Report Of Probate Court

Work of 1921 Outlined by Judge Servetus A. Correll.

Report of the Probate Court of the county of Charlevoix for the year ending December 31st, 1921. Eighty-eight proceedings have been commenced in said court during the year exclusive of the juvenile division and are as follows:

Forty-four intestate estates have been commenced, seven of which have been the short method by determination of heirs. Eleven wills have been admitted to probate during the year. Nine guardians appointed for minors and one guardian for a mentally incompetent person.

Five children and two adult patients have been sent to the University hospital at Ann Arbor for treatment. In every case the patients have been greatly benefited except one. In that case the patient is not discharged and it is to be hoped that some good may yet be done. No fatalities have occurred during the year.

One patient admitted to the Michigan Farm Colony for Epileptics at Wahjamega, Mich., seven children placed in Charlevoix county homes by adoption. During the year the administration of thirty-seven estates has been closed and the administrators discharged.

In this connection, I desire to say, to administrators where the soldier's bonus is the entire property of the estate, that it is necessary to file final account and have that account passed upon by the court and an order made assigning the residue of the estate.

However, if our national Congress should pass an act making an allowance by way of bonus to the soldiers and the same made payable to the administrator where the soldier is deceased, it is not advisable to close the administration until that is received.

Nine investigations as to sanity with the result that seven persons were found in need of hospital treatment and admitted to the state hospital at Traverse City. One petition dismissed and one patient died before hearing.

Nineteen children have been before the court on charges of delinquency. Most of the charges were for minor offenses and the cases disposed of by placing on probation under certain restrictions and have worked out satisfactory. One boy sent to the Industrial school at Lansing. No girls committed to the Industrial home at Adrian and but few girls have been before the court during the past year.

I am glad to be able to make so favorable a report for the children of the county at a time when a wave of juvenile delinquency seems to be sweeping over the entire country and our national authorities are considering measures for its prevention.

Thirty children classed as dependents have been before the court and today we are caring for twenty-two children under the juvenile court act, commonly known as the "Mother's Pension," at a cost of $42.00 per week or $2,184.00 annually.

Three estates have been subject to inheritance tax and the tax determined and paid which amounted to $346.93.

WM. E. LANWAY NOW LOCATED AT HAYWARD, CALIF.

Jan'y. 8th, 1922.

Mr. G. A. Lisk, East Jordan, Mich.

Dear Friend:—I enclose remittance for which please continue sending the Herald, I like to read the East Jordan doings.

Well this is some country and I am here to stay. I have a one-acre ranch with 400 hens on it, all doing fine; my spinach and peas are ready to cultivate.

We have ripe blackberries and green onions in our own yard, a few roses, calla lilies and crysanthemums in bloom and geraniums blossom the year around. The almond orchards will be in bloom next month.

I would very much like to hear from George Vance while he is in California and have him look me up while he is traveling around out here.

And if ever you come to California come to Hayward and see

Yours truly

Wm. E. LANWAY

LIVESTOCK MEN ASK FOR WOOL PROTECTION

Favoring tariff protection for wool and sugar, in order that production of these important Michigan products may be increased in the state, members of the Michigan Livestock Breeders and Feeders Association passed resolutions to this effect at their thirty-second annual meeting, held at the Michigan Agricultural College, Jan. 11 and 12. More than 500 men gathered for the conferences, as members of the different special breed associations which held sectional meetings during the gathering.

Officers of the general Association, elected for 1922, include: President, H. H. Halladay, Lansing; Vice-Pres., Jacob De Geus, Alicia; Secretary, G. A. Brown, East Lansing; Ass't. Sec'y, W. E. J. Edwards, East Lansing; Treas., L. K. Maystead, Osseo. Executive Committee: John Lessiter, Orion; Earl C. McCarty, Bad Axe; Alexander Minty, Ionia; W. E. Livingston, Parma; and H. W. Norton, Jr., Lansing.

Fifteen separate stock associations also elected their annual officers at their special meetings. Auction sales of horses and cattle were held in the college livestock pavilion on Friday, Jan. 13.

Headliners among the speakers at the general meetings were Ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, also President of the American Holstein-Friesian Association; and Governor Alex J. Groesbeck of Michigan.

Notice!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—I, the undersigned will not become responsible for any debts contracted in my name by Mr. or Mrs. so beware.

Fame is a shadow, a ghost—call it what you will—but if nobody ever had striven for it, our only vaudeville today would be swinging by our own tails in the tree tops.

Another cause of the high cost of living in cities is club dues. The average business man belongs to so many things he no longer belongs to himself.

Considerable Interest Shown

Indoor Baseball Games Attracting Crowds.

Interest in the baseball league increases with every game. Wednesday of last week and Tuesday of this over eight hundred people attended the games including High School students who of course get in free.

And the crowds were not disappointed for they saw good games. The Firemen and Oddfellows and Masons and Presbyterians played especially good ball. The Firemen lost by a run and the Presbyterians won their game by playing steadier baseball than the Masons. The Independents seem to be in a mad dash for the pennant crushing all opposition. The Holy Name won their game last week against the K. of P. through some very good baseball. But lost to the Independents Tuesday of this week 16 to 8. Nachazel pitched good ball after he went in but it was too late. The Firemen played a very good game and won from the Methodists.

The indoor ball league is proving to be one of the finest community movements hereabouts. It was started as the constitution says to promote healthful exercise and good fellowship and let's keep it going in that spirit. The fun of the game is the important consideration, the winning second. Some of the men are taking it too serious, and think everyone else is taking it in the same spirit. This spirit is liable to cause hard feelings. As a city, we do not show, that we are big enough to make a game of a proposition, when so much benefit could result.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	Percent
Independents	6	0	100
Presbyterians	5	0	100
Holy Name	3	2	60
Masons	2	3	40
Oddfellows	2	3	40
Firemen	1	4	20
Methodists	1	5	16
K of P	0	4	0

Up to and including Tuesday's games.

WILL PAY BONUS WITHOUT TAXES

The United States will pay a soldier bonus without one cent of additional taxation upon the people, according to a plan Republican leaders are working on.

The plan calls for paying the bonus with interest on the foreign debt or by sale of bonds issued against collections of the war debt principal.

"The proposal that the foreign debt be used to pay a bonus undoubtedly will be adopted if it proves feasible, and I believe it will," Representative Fordney, chairman of the house ways and means committee, said today. "President Harding is in favor of the plan and has personally commended it to the committee."

"The first step in the program will be the enactment of the foreign debt refunding bill, already passed by the house, and shortly to be taken up by the senate. On the heels of the debt bill passage the house will bring out the bonus bill, pass it in short order and send it to the senate."

65,000 MORE AUTOS IN 1921

State Revenue Was $6,751,924 in 1920 Total Was $6,764,900.

Lansing—Approximately 65,000 more motor cars were registered in Michigan during 1921 than in 1920, a report compiled by the department of state shows.

In 1920 the registration was: pleasure cars, 466,966; commercial cars, 45,771; trailers, 2,711. 1921: pleasure cars, 426,984; commercial cars, 50,083; trailers, 4,330. The totals for the two years were: 1920, 416,448; 1921, 481,387. Fees collected from motor vehicle registration jumped approximately $1,000,000, in 1920, the total license, transfers and operators' licenses and duplicates was $5,754,900. In 1921, the total was $6,754,924. The 1921 figure, however, included $222,781 for certificates of title, required by a law enacted in 1921.

Will Prosecute Local Officials

Registrars Delaying Birth And Death Certificates.

Preliminary proceedings for prosecution against 26 local registrars of vital statistics in 18 different counties are being instituted by the state department of health following alleged failure of the registrars to comply with the law which requires reports of births and deaths to be filed with state authorities before the fifth of each succeeding month.

County prosecuting attorneys have been mailed the names of the offenders and histories of the individual cases which will enable them to take immediate action.

Failure to perform any of the duties imposed upon the local registrars is deemed a misdemeanor and upon conviction is punishable with a fine of from $10 to $100, imprisonment of not more than 30 days, or both fine and imprisonment. This penalty is provided in both the birth and death registration laws. Thus a registrar may be liable to a $200 fine and 60 days imprisonment.

"Accurate keeping of birth and death records is considered one of the highest marks of development of intelligence by civilization," says Dr. R. M. Olin, commissioner of health. "Every certificate filed with the department is examined and all information tabulated for legal and public health uses. Whenever reports are delayed from a community there is the possibility that outbreaks of disease may occur there which might have been curbed if the reports had been received by health authorities on time."

FORD MAY BUY LINCOLN MOTORS

Stated He May Bid $11,000,000 At Receivers Sale.

Detroit—Henry Ford is willing to bid as high as $11,000,000 for the Lincoln Motor company, if competition forces him to when the Leland properties are offered at auction, February 4. This statement came from an authoritative source last week, following announcement that the Ford interests had decided to intervene in the Lincoln's bad financial predicament.

The total liabilities of the company made public by the Detroit Trust company, receiver, as of November 8, 1921, were $9,073,105.46, against total assets of $9,490,811.13.

TO SEGREGATE FEEBLE MINDED

State to Provide for Boys and Girls at Lapeer Institution.

Lansing—A plan to segregate all feeble minded and subnormal boys and girls in state institutions and provide facilities for their accommodation in the Lapeer school for feeble minded has been approved by the state administrative board.

A new system to make unnecessary the practice of locking girl inmates of State Industrial School for Girls at Adrian in their rooms at night was also ordered installed by the board.

STATE PLACED FEWER WORKERS

Only 32,546 Got Jobs Through Bureau During 1921.

Lansing—The state department of labor and industry, through its free employment bureaus, placed only about one-third as many men and women in positions in 1921 as in 1920, a complete report shows.

The report says that 104,666 positions were filled in 1920, compared with 32,546 in 1921.

In Detroit in 1920 males and females to be given work were 70,537, in 1921, only 9,143.

Peace Reigns in Ireland.

Dublin—With the Dan Eireann adjourned until February 14 to permit Arthur Griffith, newly-elected president, to perfect organization of his new government, a new order began in Ireland Jan. 11. The tacit support of De Valera and his following to Griffith and his government is now assured, following their return to the Dan before the close of the session accepting Griffith's statement that as president he would do his utmost to get the treaty into effect.

Did you ever see a fat fanatic? The world contains too many men who think that when all is lost save honor, they may as well make a clean sweep of it and allow honor to go, too.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Eighth Grade English

During the study period Miss Shipp has been reading "The Secret Garden" by Francis Hodgson Burnett to the 8th grade English class. Notwithstanding that many in the class had seen it in the "movies" they found the book to be interesting.

Mary Lennox was sent to England, when her father and mother had died in India, to live with her uncle, Mr. Craven. She was a sickly, fretful little girl used to having her own way. She did not like her mysterious uncle, or his house with a hundred rooms, or the moor and the gardens around the house. But she soon felt a springtime feeling which she explained as magic. She found the key to the secret garden which had been shut up by Mr. Craven ten years ago when his young wife had died. With her friend Dickon she made the garden grow. She found Collin. He was her cousin, as sickly and spoiled as she had been. She induced some magic in him and took him to the garden every day where he grew well and strong.

Mancelona vs East Jordan

The East Jordan High School Debating team won an unanimous victory over Mancelona High on Friday last.

Mancelona having the affirmative, opened the debate with a series of convincing proofs that would apparently shatter any negative argument. However the home team replied with an assurance that comes from a thorough understanding of the case, and demonstrated their capability of replying to the many different phases of the question which the opposition very ingeniously brought out. Both sides met the question squarely and neither made any attempt to side-step the issues or debate from an unfair stand. This debate held all the interest characteristic of the clash between open and closed shop, and makes East Jordan's second victory.

East Jordan was most ably represented by Virginia Pray, Gayle Hudkins, and Arthur Secord, while Lillian Harding, Francis Stevens and Viola Hicks presented the affirmative for Mancelona.

Basket Ball

Last Friday the boys' basket ball team of East Jordan High competed against the boys' team of Alba High, on their floor.

Our boys were at a disadvantage because of the smallness and unfamiliarity of the gymnasium. In spite of this they put forth a good fight the first half, holding Alba 14 to 12 in their favor. Roland Bowen and Earl Sumner were star players for East Jordan. The last half Alba outplayed E. J. making the final score, Alba, 35 and East Jordan, 18.

Although our boys did not do so well as everyone anticipated we are all looking forward to our victory of the return game.

Scenarios

The Senior English class has just completed the writing of scenarios for Milton's poems, L'Allegro and Il Penseroso. Although this work is along a different line than has ever before been undertaken the students found it very interesting. In order to bring out more clearly the difficult parts of the poems they were written in the form of a movie scenario. The poems were divided into scenes and each scene was visualized in every detail. For example:

Scene I of L'Allegro.

Stage quite dark. On one side is a cave filled with glittering stalagmites and stalactites. There is fire in the cave and winged insects are flying about. L'Allegro is on one side. Melancholy, a figure dressed in black, comes hesitatingly onto the stage. L'Allegro points to the cave and tells Melancholy to go there and live. Melancholy then fades away.

E. J. H. S. Agricultural Club

Under the supervision of Mr. Nesman a club has been organized among the Agricultural students known as the E. J. H. S. Agricultural Club. The charter members of this club are boys and girls who live on a farm and who are also pursuing an Agricultural subject in the E. J. H. S.

A constitution has been adopted and officers for the second semester have been elected as follows: President, Arthur Secord; Vice Pres. Manuel Bartholomew; Secretary, Anita McDonald; Marshall, Roy Vance. Azalia Liskum and A. J. Wangeman, along with the president, secretary and vice president make up the Executive Committee. A monthly business meeting and other meetings if necessary will be arranged for by the Executive Committee. Provision has also been made for the admission of new members from time of time.

It is the purpose of the club to boost the interests of Agriculture in the East Jordan High School and vicinity and to benefit the members both intellectually and socially. Similar clubs are very successful in other high schools which teach Agriculture under the Smith-Hughes Law. Hastings and Ypsilanti are notable examples and it is the hope of the E. J. H. S. Agricultural Club that they too will do as well.

Girls' Basket Ball Game

The E. J. H. S. girls again defeated in a game of basket ball with Alba. As Alba's floor is very small it took the girls awhile to get used to it although the game was fast and snappy. Alba had a lead on East Jordan the first half by three or four points.

The second half began in a rush with East Jordan piling up points until they were in the lead. But for lack of good guarding Alba began to score again and kept the lead until the end when the score was 22 and 17 in favor of Alba. Grace Atkinson was the star for E. J. and Doris Shepard for Alba.

ARE SWEETS FOR CHILDREN HARMFUL

The old, old question of whether or not candies and other sweets are harmful for children is never more important than at this season, when reserve supplies from the Holidays are in the majority of American homes. A flat answer "No," seems particularly cruel at this time; and as a matter of fact, the answer can be made with reservations.

Sweets the child should have, but not candy; unless it be a small amount of plain, home-made, pure sugar candy preferably at the end of the meal. Sugar is a desirable part of the diet and the only objection which can be raised to its use in reasonable amounts in a mixed diet is that it is sometimes allowed to take the place of foods, and so spoils the child's appetite for other important things.

Until the child is five years old he needs no candy, as such. The correct proportion may be judged for the child over five by averaging the whole amount of sugar he obtains in all his foods as:

5 to 7 years—1 tablespoonful daily.

7 to 12 years—2 tablespoonfuls daily.

The child's craving for candy very often results from improper food habits, irregular feeding, and lack of water or milk. Merely because candy is ready at hand, and often that means "store candy" which is likely to be germ-laden, and unwholesome in content, the child is given it in order to calm the storm which his natural hunger for wholesome bread, butter, and milk has created.

Cut down the candy ration and watch his complexion, his appetite, and his disposition improve.

Cleveland, O.—Six men, all of Port Huron, Mich., aboard the Great Lakes Towing company's lighter, T. F. Newman, which foundered off Conneaut harbor Jan. 11, owe their lives to the fact that the craft lodged against the west breakwater before she rolled on her side and sank in 30 feet of water. The men, who saved their lives by jumping to the sea wall, are: Captain Wilbur Nagle, Steward Ernest Nagle, Thomas Hanna, James Hayes, Frank Frye and Ernest Davis.

Useful Cigar Ash. Stains may be removed from polished oak very easily. Sometimes we find, to our dismay, a blue stain on our table or buffet top, made from water or some other moisture. Save cigar ashes until you have what you know will be sufficient, when moist, to cover the stain. Do not use any more water than enough to make a thick paste. Spread over stain and allow to become perfectly dry, then brush off with a soft cloth. You will find the surface restored.

Signers of Declaration. The Declaration of Independence was signed by every member of the Continental congress that made it. There were three signers from New Hampshire, five from Massachusetts, two from Rhode Island, four from Connecticut, four from New York, five from New Jersey, three from Delaware, nine from Pennsylvania, four from Maryland, seven from Virginia, three from North Carolina, four from South Carolina and three from Georgia.

Public/Telephonic Announcements. Telephonic announcers are loud-speaking telephone receivers used for announcing trains in a railway station, paging people in a hotel, calling employees in a factory or store, advertising goods displayed in a store window, etc. As many as 100 of these instruments are sometimes operated from one transmitter, so that simultaneous announcements can be made in all parts of a big establishment.

Receives Thanks for Golden Apples. Opening an unstamped letter on which she was surcharged 8 cents, Mrs. Harriet, of Barnet, England, was astonished to find an anonymous note thanking her for some apples stolen from her orchard. The writer added that he had robbed her orchard for five years in succession. "The apples are still very good," he finished, "but I hope that you will use a good fertilizer before next year."

SENATE VOTES TO SEAT NEWBERRY

SENATOR RETAINED BY MARGIN OF FIVE VOTES; 48 YEARS AND 41 DAYS.

BITTER STRUGGLE IS ENDED

Resolution Adopted Declares Michigan Man Elected But Warns Against Excessive Expenditures.

Washington.—By a vote of 48 to 41, the senate on Jan. 12 adopted a resolution declaring Truman H. Newberry, of Detroit, duly entitled to his seat in the United States senate from Michigan and dismissing charges of corruption filed on January 4, 1919 by Henry Ford, Democratic aspirant for the seat.

The vote marked the end of the bitterest fought struggle ever staged for a seat in either house of congress, and the adoption of the resolution, introduced by Senator Spencer, Republican, of Missouri, only was accomplished after sharp debate was held.

When the roll was finally called, it was found nine Republicans had deserted the ranks of their party and voted to unseat Mr. Newberry, while a solid Democratic vote was cast against the resolution.

Senator Johnson, Republican, California, was the only member of that party who did not record his choice in the matter. Senator Watson, Democrat, of Georgia, who had previously announced he would desert his party and vote for the Michigan man, was not in the chamber and did not cast any vote.

The contest runs back to 1918 when former President Wilson asked Henry Ford to run for the senatorship from Michigan. Mr. Ford consented but declined to make known his political affiliations and the primary contest started with Mr. Ford's name on both Republican and Democratic ballots, being opposed on the Republican by Newberry and several others. On the Democrat ballots he was opposed by James W. Helme of Adrian, Mich.

Mr. Ford won the Democratic nomination in the primaries on August 27, 1918, and Mr. Newberry the Republican. Neither made personal efforts during the primary campaign and Senator Newberry remained in New York, where he was a lieutenant-commander in the navy.

In the general November election Newberry defeated Ford but it was around the primaries which events later centered.

The vote to seat Senator Newberry was on the following resolution submitted by Senator Spencer.

"Resolved: First, that the contest of Henry Ford against Truman H. Newberry, be and it is hereby dismissed.

"Second, that Truman H. Newberry is hereby declared a duly elected senator from Michigan for the term of six years commencing on the fourth day of March, 1919, and is entitled to his seat in the senate of the United States.

"Third, that whether the amount expended in the Michigan primary was $195,000, as was fully reported and openly acknowledged, or whether there were some few thousand dollars in excess the amount expended was in either case too large, much larger than ought to have been expended. That the expenditure of excessive sums in behalf of a candidate either with or without his knowledge and consent being contrary to honor and public policy, harmful to the sound and dignity of the senate, and dangerous to the perpetuity of a free government, such excessive expenditures are hereby severely condemned and disapproved."

BUILDING FORMALLY ACCEPTED

State Pays Final Bill on New Office Structure.

Lansing.—The state has formally accepted the new state office building. Governor Alex. J. Grosbeck and members of the administrative board authorized the payment of a bill of $123,000 which practically completes payment for the structure. It is virtually finished, inside and out, and is occupied.

King George Grants Amnesty to Political Prisoners.

London.—King George has granted general amnesty "in respect to political offenses committed in Ireland prior to the operation of the truce last July." About 1,000 men will regain their freedom through the decree.

Attorney Confesses Fund Theft.

Cleveland.—Several hours after he voluntarily appeared before county officials and made statements which led to his indictment on charges of embezzlement, William E. Patterson, prominent Cleveland attorney, and former president and treasurer of the Forest City Woolen Mills Company, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to from two to 20 years in the Ohio penitentiary. Patterson's last request was that he be sent to Columbus instead of Ohio.

THE MARKED BIRD.

MR. WOODPECKER is a marked bird, as you all know who have seen him, for the red spot on the back of his head is plainly seen when he is pecking away at a tree, or even if half hidden by leaves the red spot is pretty sure to be seen and to reveal his working place, even when the sound cannot be located. Mrs. Woodpecker does not wear this red spot, for she is the one who caused her mate to be so marked, and why, do you suppose?

Listen and I will tell you what is said about it in Birdland, for there is always a little bird, you know, that gives away secrets and that is how this one was learned.

Long, long ago a certain Mrs. Woodpecker, so the story goes, had a great deal of trouble with her husband, because he went away from home early and stayed late and never brought anything home to help support the birdlings. Mrs. Woodpecker pleaded and peeped at this all in vain. Mr. Woodpecker declared he could not find enough insects for himself, let alone bringing some home.

Little Mrs. Woodpecker tried to watch her mate and flew after him when he went away, but he was too clever in dodging for her to follow him, for he could easily hide against the bark of a tree and she could not find him.

One Day Mrs. Woodpecker Asked the Goblins to Help.

Of course, she could hear him hammering, but his bright eyes always saw her afar off and he was on the wing.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL
Facts about your name, its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significant, your lucky day and lucky jewel.

CECILY.

CECILY, though used interchangeably with Cecilia, is an independent name with an interesting history. She comes, of course, from the great Caecilian gens which, curiously enough, was named for a blind, a reptile species for a slow-worm. Cala Caecilia is said to have been the real name of the model Roman matron, patroness of all other matrons, whose tomb is famous throughout Italy.

Another famous Caecilia was the Christian martyr, whose body was discovered in perfect state after 200 years and enshrined in a church. It is she who is the patron saint of sacred music. In her honor Philip I of France and William I of England each named a daughter Cecile. The English Cecile straightway became Cicely, and became enormously popular about the time of the Reformation. It was Cicely Neville, called the Rose of Raby, afterward the duchess of York, who gave the name greatest vogue in England, where she was known as Proud Cis. Her grandchild, Princess Cicely Plantagenet, was a nun.

After the Reformation, strangely enough, Cicely became a generic term for milkmaids and sank into oblivion. When it was revived it came forth as Cecilia and was straightway contracted to Cicely and Cecil.

Cecily's talismanic stone is jet, denoting sorrow, yet, if it is worn by Cicely, it is said to preserve her from misfortune, suffering and danger of every sort. Wednesday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number.

Protecting American Citrus Groves. In order to safeguard citrus groves in the United States from citrus canker, a ban on the importation of citrus fruits from India, Siam, Indo-China, the Malayan archipelago, the Philippines, Japan, Formosa and the islands adjacent to Japan and the Union of South America now exists. Additional information in the northern territory of Australia is being sought before taking action on the proposal to include Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand in the quarantine.

British in Brazil.

British interests are extending their sphere of commercial interest to Brazil's increasing cotton cultivation. With the current advantage of depreciated miltrels, which has shrunk in the last 16 months from a premium basis to 85 per cent below par, English syndicates are quietly acquiring land north of Sao Paulo, where irrigation projects are aiding in the development of a pure white, silky, cotton fiber fully one and three-quarters inches in length.

and away before she could get near. So one day Mrs. Woodpecker became very desperate and asked the goblins to help her. "I can't get him to bring home a thing for the children to eat," she said, "and they eat so much I am just worn out. Do tell me what to do. If I could follow him and catch him at work then I should be certain he finds plenty of food, but I cannot prove that he does not, for I can never surprise him."

"The little goblin was sitting on a rock, out of which he had just jumped, and, laying a finger on one side of his nose, he thought a minute. "I have it, Mrs. Woodpecker," he said, jumping up. "I will get the fairies to let you have some of the red like my cap. You can paint his head red some night when he is asleep, and with a red cap like mine you can see him anywhere in the forest."

Mrs. Woodpecker went home with a light heart and that night she met the goblin, who had an acorn cupful of red paint for her. But the rest was not so easy, for when she flew home with the paint and tried to paint her husband's head while he slept he kept winking up and asking, "Who is tickling the top of my head?" and poor little Mrs. Woodpecker could not mark her mate.

But the next morning, just as he was flying away, Mrs. Woodpecker was so upset she lost her temper and after him she threw the paint brush, which struck the back of her husband's head and left a spot of red paint.

Of course he did not know about the paint and thought his wife was cross, but there it was; and then Mrs. Woodpecker followed and caught her lazy husband, for now that she could see him some distance away, she took good care that he should not see her until she was beside him.

It was no use to deny it now, for she saw with her own eyes that there were plenty of insects and he had to do his part after that toward supporting the family.

And that is the reason that Mr. Woodpecker wears a red spot on the back of his head and his wife does not, so the little bird from Birdland told the story.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Small service is true service while it lasts.—Wordsworth.

IT IS at all times risky to recommend anything. Yet in the very order of things we all do recommend the things we like to our friends. It is too much to ask us always to recommend with a reservation. We should be quite stilted and unnatural if we did that. Perhaps it is a better suggestion to say that we should always take a recommendation with reservations.

If a friend of yours tells you that she has found a good dressmaker she really puts herself under no obligations to prove her statement, but if you should ask for the dressmaker's address you put your friend under the necessity of proving that the dressmaker is good. So if you do ask people to recommend anything, you must show your good breeding by abiding by the results without complaint. It would be the height of rudeness on your part to criticize a dressmaker whose address you had asked for from a friend who had told you about her. If you do not agree with the friend's recommendation you are, of course, at liberty never to hear of her again! Of course the dressmaker is only an example and the same rules hold good of anything that is recommended to you—from a book to a new kind of breakfast food. You don't have to take the recommendation. But if you do it is the well-bred thing not to criticize the result.

Some people give up recommending books because those they recommend them to do not like them. But one of the things that makes books interesting is the discussion they evoke. You are not casting aspersions on a friend's taste when you fail to like a book that she finds interesting. So discussion of a book at somebody else's suggestion is permissible.

The only thing that you ought not to recommend unless you are willing to take the consequences is something in which you have a personal or financial interest. But perhaps this admonition comes rather in the field of ethics than in the field of etiquette.

True Detective Stories MIDNIGHT MURDER

Copyright by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

"WHEN the only thing you have to go on is the fact that several people in Grafton street recall having heard a cry a few nights ago, and the old man hasn't been seen since?"

"That's all, chief. If it weren't for the scream in the night—and they all agree that it was a blood-curdling cry—it would look like a plain case of disappearance. We've been all through the house, but of course we couldn't search it thoroughly without a regular warrant, and there's no ground for issuing one. Epstein may have wandered off somewhere to get away from his wife. She's a regular hellion, they say—though she was nice as pie to us."

John Kane, chief inspector of Scotland Yard, rubbed his chin thoughtfully.

"I'll take a run down to Grafton street myself as soon as I have gotten these reports out of the way," stated Kane. "In the meantime keep an eye on the house, and let me know if anything develops."

When Kane approached the house on Grafton street later in the evening, one of his men reported that there were indications of activity inside the place.

"Looks like they were getting ready to go away or something," said the operative. "There's a dray coming up now. Wouldn't be surprised if the woman, alarmed at our snooping around, is preparing for a getaway."

Kane said nothing, but edged closer to the house. From the meager information at his disposal, he was not at all inclined to credit the theory that a crime had been committed. But there would be no harm in looking things over, particularly if Mrs. Epstein was intending to move.

From the driver of the dray, Kane obtained the information that the luggage was to be taken to Charing Cross thence to be shipped across the channel. The tags were on the various articles, and it was not until the last piece was brought out of the house that Kane noted anything out of the ordinary. Then he motioned to his men to close in.

"Take that chest back into the house," he ordered. "Let's see what's in it!"

"What right have you to give such orders?" demanded a voice from the doorway, and the Scotland Yard man, looking up, caught a glimpse of a tall, gaunt woman glaring down at him from the threshold.

"The right of an officer of the crown to investigate suspicious circumstances," retorted Kane. "I happen to be the chief inspector of Scotland Yard, and, as your husband recently disappeared, I desire to know what is in that box."

It was in the dim, barely-furnished parlor of the house that Kane directed the chest to be placed. The flickering yellow light of a single gas jet cast a ghostly illumination over the scene, and even Kane's iron nerves were shocked when the lid of the box was thrown back, and what appeared to be a ghost sat up and leered out into the room! It was the body of the missing man, the upper portion of the trunk attached to the lid of the box in such a manner that, when the top was thrown back, the body sprang into a sitting posture, as if it were alive again.

Even Mrs. Epstein, hardened as she was, cried out at the apparition and fien fainted away.

"Quick!" directed Kane. "Find out how the man was killed!"

"A thrust of some long, thin instrument through the heart," reported one of the detectives. "A drop of blood on his chest is the only indication of foul play, but that's what did it, all right. Not a siletto or a dagger, though. The puncture isn't large enough for that."

The chief inspector examined the wound for a moment carefully, and then, stepping across to where the fainting woman lay, began to fumble with something in her hair.

"Throw some water in her face," he ordered, "and then stand back. I want to find out something before she gets a chance to recover her nerve."

As the woman's eyes opened, she became aware, first, of the body of her dead husband staring at her with sightless, accusing eyes. Then she saw the chief inspector, standing in front of her, examining under a pocket magnifying glass—something that shone and glittered in the light of the jet directly above it.

An instant later Kane stood over her, his finger indicating the thing he held in his hand.

"Why did you kill your husband at midnight, four days ago?" he demanded. "Yes, you did! There's no use denying it! We have witnesses who heard the scream. We have proof that you were alone in the house with him. We know that he had a considerable sum of money concealed on the premises and—here his voice became the voice of doom—"I have here the weapon with which the murder was committed—your hatpin, with a tiny bit of the dead man's blood clotted close to the head where you neglected to wipe it off!"

Some months later, Mrs. Epstein was sentenced to penal servitude for life, while the hatpin was added to that gruesome collection which adorns the archives of Scotland Yard.

Jewels From the River Bed.

Ceylon's great sport is the hunting of jewels which are often to be found in the beds of rivers. Sometimes these streams are dried up for a time and then the rewards are great for the hunter. Government permission must be granted before one may go gem hunting, and having obtained this permission, the hunter is allowed to keep all he finds. To the inexperienced eye, the precious pebble, as it rests on the ground, looks like an ordinary stone, the expert can detect the valuable ones at once.

PENINSULAR

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

The Rev. Beebee, pastor of the Free Methodist church of Boyne City called at the A. B. Nicloy home Tuesday.

Mrs. F. D. Russell of Ridgeway farm received word Saturday that her grandfather Moses Lalonde had passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Stanley Bush at East Jordan where he had made his home for several years. Uncle Mose Lalonde was one of the earliest settlers of Charlevoix county coming from Canada with his wife and a large family in the early 70's settling on a farm near East Jordan where his children grew to maturity. There were seven girls and five boys who grew up to make homes in and around East Jordan, several still are residents and some have gone to other locations and some have passed on. For several years Mr. and Mrs. Lalonde lived in Advance and kept a boarding house. After the death of his wife some 25 years ago Uncle Mose went to the Northwest and took up a homestead and proved up on it. Had Uncle Mose lived until May 1922 he would have been 99 years old. He lived an honorable, useful life. The body was brought to East Jordan and laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery Tuesday.

Monroe Van Camp and his uncle from Boyne City came out on the peninsula Saturday to hunt and got caught in the blizzard so spent the night with Mr. Van Camp's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Wildy. They were favored with just as much storm but a fair wind to return to Boyne Sunday morning. The wind having changed during the night.

Word was received by Mr. and Mrs. Joel Bennett of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Nellie, to Norman Evans in Flint Jan. 7, 1922. The best wishes of a large circle of friends is extended to the happy couple.

A letter from Miss Allen Hayden states she and Miss Rose Kerny Bennett in Belleair, Fla. Jan. 5 and completed their contract Jan. 6 at the hotel Belleview.

L. E. Phillips is hauling stove bolts to Boyne City.

F. D. Russell and son Marion of Ridgeway went to East Jordan Monday to meet the body of Uncle Mose Lalonde and remained over for the funeral. Mrs. Russell was too ill with asthma to go.

Mrs. Nancy Bennett, who attended the funeral of her father, Mose Lalonde in East Jordan accompanied F. D. Russell home Tuesday returning to her home in Boyne City Tues. afternoon.

Ed White and C. C. Shaub made a business trip on the Peninsula Tues. After being kept at home for three days by a blizzard, a large percent of Peninsular inhabitants went to Boyne City Tuesday.

THE IMPATIENT ROBIN

ROBIN had started too early from the South that year. His little wife told him so, but he would not listen. "I suppose you want all the nice luscious to be taken when we arrive," he said to her.

So they arrived one morning, and though the sun was shining, the air was chilly, and poor little Mrs. Redbreast sat shivering on a limb of a tree, huddled against the trunk, while her lord and master sat on the end of a branch singing lustily.

"What did I tell you?" said Robin. "We are not a bit too early; and now let us find a home."

It was some time, however, before the warm spring days came, but they did, and with them the blossoms and the leaves, and then the fruit began to grow—cherries and apples and berries and all the things that the robins like to eat.

Robin was impatient. He wanted a nice cherry pie, and when his little wife told him the cherries were green and hard he began to scold.

"My mother used to make the best cherry pie I ever ate," said he, "and I know she used to use them when they were hard, because I used to stone them for her."

"Stone them?" exclaimed Mrs. Robin with wide-open eyes. "Whoever heard of stoning cherries for a pie? My mother never did. What did she do with the stones—make a soup?" inquired Mrs. Robin in rather a sarcastic tone of voice.

"Yes, she made a soup, now I come to think about it, and that cherry-stone soup was the best I ever ate," replied Mrs. Robin, thinking that was a clever idea.

"Well, will you make a cherry pie today?" he asked.

"But, Robin, the cherries are not fit to use yet," pleaded Mrs. Robin, fluttering about at the very thought of such a thing.

"All right, I'll make one myself," said Robin, bristling his feathers. "I can make a pie as well as anyone."

"All right, make one," said Mrs. Redbreast; and off she flew.

When she returned late that afternoon everything was covered with flour—even Robin's bill and wings—and a strong smell of something burned was in the air.

"I made that pie all right," he said, nodding his head toward the pantry,

"but I did not say I could bake one, I guess it is a little overdone, but the inside is all right, I am certain."

On the pantry shelf stood a pie almost as black as Johnny Blackbird's coat, but Mrs. Redbreast did not make any remark. She looked around the kitchen and asked: "Where is the cherry-stone soup, Robin? I declare I am quite hungry for some."

Robin rubbed his bill and stood on one foot and then on another. "Well, I do not seem to remember about that soup, after all, I guess I was mistaken. It was applecore soup she used to make instead of cherry-stone," he said.

"I am glad there is one thing I can make that your mother did not know about, for if you once had tasted cherry-stone soup you would never forget it," replied Mrs. Redbreast.

"Now, you fly out and sit on a limb and sing a while, and I will call you when she returned that afternoon she smelled something burned."

When I have the soup ready. Where are the stones?"

Robin brought a basinful of stones, eyeing his wife all the time, but she looked so wise and knowing that he did not ask any questions or venture to give advice. In fact, he had done all the cooking he wished to do, and gladly flew out to sit on a limb and sing.

Robin spread the fame of his wife's cherry-stone soup far and wide, and the little wives came to call on Mrs. Redbreast, all in a flutter to get her recipe for the wonderful soup.

Then they all flew home to make a cherry-stone soup just as Mrs. Redbreast had cooked it, which goes to prove that all wives stick together when it comes to managing a husband.

When She Returned That Afternoon She Smelled Something Burned.

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL
Faces about your name; its history, meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

GLADYS.

THOUGH popular in the chorus and frequently in use as the heroine of popular fiction, where Gladys de Montmorency was considered the height of feminine elegance, Gladys comes from a dignified old Roman family, the Claudian gens. The Claudii gained much fame in early Rome and figure in most of the tragedies of the city, and the Emperor Claudius, through his conquests in Britain, spread his name throughout Europe.

The first feminine Claudia, was the daughter of a British prince who sent her greetings to St. Timothy in St. Paul's epistle. The masculine form, Claudus, or Gladus, as it was sometimes spelled, became popular in England and was taken over by the Welsh, who are responsible for the feminine Gladys.

Gladys came to be considered the equivalent for Claudia and as such was revered, but her name never achieved the popularity of its equivalent, because of its harsh sound. Though recognized as Gladys it was more often given in baptism as Claudia, or Claudie, as the French call it.

France rejected Gladys completely, preferring the softer Claudine, and Claudie, while Italy and Spain chose Claudia, leaving Gladys completely to English use, whence it was brought to America and allowed to flourish unmolested and non-confused by Claudia.

Agate is the talismanic gem assigned to Gladys. It is said to avert peril from its wearer, to give her courage and a large degree of charm. One old legend contends that her every wish will come true when she wears this gem. Tuesday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

CONVICT TO LAND IN SOFT SPOT AFTER 35 YEARS ON SLAT BED

Lansing.—How would you like to have a real spring bed to sleep on after occupying a steel slat bed for 35 years?

That change is going to happen at Jackson prison, says Warden Harry L. Hulbert. He has purchased from the state 1,600 spring beds which will replace the old ones in the prison without springs. The beds were obtained from the federal government at Camp Custer.

1921 FARM INCOMES $187,153,000

State Farmers' Receipts Drop 54 Per Cent Since 1919.

Lansing.—A decline of approximately $116,000,000 in the gross income from crops to the farmers of the state in 1921, as compared with 1920, is shown in a report by Verge H. Church of the federal state bureau of farm crop estimates, and Herman S. Halladay of the state agricultural department.

The peak value of crop production was reached in 1919, the report declares, with a gross of $406,107,000. In 1920 it dropped to $308,410,000 and in 1921 still further declined to $187,153,000.

These figures represent the income, exclusive of live stock and live stock products, from an investment representing 196,447 farms of a total valuation of about $1,500,000,000. The decline in income from 1919, when the peak was reached, to the end of 1921 was 54 per cent.

The Girl a Horse and a Dog

By FRANCIS LYNDE

I didn't believe much of what he was saying, and I think Daddy Hiram didn't, though we had proved it true up to the point where they had separated on the Atropia road. I would have gone on, making him talk some more, but the look that was creeping into the old man's eyes made me let up. As I read the look it meant that Daddy couldn't stand it to see the third-degree stunt carried to its finish, so I got up and pulled Bullerton to his feet. He was pretty badly wrecked, as I meant him to be; still couldn't straighten his neck, and stood as if one leg were about half paralyzed, as perhaps it was.

"This outfit is my property, and you've out-stayed your welcome!" I snapped at him. "Climb your horse and get off the map!"

He limped over to his horse and gathered the reins and tried to put a foot into the stirrup. When I saw that he couldn't do even that much, I grabbed him and heaved him into the saddle; did this, and gave the horse a slap to set him going. I guess I shall always be able to recall the picture of that brown-bearded pirate riding across the Cinnabar dump head in the early morning sunshine, screwing his body in the saddle—because he couldn't turn the stiff-necked head by itself—to yell back at me with sizzling curses, "I'll get you—I'll get you yet! D—n your eyes—do you think you can make a hobbling cripple of me and get away with it? I'll—!" and then breaking it off short and kicking the ribs of his nag frantically for more speed when I made as if I were going to run after him.

Throughout this bit of belligerent by-play, which hadn't used up more than a few minutes, all told, Daddy Hiram had stood aside, as I have said, taking the part of the interested spectator. Now he remarked: "You can bet all your old clothes, son, that we hadn't seen the last of Charley Bullerton, not by a long chalk. You recollect I told you once he'd got a man, down in one of the camps on the Saguache? Well, it was for a heap less than what you done to him a few minutes ago. But let's go eat."

I passed through the cabin to the out-kitchen and while I was kindling a fire in the stove I saw Daddy with an armful of hay and a peck measure of oats, toiling the little horse down the path back to the cabin to disappear with it in the direction of the gulch where the abandoned "Little Jeanie" claim lay. I had the coffee made and the bacon fried by the time he got back, and after we had eaten he blossomed out in an entirely new role—that of commander in chief.

"This is movin' day, Stannie," he announced briefly. "If you'll dig up all the chuck and canned stuff you can find and tote it over to the shaft-house, I'll fetch the blankets and the cookin' tin."

I obeyed blindly, and entirely without prejudice to a lively curiosity as to what this new move might mean. While I was emptying the kitchen and pantry the old man unearthed another rifle from the closet under the loft ladder, and with it a box of ammunition; and I observed that this second gun, like the one he had carried on our pilgrimage of the night, looked as if it had been freshly oiled and rubbed up every day since it had left the factory.

"You'll have a lot of talking to do presently," I warned him. "You seem to forget that you haven't yet told me what's biting you."

"Maybe there ain't nothin' bitin' me; maybe I'm just gettin' sort of old and skeery. But it's this-away, Stannie, son: Ever since your gran'paw gave me this here watchin' job, and since I heard tell how them Cripple Creek short-card artists socked it to him on this Cinnabar deal, I been lookin' for trouble. I ain't been easy about them Cripple Creek holdups nary a day since your gran'paw told me to stay here and hold the fort for him."

"You thought perhaps the original owners might try to grab the property by force?"

Daddy looked up at me from under his bushy eyebrows.

"Pears to me like you've got a mighty short memory, some way, Stannie. Have you done forgot that bunch o' huskies we saw campin' out in Antelope gulch as we come along by there at daybreak this mornin'? I didn't like the looks o' that camp much at the time; and I liked it a whole lot less after we got here and found Charley Bullerton sunnin' himself on the doorstep. Made me sort o' perk up my ears."

"But, see here, Daddy," I thrust in. "If he's got my deed, or has destroyed it, why—"

"Why, he has as good a right to the Cinnabar as the next one that comes along, is what you're goin' to say. I ain't disputin' you for a minute. But afore he can have it, he's got to take it, hain't he? And we've got two mighty good livin' pieces of artillery that says he's goin' to have one joyful old time a-takin' it; that is, if you're of the same mind that I am."

"By Jove! I wanted to put my arms around the old Spartan and hug him! As I've said, there were ten or a dozen men in that bunch we'd seen in the gulch, and he was calmly proposing to stand up to them, as confidently as if it were all in the day's work."

"I get you now, Daddy," I said, "and if there's a fight coming to us, your mind is mine. We'll give them the best we've got."

I thought the two old-fashioned guns and Jeaple's pistol promised a poor chance for an effective defense; but Daddy Hiram proceeded to show me that we had at least one other resource. In the mine stores left behind by the former operating company were two boxes of sixty-per-cent dynamite, with fuse and caps, and Daddy pointed out that there were good possibilities wrapped up in the greasy brown-paper cartridges if the enemy should come close enough to let us use them.

"I believe you had this all doped out in advance, Daddy," I said, when he had a neat little row of the cartridges laid out on the floor. "But surely you didn't expect to hold out alone if those sharks sent a crowd of 'jumpers' in to run you off?"

"Me and Jennie," he said simply. "We'd 'a' done our level best; and the angels couldn't do no more than that."

Here, unless the old man was sadly mistaken in his daughter, was another wholly unsuspected side of the blue-eyed maiden displayed for me. I tried to imagine Lisette helping her father, or me, or any lone man, to defend a beleaguered mine against an armed attack. It was so funny that I shouted, "Do you mean to say that Jennie would shut herself up in here and load the guns for you against a mob of mine jumpers?"

He looked up with a prideful sparkle in his mild blue eyes.

"You don't half know that little girl o' mine, yet, Stannie, son," he said earnestly. "And then: 'She's the only boy I ever had, you see; and she hadn't had any mother since she can remember. Maybe I hadn't ort to taught her to ride hawsses and shoot, and them things; and it seemed like I had to.'"

"You haven't made her one iota less womanly—or lovable," I hastened to say. Then I blurted out the thing that had been weighing on me ever since we had found Bullerton loafing on the door-step: "Do you suppose they could—is there any way they could have been married yesterday, Daddy?"

"Uh-huh; I reckon there was. They might 'a' gone on down to Angels. There's a justice o' the peace down there."

It still lacked a full hour of noon when we got our preparations made and were ready to stand a siege. Then we waited, and waited some more; and after a while I began to grin. What if we had stampered ourselves needlessly? After all, the men we had seen in the deep gulch might really have been tramps, and not a Bullerton army. Would the mining engineer, unprincipled as he doubtless was, go to the length of trying to dispossess us by force? The more I thought of it, the more unlikely it seemed.

"I guess maybe we were scared of a shadow, after all, Daddy," I said. "Bullerton has had time enough to bring up his army, if he has one."

"I ain't countin' much on his backin' down," was the drawing rejoinder. "Ye see, I know Charley Bullerton of old; been knowin' him ever since he first bust'ed into the minin' game. That was over in the Saguache. He's an all-round cuss, but he's a stayer. Besides, you roughed him up sort o' hurtful this mornin', and he's got that to make him spitey. We'll be hearin' from him as soon as he gets things yanked 'round into shape to suit him."

Still, as time passed and nothing happened, it looked less and less likely that we were going to have to fight for our holding ground. I don't know to this good day what made Bullerton so slow in bringing up his army, but it was high noon, and Daddy and I were eating a cold luncheon, with the shaft-house door-sill for a seat, when we saw the army coming. It was a straggling gang of perhaps a dozen men; we couldn't count them accurately because the road on the bench wound in and out among the trees.

They came up within easy rifle shot and pitched their camp, if you could call it that, in a little glade. At that distance we could see that they were armed, but, of course, we couldn't tell what kind of guns they had. After they had taken possession of the small open space, two of them set to work to build a cooking fire.

At the halt in the glade one of the party—Bullerton, we guessed it was—broke a branch from a pine, stripped the twigs from it, and made it a flag-staff for his white handkerchief. Under this flag of truce he and two of his men came on, leaving their guns behind. There was a climb of about thirty feet, maybe, coming up from the bench to the ledge upon which the mine buildings stood, so we got a fairly good look at the peace party before it came within talking distance. Bullerton still had a slight touch of the wry-neck, and the devil-may-care jauntiness which had been his chief characteristic as a guest of the Twomblys had been wiped from his face and manner like a picture from a black-board.

As the three of them topped the rise in the ore road I reached behind me and got one of the Winchesters.

"That's near enough!" I called out. "Do your talking from there, if you've anything to say."

The delegation halted and Bullerton took a paper from his pocket.

"I'm servin' legal notice upon you,

Daddy and I Were Eating When We Saw the Army Coming.

Broughton," he said, waving the paper at me. "And I have two witnesses here, as the law requires. I represent the Cinnabar Mining company of Cripple Creek. You are trespassing on our property and I am making a formal demand for possession."

"So that's the new wrinkle, is it?" I laughed. "I was hoping you might spring something a little more original. How are you going to prove ownership?"

"The burden of proof isn't on us; it's on you!" he ripped out. "You haven't a shadow of claim to this mine. I've got your so-called deed right here—and he shook that at us. 'It's a forgery; a clumsy, childish forgery that wouldn't impose upon a blind man! We can send you to the rock pile on the strength of it if we want to!'"

Since he had stolen the deed out of my pocket, I thought, of course, that he was just bluffing about its being a forgery. He must have known perfectly well that it wasn't. But Daddy was whispering in my ear as he sat behind me. Something like this: "Gosh—all-Friday, Stannie, he's got you goin'! He's made a copy o' the deed and throwed the 'original away'—burnt it up, 'r somethin'!"

"You have it all your own way, Bullerton—or you think you have," I told him; and if I didn't get all of the self-confidence into the words that I tried to, I am persuaded that he didn't know the difference. "I might even concede that you have everything but the mine itself. If you want that, you may come and take it; but you'll permit me to say that when you break into this shaft-house there will be fewer people alive on Cinnabar mountain than there are at the present moment. I shall quite possibly be one of the dead ones, but before I go I shall do my best to make you another."

"All right," he snapped back; "you're speakin' for yourself, and that's your privilege. But how about you, Twombly? This is no quarrel of yours. Suppose you go over yonder to your cabin and stay out of the fight. Nobody wants to hurt you."

That put it pretty squarely up to me, too, so I turned to the old man at my side.

"It's good advice, Daddy," I said; "and this ain't your quarrel. You'd better duck while you can."

Daddy Hiram made no reply at all to me; didn't pay any attention to me. Instead, he stood up on the door-sill and shook his fist at Bullerton.

"I been lookin' for you and your kind of a crowd for a year back, Charley Bullerton, and drawin' pay for doin' it!" he shrieked. "Stannie, here, says if you want this mine you can come and take it, and, by gummies, I say them same identical words!"

"All right," said Bullerton again. "But it's only fair to say that we outnumber you six to one, and we've got the law, and a few deputy sheriffs, on our side. You two haven't as much show as a cat in hell without claws, and when the circus is over, you'll both go to jail, if there's enough left of you to stand the trip." Then, as he was turning to go he flipped the deed into the air so that it fell at our feet. "You may have that," he sneered. "We'd like nothing better than to have you produce it in court."

It didn't seem just fitting to let him have the last word, so I pitched a small ultimatum of my own after him as he herded his two scoundrelly looking "witnesses" into the downward road.

"One thing more, Bullerton," I called out. "Your flag of truce holds only until you get back to your army. If you or any of your men are in sight of Cinnabar property ten minutes after you reach your camp, we open fire."

Since the truce was thus definitely ended, we retired into our fortress, and put up the bars. As we were closing the doors and making everything snug I asked Daddy what kind of human timber Bullerton was likely to have in his army, and if there were any chance that his boast about having deputy sheriffs in the crowd was to be taken at its face value.

"There's nothin' to the deputy brag, Ike Bensley is the chief deputy for this end o' the county, and he'd be here himself if that was a posse, comin' out yonder. As for what he has got, there's no tellin'. Most likely he's picked up a fistful o' toughs and out-throwed 'em down in Angels. There's always plenty o' drift o' rat kind hangin' 'round a minin' camp."

"Fighters?" I queried.

"Oh, yes; I reckon so—if fightin' comes easier than workin'."

With the doors shut and barred I climbed up on our breastwork to bring my eyes on a level with one of the high window holes. The ten-minute ultimatum interval had come to an end, but the raiders were making no move to vacate the premises. On the contrary, their cooking fire was now burning briskly and they were apparently making leisurely preparations to eat. It fairly made me schoolboy furious to see those fellows calmly getting their noon meal ready and ignoring my warning.

"Hand me up one of those dynamite cartridges!" I barked at Daddy Hiram; and when he complied, I lighted a match and stuck it to the split end of the fuse. There was a fizz, a cloud of acid smoke to make me turn my face away and cough, and then a frenzied yell from the old man.

"Throw it—good-gosh-to-Friday—throw it!"

I contrived to get it out through the window opening in some way, and lost my balance on the earth bags, and it going to be rather inconvenient. For a fire we should have to resort to the forge in the blacksmith shop, and the shop was nothing but an open-cracked shed, as I have described it, entirely indefensible if the raiders should conclude to rush it.

In the fulness of time the period of suspense came to an end, and we were given audible proof that Bullerton had finally made his "dispositions," as an army man would say. The announcement came in the form of a rifle bullet ripping through the roof of the shaft-house as if the stout iron roofing had been so much paper.

"The fun's a-beginnin'," said Daddy; and the words were hardly out of his mouth before another bullet came, this time from the opposite direction, and it also, tore through the roof.

"Got us surrounded," Daddy grimaced, when a third shot came from still another point of the compass; and within the next fifteen minutes Bullerton's demonstration was made complete. The shots, fired one at a time, and at intervals of a minute or so, came from all three of the exposed sides of the building, and the time elapsing between the ripping crashes on the roof and the crack of the guns told us that the marksmen were all well beyond the range of our Winchester, even if we could have seen them—which we couldn't.

Bullerton had evidently given his men orders to aim at the roof, for it was only a stray bullet now and then that came through the walls. After a time the purpose of the bombardment became obvious. Bullerton seemed to have absorbed the idea that he could break our nerve—wear us out. After the first fusillade the shots came at intervals of maybe five minutes; just often enough to keep us on the strain; and I don't mind admitting that the object was handsomely gained. I can't speak for Daddy Hiram or the dog, but at the end of the first hour I was little better than a bunch of raw nerves.

As all days must, this wearisome first day came to an end at last, and with the coming of dusk the bombardment stopped—with our roof looking like a sieve.

But after darkness had settled down we were made to feel in another way how acutely helpless we were. We could see nothing, hear nothing. Though we knew we were surrounded, the silence and solitude were unbroken, and the strain was greater than that of a pitched battle. If we were to get any sleep at all, a night watch could be maintained by only one of us at a time; and with our utmost vigilance a surprise attack would be the easiest thing in the world for Bullerton to pull off.

There are no night noises in the high altitudes, unless the wind happens to be blowing; no frogs or tree-toads, no insects; and the silence was fairly deafening—and maddening.

Not wishing to strike a match to determine the exact end of my watch period, I stuck it out, meaning to give Daddy good measure. So I think it must have been somewhere around ten o'clock when the collic woke with a start; jumped up, took the kinks out of his back with a little whining yawn, and trotted to the door—the one opening toward the cabin across the dump head. Screwing an eye to one of Daddy's auger-bored loopholes, I tried to fathom the outer darkness, which was only a degree or so less Egyptian than that of the shaft-house interior.

Though I could see nothing suspicious it was very evident that the dog could hear something. He had his nose to the crack under the door and was growling. I quieted him and listened. Something was going on, either inside of the cabin or back of it; in the dead silence I could distinguish a low murmur of voices and, a moment later, a sound like that which would be made by the cautious opening of one of the sliding windows. While I still had my eye to the peep-hole a jet of flame spurted from the dark bulk of the cabin, and simultaneously a bullet tore through the shaft-house roof. The raiders had captured our outworks.

The report and the bullet clatter aroused Daddy Hiram, and when I turned he was at my elbow.

"Done crope up on us, have they, son?" he said in his usual unruffled manner. Then: "Maybe this is just a sort o' false notion over here. Spose you try and get a squint at things over on the blacksmith-shop side, Stannie."

I stumbled across to the other door, taking the collic with me. I could see nothing in that direction; less than nothing, since the lean-to shop building cut off what little light the stars gave. But the black darkness didn't hamper Barney's ears or his nose, and his eagerness to get back to the real battle front was a good proof that there was as yet nothing stirring on our side of things.

Groping my way back to Daddy I found that he had one of the Winchester and seemed to be trying to fit a ramrod to the barrel. When I finally made out what he was doing I found that he had thrust a piece of heavy wire into the gun-barrel and was impaling one of the dynamite cartridges on its projecting end.

"Li'l' skyrocket," he chuckled; then, with quiet humor: "You stand by with a match, Stannie, and let's see what-all's goin' to happen. When I say the word, you stick your match to the fuse."

tumbling awkwardly into Daddy's arms as I fell. Coincident with the tumble, the stout old shaft-house rocked to the crash of an explosion that was still echoing from the cliffs of the mountain above when the sour fumes of the dynamite rose to float in at the window holes.

"G-good gizzards!" stuttered Daddy Hiram, "did you reckon I cut them fuses long enough so 'you could hold 'em in your hands and watch 'em burn?"

"What do I know about fuses?" I asked, grinning at him. Then I mounted the breastwork again and looked out, prepared to see the entire landscape blown into shreds.

Aside from a few sheets of corrugated iron torn from the roof of the adjacent ore shed, the landscape appeared to be fairly intact and still with us. But down on the bench below, the lately kindled cooking fire was burning in solitary confinement. The raiders, to a man, had disappeared.

CHAPTER XIV.

Applied Hydraulics. "They've skipped," I reported to Daddy, as I climbed down from the earth sacks, "and that shows us the quality of the humanity stuff we have to deal with. Bullerton will never get that bunch to rush us in the open."

"That's something gained, anyway," said the old man; "and ever 'll' hit helps. But if they ain't goin' to take it standin' up, we got to look out for Injin dogn's; the snake-in-the-grass kind. Charley Bullerton ain't goin' to quit none so easy."

Nevertheless, for an hour or more, it looked as if the jumpers had quit. In due time the cooking fire in the little glade burned out, and no one came to rekindle it. Around and about the solemn silence of the mountain wilderness ringed us in, and it was hard to realize that the siege had not been abandoned—though we knew well enough it hadn't.

We put in the time as best we could, tinkering up our defenses and trying to provide for all the contingencies. For one thing, Daddy found a big auger and used it to bore loopholes at various places through the wall, by means of which we could command the approaches to the shaft-house on two of the three exposed sides. Eastwardly, the blacksmith shop intervened between us and the boiler shed—it was built as a lean-to against that side of the shaft-house—and in that direction we were necessarily blind. The fourth side, as I have said, faced an abrupt cliff of the mountain, a rocky wall rising to maybe twice the height of the buildings and almost overhanging them. At its summit this cliff tapered off into a steep upward slope, bare of timber; hence we were comparatively secure from attack in that quarter.

As to provisioning we were not so badly off. Daddy Hiram, well used in his long experience as a prospector to figuring upon the longevity of "grub-stakes," estimated that, what with the canned stuff, part of a sack of flour, and another of cornmeal, we could live for a week, though the cooking was

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in uric acid so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

POINCARÉ FORMS FRENCH CABINET

SUCCESSOR TO RPIEMIER BRIAND ENDEAVORS TO CHANGE CONTROL OF EUROPE'S AFFAIRS.

WANTS FREE HAND ON RHINE

France to Reserve Freedom of Action Against Germany, Poincaré Tells Premier Lloyd George.

Paris—The new French government, headed by Raymond Poincaré and including in its membership six of the ministers who served under Aristide Briand, has been formed, accepted by the President, and is beginning to function.

Its first movement to carry out the nationalist program, which constitutes the platform of Poincaré and his political group is seen in the endeavor of the new premier to break down the Supreme Council's control of European affairs and revert to the old-style method of diplomacy, conducting all negotiations through the ambassadors at the various capitals.

There is an indication that the new premier will refuse to meet Russia at the Genoa conference table until Russia has acknowledged all external debts, including those of the Czar's regime.

Mr. Poincaré spent the entire morning Sunday in an attempt to find occupants for the posts of Labor and Hygiene on his cabinet and it was not until 2 p. m. that the completed list was carried to President Millerand for his approval.

The political complexion of the ministry is not exactly what M. Poincaré might have wished, owing to the refusal of Herriot, leading Radical Socialist, and André Tardieu to join. Observers declare, nevertheless, that it is a homogeneous body and that it should work well.

Poincaré, in his conference with Premier Lloyd George at the British embassy Saturday evening, is understood to have outlined the following conditions if France is to enter into a treaty of alliance with Great Britain:

First: It is necessary to consider the Rhine as France's strategic military defense line instead of "French soil." Second: It is necessary for France to reserve the right to freedom of action against Germany if the Germans willfully refuse to meet any of their obligations.

NEW BONUS PLAN IS PROPOSED

$4,000,000,000 of Britain Bonds Would Provide for Veterans.

Washington—Four billion dollars' worth of British government bonds, underwritten by the United States, will provide for the soldiers' bonus, if the present plan of administration leaders is carried out.

Administration leaders are understood to be prepared to go before the country with such a plan, intended at once to take care of adjusted compensation for American ex-service men and the British indebtedness to the United States.

It is proposed that $4,000,000,000 worth of British government securities, guaranteed by the United States government, will find a ready market in this country if offered for general sale, and will lead to an early and speedy solution of the difficulties confronting the administration relative to the soldiers' bonus and the foreign debt.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE TWO CAPTAINS. ONE captain went clear through the war And never struck a blow; He came home with a perfect score— A perfect letter O. Citations never mentioned him, For, neither good nor bad, He came home safe in life and limb— But that was all he had.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS. "TREACLE." THOSE who have stumbled across the reference in Waller's ode to Charles II to "treacle yielded by your vipers" have naturally been puzzled to see the connection between a poisonous snake and the English name for sirup or molasses, a connection which dates back to the days of legendary lore.

Uncommon Sense

ENERGY IS CAPITAL. ALAKE cannot turn a turbine, though it contains more water than a cataract. All the knowledge you can accumulate in a lifetime will do you no good unless it can be translated into energy.

Important Little Word. Eugene Walter recently told the story of an obstreperous actor whose anxiety over his billing far overshadowed his histrionic talents in a forthcoming production.

A TIE GAME. Slater: What was the score? Bobble: Two black eyes on each side.

Phrase First Used by Seward

"The Higher Law" was an expression first used by the Hon. William H. Seward (1801-1872). In his speech in the United States senate on March 11, 1850, on the question of admitting California into the Union. As employed by him on that occasion, the phrase denoted a law higher than the Constitution, viz., a law of God.

Seemingly. "To the psychologist," says Dr. James Drever, "had not it been precisely the same footing as a good act as regards its value." This view seems to be shared by many theatrical managers.

Efficiency. "Children," said the efficiency expert, "Ah, yes; a beautiful idea, but expensive. I have figured out that a growing child costs its parents exactly 27 3/4 cents for each tenth of an inch."—Houston Post.
