Fine Meeting of Our Farmers

Held at E. J. H. S. Auditorium Last Friday, April 21st.

The series of meetings conducted by the Charlevoix County farm bureau, under the management of our new County Agricultural Agent B. O. Hagerman, was concluded at East Jordan, Friday, April 21st.

We seldom have an opportunity of hearing so many specialists in a single meeting and it is to be regretted that more of our farmers could not have been present. Mr. Cribbs, who was to have discussed "Cover Crops" was called back to East Lansing and Antrim County's Agricultural Agent L. L. Drake filled his place on the program.

Mr. Hagerman opened the morning session with a concise outline of a County Agent's work in connection with farm crops, live stock, marketing, etc., emphasizing the point that the County Farm Bureau is our business agency and the Agricultural Agent is the educational factor of the farm bureau, his service being at the command of any farmer needing help in solving problems of the soil, crops, stock, etc. He also urged the need of greater publicity. He then introduced J. W. Weston, potato specialist from the Farm Crops Department of M. A. C. who has spent the past seven years in this special line of work. He strongly advocated the use of alfalfa and sweet clover for cover crops and the applying of manure on it in early spring, before growth starts, letting it act as a mulch in summer and plowing it under in the fall. In this way the moisture is put in shape to conserve the humus, so essential to continuous growth, and the manure will be available plant food for the potato crop the next season. For this locality he recommended planting from May 15 to June 1.

At this point meeting adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

The Board of Trade were hosts at a delicious dinner, served by the ladies of the M. E. church in the gymnasium.

One of the benefits of these "get-together" meetings is the breaking up of the invisible barrier between town and country; the realization of each other's problems and inter dependence.

After dinner the "Harmonic Four" entertained the guests with an enjoyable orchestral program.

The afternoon session opened with a continuation of Mr. Weston's talk, along the lines of selection, treatment, cutting, and planting of seed; the proper treatment during the growing season to control the various diseases and parasites, which were minutely described. Spraying was recommended in preference to dusting, the latter still being in an experimental stage. On small acres of rough ground dusting can be used to advantage but not on areas of over 4 acres in extent. He closed with a plea for farmers to regard their land as a heritage, to use, but not to deplete its fertility; to conserve it for the succeeding generation. Mr. T. B. Buell, president of the Michigan Potato Producers Association, gave a fine talk on "Following our Potatoes to Market." He emphasized the necessity of putting nothing but the very best product on the market.

We have already established a market for "Chief Petoskey" potatoes, but this cannot be maintained unless the individual farmer brings to the warehouse, only a grade of tubers, free from scab and scurf, and without mechanical injuries. The exchange has worked hard to place "Chief Petoskey" Brand potatoes in the front rank and must be able to depend, absolutely, on the 130 Associations to furnish, not simply "U. S. #1" grades, but a "choice U. S. #1" grade. This is one of, if not the greatest problem that confronts our Association today. And the time is not far distant when the grower who brings in a load of potatoes, marked with fork pricks will be turned away until his stock is sorted and the defective tubers left at home. A little more care in digging will mean a great difference in the financial returns.

The real determining factor in our markets is not the wholesaler, to whom the shipment is consigned. The housewife in Toledo or Pittsburg, who finds potatoes in her sack, rough and scabby with fork pricks running through them, tells her grocer he must supply better stock or she will buy elsewhere; the grocer tells the Commission man the same thing and the commission man hands it on to us, so we are the ultimate losers.

Farmers must awake to the fact that other States can grow potatoes, as well as Michigan, and our only hope lies in being able to produce, and put on the market, a quality of potatoes, so much superior, that it will create a demand for our stock, in preference to that of other regions.

When every grower realizes that every load of defective stock he takes to the warehouse will probably be responsible for the rejection of an entire carload, if shipped; when he learns to care for his crop of market stock the same as he would be required to for Certified Seed stock, then and then only, can we hope to secure for our potatoes the market such stock will deserve.

The last number on the program was "Cover Crops" by L. L. Drake. For this region alfalfa, or biennial sweet clover, were recommended. Many Antrim County farmers are growing them for 4 or 5 successive years and then turning them down for a single potato crop, afterwards reseeded. On some soils it is possible to grow two crops before re-seeding. For light soils he recommended drilling soy beans, to be cut for hay.

Mr. Hagerman announced that a portion of the County Poor Farm is to be used for demonstration purposes this year, the details of which will be announced later. Various phases of agriculture will be handled, at sectional meetings, throughout the County during the summer, with special speakers for the different subjects to be discussed.

In August the biggest potato demonstration ever staged in Northern Michigan will be held at "Maplewood Farm" near Elmira, and no progressive farmer will miss it, if he can possibly get there.

The meeting adjourned, with the realization that Mr. Hagerman had provided a veritable mine of information and it is to be hoped that more people will avail themselves of these "Schools of Instruction" when he brings them into our midst.

MARY NO LONGER TO DIRECT

Announces Resignation As Leader of Grand Opera Company.

Chicago—Mary Garden has resigned as director of Chicago Grand Opera company. This action has been forecast for some time, but intimations that she would resign have always been met by denials from those in authority.

She arrived in Chicago 24 hours ahead of her company, went into an executive session with the financial backers of the opera and then issued a statement to the press announcing she had decided to lay aside her duties as artistic manager.

MANUFACTURERS MOVE WEST

Statement Points to Michigan's Big Increase of Output.

New York—In a statement issued Monday by the National Bank of Commerce, it is said that manufacturing industry is leaving the Atlantic seaboard for the Middle West. The growth of Michigan as a manufacturing state is pointed to. Michigan advanced from an output of $320,000,000 in 1900 to $2,466,000,000, an increase of over 10 times the output 20 years ago.

CLEAN-UP!

A PROCLAMATION BY THE MAYOR.

In conformity to orders from the Michigan Department of Health, the week of May 1st will be set aside for Clean-up purposes. This is good business for it removes the dangers of preventable fires, destroys the breeding places of disease germs, enhances civic pride, increases property values and makes far better business.

If this could be extended into a Paint-up and Repair-Up, some of the unemployment problem would be alleviated.

The City will furnish men and teams free of charge to remove all rubbish placed in boxes or barrels in the streets or alleys during the week.

HUGH W. DICKEN,
Mayor of the City of East Jordan.

Arbor Day May 5th

A Proclamation by the Governor.

Fifty years ago the State of Nebraska instituted the observance of a day set apart for tree planting. This day was known as Arbor Day, and its observance has become general throughout the nation. It is a day of sentiment, reverence and faith—sentiment in the acknowledgement of the tender susceptibility of man toward all the living things of the out-of-doors; reverence inspired within us by the sturdiness of the oak, the majesty of the pine, the beauty of the elm and the splendor of the leaf bearing branches of the maple with its seasons of changing color and form; a well grounded faith in the productive energy of nature's generous creative forces.

To us of Michigan, Arbor Day is of particular significance. Time was when our forests outshone in splendor and magnificence those of any other State. Today, through the utilization of this natural product and the devastation wrought by forest fires, these forests have to a large extent disappeared, though we still have many thousands of acres of beautiful forest land.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I do hereby designate and I request that exercises appropriate to the day be held in all our schools.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this twenty-first day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-sixth.

ALEX J. GROESBECK, Governor.

LIVE STOCK DAY AT M. A. C. SET MAY 16

Annual visiting day for farmers and others who are interested in steer and swine feeding work will be held at the Michigan Agricultural College on May 16 this year, according to an announcement just made by Prof. Geo. A. Brown head of the college animal husbandry department.

Results of experimental feeding tests carried on at the college during the past year will be up for consideration and discussion by the assembled breeders. Plans for future experimental work at the M. A. C. will also be taken up, in an effort to get at the real needs of the farmers for test work, it is understood.

Three lots of steers have been on feed at the college for the last six months to determine the relative value of silage made from well matured husking corn (normal silage), and silage made from corn stover after the ears have been removed. These tests will be finished and the animals weighed just before the coming meeting.

Results of five duplicate tests with pigs will also be presented. The following rations were fed during these tests: corn, rye, barley and tankage; rye and tankage; barley and tankage; corn and tankage; rye, barley and tankage; barley, middlings and tankage; and rye, middlings, and tankage. A large attendance of leading live stock men of the state is expected at the May 16 conference, according to college authorities who are in charge of arrangements.

Buffaloes Carry Mail. In certain parts of Russia the mail is carried by buffaloes. This animal is picked for the service because of his very fat feet, which enable him to travel where horses would sink.

Pope's Love for Reading. As much company as I have kept, and as much as I love it, I love reading better, and would rather be employed in reading than in the most agreeable conversation.—Pope.

Lesson Taught by Nature. Nature never hurries; atom by atom, little by little, she achieves her work. The lesson one learns in fishing, hunting, yachting or painting is the manner of nature—patience with many delays.—Emerson.

Mince Pie. Mince pie was discovered in 1598, says an exchange. That's a long while ago, and yet a lot of us have still to learn that it isn't safe to eat it at night.

Lightning Holy in East. In some eastern countries it is considered a mark of divine favor to be struck by lightning.

Will Wait Until Fall

Before Installing Wireless Telephony in Our Schools.

At a recent meeting of our school board, they authorized Supt. Duncanson to purchase and install a wireless telephone outfit in our public schools.

Since then several letters of inquiry have been sent out and from the replies received it has been decided to await purchasing of the outfit until fall.

Below is extract from a letter received from Michigan Agricultural College to Mr. Nesman of our High School faculty:—

"Replying to your inquiry of Feb'y 28th regarding wireless telephony, will say that I took up this matter with the Physics Department and Electrical Engineering Department of the University of Michigan last week Thursday and Friday.

"They informed me that the Western Electric Co., which is the sales agency for the General Electric Co., are putting their war research men to work on wireless telephony apparatus, that already single stage. Amplifying tubes have been developed which operate on a dry cell, and they expect that within the next six months a person will be able to buy as good a receiving and transmitting set for $75.00 as he could purchase now for $200.00 or $250.00. They strongly advise one to hold off for about six months before buying any apparatus.

"Good receivers are the most fundamental in receiving, so, by the best in receivers. At present they will cost you around twelve to fifteen dollars, or as possibly as high as eighteen for the best.

"At the University with the best head sets they are able to receive, using two separate coils of wire wound on cardboard as a variometer, by using bed springs as antennae, using a Galena detector. However, Detroit is doing the broadcasting for Concerts at a distance of less than fifty miles.

"At present M. A. C. is doing no broadcasting, but Stewart Seeley at the Weather Bureau expects to be doing some of this work in the near future."

LAND CLEARING TRAIN TO RUN IN MICHIGAN.

The most extensive land clearing campaign ever undertaken in Michigan will be launched on May 2, when the special land clearing train starts from Menominee county for a two months run through the Upper Peninsula.

Later in the summer, the "train," transported by motor truck at this time, will cover sections of the northern part of the lower peninsula.

Demonstration of the various methods of removing stumps will be made by the train crew during the campaign. The use of stump pullers, pilers, explosives, and all other operations in connection with land clearing work will be illustrated. One-day schools will be held along the route at the different stops made.

L. F. Livingston, land clearing specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College, will be in charge of the train, assisted by a large staff of college and other specialists.

Seventh and Eighth Grade State Examination for Charlevoix County

Seventh and Eighth Grade State Examination for Charlevoix County will be held at Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, St. James and Boyne Falls on May 11th and 12th 1922.

Students taking the test should be on hand at one of the above places at 8:00 a. m. standard time. Paper will be furnished.

Gaylord Woman Killed by Train

Mrs. Morganthauer Meets Instant Death at Crossing.

Gaylord, April 21.—Mrs. Morganthauer, about 35 years of age, was instantly killed here yesterday, by the north-bound Michigan Central railway passenger train, which struck the woman while she was driving a team of horses across the tracks on the main street. Mrs. Morganthauer evidently did not notice the approaching train which was traveling at moderate speed. The engine struck the wagon in which the victim was riding completely demolishing it, hurling her against the engine. The victim's head struck the engine, death being instantaneous.

Mrs. Morganthauer resides about two miles north of here with her husband, on a farm. She was alone in the wagon at the time of the accident. The horses escaped without a scratch, having just crossed the tracks at the moment the train struck. A coroner's inquest on the accident was held this afternoon. The engineer, Thomas Doyle, is the regular engineer on this run and stopped his engine within about four car lengths after striking the wagon.

COLLEGE GETS NEW SOILS TEST STATION NEAR MANCERLONA

A forty acre soil fertility experiment station, located near Mancelona in Antrim county, was established by action of the State Board of Agriculture in accepting a grant of land at its April meeting last week. The tract, which will be handled as a division of the M. A. C. experiment station work, will be under the direct management of the college soils division.

Extensive tests on soil treatment for potato and legume production will be put out at once on the new grounds, according to Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the college soils department. The aim of the program adopted will be to gain information of the special problems of the section of the state in which the station is located. One of the largest and most comprehensive lime tests to be found in any of the northern states will also be put out on the Mancelona acres it is understood.

Establishment of a new course in Engineering administration; decision to cooperate with the State Department of Agriculture in Economic Land Survey work this summer; plans to enlarge and strengthen the work of the college Horticultural department (including addition of new men and added equipment); and establishment of an electric meter testing laboratory in the M. A. C. engineering division, were other important matters taken up by the state board at the April meeting.

President David Friday presided over the board meeting for the first time since assuming his duties April 1.

RADIO

MARCONI REALLY FATHER OF RADIO

Story of the Gifted Italian's Work in Development of Air Communication.

While experiments along the line of radio really started as far back as 1827 and hundreds of scientists were interested in solving the problems involved for many years, it was not until 1896 when Senatore Guglielmo Marconi took out his first patent that the mastery of air communication got its first great impetus. His life history is to all practical intents the history of radio communication.

Senatore Guglielmo Marconi, G. C. V. O., L. L. D., D-Sc. M. I. E. E., was born in Bologna, Italy, April 25, 1874. His mother was Irish, while his father was of a family whose mechanical ability was marked. After an education at Leghorn and Bologna, the young man interested himself in the problem of wireless telegraphy, starting his research in 1895. He went to England and in 1896 took out the first patent ever granted for a practical system of wireless telegraphy, by the use of electric waves. His early experiments in England were made at Westbourne Park. Shortly afterward Marconi saw W. H. Bracco and at his request made some experiments for officials of the postoffice. Some further experiments were made in May, 1897, in the Bristol channel, wireless communication being established between Lavernock and Brean Down, a distance of nine miles.

On the invitation of the Italian government Marconi afterward went to Spezia where a land station was erected, which was kept in constant communication with two Italian battleships working from a distance of 12 miles. For this success the Italian government conferred upon Marconi the honor of knighthood. After a return to England further experiments were conducted and on July 20, 1897, the first radio company was formed and two permanent stations erected. In 1898 wireless reports of yacht races in Kingston were made and proved the usefulness and adaptability to which the system lends it-services at the disposal of King Victor and was given the rank of lieutenant in the Italian army. He was employed on important military missions to England by the Italian government and after this service was transferred as temporary commander in the Italian navy. Marconi visited the United States in 1917 as member of the official mission sent by Italy. In 1919 Marconi was appointed plenipotentiary delegate to the peace conference at Paris, and in this capacity signed the peace treaties with Austria and Bulgaria. He was afterward awarded the Italian military cross.

This very important figure in the wireless world, who has received about all the honors possible for the scientific world to bestow upon him, including the Nobel prize, has not given up active work, but is even now engaged in radio telephone experiments.

Radio enthusiasts have increased tenfold within the last few months, it appears from a survey conducted by the Associated Press and covering the central west, Kentucky and Texas. At virtually all points from which reports have been received, there are thousands of radio sets, particularly for purposes of telephony, where at most there were hundreds before.

While the sets are used chiefly for pleasure and experience, they are being put to practical uses in many cases. Numerous farmers are receiv-self to commercial purposes. In December, 1898, Marconi installed apparatus to provide communication between the South Foreland lighthouse and a lighthouse on the south coast. In 1899 Marconi read a paper on "Wireless Telegraphy" before the Institution of Electrical Engineers in London.

Early in 1901 telegraphic communication was established between two points more than 250 miles distant and at the end of that year Marconi transmitted signals from Poldhu, in Cornwall to St. Johns, Newfoundland. In 1902 he received on board the steamship Philadelphia in the presence of the officers, good messages on the tape when at a distance of over 1,500 miles from the transmitting station and signals at over 2,000 miles. In December, 1902, the station established at Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, under a contract with the Canadian government for transatlantic wireless telegraphy, was put into communication with the Cornwall station at Poldhu and inaugural messages were transmitted to the King of England, the King of Italy and to the London Times. In October, 1903, the steamship Lucania published a daily wireless bulletin from messages received from the Marconi stations. A powerful station at Clifden on the west coast of Ireland was opened early in 1907 for the establishment of commercial relations with the American continent at Glace Bay.

Mr. Marconi's work has been recognized by many governments and seats of learning; he has been decorated by the King of Italy and the late ex-Czar of Russia as an honorary doctor of many universities, including Oxford, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Liverpool and Pennsylvania, besides having received the freedom of the principal Italian cities. In 1914 he was elected a senator in the Italian parliament. He also holds many scientific awards granted by various societies and institutions.

Upon the declaration of war by Italy, Senatore Marconi placed his Tribute to Poetry.

Poetry is simply the most delightful and perfect form of utterance that human words can reach. Its rhythm and measure, elevated to a regularity, certainty, and force very different from that of the rhythm and measure which can pervade prose, are a part of its perfection. The more of genius that a nation has for high poetry, the more will the rhythm and measure which its poetical utterance adopts be distinguished by adequacy and beauty.—Matthew Arnold.

Technical Description.
It takes a business man to describe a costume to his wife. A man of commerce, after seeing a very tating dress on a very taking young lady recently, informed the partner of his joys that: "It was fine. The dress was made of some kind of cloth, with some sort of trimming. It was a sort of lilac or shrimp pink in color. She wore one of those hats you sometimes see on woman, and altogether gave an effect that I wish you could have seen."

"Chip of the Old Block."
One who reproduces his father's peculiarities or characteristics. The phrase may be found as far back as 1626, in a play called "Dick of Devonshire." "Your father used to come home to my mother, and why may not I be a chippe of the same blocke out of which you two were cutte?"—Chicago Journal.

What He Would Do.
Being told by the deacon that his constant demands for money from the pulpit would kill his church, an old colored preacher replied, "Churches don't die that way, brother. You show me one that did an' I'll shout with a voice of thunder, 'Blessed an the dead that die in the Lord!'"—Boston Transcript.

A Possibility.
There's always a chance that the world will survive in spite of those who wring their hands and wonder why somebody doesn't do something.—Baltimore Sun.

Arabs Frown on Whistling.
The Arabs have a proverb that, after whistling, the mouth is not purified for 40 days. They regard it as the most unlucky sign that can emanate from human lips.

Ferris as a candidate for the United States senate. Detroit—The Social Service committee of the Detroit Council of churches went on record as endorsing the action of Will H. Hays, director of the moving picture industry of the United States, in placing a ban upon the showing of all Arbuckle films in the United States. A report was filed with the board to the effect that there is, in many instances, a duplication of janitors, messengers and telephone operators. Lansing—All state institutions and departments will be informed by order of the state administrative board that overdrafts on appropriations for this year will be deducted from appropriations for next year. This means that institutions or departments over-drawing their appropriation will be spending their own money, and have that much less to spend next year. Kalamazoo—Twenty minutes after the jurors retired at 4:30 o'clock April 19, they brought in a verdict finding John Duval Dodge, Detroit millionaire, and Rex Earl, of Kalamazoo, guilty of possessing, transporting and furnishing intoxicating liquors. Attorney Harry Howard, of counsel for the defense, asked a stay of sentence to file a motion for a new trial. It was granted. Ontonagon—After following to an end another clue, which, at first, apparently accounted for the whereabouts of Jerome Dickinson, 19-year-old acting rector of the Church of the Ascension, who disappeared April 4, W. M. Dickinson, of Detroit, his father, announced he had little hope of finding his son alive. He believes the young clergyman drowned in Lake Superior. Northville—Fire, caused by a painter's blow-torch, destroyed the $50,000 home of George B. Yerkes, former prosecuting attorney for Wayne county, near here. Insurance partially covers the loss. Lansing—A request from the state welfare commission of American Legion that $5,000 be appropriated for assisting wives and children of disabled war veterans and $24,000 to replace money already spent by the legion in aiding veterans has been received by the state administrative board. U., Mrs. Mary B. Dickie, wife of President Emeritus Samuel Dickie, of Albion college, has resigned. When Dr. Dickie was superintendent of schools at Hastings, from 1873 to 1877, Mrs. Dickie became leader of the "Red Ribbon" society, which was the forerunner of the W. C. T. U. When Dr. Dickie came to Albion in 1877, to become head of the Albion college department of mathematics, his wife was chosen head of the local dry organization. Mrs. Harvey G. Pearce succeeds Mrs. Dickie.

Physicians said heart failure was the cause. Iron Mountain—In the spring of 1887, 35 years ago, there were 600,000,000 feet of logs in the drive on the Menominee river. This represented the cut of the lumber companies at that time operating sawmills at Menominee and Marinette. The drive was the largest in the history of the river and about 600 men were employed in the work. Each year the drive has decreased. All the timber now goes from the camps to the mills over the railroads. Paw Paw—Judge L. Burget Desvoignes dismissed the $800 suit, brought by the Hudson Bay company, of Regina, Alberta, against the Paw Paw Savings bank. The suit was based on a certificate of deposit, drawn on the Paw Paw bank, and stolen from a mail pouch, at Kalamazoo, in October, 1920. It was the first intimation the postal officials of Kalamazoo have had that any of the $20,000 worth of securities stolen from the mail bag had been cashed. Allegan—Every member of the Allegan county highway commission has tendered his resignation, following the filing of sensational charges by the board of supervisors. SAYS RUSSO-GERMAN PACT NOT A MILITARY ALLIANCE

Genoa—Walter Rathenau, head of the German delegation, in a statement has denied that the Russo-German treaty contained any secret clauses. "Especially there is no clause providing for a military alliance between the two countries," he declared. "Germany and Russia have agreed as a result of the conferences, that they will not cancel the treaty." Rathenau continued, "You can not make this too strong. We will maintain the treaty." The German leader was indignant over a rumor that has been spread to the effect that there has been a split in the German delegation. The rumor had it that Chancellor Wirth and Rathenau had broken. "The rumor is absolutely unfounded," Rathenau said. "The whole delegation is absolutely unanimous." Too Familiar. She went back and picked up the wedding ring. The thought which had come to her that this was Alan's mother's wedding ring, had fastened itself upon her with a sense of certainty. It defied that unknown mother; it freed her, at least, from the stigma which Constance's own mother had been so ready to cast. Constance could not yet begin to place Uncle Benny in relation to that ring; but she was beginning to be able to think of Alan and his mother. She held the little band of gold very tenderly in her hand; she was glad that, as the accusation against his mother had come through her people, she could tell him soon of this. She could not send the ring to him, not knowing where he was; that was too much risk. But she could ask him to come to her; this gave that right.

She sat thoughtful for several minutes; the ring clasped warmly in her hand; then she went to her desk and wrote:

"Mr. John Welton,
Blue Rapids, Kansas.
Dear Mr. Welton:
"It is possible that Alan Conrad has mentioned me—or at least told you of my father—in connection with his stay in Chicago. After Alan left Chicago, my father wrote twice to his Blue Rapids address, but evidently he had instructed the postmaster there to forward his mail and had not made any change in those instructions, for the letters were returned to Alan's address and in that way came back to us. We did not like to press inquiries further than that, as of course he could have communicated with us if he had not felt that there was some reason for not doing so. Now, however, something of such supreme importance to him has come to us that it is necessary for us to get word to him at once. If you can tell me any address at which he can be reached by telegraph or mail—or where a messenger can find him—it will oblige us very much and will be to his interest."
She hesitated, about to sign it; then, impulsively, she added:
"I trust you know that we have Alan's interest at heart and that you can safely tell us anything you may know as to where he is or what he may be doing. We all liked him here so very much."
She signed her name. There were still two other letters to write. Only the handwriting of the address upon the package, the Manitowoc postmark and the shoe box furnished clues to the sender of the ring and the watch and the other things. Constance herself could not trace those clues, but Henry or her father could. She wrote to both of them, therefore, describing the articles which had come and relating what she had done.

The next noon she received a wire from Henry that he was "coming up." It did not surprise her, as she had expected him the end of the week. Late that evening, she sat with her mother on the wide, screened veranda. The lights of some boat turning in between the points and moving swiftly caught her attention. As it entered the path of the moonlight, its look was so like that of Henry's power yacht that she arose. It was his way, as soon as he had decided to leave business again and go to her, to arrive as soon as possible; that had been his way recently, particularly. So the sight of the yacht stirred her warmly and she watched while it ran in close, stopped and instantly dropped a dingy from the davits. She saw Henry in the stern of the little boat; it disappeared in the shadow of a pier. . . . she heard, presently, the gravel of the walk crunch under his quick steps, and then she saw him in the moonlight among the trees. She went down on the path to meet him.

"How quickly you came!"
"You let yourself think you needed me, Connie!"
"I did."
He had caught her hand in his and he held it while he brought her to the porch and exchanged greetings with her mother. Then he led her on past and into the house.

When she saw his face in the light, there were signs of strain in it.
"You're tired, Henry?"
He shook his head. "It's been rotten hot in Chicago; then I guess I was mentally stoking all the way up here, Connie. But first, where are the things you wanted me to see?"
She ran upstairs and brought them down to him. Her hands were shaking now as she gave them to him; she could not exactly understand why; but her tremor increased as she wrapped his big hands fumbling as he unwrapped the muffler and shook out the things it inclosed. He took them up one by one and looked at them, as she had done. His fingers were steady now, but only by mastering of control, the effort for which amazed her. He had the watch in his hands.

"The inscription is inside the front," she said.
She pried the cover open again and read, with him, the words engraved within.
"As master of . . . What ship was he master of then, Henry, and how did he rescue the Winnebago's people?"
"He never talked to me about things like that, Constance. This is all!"
"Yes."
Henry put the things back in the box. "Of course, this is the end of Benjamin Corvet."
"Of course," Constance said. She was shaking again and, without willing it, she withdrew a little from Henry. He caught her hand again and drew her back toward him. His hand was quite steady.
"You know why I came to you as quick as I could? You know why I—why my mind was behind every thrust of the engines?"
"No."
"You don't? Oh, you know; you must know now!"
"Yes, Henry," she said.
"I've been patient, Connie. Till I got your letter telling me this about Ben, I'd waited for your sake—for our sakes—though it seemed at times it was impossible. You haven't known quite what's the matter between us these last months, little girl; but I've known. We've been engaged; but that's about all there's been to it. Don't think I make little of that; you know what I mean. You've been mine; but—but you haven't let me realize it, you see. And I've been patient, for I knew the reason. It was Ben poisoning your mind against me."
"No! No, Henry!"
"You've denied it; I've recognized that you've denied it, not only to me and to your people, but to yourself. I, of course, knew, as I know that I am here with your hand in mine, and as we will stand before the altar together, that he had no cause to speak against me. I've waited, Connie, to give him a chance to say to you what he had to say; I wanted you to hear it before making you wholly mine. But now there's no need to wait any longer, you and I. Ben's gone, never to come back. I was sure of that by what you wrote me, so this time when I started to you I brought with me—this."
He felt in his pocket and brought out a ring of plain gold; he held it before her so that she could see within it her own initials and his and a blank left for the date. Her gaze went from it for an instant to the box where he had put back the other ring—Alan's mother's. Feeling for her long ago gazing thus, as she must have, at that ring, held her for a moment. Was it because of that Constance found herself cold now?
"You mean you want me to marry you—at once, Henry?"
He drew her to him powerfully; she felt him warm, almost rough with passions. Since that day when, in

He Drew Her to Him Powerfully; She Felt Him Warm, Almost Rough With Passions.

Alan Conrad's presence, he had grasped and kissed her, she had not let him "realize" their engagement, as he had put it.
"Why not?" he turned her face up to his now. "Your mother's here; your father will follow soon; or, if you will, we'll run away—Constance! You've kept me off so long! You don't believe there's anything against me, dear? Do you? Do you?"
"No; no! Of course not!"
"Then we're going to be married."
"Right away, we'll have it then; up here; now!"
"No; not now, Henry. Not up here!"
"Not here? Why not?"
She could give no answer. He held her and commanded her again; only when he frightened her, he ceased.
"Why must it be at once, Henry? I don't understand!"
"It's not must, dear; he denied. 'It's just that I want you so!'"
When would it be, he demanded then; before spring, she promised at last. But that was all he could make her say. And so he let her go.
The next evening, in the moonlight, she drove him to Petoskey. He had messages to send and preferred to trust the telegraph office in the larger town.

Alan was driving northward along the long, sandy peninsula which separates the blue waters of Grand Traverse from Lake Michigan; and, thinking of Constance, he knew that she was near. He not only had remembered that she would be north at Harbor Point this month; he had seen in one of the Petoskey papers that she and her mother were at the Sherrill summer home. His business now was taking him nearer than he had been at any time before; and, if he wished to weaken, he might convince himself that he might learn from her circumstances which would aid him in his task. But he was not going to her for help; that was following in his father's footsteps. When he knew everything, then—not till then—he could go to her; for then he would know exactly what was upon him and what he should do.

His visits to the people named on those sheets written by his father had been confusing at first; he had had great difficulty in tracing some of them at all; and, afterward, he could uncover no certain connection either between them and Benjamin Corvet or between themselves. But recently, he had been succeeding better in this latter.

He had seen—he reckoned them over again—fourteen of the twenty-one named originally on Benjamin Corvet's lists; that is, he had seen either the individual originally named, or the surviving relative written in below the name crossed off. He had found that the crossing out of the name meant that the person was dead, except in the case of two who had left the country and whose whereabouts were as unknown to their present relatives as they had been to Benjamin Corvet, and the case of one other, who was in an insane asylum.

He had found that no one of the persons whom he saw had known Benjamin Corvet personally; many of them did not know him at all, the others knew him only as a name. But, when Alan proceeded, always there was one connotation with each of the original names; always one circumstance bound all together. When he had established that circumstance as influencing the fortunes of the first two on his lists, he had said to himself, as the blood pricked queerly under the skin, that the fact might be a mere coincidence. When he established it also as affecting the fate of the third and of the fourth and of the fifth, such explanation no longer sufficed; and he found it in common to all fourteen, sometimes as the deciding factor of their fate, sometimes as only slightly affecting them, but always it was there.

In how many different ways, in what strange, diverse manifestations that single circumstance had spread to these people whom Alan had interviewed! No two of them had been affected alike, he reckoned, as he went over his notes of them. Now he was going to trace those consequences to another. To what sort of place would it bring him today and what would he find there? He knew only that it would be quite distinct from the rest.

The driver turned aside from the road across a cleared field where ruts showed the passing of many previous vehicles; crossing this, they entered the woods. Little fires for cooking burned all about them, and nearer were parked an immense number of farm wagons and buggies, with horses unharnessed and munching grain. Alan's guide found a place among these for his automobile, and they got out and went forward on foot. All about them, seated upon the moss or walking about, were Indians, family groups among which children played.

Alan saw among these looking on, the bright dresses and sport coats of summer visitors who had come to watch. The figure of a girl among these caught his attention, and he started; then swiftly he told himself that it was only his thinking of Constance Sherrill that made him believe this was she. But now she had seen him; she paled, then as quickly flushed, and leaving the group she had been with, came toward him.

He had no choice now whether he would avoid her or not; and his happiness at seeing her held him stupid, watching her. Her eyes were very bright and with something more than friendly greeting; there was happiness in them too. His throat shut together as he recognized this, and his hand closed warmly over the small, trembling hand which she put out to him. All his conscious thought was lost for the moment in the mere realization of her presence; he stood, holding her hand, oblivious that there were people looking; she too seemed careless of that. Then she whitened again and withdrew her hand; she seemed slightly confused. He was confused as well; it was not like this that he had meant to greet her; he caught himself together.

Cap in hand, he stood beside her, trying to look and to feel as any ordinary acquaintance of hers would have looked.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Owner of the Watch.
"So they got word to you!" Constance exclaimed; she seemed still confused. "Oh, no—of course, they couldn't have done that! They've hardly got my letter yet."
"Your letter?" Alan asked.
"I wrote to Blue Rapids," she explained. "Some things came—they were sent to me. Some things of Uncle Benny's which were meant for you instead of me."
"You mean you've heard from him?"
"No—not that."
"What things, Miss Sherrill?"
"A watch of his and some coins and—a ring." She did not explain the significance of those things, and he could not tell from her mere enumeration of them and without seeing them that they furnished proof that his father was dead. She could not inform him of that, she felt, just here and now.

"I'll tell you about that later. You—were you coming to Harbor Point to see us?"
He colored. "I'm afraid not. I got as near as this to you because there is a man—an Indian—I have to see."
"An Indian! What is his name? You see, I know quite a lot of them."
"Jo Papo."
She shook her head. "No; I don't know him."
She found a spot where the moss was covered with dry pine needles and sat down upon the ground.
"Sit down," she invited; "I want you to tell me what you have been doing."
"I've been on the boats." He dropped down upon the moss beside her. "Until yesterday I was a not very highly honored member of the crew of the package freighter Oscoda; I left her at Frankfort and came up here."
"Is Wassaquam with you?"
"He wasn't on the Oscoda; but he was with me at first. Now, I believe, he has gone back to his own people—to Middle Village."
"You mean you've been looking for Mr. Corvet in that way?"
"Not exactly that." He hesitated; but he could see no reason for not telling what he had been doing. He had not so much hidden from her and her father what he had found in Benjamin Corvet's house; rather, he had refrained from mentioning it in his notes to them when he left Chicago because he had thought that the lists would lead to an immediate explanation; they had not led to that, but only to a suggestion, indefinite yet. He had known that, if his search finally developed nothing more than it had, he must at last consult Sherrill and get Sherrill's aid.
"We found some writing, Miss Sherrill," he said, "in the house on Astor street that night after Luke came."
"What writing?"
He took the lists from his pocket and showed them to her. She separated and looked through the sheets and read the names written in the same hand that had written the directions upon the slip of paper that came to her four days before, with the things from Uncle Benny's pockets.
"My father had kept these very secretly," he explained. "He had them hidden. Wassaquam knew where they were, and that night after Luke was dead and you had gone home, he gave them to me."
"After I had gone home? Henry went back to see you that night; he had said he was going back, and afterward I asked him, and he told me he had seen you again. Did you show him these?"
"He saw them—yes."
"He was there when Wassaquam showed you where they were?"
"Yes."
A little line deepened between her brows, and she sat thoughtful.
"So you have been going about seeing these people," she said. "What have you found out?"
"Nothing definite at all. None of them knew my father; they were only

"Nothing Definite At All. None of Them Knew My Father."

amazed to find that anyone in Chicago had known their names."
In her feeling for him, she had laid her hand upon his arm; now her fingers tightened to sudden tenseness.
"What do you mean?" she asked.
"Oh; it is not definite yet—not clear!" She felt the bitterness in his tone. "They have not any of them been able to make it wholly clear to me. It is like a record that has been blurred. These original names must have been written down by my father many years ago—many, most of those people, I think—are dead; some are nearly forgotten. The only thing that is fully plain is that in every case my inquiries have led me to those who have lost one, and sometimes more than one relative upon the lakes."
Constance thrilled to a vague horror; it was not anything to which she could give definite reason. His tone quite as much as what he said was its cause. His experience plainly had been forcing him to bitterness against his father; and he did not know with certainty yet that his father was dead.
"You'll lunch with us, of course," she said to Alan, "and then go back with us to Harbor Point. It's a day's journey around the two bays; but we've a boat here."
He assented, and they went down to the water where the white and brown power yacht, with long, graceful lines, lay solemnly in the sunlight. A little boat took them out over the shimmering, smooth surface to the ship; swells from a faraway freighter swept under the beautiful, burnished craft, causing it to roll lazily as they boarded it. A party of nearly a dozen men and girls with an older woman; chaperoning them, lounged under the shade of an awning over the after deck. They greeted her gaily and looked curiously at Alan as she introduced him.

"Have you worked on any of our boats?" she asked him, after luncheon had been finished, and the anchor of the ship had been raised.
A queer expression came upon his face. "I've thought it best not to do that, Miss Sherrill," he replied.
She did not know why the next moment she should think of Henry.
The yacht was pushing swiftly, smoothly, with hardly a hum from its motors, north along the shore. He watched intently the rolling, wooded hills and the ragged little bays and inlets. His work and his investigations had not brought him to the neighborhood before, but she found that she did not have to name the places to him; he knew them from the charts.
"Grand Traverse light," he said to her as a white tower showed upon their left. Then, leaving the shore, they pushed out across the wide mouth of the large bay toward Little Traverse. He grew more silent as they approached it.
"It is up there, isn't it," he asked, pointing, "that they hear the Drum?"
"Yes; how did you know the place?"
"I don't know it exactly; I want you to show me."
She pointed out to him the cove, dark, primeval, blue in its contrast with the lighter green of the trees about it and the glistening white of the shingle and of the more distant sand bluffs. He leaned forward, staring at it, until the changed course of the yacht, as it swung about toward the entrance to the bay, obscured it.
"Seeing the ships made me feel that I belonged here on the lakes," he reminded her. "I have felt something—something not recognition exactly, but something that was like the beginning of recognition—many times this summer when I saw certain places. It's like one of those dreams, you know, in which you are conscious of having had the same dream before. I feel that I ought to know this place."
They landed only a few hundred yards from the cottage. After bidding good-by to her friends, they went up to it together through the trees. There was a small sun room, rather shut off from the rest of the house, to which she led him. Leaving him there, she ran upstairs to get the things.
She halted an instant beside the door, with the box in her hands, before she went back to him, thinking how to prepare him against the significance of these relics of his father. She need not prepare him against the mere fact of his father's death; he had been beginning to believe that already; but these things must have far more meaning for him than merely that. She went in and put the box down upon the card table.

RUSSIA REFUSES TO PAY ALLIES

Declare "Debts Represent Expenditures of Allies On Own Enterprise."
Genoa—Russia refuses to recognize the debts contracted by the czarist government during the war and later by the Kerensky government.
In their answer to the Allied demands, the envoys of Soviet Russia asserted that they cannot meet the conditions laid down for them.
In giving its reason for refusing to pay the war-time debts, the soviet government states:
"The war-time debts represent the expenditures of the allies on their own enterprise, whose successful conclusions resulted in territorial aggrandizement and enormous profits, whereas Russia secured nothing. For this reason we do not consider these expenditures debts and must, on principle refuse to pay them."
The announcement had the effect of another bombshell in the allied camp.

SAYS JACKSON PRISON CROWDED

Warden Hurlburt Declares Opposition to Transfer of Prisoners.
Jackson—Warden Hurlburt, of Jackson prison, has voiced disapproval of the proposal to transfer incorrigible inmates from the Detroit house of correction to the local penal institution. The warden declared he had lodged a protest with Governor Groesbeck.
"I do not believe that it is the intention of the governor or any one else to transfer prisoners here from Detroit or any other place," he said. "I have asked the governor to leave us alone. I have also suggested that he instruct judges to send short timers to Ionia."
The warden declared that there were 1,731 prisoners confined in the prison. This is almost double the number the place was constructed to accommodate.

CAN MARRY WITH $100 SALARY

Chicago Judge Says Coupl. Can Get Along, With Love.
Chicago—One hundred dollars a month is salary enough to get married on, Judge Asa C. Adams declared in the court of domestic relations after an analysis of hundreds of cases of domestic infelicity. "A young man with a salary of $100 a month can safely marry—if the woman he chooses is the right type," said the judge. "Any couple can get along on $100 a month if they love one another."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

EXERCISING THE WILL

NOTHING is more fatal to growth of will than that form of indolence which shrinks from trial and experiment.
The person who is confronted by a new perplexity, loses his or her self-reliance and in despair cries, "what shall I do," is not destined to go very far afield in the creation of song or story or in the crafts.
He must, like boats, keep near the shore and be ever ready to scud into the harbor.
All the achievements in the arts and sciences result from exercising an individual will and strengthening it in difficult situations.
The practice of doing things habitually, as a bookkeeper adds a column of figures or a typist rattles off a routine letter, increases speed and contributes a certain quality of efficiency, but it does not by any manner of means improve the volitional power. No new or original force is brought into play.
The mind functions from habit without any strain, unconscious of exertion. Mere habit is the impelling power which if persisted in for a long time weakens the will and eventually retards progress and originality.
The men and women who rise to the heights are those who every day exercise their will-power in new spheres. In their self-appointed occupations they call up their reserve strength, whip their brains to a faster gait and discipline their resolution.
They think and act for themselves, master their own problems by perseverance and mount step by step to places where rewards are largest and honors are unobtainable.
They early learned how to depend on themselves by reasoning and using their judgment. They dug down to basic principles and discovered the "whys and wherefores."
Then followed a robustness and an ability of mind which developed will-power of the highest order.
And this high-powered will is available to all who will drill themselves to hard work and avoid slothful habits.
This special exercise of the intellect which is necessary to expand the will may be irksome at first, but if persisted in it becomes in a little while exhilarating and carries us forward at a wonderful pace without wearying in the least.
If you would test this to your own satisfaction and advantage, try it for a month and note at the end of that time how you have improved in mentality and self-reliance.

The Friendly Path

By Walter I. Robinson

THE WILD FLOWERS

SAVE the wild flowers.
Slowly, but surely, many of the most beautiful species of blooms are disappearing. Constantly those who love them carelessly pull them up by the roots, or the uncaring destroy them with little less than criminal intent. Virtually nothing is being done to give them lengthened lives.
Yet there are thousands who find some of the greatest pleasure in tramping through the woods and fields and viewing the fragrant beauties in their native haunts. God was kind in giving us so many varieties to enhance the landscape and make the world more beautiful. And those who love the wildflowers would be rambling in their duty to themselves and their fellows if they did not use every possible influence to have the floral species preserved.
Some may contend that nothing of material value is to be gained by exertions designed to prevent the flowers from being wiped out. They are wrong. Aside from the purely esthetic side of such work, it is of great importance to the education of the children who come after us. But of still greater importance is the influence the flowers will have on the lives of the people.
No one can look upon things which are beautiful without feeling more happy, or without a higher appreciation of God's greatness and recognizing that man is small. No one can spend part of his time admiring the flowers and breathing their fragrance without experiencing a thrill of enjoyment or without thinking better thoughts and feeling a desire to make his own work more nearly perfect. We, therefore, should be more thankful for the millions of blossoms so frequently trampled underfoot, and there should be greater effort to keep them blooming along all pathways.
A movement to preserve the species of wildflowers is taking practical form in one of the big cities of the United States. Through the influence of nature lovers, park officials have set aside a part of one of the public parks for a wildflower preserve.
Every community would assure greater happiness for its people by protecting these beautiful works of God.

"Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse"

Statistics about the picture as published in THE LITERARY DIGEST:

"The screen version of Vicente Blasco Ibanez's epochal novel took more than six months to complete.

"Upward of 12,000 persons were engaged in the undertaking.

"More than 125,000 tons of masonry, steel, lumber, furniture and shrubbery—in excess of the materials used in the Woolworth Building—were used in constructing the massive settings for the colossal spectacle.

"An entire French village, capable of housing 6000 souls, was put up and then destroyed before the camera lens.

"A costume factory was erected on the Metro studio grounds for 'dressing' the production.

"An armory and two machine-shops were incidentals of the other building operations.

"More than 500,000 feet of raw film were exposed in the taking of the picture, which when shown on the screen will not exceed 12,000 feet.

"Fourteen cameramen were employed to 'shoot' the big scenes from every angle, and Rex Ingram, the director, at times had fourteen directors assisting him.

"Field kitchens and a complete commissary organization were required to feed an army of 12,500 persons engaged on the production.

"A collection of art treasures from galleries and private sources, valued beyond price, were used in dressing the handsome interior settings. The insurance alone on these art works was $375,000.

"The cast interpreting the roles contains two dozen principal players, who in other productions would be rated as stars."

"SELL MICHIGAN TO WOLVERINES"

CAMPAIGN TO BOOST STATE TO HOME FOLKS OPENS IN DETROIT MAY 1.

WILL VISIT PRINCIPAL CITIES

Speakers to Set Forth Matters of Interest and Future Development of Michigan.

Detroit—This city will be the starting point for the state-wide campaign of education to be undertaken by organizations interested in Michigan development projects the first week in May. Arrangements now are complete, the speakers have been chosen and the itinerary arranged for the program of "Selling Michigan to Wolverines."

The Detroit Board of Commerce building will be the scene of the first meeting, the evening of Monday, May 1, when a galaxy of speakers from all parts of the state will set forth matters of interest pertaining to their particular districts, in the hope the getting together will be educational.

The program of meetings in the principal cities of Michigan is announced as follows:

Monday, May 2—Noon, Jackson; night, Battle Creek.
Tuesday—Noon, Kalamazoo; night, Grand Rapids.
Wednesday—Noon, Lansing; night, Flint.
Thursday—Noon, Bay City; night, Saginaw.
Saturday—Noon, Port Huron.

The speakers will include George E. Bishop, Marquette, secretary-manager of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau; T. F. Marston, Bay City, secretary-manager Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau; John L. Gibson, Battle Creek, former secretary Western Michigan Development Bureau; John A. Doelle, commissioner of agriculture; Hugh H. Gray, Grand Rapids, secretary-manager Michigan Tourist and Resort Association; John L. Lovett, manager Michigan Manufacturers' Association; W. P. Hartman, deputy commissioner of agriculture, who will discuss markets; Captain W. S. Gilbreath, president Michigan Pike Association; Ezra Levin, deputy in state department of agriculture; Albert Stoll, Jr., secretary of the department of conservation, and L. C. Biddorf, executive secretary of the Michigan Real Estate Association.

Dr. David Friday, new president of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been invited to accompany the party and probably will accept.

Each speaker will be limited to five minutes. He will discuss not only present conditions, but future development. It is the hope of the sponsors of the movement that the campaign will lead to a better appreciation on the part of Michigan citizens of the state's present greatness and its possibilities.

TERRIFIC BLAST KILLS MANY

Serbian City Rocked By Explosion of 400 Cars of Ammunition.

Belgrade—Four hundred carloads of ammunition and high explosive stored near the railroad station at Monastir, southern Serbia, exploded, killing several hundred persons, wounding thousands and virtually destroying the heart of the city. One half of the city's population was rendered homeless.

The victims were mostly children and soldiers. A church in which the children were worshipping collapsed under the detonation, while the barracks in which 1,800 soldiers were having lunch was destroyed.

Canoeing for Co-eds Tabooed.

Lansing—Canoeing on the Cedar river, the Michigan Agricultural College's traditional campus stream, is more or less taboo this spring, it was learned last week. Dean of Women Savage said she had suggested to the co-eds that they not go canoeing at night. The "Women Safe-Governing League," a student body, also makes the same recommendation in its rule. Dean Savage denied reports that she had attempted to ascribe proper dress for the co-eds.

First to establish the $10.90 price—"Usco"

THE makers of U. S. Tires made this announcement last November—

"Hereafter the price of the 30x3 1/2 'Usco' is $10.90."

The lowest price ever quoted on a tire of quality reputation and standard performance.

And now, with the opening of Spring, there seem to be quite a number of "New and Special tires" coming into the market in the $10.90 price range.

Perhaps you are wondering just what there can be either "new" or "special" about these tires.

It can't be the $10.90 price—"Usco" established that five months ago.

Nor quality reputation and standard performance—for it takes more than one full season for any new tire to demonstrate where it stands in quality and value.

With so many tires rushing into this $10.90 price field (now that the season promises business from the American car-owner), it is worth remembering that "Usco" showed its good faith by announcing this price last fall.

The same intent to serve that has made "Usco" a standard value for years.

The "Usco" Tire was never better than it is today—with its established quality, its time-tested performance, and its price closely figured in tune with the times.
