Clarence Bowman Badly Injured

While Skidding Logs On Lumber Co. Bank.

Clarence Bowman was pinned beneath a heavy hardwood log, Tuesday afternoon, receiving a broken left arm between the elbow and wrist, and internal injuries which are serious. He was working with a team on the big bank of E. J. L. Co., logs just south of the city. He had just started to release a log at the bottom of the skid when a top hardwood log jarred loose rolling down upon him and pinning him beneath. Other logs, loosened, rolled around him. Members of the crew immediately came to his assistance and found the log across his chest. Mr. Bowman was unconscious. The log was removed and he was taken to his home on North Main St. A physician was summoned, and all aid possible was given him. On Thursday Dr. Armstrong of Charlevoix was in consultation. A thorough examination was made, but just what the internal injuries are is hard to predict. The physicians are of the opinion that a change in his condition will take place by this Friday. At this writing, it is hopeful.

PAID TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF GENERAL U. S. GRANT

The patriotic organization of the Civil War Veterans and the Womans Relief Corps, united on the afternoon of April 27th in honoring the memory of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant on the 100th anniversary of his birth. A wonderful banquet was served at the noon hour by the ladies and about seventy five members and guests partook.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the High School orchestra. Mrs. Zerwekh and Mrs. Swafford were the reception committee.

Mr. William Harrington Com. of the post had charge of the afternoon exercises. His opening remarks and his clever way of introducing the speakers prove that the boys of 61-64 are still full of pep and ginger.

Mr. J. Mikula was the first speaker and his address was very interesting and instructive, at the close of his remarks he presented each soldier with a Grant half dollar as a souvenir of the occasion.

Atty. E. N. Clink was the next called on and gave an interesting history of Grant and related many entertaining incidents of Grant's life. He especially commended his "stick to itness."

Mayor Dickens, in a few well chosen remarks, commended the G. A. R. and the Woman's Relief Corps and in behalf of the Legion extended respect and cooperation.

Many others were called on and responded with a few words of patriotism. The G. A. R. and Woman's Relief Corps wish to thank those whose assistance made this pleasant occasion possible.

BEVERIDGE BEATS NEW IN INDIANA PRIMARY

Indianapolis—The political comeback of former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who was among the progressive party leaders in 1912, was registered by a majority of about 20,000 votes, in which Beveridge defeated Senator Harry S. New for the Republican nomination of United States Senator for the November election. Former Governor Samuel M. Ralston won the Democratic nomination and will oppose Mr. Beveridge at the November election.

DEATH TAKES HENRY P. DAVISON

Financier Was Widely Known as Red Cross Head During War.

Glencove, Long Island—Henry P. Davison, member of J. P. Morgan & Co. and a power among international bankers, died May 6 while on the operating table in his palatial home, "Peacock Point." Death came while Mr. Davison was partially under the effects of ether. The operation was for the removal of a brain tumor. This was the second operation that he had undergone for the trouble within a few months. He was in his fifty-ninth year. Close friends estimate that the financier left an estate of about $10,000,000. He owned a large amount of life insurance, but the figure has not been ascertained. Mr. Davison's public benefactions were large.

French Musician.
The purple thrush, a bird of glistening, deep, carmine plumage, is an excellent musician, singing a rich, rolling, well-sustained song, says the American Forestry Magazine. This species has a decided fondness for buds of various kinds, and may often be seen nibbling the catkins of the poplars.

Mothers' Day, May 14th

A Proclamation by the Governor.

Following the beautiful custom with which we have become familiar in recent years, the time has come to name a day to be known as Mothers' Day, a day whose observance shall honor the memory of our departed mothers and pay a tribute of gratitude and affection to those who are still with us. In the watchful, tender care which guided our earliest footsteps, in the constant planning for our welfare and our happiness, in the unflinching love that has blessed us all through the years up to manhood and womanhood and that still blesses and cheers us, though it be but a dear memory, in these things we find abundant reason for humble and grateful acknowledgment of the debt we owe our mothers. The very name of mother is a synonym for love and devotion and willing sacrifice.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I do hereby designate and proclaim and I call upon our people, both old and young, to gather in their several places of worship and take part in services appropriate to the day.

And let absent sons and daughters take this occasion to visit the mother in the old home, or where such a visit is impossible, let them send a message of cheer and greeting.

In accordance with a resolution of the Congress of the United States, I further request the people of Michigan on the day aforesaid to display the United States flag in their homes and in other suitable places, as a fitting expression of their desire to pay homage to American motherhood.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this Twenty-seventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two, and of the Common wealth the eighty-sixth.

ALEX J. GROESBECK, Governor.

SAYS DETECTIVES KIDNAPPED HIM

BRITISH WAR HERO DECLARES TEXAS SENATOR PUT MEN ON HIS TRAIL.

EMBASSY WILL SIFT CHARGES

Love Affair Between Senator's Daughter and Youth Given as Cause for Attempted Deportation.

Bloomfield, N. J.—Alec Robertson the young English war hero who says Burns detectives "kidnaped" him because the daughter of United States Senator Culberson, of Texas, returned his love, prepared to go to Washington and tell his story to officials of the British embassy.

Robertson has pledged himself not to involve 21-year-old Mary Culberson in any litigation which may be attended by publicity, but he says he feels it his duty as a British subject, to do as the embassy staff wishes. He has received a letter asking him to present himself in Washington immediately.

The letter from the British embassy also asks an explanation of why he did not respond to communications addressed to him by mail and wire during the time he spent in Boston with three Burns detectives, awaiting the departure of a vessel aboard which he had agreed to sail for South America.

These communications, Robertson says, he never received. In his first story, he told of being transferred to much more modest quarters in the New Richmond hotel after a night in the exclusive Adams house, one of Boston's finest hostels, and he now believes the wires was made to keep letters and switch from Washington out of his hands.

Mrs. Mary T. Andrews, in whose home here Robertson is visiting, is the person who took the initiative in halting the deportation by agreement of the youthful ex-Tommy.

Robertson already has told of having stopped in Washington to see Mary Culberson while on the way from Texas, where he had met her, to start on a new job he secured in Syracuse, N. Y. It now develops, according to Robertson's friends, that the youthful "ineligible" was treated by private detectives from the moment he started north from Dallas. Presumably Miss Culberson's parents knew of the meeting of the young couple within a very short time after they had greeted each other.

ONE DEAD, FIVE HURT IN RIOT

Rock Battle Between Negro Workers and Strikers Proves Fatal.

Atlanta, Ga.—Dan Walton, 18 years old, is dead, two other white men and one Negro are believed to be wounded fatally and two others were injured seriously as the result of a riot in the yard office of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad here Sunday afternoon.

The shooting resulted from a rock battle between several Negroes employed by the railroad and a number of white men, officials stated. Charlie Hunt, a Negro porter in the yard office, was reproached by the white men for working for the road during the strike, police asserted and when he answered impudently the rock battle resulted.

J. H. PATTERSON DIES ON TRAIN

Founder of National Cash Register Co. Victim of Heart Attack.

Atlantic City—John H. Patterson, founder and chairman of the board of directors of the National Cash Register company, Dayton, Ohio, died suddenly Sunday aboard a train bound for this city.

Patterson was stricken with a heart attack and died before medical assistance could reach him. He was seated in a chair chatting with his valet, his only companion, when as the train passed through Kirkwood, Camden county, he suddenly fell unconscious.

THIEF MAY SERVE FIFTY YEARS

Several Charges Placed Against Man Who Stole Cigarettes.

New York—Fifty years imprisonment for the theft of a package of cigarettes is a possibility facing Frank Lynch. He pointed a revolver at the head of Irving Greene and robbed him of all he possessed—the cigarettes.

The grand jury has indicted him for: Robbery in the first degree; assault in the first degree; grand larceny in the first degree; criminally receiving stolen goods.

The maximum sentence for the offense is 50 years.

Man Stalls Home in Paris.

Pasadena, Calif.—Somewhere in Pasadena is a thief who loves a home so much that he is stealing to get one. For weeks he has been collecting the component parts. For some time hardly a night went by that some small quantity of building material—a door, a window or a bath tub—was not stolen from some building under construction. This—indicating, he was putting in his sidewalk—came thefts of cement. And their shrubs and plants were stolen.

Widows Exercise Old Right.

Eight widows in the town of Auxerre, France, are to celebrate the five hundredth anniversary of an act of King Charles VII, decreeing that eight widows in that particular village shall always have rent free. A member of Charles' suite, who was wounded at the battle of Cravant, was nursed and cured by eight widows, and he provided for his nurses in his mansion in Auxerre. Later, Charles added the provision that the house should forever be the refuge of eight widows.

Dickens' Gorgeous Attire.

Among English authors, says "Beaumont" in the Daily Express, London, England, Dickens was probably the most gorgeous dresser. He used to go down to the office of Household Words, when editor, wearing a bright green waistcoat and a vivid scarlet tie partially concealed by a sky-blue coat with red cuffs.

REAL PIONEERS LEAVE EAST JORDAN

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Price came to this County when Charlevoix County was a dense forest, when only the blazed trail marked the section lines, and the ox team and wagon the conveyance of travel.

Mr. Price came to Michigan from Canada in 1868, stopping a short time at Port Huron. From Port Huron he made the trip to Charlevoix by stage up through the eastern portion of the state in 1869. He worked for the Charlevoix Lumber Co., as engineer on a tug which they owned and was used to gather the rafted logs on Pine Lake and the Arm, often also, carrying passengers up the lake to Advance and Boyne City—there only hamlets—beside the lake in the dense forest.

Mrs. Price, then Miss Mary Steele, had two married brothers and a married sister, who, at the close of the Civil War had come to Northern Michigan and homesteaded in Eveline township; and it was to visit her brothers and sister that brought Miss Steele to Charlevoix County. She visited them in the summer of 1889. The boats plying the Great Lakes could not dock at Charlevoix only in calm weather and when Miss Steele was ready to return to her home in Manitowish she was obliged to wait in Charlevoix for a boat, while there she met Mr. Price and from that meeting a book could be written. Miss Steele taught school that year in Wisconsin and the next fall Mr. Price went to Wisconsin and brought back with him the girl bride of 18 years, who had courage enough to come back to Northern Michigan and become one of Northern Michigan Pioneers. The sister and her husband returned to Wisconsin and Mr. and Mrs. Price located on the farm formerly homesteaded by them. They lived on this farm until about 14 years ago, when they moved to their home on Upper Main-st., East Jordan, which they are now leaving to live in Lansing near their children, who have established homes in that city.

It seemed but a fitting thing to do that on Wednesday evening, April 26th about forty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ekstrom to bid farewell to these long time friends. A delicious lunch was served, old fashioned games played, songs sung and plenty of music helped to make the occasion one long to be remembered by all present.—By One Who Was There.

SAYS ALL SHOULD LIVE TO 100

Health Officer Says It Is Your Fault If You Don't.

New York—It is your own fault if you fail to be 100 years old, according to Dr. Royal S. Copeland, New York commissioner of health.

In an address before the Rotary club, Dr. Copeland said there was no reason why every man and woman in the United States should not live to be 100.

There are 3,500 people in the country over 100 years of age, he said.

"A man 50 years of age who is 50 pounds overweight has lessened his length of life 50 per cent," said Dr. Copeland. "This has been proven by statistics of life insurance companies after studying 500,000 policy holders' span of life."

RUSSIAN PLOT BARED IN PARIS

The espionage scheme, they declare, involves 211 operatives, and has ramifications in Brest, Lorient, Toulon and also at powder factories in the center of France, and arsenals in the vicinity of Paris.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

BASEBALL DOPE

Mr. Snellenberger Gives Us A Few of His Baseball Notes.

This article contains compact solutions of problems that the baseball player is called upon to solve instantaneously many times in every game. It should be remembered that these are general rules and may be taken as an absolute correct foundation for playing the game. Some of the rules must be changed to some extent to fit all stages of a game, but generally speaking, they are followed by all classes of players from the Major Leagues to the High School.

FIELDING

1 This is one of the most important features in baseball. Every man in the game should expect every pitched ball to be hit to himself and should know what he is going to do with the ball before the batter takes his position in the box. By observing this rule, players will never be caught asleep when the ball is hit to them.

2 Start fast to get under outfield flies as soon as possible, and always catch the ball, when possible, in a position to return it to the infield immediately; if to the plate, always try to throw so it will be received on the first bound.

3 On all hits over the outfield, the nearest fielder should get the ball, another fielder should receive his throw, backed up either by the shortstop or second baseman.

4 With one out or no out, a runner on third base, who, if he runs, will tie or win the game and the batter hits a long foul fly ball, the fielder should not catch the ball.

5 If well in the lead, don't pull the infield in with a man on third base with one or no one out. Allow a runner for an out if necessary.

6 With your opponent's baserunner caught between bases, always drive him back to the base from which he came as fast as you can make him run and when 15 or 20 feet from the base, throw the ball. Try to catch him with as few throws as possible, unless the opposing pitcher is running. He should be kept running as long as possible.

7 It is important that outfielders should practice at least 75 per cent of their time on long fly balls over their head.

8 When backing up a play, always play at least 5 ft. away from the one you are backing up.

9 On all ground balls hit to the right field, the pitcher should cover first base, never forget to tell the first baseman that you will do this. This play should become second nature to the pitcher, as it allows the first baseman to field every thing within his reach with the confidence that the pitcher will cover first base to complete the play.

10 With a man on second, the batter makes a hit and baserunner tries to score from second, the pitcher should get in line of the throw to the plate and about 60 ft. from the plate. If the catcher can decide that the throw will not catch the baserunner at the plate, he should tell the pitcher to cut off the throw and either catch the batter at second or prevent him from getting to second. The first baseman should cover first base. With a man on first base and a base hit to any field and the runner tries to go to third base, the shortstop should place himself as pitcher was instructed above and if told by the third baseman to take the throw he should endeavor to retire the batter going to second or hold him on first base.

11. On fast men, play the left side of the infield a little closer in than they usually play. Also on left handed hitters, play closer in. Infielders should use judgment in placing themselves, always remembering that they must have sufficient time to retire batters at first base if they field the ball. Never play too close in on a man who never bunts or on a man who cannot run fast. With very few exceptions, a man will not bunt who has two strikes called on him.

Batting and Base Running next week.

The man who never is sure of himself expects everybody else to be sure of him.

Everybody knows that the greatest fault of humanity is that it is human.

Of all pests the worst is the man who fears those about him won't know how wise he is if he ever speaks well of anything.

A young girl demands of life ROMANCE, but later she is willing to accept the part of it remaining after the first two and last two letters are removed.

FAST CAUSES WOMAN'S DEATH

Believed That Lack of Food Would Cure Stomach Trouble.

New York—Miss Ida Pepe, 35 years old, Bronx milliner, died in a hospital of starvation, the result, the police assert, of a self-imposed fast over a period of eight months, which she believed would cure her of stomach trouble. Miss Pepe began fasting on the recommendation of a physician, the police say, and though she slowly lost weight and strength, maintained her faith in the treatment. For long periods of time she ate nothing and drank only water and orange juice. Last Sunday she was removed to the hospital in a state of coma and died after futile efforts of physicians to revive her. Medical Examiner Riegelman, of Bronx County, pronounced her death due to starvation.

Ancient Love Letter. People preserved their love letters as carefully 2,000 years ago as today. At Pompeii an epistle was found addressed to a gladiator: "Are you Apollo in the body of Hercules? I don't know, but to me you are a god."
Always Something to Worry Over. Jud Tunkins says the only trouble about trying to be tactful is that your delicate and considerate silence is liable to make some ruffian imagine he is getting away with something.

On deck, one night, listening while old Burr talked, excitement suddenly seized Alan. Burr claimed to be an Englishman born in Liverpool. He had been, he said, a seaman in the British navy; he had been present at the shelling of Alexandria; later, because of some difficulty, which he glossed over, he had deserted and had come to "the States"; he had been first a dock-hand, then the mate of a tramp schooner on the lakes. Alan, gazing at the old man, felt exultation leaping and throbbing within him. This life which old Burr was rehearsing to him as his own, was the actual life of Munro Burkhalter, one of the men on Corvet's list regarding whom Alan had been able to obtain full information!

Alan sped below, when he was relieved from watch, and got out the clippings left by Corvet and the notes of what he himself had learned in his visits to the homes of these people. His excitement grew greater as he pored over them; he found that he could account, with their aid, for all that old Burr had told him. Old Burr's stories were not, of course, true; yet neither were they fictitious. They—their incidents, at least—were actualities. They were woven from the lives of those upon Corvet's list! Alan felt his skin prickling and the blood beating fast in his temples. How could Burr have known these incidents? Who could he be to know them all? To what man, but one, could all of them be known? Was old Burr . . . Benjamin Corvet?

Alan telegraphed that day to Sherrill; but when the message had gone doubt seized him. Benjamin Corvet, when he went away, had tried to leave his place and power among lakemen to Alan; Alan, refusing to accept what Corvet had left until Corvet's reason should be known, had felt obliged also to refuse friendship with the Sherrills. When revelation came, would it make possible Alan's acceptance of the place Corvet had prepared for him, or would it leave him where he was? Would it bring him nearer to Constance Sherrill, or would it set him forever away from her?

CHAPTER XV.

A Ghost Ship.

Officially, and to chief extent in actuality, navigation now had "closed" for the winter. Further up the harbor, beyond Number 25, glowed the white lanterns marking two vessels moored and "laid up" till spring; another was still in the active process of "laying up." Marine insurance, as regards all ordinary craft, had ceased; and the government at sunrise, five days before, had taken the warning lights from the Straits of Mackinaw, from Ile-aux-Galets, from north Manitou, and the Fox Islands; and the light at Beaver Island had but five nights more to burn.

Having no particular duty when the boat was in dock, old Burr had gone toward the steamer "laying up," and now was standing watching with absorption the work going on. There was a tug a little farther along, with steam up and black smoke pouring from its short funnel. Old Burr observed this boat too and moved up a little nearer. Alan, following the wheelsman, came opposite the stern of the freighter.

"They're crossing," the wheelsman said aloud, but more to himself than to Alan. "They're laying her up here," he jerked his head toward the Stoughton. "Then they're crossing to Manitowoc on the tug."

"What's the matter with that?" Alan cried.

Burr drew up his shoulders and ducked his head down as a gust blew. It was cold, very cold indeed in that wind, but the old man had on a mackinaw and, out on the lake, Alan had seen him on deck coatless in weather almost as cold as this.

"It's a winter storm," Alan cried. "It's like it that way; but today's the 15th, not the 5th of December!"

"That's right," Burr agreed. "That's right."

The reply was absent, as though Alan had stumbled upon what he was thinking and Burr had no thought yet to wonder at it.

"And it's the Stoughton they're laying up, not the—" he stopped and stared at Burr to let him supply the word and, when the old man did not, he repeated again—"not the—"

"No," Burr agreed again, as though the name had been given. "No."

"It was the Martha Corvet you laid up, wasn't it?" Alan cried quickly. "Tell me—that time on the 5th—it was the Martha Corvet?"

Burr jerked away; Alan caught him again and, with physical strength, de-

"Answer me; it was the Martha Corvet?"

"Wasn't it that?" he demanded. "Answer me; it was the Martha Corvet?"

The wheelsman struggled; he seemed suddenly terrified with the terror which, instead of weakening, supplied inflated strength. He threw Alan off for an instant and started to flee back toward the ferry; and Alan let him go, only following a few steps to make sure that the wheelsman returned to Number 25.

Because of the severe cold, the watches on the ferry had been shortened. Alan would be relieved from time to time to warm himself, and then he would return to duty again. Old Burr at the wheel would be relieved and would go on duty at the same hours as Alan himself. Benjamin Corvet! The fancy reiterated itself to him. Could he be mistaken? Was that man, whose eyes turned alternately from the compass to the bow of the ferry as it shifted and rose and fell, the same who had sat in that lonely chair turned toward the fireplace in the house on Astor street? Were those hands, which held the steamer to her course, the hands which had written to Alan in secret from the little room off his bedroom and which pasted so carefully the newspaper clippings concealed in the library?

Alan faced the wind with mackinaw buttoned about his throat; to make certain his hearing, his ears were unprotected. They numbed frequently, and he drew a hand out of the glove to rub them. The windows to protect the wheelsman had been dropped, and the snow had gathered on the glass; and at intervals, as he glanced back, he could see old Burr's face as he switched on a dim light to look at the compass. The strange placidity which usually characterized the old man's face had not returned to it since Alan had spoken with him on the dock; its look was intent and queerly drawn. Was old Burr beginning to remember that he was Benjamin Corvet? Alan did not believe it could be that; again and again he had spoken Corvet's name to him without effect. Yet there must have been times when, if he was actually Corvet, he had remembered who he was. He must have remembered that when he had written directions to some one to send those things to Constance Sherrill; or, a strange thought had come to Alan, had he written those instructions himself? This certainly would account for the package having been mailed at Manitowoc and for Alan's failure to find out by whom it had been mailed. It would account, too, for the unknown handwriting upon the wrapper, if some one on the ferry had addressed the package for the old man.

What could have brought back that moment of recollection to Corvet, Alan wondered; the finding of the things which he had sent? What might bring another such moment? Would his seeing the Sherrills again—or Spearman—act to restore him?

For half an hour Alan paced steadily at the bow. The storm was increasing noticeably in fierceness; the wind-driven snowflakes had changed to hard pellets which, like little bullets, cut and stung the face; and it was growing colder. From a cabin window came the blue flash of the wireless, which had been silent after notifying the shore stations of their departure. It had commenced again; this was unusual. Something still more unusual followed at once; the direction of the gale seemed slowly to shift, and with it the wash of the water; instead of the wind and the waves coming from dead ahead now, they moved to the port beam, and Number 25, still pitching with the thrust through the seas, also began to roll. This meant, of course, that the steamer had changed its course and was making almost due north. It seemed to Alan to force its engines faster; the deck vibrated more. Alan had not heard the orders for this change and could only speculate as to what it might mean.

His relief came after a few minutes more.

"Where are we heading?" Alan asked.

"Radio," the relief announced, "The H. C. Richardson calling; she's up by the Manitowoc."

"What sort of trouble?"

"She's not in trouble; it's another ship."

"What ship?"

"No word as to that."

Alan, not delaying to question further, went back to the cabins.

These stretched aft, behind the bridge, along the upper deck, some score on each side of the ship; they had accommodations for almost a hundred passengers; but on this crossing only a few were occupied. Alan had noticed some half-dozen men—business men, no doubt, forced to make the crossing, and one of them, a Catholic priest, returning probably to some mission in the north; he had seen no women among them. A little group of passengers were gathered now in the door of or just outside the wireless cabin, which was one of the rows on the starboard side. Stewards stood with them and the cabin maid; within, and bending over the table with the radio instrument, was the operator with the second officer beside him. The violet spark was rapping, and the operator, his receivers strapped over his ears, strained to listen. He got no reply, evidently, and he struck his key again; now, as he listened, he wrote slowly on a pad.

"What is it?" Alan asked the officer.

"The Richardson heard four blasts of a steam whistle about an hour ago when she was opposite the Manitowoc. She answered with the whistle and turned toward the blasts. She couldn't find any ship." The officer's reply was interrupted by some of the others.

"Then . . . that was a few minutes ago . . . they heard the four long again . . . They'd tried to pick up the other ship with radio before . . . Yes; we got that here . . . Tried again and got no answer . . . But they heard the blasts for half an hour . . . They said they seemed to be almost beside the ship once . . . But they didn't see anything. Then the blasts stopped . . . suddenly, cut off short in the middle as though something happened . . . She was blowing distress all right . . . The Richardson's searching again now . . . Yes, she's searching for boats."

"Anyone else answered?" Alan asked.

"Shore stations on both sides."

"Do they know what ship it is?"

"No."

"What ship might be there now?"

The officer could not answer that. He had known where the Richardson must be; he knew of no other likely to be there at this season. The spray from the waves had frozen upon Alan; ice gleamed and glistened from the rail and from the deck. Alan's shoulders drew up in a spasm. The Richardson, they said, was looking for boats; how long could men live in little boats exposed to that gale and cold?

He turned back to the others about the radio cabin; the glow from within showed him faces as gray as his; he lighted a face on the opposite side of the door—a face haggard, with dreadful fright. Old Burr jerked about as Alan spoke to him and moved away alone; Alan followed him and seized his arm.

"What's the matter?" Alan demanded, holding to him.

"The four blasts!" the wheelsman repeated. "They heard the four blasts!" He repeated it once more.

"Yes," Alan urged. "Why not?"

"But where no ship ought to be; so they couldn't find the ship—they couldn't find the ship!" Terror, of awful abjectness, came over the old man. He freed himself from Alan and went forward.

Alan went aft to the car deck. The roar and echoing tumult of the ice against the hull here drowned all other sounds. The thirty-two freight cars, in their four long lines, stood wedged and chained and blocked in place; they tipped and tilted, rolled and swayed like the stanchions and sides of the ship, fixed and secure. Jacks on the steel deck under the edges of the cars, kept them from rocking on their trucks. Men paced watchfully between the tracks, observing the movement of the cars. The cars creaked and groaned, as they worked a little this way and that; the men sprang with sledges and drove the blocks tight again or took an additional turn upon the jacks.

Alan saw old Burr who, on his way to the wheelhouse, had halted to listen. For several minutes the old man stood motionless; he came on again and stopped to listen.

"You hear 'em?" Burr's voice quavered in Alan's ear. "You hear 'em?"

"What?" asked Alan.

"The four blasts! You hear 'em now? The four blasts!"

Burr was straining as he listened, and Alan stood still too; no sound came to him but the noise of the storm. "No," he replied. "I don't hear anything. Do you hear them now?"

Burr stood beside him without making reply; the searchlight, which had been pointed ahead, shot its glare forward, and Alan could see Burr's face in the dancing reflection of the flare. The man had never more plainly resembled the picture of Benjamin Corvet; that which had been in the picture, that strange sensation of something haunting him, was upon this man's face, a thousand times intensified; but instead of distorting the features away from all likeness to the picture, it made it grotesquely identical.

And Burr was hearing something—something distinct and terrifying; but he seemed not surprised, but rather satisfied that Alan had not heard. He nodded his head at Alan's denial, and without reply to Alan's demand, he stood listening. Something bent him forward; he straightened; again the something came; again he straightened. Four times Alan counted the motions. Burr was hearing again the four long blasts of distress! But there was no noise but the gale. "The four blasts!" He recalled old Burr's terror outside the radio cabin. The old man was hearing blasts which were not blown!

He moved on and took the wheel. He was a good wheelsman; the vessel seemed to be steadier on her course and, somehow, to steer easier when the old man steered. His illusions of hearing could do no harm, Alan considered; they were of concern only to Burr and to him.

Alan fought to keep his thought all to his duty; they must be now very nearly at the position where the Richardson last had heard the four long blasts; searching for a ship or for boats, in that snow, was almost hopeless. With sight even along the searchlight's beam shortened to a few hundred yards, only accident could bring Number 25 up for rescue, only chance could carry the ship where the shouts—or the blasts of distress if the wreck still floated and had steam—would be heard.

They were meeting frequent and heavy floes, and Alan gave warning of these by halts to the bridge; the bridge answered and when possible the steamer avoided the floes; when it could not do that it cut through them. The wind-rows ice beating and crushing under the bows took strange, distorted, glistering shapes. Now another such shape appeared before them; where the glare dissipated to a bare glow in the swirling snow, he saw a vague shadow. The man moving the searchlight failed to see it, for he swung the beam on. The shadow was so dim, so ghostly, that Alan sought for it again before he halted; he could see nothing now, yet he was surer, somehow, that he had seen.

"Something dead ahead, sir!" he shouted back to the bridge.

The bridge answered the hail as the searchlight pointed forward again. A gust carried the snow in a fierce flurry which the light failed to pierce; from the flurry suddenly, silently, spar by spar, a shadow emerged—the shadow of a ship. It was a steamer, Alan saw, a long, low-lying old vessel without lights and without smoke from the funnel slanting up just forward of the after deckhouse; it rolled in the trough of the sea. The sides and all the lower works gleamed in ghostly phosphorescence, it was refraction of the searchlight beam from the ice sheathing all the ship, Alan's brain told him; but the sight of that soundless, shimmering ship materializing from behind the screen of snow struck a tremor through him.

"Ship!" he hailed. "Ahead! Dead ahead, sir! Ship!"

The shout of quick commands echoed to him from the bridge. Underfoot he could feel a new tumult of the deck; the engines, instantly stopped, were being set full speed astern. But Number 25, instead of sheering off to right or left to avoid the collision, steered straight on.

The struggle of the engines against the momentum of the ferry told that others had seen the gleaming ship, or, at least, had heard the hail. The skipper's instant decision had been to put to starboard; he had bawled that to the wheelsman, "Hard over!" But, though the screws turned full astern, Number 25 steered straight on. The ferry was blowing before the bow again; back through the snow the ice-shrouded shimmer ahead retreated. Alan leaped away and up to the wheelhouse.

Men were struggling there—the skipper, a mate, and old Burr, who had held the wheel. He hung to it yet, as one in a trance, fixed, staring ahead; his arms, stiff, had been holding Number 25 to her course. The skipper struck him and beat him away, while the mate tugged at the wheel. Burr was torn from the wheel now, and he made no resistance to the skipper's blows; but the skipper, in his frenzy, struck him again and knocked him to the deck.

Slowly, steadily, Number 25 was responding to her helm. The bow pointed away, and the beam of the ferry came beside the beam of the silent steamer; they were very close now, so close that the searchlight, which had turned to keep on the other vessel, shot above its shimmering deck and lighted only the spars; and, as the water rose and fell between them, the ships stuck closer. Number 25 shook with an effort; it seemed opposing with all the power of its screws some force fatally drawing it on—opposing with the last resistance before giving way. Then, as the water fell again, the ferry seemed to slip and be drawn toward the other vessel; they mounted, side by side . . . crashed . . . crashed . . . crashed again. That second crash threw all who had nothing to hold by, flat upon the deck; then Number 25 moved by; astern her now the silent steamer vanished in the snow.

FORMER SENATOR TAKEN BY DEATH

A. J. GRONNA, OF NORTH DAKOTA, WAS AN AUTHORITY ON FARM PROBLEMS.

AUTHOR OF FARM LOAN BILL

Had Re-Entered Political Ring As An Independent Candidate for G. O. P. Nomination for Senate.

Lakota, N. D.—Asle J. Gronna, former United States senator from North Dakota, died suddenly at his home here on the night of May 4. He was 64 years old. Mr. Gronna recently underwent an operation.

At the time of his death, Mr. Gronna, who had been ill for some time, was an independent candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate.

Mr. Gronna was regarded as an authority on farm problems during the years he served in the United States senate. He was author of several important bills, including the Federal Farm Loan and the Guaranty Bank Deposits Acts. He was chairman of the senate agricultural committee.

The former senator was born on December 10, 1858, in Elkader, Iowa. His parents brought him to Houston county, Minn., where he attended public school and the Caledonia academy. He taught school for two years in Wilmington, Minn., and moved to Dakota territory in 1879. Going to Duxton in 1881, he became clerk in a general store and postoffice.

In 1904 he was nominated for congressman and elected on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Gronna continued as congressman until February, 1911, when he resigned to enter the senate. In a triangular race for the Republican nomination in 1914 he defeated Andrew Miller, present United States district judge for North Dakota, and John Worst, then president of the state agricultural college. Another president of the college, E. F. Ladd, defeated Mr. Gronna for the Republican nomination in 1920. Several weeks ago Mr. Gronna announced himself as a candidate for the senatorial nomination. His announcement outlined a program in sympathy with the farm bloc movement in congress.

Mr. Gronna is survived by a widow, three daughters and two sons.

Present: Hon. Servetus A. Correll, Judge of Probate.

In the Matter of the Estate of Maximilian Scheffels, Deceased.

FAMILIES OF MINERS EVICTED

Operators Turn Many "Undesirables" From Their Homes.

Uniontown, Pa.—First evictions of striking miners and their families, in the Fayette coke region took place last week at the mine of the Amend Coal and Coke company near here. A dozen families, it was reported to the county authorities, has been moved from company houses, and their belongings set out in the road. This, it was stated, was the beginning of a movement by operating companies to reclaim houses now occupied by what they termed "undesirables."

The evictions will be carried under direction of Sheriff Shaw, who, it was announced, has detailed a squad of special officers to serve the necessary notices.

HOME COURT FOR WOMAN JUDGE

Will Hold Sessions in Parlor to Save Time for Housework.

Freeport, Ill.—Police court hereafter will be held in the parlor of her home, Mrs. Mildred Brandt, recently elected police magistrate of the village of Winslow, Ill., announced. She explained that by holding court sessions at home it would take less of her time from domestic duties, and that she would not need a downtown office. Mrs. Brandt previously had said she would not serve, but explained that she had changed her mind at the insistence of her friends, and would qualify for the office.

TEXAS TORNADO KILLS NINE

38 Others Hurt by Windstorm That Sweeps Through Austin.

Austin, Tex.—Nine dead, 38 injured, two probably fatally, and property damage estimated at $400,000, was the toll of death and destruction in the wake of a tornado which last week swept through the west side of Austin and on out of the city to Oak Hill, eight miles southwest.

Four members of the Bardsley family at Oakhill, eight miles south of here, were reported as among those killed. Another of the family was reported seriously injured.

Lovers in Duel to Death.

Philadelphia—"He stole my girl." These words, gasped out by Harry Stinger, 35 years old, as he breathed his last, are the only explanation police have of a mysterious duel to the death between Stinger and a tenderloin character, known as "Buck" Bailey, in the dark depths of a tenderloin rooming house which resulted in the death of both principals. The "girl," said to be named Annie Murray, escaped in a motor car following the tragedy.

Ancient Shaving Implement.

According to Herodotus, the Egyptians shaved continually and only let the hair and beard grow when they were in mourning. The barber of the ancient Egyptians was known as the baq. He employed various instruments. A razor sometimes in the shape of a small, short hatchet with a recurved handle and other instruments shaped like a knife were most generally used.

Use for Sea Ice.

An innovation in the fish industry of France is the making of ice from sea water, by a process which eliminates the concentration of salt, that usually occurs when brine or salt water freezes. This "salt ice" performs the double service of keeping the fish cold, and also of "salting down" the fish as a means of preserving them.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

24 INDICTMENTS ON FRAUD CHARGES

C. W. MORSE AND COMPANY ACCUSED OF ILLEGAL USE OF U. S. MAILS.

SCORES OF MILLIONS INVOLVED

Officials of Several Shipping Corporations Figured in Conspiracy to Defraud Investors.

New York—Charles W. Morse, New York financier, his three sons and 21 others, some prominent in shipping legal and brokerage circles, are accused in a federal indictment with having used the mails to defraud investors in the stocks of various steamship companies.

The aggregate authorized capital of the sundry corporations ran into scores of millions of dollars, and included the United States Steamship company and its subsidiaries, United States Transport company, Inc., and the holding organization known as the United States Shipping Corporation.

The "principal defendants," charged with conspiring since May, 1919 to defraud investors and put their alleged swindling scheme into effect by use of advertising matter sent through the mails, were named as follows:

Charles W. Morse and his sons Erwin A. of Washington, Benjamin W. New York, and Harry F. Greenwich, Conn.

Marvin J. Gillen, formerly assistant to the chairman of the United States Shipping Board.

William A. Barbere, former attorney general of South Carolina.

Mark L. Gilbert, former president of Ship Construction and Trading company, Stonington, Conn.

George M. Barditt, attorney for Morse interests.

Nehemiah H. Campbell, Brooklyn one time head of several Morse enterprises.

Richard O. White, New York, former president United States Transport company.

Glenhard S. Foster, Orange, N. J., former head of G. S. Foster & Co., curb brokers.

Henry E. Boughton, Warren, Mass., former head of a concern dealing in investments and securities.

William H. Dennis, certified public accountant of New York.

James Gill, publicity man for Morse, and Milton Quinn, alias Milton C. Quimby, former Morse agent.

These men, the indictment alleged, have since May, 1919, conspired to defraud investors with a view to their own profit by divers schemes and artifices.

The defendants were accused of having intended to pay themselves excessive salaries, "to waste and dissipate" the resources of the United States Steamship company, appropriate its assets to themselves along with some of the capital stock without making any valuable return, and to permit the corporation to incur excessive obligations.

The Rattlesnake.

One of Rosworth's young sprouts was coming home about 12 o'clock the other night on the south road, and just as he got even with the graveyard the engine went dead. But he said he got so scared when he saw where he was that he shook the car so badly that the durned old flivver thought the motor was running and came clear to town before it discovered its mistake.—Science and invention.

Wives Expensive in Kurdistan.

Wives in Kurdistan have to be bought. Several thousand dollars will be paid for a damsel of high birth and attractive appearance, and her father will usually expect to be given, in addition, a pony and some costly changes of raiment.

Part of Time's Heritage.

Somewhat Shelley's line in "Adonais" about one whose name was writ in water comes to mind when reading the announcement that a fossil brownstone slab bearing the imprint of raindrops has been presented to the geological museum of Trinity college. This was a rainstorm that occurred thousands and thousands of years ago, and yet the marks of it are still to be seen. Like the luscious, ever-vital personality of John Keats, these raindrops have become part of the heritage of Time.—Christian Science Monitor.
