Auto Goes Into Channel

Carrying Occupants With It All Miraculously Escape.

An automobile slid off the Ironton ferry into the channel, last Sunday, carrying the five occupants with it, and all escaped drowning.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bashaw with their two daughters, Anna and Ellen, and accompanied by Mrs. Bashaw's father, Andrew Berg, were out for a drive Sunday afternoon. They decided to cross the ferry at Ironton, Mrs. Bashaw was driving their heavy Overland and after getting the car onto the ferry, shut off the gas and applied the brakes. The car practically stopped, but for some reason the brakes failed to respond thoroughly and the car continued to creep ahead. The guard chain on the ferry was not in position and the car toppled over into the 18-foot deep channel. Mr. Bashaw, realizing the approaching accident, had opened the rear side door and started to get out when the car went in. The other four occupants were carried below the surface of the water. Mr. Bashaw swam to the ferry and grasped a projecting board with one arm. During the meantime one of the men on the ferry had the presence of mind to slash off a piece of rope from a coil. The youngest daughter came up first, grasped the rope and was hauled in. The other daughter then came up and was rescued the same way. Mr. Berg came up and after a couple of attempts grasped the rope and was rescued. Mrs. Bashaw, who evidently was carried to the bottom, was the last to come to the surface and was in an unconscious condition. A grappling hook was used to bring her to the ferry, where she was lifted on board. It was some time before she again became conscious. The only thing she remembers was opening the door of the submerged car and swinging her body clear of the steering wheel. This act undoubtedly saved her life.

Mr. Bashaw had during this time clung to the board with one arm and assisted in getting the four persons onto the ferry. When this was accomplished, he was completely exhausted from the strain and had to be lifted onto the deck.

The Herald publisher has reported accidents for the past twenty-five years and this is one of the most remarkable the writer has ever chronicled. The escape of all five occupants from drowning borders on the miraculous. Had two or more come to the surface at the same time the chances were good for one or more to go back down to their death. As it was they came up in one-two-three-four order, giving time to rescue each one in their turn.

PROMINENT MUSKIEGON ATTORNEY AND WIFE HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Lansing, April 28—Stephen H. Clink, prominent Muskegon attorney and former circuit judge, and Mrs. Clink were seriously injured in an auto collision late today two miles east of Grand Ledge. Both are in St. Lawrence hospital here, Mr. Clink with his chest crushed, deep cuts in his head and his right leg broken. His wife has severe scalp wounds, body bruises and a broken leg. Miss Glenna Clink, their daughter, who was riding with them, escaped unhurt in the mishap.

Judge Clink, his wife and daughter were on their way to Lansing, where they were to be the guests of N. B. Hill, president of the Grange Life Insurance company, for which Judge Clink is counsel.

The collision occurred when Dr. A. G. Stanka of Grand Ledge, also driving to Lansing with Mrs. Stanka, attempted to pass the large touring car driven by Judge Clink. The physician's car struck the left front hub of the Muskegon man's machine forcing it to the side of the road and against a tree with great force. The car was demolished. Judge Clink was crushed against the steering wheel and the wife hurled through the windshield. Both were out by flying glass.

The physician's car overturned in a ditch, but neither he nor his wife were badly hurt. They were able to proceed to their home.

Judge Clink is brother of Atty E. N. Clink of East Jordan and is well-known in this City, having visited his brother here at different times in the past.

The money that it once took to make the mare go, isn't enough to make the automobile go.

PROF. EDWARD GALLUP PAYS FINE COMPLIMENT TO EAST JORDAN SCHOOL

Professor Edward Gallup of the Federal Aid granted to the agricultural department of the different high schools of the state, inspected the East Jordan schools Friday and found a most satisfactory condition in our schools, saying to the chapel that he had visited most of the high schools in the state and hadn't found a finer spirit in any school visited. He said he knew the school was running well the minute he stepped in the door and heard the classes pass. He visited most of the teachers classes and made the remark that he found as fine a work being done as he had seen in some time.

Altogether the work indicated to him that he could give us the limit of federal aid for a school this size. His report made it possible for the agricultural department to get $1022 instead of $922 as last year.

We greatly appreciate the fine word spoken by Professor Gallup because he is an educator of wide experience and certainly an impartial observer and East Jordan is to be congratulated on the faculty, and fine student body in their high school.

Between seven and eight thousand are enrolled in our public schools—are you interested enough in the youth and childhood of Charlevoix County to assist in any way possible to reach those who are un-instructed spiritually? Attend the Convention, offer suggestions, help to inspire to greater service and receive inspiration yourself.

A WORD AS TO "THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE"

Manager Olson of the Temple Theatre in securing "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse"—to be shown here next Thursday and Friday, May 11-12—is offering the people of this region what is probably the greatest motion picture production of recent years.

Yale University conferred upon Rex Ingram the B. F. A. degree for his artistic achievement shown in the mammoth production.

John Calvin, mayor of Cincinnati, gave $5000 to present this picture to the farmers and rural people free.

Fannie Hurst, author of Humoresque says—"The greatest picture I have ever seen."

Valentino, star of "The Shiek" is the star in this play.

The book on which the play was founded, is at our Public Library and is worth going after.

Correspondence received by Manager Olson from neighboring towns and cities indicate considerable interest in the production. Boyne City, Charlevoix, Boyne Falls, Vanderbilt and Alba have been heard from requesting playing dates of this masterpiece.

Watch for it next Thursday and Friday, May 11-12, Temple Theatre.

BOYS NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

While remodeling the new Eastport garage recently, a large hole was dug near the building to get dirt to make the necessary approach.

Last Saturday morning three young lads of that place; Forrest Kaufman, Perry McPherson and Arnold Addington decided to dig a cave in the excavation. The Addington boy, after helping to dig for a short time went in search for more tools, and upon returning discovered that the cave had collapsed burying both of his companions.

The alarm was given at once and the rescue began. Perry was the first to be found, Forrest being in the cave the farthest had four feet of dirt over him and was unconscious when found and taken home. Both boys are better, but don't like to hear "cave" mentioned. Central Lake Torch.

E. J. H. S. Wins Again

Typewriting and Shorthand Contests at Boyne City.

The typewriting and shorthand contest of northern Michigan were held at Boyne City Saturday, April 29, and out of a possible seven places East Jordan wins three. Miss Olga Wagbo got first place in the typewriting and shorthand contests for first year students, and Sena Franseth second in typewriting for second year students. This was the biggest contest of this kind ever held in northern Michigan. Last year they had but one district north of Grand Rapids and but two schools competed, East Jordan and Traverse City. At Boyne, Saturday, the following schools competed: Cheboygan, Boyne City, Gaylord, Petoskey and East Jordan.

With something over twenty contestants. When you consider that East Jordan won almost half the honors in a contest in which the above schools were represented it comes as a distinct honor to our commercial department.

Four students were entered from East Jordan, Misses Helen Stroebel, Doris Colden, Sena Franseth and Olga Wagbo. It is not only a real honor to East Jordan students but it is a deserving compliment of the kind of work Miss Filkins is doing in our commercial department.

Without a doubt we have perhaps the best commercial department in northern Michigan. The contestants go to Kalamazoo on May 19 for state honors. Of course Miss Wagbo and Miss Franseth are the two eligible candidates for this honor. The results of the contests are as follows: First year typog.—Miss Wagbo of East Jordan—first. First year typing—Iva Wollingur of Cheboygan—second. Second year typing—Miss Mona Clink of Gaylord—first. Second year typing—Miss Franseth of East Jordan—second. First year shorthand—Miss Wagbo of East Jordan—first. No second place awarded. Second year shorthand—Miss Crouteral of Boyne City—first. Second year shorthand Petoskey—second.

Arithmetic has about the greatest value of all the subjects taken in school. You may take a course in cooking, but when you begin, you find that Arithmetic is needed in everything you make. Take for example a cake, and you wish to make an extra large cake. To do this you must use one and one-half of the recipe. Therefore it is impossible to divide the receipt in half without knowing how to go to it, which of course is done with the help of Arithmetic. The same thing would happen in sewing for your living. Because you must know the value of the goods you put in the garment, in order to sell it or charge the right price and get something for your labor, etc. Take for instance a man who can read and write. He does not care so much about a paper that he can read and not figure out how much difference there is in the stocks today and a week ago. Would it be wise to take some of those stocks or not? In keeping score you most likely would have some trouble because you can not do simple adding. If you were a broker and wanted to find out how much you were going to gain—you never could do it without arithmetic. Also in checking up notes you would be apt to have difficulty without your old friend arithmetic. Many people lose their jobs because of mistakes in their work. You could never hold a job in a bank or office. You could not be clerk or bookkeeper, etc. So don't drop your old friend altogether, but keep it up.

The following baseball games have been scheduled for this spring: May 5—Boyne City and East Jordan, at Boyne City.

E. E. Gallup state supervisor of Agricultural Education, visited the High School last Thursday. He gave a talk before the Agricultural Club in which he emphasized the point that the farmer of the near future would be a trained scientist. Friday morning Mr. Gallup addressed the High School.

The Seniors have been working hard to produce one of the best Annuals ever published. All the material will be gathered by Tuesday, and they will be on sale, Class Day at night.

The pupils of the High School enjoyed a vacation, Monday, May 1st. Many went fishing, and arbutus picking. They are making up the lost time by beginning school at eight o'clock and having seven classes a day.

We have been wandering if Mr. Gibbs had any trouble in getting his fish cleaned, which he caught, May first.

We hope that the pupils of other schools are as interested in the Radio Phone as the students of East Jordan. When the phone is installed we will be glad to welcome visitors.

Last Wednesday morning the first division of eight grade cooking, served the second division a breakfast at eight o'clock sharp.

The place cards were made by two girls, the names being written backwards. The favors were small bouquets of May flowers, tied with pink and white ribbon. The table was also decorated with May flowers. The table linens were brought by members of the class.

The breakfast consisted of the following:—First Course—Grapefruit. Second Course—Cereals. Third Course—Bacon, eggs, toast, coffee. Fourth Course—Baking powder biscuits, Maple syrup.

The guests of honor were Mrs. Blount and Miss Shipp.

The Boy's Cooking class entertained their mothers at a luncheon, Wednesday noon, May 3rd.

The Ninth Grade Cooking class entertained the High School teachers at a luncheon Thursday noon.

For the first time in four or five years East Jordan High School is to be represented by a Track Team. In the tryouts for the Petoskey meet which is this Saturday at Petoskey, some stars in the making were uncovered. Just what the team will do under fire is yet to be seen, but a fair showing against such opponents as Petoskey and Harbor Springs will be considered a victory this early in the season.

RADIO

PROGRESS OF RADIO THROUGH THE YEARS

Wireless Research Began Long Ago, But Development Has Been Swift Lately.

Wireless research started many years ago, as far back even as 1827. Even the radio telephone is not a recent perfection; rather it is that introduction to the layman of the human voice and music has suddenly popularized something that wireless men had thought a pastime or amusement. Here is the chronological record of wireless:

1827—It was found that the magnetic discharge from a leyden jar would magnetize a steel needle.

1831—Electro-magnetic induction was discovered between two entirely separate circuits by Michael Faraday.

1837—Cooke and Wheatstone of London, England, and Morse of the United States take out first patent for electric telegraph.

1838—K. A. Steinhell of Munich suggested that a system of wireless telegraphy could be established after his discovery of the use of the earth return.

1840—Joseph Henry (U. S. A.) produced the first high-frequency electric oscillations, and stated that the condenser discharge is oscillatory.

1842—Wireless experiments were made by S. F. B. Morse by electric conduction through water across Washington canal and across wide rivers.

1843—A wireless system for transatlantic communication was suggested.

1845—Water was used as a conducting medium in wireless experiments across a wide river.

1849—Intelligible signals were actually sent across a river 4,500 feet wide in India, but the cost was found prohibitive for commercial use.

1867—The electric waves that are now utilized in wireless telegraphy and telephony were predicted in an distance of 60 miles by radio signals.

1861—Radio communication started with five islands in the Hawaiian group. The first British ship is fitted with the wireless telegraph.

1902—Radiograph signals received aboard vessels at sea at 1,500 statute miles. Signals received from a distance of 2,000 miles.

1903—King Edward receives a radio message from President Roosevelt. High-power stations were ordered by the Italian government. First transatlantic radio message sent. Telegraphic news service for ships at sea is started. Marconi knighted in Russia.

1904—The first press message was sent across the sea.

1905—Patent suit started in New York between the Marconi and De Forest company.

Patent for horizontal directional aerial is taken out. This was a great step forward in long-distance work.

1906—International conference is held in Berlin, at which most of the countries of the world are represented.

1907—The use of steel disks for recording notes were successfully tested.

Radio stations in Ireland and Nova Scotia were opened for limited public service.

1908—Radio stations opened for unlimited public service between Great Britain and Canada.

1908—Steamship in collision with another off the coast of Florida succeeds in calling assistance by radio.

1910—Marconi receives messages 6,700 miles while on board ship going to South America.

Spanish radio company formed.

1911—Canadian government leased radio stations for 20 years.

1912—Radio distress signals from the Titanic bring assistance and save lives of 700 passengers.

1913—Tests were made between the Eiffel tower in France and the station at Washington. During the trip into Central Asia an explorer received his longitude and time signals from a distant radio station.

1914—Marconi and radio officials start test of wireless telephony between vessels of the Italian fleet. The test was continued between vessels on the high seas and voices were heard with clarity at a distance of 44 miles. One day radio telephony communication was kept up constantly for 12 hours. Uncommon Sense

BY-PRODUCTS

THE Standard Oil company has found a way to utilize all the residue from the distillation of petroleum. Gasoline, now one of the chief products of the concern was once a by-product. All the coal tar derivatives, from which many drugs and medicines are made, are by-products. So are paraffin, candles, and hundreds of other articles in every day use.

The Standard Oil company is a big concern. It has thousands of technically trained experts at work for it. It has plants all over the world—the biggest plants of the kind in existence.

Such an institution can well afford to go into the business of making by-products, and to expend a part of its almost limitless energies in getting all that is possible out of the crude oil which flows from its wells.

But the business of developing by-products is for a corporation, and a big one—not for an individual.

You may fancy that you can throw off by-products easily as you do your daily work. You may believe, if you are a bookkeeper that by spending a few nights writing moving picture scenarios you will be able to utilize all your brains, instead of part of them.

If you are a young professional man, with little to do, you may imagine that you can take up novel writing, or acting, or bridge playing as a side line, and thus get rich while you are waiting for success in your profession.

It is possible that you will get rich at one or the other of these things. But if you do, it will be because you have dropped your profession and devoted yourself to the by-product.

Anthony Hope, who wrote "The Prisoner of Zenda" was trained as a barrister, but he had no briefs, and wrote stories to while away the hours he was waiting for clients. He succeeded as a novelist, because he was born to write, but he stopped being a lawyer as soon as his first book was published.

In this world a man can learn to do one thing fairly well. The time he has is better spent on that one thing. Begin to scout around for by-products of your brain, and you will soon scatter your energies that you do nothing well.

If you want to write "novel" scenarios, write 'em, but don't try to keep a set of books at the same time. It can't be done. The expert accountants who are making big wages today were all satisfied to spend all their spare time learning how to keep books better.

The Friendly Path

By Walter I. Robinson

TOO MUCH PROFANITY

TOO often cursing is taken as a matter of course. Men in high positions are frequently expert in the use of profane words, and the influence of bad language has a bad effect on both the old and the young.

Much effort is being made to increase the use of better English, and along with this propaganda it would be well to preach considerably against the use of bad language.

Directly cursing, unless the name of the Master is taken in vain, may cause no great damage. But indirectly it does much harm. When the little folk hear their parents swearing, their respect for their elders is either lessened or else the youngsters begin using it themselves as a matter of course. Not infrequently we hear little shavers, hardly able to speak plainly, using language which would put many men and women to shame.

Pike county, Kentucky, recently honored the memory of its oldest citizen, Jesse E. Osborne. Much was said in praise of this departed citizen, who crossed the bar at the age of ninety-two years, and no lauder praise was heard than of his reputation for never having permitted a profane word to pass from his lips.

Judging from this event, one might assume that profanity is the rule rather than the exception. If this is the case, isn't it about time to call a halt? The old remedy, considered quite effective for curing profane habits, was to wash the boy's mouth with soap. But, from our observation, we are inclined to believe that it would be unfair to use such a remedy to stop youths from cursing. The cause too frequently rests with the parents who worry and complain because their offspring are devilish and almost beyond their control. A general mouth-washing of the elders probably would have greater effect.

Profane language is not beautiful. It does no good. It may be the stepping-stone to lives of crime which end in prison cells. For once the bars are lowered against small wrongs, the bigger wrongs are certain to be lurking near and crawl into one's life.

Less profanity would add to the joy of the world.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies — the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

MONEY IN THE HAND

NEXT to love and marriage, nothing interests the human race, taken as a whole, so much as the subject of the acquisition of wealth. One of the most common questions asked of a palmist is this: "Does my hand show whether I shall become rich or not?"

Of course, it must be understood that palmistry does not claim to be an exact science, foretelling the future and reading the past and present with absolute accuracy. We may examine the hands of many men and women who have inherited or have acquired wealth, and find therein, in all or nearly all of them, certain signs. But that does not mean infallibly that the same signs in other hands show the acquisition or possession of wealth.

A deep line across the second phalanx of the thumb means money acquired by marriage. A star on the same part of the thumb, in a woman's hand, means the same thing.

APPLY SULPHUR ON YOUR ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It never fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

address before the Royal Society in London, England.

1880—The sending of an electric current through earth was systematically studied by John Rowbridge of Harvard. It was found that signaling might be carried on over large distances between places not connected by wires.

1885—It was found that telephonic speech could be conveyed by induction over a space of quarter mile. This experiment took place in England.

1889—Electric waves were suggested as being particularly suitable for the sending of signals through fog.

1892—An instrument for the detection of electro-magnetic waves was discovered which was given the name of a "coherer."

1894—A scientist of Berlin signaled through three miles of water.

1895—High frequency waves excite curiosity of Senatore Marconi.

1896—First patent for practical wireless transmitting system is taken out in London by Marconi. Afterward, successful signaling was carried out over distances as great as one and one-quarter miles. Sir William Preece of the British postoffice system interested his cohorts in Marconi's wireless experiments.

1897—Marconi establishes communication between points four miles distant. Balloons were used to suspend antennae.

Marconi demonstrates his wireless system before the King of Italy, communicating with two Italian warships nine miles distant.

The first Marconi station is erected on the Isle of Wight and experiments conducted over a distance of 14 miles.

Near the end of the year the first floating wireless station was successfully operated.

1898—The first paid marconigram was sent from the Isle of Wight station.

1899—Reports made on lighthouse accident by radio. First French gunboat is fitted with radio apparatus. In Vienna communication between two balloons is established. New York Herald receives radio report of international yacht races. The British war office introduces Marconi apparatus into the South African battlefields.

1900—German vessel communicates a upon Germany August 4 and all private radio telephony and telephony suspended.

1915—Radio communication between America and Japan is completed. The stations were located at San Francisco and Tokyo with a relay station at Honolulu.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company succeeded in radio telephoning from Arlington station at Washington to Hawaii, a distance of nearly 5,000 miles.

Secretary Daniels of the United States navy transmitted telephonic messages from Washington to the Brooklyn navy yard.

1916—President Wilson and the minkado of Japan exchange messages over the new transpacific radio service, which is formally opened.

1917—Senatore Marconi visits the United States and aids greatly in recruiting for radio operators for the United States army.

1918—Wireless telephony progressed rapidly, being used to a great extent in the equipment of airplanes.

Several new long range stations were erected in the United States, it being claimed for one built at Annapolis, Md., that it was capable of communication at 4,000 miles. The United States government also opened a high-power station at Bordeaux.

In September of this year radio signals sent from a point 12,000 miles away were received in Sydney, Australia.

1919—With the exception of the three transatlantic flights—that of the U. S. NC-4, and the British flights of Alcock and Brown and the dirigible R-34, in which radio communication played an important part in keeping the ships of the air on their courses—no very great progress was made in radio telephony, although radio telephony was being pushed along quietly.

Restrictions upon amateur receiving and sending were lifted by the American government.

1920—This was the year of the radio telephone, more attention probably being paid to this branch of radio than to its older brother, telegraphy. Several broadcasting stations were opened.

1921—This year was another radio telephonic year. It was marked by the opening of numerous broadcasting stations.

The system is meeting with special favor among the bank's clients, especially with the foreigners at whose solicitation it was adopted, according to James Shackleton, assistant cashier, who believes that the time will come when the finger print, instead of a cross, will become the legal signature of persons unable to write their own names.

Revives Old Archery Art.
Hoquiam, Wash.—Wesley Evans has restored an ancient art in the North west. In the days before the coming of the white man the Indians obtained yew wood in the Cascade Mountains from which they made bows and arrows. Evans now makes the same pilgrimages to the woods, where he selects choice sticks for archery sets. He began the work as a pastime, but the fame of his yew wood articles spread and now he is compelled to employ help in his shop.

Long Distance Service Restored

EVERY important point in Michigan can again be reached by Long Distance. Poles and wires crushed by storm have been replaced sufficiently to meet demands of business.

It was an appalling task. Nearly 20,000 poles and 6,500 miles of circuits were destroyed, with tremendous losses in money.

But the people of the Telephone Company realized the dependence of the industrial and social welfare of every community on the wires and made every effort to restore service. Not a minute, night or day, did they relax their efforts.

Today, therefore, their first task—that of establishing emergency circuits—is finished. And they appreciate the patience and understanding of their difficulties shown by users of the Toll wires.

We are pleased to announce that Long Distance is again at your service.

Cornell Wood Board comes already Primed for painting

YOU will save the work and expense of a priming coat if you build your walls and ceilings of Cornell-Wood-Board instead of ordinary wallboard, plaster board or plaster. For Cornell comes "Mill-Primed." And no other wallboard has its fashionable "Oatmeal Finish" which has placed Cornell in highest favor with thousands of builders.

Cornell is rigid and fire-resisting, due to Cornell's "Triple-Sizing" process, which gives this board triple the ordinary protection against moisture, expansion, contraction, sound and change in temperature.

Easily put up with hammer and nails right to the joists and studding or over damaged plaster. Costs no more than inferior boards; get quotations and sample.

"The muffer in the box was your father's," she told him. "He had it on the day he disappeared. The other things," her voice choked a little, "are the things he must have had in his pockets. They've been lying in water and sand—"

He gazed at her. "I understand," he said after an instant. "You mean that they prove his death."

She assented gently, without speaking. As he approached the box, she drew back from it and slipped away into the next room. She walked up and down there, pressing her hands together. He must be looking at the things now, unrolling the muffer.

What would he be feeling as he saw them? Would he be glad, with that same gladness which had mingled with her own sorrow over Uncle Benny, that his father was gone—gone from his guilt and his fear and his disgrace? Or would he resent that death which thus left everything unexplained to him? He would be looking at the ring. That, at least, must bring more joy than grief to him. He would recognize that it must be his mother's wedding ring; if it told him that his mother must be dead, it would tell him that she had been married, or had believed that she was married!

Suddenly she heard him calling her. "Miss Sherrill!" his voice had a sharp thrill of excitement.

She hurried toward the sun room. She could see him through the doorway, bending over the card table with the things spread out upon its top in front of him.

"Yes."

He straightened; he was very pale. "Would coins that my father had in his pocket all have been more than twenty years old?"

She ran and bent beside him over the coins. "Twenty years!" she repeated. She was making out the dates of the coins now herself; the markings were eroded, nearly gone in some instances, but in every case enough remained to make plain the date.

"Eighteen-ninety—1894—1889," she made them out. Her voice hushed queerly. "What does it mean?" she whispered.

He turned over and re-examined the articles with hands suddenly steady. "There are two sets of things here," he concluded. "The muffer and paper of directions—they belonged to my father. The other things—it isn't six months or less than six months that they've lain in sand and water to become worn like this; it's twenty years. My father can't have had these things; they were somewhere else, or someone else had them. He wrote his directions to that person—after June twelfth, he said, so it was before June twelfth he wrote it; but we can't tell how long before. It might have been in February, when he disappeared; it might have been any time after that. But if the directions were written so long ago, why weren't the things sent to you before this? Didn't you have to wait to get them? Or—was it the instructions to send them that he didn't have? Or, if he had the instructions, was he waiting to receive word when they were to be sent? You thought these things proved my father was dead. I think they prove he is alive! Oh, we must think this out!"

He paced up and down the room; she sank into a chair, watching him. "The first thing that we must do," he said suddenly, "is to find out about the watch. What is the phone number of the telegraph office?"

She told him, and he went out to the telephone; she sprang up to follow him, but checked herself and merely waited until he came back.

"I've wired to Buffalo," he announced. "The Merchants' exchange, if it is still in existence, must have a record of the presentation of the watch."

"Then you'll stay here with us until an answer comes?"

"If we get a reply by tomorrow morning; I'll wait till then. If not, I'll ask you to forward it to me. I must see about the trains and get back to Frankfort. I can cross by boat from there to Manitowoc—that will be quickest. We must begin there, by trying to find out who sent the package."

She helped him put the muffer and the other articles into the box; she noticed that the wedding ring was no longer with them. He had taken that, then; it had meant to him all that she had known it must mean.

In the morning she was up very early; but Alan, the servants told her, had risen before she had and had gone out. The morning after the cool northern night, was chill. She slipped a sweater on and went out on the veranda.

After a man has "gone to the dogs," nearly everybody barks at him.

da, looking about for him. An iridescent haze shrouded the hills and the bay; in it she heard a ship's bell strike twice; then another struck twice—then another—and another—and another. The haze thinned as the sun grew warmer, showing the placid water of the bay on which the ships stood double. She saw Alan returning, and knowing from the direction from which he came that he must have been to the telegraph office, she ran to meet him.

"Was there an answer?" she inquired eagerly.

He took a yellow telegraph sheet from his pocket and held it for her to read.

"Watch presented Captain Caleb Stafford, master of propeller freighter Marvin Hatch for rescue of crew and passengers of sinking steamer Winnobago off Long point, Lake Erie."

She was breathing quickly in her excitement. "Caleb Stafford!" she exclaimed. "Why, that was Captain Stafford of Stafford and Ramsdell! They owned the Miwaka!"

"Yes," Alan said.

A great change had come over him since last night; he was under emotion so strong that he seemed scarcely to dare speak lest it master him—a leaping, exultant impulse it was, which he fought to keep down.

"What is it, Alan?" she asked.

"What is it about the Miwaka? You said you'd found some reference to it in Uncle Benny's house. What was it? What did you find there?"

"The man—" Alan swallowed and steeled himself and repeated—"the man I met in the house that night mentioned it. He seemed to think I was a ghost that had haunted Mr. Corvet—the ghost from the Miwaka; at least he shouted out to me that I couldn't save the Miwaka!"

"Save the Miwaka! What do you mean, Alan? The Miwaka was lost with all her people—officers and crew—no one knows how or where!"

"Save the Miwaka! What Do You Mean, Alan?"

"All except the one for whom the Drum didn't beat!"

"What's that?" Blood pricked in her cheeks. "What do you mean, Alan?"

"I don't know yet; but I think I'll soon find out."

"No; you can tell me more now, Alan. Surely you can. I must know. I have the right to know. Yesterday, even before you found out about this, you knew things you weren't telling me—things about the people you'd been seeing. They'd all lost people on the lakes, you said; but you found out more than that."

"They'd all lost people on the Miwaka!" he said. "All who could tell me where their people were lost; a few were like Jo Papo we saw yesterday, who knew only the year his father was lost; but the time always was the time that the Miwaka disappeared!"

"Disappeared!" she repeated. Her veins were prickling cold. What did he know, what could any one know of the Miwaka, the ship of which nothing ever was heard except the beating of the Indian Drum? She tried to make him say more; but he looked away now down to the lake.

"The Chippewa must have come in early this morning," he said. "She's lying in the harbor; I saw her on my way to the telegraph office. If Mr. Spearman has come back with her, tell him I'm sorry I can't wait to see him."

"When are you going?"

"Now."

She offered to drive him to Petoskey, but he already had arranged for a man to take him to the train.

She went to her room after he was gone and spread out again on her bed the watch—now the watch of Captain Stafford of the Miwaka—with the knife and coins of more than twenty years ago which came with it. The meaning of them now was all changed; she felt that; but what the new meaning might be could not yet come to her. Something of it had come to Alan; that, undoubtedly, was what had so greatly stirred him; but she could not yet resemble her ideas. Yet a few facts had become plain.

A maid came to say that Mr. Spearman had come up from his boat for breakfast with her and was downstairs. She went down to find Henry lounging in one of the great wicker chairs in the living room. He arose and came toward her quickly; but she halted before he could seize her.

"What's wrong, dear?"

"Alan Conrad has been here, Henry." "Has he? How was that?" "He told him while he watched her intently. He wired to Buffalo about the watch. He got a reply which he brought to me half an hour ago."

"Yes?"

"The watch belonged to Captain Stafford who was lost with the Miwaka, Henry."

He made no reply; but waited. "You may not have known that it was his; I mean, you may not have known that it was he who rescued the people of the Winnobago, but you must have known that Uncle Benny didn't."

"Yes; I knew that, Connie," he answered evenly.

"Then why did you let me think the watch was his and that he must be dead?"

"That's all's the matter? You had thought he was dead. I believed it was better for you—for every one—to believe that."

She drew a little away from him, with hands clasped behind her back, gazing intently at him. "There was some writing found in Uncle Benny's house in Astor street—a list of names of relatives of people who had lost their lives upon the lake. Wassaquan knew where those things were. Alan says they were given to him in your presence. Why didn't you tell me about that?"

He straightened as if with anger. "Why should I? Because he thought that I should? What did he tell you about those lists?"

"Nothing—except that his father had kept them very secretly; but he's found out they were names of people who had relatives on the Miwaka!"

"What?"

Recalling how her blood had run when Alan had told her that, Henry's whiteness and the following suffusion of his face did not surprise her.

"I told that fellow long ago not to start stirring these matters up about Ben Corvet, and particularly I told him that he was not to bring any of it to you. It's not a thing that a man like Ben covered up for twenty years till it drove him crazy is sure not to be a thing for a girl to know. Let it alone, I tell you!"

She stood flushed and perplexed, gazing at him. She never had seen him under stronger emotion.

"You misunderstood me once, Connie!" he appealed. "You'll understand me now!"

She had been thinking about that injustice she had done him in her thought—about his chivalry to his partner and former benefactor, when Uncle Benny was still keeping his place among men. Was Henry now moved, in a way which she could not understand, by some other obligation to the man who long ago had aided her? Had Henry hazarded more than he had told her of the nature of the thing hidden which, if she could guess it, would justify what he said?

She had made Alan promise to write her, if he was not to return, regarding what he learned; and a letter came to her on the fourth day from him in Manitowoc. The post office employees had no recollection, he said, of the person who had mailed the package; it simply had been dropped by some one into the receptacle for mailing packages of that sort. Alan, however, was continuing his inquiries.

She wrote to him in reply; in lack of anything more important to tell him, she related some of her activities and inquired about his. After she had written him thus twice, he replied, describing his life on the boats pleasantly and humorously; then, though she immediately replied, she did not hear from him again.

A new idea had seized Constance. Captain Caleb Stafford was named among the lost, of course; with him had perished his son, a boy of three. That was all that was said, and all that that was to be learned of him, the boy.

Alan had been three then. This was wild, crazy speculation. The ship was lost with all hands; only the Drum, believed in by the superstitious and the most ignorant, denied that. The Drum said that one soul had been saved. How could a child of three have been saved when strong men, to the last one, had perished? And, if he had been saved, he was Star's son. Why should Uncle Benny have sent him away and cared for him and then sent for him and, himself disappearing, leave all he had to—Stafford's son?

Or was he Stafford's son? Her thought went back to the things which had been sent—the things from a man's pockets with a wedding ring among them. She had believed that the ring cleared the mother's name; might it in reality only more involve it? Why had it come back like this to the man by whom, perhaps, it had been given? Henry's words came again and again to Constance. "It's a queer concern you've got for Ben. Leave it alone, I tell you!" He knew then something about Uncle Benny which might have brought on some terrible thing which Henry did not know but might guess? Constance went weak within. Uncle Benny's wife had left him, she remembered. Was it better, after all, to "leave it alone?"

A telegraph envelope addressed to her father was on the table in the hall. A servant told her the message had come an hour before, and that he had telephoned to Mr. Sherrill's office, but Mr. Sherrill was not in. There was no reason for her thinking that the message might be from Alan except his presence in her thoughts, but she went at once to the telephone and called her father. He was in now, and he directed her to open the message and read it to him.

"Have some one," she read aloud; she choked in her excitement at what came next—"Have some one who knew Mr. Corvet well enough to recognize him, even if greatly changed, meet Car ferry Number 25 Manitowoc Wednesday this week. Alan Conrad."

Her heart was beating fast. "Are you there?" she said into the phone.

"Yes."

"Whom shall you send?"

There was an instant's silence. "I shall go myself," her father said.

She hung up the receiver. Had Alan found Uncle Benny? He had found, apparently, some one whose resemblance to the picture she had showed him was marked enough to make him believe that person might be Benjamin Corvet; or he had heard of some one who, from the account he had received, he thought might be. She read again the words of the telegram. . . . "even if greatly changed" and she felt startling and terrifying warning in that phrase.

CHAPTER XIV

Old Burr of the Ferry.

It was in late November and while the coal carrier Pontiac, on which he was serving as lookout, was in Lake Superior that Alan first heard of Jim Burr. The name spoken among some other names in casual conversation by a member of the crew, stirred and excited him; the name James Burr, occurring on Benjamin Corvet's list, had borne opposite it the legend "All disappeared; no trace," and Alan, whose investigations had accounted for all others whom the list contained, had been able regarding Burr only to verify the fact that at the address given no one of this name was to be found.

He questioned the oiler who had mentioned Burr. The man had met Burr one night in Manitowoc with other men, and something about the old man had impressed both his name and image on him; he knew no more than that. At Manitowoc—the place from which Captain Stafford's watch had been sent to Constance Sherrill and where Alan had sought for, but had failed to find, the sender! Had Alan stumbled by chance upon the one whom Benjamin Corvet had been unable to trace?

Alan could not leave the Pontiac and go at once to Manitowoc to seek Burr; for he was needed where he was. It was fully a week later and after the Pontiac had been laden again and had repassed the length of Lake Superior that Alan left the vessel at Sault Ste. Marie and took the train for Manitowoc.

The little lake port of Manitowoc, which he reached in the late afternoon, was turbulent with the lake season's approaching close. Alan inquired for the seamen's drinking place, where his informant had met Jim Burr; following the directions he received he made his way along the river bank until he found it.

The proprietor knew old Jim Burr—yes. Burr was a wheelman on Car ferry Number 25. He was a lakeman, experienced and capable; that fact, some months before, had served as introduction for him to the frequenters of this place. When the ferry was in harbor and his duties left him idle, Burr came up and waited there, occupying always the same chair. He never drank; he never spoke to others unless they spoke first to him, but then he talked freely about old days on the lakes, about ships which had been lost and about men long dead.

Alan decided that there could be no better place to interview old Burr than here; he waited therefore, and in the early evening the old man came in. He was a slender but muscularly built man seeming about sixty-five, but he might be considerably younger or older than that. His hair was completely white; his nose was thin and sensitive; his face was smoothly placid, emotionless, contented; his eyes were queerly clouded, deepset and intent.

Those whose names Alan had found on Corvet's list had been of all ages, young and old; but Burr might well have been a contemporary of Corvet

All that was known definitely about old Burr on the ferry, it appeared, was that he had joined the vessel in the early spring. Before that—they did not know; he might be an old lakeman who, after spending years ashore, had returned to the lakes for a livelihood.

The next morning, Alan approached old Burr in the crew's quarters and tried to draw him into conversation again about himself; but Burr only stared at him with his intent and oddly introspective eyes and would not talk upon this subject. A week passed; Alan, established as a lookout now on Number 25 and carrying on his duties, saw Burr daily and almost every hour; his watch coincided with Burr's watch at the wheel—they went on duty and were relieved together. Yet better acquaintance did not make the old man more communicative; a score of times Alan attempted to get him to tell more about himself, but he evaded Alan's questions and, if Alan persisted, he avoided him.

on the lakes. Alan moved over and took a seat beside the old man.

"You're from Number 25?" he asked, to draw him into conversation.

"Yes."

"I've been working on the carrier Pontiac as lookout. She's on her way to tie up at Cleveland, so I left her and came on here. You don't know whether there's a chance for me to get a place through the winter on Number 25?"

Old Burr reflected. "One of our boys has been talking of leaving. I don't know when he expects to go. You might ask."

"Thank you; I will. My name's Conrad—Alan Conrad."

He saw no recognition of the name in Burr's reception of it; but he had not expected that. None of those on Benjamin Corvet's list had had any knowledge of Alan Conrad or had heard the name before.

Alan moved over and took a seat beside the old man.

"You're from Number 25?" he asked, to draw him into conversation.

"Yes."

"Yes."

Alan was silent, watching the old man; Burr, silent too, seemed listening to the conversation which came to them from the tables near by, where men were talking of cargoes, and of ships and of men who worked and sailed upon them.

"How long have you been on the lakes?" Alan inquired.

"All my life."

"Do you remember the Miwaka?"

Old Burr turned abruptly and studied Alan with a slow scrutiny which seemed to look him through and through; yet while his eyes remained fixed on Alan suddenly they grew blank. He was not thinking now of Alan, but had turned his thoughts within himself.

"I remember her—yes. She was lost in '95," he said. "In '95," he repeated.

"Did you know Benjamin Corvet?" Alan asked.

Old Burr stared at him uncertainly. "I know who he is, of course."

"You never met him?"

"No."

"Did you receive a communication from him some time this year—a request to send some things to Miss Constance Sherrill at Harbor Point?"

"I never heard of Miss Constance Sherrill. To send what things?"

"Several things—among them a watch which had belonged to Captain Stafford of the Miwaka."

Old Burr got up suddenly and stood gazing down at Alan. "A watch of Captain Stafford's?—no," he said agitatedly. "No!"

He moved away and left the place; and Alan sprang up and followed him.

He was not, it seemed probable to Alan now, the James Burr of Corvet's list; at least Alan could not see how he could be that one. Among the names of the crew of the Miwaka Alan had found that of a Frank Burr, and his inquiries had informed him that this man was a nephew of the James Burr who had lived near Port Corby and had "disappeared" with all his family. Old Burr had not lived at Port Corby—at least, he claimed not to have lived there; he gave another address and assigned to himself quite different connections. For every member of the crew of the Miwaka there had been a corresponding, but different name upon Corvet's list—the name of a close relative. If old Burr was not related to the Burr on Corvet's list, what connection could he have with the Miwaka, and why should Alan's questions have agitated him so? Alan would not lose sight of old Burr until he had learned the reason for that.

He followed, as the old man crossed the bridge and turned to his left among the buildings on the river front. Burr's figure, vague in the dusk, crossed the railroad yards and made its way to where a huge black bulk, which Alan recognized as the ferry, loomed at the waterside. He disappeared aboard it. Alan, following him, gazed about.

A long, broad, black boat the ferry was, almost four hundred feet to the tall, bluff bow.

Alan thrilled a little at his inspection of the vessel. He had not seen close at hand before one of these great craft which, throughout the winter, brave ice and storm after all—or nearly all—other lake boats are tied up. He had not meant to apply there when he questioned old Burr about a berth on the ferry; he had used that merely as a means of getting into conversation with the old man. But now he meant to apply; for it would enable him to find out more about old Burr.

No berth on the ferry was vacant yet but one soon would be, and Alan was accepted in lieu of the man who was about to leave; his wages would not begin until the other man left, but in the meantime, he could remain aboard.

BE RID OF THAT ACHE

If you are a sufferer with lame back, backache, dizziness, nervousness and kidney disorders, why don't you try the remedy that your own neighbors recognize?

Mrs. Wm. Harrington, East Jordan, says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for I have used them with very beneficial results. I was troubled considerably with dull, nagging backache, and distressing pain through my kidneys. My kidneys were very irregular in action. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they helped me wonderfully by relieving the backache and correcting the action of my kidneys. I have used Doan's in the past and they have always given me the best of relief and satisfaction." (Statement given on Aug. 3, 1903.)

On April 23, 1922, Mrs. Harrington added: "I haven't had occasion to use a kidney medicine since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me years ago. The cure proved to be complete in all respects and has stood the test of time. I recommended Doan's in 1909 and I am happy in saying that I am as strong for them as ever. I gladly confirm the state made in that year."

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed with Sulphur Compound, it Darkens so Naturally No Harsh Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. It's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is recommended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

KEEP ON HIGH ROAD

IN A recent newspaper interview, Charles M. Schwab, one of the notable leaders in the steel industry in which he began as a boy of seventeen, forty-one years ago, said, "I would rather lose money month after month in my plant than make it by any but the highest methods in the world."

Mr. Schwab went to work to learn the business and he learned it thoroughly by mastering every detail as he proceeded, scorning a tired back and soiled hands.

He credits his rise to loyalty to his employer and states that success came from constant application to the subject in view.

Here in a few simple words, for those who will take time to read, will be found the formula for the attainment of success.

And here too is embodied the rule which every person must accept as his own,—a hard and fast law as that of the Medes and Persians, unflinching in results and bounteous in reward.

Let the indifferent young man and woman, inclined to grumble and shirk duty, ponder the wonderful meaning of "highest methods," and "loyalty to employer."

The five words may be likened to hinges upon which the great door of success swings wide open at the unrelenting push of the hand and brain that refuse to be denied entrance.

Whenever you go to work in sombre days, remember that there is within you a force, which, if properly applied, will enable you to open this same door and take your place among the leaders.

And this force must be called up by you alone.

Nobody else can do it for you. Have faith in yourself. Have no fear, for fear is the rock on which humans fall and go tumbling into the valley of despair.

No man or woman with fear in the heart is capable of clear discernment, sure judgment or superior accomplishment.

Keep your mind on the great and splendid achievements of others, and those you want to do yourself. Be loyal and hold steadfastly to highest methods.

Preserve an attitude of courage, courteousness and good cheer.

Avoid the malcontents, the grumblers, the sulkers and shirkers, the makers of wry faces and the provokers of quarrels.

Keep on the high road and in the sunshine.

Move straight in the right direction and some morning you will find that success and honor are speeding towards you with open arms.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

FLORA

FLORA is as springtime a name as any maid could wish. It means flowers, of course, and commemorates the goddess of flowers, who was so called from the Latin name for spring blooms, "flor."

Flora came into use through her masculine counterpart, curious to relate. From the goddess was evolved Florus, chiefly memorable as the name of the procurator whose merciless rule drove the Jews to their last rebellion, and Flora was subsequently derived as the feminine of the former name.

The first Flora was found in Spain. She was the daughter of Count Julian who was much disliked and is recorded in Spanish ballads as "la Cava," the wicked.

The martyrdom of a Spanish maiden called Flora by the Moors in 851 redeemed the reputation of Flora as a feminine name and its use became widespread in Spain; whence it penetrated France as Florie. Scotland, which has an extraordinary fondness for flower names, adopted it, and soon it was brought to England where it still enjoys the greatest and most widespread vogue.

The emerald, symbol of springtime, is Flora's talismanic gem. It promises its wearer keen intelligence, gentle charm and prophetic vision. With an emerald in her hand, she is said to have such perfect psychic power as to be able to foreshadow future events. Wednesday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number. The Hawthorne, England's loveliest spring symbol, is her flower.

$24 NOW AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNING

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR REPORT SAYS COST OF LIVING DROPPED 25 PER CENT.

STILL ABOVE PRE-WAR SCALE

But Wages and Living Costs Are More in Line With Average Normal Conditions.

Washington—The cost of living, which has fallen off nearly 25 per cent in Michigan and throughout the country in the last 15 months, is declining faster than wages, it is indicated in reports to the department of labor.

Twenty-four dollars per week is the average now being earned by workers in industrial plants. This is practically the same as a year ago, despite wage reductions in 1921. The actual figures are taken to indicate that wage reductions have affected a much smaller number of workers than was supposed.

The average weekly earning capacity is now approximately the same as a year ago for a majority of those employed in the following industries:

Manufacture of automobiles, cotton, hosiery and underwear, men's clothing, leather, boots and shoes, paper and cigars.

This report is based on returns from a large number of plants in all sections of the country, and cannot be taken to apply to the earnings of workers in any single locality or establishment.

The reports show a material reduction, however, in the average earnings of workers in the iron and steel industry, in the building and repair of cars, and in the manufacture of silk. A year ago the average weekly earning capacity in these industries was $32. The average is now $24, or more in line with the earning capacity of workers in industry in general.

The indication that wage scale rates have been brought more into line with another in the principal industries is a process for which business men and economists have been agitating for many months.

Under the present alignment of wages, workers in one industry can better afford to buy the products of their co-workers in other lines of manufacture. This is a condition that should tend to help the country make more speedy progress in climbing out of depression, according to the reasoning of government officials.

Average earnings of workers in all lines are still very much above pre-war standards, the returns show, although radically lower than during the period when wages were at the peak.

MR. FOX'S STORY

MR. FOX knew he was in a tight place, for he had seen Mr. Coon running for a tree ahead of him, though he was well aware that Mr. Dog was after him and had not seen Mr. Coon at all.

He was in a tight place because he knew perfectly well that Mr. Coon had watched the chase from the tree, and saw him tumbled over by Mr. Dog, roll down the smooth, steep hill and land at the bottom in a muddy pond.

"I must think up some sort of story to tell tonight at the Four Paws club," said Mr. Fox as he sat by his kitchen stove drying himself.

"Of course, I should have kept away from that hill," said Mr. Fox, "but I was thinking of the fun I could have with Mr. Dog, for it was such a good morning for a race."

When Mr. Coon Came in

Mr. Fox sighed as he thought how his plan had failed, and how he had run down the smooth hill, and Mr. Dog, being an exceptionally good runner, had caught up to him, and was running so fast he could not stop, and bump he went against Mr. Fox, tumbling him over.

But Mr. Dog did not tumble; he kept on his feet, and went right on running; he couldn't stop then, but when Mr. Fox rolled into the muddy pond Mr. Dog was running toward him from the other side of the pond.

Of course, Mr. Fox did not wait for him. Oh, no; he picked himself up and off he bounded, and where Mr. Dog went he did not know, but he hoped he had found Mr. Coon in the tree.

He was pretty sure he didn't and so he was trying now as he sat by the fire to think up a story to tell before Mr. Coon could tell what he saw, and have the laugh on him with all the other members of the Four Paws club.

As soon as his coat was dry Mr. Fox started off for the club to be there ahead of Mr. Coon, for he had thought of a story to tell, explaining just how it all happened.

As each member arrived Mr. Fox would say, "Let me tell you of the fun I had this morning with Mr. Dog." He was just telling Mr. Possum about it when Mr. Coon came into the club, and this is what he heard:

"It was one of the finest mornings you ever saw for a chase," began Mr. Fox, "so I let Mr. Dog catch sight of me just as I was leaving the barnyard. He came after me, of course."

"I led him a chase for a while, and then I wanted to go home so I happened to flunk of a smooth, steep hill, and I made for it. When I had Mr. Dog running good and fast I just crouched close to the ground and over me leaped Mr. Dog going at such a rate of speed he could not stop."

"My, it was funny, and I laughed so hard I just rolled over and down that hill!"

"Why did you roll into the muddy pond if you did it all on purpose?" interrupted Mr. Coon.

"Oh, you saw the fun?" asked Mr. Fox with a very innocent expression on his face. "Wasn't it the funniest thing you ever saw or heard of?"

"Y-e-s," replied Mr. Coon, who knew it was no use telling it as he saw it, "but the funniest thing to me is the way you tell it."

ABUSING HOSPITALITY

IT IS the height of bad manners to try to drag business into your social activities. But some young men realize this only after they find that they have queered themselves with friends and acquaintances by not having learned this in time.

This does not mean that a man's friends and his social position may not and do not very often stand him in good stead when it comes to building up business or profession. The young lawyer, for instance, may so impress his friends and their friends whom he meets at their houses with his honesty and shrewdness that when they happen to need the services of a lawyer they naturally turn to him. Or more often they become personally fond of him and turn any professional business his way that they can, simply through a desire to see him succeed. So often a doctor builds up a practice through the influence of friends and acquaintances.

But it would be quite another matter for a young lawyer when at the house of a friend in any way to attempt to gain the patronage of any other of the guests.

One young man I know, who is having an uphill time gaining his professional education, was persuaded by the promoters of a stock-selling enterprise that he could sell enough stock in the evening among his friends to pay all his educational expenses. Convinced of the merits of the various sorts of stock that this enterprise is promoting, this young man never misses a chance when he is invited to the house of a friend to sell stock either to his host or to one of the other guests. He even tried to persuade a young woman with whom he had just been dancing that it would be to her advantage to invest some of her savings in one of these ventures in which he was interested.

Needless to say this young man is not asked to so many houses as he used to be and if he does not mend his manners he will find himself really taboo in the little circles where he once enjoyed an enviable popularity.

CROKER WILL IGNORE CHILDREN

Former Tammany Hall Boss Leaves Fortune to Young Widow.

New York—Richard Croker cut off his four children without a cent. An estate valued at more than $3,000,000 will go to the young Indian princess, widow of the former leader of Tammany hall.

Richard Croker, Jr., eldest of the Croker children, in announcing this Sunday at his home here, added that when his father died at Glencairn, Ireland, April 29, all his property had passed into the control of the young woman he married in 1914, six weeks after the death in Austria of the mother of his children.

Semenoff Defies U. S. Court.

New York—General Gregorie Semenov, former Ataman of the Cossacks, got into more trouble with American courts when he refused to answer questions before Bankruptcy Referee Olney. David W. Kahn, counsel for creditors of the Youvavete Home and Foreign Trading company, moved that he be held in contempt of court. The general was being asked about deposits of money in Japan and Chita, Siberia, when his attorney advised him not to answer.

A lot of good people who "can't get ahead in the world," will be found leading the parade in the next.

SUGGEST FARM CREDITS CHANGE

Director of Finance Corporation Also Asks Time Extension.

Washington—Legislation to provide six permanent remedies for defects in the agricultural credit system of the country was recommended to President Harding Sunday by Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, in a report based upon his recent survey of conditions in the West.

Pending enactment of the proposed legislation and the erection of similar machinery for its administration, Meyer recommended that the Federal Reserve Board be authorized during which the corporation should make loans be extended to January 1, 1923.

Why Not?

It was Memorial day. The whole village was out at the cemetery cleaning away a year's growth of briars and weeds and decorating the graves. One woman was busy pointing out to a stranger the places where different ones were buried. She seemed to be in the whole graveyard, and the boy was listening to every word she finally inquired: "Mother, where is my little grave?"
