Northern Mich Storm Bound

Worst Storm In Years Now Prevailing.

East Jordan and Northern Michigan is experiencing the worst snow and sleet storm this week it has had in years. Railroads, telephone and telegraph wires are out of commission. The storm started Tuesday night with a high east wind and since then we have been completely isolated.

At Baldwin, Cadillac and other places in that territory a heavy sleet storm prevailed Wednesday tearing telephone and telegraph wires down and on Thursday it was impossible to get a wire communication south of Traverse City. The Pere Marquette, Michigan Central and G. R. & L. railroads are completely blocked in Northern Michigan. The wind blew from the east nearly 48 hours carrying a heavy snow at times bordering on sleet which packed hard the railroad tracks already banked high with snow. Thursday the wind veered to the north and with it more snow which will complicate matters all the more.

Just when the blockade will be lifted is problematic, depending entirely on how long it will take for the storm to blow itself out.

No mails have been received in East Jordan since Tuesday night. Highways are impassable with snow knee-deep and then some. Rural mail delivery is out of the question.

INDOOR BASEBALL GAMES ARE RE-SCHEDULED.

Owing to other events, some of the indoor baseball league games have been postponed. Games will be played as follows:

This Friday night Holy Name vs. Oddfellows. This will be a seven-inning preliminary game to the basketball game scheduled for that evening. Game starts promptly at 7:00 o'clock.

On Saturday night the games scheduled are—Masons vs. Holy Name, and Firemen vs. Presbyterians.

GIVEN NAMES ARE SUBJECT TO STYLE

What's in a name? "Chances to make mistakes in spelling," grumble vital statisticians of the state department of health after perusing the thousands of birth certificates filed in 1921. "And susceptibility to waves of popularity."

Names now popular?

Douglas for boys and Marian for girls are among the foremost, it is said. The former because it has always been a "good naming name," to which is now added the prestige given it by scores of photoplays. Marian is having a run of popularity, statisticians claim, both because it is Mrs. Harding's given name and the name of her home town. "For 100 years after Columbus discovered America," explained one worker who has made some study of names, "people called their sons Christopher, writing it Xtopher. News and hero worship travel faster now. Today it is so safe to say that the majority of boys named Dewey was born after the victory of Manila Bay. A new president usually inaugurates a crop of namesakes. The Warrens are now coming in large numbers; the Theodores have hardly slackened during the past two decades; but as yet there are only a few Woodrows.

"Lee is a favorite middle name, as is Anne. May and June are year-round names and popular. At present odd names ending in "a" are quite the fashion, as Donna, Treva, Paula, Cynthia, or Elvora."

Here are some of the spellings noted: Betty, Bettie, Bettje; Marjorie, Margery Marjory, Marjoree. This idiosyncrasy on the part of parents, some cynic has remarked, will give their daughters the opportunity to be undisputed authorities on the spelling and pronunciation of their own names."

A woman's idea of a good neighbor is one who lends freely and doesn't come in of mornings and sit around when the housework is to be done.

The principal difference between a wise and a foolish man is that the former sees his mistakes before he makes them; the latter not until afterward.

A well-tempered woman can say she is "nervous" and get away with it but a man who is that way is merely a grouch.

"The Merry Travelers"

Musical Comedy at H. S. Auditorium, Feb'y 27-28.

The 3-act musical comedy "The Merry Travelers," will be staged at the H. S. Auditorium, Feb. 27-28, under the direction of a professional instructor, Irone Douglas Reynolds. The cast is composed of over 100 local people and promises to be by far the biggest and best home talent production ever staged in East Jordan.

The first act takes place in the Hotel American in London, where we first meet the merry travelers. The second act is in a Spanish garden, where the tourists are entertained by a gypsy dancer, Oriental girls in beautiful costumes and a most amusing clown chorus. In the third act the tourists are at home and attending a carnival at Coney Island.

The costumes for all the Choruses are beautiful and the speaking parts very clever. The finale consists of a group of girls from England, Ireland, Italy, Holland, Japan and France. Each group does a dance characteristic of the country they represent and the closing scene shows Miss Columbia and the U. S. A. girls guarding them all.

BASKETBALL TONIGHT

The next opponents of the local team are leading the Northern Michigan Athletic Ass'n for the championship of this district. They have defeated all opposition with the exception of Traverse City, St. Francis. The Red and Black squad have been resting this week and will go into the game in the best of condition and determined to make a good showing. A few weeks ago they held Harbor Springs on their own floor to a 14-18 score. And in the last half they outplayed and outscored the Harbor Springs quintet.

RELATION OF CLOTHING TO HEALTH

The average business woman or housewife has so many drains upon her physical energy that any means by which she can conserve any part of her strength without putting forth conscious effort must be of real value to her.

Few people realize how much proper clothing has to do with keeping well. Many women have come to the conclusion that the low heel is quite the correct thing, but they forget that the pointed toe is just as incorrect as the high heel. To stand the strain of bearing the weight of our bodies, and to react to the shock of walking, the foot must retain its baby shape with straight inner line and spread toes.

As a corollary to correct shoes, correct stockings should be worn, care being taken that they are not too short. A too short stocking is a cause for as much trouble as a too short shoe. Too much cannot be said in condemnation of the wearing of silk stockings in the winter; a combination of silk and wool is both adequate and, this winter at least, stylish. As a matter of fact, whatever is sane and based upon common sense, is in essential, the best of style.

For the body, loose porous clothing should be worn. Two layers of light porous underwear are warmer and warmer and more comfortable than one thick heavy suit. The union type of underwear is preferable since it allows the weight to hang from the shoulder. Choose outer clothing with regard to freeing the body from the strain of constantly regulating it to change in temperature. A thin georgette waist in cold weather proves an actual burden, not in weight, but in the energy required to make up for its lack of warmth.

A loosely fitting garment is warmer than a tight one; constricting any part of the body means that that part of the body will be either cold or will become fat. Women leading quiet, sedentary lives need the support of corsets; women taking regular exercise do not need them. In the case either of corset or of brassiere, however, see to it that there is snugness without constriction.

With all the men's criticism of women's dress you'd suppose women would criticize men's dress, and probably they would if it didn't make them laugh.

A wife-beater draws a fine and the jail, but a husband-beater only draws a laugh.

Facts About Income Tax

As Furnished By the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

(Article No. 4)

Farmers, rangers, herders, dairymen truck gardeners, vineyard and orchard owners, and other food producers must compute their net and gross incomes for 1921 and ascertain whether an income tax return, or a tax, or both are due. All gains, profits, and income derived from the sale or exchange of farm products, whether produced on the farm or purchased and resold, must be included in gross income. When a farmer exchanges his products for groceries, clothing or other merchandise, the fair market value of such goods must be included. Profit received from the sale of farm land, or rent received for the use thereof, must be included.

In determining income, upon which the tax is assessed the farmer may deduct from gross income all necessary expenses incurred in the operation of his farm during the year 1921. These include cost of cultivation, harvesting and marketing of his crops, cost of feed and fertilizer used, amount spent in repairs to farm buildings (other than the dwelling) and to fences and machinery. Wages paid to farm hands are deductible, but not wages paid to a domestic servant, which is a personal expense.

As an aid to farmers, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has prepared a special form 1040F for recording sales of live stock, produce, and a summary which must be attached to the individual return of income and expenses.

An unmarried or widowed farmer or one living apart from his wife must file an individual return for 1921 if his net income for 1921 was $1,000 or more, or if his gross income was $5,000 or more. If married and living with his wife on December 31, 1921, a return must be filed if his net income was $2,000 or more, or if his gross income was $5,000 or more.

Mysterious Romantic Thrilling The Indian Drum

By William MacHarg and Edwin Balmer

Brothers-in-law frequently make good team mates, especially in literature. One of the best novels bearing the name of Rudyard Kipling was written in collaboration with Wolcott Balestier, the brother of Kipling's wife.

When two such capable fiction writers as the brothers-in-law MacHarg and Balmer decided to join forces, it was evident that some good stories would result. The stories came out and their success has been attested by the large measure of public approval bestowed upon "The Achievements of Luther Trant," "Sunkara," "The Blind Man's Eyes" and "The Indian Drum."

The latter is such a particularly absorbing tale that, the opportunity presenting itself, we secured the privilege of printing in serial form and now intend to give it to the readers of this publication.

Watch for the Opening Installment

Pupils Enjoy Radio Concert

Can Hear Voices As Far As 1500 Miles Away.

Several East Jordan citizens are interested in establishing a Radio-phonograph in our schools, and the below article is of more than passing interest. It was handed to the Herald by I. W. Bartlett, Mrs. Brown is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett of our city, and is well-known to our older citizens. In a letter to her parents she says: "You should be here to hear our Radio-phonograph. It is great! We can hear voices as far as 1500 miles from here. Can sure beat the telephone all to smash."

Where's that fellow who said: "There's nothing new under the sun?"

There is.

It was found yesterday afternoon.

In the fourth grade room of the Maple school, Fifteenth Avenue South and Lucille street, set up and ready for instant use, is a complete home-made radiophone receiving set. Mrs. Florence B. Brown, teacher of the grade superintended the assembling of the apparatus, which is a clever example of what ingenuity plus modern invention is doing in our schools.

The cylinder around which the wire is coiled, is made from a cardboard shaker salt box reinforced by having been baked and then covered with wax. Just ordinary copper-covered hat wire connects the cylinder to the detector. Brass headed paper clips and a small crystal complete the apparatus. The whole is fastened to two small shelled boards set at right angles to each other.

The little instrument has proven itself decidedly efficient by catching code messages from San Francisco and Catalina Island, which seems pretty fine for a home-made radiophone whose total cost was not over $2. The forty-three children in the grade are wildly enthusiastic over their new educational feature and are intensely interested in every phase of its operation.

Mrs. Brown is quite a radio fan herself, and understands thoroughly the receiving and the sending instruments of the radiophone. She has in her home a complete set with which she listens to the Post-Intelligencer concerts every evening. This set, with the one the children use in the school room, was used by a Parent-Teacher meeting at the Maple School Friday afternoon to hear a special concert which the Post-Intelligencer was giving at that time.

A large horn was suspended from the center of an improvised tripod and the words and music caught from the air by the 100-foot aerial were transmitted clearly by the home-made instrument to the audience of more than sixty persons.

With the establishment of the first radiophone, in the public grade schools for educational purposes a new field is opened. Conjectures are far reaching, the subject one of almost unlimited scope. What the moving pictures have become, the radiophone may be—a necessary part of an educational program.

FARM SHORT COURSES TO OPEN AT M. A. C.

Ice Cream Makers and Tractor Schools to Close Winter Courses

A two weeks course for ice cream makers, to open on March 6; and a four weeks course in truck and tractor operation, to begin on March 6 also, are the last of a long list of special winter courses in agriculture given under the direction of the Short Course department at the Michigan Agricultural College this winter.

Nearly 100 farmers and others from all parts of the state are expected to register for the tractor course, which is the fourth and last of a series of similar courses given at the college this year. Interest in operation of gasoline machinery on the farm is on the increase in Michigan, and the truck courses are drawing heavy enrollment.

Most of the entrants for the ice cream makers course will represent different creameries and ice cream manufacturers of the state. The work of this course is of a practical nature, actual processes of manufacture being gone through by the class.

His friends generally believe that one who has ready money should be ready to part with it.

SOCIAL EVENTS

The club women of the city have taken up the matter of furnishing milk to the school children of the lower grades. Investigation showed about 50 per cent of the children in these grades to be under nourished. These children are given half pints of milk in the middle of the school session. The board of education has provided $60 monthly toward the expense and it is expected that the parents will co-operate and, where able to do so, pay the cost of 3 cents per bottle. A system of weighing and measuring is being carried out by the club women and the teachers in their rooms and reports of the improvement in these children will be given.

About thirty-five ladies were entertained at a very pretty "500" party Wednesday evening, Feb'y 15th at the home of Mrs. Carl Stroebel.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The seventh graders have produced some clever bank advertisements showing advantages to be gained from having a savings account.

Both sections of English I will give book reviews for club work this semester.

The Eleventh graders are enjoying the literature of the early periods of American history.

Some unusually brilliant acting and clever singing may be expected at the Annual School Fair, to be given under the auspices of the Junior class and the Athletic Association.

The seventh grade history class has been doing extra "observation work" this week.

English IV are now writing articles for a newspaper modeled after "The Tattler," and "The Spectator" written in the days of Steele and Addison, which period they are now studying in English Literature.

Lucille Hott was elected president of the English II Division I Club this week.

The debate with Charlevoix will be held at Charlevoix, Friday.

English II have been studying dramatic notices, their program being Shakespeare.

STATE HORT SOCIETY TO HOLD WINTER MEET

The annual mid-winter meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural Society will be held at Coloma, near Benton Harbor, on March 1, 2 and 3, according to announcement of T. A. Farrand, of East Lansing, secretary of the society.

The large amount of subjects to be covered this year in discussion and lecture led to the scheduling of three days for the conference, instead of two as has been the custom in the past.

Practical fruit growers from different parts of the state, specialists from the agricultural college, the state department of agriculture, and the state farm bureau will find places on the conference program.

Obituary—Mrs. Clara Snyder

Mrs. Clara Snyder passed away at the home of her mother in Jordan township Saturday morning, Feb. 11, following an illness of several months from heart disease. Deceased was born near Brockfort, Monroe Co. N. Y. and was 52 years of age. Funeral services were held from the home Tuesday forenoon conducted by Rev. Marshall of the Methodist church. Interment at Mt. Bliss cemetery. She leaves to mourn her loss two sons, Arthur of East Jordan, Colonel of M. A. C. college one granddaughter, her mother, Mrs. Koehler, two brothers and one sister Willys of Clive, Alberta; Arthur of Blythe, California; and Alice Jacquays of Pellston, and a host of friends.

The newspaper reporters who refer to a marriage as "the end of a beautiful romance" often speak more truth than they are aware.

A lot of girls seem to have revised the house paint slogan to read, "Cover the surface and you save all—your face."

Not Different Woman But Changing World That We See.
Minneapolis—"Woman's the same old Eve—she's not one bit different despite the unrest and talk-of changes that have come in this Twentieth Century. It's not a changing woman but a changing world that we see."
Dr. C. A. Prosser, of Dunwoody Institute, made this declaration in an address before members of the Woman's club.
"I think of the modern woman as not one bit altered but as a creature living under extremely different conditions. I don't look for any revolution because the ballot has been conferred upon her," he said.

Washington—The senate agricultural bloc, it was announced, will continue in more or less active form despite the resignation and official chairman, Senator Kenyon, of Iowa.
Bloc members, it was learned, have been discussing privately the organization's future, although no meeting of the bloc has been held and none may be held in the immediate future.
Indications point to Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, as the successor of Senator Kenyon as chairman.

Oarsman Lose Race With Ice.

Chicago—With the life of a despondent cripple at stake, fire department oarsmen raced death down the Chicago River and lost. They were pursuing an ice floe, on which lay the body of a one-legged man who had jumped from a bridge. While hundreds of persons watched along the banks, the firemen started out for the ice floe in a fire tug. When the boat had nearly overtaken the rapidly drifting figure, the floe tilted slowly and the body vanished.

Pleased With Begging Letters.
When the old shah of Persia visited England in 1873, some 8,000 begging letters were posted to him during his sojourn. He was much pleased with them and felt highly honored to receive so many letters, each of which he treated as a compliment. He had all of them securely packed into a trunk and dispatched to Persia, where they were deposited in his museum.

The Spread of a New Idea —and a new idea in bread spreads

ONE of the chief reasons for the rapid spread of new ideas in America is that American women are quick to pass welcome news to their friends and neighbors. For example, when a progressive American housekeeper discovers a delicious new food she doesn't lock up her knowledge. She becomes a missionary.
Largely because of this sensible custom, Brednut—the new spread for bread—has become known quickly to most of your clever housekeepers.
If by some odd chance you have not tried Brednut ask your neighbors about it. See if they don't say that Brednut is just as delicious a bread spread as they have ever tasted. See if they don't remark on its welcome saving.
Then try Brednut yourself and notice how its fresh and delicate flavor pleases your husband and children.
Delicious!
This Cinnamon Toast made with Brednut
Mix together 3 parts of cinnamon to 1 part of sugar. Toast the bread and spread liberally with Brednut while still hot. Sprinkle the sugar and cinnamon over the toast. Serve hot. When serving this toast ask yourself if you have ever tasted a more delicious bread spread.
There shouldn't be a bit of mystery about so important a food as a bread spread. There is none about Brednut.
From distant tropical lands we bring rich nuts—a gift of Prodigal Nature. Heady cows furnish milk which we pasteurize. Under careful supervision immaculate equipment blends these pure ingredients to make Brednut—the new wholesome bread spread.
When your grocer delivers your first pound of Brednut, notice its whiteness. You can actually see Brednut's purity. With healthful vegetable material which your grocer gives you, you can quickly color Brednut to a golden yellow.
Company Rushes Tractor Output.
Chicago—The International Harvester company is putting on a force of 700 men in its tractor plant. This move was construed in business circles as the opening of a battle with Henry Ford, who has declared he would put a tractor on every farm in the United States. The plant, which in November, 1920, was employing 4,000 persons with an output of 100 tractors a day, had been, by January 1, 1921, reduced to 400 employees. It is now operating with 700 men.

VAIN LITTLE CRICKET.

ONE night a little Cricket was singing loudly when a Toad which had been dozing by the trunk of a tree said: "Oh, do be quiet! I never heard such a noise as you and your family make."

"Very true," replied the little creature, "for our family are, of course, the best singers in the world. We can make a great noise, as you have said."

"But that does not make you the best singers in the world," replied the Toad. "Did you never hear the birds singing in the trees, silly creature?"

"Why should I listen to the birds when I can sing better than they do?"

asked the Cricket. "Just listen now. Our family are tuning up and I am sure birds could not sing louder."

"If you would take the trouble to listen some time when the birds are singing in the daytime I am sure you would not be so vain," said the Toad. "Ah, there you are!" exclaimed the Cricket. "In the daytime you say; why do the birds not sing at night, I ask you, my friend? I will tell you; because they do not compare voices with my family; that is why. We can outsing them and they do not wish to let everyone know that the Crickets have the best voices."

JUANITA.

THE lovely Spanish favorite, Juanita, has come to be a "name without a country." The music of its syllables proved irresistible to many countries and in modern times it lost its Spanish heritage and came to be as American as Anne or Edith.

Juanita means "grace of the Lord." It comes originally from the same source as John. It was probably in honor of St. John the Evangelist's guardianship of the Blessed Virgin that her name became joined with his. In the Fifth century a Giovanni (John) Maria Visconti of Milan appears and straightaway Juan Maria became a popular name in Spain.

By adding a final "a," the feminine Juana was formed, a name which proved more acceptable than the masculine Juan as a preface to Maria, and soon Maria was dropped entirely and Juana became a separate name. Spain is fond of endearments and diminutives, as Rosita and Carmencita and scores of other names prove, so presently the ever-popular Juanita was evolved. Many famous women of Spain bore the name, among them a queen, who was known as Juana la Loca. Her reign in Castille was an unfortunate and distressing period.

It may be that the Spanish influence in the Southwestern states brought Juanita into vogue in this country, or her fame, according to some, may have been established by the country-wide vogue of the old song with which even the present generation is familiar. Who does not remember:

"Juanita, ask thy soul if we should part?"

Juanita's talismanic gem is the fire-opal. That gem of sunny Spain promises her protection from evil spirits, good health and happiness. Tuesday is her lucky day and seven her lucky number.

JUST KEPT GROWING

The origins of these antiquated, cumbersome, costly, inefficient pieces of the national machinery that we call the executive departments show how any establishment if well watered with government money will expand and hold together, no matter how conflicting and incongruous its functions. Hardly one of these great business establishments—for that is what they are—was planned. As they are today they just happened.

Take the Department of Agriculture, for example, one of the greatest and most complex and widespread of all the departments. It is in closer touch and more directly affects the greatest number of people in the United States than any other branch of the government with the possible exception of the post office. It began in 1839 with an appropriation of $1,000, taken from the patent funds for the distribution of free seeds and the collection of agricultural statistics by the patent office, then a bureau in the State department. Now look at the darned thing. It is all over the place.

The title of the department indicates its most important field of activities, but its functions have been extended to include the whole range of rural industry and some branches of administration only very indirectly related to agricultural interests. For about 60 years subsequent to the Revolution the general interests of agriculture were left almost entirely to individual initiative. Federal activity was confined to relatively narrow limits and was merely sporadic. Soon after the national government was organized some attempts were made to establish a board of agriculture; but neither the first proposal in 1793 nor a second effort in 1817 was successful.

Shortly after the Revolution, following the example of Benjamin Franklin while in England, as agent of the colony of Pennsylvania during the years 1764 to 1775, American consuls and naval officers began the practice of sending home foreign seeds and cuttings for new crops, and of aiding in the introduction into the United States of new breeds of domestic animals. Even such small governmental participation was, in the beginning, rather extra-official.

In 1836 the commissioner of patents, one H. L. Ellsworth, began the distribution of considerable quantities of seeds and plants received from government representatives in foreign countries; and three years later through his influence an appropriation of $1,000 was made for the purpose of procuring and distributing seeds of new plants, carrying agricultural investigations and collecting agricultural statistics. This was the historic beginning of the much-talked-about free seed distribution.

By an act of congress in May, 1862, since generally called the organic act, the activities of the government affecting agriculture were placed under a separate and distinct organization known as the Department of Agriculture. It did not rank, however, with the other executive departments, and the commissioner was not entitled to a seat in the President's cabinet. Isaac Newton, chief of the agricultural section in the patent office, was appointed the first commissioner of agriculture. Other officers provided by the organic act included a statistician, a chemist, an entomologist and a superintendent of the propagating garden and experimental farm.

The chrysalis was now ready to be broken. In 1889 the Department of Agriculture was elevated to the rank of the other executive departments and its commissioner was made secretary of agriculture with a seat in the President's cabinet. This was in Grover Cleveland's administration. In honor of its new rank a few more functions were taken on.

But that's enough detail. It kept on growing. Beginning with an appropriation of $1,000 and two or three clerks, the department had, in 1910, employees to the number of 12,480, and an appropriation of $12,995,036. Five years later the appropriation had grown to $19,865,832 and the employees to 16,223. The employees in May, 1920, numbered 18,068 and the appropriation given by congress for the fiscal year 1921 was $31,475,368.

The department has increased its cost of living in 82 years from a mere $1,000—that is, $83.33 a month—to more than $31,000,000 a year—$2,622,947.38 every month. That shows as clearly and as sharply as it can be shown how the high cost of government living affects your own cost of living.

We, you and I, paid-out of our savings and earnings every red cent of that increase from $1,000 a year to more than $31,000,000. It may have been well spent. We probably got a run for our money; but nobody knows, except in a general way. We have a right to know. It is simply fatheadedness on our part not to find out.

HAPHAZARD EXTENSION

The Department of Agriculture is one instance of how governmental establishments grow and spread and extend their activities, once they get started. The bureau of fisheries, in the Department of Commerce, is another. It had a modest beginning, and not so very long ago. Prior to 1871 there was no branch of the federal government especially charged with the consideration of fishery affairs.

Several of the states had established fish commissions and these state authorities, supported by private interests, began to agitate for a national bureau devoted to fishery interests.

So it came about that by 1871 congress was ready to yield and begin to make appropriations. The first one was for $5,000 and provided for a commissioner of fish and fisheries to prosecute investigations and inquiries "with the view of ascertaining whether any and what diminution in the number of food fishes of the coast and in the lakes of the United States has taken place; and also whether any and what protective, prohibitory or precautionary measures should be adopted in the premises; and shall report upon the same to congress."

The commissioner was to draw no pay, for it was provided by congress in the same joint resolution that he should be a civil officer of the government, of proved scientific and practical acquaintance with the fishes of the coast, who should serve without additional compensation. The then assistant secretary of the Smithsonian institution, by name Spencer Fullerton Baird, was chosen as the best man for the job, and so he proved to be. He made the little acorn grow. He was industrious and competent and knew how to get along with congress. He was diligent and he stood before kings. See what happened.

Remember, he started out with $5,000 to discover whether there had been any diminution of the supply of food fishes along the coasts or in the lakes. He was at the head of an independent investigation and reported directly to congress. The thing was kept alive by annual appropriations as an independent institution until 1903, when it was incorporated into the newly formed Department of Commerce and Labor as the bureau of fisheries.

By 1906 the annual appropriation had grown to $803,920, and the bureau had a permanent personnel of 325. At that time the land owned and occupied by the bureau at its fish cultural and biological stations had an aggregate area of over 12,000 acres, with a value of $240,000. The improvements and equipment at these stations represented an investment of more than $1,000,000. Other property of the bureau at that time included four sea-going steam and sail vessels, 20 steam launches and 150 small sail, power and rowboats, which with equipment had a value of $300,000. Its six fish-transportation cars were valued at $45,000. Indeed, the total investment of the government in fishery-service property ran to about $1,585,000. That was back in 1906.

Well, it hasn't stopped growing; bigger and busier than ever, as the advertisements say. The appropriation by congress for the fiscal year 1919 was $1,183,140, and for 1921, $1,207,110. Besides what congress gave, the President allotted in 1918 and 1919, out of his private fund "for the national security and defense" $160,000. With the years of its growth and increasing funds the bureau had taken on many new functions and activities.

Until recently the bureau was administering to the best of its ability the laws relating to the terrestrial and arboreal fur bearers of Alaska, but the duty was incongruous to its legitimate functions. Congress finally conceded that the pursuit of foxes does not constitute a fishery. The cultivation of minks cannot be successfully conducted in a fish hatchery.

Apparently, as so many other establishments under the executive branch have, the fisheries service had become all cluttered up with duties and jobs it is not fitted or equipped to handle.

All of which is a long, long way from an investigation of the possible diminution of food fish along the coast. I don't pretend to say of the fisheries bureau that it has performed inefficiently either its proper work or the added activities that have been imposed upon it. For all I know it may be and is a great national blessing, and managed with maximum skill, intelligence and real economy. I hope it is.

I cite it here only as an example of a branch of governmental activity that has grown up haphazard from a small beginning to be a great, costly, far-spreading enterprise that by its own confession is overlaid with duties, functions and activities unrelated to its legitimate and essential business—the care, propagation and study of all manner of food fish.

Something to Think About
By F. A. WALKER

JUNKING BATTLESHIPS

EVERY little while we read of the junking of obsolete battleships. When the old veterans, scarred and worn from strenuous service, are thus brought to disgrace, there are among the sailors who knew them traces of sorrow.

These snowed boys in blue, loyal till death, think back to days that are gone and fancy the ships in the smoke of battle.

With what speed and might they clef the foaming sea! The attachments that grew and entwined themselves in the sailors' warm hearts are very dear.

There is a common note of sadness among them, especially among those who stood by the guns in the heat of conflict, which, through bravery of men and staunchness of ship terminated in triumph.

But now all this is changed. New emotions crowd the mind. The sailors realize that they, too, are getting closer to the time when some of them may be "junked" to make room for the stronger and more efficient.

They wonder whether it was always so; whether the weak gave way to the strong. Upon reflection, they decide it was.

It seems a cold-blooded thing to do, this "scrapping" of the impotent, but it is the human way of doing things, of keeping up strength, productiveness and ascendancy, so essential to growth and progress.

Unlike battleships, men can retain their power and capacity, and become more capable as the years advance. To those who keep rubbing off the rust, there need be no fear of the scrap heap.

But to those who are indolent, malicious, inconsiderate of others, the scrap heap is reaching out its scrawny arms, certain of a final embrace.

Do you think of these things, turn sick at heart and hint that it does not matter?

It is good to ponder, but please do not think that "it does not matter." For it does matter. So there ought to be no compromise with laxity or indifference. Face about and see another skyline and different stars overhead. Hold fast all the while to hope! Keep pressing with this boon companion toward the hill-tops, keep in tune with modern changes, keep young in thought and in spirit, avoid vanities on which life turns and the scrap heap will never get you.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"MISS NANCY."

TO STATE that a person is a "Miss Nancy" is now equivalent to declaring that, if a man, he is effeminate or, if a woman, that she is prudish and affected—a custom which had its origin in the person of Mrs. Anna Oldfield, a celebrated actress, who died in 1730 and who was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Mrs. Oldfield, known to all her associates as "Miss Nancy," was extremely vain about her dress and the appearance of her hands and hair. As her body lay in state, attended by two noblemen, she was attired according to her last wishes in "a very fine Brussels-lace head-dress, a Holland shift with a tucker and double ruffles of the same lace and a pair of new kid gloves." The actress' wishes in the matter of the clothing of her corpse provoked considerable comment at the time, particularly as an Act of Parliament had decreed that, in order to encourage the manufacture of woolen cloth, the dead should be buried in woolen shrouds. But her instructions were followed to the letter and Pope, in his "Moral Essays," referred to the matter in the following lines:

"Odious in wooten? 'Twould a saint provoke!"
Were the last words that poor Narcissa spoke!

Strategic Sentiment.

"When Josh went to school," remarked Farmer Cornstossel, "I gave him a fountain pen and made him promise to use it every time he wrote to us dear old folks at home."
"That was nice and sentimental."
"Kind o' practical, too. That fountain pen 'll be wore out in a week or so, an' then Josh is goin' to find it slow an' troublesome to write home for more funds."

PENINSULAR

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

A. Reich, who was called to Muskegon Feb'y 9th by the serious illness of his father, Lewis Reich, returned home Saturday evening, Feb'y 18th. He left his father alive, but no better. He was delayed by the wreck on the M. C. Saturday.

Miss Dorothy Jarman, who has been employed in Petoskey since last July, came home Saturday evening for a rest.

Mrs. Mercy Woerful who was so very ill is sufficiently recovered to go to Boyne City Saturday on business.

James Arnot who was drawn on the special jury to try the murder case at Charlevoix, went Tuesday, but did not qualify to suit, so was discharged and came home Wednesday.

Quite an excitement was caused Friday when it was reported on the telephone Earnest Loomis house was on fire but it proved to be only the chimney burning out and no damage was done. As it was one of the windiest and coldest days of the winter there would not have been the least chance of doing anything if the building had taken fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Arnot of south of Boyne City visited the former's parents Mr. and Mrs. James Arnot of Bunker Hill, Sunday.

Bill Bogart brought a load of friends out on the Peninsula, Sunday to fish, but on account of the storm they returned to Boyne City right after dinner, which they had at Joel Bennett's. The High School boys returned with them.

Sunday certainly took the cake for weather. Cold in the morning, warm rain at noon with thunder and lightning, and snow and wind in the afternoon, clear and cold in the evening.

A clipping from a Lansing paper at hand, Howard Healey, 19 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Healey, 15-21 Roosevelt Ave., had a narrow escape from death Thursday evening when he was overcome by gasoline fumes from the automobile on which he and his father were working in the garage. The lad became unconscious and was quickly removed to the fresh air where he was revived. The boy is reported to be doing well but was unable to attend school Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Healey were both raised on the Peninsula and have many friends, here who are glad the accident was not more serious.

Pat Foote, our mail carrier was ill Thursday so we did not get our mail but he was on tap Friday.

Ann Jardine, who was detained from school last week because of illness returned to her school work in Boyne City Monday.

Mrs. W. D. McDonald and daughter Miss Byrel visited in Charlevoix Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jardine and Miss Anna Metcalf drove to Charlevoix Sat.

E. B. Dunlop, who has been ill for two weeks is able to do his own work.

Elong Jarman is home again. He is working for Mr. Dunlop who was ill.

Lyle Wilson is confined to his bed by illness.

Patrons Day will be observed in the Star School Wednesday.

W. Scott has purchased a house in Boyne City which he expects to move to his farm before spring.

Tourists Snowbound in California. Bakersfield, Cal.—Carrying provisions and clothing, a rescue party from Bakersfield succeeded in reaching 38 automobile tourists, isolated between Bakersfield and Los Angeles, by the blizzard which has been raging in the mountains. The marooned party had been huddled in a ranger's cabin with only a meager fire and with their food supplies exhausted. None was in a serious condition, according to advices reaching automobile club officials here.

TAX NOTICE.

Taxes of the City of East Jordan, levied for State, County, County Road and school purposes, are due and payable at my office over Hite's Drug Store on and after December 10th, 1921. If paid on or before January 10th, 1922, no collection fee will be added. Thereafter a charge of four per cent will be added.

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good
By JESSIE ROBERTS

DO YOU WANT SUCCESS?

DO YOU want to make a success of your business life, or do you put that second to having a good time? Don't complain if you can't have both. The girl who runs around from party to party is not going to get to her work in the best state for doing it well. Her mind is not clear, her body is not alert. She is tired.

Are you willing to do the uninteresting part of your job well, or do you slur what you don't like in it? Every job has its grind side. But to succeed you must make that grind worth while by doing it well. It is part of the price you pay for success.

You must keep in good physical condition if you want success. You need proper rest, enough sleep and healthful food. You need exercise in the open air. Keeping fit is part of the price you must pay for success.

A number of girls regard an office as a sort of matrimonial bureau. Their first idea is to be fascinating to the male element. But if that is what you are after, don't say you want success in your business, and don't be surprised if you see other girls who do want success get advancement while you stay put.

Success is a big thing. The successful woman is not afraid of losing her job. She knows that her work is so good that an employer will be lucky to get her, or that, if she is in business for herself, she is sure of results. But success is not an accident.

Life is a voyage. The winds of life come strong. From every point, yet each will speed thy course along. If thou, with steady hand when tempests bid, Canst keep thy course aright and never once let go. —T. C. Williams.

HALLOWEEN GOOD THINGS.

THE mother with a flock of youngsters will be very popular with them if they are served with the following:

Butterscotch.
Take three cupfuls of brown sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of water, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful of flavoring and a few grains of salt. Boil all together except the flavoring until a thread is formed when dropped from a spoon. Pour off into buttered pans, let stand until cool enough to mark off into squares.

Molasses Candy.
Boil together until brittle in water, two cupfuls of molasses, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of water and one-third of a cupful of vinegar. Pour into greased pans and pull when cool enough. Cut with a pair of shears into lengths, wrap in a waxed paper.

Pralines.
Boil together one and seven-eighths cupfuls of powdered sugar, one cupful of maple sirup and one-half cupful of cream until a soft ball is made, when tried in cold water. Remove from the fire and beat until of a creamy consistency. Add two cupfuls of hickory nut meats or pecans and drop on waxed paper in small cakes.

Chocolate Fudge.
Take two cupfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-third of a cupful of sirup, one-half cupful of milk and cook with a square or two of grated chocolate until it makes a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Cool slightly before stirring, then stir until thick. Put into a well buttered pan and mark off in squares. Nuts may be added if liked and a teaspoonful of any desired flavoring.

Bread Omelet.
Boil one-half cupful of milk, add one cupful of bread crumbs and a tablespoonful of butter. Add salt and pepper to taste, then the yolks of three eggs well beaten. Stir in slowly the stiffly beaten whites and brown in a hot, well-buttered frying pan.

Chocolate Caramel.
Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a saucepan, add one-half cupful each of milk and sugar and one cupful of molasses. When boiling hot add four squares of chocolate and cook until brittle, when a bit is dropped in cold water. Remove from the heat, beat three minutes, add one cupful of walnut meats and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into buttered pan and mark in squares when cool enough. Wrap each in paraffin paper.

The dangerous age of man is any age until he's so old he has to be fed with a spoon.

When you get discouraged and think you can't "come back," think of Rip Van Winkle. He came back after he'd been asleep for twenty years.

Nothing much funnier than watching the face of a man trying to listen politely to a speaker he doesn't like and whose speech he disagrees with.

"All the world's a stage" and most of us only get to look at the audience through a peephole in the curtain.

Nothing makes a close-fisted man open his fists like thinking he is going to get something for nothing.

EAST JORDAN H. S. LOSES DEBATE

East Jordan High School Debating Team lost to Mancelona by a two to one decision in the contest held here last Friday night. The debate was considered one of the best held this season, it being close throughout.

Mancelona took the affirmative, East Jordan the negative. Virginia Pray for East Jordan was exceptionally good on delivery. Mancelona team produced some very strong arguments which the East Jordan team failed to combat.

Judges for the evening were Miss Bohlenback, head of the English Dept. Potoskey schools; Mr. Baily, principal Harbor Springs schools; and Mr. Lee, coach of the Pellston debating team.

The next debate for East Jordan is scheduled at Charlevoix this Friday night, Feb'y 24th.

Guy M. Wilson Declines Appointment As Marquette Warden.

Lansing—Lieut. Colonel Guy M. Wilson, of Flint has declined appointment as warden of the branch prison at Marquette. Colonel Wilson explained that he felt that his duty to his family precluded his accepting the post because of the small salary, $3,000 a year being all the prison commission is permitted to pay, under the 1921 budget appropriations.

In a statement before the governor and members of the commission, Colonel Wilson thanked them for the honor conferred upon him through the offer of the position and said it was one he would like to undertake. He pointed out that the branch prison has become a large penal and industrial establishment calling for the best of ability in a warden, and said that the work would greatly appeal to him.

52,617 BLIND PERSONS IN U. S.
Census Bureau Figures Show Decrease in Total Since 1910.

Washington—The blind population of the United States is 52,617 compared with 57,272 in 1910, the census bureau shows. Of this number Michigan has 1,579.

The census bureau says the decrease indicates an actual decrease in the amount of preventable blindness. Michigan has an average of 43 blind persons per 100,000 population.

Panama Canal Traffic Increased.
Washington—An increase of 118 per cent in lumber traffic through the Panama canal from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast and Europe in 1921, was cited in the Panama Canal Record as the most conspicuous feature of the canal's traffic history for the year. The stimulation was largely attributed to increased rail rates on lumber. Of the total of 448,087 tons, to which this traffic increased from 205,170 tons in 1920, 170,189 tons came from the United States.

CHAPTER XX.

Cousin Percy Wires.

It was on the evening of the fourth day's absence that Beasley and I left the train at Atropia and took the mountain trail in reverse for a return to the high bench on Old Cinnabar. Beasley riding a borrowed horse, and I the calico pony, which Daddy Hiram had sent down to the station by one of the newly imported workmen.

Just as we were leaving the railroad station Buddy Fuller, the operator, ran out to hand me a telegram. Since it was too dark to see to read it, and I supposed, naturally, that it was nothing more important than a bid from some machinery firm anxious to supply our needs, I thought it might wait, stuck it into my pocket—and promptly forgot it.

Our talk, as we rode together up the now familiar trail, was chiefly of business; the business of reopening the mine; and it was not until we were nearing our destination that the ex-marshalsaid:

"Still stickin' in your craw that you ain't a-goin' to pop the whip at Charley Bullerton?"

"It is," I answered.

"Well, now, why not?"

"Principally because I have promised somebody that I wouldn't prosecute."

"Not Hiram Twombly; he'd never ast you to do anything like that."

"No; not Daddy Hiram."

He didn't press the matter any further, and we rode on in silence. As we approached the neighborhood of the mine, evidences of the forthputting activities began to manifest themselves.

Daddy Hiram met us at the door of his newly repaired cabin across the dump head and insisted upon taking care of the horses. Beasley and I washed up at the outdoor, bench-and-basin lavatory;—and when we went in, Jennie had supper ready for us.

She didn't sit at table with us—from which I argued that she and her father had already eaten—and I thought she purposely avoided me; avoided meeting my eye, at least. I didn't wonder at it. Her position, as I had it figured out, was rather awkwardly anomalous. By this time, I had fully convinced myself that she was in love with Bullerton, and was probably engaged to be married to him; and that it was only her native honesty that had driven her to take sides against him in the struggle for the Cinnabar, prompting her to do the one thing which had knocked his nefarious scheme on the head—namely, the recording of my deed.

Knowing nothing but hard work, Daddy Hiram was running the deep-well pumps himself, or rather, taking the night shift on them; and about ten o'clock, just as I had made up my mind to go to bed and let the repairing activities take care of themselves, I saw Jennie going over to the boiler shed with a pot of freshly made coffee for her father. Here was my chance, I thought; so I waited and cornered her as she came back.

"Let's have it out, Jennie," I said; which, I confess, was a sort of brutal way to begin on the woman I loved, and yet the only way if I was to go on remembering that she belonged to another man. "We can at least be good friends, can't we?"

"No," she returned, with a queer little twist of her pretty lips and a flash of the blue eyes, "I'm afraid we can't even be that—or those—any more, Mr. Broughton."

It was awkward for both of us, standing there before the open cabin door, and I pointed to the bench where Daddy Hiram was wont to smoke his evening pipe in good weather.

"Won't you sit down until we can sort of flail it out?" I begged.

"It's no use, whatever," she objected; nevertheless, she did sit down and let me sit beside her.

"I know just how distressed you must be," I began, "and perhaps I can lift a bit of the load from your shoulders. There will be no legal steps taken against you—against Charles Bullerton."

"Thank you," she said; just as short as that.

"And that isn't all," I went on. "After we get into the ore and have some real money to show for it, I'm going to make over a share in the Cinnabar to your father and put him in a position to do the right thing by you when you marry. And he'll do it; you know he'll do it."

"How kind!" she murmured, looking straight out in front of her.

"It isn't kindness; it's bare justice. Between you, you two have saved my legacy for me."

"I wish, now, it hadn't been saved!" she exclaimed, as vindictively as you please.

Truly, I thought, the ways of women are past finding out; or at least the way of a maid with a man is.

"Can't I say anything at all without putting my foot into it?" I asked in despair.

"You break a man's back with a load of obligation one day, and toss him lightly out of your young life the next! I haven't done anything to earn your—to earn the back of your hand, Jennie; or if I have, I don't know what it is."

"You have committed the unpardonable sin," she accused coolly. "I don't wonder that Miss Randle took your ring off."

I wasn't going to let the talk shift to Lisette; not if I knew it, and could help it.

"What is the unpardonable sin?" I asked.

"To misunderstand, to think a person capable of a thing when a person is not; to—just take it for granted that a person is guilty—oh—with a little stamp of her foot—I can't bear to talk about it!"

I guess it's a part of a man's equipment to be dense and sort of stupid—in his dealings with women, I mean. Slowly, so slowly that I thought the catch would never snap and hold, my foot mind crept back along the line, searching blindly for the point at which all this fiery indignation toward me had begun; back and still back to that moment of our deliverance—Daddy's and mine—at the shaft-house door, with this dear girl untwisting her arms from her father's neck, and with me saying, "I'm not hurt, either. Welcome home, Miss Twombly—or should I say, Mrs. Bullerton?"

"Jennie!" I gasped; "do you mean that you're not going to marry Charles Bullerton—that you never meant to?"

"Of course, I'm not!" she retorted, with a savage little out-thrust of the adorable chin. "But you thought so small of me that you simply took it for granted!"

I wagged my head in deepest humility.

"I'm as the dust under your pretty feet, Jennie; please don't trample me too hard." Bullerton—that is—er—we had a scrap the next morning after you went away, you know, and I . . . well, he rather got the worst of it. And when I had him down and was trying to make him tell us where you were—even your father thought you'd gone off with him—he said you'd planned to go with him to get married, but that you had failed to show up at Atropia in time for the train."

"He told a lie, because that is the way he is made and he couldn't help it," she said simply, still as cool as a cucumber. "He said we were going to Angels to get married, and I—I didn't say we weren't; I just let him talk and didn't say anything at all."

"Won't you tell me a bit more?" I begged.

"You don't deserve it the least little bit, but I will. It began with the deed; your deed to the mine. One day, when you were over at the shaft-house, and had left your coat here in your pocket when he didn't know I was looking. He read it and put it back quickly when he heard me stirring in the other room. I knew it hadn't been recorded; you and Daddy had both spoken of that. I felt sure he'd take it again, and perhaps destroy it. At first, I thought I'd tell you or Daddy, or both of you. But I knew that would mean trouble."

"We were never very far from the fighting edge in those days," I admitted. "Bullerton had shown me the gun he always carried under his arm, and had told me what to expect in case I were foolish enough to lose my temper."

"I know," she nodded. "He killed a man once; it was when I was a little girl and we were living in Cripple Creek. He was acquitted on the plea of self-defense. So I didn't dare say anything to you or to Daddy. What I did was to steal your deed myself, when I had a chance. Daddy has some blank forms just like it, and I sat up one night in my room and made a copy. It wasn't a very good copy—your grandfather's handwriting was awfully hard to imitate. Besides, I didn't have any notarial seal. But I thought it might do for—some thing to be stolen. Then I hid the real deed and put the copy back in the envelope in your pocket."

"And Bullerton finally stole it, just as you thought he would," I put in.

"He did. You are dreadfully careless with your things; you are always leaving your coat around. Just where you happen to take it off. I knew then that the next thing to be done was to get your deed recorded quickly. He—he was urging me every day to run away with him, and I was afraid to tell him how much I despised him; afraid he'd take it out on you and Daddy. So I just let him go on and talk and believe what he pleased. Of course, he wanted to ride with me the morning we went away, but after we'd got down the road a piece, I made an excuse to go on ahead by another trail."

"That much of what he told your father and me—when we were having the scrap—was true. He said you went on ahead."

"I didn't go to Atropia, as he expected me to," she continued calmly. "I took the old Haversack trail across the mountain to Greaser siding. I knew that the Copah train would stop there on the side-track. When I got as far as the Haversack I thought I heard somebody following me. I was scared and didn't know what to do. I was afraid my copying of the deed had been discovered and that the original would be taken away from me, so I hurried to hide the real deed. The old Haversack tunnel seemed to be a good place, but while I was in there Barney began to bark, and I looked out and saw that the noise I had heard had been made by a stray cow from one of the foothill ranches. So I remounted and rode on to catch the train to Copah. At Greaser siding I tried to make Barney lead the pony home, and Barney tried his best to do it. But Winkle wanted to graze, and I had to go off and leave them when the train came. That's all, I think; except that I had to wait two days at my cousin's in Copah before I could get the deed back from the recorder's office. They were awfully slow about it."

"It isn't quite all," I amended. "You haven't told me how you happened to come back with Beasley and his posse."

"That was just a coincidence. I reached Atropia on the early morning train and met Mr. Beasley and his men just as they were starting up the mountain. Cousin Buddy Fuller had told me how he had telegraphed to Angels for Mr. Beasley, and I was scared to death, of course, because I knew what it meant. So I borrowed the Hagerstys' pony and came along with the posse."

There was silence for a little time; such silence as the clattering and hammering of the carpenters and steam-fitters permitted. Then I said:

"And when you got here, the first thing I did was to call you 'Mrs. Bullerton'. I don't blame you for not being able to forgive me, Jennie, girl; honestly, I don't."

"It was worse than a crime," she averred solemnly; "it was a blunder. What made you do it?"

"Partly because I was a jealous fool; but mostly because I was sore and sorry and disappointed. I thought Bullerton had beaten me to it."

"No," she said quite soberly; "it was Miss Randle who beat you to it."

I gasped. There were tremendous possibilities in that cool answer of hers; prodigious possibilities.

"But say!" I burst out; "didn't I tell you that Lisette had pushed me overboard long ago?"

"I know. She was sensible enough to see that you and she couldn't live on nothing a year. But now that you are rich, or are going to be . . . I'm sure you are not going to be less generous than she was. What if she did take your ring off in a moment of discouragement, and knowing that you couldn't buy her hats? You can be very sure she put it on again as soon as your back was turned."

There we were; no sooner over one hurdle before another and a higher one must jump up. I groaned and thrust my hands into my pockets. A paper rustled, and I drew it out. It was the telegram Buddy Fuller had handed me, still unread. I opened it half absently, holding it down so that the glow of the nearest flare fell upon the writing. Then I gave a little yelp, swallowed hard two or three times and nearly choked doing it, and read the thing again. After all of which I said, as calmly as I could:

"But, in spite of all that I had told you about Lisette, you asked me once to kiss you."

"Is—is it quite nice of you to remind me of it?" she inquired reproachfully.

"It wouldn't be—in ordinary circumstances; it would be beastly. But, listen, Jennie; haven't you been mad clear through, sometimes, in reading a story, to have a coincidence run in on you when you knew perfectly well that the thing couldn't possibly have happened so pat in the nick of time?"

"I suppose I have; yes."

"Well, don't ever let it disturb you again. Because the real thing is a lot more wonderful and unbelievable, you know. Listen to this: It's a wire from my cousin, Percy; the one who sent me out into the wide, wide world to look for a girl, a horse and a dog, and who is the only human being outside of Colorado who knows where I am likely to be reached by telegraph. He is in Boston, and this is what he says: 'Recalled home when we reached Honolulu, out-bound. Lisette and I were married today. Congratulate us.'"

For a minute there was a breathless sort of pause, and I broke it.

"Jennie, dear, was it just common honesty and good faith that made you take all these chances, with the deed, and with Bullerton?"

"Yes, I'm commonly honest," said the small voice at my shoulder.

"Bullerton is a shrewd, smart fellow," I went on. "I'll venture to say that he never made such a bonehead break as I did the morning you came back. You must think something of him or you wouldn't have asked me not to prosecute him for trying to murder your father and me."

She looked down at her pretty feet, which were crossed.

"I think—a little something—of myself," she said, with small breath-catching between the words. "I owed myself that much, don't you think? If I didn't deceive him outright, I'm afraid I did let him deceive himself. So that made me responsible, in a way, and I couldn't let you send him to jail, could I?"

"But what about me? Are you going to send me to a worse place than any jail—for that is what the whole wide world is going to be to me without you, Jennie, dear."

Her answer was just like her: She turned and put her face to me and said, "Kiss me again, Stannie." And though all the carpenters on the job were looking on, as I suppose they were, by this time, I took her in my arms.

It was a short spasm; it sort of had to be in the public circumstances. When it was over, I folded Percy's telegram, took out my pencil, and with the dear girl looking on, printed my reply on what was left of the message blank. This is what I said:

"The same to you. Have found the G, the H, and the D, and Miss Jeanie Twombly and I are to be married as soon as we can find a minister. Incidentally, I have learned how to work. Hope it will be a comfort to you, to Grandfather Jasper—if he is where he can hear of it—and to all concerned."

THE DOUBLE CRIME

Copyright by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

IT WAS in the late summer of 1903 that the New York police discovered the body of a man, evidently an Italian, concealed in a barrel on the East side. Every mark that could possibly supply a clue to his identification had been removed—even the labels had been clipped from his clothes—and the manner in which his face had been mutilated rendered him totally unrecognizable.

But, just as the case was about to be entered upon the book of New York's unsolved mysteries, it was cleared up through a coincidence so startling that no writer of detective fiction would have dared make use of it.

On the night of the murder, William J. Flynn, then chief of the Eastern division of the United States secret service, was working on one of the numerous counterfeiting cases which occur so frequently in the Italian section of the metropolis.

Flynn himself was elected to trail a pair of Italians whom he had reason to believe were working for or with the counterfeiter. The trail led to an Italian grocery, where, from the shadow of a doorway across the street, the government detective could see into a lighted room in the suspected house. A few moments later a covered wagon drew up in front of the house, a man got out, entered the grocery, and made his way into the very room that Flynn was watching. The light from the lamp fell directly upon his face, and the secret service operative realized that this must be a new addition to the gang, for he was certainly no one that he had seen before. Then the curtains to the window were drawn, and Flynn abandoned his chase for the time being.

The next morning the murdered man was discovered, nearly half a mile from the place where Flynn had hidden himself the night before. It was several days later that the operative read the official account of the crime and noted that the body had been found in a sugar barrel, partly filled with blood-stained sawdust. The date of the murder, coupled with the use of a sugar barrel, recalled to the operative's mind the fact that he had been watching an Italian grocery at or about the time that the foreigner had been killed. Merely to satisfy himself that there was no connection between the counterfeiter and the murdered man, Flynn went to the morgue and examined the body. The peculiar shape of the forehead, the manner in which the hair splayed out above the prominent ears and the blood-stained green hat which had been found in the barrel, told the story beyond the shadow of a doubt. It was the stranger whom Flynn had seen entering the store which he had been watching!

Feeling certain that here was a sign which pointed toward the operations of the gang which he was after, Flynn had the body photographed from a number of angles, while experts in physiognomy reconstructed the features to something approaching a life-like appearance. Then, armed with these post-mortem pictures, Flynn took a trip to Ossining to see if any of the members of the Italian colony in Sing Sing could identify the dead man.

The idea proved to be a good one, for a convict whom Flynn knew—an Italian serving time for another counterfeiting case—identified the photographs as being those of his brother-in-law, Maruena Benedetto, whom he described as being a peaceful hard-working citizen who had never been implicated in any of the crimes of the

by William MacHarg and Edwin Balmer
Illustrations by Irwin Myers

NEAR the northern end of Lake Michigan, where ore-carriers and wheat-laden steel freighters from Lake Superior push out from the Straits of Mackinac and dispute the island divided channel with white and gold, electric lighted, wireless equipped passenger steamers bound for Detroit and other cities, there is a cove of pine and hemlock back from the shingly beach. From this cove—dark, blue, primeval, silent at most times as when the Great Manitou ruled his inland waters—there comes during storms a sound like the booming of an Indian drum. This drum beats, so tradition has long maintained, whenever the lake takes a life.

Men say they have heard and counted the beatings to the exact number of crew and passengers lost in various sinkings of ships. Once only, it is said, has the drum counted wrong.

This belief in the drum and a case in which the beatings failed to tally with the records of men, forms the basis for an absolutely fascinating story of mystery, to be printed as a serial in these columns.

You Will Be Delighted With It

Italian Settlement.

Working backward from this clue, Flynn and the other secret service operatives trailed the Italians whom the chief had seen in the grocery store on the night of the murder, and it was not long before they had made a complete roundup of the gang. As was to be expected in a crime of this nature, alibis were plentiful, but, as was usual, these were none too well supported by fact, and it was a comparatively simple matter for the police to get at the bottom of the case. Once the identity of the victim had been established.

A judicious application of the "third degree" brought to light the fact that Benedetto had been killed because he had gotten wind of the counterfeiting plot, and because he was the brother-in-law of the man who later identified the body—a man who had incurred the undying enmity of his competitors by turning state's evidence. The inflexible laws of the society to which they both belonged—one of the societies which rules Little Italy with a rule of iron and a hand of blood—demanded the sacrifice of the next of kin in the event of information being given to the police.

But, if Flynn had not happened to be watching the grocery store the night of the murder, the chances are that the crime would still be unsolved. The leader of the murder gang was found to be Ignazio Lupo, one of the very men Flynn was after, but the government allowed the counterfeiting charge to hang fire until the extradition of Lupo's term for manslaughter.

Another Lupo, brother to Ignazio, escaped at the time, and was not captured until ten years later, although Flynn and his associates were on the lookout for him all that time.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ONE of the first acts of William J. Flynn after taking charge of the New York office of the United States secret service was to order the arrest of two Italians, Vincenzo Lupo and Giuseppe Morello, on charges of manufacturing and passing counterfeit money. But the Stellas, anticipating such a move, had taken care that their trails were well covered, and at the trial they produced a flock of witnesses who swore to alibis which effectively prevented a conviction.

As Morello and his companion passed out of the courtroom, after the case against them had been dismissed, Lupo remarked in a voice loud enough for Flynn to overhear: "Those pigs of American detectives haven't the brains to get the evidence they need. They'll never land us."

The man who later became the head of the secret service said nothing at the time.

It was three years before Flynn again came into contact with the two Italians, and again the federal forces had to be content with the losing end of the argument.

This time the case was the famous one of the "Morristown Fives"—five-dollar bills printed in precise imitation of the currency issued by the National Iron bank of Morristown, N. J. Flynn's men found that the trail led directly into "Little Italy" in New York, right up to the door of a grocery store owned by Giuseppe de Primo. But there, apparently, it disappeared into thin air.

Flynn investigated the matter very carefully from the outside, but the only suspicious circumstance that he could discover was that De Primo was importing a much larger quantity of olive oil than his business appeared to warrant. On account of the duty, olive oil is usually imported in barrels and then canned or bottled on this side—the empty cans being shipped from Italy ready for use.

Feeling certain that there must be some connection between the olive oil and the mysterious counterfeits, Flynn first tapped several of the barrels consigned to De Primo. But these were filled to the brim with oil of the precise quality mentioned in the bills of lading. Then, merely to make certain that he had not neglected any possible angle of the case, the secret service man ripped open one of the boxes of "empty cans." Instantly the mystery was solved. The cans contained foil lined rolls of the "Morristown Fives," manufactured in Italy.

In the roundup which followed this discovery, Lupo and Morello were gathered in by the government agents and charged with passing counterfeit money. It was a moral certainty that the two Stellas had had a hand in the plot—in fact, Flynn suspected that they were the ring-leaders—but none of the others would implicate them, even to save themselves. De Primo and his associates went to the penitentiary, but Lupo and Morello walked out of the courtroom still sneering at the "brainless American detectives."

During the years that followed, counterfeiting operations and Black Hand murders, extortion and blackmail, of all kinds were almost traced to Lupo and Morello—almost. Apparently they worked as far west as Chicago and south to New Orleans, but every time the police or the government agents started to close in on them, the pair slipped out through some legal loophole prepared in advance.

It was nine years after the original Lupo-Morello case that Flynn got wind of the fact that the Italian colony in New York was planning a big counterfeiting coup. The only thing lacking, according to the information which reached government headquarters, was a printer.

A few days later, a young Italian named Comita, who claimed to be a printing expert who had been forced to leave Italy on account of participation in a number of Mafia outrages, applied to Lupo for a position. The recruit was put through a grilling cross-examination, but Flynn had seen to it that he was supplied with the proper answers to all the questions, and it wasn't long before the secret service had an operative planted in the very heart of the counterfeit plot.

Comita reported that the gang was operating from a small farm near Highland, N. Y., and that thousands of dollars in spurious currency was ready to be released.

"But Lupo," he added, "is preparing to take a trip to Italy and won't be back until the spring."

"Very well," replied Flynn, "we can wait. Just lay low until he returns. Then we'll nail the whole bunch."

It was early in the following year—ten years after the first arrest and release of the Lupo-Morello combination—that the secret service sprung its trap and rounded up 16 Italians. During the trial which followed, physicians and other witnesses swore to alibis which had been previously prepared. But the government, aided by Comita's first-hand evidence and the testimony of the men who had been trailing the Italians, proved every point in its case, though it took the evidence of 300 people to do it.

As a result, Lupo and Morello went to the federal prison in Atlanta for 25 years, and Flynn was well satisfied with the 150 per cent interest upon his original investment of ten years' work.

SEAWAY BOOSTERS URGE EARLY START

ORGANIZE CAMPAIGN AT MEETING OF ASSOCIATION HELD IN CHICAGO.

WANT WORK STARTED IN 1923

Michigan Backers of Ocean Route Consolidate Forces and Data At Meeting Held in Detroit.

Chicago—The passage of a deep waterways bill by the present Congress and the breaking of ground by 1923 are the main points of a program adopted by the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tide-water Association at a meeting of the council of 18 states here last week.

Plans formulated provide for carrying the campaign into every school district in the Middle West and the inclusion of a deep waterways plank in every state political platform.

Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, urged the members of the various waterways commissions to avoid sectionalism during the proposed campaign, pointing out that the proposed waterway is a national improvement and of equal benefit to the entire country.

Says Goethals' Criticism Prejudiced. Gen. Goethals' criticism of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence project is a prejudiced opinion. H. C. Gardner, president of the tidewater association, declared. Asserting that Gen. Goethals is no longer an officer of the United States Army but now has offices in New York, Mr. Gardner said:

"Probably the largest engineering undertaking he has under consideration is the prospective port development at New York harbor. Gen. Goethals, therefore, must not be considered as an unprejudiced witness speaking from an unbiased standpoint."

Michigan Boosters Work Together

Detroit—Delegations from municipalities, chambers of commerce, manufacturers, and exporting and importing firms from all parts of Michigan gathered at the Detroit Board of Commerce Building Feb. 10 to consolidate their forces in favor of the St. Lawrence seaway route.

All delegations came with data gathered carefully over a long period, showing the present volume of trade, the present factory output and probable growth, in various parts of the state. This material will be taken to Washington by a strong delegation representing all Michigan interests and will be used to support arguments for the immediate opening of the waterway consideration before congressional committees.

DE VALERA PLEADS FOR FREE IRELAND

TELLS CORK CROWD BRITISH PROPOSAL NOT FAVORED BY COMMON PEOPLE.

CAPTURED ERIN SOLDIERS FREE

Collins Requests Release of Prisoners; British Set March 17 for Creation of New State.

Belfast—The members of the football team of the Irish republican army, recently captured at Droemore, have been ordered released by the viceroy. The announcement adds that Michael Collins, head of the provisional government, has given assurance of the release of additional kidnapped loyalists.

Cork—A striking feature of the meeting held in Cork Sunday under the auspices of Eamon de Valera was the presence of large numbers of the Irish republican army for the city of Cork and from various parts of the county, who were assembled by companies under their officers.

Donal O'Callaghan, lord mayor of Cork, presided at the principal platform from which the speeches were delivered. Mr. de Valera proposed the same resolutions as were adopted at his meeting in Dublin last Sunday, and repeated virtually the same arguments as were then put forward, declaring that Ireland was in greater danger than it had been at any time in 750 years. The Countess Markievicz and Charles Burgess and other followers of De Valera supported the resolutions.

Arriving in Cork, Mr. De Valera was greeted by Lord Mayor O'Callaghan and other prominent republicans. De Valera apologized for not speaking in Gaelic, declaring that he desired every Irish citizen fully to understand the seriousness of the situation and to fully appreciate what they were doing. He declared that they were being asked to say that when four years ago they pronounced for a republic they were fools and did not realize what they were doing. If an election were forced upon them, he added, he was sure that the citizens of Cork would do their part in proving to the world that they still stood for an Irish republic.

London—Formal creation of the Irish Free State, as provided by the free state act, which passed the house of commons on second reading, will be accomplished on March 17 (St. Patrick's Day), according to plans of parliamentary leaders.

It is the plan of government supporters in commons to pass the bill on its third and final reading on that Irish holiday.

JUDGE LANDIS GIVES UP BENCH

Noted Jurist to Devote Entire Time to Baseball.

Chicago—Judge Knesaw Mountain Landis will end his 17 years of service on the Federal bench March 1, to devote his entire time to his duties as national commissioner of baseball, he announced Feb. 18, when he forwarded his resignation to President Harding.

For 15 months he has held both positions, drawing $42,500 a year from organized base ball and the $7,500 salary of a United States judge.

Before he became base ball's dictator he was offered $50,000 a year, but insisted that as long as he remained on the bench the amount of his salary as judge be deducted from that figure. The contract was for seven years.

Thousands of gallons of liquor were left behind.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon to Retire.

Washington—Having served longer than any man ever elected to the American congress, Representative Joseph G. Cannon, of the 18th Illinois district, announced that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself next fall. Mr. Cannon is approaching his 80th milestone. If his life is spared until the end of his term on March 4, 1923, he will have rounded out 46 years of service in the house. He broke the record for actual service more than a year ago.

$30,000,000 SHIP SUBSIDY PLANNED

U. S. MERCHANT MARINE PROGRAM EXPECTED BEFORE CONGRESS THIS WEEK.

ADMINISTRATION LEADERS AGREE

Bill Expected to Be Submitted in Both Houses At Same Time and Pressed for Passage.

Washington—Both direct and indirect ship subsidies for the upbuilding and maintenance of the American merchant marine have been agreed upon by administration leaders, it was said last week in official quarters.

The merchant marine program, it was added, has been virtually determined and is in the drafting stage, with Chairman Lasker and experts for the shipping board engaged in the preparation of a tentative bill for introduction in both branches of congress late this week, when President Harding plans to submit the administration recommendations.

A direct subsidy amounting to about $30,000,000 annually was said to have been agreed upon by the president, Chairman Lasker and other Republican leaders. The basic rate, it was added, would be one-half of one percent per ton per hundred miles. This would be paid to operators of American ships, to aid in their operation and the extension of their trade routes. The one-half cent rate would be given to vessels of low speed, and a sliding scale, it was said, would increase the rate to as high as one and three-quarters cents per ton per hundred miles for the speediest American vessels.

The direct subsidy, it was stated, would be the principal charge upon the treasury while more benefits, officials believe, would be received by the merchant marine from the indirect subsidies. These would include special rates for carrying the United States mail and preferential railroad rates. The latter, under the tentative administration bill now being prepared, technically would be in the form of reduced cargo rates on American vessels but actually would amount to reduced railroad rates.

Under the plan said to have been agreed to shippers would be given a reduced cargo rate on American vessels when shipping merchandise to an American port for export vessels operated by the emergency fleet corporation.

Another suggestion, said to have been made by Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, chairman of the senate commerce committee, to be incorporated in the administration bill would require that a certain and substantial percentage of immigrants would be required to come to this country in vessels flying the American flag.

The president, it was stated, desired to frame the new program with the consent and approval of republican committee members before presenting it formally to congress. The administration bill, it was said, would be introduced simultaneously in the senate and house and, according to administration leaders, pressed to passage next spring.

HIGHWAY TAX REDUCED IN 1921

Rogers Declares New Method Cut Levy 25c on $1,000.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—State Highway Commissioner Frank F. Rogers, addressing the eighth annual conference of highway engineers, at the University of Michigan, Feb. 16, declared the state tax rate for highways in 1921 was about half what it was in 1920. He asserted that abandonment of the old method of spreading a tax for highway construction, in favor of a bonding system brought about a cut in the rate from 49 cents per $1,000 in 1920, to 24 cents in 1921.

The commissioner explained that in 1921 the tax was levied on the basis of a $5,000,000 bond issue, as it was not until late in the 1921 session that the legislature approved issuance of $10,000,000 in bonds.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER.

VOYAGERS OF LIFE.

THE captain who can first find his bearings in the snarling storm at sea, is he who will be first to reach a safe harbor.

And so it is with sailors on the turbulent sea of life, when tempestuous winds blow and adversity comes.

In this sense, we are all captains, each at the wheel of a craft of our own, responsible for its keeping and its guidance to still waters.

Some of us face storms with calmness and abiding faith.

Others miss their bearings, lose courage and through fear, fail to gain control of their ship, which drifts on the rocks a hopeless wreck, with themselves and their crews clinging to broken spars.

These derelicts swarm the city streets, crowd the park benches and crawl at night like hunted things to some wretched attic or dark doorway.

They began their voyage under the soft blue sky and the bright sunlight, with their white sails swelling in friendly breezes, proud and joyous in the glorious vigor of youth, thoughtless of hidden shoals and contrary winds.

They mocked and jeered those who stood at the wheel so soberly, scanning the shifting clouds, watching the "draw" of the sails and the behavior of the craft; that in some unaccountable way had become a part of them. At the end of years, when life-skies begin to purple, these sober wheelmen, patient and earnest still, find their way to friendly ports, wearing the smile of triumph.

The other ships, whose captains lacked earnestness, patience and self-reliance, never came back. Their storm-wrecked sailors, picked up here and there, lack incentive to make another voyage—erring, shiftless and untrue, like their captains.

They are untouched with the radiance of better things. Opportunity succeeds opportunity, but they slum it.

Hone, they will tell you, is dead, but they decline to tell you that they themselves killed it.

How are you sailing your ship? Are you devoting to it your full attention, putting into your life work all the ability, sincerity and energy that you can command?

If you are, there will be no park benches and wretched attics awaiting you at the end of your voyage, but in their stead there will be the sweet consciousness of a well won reward, the blessing of an uncomplaining ship, and these mean true and abiding happiness whatever your surroundings.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"PICNIC"

DURING the early years of the past century it was customary for those who were invited to an outdoor entertainment to bring their own refreshments with them. A list of what was considered necessary would be made out and passed around among the guests, and each person would agree to furnish a certain portion of the repast, the name of each article being then crossed, or ticked, off the list. For this reason, this form of what the French refer to as fete champetre became known as a "pick-and-nick," referring to the selection or picking of the various articles and the crossing of them off upon the card, and, through the usual contraction, the central word was dropped and the term shortened to "picnic."

Though this word does not appear to have been used prior to 1802, outdoor entertainments of this nature were common during the two centuries which preceded. Mainwaring, in a letter dated November 22, 1618, describes a birthday party for the prince of Wales, at which "every man did bring his dish of meat." "Sir George Young's invention," adds the writer, "was four huge brawny pigs, piping hot and harness'd with ropes of sausages, all tted in a monstrous bag pudding."

If you are a sufferer with lame back, backache, dizziness, nervousness and kidney disorders, why don't you try the remedy that your own neighbors recommend?

Mrs. Wm. Harrington, East Jordan, says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for I have used them with very beneficial results. I was troubled considerably with dull, nagging backaches and distressing pain through my kidneys. My kidneys were very irregular in action. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they helped me wonderfully by relieving the backache and correcting the action of my kidneys. I have used Doan's in the past and they have always given me the best of relief and satisfaction." (Statement given on Aug. 3, 1909.)

On April 23, 1920, Mrs. Harrington added: "I haven't had occasion to use a kidney medicine since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me years ago. The cure proved to be complete in all respects and has stood the test of time. I recommended Doan's in 1909 and I am happy in saying that I am as strong for them as ever. I gladly confirm the state I made in that year."

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

Eat less meat if you feel Backache or have Bladder trouble—Salts are for Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excited and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

NEVER WANTS ANYTHING ELSE

"I tried many different kinds of cough medicine," writes Mrs. E. K. Olson, 1917 Ohio Ave., Superior, Wis., "but I never want anything else than Foley's Honey and Tar. I used it for all my children and also for my grandchild. It always did fine work."
