all Cherry knew that something young and irresponsible and confident in her had been killed. She never liked to think of the valley, of the fogs and the spokes of sunlight under the redwood aisles, of Alix and the dogs and the dreamy evenings by the fire. And especially she did not like to think of that eighteenth birthday, and herself thrilling and ecstatic because the strange young man from Mrs. North's had stared at her, in her sticky apron, with so new and disturbing a smile in his eyes.

CHAPTER V.

So winter passed at the mine and at the brown house under the shoulder of Tamalpais. Alix still kept her bedroom windows open, but the rain tore in, and Anne protested at the ensuing stains on the pantry ceiling.

Cherry's wedding, once satisfactorily over, was a cause of great satisfaction to her sister and cousin. They had stepped back duly, to give her the center of the stage; they had admired and congratulated; had helped her in all hearty generosity. And now that she was gone they enjoyed their own lives again and cast over hers the glamor that novelty and distance never fail to give. Cherry, married and keeping house and managing affairs, was an object of romantic interest. The girls surmised that Cherry must be making friends; that everyone must admire her; that Martin would be rich some day, without doubt.

Cherry wrote regularly, now and then assuring them that she was the same old Cherry. She described her tiny house, right at the mine, and the long sheds of the plant, and the bare big building that was the men's boarding house. Martin's associates brought her trout and ducks, she wrote; and Martin had driven three hundred miles in the superintendent's car; she was preparing for a card party.

"Think of little old Cherry going off on week-end trips with three men!" Alix would say proudly. "Think of Cherry giving a party!" Anne perhaps would make no comment, but she often felt a pang of envy. Cherry seemed to have everything.

Suddenly, without warning, there was a newcomer in the circle, a sleek-headed brown-haired little man known as Justin Little.

He had been introduced at some party to Anne and Alix; he called; he was presently taking Anne to a lecture. Anne now began to laugh at him and say that he was "too ridiculous," but she did not allow any one else to say so. On the contrary, she told Alix at various times that his mother had been one of the old Maryland Percies, and his great-grandfather was mentioned in a book by Sir Walter Scott, and that one had to respect the man, even if one didn't choose to marry him.

"Marry him!" Alix had echoed in simple amazement. Marry him—what was all this sudden change in the household when a man could no sooner appear than some girl began to talk of marriage? Stupefied, Alix watched the affair progress.

"I don't imagine it's serious!" her father said on an April walk. Peter, tramping beside them, was interested but silent.

"I Don't Imagine It's Serious," Her Father Said on an April Walk.

"My dear father," the girl protested. "Have you listened to them? They've been contending for weeks that they were just remarkably good friends—that's why she calls him Franny!"

"Ah—I see!" the doctor said mildly, as Peter's wild laugh burst forth. "But now," Alix pursued, "she's told him that as she cannot be what he wishes, she had better not meet!"

"Poor Anne!" the old doctor commented.

"Poor nothing! She's having the time of her life," her cousin said unfeelingly. "She told me today that she was afraid that she had checked one of the most brilliant careers at the bar."

"I had no idea of all this!" the doctor confessed, amazed. "I've seen the young man—noticed him about. Well—well—well! Anne, too."

In June came the blissful hour in which Anne, all blushes and smiles, could come to her uncle with a dutiful message from the respectfully adoring Justin. Their friendship, said Anne, had ripened into something deeper.

"Justin wants to have a frank talk with you, uncle," Anne said, "and of course I'm not to go until you are sure you can spare me and unless you feel that you can trust him utterly!"

Anne's engagement cups were ranged on the table where Cherry's had stood, and where Cherry had talked of a coffee-colored rajah silk Anne discussed the merits of a "smart but handsome blue tailormade."

The wedding was to be in September, not quite a year after Cherry's wedding. Alix wrote her sister pages about it, always ending with the emphatic declaration that Cherry must come down for the wedding.

Cherry was homesick. She dreamed continually of the cool, high valley, the scented aisles of the deep forest, the mountain rearing its rough summit to the pale blue of summer skies.

June passed; July passed; it was hot at the "Emmy Younger"; August came in on a furnace breath; Cherry felt headachy, languid and half sick all the time. Martin had said that he could not possibly get away, even for the week of Anne's wedding, but Cherry began to wonder if he would let her go alone.

"If he doesn't, I shall be sick!" she fretted to herself, in a certain burning noontime, toward the middle of August. Martin, who had been playing poker the night before, was sleeping late this morning. Coming home at three o'clock dazed with close air and cigar smoke, he had awakened his wife to tell her that he would be "dead" in the morning, and Cherry had accordingly crept about her dressing noiselessly, had darkened the bedroom and eaten her own breakfast without the clatter of a dish. Now she was sitting by the window, panting in the noon heat. She was thinking, as it chanced, of the big forest at home and of a certain day—just one of their happy days!—only a year ago, when she had lain for a dreamy hour on the soft forest floor, staring up idly through the laced fanlike branches, and she thought of her father, with his mild voice and ready smile; and some emotion, almost like fear, came over her. For the first time she asked herself, in honest bewilderment, why she had married.

The heat deepened and strengthened and increased as the burning day wore on. Martin waked up, hot and headachy, and having further distressed himself with strong coffee and eggs, departed into the dusty, motionless, furniture out-of-doors. The far brown hills shimmered and swam, the "Emmy Younger" looked its part in its ugliest, its least attractive self.

There was a shadow in the doorway; she looked up surprised. For a minute the tall figure in striped linen and the smiling face under the flowery hat seemed those of a stranger. Then Cherry cried out and laughed, and in another instant was crying in Alix's arms.

Alix cried, too, but it was with a great rush of pity and tenderness for Cherry. Alix had got young love and novelty to soften the outlines of the "Emmy Younger" and she felt, as she frankly wrote later to her father, "at last convinced that there is a hell!" The heat and bareness and ugliness of the mine might have been overlooked, but this poor little house of Cherry's, this wood stove draining white ashes, this tin sink with its pump, and the bathroom with neither faucets nor drain, almost bewildered Alix with their discomfort.

Even more bewildering was the change in Cherry. There was a certain hardening that impressed Alix at once. There was a weary sort of patience, a disillusioned concession to the drabness of married life.

But she allowed the younger sister to see nothing of this. Indeed, Cherry so brightened under the stimulus of Alix's companionship that Martin told her that she was more like her old self than she had been for months. Joyously she divided her responsibilities with Alix, explaining the difficulties of marketing and housekeeping, and joyously Alix assumed them. Her vitality infected the whole household.

She gave them spirited accounts of Anne's affair. "He's a nice little academic fellow," she said of Justin Little. "If he had a fatiron in each hand he'd probably weigh close to a hundred pounds! He's a well, a sort of damp-looking youth, if you know what I mean! I always want to take a crash towel and dry him off!"

"Fancy Anne with a shrimp like that!" Cherry said, with a proud look at her own man's fine height. "He sounds awful to me."

"He's not, really. Only it seems that he belongs to the oldest family in America, or something, and is the only descendant—"

"Money?" Cherry asked, interestedly.

"No, I don't think money, exactly. At least I know he is getting a hundred a month in his uncle's law office, and Dad thinks they ought to wait until they have a little more. She'll have something, you know," Alix added, after a moment's thought.

"Your cousin?" Martin asked.

"Well, her father went into the fire-extinguisher thing with Dad," Alix elucidated, "and evidently she and Justin have had deep, soulful thoughts about it. Anyway, the other day she said—you know her way, Cherry—'Tell me, Uncle, frankly and honestly, may Justin and I draw out my share for that little home that is going to mean so much to us—'"

"I can hear her!" giggled Cherry.

"Dad immediately said that she could, of course," Alix went on. "He was adorable about it. He said, 'I'll do more than build you a little home, my dear!'"

"We'll get a slice of that some time," Cherry said thoughtfully, glancing at her husband. "I don't mean when Dad dies, either," she added, in quick affection. "I mean that he might build us a little home some day in Mill Valley."

"Gee, how he'd love it!" Alix said, enthusiastically.

"I married Cherry for her money," Martin confessed.

"As a matter of fact," Cherry contradicted him, vivaciously, animated even by the thought of a change and a home, "we have never even spoken of it before, have we, Mart?"

"I never heard of it before," he admitted, smiling, as he knocked the ashes from his pipe. "But it's pleasant to know that Cherry will come in for a nest-egg some day!"

Presently the visitor boldly suggested that she and Cherry should both go home together for the wedding, and Martin agreed good-naturedly.

"But, Mart, how'll you get along?" his wife asked anxiously. She had fumed and fussed and pattered and tolled over the care of these four rooms for so long that it seemed unbelievable that her place might be vacated even for a day.

"Oh, I'll get along fine!" he answered indifferently. So, on the last day of August, in the cream-colored silk and the expensive hat again, yet looking, Alix thought, strangely unlike the bride that had been Cherry, she and her sister happily departed for cooler regions. Martin took them to the train, kissed his sister-in-law gaily and then his wife affectionately. "Be a good little girl, Babe," he said, "and write me!"

"Oh, I will—I will!" Cherry looked after him smilingly from the car window. "He really is an old dear!" she told Alix.

CHAPTER VI.

But when at the end of the long day they reached the valley, and when her father came immediately into the garden and stood staring vaguely at her for a moment—for her visit and the day of Alix's return had been kept a secret—her first act was to burst into tears. She clung to the fatherly shoulders as if she were a storm-bent bird safely home again, and although she immediately laughed at herself and told the sympathetically watching Peter and Alix that she didn't know what was the matter with her, it was only to interrupt the words with fresh tears.

Tears of joy, she told them, laughing at the moisture in her father's eyes. She had a special joyous word for Hong; she laughed and teased and questioned Anne, when Anne and Justin came back from an afternoon concert in the city, with an interest and enthusiasm most gratifying to both.

After dinner she had her old place on the arm of her father's porch chair; Alix, with Buck's smooth head in her lap, sat on the porch step beside Peter, and the lovers murmured from the darkness of the hammock under the shadow of the rose vine. It was happy talk in the sweet evening coolness; everybody seemed harmonious and in sympathy tonight.

"Bedtime!" said her father presently and she laughed in sheer pleasure. "Daddy—that sounds so nice again!"

"But you do look fagged and pale, little girl," he told her. "You're to stay in bed in the morning."

"Oh, I'll be down!" she assured him. But she did not come in the morning, none the less. She was tired in soul and body and glad to let them spoil her again, glad to rest and sleep in the heavenly peace and quiet of the old home.

Late in the afternoon, rested, fresh, and her old sweet self in the white ruffles, she came down to join them. They had settled themselves under the redwoods. Anne and Justin, Peter and Alix and Buck, the dog, all jumped up to greet her. Cherry very quietly subsided into a wicker chair, listened rather than talked, moved her lovely eyes affectionately from one to another.

Peter hardly moved his eyes from her, although he did not often address her directly; Justin was quite obviously overcome by the unexpected beauty of Anne's cousin; Anne herself, with an undefined pang, admitted in her soul that Cherry was prettier than ever; and even Alix was affected. With the lovely background of the forest, the shade of her thin wide hat lightly shadowing her face, with the dew of her long sleep and recent bath enhancing the childish purity of her skin, and with her blue eyes full of content, Cherry was a picture of exquisite youth and grace and charm.

The evening was cooler, with sudden wind and a promise of storm. They grouped themselves about a fire in the old way; Anne and Justin sitting close together on the settle, as Martin and Cherry had done a year ago. Cherry sat next her father, with her hand linked in his; neither hand moved for a long, long time. Alix, sitting on the floor, with her lean cheeks painted by the fire, played with the dog and ruffled Peter about some love affair, the details of which made him laugh vexedly in spite of himself. Cherry watched them, a little puzzled at the familiarity of Peter beside this fire; had he been so entirely one of the family a year ago? She could almost envy him, feeling herself removed by so long and strange a twelvemonth.

"Be that as it may, my dear," said Alix, "the fact remains that you taught this Fenton woman to drive your car, didn't you? And you told her that she was the best woman driver you ever knew, a better driver even than Miss Strickland; didn't you?"

"I did not," Peter said, unmovedly smoking and watching the fire.

"Why, Peter, you did! She said you did!"

"Well, then, she said what is not true!"

"She distinctly told me," Alix remarked, "that dear Mr. Joyce had said that she was the best woman driver he ever saw."

"Well, I may have said something like that," Peter growled, flushing. Alix laughed exultingly. "I tell you I love her!" he added.

"Daddy, we have a lovely home!" Cherry said softly, her eyes moving from the shabby books and the shabby rugs to Alix's piano shining in the gloom of the far corner. It was all homelike and pleasant, and somehow the atmosphere was newly inspiring to her; she had felt that the talk at dinner, the old enger controversy about books and singers and politics and science, was—well, not brilliant, perhaps, but worth while. She was beginning to think Peter extremely clever and only Alix's quick tongue a match for him, and to feel that her father knew every book and had seen every worthwhile play in the world.

Martin, whose deep dissatisfaction with conditions at the "Emmy Younger Mine" Cherry well knew, had catered into a correspondence some months before relative to a position at another mine that seemed better to him, and instead of coming down for a day or two at the time of Anne's wedding, as Cherry had hoped he might, wrote her that the authorities at the Red Creek plant had "jumped at him," and that he was closing up all his affairs at the "Emmy Younger" and had arranged to ship all their household effects direct to the new home. Martin told his wife generously that he hoped she would stay with her father until the move was accomplished, and Cherry, with a clear conscience, established herself in her old room. She wrote constantly to her husband and often spoke appreciatively of Mart's kindness.

Anne's marriage took place in mid-September. It was a much more formal and elaborate affair than Cherry's had been, because, as Anne explained, "Franny's people have been so generous about giving him up, you know. After all, he's the last of the Littles; father knew every book and had seen every worthwhile play in the world."

The Last of the Littles.

all the others are Folsoms and Randalls. And I want them to realize that he is marrying a gentlewoman!"

Cherry and Alix went upstairs after the ceremony, as Alix and Anne had done a year ago, but there was deep relief and amusement in their mood today, and it was with real pleasure in the closer intimacy that the little group gathered about the fire that night.

After that, life went on serenely, and it was only occasionally that the girls were reminded that Cherry was a married woman with a husband expecting her shortly to return to him. November passed, and Christmas came, and there was some talk of Martin's joining them for Christmas. But he did not come; he was extremely busy at the new mine and comfortable in a village boarding house.

It was in early March that Alix spoke to her father about it; spoke in her casual and vague fashion, but gave him food for serious thought, nevertheless.

"Dad," said Alix suddenly at the lunch table one day when Cherry happened to be shopping in the city, "were you and mother ever separated when you were married?"

"No," the doctor, remembering, shook his head. "Your mother never was happy away from her home!"

"Not even to visit her own family?" persisted Alix.

"Not ever," he answered. "We always planned a long visit in the East—but she never would go without me. She went to your Uncle Vincent's house in Palo Alto once, but she came home the next day—didn't feel comfortable away from home!"

"How long do you suppose Martin will let us have Cherry?" Alix asked. Her father looked quickly at her and a troubled expression crossed his face.

"The circumstances seem to make it wise to keep her here until he is sure that this new position is the right one!" he said.

"Home," says a contemporary, "is the place for real courtship." It used to be, in the days of horsehair sofas built for two. We swallowed the hook.—Chicago Journal of Commerce

While the threshers were at the F. D. Russell place, the engine gave some trouble and Mr. Mosie, an expert, was called to put it in repair.

One whole week of beautiful threshing weather with a splendid rain Friday night was just as it should be.

The beautiful warm weather and just enough rain has made a decided difference in the promise for late potatoes which are just in blossom. With four weeks with out frost there is sure to be a splendid crop.

Corn cutting has begun and some is husked.

All the schools on the Peninsula are taken except the Star, Eveline No 6, which prefers an older teacher.

Everybody is fall plowing.

The East Eveline threshing machine known as the Geo. Loomis machine is doing fine work. David Staley, who is some where near 78 years old helped to repair the wood work which brings to mind the fact that away back '31 about 73 he made the first threshing ever run on the Peninsula. It was hand power. A crank on each end of a shaft was grasped by a man and turned with all his might until six bundles which had been laid out ready were run thru, then two more men who stood ready and took hold before the speed slackened and turned until six bundles were run again when the first two grabbed on again and one man forked away the straw and took care of the grain which was not cleaned but was run thru a fanning mill if one were handy or winded out on a blanket. The capacity was 30 bu. per day. The wheat was then taken to Advance from miles around often times carried on the back of the father or big brother of the family. The water power mill which is the same mill now only equipped with modern machinery and puts out the beautiful self raising pancake flour or several kinds including corn flour was owned and operated by Harvey Porter. David Staley still lives on the same farm he occupied then and is still on the job. He learned to run a motor car about 2 years ago. David Gault who went with him on the threshing machine and who occupied an adjoining farm is still on the job but is a good many years younger. He has occupied a farm of his own also adjoining the David Staley place since '82. When they were done threshing, they laid up the machine on the Bill Staley place south of Advance now occupied by Geo. Rogers. About the same date there was another machine of about the same type got to running by the Chas. Healey family and in opposition.

There is a blight on beans which has entirely destroyed some fields.

The largest pickle crop that has ever grown in this section is now on fields that seemed entirely ruined by the hail storm of July 30. The pickle co. are putting in more salt at the station in Boyne City to take care of the immense crop.

The use of salad to mean the greens from which or on which a salad mixture is placed is one of only recent origin. ## TREE WANTED THANKS.

ONE day Madam Pig and her children were eating apples under a big tree by the roadside when the tree, which was very full of fruit, bent its boughs and spoke.

"Madam Pig, you seem to enjoy eating my fruit," said the tree.

"Ugh!" grunted Madam Pig, and went on eating.

"Do you not think these are the very best apples you have ever eaten?" asked the tree.

"Ugh!" grunted Madam Pig, and went on eating.

"Your children seem to enjoy my fruit, also," said the tree.

"Ugh!" grunted Madam Pig, and kept on eating.

"Do you not think my apples are a beautiful color?" asked the tree.

"I have not noticed the color," replied Madam Pig, "but I wish you would keep quiet so I can enjoy my food."

"Well, I must say you are a very impolite creature," replied the tree, tossing its branches about; "here you come to me for food and I give you all you can eat, and your children also, and you never even thank me, and then you ask me to keep quiet. You are a rude creature."

"Why should I thank you for what you throw away?" said Madam Pig.

"If you kept all those apples on the tree which we have eaten with those you have now your limbs would break. If we had been hungry and you had given us food from your branches, which you wished to keep, then I should thank you, but not for this which you threw on the ground."

"How dare you speak to me like that?" said the tree, shaking with anger and sending down some unripe, hard apples, which sent the piglets and Madam Pig squealing down the road.

Mr. Blackbird, who had been nearby and heard all that had been said, flew into the tree and began to peck at an apple.

"How dare you spoil my unripe fruit," said the tree, "when there are plenty of ripe apples on the ground?"

"I did not care to risk one of your hard apples striking me," replied Mr. Blackbird. "I saw the way you treated Madam Pig, and besides I rather enjoy spoiling fruit."

"Oh, you dreadful creature!" exclaimed the tree, so angry now that it shook all the unripe apples from its branches, which fell on the ground, bruised and worthless.

"There, you see what has happened," said Mr. Blackbird, hopping and chattering with glee. "You have lost all your fruit, and just because you wanted to be thanked for something you had thrown away."

"If you had not been so unjust to Madam Pig perhaps I should have eaten the apples on the ground and you would not have been in such a fit of anger," and away he flew, leaving the tree to think over what he had said.

CAPTAIN SAM BRADY AND HIS FAMOUS LEAP

Capt. Sam Brady was a member of a fighting family which made history on the Pennsylvania border during the Indian wars after the Revolution. Captain Brady's greatest exploit took place in Ohio. He had been captured by the Indians and carried to the Sandusky Towns, headquarters for all the Ohio tribes, where the savages prepared to burn him at the stake.

He was stripped, bound to a post and slow fires kindled around him, for the Indians hated him so much that they wished to torture him as long as possible. Brady was a powerful man and he strained at his fetters until they were loosened slightly. Then with a final effort he snapped the last bond, leaped across the barrier of flame and, seizing a squaw, pitched her into the fire.

Before the Indians could recover from their surprise, the scout escaped from the village and plunged into the woods, hotly pursued by hundreds of savages. Finally he came to the Cuyahoga river, near the present site of Kent in Portage county.

At this place the river flowed between steep, rocky banks, 22 feet across from side to side. The scout was trapped. There was no other place for miles up and down the river where he could ford it. The Indians were closing in on him and his only chance of escape was to try to leap across the chasm.

Brady could hear the savages yelling in the woods only a short distance away as he ran back toward them to get a good start. Then turning, he sped for the brink and putting all his falling strength into a final spurt, he sprang for the opposite cliff. His jump was a little short and he struck the bank a few feet below the edge. The Indians stopped in amazement, then as the scout scrambled up over the edge, they opened fire.

They wounded him in the leg, delaying his flight, and in a short time were on his heels again. He came to a lake and plunged in. Stooping beneath the broad pads of a water lily, he breathed through a hollow reed while the savages hunted in vain on the shores of the lake. They found his bloody trail to the water's edge and, believing that he had drowned rather than be captured again, gave up the chase.

Soon afterward Brady reached Fort Pitt in safety. He had many more thrilling adventures before his death on Christmas day, 1795, but his 22-foot leap across the Cuyahoga was the greatest feat of all.

MAJOR SAM McCULLOUGH'S LEAP FOR LIFE

Fort Henry was a little stockade built for the protection of the settlers of West Virginia against the British and Indians during the War of the Revolution. It stood on the Ohio river near the present site of Wheeling. In the summer of 1777 when it was besieged by a strong force of savages, Maj. Sam McCullough, a noted border leader, left Fort Pitt at the head of 40 men to raise the siege.

Coming in sight of the fort, McCullough's men made a dash for the gates and passed through them in safety, although the Indians made a desperate effort to cut them off. Major McCullough held back to cover the retreat of his men until they were safely within its walls and delayed so long that the Redskins succeeded in getting between him and the fort.

Setting spurs to his horse, the ranger leader dashed for a hill back of the fort. At its top he met another band of Indians and at the same time a third group approached him from another direction. The Indians were now on three sides of him. On the other was a high precipice projecting over Wheeling creek, 300 feet below. The ranger was cornered.

The Indians raised a yell of triumph as they closed in on him. But when they saw McCullough turn his horse toward the cliff, they stopped in amazement.

Urging his horse to a dead run, the scout dashed toward the precipice. At the brink of the chasm he drove home the spurs and as his mount flew into the air braced himself in the saddle. The first leap was a clear drop of 50 feet, but both horse and rider were uninjured as they landed on the steep bank. Then slipping and sliding for 250 feet more, they came to the creek bottom.

As the Indians rushed to the edge of the precipice expecting to see the crushed forms of horse and man far below, they were astonished at the sight of the major, still upright in the saddle, plunging into the creek and riding up the other side to safety. Within a few hours he was back at Fort Pitt, organizing a larger expedition to march to Fort Henry.

Five years later as Major McCullough and his brother were riding along a road near Van Metre's fort, unsuspecting danger, they rode directly into an Indian ambush. This time McCullough's horsemanship could do him no good. A dozen Indian rifle shots rang out and Sam McCullough fell dead.

TOM HIGGINS' GREATEST FIGHT WITH THE INDIANS

Tom Higgins was a noted Illinois ranger during the War of 1812. One morning near Fort Hills, the Indians ambushed Tom's company and killed several of them. As they fled to the fort, Higgins stayed behind, vowing that he would get at least one Indian before he retreated. He got his Indian, but just as he was preparing to mount his horse, Ranger Burgess, who was lying on the ground wounded, called out to him: "You won't leave me to the Indians, will you, Tom?"

Higgins stopped and attempted to lift Burgess onto his horse, but the frightened animal jerked the reins from Tom's hand and dashed madly away.

"You'll have to try to crawl to the fort, Burgess," said Tom, "and I will stay behind and keep Redskins off."

As Burgess crawled away, Higgins ran in another direction to lead the approaching Indians away from his wounded comrade. In a few minutes he was surrounded by the savages and they wounded him in the leg as he fled into a deep ravine. He was nearing the fort when three Indians rose up before him. One of them fired and the ranger fell, wounded for the second time.

With a wild yell the Indians rushed at him with uplifted tomahawks, but Higgins rose once more and shot one of them dead. The other two then attacked him with spears and tomahawks. Tom defended himself with his knife until he was knocked to the ground by a blow from a tomahawk which cut off one of his ears.

Finally the ranger tore a spear from the grasp of one of the Indians and thrust it through the body of the other. He was pulled to his feet as the savage fell. The surviving warrior retreated toward his rifle and Tom, undaunted by his wounds, staggered after him. The unequal combat had been seen by the people in the fort, but they were afraid to come to his assistance until a brave woman, named Mrs. Pursey, cried out: "I will not see such a brave man die!"

She sprang upon a horse and started to Higgins' aid. Shamed by her example, several men galloped after her. They reached the ranger just as a large party of Indians were ready to swoop down upon him. They threw Higgins, fainting from loss of blood, across a horse and carried him back to the fort in safety.

Higgins did not recover from his wounds for many years, but in his old age he was given a pension for his heroic act and was made a doorkeeper in the state assembly at Vandalia.

THE EXPLOIT OF PIONEER SCOUT ANDREW POE

Andrew and Adam Poe, two brothers, were scouts in the pioneer days of Ohio. One day when the Poe brothers were leading a party on the trail of a band of Indians who had raided the settlements, they left their men to try to locate the savages. The brothers became separated. On the bank of a river Andrew came upon a giant Wyandot chief and a smaller Indian who were standing with their rifles cocked but looking in another direction.

Poe's rifle missed fire when he shot at the chief and the Indians at once discovered him. Before they could shoot, the scout sprang upon them, seizing both around the neck. The small Indian jerked loose first and while the chief held Poe, his companion tried to get in a death blow with his tomahawk. Andrew allowed him to come close. Then with one mighty kick he planted his foot in the Indian's stomach, hurling him backward and knocking the chieftain from his band.

When the little Indian got his breath back and recovered his tomahawk, he advanced on the attack again and succeeded in wounding Poe in the arm. A second later the scout pulled himself from the grasp of the chief, seized one of the Indians' guns and shot the warrior as he advanced to attack him a third time. Poe was no longer fighting against odds and he immediately attacked the chief.

The ground was wet and slippery. In another moment the Indian and the white man, locked in each other's arms, fell into the water and each began trying to drown the other. Finally Poe seized his enemy by the scalp lock and held his head under water until he believed the chief was dead.

When he released his hold, however, the redskin renewed the struggle. By this time they were fighting in deep water. Seemingly at the same time both thought of the one loaded rifle on the shore and both started to swim to get it. The Indian was the better swimmer and reached the bank first.

As the chief picked up the gun, Poe turned back in the water and began diving to avoid a bullet. The chief, however, had picked up an empty gun, the one with which Andrew had killed the little Indian, and before the Wyandot could get the loaded weapon, Adam Poe, who had heard the shot, came running to his brother's rescue. He fired and the Indian fell dead.

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

WHEN A MAN WALKS.

He possessed a peculiar talent of producing effect in whatever he said or did. Taciturn.

THE well-bred man remembers when walking with a woman and the sidewalk is narrow that if other pedestrians approach them, he should step behind his companion while they are passing.

But if escorting a woman in woods or through an overhanging country he goes ahead of his companion in order to clear the path for her.

When walking with a woman a man invariably asks whether he may relieve her of any parcels she may be carrying, but if she declines his offer he should not be insistent. A man may have to possess a good deal of discrimination these days to differentiate between some of the enlarged handbags that women carry and a small bit of luggage. However, he should always ask to carry the latter while he would, of course, not ask to carry her handbag.

A man never takes a woman's arm when walking in the street save when she is too old or feeble to walk unaided or when the way is so slippery as to be hazardous. It is regarded as decidedly provincial or "second rate" to do this.

When walking with a woman a man never stops to speak to an acquaintance whom he chances to meet unless the woman takes the lead in so doing.

If a man happens to meet a woman acquaintance, even though he is well acquainted with her, he would not think of stopping to talk with her in the street, but if there was something which they wished to discuss he might ask whether he might walk with her for a little way. He would show the same consideration to his mother or sister in this regard.

If a man overtakes a woman going in the same direction that he is he would never think of accompanying her without asking permission and unless he knew her well enough to be quite sure that she would not have the slightest objection he would not ask for this.

A man does not invariably take the curb side of the sidewalk when accompanying a woman. He does if the road is muddy and therefore that side is less desirable. In city streets he usually takes the side that makes it possible for him to meet pedestrian traffic coming in the other way. That is, he would walk at her left where traffic keeps to the right as it does in American cities.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Fact about your name, its history, meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ADELE.

DERIVED from the Teutonic Adilo, which also is the root of Adelaide, the name is one of the most ancient known to students. The significance of the name is of the most heroic character and it was a favorite with the ruling houses of the various German principalities as far back as the Tenth and Eleventh centuries. The name in its earliest beginnings was very much the same in form and even spelling as it is today. Adela is probably the widest variation in the course of centuries.

The name was widely adopted in France, as well as in England and Italy under different forms from Adalada to Adeline.

The jewel associated with persons bearing the name Adele is the turquoise. The turquoise is held to have peculiar properties of protecting the person wearing it from harm and warning them of approaching danger by breaking. Friday is Adele's most fortunate day and her lucky number is six.

WASTED ENERGY.

WHAT struck Madame Curie most in America was the electric, nervous energy that she found in the cities.

She made the suggestion: If all this power were used to further one great work, how tremendous the result would be!

There spoke the woman of science. The true discoverer in the natural world uses imagination as well as observation in finding out things.

Madame Curie and her husband knew that radium existed before they succeeded in releasing it from the material in which it was hid.

Her attitude towards the busy life around her is naturally different from that of the ordinary spectator who only looks at the surface commotion.

The difference between the two is like that between a couple of visitors to Niagara Falls.

To one the great rush of waters is nothing in the world but a physical curiosity. He objects to any interference by man with the appearance of the scenery.

To the other the important thing is quite different.

He is thrilled at the thought that through human ingenuity the water has been harnessed and the energy tapped and stored up. This is carried long distances and made to do all sorts of useful work.

The triumph of man's mind over nature is as great as the triumph of the vast stream over the rocks through which it forced its way in the course of countless years.

It is only necessary, for instance, to watch the crowds going to work in opposite directions in a great city to get the idea.

To a Francis Bacon, a Benjamin Franklin, or a Madame Curie—taking these as representative of the scientific spirit—the world must look like a place that is largely organized for inefficiency.

A large part of the work done by men and women in the course of a day has as little result as the beating of the waves of the sea on the shore.

Whether a machine is good or bad, comparatively perfect or imperfect, depends on the question of waste.

In the physical as in the industrial world, progress depends on the success with which means are adopted to ends.

So the old saying is true: Success depends on trifles and success is no trifle.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"HURRAH!"

THOUGH apparently of Anglo-Saxon origin because it is an exclamation used principally by English-speaking people, "Hurrah!" is of Teutonic ancestry, being derived from the word hurr, also the basis of the English verb "hurry." It is, in fact, only an amplification of this German word, which made its first appearance in English in the form of "Hurray"—a pronunciation which is probably more popular today than the use of the broad "a" indicative of the "ah" sound.

Examination of the marching songs and martial literature of Germany at the time of the Napoleonic wars shows that "Hurrah!" was frequently used by the Prussian soldiery at that time and even began to seep into the French language in the form of hurra. But the residents of the other side of the Rhine preferred to cling to their "Vive!" an ejaculation which is interwoven with French history for centuries past. The Germans also soon abandoned the exclamation in favor of "Hoch!" but the English took it up and English-speaking people have found in it an extremely satisfactory means of expressing their enthusiasm and approval.

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"THE NEWS ARE."

THERE are certain words in English which are seemingly plural in meaning because they are plural in form, ending in "s." But they are really singular in meaning, and therefore they should take the singular verb, not the plural, although the proper use may seem incorrect. Among such words are "news," "politics," "economics." One should not say, for example, "The news concerning the war are good"; "politics, when properly conducted, are a good pursuit for a citizen"; "economics have been called the dismal science." In all of these cases, use the singular verb.

There are, however, certain words ending in "s" concerning which there is doubt. Grammarians differ frequently concerning the proper verbs to be employed with such nouns as "headquarters" and "arms." "The general's headquarters were (or was) at Richmond," we may say; "the arms given to the poor family are (or is) not sufficient for its maintenance." "Means" may be either singular or plural, accordingly as the means is or are singular or plural.

"THE WHITE FEATHER."

THIS phrase, which is now generally used to express cowardice or "chicken-heartedness" on the part of him to whom it is applied, originated in the days when gamecock fighting was a fashionable sport and the cocks carefully bred. A gamecock of pure blood had universally dark plumage; but the cross-strains, which were not fighters, literally "showed the white feather"—white feathers appearing in their plumage.

It's astonishing that any car owner today should not know all the tire service he is entitled to.

Nor how to check up between the economy of par quality on one hand—and big discounts, surplus stocks, discontinued lines and retreads on the other.

For two years U. S. Tire makers have been telling the American people all about tires.

They have laid open the tire business from every angle.

They have always led the fight for better tires.

They have consistently maintained quality first standards with certain economy for the tire buyer.

They have established 92 Factory Branches all over the country. Perfecting U. S. distribution so that you get a fresh, live tire every time you buy a U. S. Tire.

So when a man once decides on U. S. Tires he knows what he is getting in quality—service—economy.

In support of his own judgment he gets the pledged word and reputation of the largest and most successful tire concern in the world.

"You get a fresh, live tire every time you buy a U. S. Tire."

The U. S. CHAIN TREAD
One of the few tires of which it may be said that they deliver economy year in and year out and tire after tire.

JOHN J. PERSHING.

Detroit—About 6,000 veterans of the Thirty-second division were in the city for the annual reunion of the Red Arrow men when General John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief in war time, and general of the army in peace days, arrived to take part in the ceremonies. The reunion was held August 27-28-29 and 30. General Pershing was escorted to the D. A. C. where he was the guest of a joint committee representing the Thirty-second division and the Detroit citizen's committee.

PEACE WITH GERMANY SIGNED

Pact Guarantees U. S. All Rights Accorded at Versailles.

Washington—The treaty of peace with Germany, negotiated by President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes in lieu of the rejected treaty of Versailles, was signed in Berlin Aug. 25 and made public by the American state department shortly afterward.

The treaty explicitly provides the United States shall be entirely dissociated from the League of Nations, is not bound by any action that the league has taken or may take in the future, and it binds Germany to all the important reparations and economic clauses, the disarmament provisions and other essential obligations insofar as they affect the United States, which were specified in the Versailles treaty as approved by the Allied and associated powers other than the United States.

The treaty must be ratified by the senate before diplomatic relations are resumed.

MELLON DOOMS MEDICINAL BEER

Won't Issue Prescription Bill Pending Final Action On Bill.

Washington—Beer, as a medicine, was doomed by the treasury unless congress after recess should fail to enact the Willis-Campbell anti-beer bill.

In conference with internal Revenue Commissioner Blair, Secretary Mellon decided that the regulations already drawn which would permit physicians to prescribe a case of beer at a time with no limit on the number of prescriptions, should be held up by the treasury pending determination of the medicinal beer question by congress.

PANAMA MOURNS U. S. RULING

Republic's Flag to Be Flown at Half Mast for 30 Days.

Panama—President Porras signed a decree, which declares the republic of Panama in mourning for one month. He ordered that the flag be displayed at half mast on all public buildings. This action was taken in consequence of the award to Costa Rica of disputed territory along the frontier and the decision of the United States not to delay Costa Rican occupation of the district.

TRAVELING WOMAN.

THE traveling man has been an important member of our commercial life these many years, but the traveling woman is newer. However, she has come, and she is making good. The old notion that the work was too hard for her is rapidly dying away. Today traveling is not hard. A woman is no longer thought queer when she travels alone.

If you look forward to taking up this sort of work you need to ask yourself if you are qualified for the work.

You ought to be a good mixer and capable of taking care of yourself. You ought to have charm, the power of interesting people, and be an easy talker. You must make yourself thoroughly familiar with the line of goods you are to sell. Never try to sell something in which you do not believe. It can't be done.

You should begin by taking a course in some good school in salesmanship, with special work in the line you wish to follow; and you should follow this by working in a store or wholesale house. Make it clear that you wish to fit yourself to travel, and do not stay with any firm that is not willing to give you a chance to do this.

Once launched, it will depend on yourself as to how far you will go. But if you are a real commercial traveler you will get a lot of fun out of the life, plenty of experience, and you stand to make a lot of money.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

GIVING.

HE PUT his name on every list.

He was a true philanthropist—

And yet a mighty lot he missed

In giving of his self:

He gave his gold, but let a few

Good friends disburse the check he drew,

And so one joy he never knew—

He never gave himself.

HIS money did a lot of good:

It found the needy neighborhood—

And yet he never understood

The thing we have to give,

The thing we need to give to men,

Besides our money now and then,

The thing we have for giving when

Men's lives are hard to live.

Oh, wealth is much, but much the hand

That finds the fallen brother and

Restores him to the solid land

When tossed upon the seas;

Oh, wealth is much, but much the smile

That lifts the other man the while

You give a little of your pile

For his necessities.

So go yourself and do not send:

Be both the giver and the friend;

Be not too rich, too high, to bend

To lift the man you aid—

Seek out the soul that is adrift,

Bring gold to help but love to lift,

And you shall feel, for every gift,

A thousand times repaid.
