Facts About Income Tax

As Furnished By the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

(Article No. 1)

In making out his income tax return for 1921, the average taxpayer will find a considerable saving in comparison with the amount of tax paid on the same income for 1920.

The exemptions provided by the revenue act of 1921 are $1,000 for single persons (the term including widows, divorcees, and persons separated from husband and wife by mutual agreement), $2,500 for married persons whose net income was $5,000 or less, and $2,000 for married persons whose net income was $5,000 or more. Under the revenue act of 1918 the personal exemption allowed a married person was $2,000, regardless of the amount of net income. The personal exemption allowed a married person applies also to the head of a family, man or woman who supports in one household one or more relatives by blood, marriage, or adoption.

The exemptions for dependents—a person who receives his chief support from the taxpayer and who is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective—is increased from $200 to $100.

The act requires that a return be filed by every single person whose net income for 1921 was $1,000 or more, every married person whose net income was $2,000 or more, and by every person—single or married—whose gross income was $5,000 or more.

The requirement to file a return of gross income of $5,000 or more regardless of net income is a new provision. Net income is gross income less certain specified deductions for business expenses, losses, bad debts, etc., which are fully explained on the forms.

Returns must be filed by married couples whose combined net income for 1921, including that of dependent minor children, equaled or exceeded $2,000, or if the combined gross income equaled or exceeded $5,000.

The period for filing returns is from January 1 to March 15, 1922. Heavy penalties are provided for failure or "willful refusal" to file a return on time.

Forms 1040A for incomes of $5,000 and less and 1040 for incomes in excess of $5,000 may be obtained from the offices of collectors of internal revenue and branch offices. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return, or in four equal installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15.

CONTRACT LET FOR DIXIE HIGHWAY

Contract has been let to a contractor by the name of Edison, of Grand Rapids, for the building of a 16-foot gravel road from Sprick's corners south to the corner about three-quarters of a mile north of Eastport, known as the Archer corner.

The contract takes in that part of the new road in Charlevoix county south to the Antrim county line, and from there to the Archer corner. Operations will start just as soon as the spring break-up takes place, and will be rushed to completion, and it is hoped that before the end of the present season the road will be open for traffic.

Contract will be let later for the construction of that part of the new road north from Sprick's corners to the city limits within a short time, a great portion of which will be of concrete.

AMERICAN LEGION HAVE ENJOYABLE EVENING

The supper and program given by Rebec-Sweet Post No. 227, American Legion, assisted by their wives and sweethearts, which was given at the High School Monday evening, was a most enjoyable affair. The Girl Scouts served the menu, and the Metropole Orchestra rendered inspiring music. Ingram Little sang two war-time songs. The addresses were snappy and to the point! Rev. Fr. Sidebotham urged a get-together spirit in Post and Auxiliary work. Rev. Fr. Drinan gave a very snappy address with plenty of illustrations. He said if we want anything out of the organization we must put something into it. The evening closed with music and dancing.

LOCAL PRISONER WANTED AT CHEBOYGAN

Clarence Morse, the young man who is wanted here on two charges, has been located by Sheriff Gebhardt at Charlevoix, where he is serving twenty days in jail on a minor charge. Morse is the fellow who is charged with stealing a motorcycle from a Mt. Morris second-hand dealer. He came to Cheboygan with the machine. He put up at the Columbian hotel, where he left the machine and a $25 board bill.

Sheriff Gebhardt will go to Charlevoix Thursday to bring Morse back to answer to a charge of breaking into Dr. D. M. Spier's cottage at the head of Black Lake, where he stole a canoe motor, bedding and other things. It is alleged he stole a gun from a hunter's cabin on the upper Black. Sheriff Gebhardt has had a long chase for his man but finally landed him.—Cheboygan Tribune.

Crop Expert Gives Report

Verne Church Says Grain Weathering Winter Nicely.

The following semi-monthly crop report was issued at Lansing, Monday, by Verne H. Church, agricultural statistician:

There is no apprehension at this date as to the condition of winter wheat and rye. While the ground has been bare over southern Michigan during a great part of the past two weeks, it has remained frozen since the rainy season that prevailed during the early days of the month. Northern Michigan has an ample snow covering. The temperature has been above normal, a condition also favorable to fall-sown wheat and other crops.

Highways have improved to some extent where much hauling has been done, the rough places having been worn down by travel. Ice-cutting is in progress, the thickness being generally good and the weather favorable for handling. Conditions have also been favorable for wood and log cutting. There is very little snow in the woods except in the far northern counties, and not enough there to hinder lumbering operations.

Livestock continues in good health due to the absence of any severe epidemics, a plentiful supply of feed except in a few sections and the prevailing moderate temperature.

Considerable interest on the part of farmers is manifested in the further organization of co-operative creameries and milk producers organizations. One of the latter is in process of effecting an organization in Lansing. In this particular instance it is planned to draw milk from a sufficient area around the city to supply the demand and to manufacture the surplus into butter, cheese and other dairy products. The milk is to be graded according to its percentage of butter fat and patrons supplied according to their preferences.

Michigan is rapidly attaining a high rank in the production of seeds of many kinds. Pedigreed grains and seed potatoes have obtained exceptional exhibits. The state is also a large producer of vegetable seeds, vetch seed and several of the varieties of clover seed. During the last few years alfalfa seed has been grown very successfully and promises to become another industry for the state. Seed buyers from all parts of the country are looking to Michigan as a desirable source for standard seeds of quality.

IMPROVED ROADS SUFFICIENT TO EN-CIRCLE THE EARTH

What the new Federal highway appropriation to be expended under the direction of the Bureau of Public Roads United States Department of Agriculture will mean to the country is accurately gauged in a synopsis prepared by the bureau, showing the use to which the $75,000,000 previously appropriated by Congress has been put. Up to December 31, $215,077,246 had been put to work in projects either entirely complete or under construction. To match that amount the States appropriated $285,379,312, making a total of $497,456,558.

If placed end to end the roads to be paid for by this money would encircle the earth at the Equator and extend as far from New York to San Francisco on the second lap. The total mileage of roads under construction and completed, the department's records show, was approximately 27,000 miles. Of this mileage 9,555 miles was in projects entirely completed. The balance of 17,445 miles was in projects which were still under construction but reported 69 per cent complete October 31. In those projects there was the equivalent of 12,000 miles of completed roads, so that the completed road to date was more than 21,000 miles, or nearly enough to encircle the globe.

Prior to 5 years ago the Federal Government took no active part in the road construction of the country. Today about one-half of all roads under construction are being aided financially by the Federal Government, and the construction is subject to inspection and approval of Federal engineers.

Baker Candidate For Re-election

Would Again Represent The 29th District.

Herbert F. Baker, of Weadcock, state senator from the 29th senatorial district, will be a candidate to succeed himself for the Republican nomination which is held in August, 1922.

Known as an able and militant legislator, the Cheboygan senator has served two terms in the upper body, during which time he was recognized as one of its leading and influential members.

As a parliamentary general and rough and tumble debater, Senator Baker was engaged in many legislative battles, and his law-making service has been marked by the passage of many acts on the statute books, bearing his name.

With the important matter of re-districting of the state one of the big issues of the next session, students of the situation have declared that an experienced and resourceful senator should represent the 29th district and Senator Baker's announcement is receiving substantial support.

WIRELESS GRAND OPERA TO FEATURE FARM WEEK

With arrangements completed for a fifteen minute program of "wireless" Grand Opera to feature each evening meeting, and exhibits rapidly assuming final form, the stage is all set for thousands of Michigan farmers who will gather at M. A. C. from Jan. 30 to Feb. 3 for the annual Farmers Week and Housewives Congress. Final programs of speakers have been announced, entertainment features are ready, and all that remains to make the conference the greatest in the history of Farmers Weeks is favorable weather, according to college authorities.

The heads of Michigan's two great universities, M. L. Burton of the U. of M., and President-elect David Friday of M. A. C., will address the general meetings. H. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau; Congressman J. C. Ketcham, of Michigan; G. I. Christie, of Purdue University, and many other famous speakers have sent final confirmation on their engagements to speak.

Prominent agricultural associations of the state have completed plans for their individual meetings. These include the State Farm Bureau, the Crop Improvement Association, the Muck Farmers Association, the State Branch of the American Poultry Association, the Beef Producers Association, the Potato Producers Association and others.

Exhibits as announced are to be unusually instructive and attractive. Horticulture, farm crops, soils, farm machinery, livestock, poultry and rabbits, and many other phases of agriculture are to be covered in the displays.

Plans for entertainment of women guests have been finished by the college Home Economics Dept. Exhibits on clothing, nutrition, and home furnishing will be on display, special speakers and meetings will be held, and every effort will be made to give the women as good features as the men enjoy.

Among entertainment features will be the annual parade, in which more than a mile of movable equipment of M. A. C. lines up for a great pageant.

58 Training Centers

U. S. Veterans' Bureau Has the Above Number.

"The complete 'social recovery' of the neuropsychiatric cases and recovery of health in tubercular cases is the objective of the 58 training centers established outside of hospitals under the U. S. Veterans' Bureau. Fifty of these training centers are non-resident, while eight of them are resident. These training centers have been established principally for tubercular and neuropsychiatric cases," Col. Charles R. Forbes, Director of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau stated today.

The resident training center at Pascagoula, Mississippi, was established on the site of a war-time ship building corporation. A community had been established there for the workmen in the shipbuilding plant, and when it was taken over for the purpose of a training center, there was ready for occupancy a large number of cottages and other buildings common to such a community. This made it pleasant and convenient for the married trainees, who were thereby enabled to have their families with them. The resident center at Nauvoo, Illinois, has both neuropsychiatric and quiet tubercular trainees. However, these men are convalescent cases not sufficiently recovered to take a full course of training and yet not so sick as to necessitate their remaining in a hospital. A certain number of hours a day is devoted to study, while sufficient time is allotted for rest and recreation. They are under the supervision of the medical officers who prescribe the necessary amount of study, rest and recreation, making possible a program which could not be carried out elsewhere. The training center which is being completed at Bellevue, Nebraska, will be devoted primarily to neuropsychiatric cases. Another was recently opened at Fort Jefferson, New York, with all modern facilities and conveniences for the proper handling of convalescent cases. These cases can be best taken care of when the training is based on "prescription" and the Rehabilitation Division of the Veterans' Bureau has been studying the best types of vocations to be taught neuropsychiatric cases. They confidently predict that practically every neuropsychiatric case will make a "social recovery", through the proper type of training, so arranged as to tide these men over their period of convalescence.

The Chief Tuberculosis Consultant for the Veterans' Bureau is at present engaged in getting these centers up to the maximum of efficiency for the care of disabled veterans, and the Chief Neuropsychiatric Consultant is advising regarding the programs for the neuropsychiatric cases.

A model training center has recently been opened at Silver Springs, Maryland. The men are being taught general agriculture, carpentry, cabinet-making, machine shop work, electrical trades, leather work, mechanical drawing and the necessary academic subjects, which make this vocational training feasible. The trainees are housed in a modern dormitory, comfortable and pleasant and everything has been done to make the surroundings agreeable for these disabled veterans.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Girls' Basket Ball Game

The girls' basket ball game at Grayling was probably the best game that the East Jordan girls have ever played. Every player was on the job and fighting all the time. The Grayling players also put up a stiff fight. But they had poor luck shooting baskets probably because of the fine work of our guards, Christa Hoover and Elizabeth Sweet. The Grayling guards were also very good but Julia Supernaw and Grace Atkinson always managed to get away from them and make a basket. Julia made a few long shots that were very lucky. The Grayling centers were also very quick but Alma Anderson our tall center with peppy Mary Shedina always managing to get the ball away from them.

At the end of the first half the score was 9 to 4 in favor of the East Jordan girls but at the end the score was 12 to 12. They decided to play until the first basket was made. It was then that East Jordan did their best to prevent Grayling from making the fatal basket and as the score 12 to 14 in favor of E. J. shows they did.

Boys' Basket Ball

The boys won their first game last Friday on an outside floor. The game was hard fought and the score was 9 and 4 the first half in favor of Grayling. The second half started with a zip that told on the warriors of Grayling's basket ball team. East Jordan came back with more zip and teamwork in the last half and the score began rolling over way and the game over found the score 25 and 17 in favor of E. J. H. S. Hegerberg was substituted for Summers and Jones for Bowen in the last half. Hockstad stepped back into his old form and rolled the baskets in the last half netting 6 field goals and 6 free throws.

COOLIDGE SAYS "LET'S GO"

Vice President Coolidge on the first of January wrote a letter at the request of the N. Y. Journal of Commerce so optimistic that it deserves a wider circulation than the Journal was in a position to accord it. The body of the letter reads as follows:

"There are many increasing indications that this nation is at the beginning of a greatly increased prosperity. There has been a drastic deflation of all kinds of merchandise, which appears to be completed. There are many things selling below the cost of production. There is a large reserve of money in the banks. The rate of interest has declined. Every appearance indicates that business has reached a stable foundation. There has not been a complete economic international readjustment, but the foundation has been laid for it in the existence of the most complete and friendly understanding which ever existed between the nations of the world. The Washington Conference made a remarkable contribution to this end. The period of reaction is done. The time for prosperity is at hand. The material conditions have been completed. To all this let the faith of man add prosperity."

It was William James' idea that a man ran, not because he was afraid of the bear, but that he was afraid of the bear because he ran. Business has for long been in a bearish mood because of the Wilson aftermath when the conscience of an Administration made cowards of us all. We should turn the other way and put a little bull into business.

Truth is stranger than some fiction, but it isn't stranger than the excuses that some husbands give for late hours.

WON'T WITHDRAW SIBERIAN ARMY

JAPAN TO KEEP FORCES THERE TO PROTECT ITS INTERESTS, SAYS FOREIGN MINISTER.

QUESTION UP AT CONFERENCE

Political Stability Must Be Established Declares Count Uchida in Speech Before Diet.

Washington—Consideration of her own safety compels Japan to continue for the present her forces in the maritime provinces of Siberia, Foreign Minister Uchida declared before the diet in Tokio, according to a text of his speech made public Sunday by the Japanese embassy.

Count Uchida declared in his speech that upon the re-establishment of political stability in Siberia, the Japanese would lose no time in withdrawing their troops. He explained that the principal object of the negotiations with the far eastern republic of Chita, apart from a discussion of questions concerning general commerce, was to obtain the assurance from the Chita government that Japanese lives and property would be protected, that there would be security of general traffic, a removal of menace to Japanese national existence and a safe-guarding of industry.

The foreign minister was quoted by the embassy as continuing: "We have no territorial ambition nor any intention to secure for ourselves exclusive rights of any kind. The occupation of Saghalien Island has been caused by the unprecedented massacre at Nikolaievsk, and Japanese would certainly discontinue it upon satisfactory settlement of that incident by a responsible Russian government."

Count Uchida said it was a matter of sincere regret that not only have peace and unity not been restored in China but the situation there lately appears to be developing in the opposite direction.

LABOR BOARD CUTS OVERTIME

Railroad Men to Receive Extra Pay After 9 Hours Work.

Chicago, Ill.—Abolition of penal overtime payments until after the ninth hour of work, and authorization of "split tricks," instead of compelling overtime payments, or two shifts for intermittent work over a span of more than eight hours, are important changes in rules governing railroad clerical and terminal employees issued by the United States railroad labor board.

The new rules, which become effective February 1, supersede the national agreement made by the federal administration with the brotherhood of railway and steamship clerks, freight handlers, express and station employees, which has been in effect since January 1, 1920. About 300,000 employees are affected.

Through elimination of time and one-half pay for the ninth hour of work, the railroads are expected to save thousands of dollars, although no estimate of the amount is available.

PRESIDENT WIRES CONDOLENCES

Pope's Demise Will Be Deeply Mourned, Harding Declares.

Washington—President Harding's condolences on the death of Pope Benedict were dispatched Sunday by Secretary Hughes to Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state.

"Deeply regretting to learn of the demise of His Holiness Benedict XV," the message said, "the president desires me to express to Your Eminence profound condolences. His humanity, his promotion of peace as well as his kindly spirit and great learning won for him a place in the hearts of men everywhere. His death will be deeply mourned throughout the United States."

DEAD GIRL MAY BE RUM LEADER

Police Believe Drug Victim is Head of Band of Bootleggers.

New York—The fast of a beautiful young woman, whose body is in the public morgue, is being investigated by police in the belief that she was the leader of an international bootlegging ring of daring activities. The young woman, only 21 years old, and known as Dorothy Wardell, was taken from a train which arrived from Montreal, unconscious from an overdose of heroin. A girl companion, described as Doris Pembroke, 24 years old, was also in a critical condition.

Slender Waistline No More. London—Sherwood Foster says there is not a woman with so small a waist line today as was fashionable in Medic times in England. In connection with the Devonshire House fete there was a pageant showing the styles of all ages. Mr. Foster found a 18-inch waist. While scores responded, all of them were oversized, many of them having waists of 18 inches, and only two—the smallest—with 15-inch waists. They failed to squeeze into Medic costumes.

UNPATRIOTIC HISTORY BARRED

Battle Creek Doctor Charges It Is Pro-British and Un-American.

Battle Creek—Following charges made by Dr. Wilfred Haughey, a World War veteran, that a history in use in the Battle Creek schools and written by a professor of the University of Chicago and a professor of the University of Michigan, is unfair and unpatriotic, it has been announced that the Battle Creek public schools are substituting another work.

Dr. Haughey said that under the guise of eliminating "fairy stories," the names and deeds of Nathan Hale and Molly Pitcher had been eliminated, that Alexander Hamilton and Patrick Henry were sneered at, that John Hancock and John Adams were referred to as smugglers and cowards and that the American colonists were mentioned as "opportunists," who struck at England when that country was engaged in other wars.

NO TAX ASSESSMENT IN TOWN

Plover, Wis., Has Paper Mill Which Pays All Town's Expenses.

Stevens Point, Wis.—Enter Plover, Wis., the town with the model tax rate. It will be .0000.

A man owning a $10,000 farm will pay just nothing in taxes this year. The millenium in taxation, toward which D. H. Parks, chairman, and his associates have been working five years, has been reached.

The total sum needed to take care of the town's expenses for its own government, including $3,000 for roads, and county taxes, is approximately $24,000. That amount was set aside for the town board of audit from the receipts of income taxes paid mainly by the Wisconsin River and Whiting-Plover paper mills.

CARDINAL GASPARRI AT HEAD

Papal Secretary of State Administers Holy See Temporarily.

Rome—Arrayed in full ceremonial, with golden mitre, gloves and ring, the body of Benedict XV, on Monday laid in state in the throne room, on the floor immediately below the apartment in which he died. Cardinal Gasparri, the papal secretary of state, will administer the Holy See during the interregnum.

The official and semi-official vatican organs give 6 o'clock Sunday morning as the time of the pope's death, and the Rome newspapers do likewise.

IRISH FACTIONS IN BORDER PACT

Sein Fein and Ulster Agree to End Money Boycott.

Dublin—The agreement between Michael Collins and Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, concerning the boycott and the boundary between north and south Ireland, although it had not been expected at this stage of the situation, has been welcomed in Dublin as the first step toward Irish unity.

NAVAL RADIOS FOR DISPATCHES

Newspapers Granted Unrestricted Use of Facilities for Five Years.

Washington—Unrestricted use of naval radio facilities for five years, or until June 30, 1927, is accorded American newspapers and press associations under the terms of a bill favorably reported to the senate by the naval committee.

$4,000,000 Medical Supplies to Russia

Washington—The senate has accepted the house substitute bill authorizing President Harding to turn over surplus army medical supplies not exceeding $4,000,000 in value to relief organizations for distribution in the famine districts of Russia. The bill goes to the president. The original senate measure, which is superseded by the bill, set no limit on the amount of supplies affected. The supplies must be transferred under the bill within four months.

Rock Elm Grange held their annual installation of officers at their regular meeting Saturday evening Jan. 21st. Installing Officer Mr. Withers of Charlevoix was present and did the work well. He also gave an interesting account of the State Grange Convention held at Flint in December. Preceding the business meeting, a pot luck dinner and social hour was enjoyed by all.

In spite of the blizzard Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Will Gaunt and family and Ralph Gaunt and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Johnston and family of Bells dist. and Robert Myers of the Mountain dist. went to East Jordan for a surprise on Mr. and Mrs. David Gaunt, the occasion being the 40th anniversary of their wedding. It is needless to say they had a good time and the oyster dinner was very much enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. David Gaunt are the parents of Will Gaunt and Mrs. Clarence Johnston. MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD

Secretary Mellon of the treasury, in a letter to Representative Fordney, chairman of the committee on ways and means of the house of representatives, says: "Ordinary expenditures for the first three quarters of the fiscal year, 1921, have been $3,783,771,896.74, or at the rate of about $5,000,000,000 for the year. . . . According to the latest estimates of the spending departments, . . . ordinary expenditures during the fiscal year, 1922, including interest on the public debt, will be over $4,000,000,000."

"The nation cannot continue to spend at this shocking rate. As the President said in his message, the burden is unbearable, and there are two avenues of relief. One is resistance in appropriation and the other is the utmost economy in administration."

R. C. Leflingwell, formerly an assistant secretary of the treasury, whom I have quoted previously in these articles, and who is still deeply and actively interested in securing retrenchment in national expenditures, commenting on this utterance of Secretary Mellon, says: "Why should there be retrenchment in public expenditure? Why does the secretary of the treasury speak of current and estimated expenditures as shocking? What is the evil that we are discussing and what is its effect?"

"Government expenditures must be met from taxes. To the extent that they are met promptly from taxes and from honest taxes directly laid upon the incomes of the people, and in proportion to those incomes, exaggeration of the evil of government expenditure is avoided. Government expenditure takes the money of all the people for the supposed benefit of a portion of the people, honestly or dishonestly, equally or unequally, avowedly by direct taxation, or surreptitiously by the indirect taxation which results from inflation of currency and credit and of the public debt.

"Government expenditure takes the fruits of the earth and the labor of the people and diverts them from the productive and reproductive enterprises of men, from the natural enjoyment of the men, who by their prudence, foresight and effort, created the wealth and made it available, to the sometimes benevolent and sometimes belligerent, but almost always economically wasteful, purposes of government."

"Government exploits all of us for the benefit, or supposed benefit, of some of us. Yielding to the vague aspirations of men for a better world or a better distribution of the good things of this earth, government imposes upon all of us ever-increasing burdens in the effort to benefit vociferous and organized minorities.

"Each of the executive departments is concerned to improve its service and to discover new and useful fields of service. The entire organization of the army, of the navy, of each of the departments, independent offices and agencies of the government, is devoted to an important task. Its particular function seems of vital usefulness, even necessity. Experts in each are alive to its defects and to the opportunities for usefulness which have not been availed of.

"The secretary, or other head of the department, drawn from private life, perhaps wholly ignorant at the outset of the nature and extent of its problems, promptly becomes the advocate of the policies and demands of his permanent assistants and bureau chiefs. If he does not become such advocate, he may break down the morale of his organization and possibly lose the confidence of his personnel.

"Behind it all is the pressure of organized interests in the constituencies, which are the beneficiaries of specific expenditures, operating upon politicians, executive departments, senators and congressmen. The strident voice of greed is heard in the market place and in legislative halls; the voice of the people is barely audible.

"The fact that each project is considered separately, without reference, either in executive departments or congress, to ways and means of financing it, prevents concentration of popular opinion on the awful total. All agree that there must be economy, but as each item is presented all seemingly agree that that is not the proper field for economy. There must be economy, but there must be a merchant marine, whatever the cost. There must be economy, but the government must pay high wages to railroad employees and furnish transportation on the railroads at less than cost. There must be economy, but the World War soldiers must have their bonus. There must be economy, but Civil War pensions must be increased. There must be economy, but we must prepare for war, regardless of expense."

You know this is true. The new budget law will help very much this condition, but unless you are interested, continuously, actively, openly interested, your money will not be saved.

Putting Mother Right. Dave was anxious to have a sister, so when his mother went downtown shopping he asked her to buy a baby girl and cub. On coming home Dave's mother told him she had bought a baby sister and a cub trimmed with blue, to which Dave gravely answered: "They fooled you, mother. Blue is for boys."—Chicago Tribune.

Sand Dunes Almost Mountains. The wind-built hills of sand known as dunes, which grow to heights of from 5 to 40 feet along our Atlantic coast, attain much larger proportions in other parts of the world. Dunes 100 to 200 feet high are found in Bermuda and the Bahamas.

HEAD ACHE AND BODY ACHE. There are various symptoms of kidney trouble—rheumatic pains, backache, sore muscles, stiff joints, and "always tired" feeling. Mrs. Geo. Morgan, E. Fairfield, Vt., writes: "My head ached and my whole body ached so I could not sleep. Foley Kidney Pills gave me relief."—Hite Drug Store.

Psychological Effect. Corporations put the word "courtesy" on their street cars and they say that seeing the word so often affects employees. Perhaps it also affects the public. Courtesy from the public toward the employee is as important as courtesy on the part of the worker.—Chicago American.

Heavens! maybe I didn't enjoy a delightful little spasm as I got a flashlight mental picture of that old man fumbling around with a lighted cartridge at the muzzle of his gun, trying to poke cartridge and gun-barrel through a hole in the door that couldn't possibly have been over two and a half inches in diameter—and in the dark, at that! What if he shouldn't be able to find the hole in time? Or if he should succeed in finding it and the rifle bullet should jam in the wire? Or any one of a dozen "ifs" that might fall to rid us of the deadly thing before it should go off and blow us to kingdom come?

But there was no time to haggle about it, and the whang of another high-powered bullet on the iron roof over our heads seemed things up. "Do your job," Daddy muttered; and I struck a match, sheltered the tiny flame in my hollowed hands until it got going good, and then, with a silent prayer that Daddy might not miss the hole, stuck the blaze to the frayed end of the powder string.

Coming all three together as it seemed to me, there were splittings like those of an angry cat, a puff of choking powder smoke, and the crack of the rifle. For just about three seconds nothing further happened; but at the fourth second or thereabouts—oh, boy! The cabin was stoutly and solidly built of logs, as I may have mentioned, but in the flash of the rending explosion we had a glimpse of doors and windows caving inward and a section of the split-shingle roof leaping toward the spacious firmament on high.

In the Flash of the Explosion We Had a Glimpse of Doors and Windows Caving In.

"Now, durn ye," was Daddy Hiram's morose comment, made with an eye to a peep-hole, "now, durn ye, maybe you'll let folks sleep peaceable for a little spell!"

Of course, in the darkness, made thicker by the cloud of dust the explosion had kicked up, we couldn't tell what had become of the cabin garrison, or whether or no we'd killed all or any of it. But the immediate result was perfectly soul-satisfying. There were no more roof bombardments, and after we had remained on watch together for perhaps half an hour, Daddy sent me to the blankets for my forty winks; did this, and afterward played a low-down trick on me. For, what with the previous night's broken rest, and the more or less exciting and strenuous day, I slept like a tired baby, and when I awoke the sun was shining in at the two high window holes at something more than an acute angle, and Daddy Hiram was making coffee and frying bacon and baking pan-bread over a chip fire built on a piece of boiler iron we had turned down for hearth purposes the previous evening.

The old angel took my reproachful abuse for his unselfishness quite good-naturedly, as he did most things, and made his report of the night's doings. Up to midnight there had been nothing stirring; but after that there had been noises on the blacksmith shop side, and indications that the jumpers were at work on something in the boiler shed. Since this lay beyond our field of vision, we couldn't see what was going on, nor could we apply the dynamite remedy.

Shortly after we had finished breakfast the work noises began again, but with the blanketing blacksmith shop in the way we couldn't see a thing and could only make wild guesses at what the raiders were up to. Along about the middle of the forenoon they fired up one or more of the boilers; a whiff of wind coming along the side of the mountain blew the smoke over so that some of it drifted into the shaft-house through the high windows. Still we were completely lost in the guessing wilderness.

It was a little after noon, while we were squatting on the floor to eat another-meal warmed up over the chip fire, that we found out the answer to all the guesses and learned what the mechanical noises of the night and forenoon had been leading up to. One of the left-overs from the working period of the mine was a good-sized steam force pump which, we took it, had once been installed on one of the lower mine levels and had been hoisted out of the shaft ahead of the advancing water flood and put under shelter in a corner of the boiler shed. As I was passing my tin cup for more of Daddy's excellent coffee the rattle and clank of a pump began to make itself heard, together with the coughing chug-chug of the steam exhaust therefrom.

"That's that low-level pump!" I exclaimed. "They must have connected it up with the boiler!"

Whoosh! that was just as far as I got. In the middle midst of the word "boilers" a two-inch jet of muddy water came curving up through one of the window openings to arch over and fall, splash, all over us as we sat munching our dinner. Evidently ruined the dinner, put out the fire, upset the coffee pot, and made drowned rats of both of us in less time than it takes to tell it—much less.

So much for that. Of course, we ran and ducked and dodged, like the drowned rats I speak of hunting for a hole. But now Bullerton's devilish engineering ingenuity came into play. By some means as yet unknown to us, he had contrived a movable nozzle to his squirt-gun, and in another minute there wasn't a single dry spot left in that shaft-house. I venture to say that Daddy and I and the dog ran a full mile trying to get out of range of that demagogical nozzle-machine, but there wasn't a corner of the place that it couldn't, and didn't, reach.

During the night the scoundrels had laid a pipe line from the pump in the boiler shed alongside of our prison fortress; this with an upright extension on the business end of it. At the top of the sandpipe stem there was an elbow with a short joint of pipe screwed into it to point our way; and on the end of this nozzle there was a piece of rubber hose. Under the jerky impulses of the pump strokes this flexible extension of the nozzle flopped up and down and around and sideways, like the nose of a patent lawn sprinkler; and there you are—or there we were.

"Gosh-to-Solomon!" Daddy spluttered, "we ain't on the water wagon—we're spank inside of it! Are you rememberin', Stannie, that they can keep this gosh-dum thing up forever? All in the world they've got to do is to put a stick of wood on the fire now and then! Say, son; they got us goin' and comin'; we can't eat, and we can't sleep no more whatever!"

"By heavens, I own those boilers, and if I could get a stick of dynamite under 'em, I'd fix the fellow that's firing 'em!" I shivered; and then the bright idea was born. "Say, Daddy, we can stop it!" I yelled; and just then the water devil outside made another fenshish fop and got me square in the face.

But it didn't drown the bright idea.

CHAPTER XV.

High Explosives.

The idea was one which ought to have suggested itself much sooner. The steam supply pipe for driving the big centrifugals at the shaft-mouth came through the wall over our heads, and it was the sight of this pipe, steaming even on the outside of its thick insulating jacket of asbestos under the wetting from the water jet, that had set me thinking.

A spinning-twirl of the engine throttle valve set our machinery in motion, and when I had thrown the pump clutch in, we crouched again in the least-vent corner to watch the index of the tell-tale steam-gauge connected into the supply pipe.

We knew that the centrifugals were voracious steam-eaters; we had proved that when we were running them in the week-long test. I had a notion that maybe Bullerton had fired only one of the battery of three boilers to run his shower-bath machine, and the result speedily confirmed this assumption. In a few minutes the steam pressure had dropped to a point at which it would no longer drive any of the pumps, either ours or the one outside, and the window cataract stopped. "This will be only a breathing space," I prophesied, getting up to squeeze some of the superfluous water out of my clothes. "Bullerton will do one of two things: fire the other two boilers, or disconnect this steam pipe of ours."

"Reckon so?" said Daddy. "You'll see in a minute or so."

The attack began even while we were speaking, sundry hammerings and twistings that shook the pipe overhead proving that the besiegers were going to stop the leak by cutting us off from the boilers.

"Take your whirr at the inventions, this time, Daddy!" I urged. "When they get this supply pipe cut out, we'll be in for another ducking—and one that we can't stop."

Daddy was shaking his head and wringing the moisture—and mud—out of his beard.

"Jerusalem-to-gosh, Stannie, we got to take a chance!" he muttered. "Anyways, I'd about as lief die as be drowned to death. We'll have to mass that blacksmith shop up and get it out of the way, somehow. Glimme a match out of that tin box of yours—if they ain't all soaked to a jizz-whizzlin' sop."

I found the matches, which, luckily, were still dry, and handed him one. Before I fairly realized what he was going to do, he had taken one of the dynamite cartridges out of its bucket lying place and was splitting the fuse with his pocketknife.

"Open that there door into the shop," he commanded; and when I obeyed mechanically, out went the bomb, fixing and spluttering, to land in a heap of scrap iron piled on the farther side of the stone-built forge. The sight of it smoking and spitting sparks in the heap of scrap half hypnotized me, I guess, for I stood gaping at it, with the door held open, until Daddy Hiram jerked me away, slammed the door and yelled to me to help him bar it.

We had barely time to get the door closed and fastened with the heavy wooden bar and to throw ourselves flat on the floor behind the hoisting machinery before the crash came. As I have previously said, the blacksmith shop was a rather flimsy, sled-like affair, roofed with corrugated iron, and it seemed to us as if broken timbers and pieces of sheet metal were raining down for a full minute after the blast went off.

The shock to everything in the vicinity was, of course, tremendous, and the stout old shaft-house itself rocked and swayed like a tree in a hurricane. But the walls still stood intact, and when we got up and peeped through a hole which a piece of the flying scrap had torn in the door, we could see what we had done. It was a-pretty. The blacksmith shop had disappeared, leaving nothing but a scattering of wreckage. The heavy anvil had been thrown from its block and the forge looked as if a giant had kicked it. Out by the boiler-shed a rick of cordwood had been toppled over and under it a man was struggling to free himself. When he saw the imprisoned enemy that mild-mannered, soft-spoken old soldier that I was shut up with would have opened the door and shot the struggler if I hadn't stopped him.

This blowing up of the shop settled the shower-bath business for us definitely. With the impediment out of the way we had a clear view on top of this side; could command the row of miners' cabins, as well as the boilers in their open shed. When I got through persuading Daddy Hiram that we couldn't afford to murder the wounded, the fellow who had been wrestling with the woodpile had made his exit and there was nobody in sight. Shortly afterward a bullet, fired from somewhere in the forest background, whanged upon our roof, and there were several to follow; but aside from punching a few more holes in the iron they did no harm.

"Looks like the 'Hercules' is the one thing they're most skeered of," said Daddy, with his queer little stuttering chuckle. "Now maybe they'll leave us have time to get ourselves dried out a mite."

Totting up the results of the shower-bath we'd had, a bread famine promised to be the worst of them. The few cans of beans, tomatoes and peaches—the campers' standbys—were unhurt, of course, and the muddled bacon could be washed with water drawn from the flooded shaft. But the flour in its sack was merely a blob of paste and was beyond redemption and the cornmeal was the same. In view of the results I wondered if Bullerton hadn't shrewdly calculated upon washing our commissary out of existence when he planned his overgrown lawnsprinkler. But maybe that was giving him credit for more ingenuity than he really had.

Through what remained of the afternoon the rifle firing continued, coming sometimes from one angle and sometimes from another, but always cannily from a safe distance and always under cover of the surrounding forest. Daddy Hiram, grimly optimistic, extracted a swallow or so of encouragement out of the persistent pot-shooting.

"Dunno as you've ever noticed it, Stannie, but if you'll only let a box alone long enough he'll shove himself under the bob-wire fence far enough to get caught," he said. "Charley Bullerton, now; he's plum' forgot that 'Tropia's less'n five miles away and that sound carries mighty long distances in these mountains in clear weather."

"What difference does that make?" I asked.

"It may make a heap of difference. Looks to me like somebody—Buddy Fuller, 'r Jim Haggerty, the section boss, 'r some of 'em down yonder 'd begin a-wonderin'—after a spell, what in tarnation all this here blustin' and rife-poppin' up on old Cinnabar is a p'intin' at and come and see."

"Do you think the racket will carry that far?"

"It sure will. One night afore 'Tropia had gone as dead as she is now, a bunch of coppernuch's got into an argument at Blue-nose 'Bill's place and we heard the crackin' and poppin' up here—Jeanie and me—like it was just over yonder in Greaser gulch."

"Well?" said I, "if your nephew or any of the others hear it, what then?"

As I asked the question one of the low-minded shots through the side of the building, struck the iron frame of the hoist, flattened itself and dropped into the old man's lap. Picking up the hot bit of lead to dandle it from hand to hand he went on mired as if picking up bullets that were fired at him had been his daily recreation.

"Curiosity killed the cat, Stannie, son. You let some one of the folks down yonder in 'Tropia say, 'Tj go!—I wonder what all that shootin's for? 'r 'd the next thing you know, somebody'll be moggin' up here to find out."

Along about dusk some member of the besieging party tried to make a reconnaissance. I happened to be keeping the lookout on the cabin side of our fortress and saw a man dodging among the pines back of the house. When I reported to Daddy he took a snap shot at the place I pointed out to him and there was a wild yell and a stir in the young pines as though a box were galloping through them.

"Just to let 'em know that we're still alive and kickin'," said the old man, with another of his quavery chuckles. "I reckon maybe that's what they was aimin' to find out."

Possibly it was. At all events, the rifle fire stopped with the coming of darkness, and as we faced our second night of defense we had plenty of time to sit around and think and speculate upon what the outcome was going to be.

Taking it all in all, it was the fantastic humor of the thing that hit me hardest. Six short weeks earlier people at home had been calling me all the hard names that fall to the lot of the idle ne'er-do-well; a young chap with enough inheritance money to keep him in ties and shoes and shirts and to buy gas for his car—though that last asked for a good bit on the rising cost of gasoline—and not enough to make life, or anything connected therewith, very much worth while.

Discovery of Borax.

The wonderful preservative powers of borax were first discovered in Yellowstone park, Wyoming. A wandering prospector in that desolate though picturesque region came across the picture of a horse, which, although it must have died long before, was perfectly whole and sweet. Looking around for an explanation of the phenomenon, he found that the animal was covered with a layer of fine dust, which proved to be borax. He saw the commercial value of his discovery, and sold the secret to a large packing firm in Chicago.

About the Limit in Bad Wine.

Very bad wine many decades ago was called "Three-Men Wine," because it required one man to hold the victim, a second to pour the wine down his throat, and the third was the victim made to drink it. Abraham Santa Clara, the preaching friar, gave this name to the wine of Alsace, France, but the quality has somewhat improved since his day.

Preserving Varnish Brushes.

The man who regularly varnishes his floors will not want to invest in new brushes each season when the time comes to touch up his floors. Varnish brushes should never be put into water. They should be suspended in corked jars of linseed oil. The method of suspension is to bore a small hole in the center of the cork and wedge the end of the brush into this hole.—Popular Science Monthly.

"IT IS absolutely essential," said the secretary of treasury, glancing across his desk at the short, ruddy-complexioned, rather stout man who sat opposite him, "that the persons responsible for these lynchings at Versailles be arrested, tried and convicted. I don't think it is overstating the matter to say that this case is more important than any counterfeiting plot or smuggling scheme which the department has ever worked on, for the governor of Indiana has applied to the federal government for troops to handle the uprising which threatens to sweep over that part of the country, and the entire state is taking sides in the matter."

"Naturally we do not wish to send troops to Versailles unless it is absolutely necessary. It would only lead to additional bloodshed and disorder. What we need is someone who has the nerve to go out there, investigate the case from every possible angle and make a report as to the persons responsible for the lynchings. That's why I sent for you."

The man on the other side of the desk smiled and tapped thoughtfully with the forefinger of a hand which indicated strength and determination of character.

"Of course," continued the secretary, "I must warn you that the case is one that is apt to prove dangerous. More so, in fact, than anything you have ever attempted. Compared to it the roundup of a gang of moonshiners is child's play—for here you will have to work entirely in the dark, one man against practically an entire state. A single slip would mean your death, and would force the government to take steps which might lead to protracted bloodshed."

"In which case," replied the other, "it would be well for me to get out to Versailles as soon as I can. The longer we wait the less chance there is of success. Don't make any attempt to hear from me or to locate me for at least a month. If, at the end of that time, you haven't received some kind of a report, you will know that they've got me. But, somehow, I've got a hunch that they won't."

It was two days later that the train which stopped at Versailles, Ind., halted just long enough to permit a single passenger to alight—a man who was short and rather plump and who had a ruddy complexion, a man who registered at the local hotel as "James M. Beck" and who allowed it to become known that he was an insurance agent, representing one of the best-known companies in the country.

But Versailles, as Beck soon discovered, was a poor field for life insurance at that time. There was only one topic of conversation in which the natives were interested; the lynching of the five prisoners who had been taken from jail and murdered by an infuriated mob. This, coupled with open threats of defiance against the governor's edict that the guilty men must be punished, kept the town in a continual state of simmering, seething unrest—punctuated by frequent statements that any state or government official who tried to find out the names of the men implicated in the lynching would be shot on sight.

Beck, apparently, wasn't in the least interested in the local turmoil. He had been sent to Versailles to sell insurance, and he was determined to sell it, no matter how many people he had to interview. The fact that he was a stranger led, of course, to immediate suspicion of his motives, and some two weeks passed before he was able to allay this.

About the end of the third week matters were brought to a head by reason of a wire which Beck sent to New York, a dispatch which was in code and which caused the operator to spread the report that the "life insurance agent" was a detective in disguise. Getting wind of this and realizing that he must take some radical step to offset suspicion, Beck approached the man who appeared to be the leader of the trouble-faction. The agent explained to him that he was getting tired of the quarters at the hotel, and wondered if it would be possible to secure lodgings in some private house where he would be a little more comfortable.

"Certainly," said the native. "I reckon we can put you up all right." And he smiled at the thought of this man whom he suspected placing himself entirely in his power. That, however, was precisely what Beck wished, and it only took a couple of days of clever acting to convince the local leader that he was only what he appeared to be—a slow, plodding and conscientious insurance agent. It was in the house of the most dangerous citizen of Versailles, under the very eyes of his associates, that the stranger secured the information he wanted and put it together, piece by piece, until he had the entire story.

It was precisely a month to the day after the conversation in the office of the secretary of the treasury, when that official received a wire from Chicago stating that "all facts about Versailles lynchings now in hand. Complete list of men implicated follows by mail."

The name signed to the wire was "William J. Burns, chief of the United States secret service."

Pere Marquette service for January carries a story which indicates that there was considerable industrial expansion in the Pere Marquette railway territory, during the year 1921, notwithstanding the general belief that the period was devoid of investment activity. Several new plants were established at various stations along the line, and the total investments represented by these concerns represent an aggregate outlay of over $4,000,000. Grand Rapids, Monroe and Petoskey were the chief points where this was marked.

Elsie Schmalzried, of Levering, a graduate nurse now employed at the Receiving hospital, Detroit, found money and publicity with her everyday smile and courtesy while on duty at the hospital, through the visit of one of the "smile detectives" of the Detroit Journal. "Good Night Nurse—$25" is the caption appearing over her picture in uniform. The story of her discovery was accidental and thuswise. "One of the smile detectives went to interview a woman in one of the wards in division I, section 3 of Receiving hospital. While she was there she was attracted by the very pleasant manner of a nurse in charge of the division. Questions asked by visitors and parties on the telephone were all answered courteously by the young nurse. She took unusual pains to gain the desired information, even interviewing doctors and nurses in other parts of the hospital. The patients in the ward told the smile detective how fond they were of her nurse and how much they admired her un-falling courtesy. She will find a $25 award awaiting her at the Journal office.—Levering Local.

The north state towns have felt pretty much secure from the kind of holdups that have occurred in the big cities of late, but it appears this confidence should not be overdrawn, as a storekeeper at the Soo was confronted by three masked men when he was closing up his store. They hit him on the head with the butt of a revolver and then ransacked his place. The robbers got away with fifty dollars in cash. No clue to their identity has been obtained.

The caterpillar tractor drawing the big pulp wood sleighs for the paper company are lugging some mighty big hauls of pulp wood through the city since they have the road well broke out to their mountains of pulp wood on the lake shore. One day this week one of the little bugs started for town with a sleigh loaded with fifteen cords of eight-foot pulp wood, but as it would not pass under some of the wires on the way uptown four cords had to be taken off. The railroad cars only carry twelve cords of pulp wood when loaded to their biggest. The average load of the sleighs is about twelve cords.—Cheboygan Democrat.

A family of Indians, residing at Camp 35 of the East Jordan Chemical Co., were much mystified one day recently when, upon returning to their home after a brief absence, they found a much-alive porcupine had proceeded to occupy their home. How it secured entrance to a closed house was a mystery until it developed that some of the camp men had cut down a tree expecting to find coons, only to find a porcupine. The Indian family being absent, the men opened the door to their dwelling and chased the animal in, closing the door. The Indian family immediately dispatched the "porky" and proceeded to have a feast.

Jan. 31 is the last day on which wild ducks and geese, coots, gallinules and Wilson snipe or packsnipe may be hunted anywhere in the United States under the federal law which prescribes seasons on migratory game birds. This law, which is administered by the bureau of biological survey of the United States department of agriculture, provides, however, that the carcasses of birds killed during the open season may be possessed for an additional period of ten days following the end of the season if state or local laws do not prohibit it. The possession of carcasses of wild ducks, geese, and other migratory game birds in cold storage plants after Feb. 10 renders the owners subject to prosecution in the federal courts.

The wood alcohol scare has reached Cadillac. Over the week-end one Cadillac man purchased a gallon of the stuff, paying $16 for it. He placed it in four quart bottles. A building boom at Indian River, first the summer resort place on the east end of Burt lake has enjoyed in some time, is in prospect for early spring. State highway departments the country over are now in the midst of a busy season, hurrying to complete plans and specifications for new highway construction to be started in the spring under the added impetus of the recently enacted $75,000,000 federal aid bill. Independents Now In Lead

Indoor Baseball Attracts Big Crowd, Tuesday.

Much enthusiasm was shown Tuesday evening when the Independents and Presbyterians met for the first time on the base ball diamond in the High School Auditorium.

The Presbyterians had won six games and lost none, thus giving them an average of 1000. Likewise, the Independents had an average of 1000. These were the only teams with a clean slate and were scheduled to play it out Tuesday.

About 600 people gathered to watch the game. Great was the excitement when the first inning ended 3-0 in the Independents favor. The Presbyterians then played better ball and at the end of the 1st half of the 9th had succeeded in securing the heavy lead of 16-8. Then things began to happen.

The first three men hit and succeeded to put Gibbs and Duncanson "way up in the air." Of course when the battery went up the rest followed suit. Runs came in thick and fast until the score stood 17-16 with the Independents in the lead. This was easily the best and fastest game yet played.

The standings now are:—
Independents.....1000
Presbyterians.....857
Holy Name.....714
Masons.....543
Odd Fellows.....430
Methodists.....147

I was handling lumber at that time and my back got so weak and sore that I couldn't stoop over. It seemed as though I couldn't get rested and always felt tired and worn out. When dizzy spells came over me I couldn't see anything. My kidneys were often weak and irregular and I had to get up during the night. The secretions were often badly colored and painful in passage. Through a friend's advice I got a few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me in great shape."
