Michigan Game Law Changes

Synopsis of Laws With All Changes

Local hunters and fishermen will find that this year a number of changes have been made in the game and fish laws. The deer season opens November 10th and it will be lawful to kill these animals until November 30th inclusive. Rabbits can be killed from October 15th to December 31st, giving the hunters an opportunity to kill "cotton-tails" while hunting for fox squirrel. The open season for fox squirrel is from October 15th to 31st, inclusive.

The new law also will set hard on fishermen who have been used to fishing for bluegill, white bass and crappies during the spring months. Under the new law it is unlawful to catch or have in your possession any of these fish between April 1st and June 15th. Sunfish and perch can be taken any time.

DAIRY COW COSTS SHOWN BY RECORDS

Figures on the cost of maintaining dairy cows, just released by F. T. Ridell of the farm management department at the Michigan Agricultural College, give $142.80 as the total direct cost per cow during the past year in average herd. The material upon which this estimate is based was gathered from a cost accounting route in Wayne and Monroe counties, which included 528 animals on 23 different farms, and was checked carefully by J. W. Kurtz of the college staff.

Returns from the herds studied on the route totaled $235.06 per cow, leaving a net average return, above direct costs, of $92.26 a year per cow. Costs included $103.36 feed per cow, and $39.44 for other costs, including maintenance of entire herd and feed for young stock and bulls. Returns included $175.88 from milk and cream sales, and $59.18 from other sources, including sale of stock and manure, and dairy products used in the home. Man labor required to care for one dairy cow was found to total 151 hours a year at an average price of hired labor of 24.9 cents per hour, including board. Total investment and buildings being included in the investment figures.

An interesting feature brought out in the records was the fact that different herds, because of greatly differing production ability per cow, showed decided variance in earnings power. Nine herds averaged 8,305 pounds of milk a cow, for a net return of $111.62 a head; while eleven herds averaged but 6,310 pounds of milk per cow, for a net return of only $92.94 an animal.

JACK'S GARAGE SOLICITS YOUR WORK

John W. Lalonde has opened a Garage and Auto Repair Shop on State street opposite the Zitka block and solicits your auto repair work, including motors on all makes of cars. Emil Steinback, an expert mechanic, proficient on ignition and general repair work, is employed by Mr. Lalonde.

All work done goes out with our guarantee back of it. Give us a trial, adv.

HOME BREW LIMITATIONS

Prospective home-brewers who were jubilant over the prospect of making 200 gallons of wine or beer for their families without being bothered by the prohibition forces have had a sad disillusionment. The 200 gallons must be kickless. Father may not purchase any "stills, worms, or coils, malt extracts or syrups, or fermented fruit juices or any fermentable material, receipts or formulas for the manufacture of liquor for use in the home or elsewhere for beverage purposes."

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes has given out a lengthy interpretation of the recent ruling. It seems that thousands of persons believed it to mean they could make 200 gallons of wine or beer in their homes, and the internal revenue office has been swamped with applications from people who thought that a permit was all that was necessary in order to go ahead and brew almost anything they had a fancy for.

The whole business seems to be in something of a muddle. It seems that, in an effort to preserve constitutional rights against prohibition officers with more zeal than legal knowledge, the ruling was made that a man who had not more than 200 gallons of drinkables would be considered to have made it for his family only, and not for sale. Therefore there would be no warrant issued to search his house. It did not mean that anyone without materials for brewing could go forth and buy them at will. The Volstead act expressly forbids such purchase as quoted above.

The latest interpretation will be a blow to those who were preparing to ferment the festive grape in large quantities. But it comes as a great relief to all good citizens who want prohibition thoroughly tried out before it is condemned or seriously modified. It is also a relief to mother, who has troubles of her own without having the kitchen and cellar in a continual mess.

AT THE TEMPLE THEATRE NEXT WEEK

Sunday, William D. Taylor's big special production "The Furnace." They began their married life as sworn foes. The most gorgeous wedding that London had seen in a decade, an aeroplane honeymoon, and a bitter misunderstanding that caused the groom to repudiate his bride on their very wedding night. That was what pretty giddy Folly reaped when she won the most eligible man in London.

Tuesday, Breezy Easch in "The Big Adventure." Breezy is one of our new boy stars in his first starring picture and is a feature that will appeal to every member of the family and is reported to be good.

Wednesday, Eileen Percy in "The Tomboy." Now what would you do if you were a tomboy and the women of your village gossiped about you. Would you satisfy them by not saying your answer to the proposal of the wealthy visitor? Would you? Or would you grab him and let the gossips gossip? It's a laugh from start to finish.

Thursday, Mary Roberts Rhinehart presents one of the Eminent Authors productions "It's A Great Life" a picture and story 100 per cent entertainment and up to the very high standard set by his company.

Friday, Mgr. Gruber has just received a telegram from the big musical show "The Only Girl" wanting to play here on this day, watch for further announcements in regard to this big attraction.

A FEW MORE REMARKS BY UNCLE GEORGE ON ROAD QUESTION

Let's look at some of the foolish things we have done in our road work, such as the hauling of dirt, gravel and small stones from the Boyne City road, to the road leading to Loebs farms, with heavy truck, and then try to decide why we stand for it. In the first place the damage done to the roads, by the hauling of this stuff, is a great deal more, than any good, that could possibly come from trying to mend the road, and the worst of it is, that the stuff we put on the road, is absolutely worthless, for this purpose, and for this road. A great deal of it has already been pushed out of the track, by the trucks themselves. It is very much the same as it would be to put cracked ice on an ice road. We can put cracked ice to a great deal better use than using it on roads. Another illustration of brilliant management, this little piece of unfinished road on the county line halfway between Petoskey and Charlevoix. With the concrete machinery, the materials and the men on the ground, why, for Pete's sake, did they not go ahead and finish the job. This little piece of road costs more for broken springs and damage to cars, saying nothing about the profanity, that the whole dam road would cost. Then again, that road from Charlevoix to Greensky Hill built three years ago. When I told Mr. Rogers that inasmuch as we had bonded us, and he had agreed to give us a concrete road, the entire lake frontage of our county, on the Dixie Highway. He said, "Oh, that's a splendid piece of road. We can't afford to build concrete on that." Of course at that time it seemed unnecessary, but now, it needs repairing and rebuilding and will always need it as long as we continue to use it and it never will be good until we have a good concrete road there. The quicker we build it, the better we will all be off. That road today is a great deal worse than the one Stacks built the same year, in two and a half weeks, from the Waller farm to Burgess, which cost only eighteen hundred dollars. Then take a squint with your left eye closed and see what you think about this. There has never been a year in the thirty-seven years I have lived here, that the twelve miles of road to Norwood has ever had to exceed one thousand dollars spent on it and today, it through the manipulations of Big Joe Sprick and his road plane, is in better condition than the road is from Charlevoix to East Jordan, which has had from eight to ten thousand dollars per mile spent on it and every foot of it needs repainting now, until you strike the concrete at East Jordan. Like the babbling brook one could go on and on "till the hot place freezes over and then the half would not be told. The Saw Tooth roads grow worse and worse. The chuck holes are more numerous and the worst of it all is, that these roads cannot be made over into any other kind of a road because of the hard lumps. You and I both know a lot more than has been told but we talk it in twos and threes when we should talk it in hundreds and thousands. I have no unkind words or thoughts of or for any man in Charlevoix County but I claim our road system is a rotten one.

Yours truly
Uncle George.

EAST JORDAN HIGH SCHOOL

This column is conducted by the Sophomore English classes. The assignment is made for class and the best articles are chosen for publication.

Freshman Party

The freshman class held a corn husking party at the home of Frank Shepard, September 20. They were chaperoned by Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Snellenberger. The crowd, of which there were five loads, started at six o'clock and arrived there just before dark. They were having a merry time and had husked fifteen or twenty bushels of corn, when it began to rain and they were obliged to stop. They went indoors and played games and told jokes until a lunch was served of sandwiches, coffee, weenies, cake and later marshmallows. After playing more games they started for home about ten o'clock, after a very pleasant evening.

Cooking Class

The domestic science classes are beginning a very promising course this year under the direction of Miss Lillian Massalink. The week of the Fair, candy was made for sale to benefit the Senior class. The week following sour milk griddle cakes and muffins proved an excellent experiment.

English Clubs

Mrs. Sebring, teacher of English of the ninth and eleventh grade, has adopted the plan of using clubs to make English more interesting. There are three clubs, two freshman, "The Freshman Literary Live-Wires," and the "Let's Go Literary Club." The Junior club is called the "Junior Senior Literary Society." The three organizations meet Friday at the class hour for their programs. The Freshmen have been studying Whittier and Longfellow and the Juniors, Browning. The officers of the Freshman "Literary Live-Wires" are:

President—Anna Kowalske
Secretary—Henry LaChair
Treasurer—Bae Keat

The officers of the "Let's Go Literary Club" are:

President—Carlton Bowen
Secretary—Dorothy Kitzman
Treasurer—Francis Rogers.

The officers of the "Junior-Senior Literary Society" are:

President—Ingram Little
Secretary—Ruth Fuller
Assistant Secretary—Elyse Bradford.

Field Crops Class

Friday, Mr. Nesman surprised the Field Crops class by conducting a laboratory experiment. The class was divided into three divisions, each pupil was given an ear of corn to be weighed. It was then shelled and the shelled corn weighed. The average percent of shelled corn was found to be 78.2 per cent to one hundred pounds of ear corn. This is a good average as it takes not quite 72 pounds of ear corn for a bushel of shelled corn. The corn was supplied by Harry Chorpentling.

Senior English

A Literary Club of twenty-two students has been organized in the Senior class for the betterment of oral English and the diffusion of literary knowledge among its members. In order to make the club well organized the members have chosen the following officers:—Miss Virginia Pray, President; Francis Coykendall, Vice-president; Miss Edythe Oleson, Secretary and Treas.; and Miss Eleanor Shipp as the Critic.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Monday, Sept. 28th, at the regular class hour. The program for the day consisted of a study of short stories. A number of students gave reports on the lives of Nathaniel Hawthorne, Rudyard Kipling and Guy DeManpassant and short stories by those authors were reviewed. The next program will consist of reports on Greek Myths.

Sophomore Party

About fifty pupils spent four or five hours enjoying themselves at the Sophomore party given at the high school building on Friday evening, September 23rd. Several of the faculty were there and a few juniors. Every one was put in an excellent humor, right at first because of the splendid supper served by the Sophomore girls. After supper all went to the gymnasium where sides were chosen to play games. After some exciting games, such as spoon races and relay races, the winning team, which was led by Mr. Snellenberger, received a box of chocolates as a reward. Music for dancing was furnished by the class orchestra.

Football

There are sixteen boys out for football this year. They are a "green" bunch as only four of them have ever played on the high school team before, but they are full of "pep and grit" and not afraid to practice an hour and a half every night after school. The team is very light weight having an average of about 130 pounds. The coaches, Mr. Snellenberger and Mr. Nesman are working hard with them. New suits have been ordered for them and Mr. Duncanson says they will be the best equipped team in northern Michigan.

The schedule this year is as follows:

Sept. 30—Boys City at Boyne City.

Oct. 7—Charlevoix at Home.

Oct. 22—Harbor Springs at Home.

Nov. 12—Manacelona at Manacelona.

The boys out for football this year are:—Hugh Dickens, Captain; Cecil White; Rollin Joken; Russell Johnson; Theodore Malpass; Ronald Love; Denzil Hammond; Roy Stewart; Gayle Hukkins; George Phillips; Edward Streeter; Earl Sumner; Manuel Bartholomew; Conrad Coykendall; Floyd Walker; Roy Vance and Isadore Kling.

CAMPAIGN TO INCREASE STATE LEGUME ACREAGE

A state-wide campaign to increase the acreage of alfalfa and other leguminous crops in Michigan is to be launched in the near future, according to announcement of Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

All other agricultural agencies in the state will be called upon to aid in the campaign, which is expected to be of far-reaching importance to Michigan agriculture. Importance of legumes in good farming systems is apparent, and an effort will be made to acquaint the entire state with their value.

"The time is ripe to make Michigan a leading alfalfa state," says Professor Cox. "After twenty-five years of effort, alfalfa has arrived. With dollar wheat and fifty cent corn staring them in the face, farmers are regarding alfalfa as a mighty good money crop. In fact, it is one of the best in the state this year. With timothy and clover hay a failure in most sections, alfalfa fields showed up like oases."

"Like good clover, alfalfa is the foundation of successful farming. Good stands are of great benefit to future cultivated and grain crops. A man cannot grow this crop without becoming a better soil man, a better crop grower, and a better feeder of livestock. Increased acreages of alfalfa, sweet clover, clover, vetch and soy beans will be sought in the year."

The State Farm Bureau will be in a position to supply northwestern-growing alfalfa seed, and to aid in securing adequate supplies of lime and marl, and phosphate and other commercial fertilizers. Development bureaus, railroad agricultural departments, and local business organizations will also cooperate in the campaign.

A generous man will always have plenty of friends—until he goes broke.

Children have a right to happiness, and a lot of them think they have a right to all the happiness in the family.

If your manners are "fresh" your company will be stale.

The trouble with one type of reformer is that he tries to be his brother's keeper when he isn't able to keep himself.

Perhaps there would be more envy of him if a successful money-maker were often a success in some other way.

The world is gradually growing better; you hardly ever see a bright red necktie, nowadays.

Any man knows he has the best automobile made so long as it keeps running, and the worst machine on the market the minute it stops.

You can't improve the quality of a Ben Davis apple by giving it a "good talking to," and its quite as useless to try and improve the intelligence of a loaf of bread by giving them advice.

When a nervous man has so much business he doesn't know what to do, he usually winds up his day by not doing much of anything and going out in his automobile.

Dogs Trained to Hunt Truffles

The truffle is an edible fungus growth found in certain parts of Europe, growing a few inches underground, and is considered a delicacy for the table. Dogs are often trained to find them. They learn to detect the presence of the truffle under the surface of the soil by a faint odor given out by the truffle. The dog, when over the spot, stops and pats the ground with his paw. Then the man digs up the truffle.

Name Differently Applied.
The name "daddy longlegs" is applied in the United States to creatures closely related to spiders, while in England it is given to the crane flies.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

WHAT CHILDREN READ

PEOPLE would not worry so much about what they call the "modern child," if they only stopped to think that fathers and mothers, uncles and aunts, of every generation had their doubts as to the new generation.

In fact, Adam and Eve were, in all probability, the only proud parents in all history who never said, "Children did not do such things when we were young."

The very latest discovery that has been made about the little boys and girls of America is that their taste in reading is quite different from that of their elders at the same age.

It appears that they are finding rather dull some of the things that appealed to the youngsters of former days, and are demanding more excitement than is good for them.

It is well, in thinking about such a subject, always to remember that older people have a weakness for considering any such change in taste as for the worse.

That is the compliment that maturity pays to itself.

The great trouble is that we don't remember what we really cared for when we were small.

Many of the things that we were supposed to enjoy we didn't really like until we grew up. Others that were forced on us for our good were spoiled for us forever.

Children have no sense of subtlety, or irony. This is natural.

They read "Alice in Wonderland," or "Gulliver's Travels," or "The Arabian Nights" for the straight story, not for any secondary meaning that is beyond them.

A clever American woman suggests that the children, especially in a big family, should be encouraged to write stories of wild adventure for each other.

This is not so impossible or far-fetched as it seems.

A good example came to light recently in the case of the children of Theodore Roosevelt.

That many-sided man was a child among his sons and daughters until the very last.

His letters to them, full of action as they are, and illustrated by himself, will last longer than anything else in the way of history or travels that he ever wrote.

From him and his youngsters, the woods and waters around Oyster Bay were delightfully mysterious, where anything might happen.

For children the world is still, and always will be, full of a number of things. The main thing is not to try to turn them into little men and women.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name, its history, meaning, whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ERNESTINE.

ERNESTINE has an origin of lofty dignity. She is one of the "Eagle" names. Like many of the feminine names connected with mythology, the eagle occupied a position of great respect and even adoration among the ancients, and his name, with various suffixes and prefixes, furnished many of the cognomens then in vogue.

In Scotland the word for eagle was "erne" and the name was found in all countries where there were mountains, the homeland of the king of birds, Araridur, or Arnelidur, was the first of the eagle ladies. She was said to be the daughter of Asborn, of the Hbrides, who was sold to an Icelandic named Katell Thymer. This lady had the good fortune to find a quantity of silver sufficient for her ransom beneath the roots of a tree, but she decided to remain the wife of Thymer and goes down in history as one of the famous women of Iceland.

The next step in the evolution of Ernestine was Anthora, and later Anora, who was the wife of Bernard de St. Valery. Her name was carried into the family of Braose by King John's victim, Maude de St. Valery, who called one of her daughters Anorra.

The masculine Ernest, which preceded Ernestine directly, appeared first in Lombardy in the year 752, through Markgraf of Austria Ernst spread all over Germany after the Reformation, and it was Germany which finally formed the feminine Ernestine. Though still in great vogue there, it has of late years been contracted to Stine, or Tine, or sometimes Erna.

Bohemia calls her by elaborate Arnostinka, but England and America took her over as Ernestine, and preserves her as such.

The moonstone is Ernestine's talismanic gem. It is said to bring her good fortune and good health and is particularly lucky for lovers who, old legend insists, may read the future in its depths. Sunday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. Yellow is said to be her color.

Worth While Lives.

Life pays big dividends to those who hear and obey the immemorial and immutable commandments of the Master of life. The broken man of forty is a misfit. His sins of omission and commission have found him out. He goes to the rubbish heap. But men like our octogenarian disciples of work having earned the right to live, go on through the years confident and serene, realizing that life is worth while. They make it worth while for themselves and for multitudes of their fellow men.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No Topographical Formality.

With the exception of a few areas in the Cook Inlet region, the topography of Chugach forest in Alaska is exceedingly rugged, the mountains often rising abruptly from the sea. On Resurrection Bay the towering peaks seem to reach into heaven. The timber line is usually at an elevation of about 2,000 feet; above this rise barren, glacial peaks, ranging from 3,000 to 8,000 feet in elevation.

Sealing Wax Etiquette.

In the days when all correspondence was sealed there was etiquette about the use of sealing wax. Royalty would give some favorite courier the sole right to use a certain colored wax, and officers of the state would each have distinguishing colors, in much the same way as staff officers of the army wear colored "tabs" nowadays.

DOWAGIAC CASE BAFFLES OFFICERS

NAIL-STUDDED WEAPON USED TO KILL FATHER, MOTHER, GIRL IN DOWAGIAC.

ONE DAUGHTER WILL RECOVER

Testimony At Inquest Develops New Sensations; Physicians Say Vic- tims Were Assaulted.

Dowagiac, Mich.—Robbery now looms up stronger than ever as a possible motive for the triple murder over one week ago of Mr. and Mrs. William Monroe and their 19-year-old daughter, Neva, whose heads were battered in with a club as they slept in their beds in their little one-story frame shack on the outskirts of the city.

The hunt for the slayer gained added impetus when an augmented force of detectives, employed with a fund raised by popular subscription, took up investigation, and when it was announced the supervisors would offer a $5,000 reward for his capture.

The crime was committed at the farm home of the Monroes, on the outskirts of the city, possibly during the night of September 17, but was not discovered until Tuesday of last week. The murderer battered the heads of his victims with a nail-studded club as they slept in their beds. Little 12-year-old Ardith Monroe, also badly beaten about the head, and in a partial stupor, was still alive when found and physicians at the hospital where she was taken say she will recover but will be scarred for life. She was unable to tell the officers anything about the attack, having been apparently struck on the head with the club before awakening; the same way the other three victims had been disposed of by the slayer. The blood-stained club, matted with hair, was found in the room. There was no indication of robbery.

William Kinney was arrested by Sheriff Sherman P. Wyman at Temple and was brought back here for questioning. At a preliminary examination held at Cadillac the accused claimed a complete alibi, which he later established and was released. Officers had claimed that Kinney had been friendly with the murdered girl in 1920.

Police declare they have evidence that Kinney was in Dowagiac on the night the murder is believed to have taken place. He will be asked to explain his presence here, and also of alleged relations with Neva Monroe, the 19-year-old daughter who was murdered. Officers claim the two were quite friendly in 1920 and also that there was some friction between him and Neva's father.

An outstanding feature of the coroner's inquest was the development in physicians' testimony that an attempt had been made to assault Neva either before or after death, and that a similar attack had been made upon Ardith and possibly upon the mother.

It also developed at the inquest that Neva was the unwed mother of a child now in an orphan asylum at St. Joseph.

CUT FREIGHT RATES ON COKE

20 Per Cent Reduction Now Effective on State Railroads.

Lansing.—Every railroad entering the state of Michigan has reduced its freight rates on coke approximately 20 per cent. This announcement was made through the interstate commerce commission late last week and followed a similar announcement made previously by the Pere Marquette railroad.

The reduction was effective in Michigan on all the railroads September 20. It will be effective in several other states directly connected with the coal and coke situation, as well as in Ontario on October 10.

The 20 per cent decrease effective in Michigan now intrastate business reduces the Michigan Central rate on coke 41 cents on a ton, the old rate being $1.96 a ton and the new one $1.55.

LOVE TANGLE IS GIVEN AS MOTIVE

MRS. LONG BARES ADVANCES OF BROTHER-IN-LAW, HELD ON MURDER CHARGE.

BLOOD STAIN ON ADAM'S COAT

Police Also Allege That Bullet Found In Long's Body Fits Prisoner's Revolver.

Caro, Mich.—Positive identification by George Masten, a farmer living near here, of Clarence L. Adams, Saginaw contractor, as the man he saw hurrying away August 28 from the swamp thicket where the body of his brother-in-law, Howard Long of Saginaw, was found, features a series of revelations in the investigation of Long's murder, with which Adams is charged.

Masten first identified Adams in the Tuscola county jail here Saturday afternoon and affirmed this identification a short time later when authorities took him and Adams to the place where Masten claims he saw Adams the day Long disappeared.

Other developments during the day were numerous and included the following:

Mrs. Adams, wife of the prisoner, identified the galvanized iron pan found near the swamp in which Long's body was hidden, as belonging to her. Officers discovered what they believe are blood stains on the inner lining of the left side and left sleeve of Adams's coat.

A Saginaw girl, whose name is withheld, made a statement purporting to relate to an incriminating conversation between Adams and his wife the night after Long disappeared, and also quoted alleged statements made to her by Adams the next day.

One of the bullets found in Long's body was found to fit the rifling in the barrel of the revolver found in Adams's home. Authorities reported they had statements from the widow of the slain man showing she had had relations with Adams for five years preceding her marriage to Long. Adams's advances after the marriage, these statements are said to have indicated, were repulsed, furnishing, the officers believe, a motive for a desire on the part of Adams to have Long out of the way.

Long disappeared August 28 last, when he went on a berry picking trip with Adams. The prisoner was subjected to a severe grilling Saturday, but failed to change his original story, which insists upon his innocence of the crime. He palmed when shown Long's body, but remained firm in his claim of innocence.

Effect of High Altitudes.

At a high altitude the atmospheric pressure is much less than at sea level. This decrease in pressure produces a lowering of the temperature at which water boils. Since water can be boiled at a lower temperature, an egg can be cooked more quickly at sea level, provided the temperature is sufficiently high to cook the egg. At a height of 18,000 feet, water cannot be heated in open vessels above 180 degrees Fahrenheit, and this is not hot enough to set the white of an egg.

Orthographical Verification.

It is the common opinion that the Irish dearly love a scrap and will without something to stir their passions they would become dull and spiritless. Is this opinion justified? We can only answer, in our flippant way, that obviously the "Ire" cannot be removed from "Ireland" without at the same time removing a portion of its "elan."—Boston, Transcript.

Curious South-Sea Jargon.
Bench-la-mer is a curious jargon which has developed as a means of communication between English-speaking traders and the islanders of the western Pacific. It derives its name from that of an edible marine organism, the fishing of which flourished in the South seas in the middle of the last century. Nearly all the words in this language are English, but they are strung together by the natives in accordance with the rules of their own speech.

And remember this! Camels come in one size package only—20 cigarettes—just the right size to make the greatest saving in production and packing. This saving goes straight into Camel Quality. That's one reason why you can get Camel Quality at so moderate a price.

Here's another. We put no useless frills on the Camel package. No "extra wrappers!" Nothing just for show!

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And their added cost must go onto the price or come out of the quality.

One thing, and only one, is responsible for Camels great and growing popularity—that is CAMEL QUALITY.

They looked at each other in a silence that grew more and more awkward by great plunges. Peter had time to wish that he had kept his eyes shut; to wish that he had smiled when he first saw her—he could not have forced himself to smile now—to wonder how they were ever to speak—where they were rushing—rushing—rushing—before she turned noiselessly and vanished into the dim room.

Peter lay there, and his heart pounded. A moment ago he had been a tired man, fretted because his wife forgot to meet him; now there was something new in the world. And rapidly all the world became only a background, only a setting, for this extraordinary sensation. The hills beyond still swam in the hot sunlight, the mountain rose into the blue, but the light that changes all life lay over them for Peter.

He said to himself that it was awkward—he did not know how he could enter that door and talk to Cherry. And yet he knew that that meeting of Cherry, that the common exchange of words and glances, that the daily trifling encounters with Cherry were all poignantly significant now.

He felt no impulse toward hurry. He might sit on his porch another hour, might saunter off toward the creek. It mattered nothing; the hour was steadily approaching when she must reappear.

Alix drove in, full of animated apologies. She managed the car far better than he, and no thought of an accident had troubled him.

The evening was warm, one of the two or three warm evenings that marked the height of summer even in the high valley. There was not a breath of air in the garden; roses and wallflowers stood erect in a sort of luminous enchantment. Moonlight sank through the low twisted branches of the near-by oaks and fell tangled with black and lace shade through the porch rose vine.

Poverty is no disgrace, but its hard to convince your creditors that it isn't.

Alix sat on the porch rail, every line of crisp skirt and braided head revealed as if by daylight, but Cherry's pale striped gown was only a glimmer in the deepest shade of the vine. Peter, smoking, sat where he could not see her; they had hardly looked at each other directly since the long, strange look of this afternoon; they had exchanged hardly a word.

"Town tomorrow, Pete?" Alix said, after a silence during which she had looked her arms behind her head, stared straight above her at the path the moon was making through faint stars, and yawned. "I've got to go in to a meeting of the hospital board. Good night, beloveds. I'm dead. Don't sit out here mooning with Pete all night, Cerise!"

Peter said to himself that now Cherry would go, too, but as the screen door banged lightly after Alix, and the dull glimmer of Cherry's striped gown did not move in the soft shadow, a sudden reluctance and distaste seized him. He had been subconsciously aware of her all afternoon; he had known a delicious warmth and stir at his heart that he had not analyzed, if indeed it could be analyzed. Now suddenly he did not want the beauty and glow and charm of that feeling touched. His heart began to beat heavily again, and he knew that he must stop the unavailing game now.

CHAPTER XII.

Again Peter reckoned without Cherry. It was only the next day, when he was entering the Palace court for his lunch, that he experienced a sudden and violent emotion. His thoughts were, at the moment, far from Cherry, and he fancied himself in a hurry. But every other feeling but excitement was obliterated at the sight of a slender, girlishly made woman, in a pounce gown, and a limp brown hat covered with poppies, waiting in the lounge.

Peter went toward her, and the color rushed into Cherry's face. It was the first time they had accidentally encountered each other, and it had a special place of its own in the history of their lives.

The surprise of it kept them laughing, hands clasped, for a minute; then Cherry said: "I was to lunch here with Mary Cameron. But she's full twenty minutes late! You hate her, don't you?" she added, looking up from under the poppies at Peter.

"I don't like her," he admitted, with a boy's grimace. "Then suppose we don't lunch here?" Cherry suggested, innocently. Peter laughed joyously, and tucking her little gloved hand under his arm, led her away. They went to Solar's, and had a window table, and nodded, as they discussed their lunch, at half a dozen friends who chanced to be lunching there, too.

She had said that she wanted to tell him "all about it," and Peter, with the unhappiness of her marriage, nodded a grave permission.

"I've made a failure of it!" Cherry said, sadly. "I know I ought to struggle on, but I can't. I have no individuality, Peter, I have no personality! As for my dignity—my privacy—"

Her face was scarlet, and for a moment she stopped speaking. "Just tell me an alternative!" she said, after a while. "It can't be that there is no other life for me than going back. Peter, I'm only twenty-four!"

"I know you are," he said, with a brief nod. "Why, every one has some alternative," Cherry pleaded. "It can't be that marriage is the only—the only irrevocable thing! If you had a partner that you couldn't go on with, you could come to some agreement!"

"You don't love him!" Peter said, quickly. "Indeed I don't. And it isn't just the place and the life, Peter! I could be happy in two rooms—somewhere—anywhere— But not—with him. Oh, Peter, if I hadn't done it—"

Her beauty, as she pushed her plate aside and leaned toward him, was so startling that Peter, a lighted match half-raised to a fresh cigarette, put the match down aimlessly and looked thoughtfully at the cigarette, and laid that down, too, without the faintest consciousness of what he was doing.

The day was warm, and there was a little dampness on her white forehead, where the gold hair hung to the brim of the drooping hat. The soft curve of her chin, the babyish shortness of her upper lip, and the crimson sweetness of the little earnest mouth had never seemed more lovely than they were today. She was youth incarnate, palpitating, flushed, unspooled.

For a moment she looked down at the table and the color flooded her face; then she looked him straight in the eyes and smiled. "Well! Perhaps it will all work out right, Peter," she said with the childish, questioning look that so wrung his heart. She immediately gathered her possessions together to go, but when they stepped into sunshiny Geary street it was three o'clock, and Peter suggested that they walk down to the boat.

"They met Alix on the boat, but she did not ask any embarrassing questions; she sat between them on the upper deck, blinking contentedly at the blue satin bay, her eyes following the wheeling gulls or the passage of ships, her mind evidently concerned only with the idle pleasantness of the moment. And always, for Peter, there was the same joyous sense of something new—something significant—something ecstatic in life.

From that hour he was never quite at ease in Cherry's company and avoided being alone with her even for an instant, although her presence always caused him the new and tingling delight. He read her honest blue eyes truly, and knew that although, like himself, she was conscious of the new sweetness and brightness of life, she had never entertained for an instant the flitting thought that it was Peter's feeling for her that made it so. She thought, perhaps, that it would be the old childish happiness that she had known in the valley, the freedom and leisure and irresponsibility of the old days.

The next day she talked in a troubled, uncertain way of going back to Red Creek, and he knew why. But Alix was so against the idea, and Peter, who was closing Dr. Strickland's estate, was so careful to depart early in the mornings and return only late at night, that the little alarm, if it was that, died away.

It was that, that Cherry went into town, Alix did not go, and Peter, sitting on the deck of the early boat with her, asked her again to have luncheon with him. Immediately a cloud fell on her face and he saw her breast rise quickly.

"Peter," she asked him childishly, looking straight into his eyes, "why didn't we tell Alix about that?"

Peter tried to laugh and felt himself begin to tremble again. "About what?" he stammered. "About our having been three hours at lunch last week?"

"Why—I don't know!" Peter said, smiling nervously. She was silent, and they parted without any further reference to meeting for lunch.

That night, when Alix had gone to bed, he entered the sitting room suddenly to find Cherry hunting for a book. She had dropped on one knee, the better to reach a low shelf, and was wholly absorbed in the volume she had chanced to open.

When she heard the door open she turned, and immediately became very pale. She did not speak as Peter came to stand beside her.

"Cherry—" he said in a whisper, his face close to hers. Neither spoke again for a while. Cherry was breathing hard; Peter was conscious only of a wild whirling of brain and senses. They remained so, their eyes fixed, their breath coming as if they had been running, for endless seconds.

"You remember the question you asked me this morning?" Peter said. "Do you remember? Do you remember?"

Cherry, her cold fingers still holding the place in the book she had been reading, went blindly to the fireplace. "What?" she said, in the merest breath. "What?"

"Because," Peter said, following her, a sort of heady madness making him only conscious of that need to hear from her own lips that she knew, "because I didn't answer that question honestly!"

It mattered not what he said, or what he was trying to express; both were enveloped in the flame of their new relationship; surprise and terror were eclipsing even the strange joy of their discovery.

"I must go home—I must go back to Mart tomorrow!" Cherry said, in a whispered undertone, as if half to herself. "I must go home to Mart tomorrow! I—let's not—let's not talk!" she broke off in quick interruption, as he would have spoken. "Let's—let's rather not! I—where is my book? What was I doing? Peter—Peter—"

"Just a minute!" Peter protested thickly. "Cherry—I want to speak to you—will you wait a minute?"

She was halfway to the door; now she paused, and looked back at him with frightened eyes. Peter did not speak at once; there was a moment of absolute silence.

And in that moment Alix came in. She had said good-night half an hour before; she was in her wrapper and her hair fell over one shoulder in a rumpled braid. Cherry, sick with fright, faced her in a sort of horror, unable to realize at that moment that there was nothing betraying in her attitude or Peter's, and nothing in her sister's unsuspecting soul to give significance to what she saw, in any case. Peter, more quickly recovering self-control, went toward his wife.

"Peter!" she said. "Cherry! Look at this! Look at this!"

She held the paper out to them, but it was rather at her that they looked, as all three gathered near the hearth again.

"I happened to finish my novel," Alix said, "and I reached for Dad's old Bible—it's been there on the shelf near my bed ever since I was married, and I've even read it, too! But look what was in it—there all this time! It's Uncle Vincent's receipt to Dad for that three thousand that is making all the trouble!" Alix excited to the still bewildered Cherry. "It's been there all this time—and Cherry," she added in a voice rich with love and memory, "that's what he meant by saying it was in Matthew, don't you remember?"

Doesn't it mean that, Pete? Isn't it perfectly clear?"

"It means only about fifty thousand for you and Cherry," Peter answered. "Yes sir, by George—it's perfectly clear! He paid it back—every cent of it, and got his receipt! I'm—this puts rather a crimp in Little's plans—I'll see him tomorrow. This calls off his suit—"

"Really, Peter?" Alix asked, with dancing eyes. "And it means that you can keep the old house, Cerise," she exclaimed triumphantly, "and we can be together part of the year, anyway!"

And in That Moment Alix Came In.

Oh, come on, everybody, and sit down, and let's talk and talk about it! Let me see it again—in recognition of all claims against the patent extinguisher aforementioned—sit down, Pete; it's only ten o'clock! Let's talk. Aren't you simply wild with joy, Cherry?"

But she told Peter later that she had been surprised at Cherry's quietness; Cherry had looked pale and abstracted and had not seemed half enthusiastic enough.

It was a Sunday, foggy and overcast, but not cold. The vines about the porch were covered with tiny beads of moisture; among the bushes in the garden little scarfs and veils of fog were caught, and from far across the ridge the droning warning of the fog-horn penetrated, at regular, brief intervals. Alix was away.

"Cherry," Peter said suddenly, when the silent meal was almost over, "will you talk about it?"

"Talk—?" she faltered. Her voice thickened and stopped. "Oh, I would rather not!" she whispered, with a frightened glance about.

"Listen, Cherry!" he said, following her to the wide porch rail and standing behind her as she sat down upon it. "I'm sorry! I'm just as sorry as I can be. But I can't help it, Cherry. I'm as surprised as you are—I can't tell you when it—it all happened! But it—" Peter folded his arms across his chest, and with a grimly squinted jaw looked off into the misty distance—"it is there," he finished.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" Cherry whispered on a breath of utter distress. "I'm so sorry! Oh, Peter, we never should have let it happen—our caring for each other! We never should have allowed ourselves to think—to dream—of such a thing! Oh, Peter, I'm so sick about it!" Cherry added, incoherently, with filling eyes. "I'm just sick about it! I know—I know that Alix would never have permitted herself to—I know she wouldn't!"

He was close to her, and now he laid his hand over hers.

"I care—" he said, quite involuntarily, "I have always cared for you! I know it's madness—I know it's too late—but I love every hair of your beautiful head! Cherry—Cherry—"

They had both gotten to their feet, and now she essayed to pass him, her face white, her cheeks blazing. He stopped her and held her close in his arms, and after a few seconds he felt her resisting muscles relax and they kissed each other.

For a full dizzy minute they clung together, arms locked, hearts beating madly and close and lips meeting again and again. Breathless, Cherry wrenched herself free and turned to drop into a chair, and breathless, Peter stood looking down upon her. About them was the silence of the dripping garden; and all the sounds of the world came muffled and dull through the thick mist.

Then Peter knelt down beside her chair and gathered her hands together in his own, and she rested her forehead on his, and spent and silent, leaned against his shoulder. And so they remained, not speaking, for a long while. Presently Cherry broke the brooding, misty silence.

"What shall we do?" she asked in a small, tired voice. Peter abruptly got to his feet, took a chair three feet away, and with a quick gesture of his hand and toss of his head, flung back his hair.

"There is only one thing to do, of course!" he said decidedly, in a voice unrecognizably grim: "We mustn't see each other—we mustn't see each other! Now—now I must think how best to manage that!"

Her eyes, heavy with pain, were raised to meet his, and she saw his mouth weaken with a sudden misgiving, and she saw him try to steady it and look down.

"I can—I shall tell Alix that this new business needs me in town for two or three nights," he said, forcing himself to quiet speech, but with one fine hand propping his forehead as if it ached. "I'll stay at the club."

"And as soon as I can go," Cherry added feverishly, "I shall join Martin. I'll write him tomorrow—this is Sunday—and I'll go on Wednesday!"

Peter sprang over the porch rail and vanished, walking with swift energy up the trail that led toward the mountain.

For the rest of the day Cherry lived in a sort of daze of emotion; sometimes she seemed to be living two lives, side by side. In the one was her old happy relationship with Alix, and even with Peter, the old joking and talking and gathering for meals, the old hours in the garden or beside the fire, and in the other was the confused and troubled and ecstatic consciousness of the new relationship between Peter and herself, the knowledge that he did not merely admire her, did not merely feel for her an unusual affection, but that he was consumed by a burning adoration of her slightest motion, the turn of her wrist, the smile she gave Kow at breakfast time, the motion she made when she stopped to break an apple from the low, dusty branches.

The glory of being so loved enveloped her like a great shining garment, and her cheeks glowed softly rosy, and there was a new and liquid softness, a sort of shining glitter, in her blue eyes.

Peter was quiet that evening, and was gone the next morning when the sisters came out to breakfast. He had left a message to the effect that he would not be at home that night, and at four o'clock telephoned confirming the message. Alix chanced to answer the telephone, and Cherry, who was in her room, heard Peter's name, and stood still, listening with a shock of disappointment.

But at eight o'clock that evening, when she and Alix were sitting on the porch, when the last ebbing pink of the sunset had faded and great spiders had ventured forth into the dusk and the dew, there was a sudden hail at the gate, and Cherry knew that it was he! A flood of utter, irrational happiness rose in her heart; she had been racked with hunger for the sound of that voice; she had been restless and unsatisfied, almost feverish with longing and doubt; now peace came again, and content.

He came up to them, his glance resolutely averted from Cherry, explaining that he was lonesome, assuring them that everything went well and making them laugh with an account of Justin Little's reception of the new turn of affairs. "He seemed absolutely dumfounded," Peter said.

He stretched both arms wide, forming with his body a perfect cross and presenting a target which loomed up plainly against the background of a sky aglow with the sunset. Tobin fired instantly and the Mexican murderer fell dead across his camp fire. The nephew scrambled to his feet. The scout fired again, and the last of the Espinozas dropped dead.

A few days later Tobin walked into Fort Garland, carrying a sack, and demanded a reward of $1,500. The sack contained the heads of the Bloody Espinozas.

When the Kansas Pacific railroad was being built through Kansas in 1867-68 it was necessary to provide food for an army of more than 1,500 track-layers. A source of supply was near at hand—vast herds of buffalo—and men were hired to do nothing else but kill these animals for food. One of the best-known of the hunters was William Frederick Cody, a young frontiersman who had been a pony express rider and guide for General Custer.

The work was dangerous, for the Indians did all they could to stop progress on the railroad. They especially hated these hunters who killed more buffalo in one day than they destroyed in a week, and Cody took his life in his hands every time he went out. He soon became such an expert hunter that the railroad men gave him the nickname of "Buffalo Bill."

During Cody's career as a buffalo hunter, a period of 18 months, he killed a total of 4,280 bison. His greatest exploit was his victory over Billy Comstock, a scout and rival hunter. The match was arranged by officers of Fort Wallace to decide which of the two men was the greatest slayer of bison. They were to hunt one day of eight hours, and the man who killed the greatest number of the animals was to be declared the champion buffalo hunter.

A herd was found and separated into two bunches. Cody immediately began riding at the head of his bunch, shooting the leaders and crowding the followers in toward the center of an ever-narrowing circle. In a short time he had killed 35, all of whom lay dead over a small area. Comstock had begun shooting at the rear of his herd and, although he killed 23, they were scattered over a distance of three miles. Two more herds were found, and when the final count was made, Cody had 60 and Comstock 46.

Later Cody became a famous scout and guide. He served with General Custer in Kansas and General Carr in Colorado. Cody was known as "Pahaska—Long Hair" by the Sioux, who had great respect for his prowess.

After the Indian wars ended Buffalo Bill organized his Wild West show, which added to his fame not only in America, but in Europe as well. After seventy-two years of life crowded with adventure, he died January 10, 1917. He is buried on Lookout Mountain, near Denver, Colorado.

"Cherry's going in to the dentist tomorrow," said Alix. "Oh, so I am!" Cherry said in a rather strained voice.

She did not look at Peter, nor did he at her, but they felt each other's thoughts like a spoken word. "Had you forgotten?" Alix asked. "I don't think I'll go in, for I have about a week's work here to do."

Peter left them, without one word or look for Cherry, who went back to the house with her sister in a most agitated and wretched state of mind. She had the telephone in her hand, to cancel the engagement with her dentist, when Alix suddenly consented to accompany her into town; "and at lunch time we'll take a chance on the St. Francis, Sis," Alix said, innocently, "for Peter almost always lunches there!"

Feeling that the question was settled, yet restless and unsatisfied still, Cherry dressed for town; they climbed into the car; Alix's firm hands, in yellow chamolus gloves, snatched at the wheel; the die was cast.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN TOM AND THE "BLOODY ESPINOZAS"

Back in the sixties in the Colorado gold camps around Pike's Peak the warning "The Bloody Espinozas are coming!" struck more terror to the hearts of the miners than the dread cry of "Indians! Indians!" The Bloody Espinozas were two Mexicans, brothers. The older, Juan Espinoza, believed that he had a special mission to kill all Americans. He ambushed them in the daytime and crept upon them at night. His record of murders is said to have totaled 32.

In 1863 he killed two well-known prospectors of California Gulch, near Leadville. Their comrades vowed vengeance on the Espinozas, and after a long chase and a hard battle, they killed the youngest brother. Juan escaped and the next year he was back in his old haunts in the Sangre de Cristo mountains—robbing stage coaches and wagon trains and murdering settlers and miners. He took his nephew with him on these raids, and they grew so bold that a reward of $1,500 was offered for their capture, dead or alive.

At this time there was living at Fort Garland a little Irishman called Rocky Mountain Tom. Tom Tobin was his real name, and he was a close friend of Kit Carson. He was one of the best mountain trappers.

When the report of the Espinozas' latest murder was brought to the fort Tobin immediately volunteered to go after the bandits. Setting out alone, he took their trail and stuck with it, although it led into the wildest parts of the Sangre de Cristos. Late one evening he saw from a distance two men encamped under the shelter of a shelving rock above a little stream.

Stalking the two bandits as he would wild animals, the scout crept closer and closer. He knew they could not be taken alive, and he dared not take the chance of missing his first shot. The Mexicans were crouched over a tiny flame warming their hands, but in the dim light they offered a poor target even for so good a marksman as Rocky Mountain Tom.

At last Juan Espinoza rose. He stretched both arms wide, forming with his body a perfect cross and presenting a target which loomed up plainly against the background of a sky aglow with the sunset. Tobin fired instantly and the Mexican murderer fell dead across his camp fire. The nephew scrambled to his feet. The scout fired again, and the last of the Espinozas dropped dead.

SAYS PROHIBITION IS FAILURE

New Jersey Governor Declares it Makes Nation of Liars.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Governor Edwards, New Jersey, issued a statement here attacking prohibition as a "flat failure."

"Hardly more than a dozen men in congress," he said, "have empty hip pockets or empty cellars."

"Prohibition only prohibits those who have not the price. It is making a nation of liars and criminals."

The statement is taken as proof that Edwards intends to oppose Senator Freylinghousen for re-election to the United States senate on a straight wet issue.

Care of Paintings.

The pictures in a home are apt to suffer from the lack of attention which in time detracts from their appearance.

Oil paintings should be lightly cleaned once a year, being wiped gently with a very fine sponge or chamols leather wet with clear water. Do not use soap or any other cleansing substance in the water.

Immediately after sponging polish the surface lightly with a dry silk handkerchief. Gilt frames should be dusted frequently. A camel's hair paintbrush is effective for this.

Fly marks can be removed by the use of a little white of egg.

Word Passing From Common Usage.

The use of fare as a verb is rapidly becoming obsolete, we seldom speak of a traveler "faring" on his way, yet such usage is perfectly correct. We still say that an enterprise "fares" well, although the modern tendency is to use "turn out." Then there is the meaning "feed" as we fare well. Fare may be both the sum paid for a journey and the person conveyed, and this is the sense in which the word is chiefly used nowadays. Fishermen will recognize the word as a term used to denote the total amount of fish caught on a cruise.

Green Though Black.

A southern family, having lost their maid, pressed into service a colored girl who had been doing outside work. They first taught her to use the carpet sweeper. Next morning she cheerfully asked, "Miss Jane, shall I lawn-mower de parlor 'gain today?"—Boston Transcript.

SPINOLOGY

BY JOHN H. ALBERT D. C.
CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN

Pneumonia is a name applied to an acute febrile disorder characterized by catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the bronchial tubes and their communicating air cells. Pus-forming diseases of this sort are caused in every instance by lowered resistance brought about through defective assimilation due to interference with the nerve force of alimentary organs.

The chiropractic method of handling this disorder is simple direct and specific. The upper dorsal is adjusted to control the fever, the kidney and bowel place to assist elimination. That straight chiropractic is the surest and best method in this disease is proven by the very small percentage of deaths in pneumonia when treated by straight chiropractic methods.

A limited number of Brenner Macfadden's home treatment for pneumonia (and this applies to what is termed a cold) may be had at this office.

Muir—The state board of health has found that the water at public drinking places here is unfit for use and has sent officers to ascertain the source of contamination.

The convention voted to place with Baker the names of 1,500 delegates who will aid in marketing farmers' potatoes this fall.

The Michigan Potato Growers' exchange will furnish price lists, and a real campaign for marketing the potato crop at a price fair to both sides will be inaugurated.
