Boyer City Easy Money

East Jordan Defeats Boyer In First Inning, Sunday

Before a large crowd of enthusiastic fans at the Fair Grounds, Sunday, East Jordan defeated the so called strong Boyer City team by a four to two score. The game was won for East Jordan in the first frame. Boyer City was retired in 1-2-3 order by Johnson and his able assistants. East Jordan came in to bat and Morgan, the first man up, hit Clark for a two bagger. Then things began to happen to Clark and Co., and when the dust on the diamond had cleared, East Jordan had scored three runs. In the sixth, East Jordan secured another tally.

Boyer secured one run in the second through an error, and another in the ninth—also chargeable to errors.

Johnson pitched a heady game and should have been credited with a shut-out. Clark was hit freely by our boys when hits meant runs. In fact the East Jordan team is developing into a bunch of sluggers and if they keep up the present pace they are bound to wind up at least second in the League standing. Man for man our city has the best team all round in the League today and their team work cannot be beat. True, we lost one game through poor judgement, but our boys profited by the experience.

Boyer City team, fans and band came over to win Sunday's game, and we were sorry to disappoint them, but we just needed this game to fatten our percentage column. It is even darkly hinted that the band had one selection—something about "Hail the Conquering Heros Come"—which they were to play down-town after the game, but those who love band music were disappointed. They failed to appear.

Should East Jordan and Boyer City wind up among the League leaders, a series of post season games would be interesting. With the present line-up of the two teams, there is no question but what East Jordan could win the series.

Below is the dope on Sunday's game:

World's Water Power.

The total available horsepower in the world derivable from falling water is reckoned at 439,000,000. Africa leads with 190,000,000. Asia has 71,000,000. Europe is credited with 45,000,000. South America with 54,000,000 and North America with 62,000,000.

Palms Up-to-Date.

A Belgian fortune teller has adopted a modern method of palmistry. Those who wish to consult her are required to place their palms on a plaster mold, and from this imprint the seeress forecasts their character and future. The reading is dictated to a stenographer, typed, and mailed to the person interested.

MICHIGAN POTATO GROWERS' EXCHANGE TO MEET AUGUST 16-17.

TOUR OF POTATO DISTRICTS OF NORTHERN MICHIGAN WILL FOLLOW THE MEETING

Cadillac, Michigan, August 4.—The Fourth Annual Meeting of the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange will be held here August 16th and 17th. The meeting will follow closely the program of last year. The first session will be called to order Wednesday afternoon, August 16th at one o'clock. This session will be devoted to a discussion of the farmers' problems. The speakers will be David Friday, President of The Michigan Agricultural College, A. M. Danton, Manager of the Minnesota Potato Exchange, Clark L. Brody, General Manager of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, and John A. Doelle, Commissioner of Agriculture for Michigan.

Wednesday evening the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange will entertain the Board of Delegates, visiting members of the local associations and guests at a big banquet. This banquet is an annual affair. Last year over three hundred farmers attended. The speakers at this year's banquet will be members of some of the most successful local associations in the Exchange.

The Thursday morning session will be the regular business meeting of the Exchange. Reports will be given on the year's business and plans made for the coming season. Two directors will be elected.

The first Michigan Potato Inspection Tour will start from Cadillac on Thursday afternoon immediately following the business meeting and will visit potato fields in nine counties of the Northern Michigan potato belts. The growers will first go to Lake City, visiting fields in Missaukee County enroute and stopping for supper at Missaukee Park. They will return on the 18th to Wexford County and cover a route now being mapped out by County Farm Agent, William F. Johnson of Cadillac. In the middle of the afternoon the tourists will reach Roscommon County, and under the leadership of County Farm Agent, L. L. Drake will visit fields in Roscommon and Antrim Counties until Saturday afternoon. Alba, Mancelona, and Bellaire will be visited and Traverse City will be reached late Saturday afternoon. The growers will spend Sunday at Traverse City where Dr. Houston, Secretary of the Grand Traverse County Farm Bureau, is arranging the week-end entertainment.

At East Jordan Monday

The tourists will again enter Antrim County Monday morning, stopping at Elk Rapids and Central Lake and reaching East Jordan by noon where County Agent, B. O. Hagerman will guide them through Charlevoix County. Emmet County will be toured Tuesday, August 22nd, following a route mapped out by County Farm Agent, Dwight Cavanagh. Cheboygan will be reached that night. Wednesday morning they will tour through Cheboygan County with County Agent, D. B. Jewell, reaching Gaylord for supper and a night's stop. Thursday morning some of the good growers of Otsego County will be visited under the direction of County Agent A. C. Lytle and then the tourists will start for Elmira, reaching there Thursday noon, August 24th for a big round-up picnic at Maplewood Farm, owned by Thomas Buell, President of the Michigan Potato Producers Association.

In each county the tourists will note the cultural practices and methods of treatment. Fertilizer experiments will be observed and experts will be present to explain the value of using commercial fertilizers, high powered sprayers and hill selection of seed.

Among those who will speak, either at the picnic or on the tour are: C. W. Waid of the Ohio State Farm Bureau, F. B. Gaylord of Indiana, J. F. Cox and J. W. Weston of the farm crops department of Michigan Agricultural College; H. C. Moore, Secretary of the Michigan Potato Producers Association; Henry Curtis and A. B. Large of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange; Carl H. Barnum of the Farm Bureau Seed Department; Jason Woodman, Paw Paw, member of the State Board of Agriculture and D. L. Hagerman, Agricultural Agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad. County Agents of southern Michigan will be invited to make the tour. It is expected 200 potato growers will make the entire trip while many more will attend the meetings in the several counties.

Too Much Talk.

And the more energy a man expends in talking the less he will have left to assist him in making good.

Wilson Out for Pros. Att'y

East Jordan Attorney Would Make Capable Official

Att'y Dwight L. Wilson of East Jordan has announced himself as candidate for the office of Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County at the primaries of Sept. 12th.

Mr. Wilson is thoroughly qualified for the office and would make the County one of the best Prosecuting Attorneys it has ever had. He has been a resident of the County for over a dozen years and has practiced law in the county for ten years. He served as Supervisor for two years withdrawing to serve the City of East Jordan as Mayor. He served the City in an efficient manner for three years, and then withdrew.

For a number of years he sacrificed his business to some extent to serve as Secretary of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society. His work as secretary was progressive and received the hearty endorsement of County Fair officials.

Mr. Wilson enters the race for prosecuting attorney on the platform of "County Business First," and those who are acquainted with him, know that he will more than make good this pledge.

MASONS OF COUNTY HAVE FINE TIME AT PICNIC, LAST WEEK

Hayden's Point was the Mecca of all Charlevoix County Masons, Eastern Stars, and their families, last week Thursday.

At East Jordan the Autos began to leave at 9:00 a. m. and before noon the grounds were well populated by people from all parts of the county. Long before the noon hour the Boyer City Marine Band was on the grounds and furnished delightful music throughout the day.

After the picnic lunch, an adjournment was made to the athletic field near-by where the youthful sports were held. East Jordan youths took a goodly share of the sports prizes. Then came the big feature of the day—a ball game between Boyer City and East Jordan Masons. East Jordan was handicapped in that its regular pitcher was absent, and Boyer put in their star league pitcher of a year ago—Saffran. The game was close—2 to 0 in favor of Boyer.

The day's events closed with a series of water sports.

THE THIRD ANNUAL DETROIT-EAST JORDAN PICNIC WELL ATTENDED.

The third annual Detroit-East Jordan picnic was held Sunday, July 30th, at Sugar Island. About 150 East Jordanites, among whom were Walter Cook and his niece, Dorothy Cook, boarded a Steamer, and a regular old time jubilee was held.

When the boat landed, a shady spot was selected and a large East Jordan banner was stretched. Tables were spread and all enjoyed their picnic dinner, chattering over old times.

A ball game was played between the single and married men, the score was 21-11 in favor of the latter.

The crowd then dispersed, some enjoying a swim, others dancing, and the remainder amusing themselves on the Rollercoaster and Ferris Wheel.

On the homeward trip old time songs were enjoyed by all.

The next annual picnic will be held the last Sunday of July, 1923 at Sugar Island.

When Washington Prayed.

New Jersey was a camp and a battlefield during the greater part of the Revolutionary war, and the inhabitants learned to know Washington and his men. Traditions of Washington are treasured and handed down in many families, whose ancestors had homes about Morristown when Washington was encamped there and living in the Ford mansion, now "Washington's Headquarters." Washington's prayer in the woods of the Short hills at a dark and critical period of American history is one of these local traditions.

"Winging" His Tail.

Donald had stopped at a farm and was greeted by a large dog. He was warned not to go near the animal as he might not be friendly. Donald said, "Oh, yes, mother, he's friendly. See him wing his tail."

Bovine Tuberculosis Eradication

For something over a year now the State Department of livestock Sanitation has been working in co-operation with our state and county in an effort to clean up Bovine Tuberculosis in Charlevoix County. One, and part of the time two, veterinarians have been on the job testing herds for those who applied for this service. The defect in this work has been that a complete cleanup in any locality was never brought about, because there were always untested cows and a chance that tested herds might be infected from them. Now, however, arrangements have been made whereby the department will send in a force of twelve to fifteen veterinarians and systematically test every herd in the county.

It is expected that every owner of cattle, farm or village, will co-operate in this fine public service by being ready with his herd, whether one animal or one-hundred, when notified of the coming of the veterinarian. While there is no charge whatever to the cattle owner, all expenses being paid from public funds, each owner can help keep down costs by being ready when notified. Have the cattle in barn or inclosure where they can be readily caught. Application of the test causes no pain or inconvenience to the animal and if there is no delay in getting to them it only takes a few minutes for an ordinary sized herd. Therefore it is very important that the veterinarian be not asked to wait while the cattle are driven up from the back forty.

It is expected that the whole job of testing all the herds in the county will be completed within two weeks of the time the work is started. This promptness in cleaning up the work will have the advantage of taking care of one of the most serious difficulties encountered last year. Up to now, with the testing of a few herds at a time in a locality, not enough reactors were ever found to make a car-lot shipment possible and where they could not be disposed of locally, owners were sometimes put in a serious inconvenience, amounting to an injustice, by having to hold them for a long time before they could be disposed of. By this quick clean-up method enough reactors will be found within loading distance to make car-lot shipment possible and no one having a reactor will be required to hold the animal long.

While it is not expected that there will be any opposition to this work it may be well to explain that in case any cattle owner should refuse or be unready for this test to be applied to his herd the federal authorities will protect the owners of tested cattle by putting a strict quarantine on the herd and premises of any such owner whose cattle are untested and no dairy products or beef, either live or dressed, may be removed until such a test is made. In such a case the test will not be made by a department veterinarian but must be made by an accredited practicing veterinarian and the expense paid by the cattle owner. It might be well to add, too, that this method of testing is expensive.

Attention Apple Growers

FRUIT THREATENED BY RAVAGES OF CODDLING MOTHS.

Coddlings moths are out in the lower part of the state and have begun to show signs of their coming out in Bellaire.

R. H. Pettit, Prof. of Entomology at the Agr'l College recommends immediate spraying.

Apply a spray of dilute lime sulphur. 1½—50 or Bordeaux 4—50 2-3 lbs. of Arsenate of lead powder or twice this weight of paste.

Look Out for Leaf Hopper and Late Blight.

Leaf Hoppers and Late Blight may cause considerable damage to the potato crop this year unless proper methods are employed to prevent. This prediction is based on the fact that during the spring there has been considerable cool, wet weather which is favorable especially for Late Blight.

Get out the old sprayer and make it pay for itself by making liberal applications of Bordeaux. Keep the leaf surface protected by a copper armour.

The machine that will spray and protect the whole leaf must spray from underneath as well as from above. The pressure necessary to do this effectively should be at least 170 pounds, and 200 pounds pressure better. Good results can be obtained by a knapsack sprayer if great care is exercised, but it takes so much time and heavy labor that for large fields it is not economical or efficient. Leaf hoppers need the spray on both sides of the leaves for their control. Good seed comes from healthy vines. Fields that are badly infected with leaf hoppers or affected so that the foliage is materially injured cannot be considered the best for seed.

FOUR BEATEN IN STRIKE RIOT

Police Flyer Called To Break Up Mob at Bay City.

Bay City, Mich.—Pulled from the bus on which they were riding to work by an angry mob of strikers, four men, employees of the Bay City shops of the Michigan Central, were beaten in Sunday strike rioting.

A mob of nearly 200 strikers had gathered around the shop entrance in spite of police orders that such gatherings would not be tolerated, and it was as the men were going on for the night shift that the disorders broke out.

The strike-breakers, some with their coats torn from them, finally rushed away from the mob and gained the shop entrance. There they were given medical treatment.

Police flyers were rushed to the scene of the rioting, and the men speedily dispersed as the patrolmen charged.

RATIONING OF COAL STARTED

Government Distributes Supply According to Need of Industries.

Washington—The government with the co-operation of the states on Monday assumed the duties of gigantic middleman, passing on the coal from the producing mines to the industries and localities which, in the eyes of the government need it most.

Just how much coal the government can count on remains a matter of speculation. The first test of the response to President Harding's invitation to the mine owners to open their properties was revealed Sunday in the weekly report issued by the geologist survey which showed an estimated production of bituminous for last week of 3,900,000 tons as compared with 3,700,000 tons the week previously.

TWO KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Flyers Lose Lives When Broken Propeller Causes Nose Dive.

Middletown, N. Y.—Lieutenant Tracey Lyons, O. R. C. Aviation section, U. S. A., and Augustus Altomeyer, Jr., of Port Jervis, were burned to death at Port Jervis Sunday afternoon, when an aeroplane in which they were riding crashed to earth. Breaking off a propeller caused the plane to take a fatal nose dive.

Won't Change 3-Mile Limit.

London—With reference to the note from the Washington Government, asking co-operation in the suppression of liquor-running into the United States through Bermuda and the Bahamas, it is understood the British Government has informed Washington that the three mile limit rule can not be altered. The government, however, is consulting with the colonial governments concerned with respect to clearance papers, change of registry, and other points.

If Grasshoppers Mobilized.

There are not enough birds, experts say, to clean up a full-strength invasion of grasshoppers such as the farmers dread, but the birds assist man to control the pest. If it were not for the birds the hoppers would ruin the farms.

Thoughts After Forty.

I am convinced that a man is more romantic than woman. A man will weave a little romance from a hairpin he sees on the sidewalk. Does a woman pay any attention to a cigar butt? —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Children Need Much Sleep.

It has been shown to be doubtful if children can have too much sleep, and, up to twelve years of age, twelve hours' solid sleep is a proper allowance for them. During the sleep of childhood, all the adjustments and developments are going on which will gradually develop the child into the grown-up man or woman. Children's nights should last all around the clock, and should be absolutely quiet and free from all disturbances.

MANIAC CAUSES CHURCH PANIC

Fanatic Mounts Altar and Carves Cross on Own Head.

New York—A score of women fainted and were carried from St. Patrick's cathedral during 10 o'clock mass there Sunday morning when a maniac raced down the aisle and mounting to the altar drew a long knife, and inflicted a gash in the shape of a cross in his forehead.

Frank Leihhauser, retired policeman, leaped over the altar and reached the maniac as he was about to carve the second cross on his face. He wrestled with the man, and with the aid of the priest overpowered him, wresting the knife away.

The maniac was bound and policemen removed him to Bellevue hospital.

More than half an hour was required to restore order in the church. Half a score of women were carried out unconscious while a dozen others were restored from faint in the church pews where they collapsed.

Dwight L. Wilson for Prosecuting Attorney.

I am a candidate for nomination and election as Prosecuting Attorney for Charlevoix County.

During the past ten years I have practiced law in this County and my experience in public service includes two terms as supervisor and three years as Mayor of East Jordan.

If nominated and elected county business will come first.

For support already received and to be received, I thank you.

DWIGHT L. WILSON.

A large number of people from this vicinity attended the funeral services of Mrs. F. L. Smith held at the M. E. Church in East Jordan last Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Smith was one of the pioneers of Wilson township, coming here about 50 years ago with husband and children, where they endured the hardships of the early pioneers. They removed to East Jordan about 28 years ago where Mrs. Smith passed away last Thursday, after a short illness. She leaves a husband, 3 children and 8 grandchildren, besides many other relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

DETROIT LEADS IN TRADE INCREASE

RESERVE BOARD REPORT SHOWS MICHIGAN'S AUTOMOBILE CENTER AHEAD.

MEMPHIS' TENN., COMES SECOND

Retail Trade for June Increased Over Same Record in 1921, According to Report.

Washington—The increase in Detroit's retail trade of June this year over the same month last year, exceeds that of any other city in the United States, according to figures made public by the federal reserve board. Detroit showed an increase of 14.8 per cent. The next best city is Memphis, Tenn., which showed an increase of 14.2 per cent. Next come Cleveland and Los Angeles, which reported a seven per cent increase. Chicago shows a four per cent increase.

Taking the period from January 1 to June 30, the federal reserve board reports Detroit had an increase of 1.5 per cent over the same period for the preceding year. But the spurt in trade during the month of June outweighed that of any preceding month. Cleveland during the same period reported a decrease in business of 4.6 per cent compared to last year. Chicago reported a decrease of three-tenths of one per cent. In fact the only cities to report an increase during this period, compared to the same period the year before, were Detroit and Los Angeles.

Detroit retailers have had such a heavy business revival that they report a decrease in stocks on hand during June, compared with same month last year, of 4.2 per cent.

Most other cities show an increase of stocks on hand over last year. For instance, in the Boston federal reserve district, the merchants have 11 per cent more stock on hand than they had last year; Cleveland, five per cent; Chicago, four per cent. St. Louis merchants apparently are carrying very little stock. They sold nine per cent less during January to July, compared with last year, and at the same time they have a five per cent decrease in stocks on hand.

Fathers? Nix!

In the holiday seasons, when the toy shop windows are glittering with all sorts of splendors, nothing is more pathetic than a group of middle-aged and white-headed folk who elbow the children aside to obtain a glimpse of the railroads, the dolls, the boats, and all the other delights of the world in miniature. The sentimentalist remarks: "Poor things, they are wishing they had enough money to buy that doll for little Annie or that pony cart for little Alec." Bosh! They are wishing they had had enough courage to buy them for themselves and play with them brazenly before the whole family of amateur alienists!—Harper's Magazine.

Hickory in Demand.

Hickory, with its unrivaled strength, elasticity and resiliency, is used for tool handles, for the spokes of automobile wheels, for golf clubs, and for many other purposes. There is increasingly keen competition among the industries for this wood, although there are still 15,784,000,000 board feet standing throughout the country. Manufacturers have to go farther for their supply, and really select stock is already very hard to obtain in the required quantities.—Scientific American.

One of the most rapid flights to "movie" stardom on record is that of Alice Calhoun. Her entire screen experience covers a span of only three short years. Yet, in that brief period, her beauty and talent have carried her to the heights to which many young women aspire. Miss Calhoun is a Cleveland girl. This is one of her latest pictures.

THE RIGHT THING

at the RIGHT TIME
By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

GOOD FORM IN DRESS

YOU may have read recently of a clergyman who sent a bride home from church because of what he considered the immodesty of her dress, and another well known divine assured the women of his parish that he would have them refused admittance to church, if they came clad in the extremes of fashion.

Whether the styles of dress that these priests referred to were actually immodest doubtless depends on the point of view. But that they were inappropriate to church is unquestionable. To be dressed always in good taste does not necessarily mean that you must never indulge in the more extreme forms of the fashion, but that you should wear them never where they might give offense. For instance it is now in most localities perfectly customary for women young and old to wear low necks and short sleeves at evening entertainments. In fact in this country young, unmarried girls habitually wear lower evening gowns than their mothers—though among well bred French women, unmarried girls are not so privileged.

Now since this is customary it is not in bad taste, because it attracts no undue attention and causes no misjudgment.

The same thing holds true in regard to bathing costumes. Had women worn the sort of bathing suits that they do now ten or twenty years ago, they would have been looked off the benches. But times have changed and our bathing costumes have changed most emphatically. It does not mean that we have grown more lax. Doubtless the tightly laced, exaggerated figure of two decades ago would give more offense to the modern taste than the rather abbreviated bathing costumes. It is all a question of what we are used to.

Substantiated Claim.

Many pleas come to the Treasury department for the redemption of money and Liberty bonds destroyed in various ways, and the department has to have a full statement in each case, authenticated and verified. Assistant Secretary Gilbert, who has general supervision in such matters, had laid on his desk a letter prepared by an under official and to be sent to a farmer. The farmer had complained that the cow had consumed a few hundred dollars' worth of Liberty bonds. The letter asked a few pertinent questions as to the destruction of this valuable paper, one of which was: "Why did the cow eat the bonds?" Back came the answer to the effect that it was a distinctive cow and had always had a decided liking for distinctive paper. The claim was paid.

OPPOSES HOSPITAL AT CUSTER

Chicago Man Asks President to Reconsider Building's Location.

Chicago—Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the American Legion's national rehabilitation committee, has made public a telegram to President Harding asking him to reconsider the decision to build up two hospitals for army neuro-psychiatric patients, one at St. Cloud, Minn., and the other at Camp Custer, Mich.

The telegram was sent following the announcement that Camp Custer, Michigan, is to receive the hospital project which was to have been located at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. The new hospital, which will handle mental cases, will have 500 beds and will be constructed at a cost of approximately $1,500,000.

MAY EXTEND THREE MILE LIMIT

Experts to Determine Whether Limits May Be Made 12 Miles.

Washington—Proposals that the territorial limits of the United States be extended to 12 Miles beyond the shore line, or nine miles further than the present traditional "three-mile limit," are being examined by the international and admiralty law experts of the state department here with a view to determining whether the proposed extension would be in violation of treaties to which this country is a part.

To determine whether this obstacle actually exists, the state department has put its best legal minds to work on the matter.

BOBBED HAIR CAUSES SUICIDE

Brooklyn Stenographer Despondent After Clipping Blond Locks.

New York—The body of Miss Ruth Evans, a stenographer, was found in her gas-filled room in Brooklyn. Friends said the only motive they could suggest was that she had grown despondent because she bobbed her luxurious blond hair two weeks ago.

Auto Suggestion Caused Death.

London—The first case on record of death from auto suggestion was reported to a coroner's jury by Dr. Henry King. Dr. King testified that Alfred Manning, a despondent man, had planned to take his own life from hanging. He tied a handkerchief around his neck, but not tight enough to cause strangulation. The physician said that death was due to the fact that Manning had convinced himself he was hanging himself. Through auto suggestion the heart stopped beating.

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your bladder troubles you.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and laggard. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

CHAPTER I.

It was over. The rambling house, with its rickety, old-fashioned furniture—and its memories—was now deserted, except for Robert Fairchild, and he was deserted within it, wandering from room to room staring at familiar objects with the unfamiliar gaze of one whose vision suddenly has been warped by the visitation of death and the sense of loneliness that it brings.

Loneliness, rather than grief, for it had been Robert Fairchild's promise that he would not suffer in heart for one who had longed to go into a peace for which he had waited, seemingly in vain. Year after year, Thornton Fairchild had sat in the big armchair by the windows, watching the days grow old and fade into night, studying sunset after sunset, voicing the vain hope that the gloaming might bring the twilight of his own existence—a silent man except for this, rarely speaking of the past, never giving to the son who worked for him, cared for him, worshipped him, the slightest inkling of what might have happened in the dim days of the long ago to transform him into a beaten thing, longing for the final succor. And when the end came, it found him in readiness, waiting in the big armchair by the windows. Even now, a book lay on the frayed carpeting of the old room, where it had fallen from relaxing fingers. Robert Fairchild picked it up, and with a sigh restored it to the grim, fumed oak case. His days of petty sacrifices that his father might while away the weary hours with reading were over.

What had been the past? Why the silence? Why the patient, yet impatient wait for death? The son did not know. In all his memories was only one faint picture, painted years before in babyhood: the return of his father from some place, he knew not where, a long conference with his mother behind closed doors, while he, in childlike curiosity, waited without, seeking in vain to catch some explanation. Then a sad-faced woman who cried at night when the house was still, who faded and who died. That was all. The picture carried no explanation.

And now Robert Fairchild stood on the threshold of something he almost feared to learn. Once, on a black, stormy night, they had sat together, father and son before the fire, silent for hours. Then the hand of the white-haired man had reached outward and rested for a moment on the young man's knee.

"I wrote something to you, Boy, a day or so ago," he had said. "That little illness I had prompted me to do it. I—I thought it was only fair to you. After I'm gone, look in the safe. You'll find the combination on a piece of paper hidden in a hole cut in that old European history in the bookcase. I have your promise, I know—that you'll not do it until after I'm gone."

Now Thornton Fairchild was gone. But a message had remained behind; one which the patient lips evidently had feared to utter during life. The heart of the son began to pound, slow and hard, as, with the memory of that conversation, he turned toward the bookcase and unlatched the paneled door. A moment more and the hollow history had given up its trust, a bit of paper scratched with numbers. Robert Fairchild turned toward the stairs and the small room on the second floor which had served as his father's bedroom.

There he hesitated before the little iron safe in the corner, summoning the courage to unlock the doors of a dead man's past.

The safe had not been opened in years; that was evident from the creaking of the plungers as they fell, the gummy resistance of the knob as Fairchild turned it in accordance with the directions on the paper. Finally, a great wrench, and the bolt was drawn grudgingly back; a strong pull, and the safe opened.

Fairchild crouched for a moment, staring, before he reached for the thinner of two envelopes which lay before him. A moment later he straightened and turned toward the light. A crinkling of paper, a quick-drawn sigh between clenched teeth; it was a letter; his strange, quiet, hunted-appearing father was talking to him through the medium of ink and paper, after death. He read:

that may possibly come to you. I am praying that the years have made a difference, and that Fortune may smile upon you as she frowned on me. Certainly, she can injure me no longer. My face is run; I am beyond earthly fortunes.

"Therefore, when you have finished with this, take the deeds inclosed in the larger envelope and go to St. Louis. There, look up Henry F. Beamish, attorney-at-law, in the Princess building. He will explain them to you.

"Beyond this, I fear, there is little that can aid you. I cannot find the strength, now that I face it, to tell you what you may find if you follow the lure that the other envelope holds forth to you.

"There is always the hope that Fortune may be kind to me at last, and smile upon my memory by never letting you know why I have been the sort of man you have known, and not the jovial, genial companion that a father should be. But there are certain things, my son, which defeat a man. Therefore is it not better that it remain behind a cloud until such time as Fortune may reveal it—and hope that such a time will never come? I think so—not for myself, for when you read this, I shall be gone; but for you, that you may not be handicapped by the knowledge of the thing which whittened my hair and aged me, long before my time.

"If he lives, and I am sure he does, there is one who will hurry to your aid as soon as he knows you need him. Accept his counsels, laugh at his little eccentricities if you will, but follow his judgment implicitly. Above all, ask him no questions that he does not care to answer—there are things that he may not deem wise to tell. It is only fair that he be given the right to choose his disclosures.

"There is little more to say. Beamish will attend to everything for you—if you care to go. Sell everything that is here; the house, the furniture, the belongings. It is my wish, and you will need the capital—if you go. And if circumstances should arise to bring before you the story of that which has caused me so much darkness, I have nothing to say in self-protection.

"I wrote something to you, Boy, a day or so ago," he had said. "That little illness I had prompted me to do it. I—I thought it was only fair to you. After I'm gone, look in the safe. You'll find the combination on a piece of paper hidden in a hole cut in that old European history in the bookcase. I have your promise, I know—that you'll not do it until after I'm gone."

Now Thornton Fairchild was gone. But a message had remained behind; one which the patient lips evidently had feared to utter during life. The heart of the son began to pound, slow and hard, as, with the memory of that conversation, he turned toward the bookcase and unlatched the paneled door. A moment more and the hollow history had given up its trust, a bit of paper scratched with numbers. Robert Fairchild turned toward the stairs and the small room on the second floor which had served as his father's bedroom.

There he hesitated before the little iron safe in the corner, summoning the courage to unlock the doors of a dead man's past.

The safe had not been opened in years; that was evident from the creaking of the plungers as they fell, the gummy resistance of the knob as Fairchild turned it in accordance with the directions on the paper. Finally, a great wrench, and the bolt was drawn grudgingly back; a strong pull, and the safe opened.

Fairchild crouched for a moment, staring, before he reached for the thinner of two envelopes which lay before him. A moment later he straightened and turned toward the light. A crinkling of paper, a quick-drawn sigh between clenched teeth; it was a letter; his strange, quiet, hunted-appearing father was talking to him through the medium of ink and paper, after death. He read:

"Before I begin this letter to you I must ask that you take no action whatever until you have seen my attorney—he will be yours from now on. I have never mentioned him to you before; it was not necessary and would only have brought you curiosity which I could not have satisfied. But now, I am afraid, the doors must be unlocked. I am gone. You are young, you have been a faithful son and you are deserving of every good fortune

Here was an assay slip, bearing figures and notations which Robert Fairchild could not understand, then a legal document, sealed and stamped, and bearing the words: County of Clear Creek, } ss. State of Colorado. } DEED PATENT.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That on this day of our Lord, February 22, 1892, Thornton W. Fairchild, having presented the necessary affidavits and statements of assessments accomplished in accordance with—

On it trailed in endless legal phraseology, telling in muddled, attorney-like language, the fact that the law had been fulfilled in its requirements, and that the claim for which Thornton Fairchild had worked was rightfully his, forever. Fairchild reached for the age-yellowed envelope to return the papers to their resting place. But he checked his motion involuntarily and for a moment held the envelope before him, staring at it with wide eyes. Then, as though to free by the stronger light of the window the haunting thing which faced him, he rose and hurried across the room, to better light, only to find it had not been imagination; the words still were before him, a sentence written in faint, faded ink proclaiming the contents to be "Papers Relating to the Blue Poppy Mine," and written across this a word in the bolder, harsher script of a man under stress of emotion, a word which fixed and staring, a word which spelled books of the past and evil threats of the future, the single, ominous word: "ACCURSED!"

CHAPTER II.

In spite of all that omens could foretell, in spite of the dull, gloomy life which had done its best to fashion a matter-of-fact brain for Robert Fairchild, one sentence in that letter had found an echo, had started a pulsating something within him that he never before had known:

"It is the blood of an adventurer." And it seemed that Robert Fairchild needed no more than the knowledge to feel the tingle of it; the old house suddenly became stuffy and prisonlike as he wandered through it. Again and again, pounded through his head the fact that only a night of travel intervened between Indianapolis and St. Louis; within twelve hours he could be in the office of Henry Beamish. And then—

A hurried resolution. A hasty packing of a traveling bag and the cashing of a check at the cigar store down on the corner. A wakeful night while the train clattered along upon its journey. At last:

"I'm Robert Fairchild," he said, as he faced a white-haired, Cupid-faced man in the rather dingy offices in the Princess building. A slow smile spread over the pudgy features of the genial-appearing attorney, and he waved a fat hand toward the office's extra chair.

"Sit down, Son," came casually. "Needn't have announced yourself. I'd have known you—just like your father, Boy. How is he?" Then his face suddenly sobered. "I'm afraid your presence is the answer. Am I right?" Fairchild nodded gravely. The old attorney stared out of the window to the grimy roof and signboards of the next building.

"Perhaps it's better so," he said at last. "Did he get any cheerier before he went?"

"No. Afraid of every step on the veranda, of every knock at the door." Again the attorney stared out of the window.

"And you? Are you afraid?" "Of what?"

The lawyer smiled. "I don't know. Only—" and he leaned forward—"it's just as though I were living my younger days over again this morning. It doesn't seem any time at all since your father was sitting just about where you are now, and you, Boy, how much you look like he looked that morning! The same gray-blue eyes, the same dark hair, the same strong shoulders, and good, manly chin, the same build—and look of determination about him. The call of adventure was in his blood, and he set there all enthusiastic, telling me what he intended doing and asking my advice—although he wouldn't have followed it if I had given it. Back home was a baby and the woman he loved, and out West was sudden wealth, waiting for the right man to come along and find it. God! White-haired old Beamish chuckled with the memory of it. "Then four years later," the tone changed suddenly, "he came back."

"What then?" Fairchild was on the edge of his chair. But Beamish only spread his hands.

"Truthfully, Boy, I don't know. I have guessed—but I won't tell you what. All I know is that your father found what he was looking for and was on the point of achieving his every dream, when something happened. Then three men simply disappeared from the mining camp, announcing that they had failed and were going to hunt new diggings. That was all. One of them was your father—"

"But you said that he'd found—" "Silver, running twenty ounces to the ton on an eight-inch vein which gave evidences of being only the beginning of a bonanza! I know, because he had written me that, a month before."

"And he abandoned it?" "And he forgotten what he had written when I saw him again. I didn't question him. He went home then, after giving me enough money to pay the taxes on the mine for the next twenty years, simply as his attorney and without divulging his whereabouts. I did it. Eight years or so later I saw him in Indianapolis. He gave me more money—enough for eleven or twelve years—"

"And that was ten years ago?" Robert Fairchild's eyes were reminiscent. "I remember—I was only a kid. He sold off everything he had, except the house."

Henry Beamish walked to his safe and fumbled there a moment, to return at last with a few slips of paper. "Here's the answer," he said quietly. "The taxes are paid until 1922."

Robert Fairchild studied the receipts carefully—futilely. They told him nothing. The lawyer stood looking down upon him; at last he laid a hand on his shoulder.

"Boy," came quickly, "I know just about what you're thinking. I've spent a few hours at the same kind of a job myself, and I've called old Henry Beamish more kinds of a fool than you can think of for not coming right out flat-footed and making Thornton tell me the whole story. But some way when I'd look into those eyes with the fire all dead and ashen within them, and see the lines of an old man in his young face, I just couldn't do it."

"So you can't tell me nothing?" "I'm afraid that's true—in one way. In another I'm a fund of information. Tonight you and I will go to Indianapolis and probate the will—it's simple enough; I've had it in my safe for ten years. After that, you become the owner of the Blue Poppy mine, to do with as you choose."

"But—" "Don't ask my advice, Boy. I haven't any. Your father told me what to do if you decided to try your luck—and silver's at $1.29. It means a lot of money for anybody who can produce pay ore—unless what he said about the mine pinching out was true."

Again the thrill of a new thing went through Robert Fairchild's veins, something he never had felt until twelve hours before; again the urge for strange places, new scenes, the fire of the hunt after the hidden wealth of silver-seamed hills. Robert Fairchild's life had been a plodding thing of books and accounts, of high desks which as yet had failed to stoop his shoulders, of stuffy offices which had been thwarted so far in their grip at his lung power; the long walk in the morning and the tired trudge homeward at night. But the recoil had not exerted itself against an office-cramped brain, a dusty ledger-filled life that suddenly felt itself crying out for the free, open country, without hardly knowing what the term meant. Old Beamish caught the light in the eyes, the quick contraction of the hands, and smiled.

"You don't need to tell me, Son," he said slowly. "I can see the symptoms. You've got the fever—you're going back to work that mine. Perhaps," and he shrugged his shoulders, "it's just as well. But there are certain things to remember."

"Name them." "O'had is thirty-eight miles from Denver. That's your goal. Out there, they'll tell you how the mine caved in, and how Thornton Fairchild, who had worked it, together with his two men, Harry Harkins, a Cornishman, and Sissie Larsen, Swede, left town one night for Crimble Creek—and that they never came back. That's the story they'll tell you. Agree with it. Tell them that Harkins, as far as you know, went back to Cornwall, and that you have heard vaguely that Larsen later followed the mining game farther out west."

"Is it the truth?" "How do I know? It's good enough—people shouldn't ask questions. Tell nothing more than that—and be careful of your friends. There is one man to watch—if he is still alive. They call him 'Squint' Rodaine, and he may or may not still be there. I don't know—I'm only sure of the fact that your father hated him, fought him and feared him. The mine tunnel is two miles up Kentucky gulch and one hundred yards to the right. A surveyor can lead you to the very spot. It's been abandoned now for thirty years. What you'll find there is more than I can guess. But, Boy, and his hand clenched tight on Robert Fairchild's shoulder, "whatever you do, whatever you run into, whatever friends or enemies you find awaiting you, don't let that light die out of your eyes and don't pull in that chin! If you find a fight on your hands, whether it's man, beast or nature, sell into it! If you run into things that cut your very heart out to learn—beat 'em down and keep going! And win! There—that's all the advice I know. Meet me at the 11:10 train for Indianapolis. Goodby!"

"Goodby—I'll be there." Fairchild grasped the pudgy hand and left the office. For a moment afterward, old Henry Beamish stood thinking and looking out over the dingy roof adjacent. Then, somewhat absently, he pressed the ancient electric button for his more ancient stenographer.

"Call a messenger, please," he ordered when she entered, "I want to send a cablegram."

CHAPTER III

Three weeks later, Robert Fairchild sat in the smoking compartment of the Overland Limited, looking at the Rocky mountains in the distance. In his pocket were a few hundred dollars; in the bank in Indianapolis a few thousand, representing the final proceeds of the sale of everything that had connected him with a rather dreary past. Out before him—

Three weeks had created a metamorphosis in what had been a plodding, matter-of-fact man with dreams which did not extend beyond his ledgers and his gloomy home—but now a man leaning his head against the window of a rushing train, staring ahead toward the Rockies and the rainbow which held for him. Back to the place where his father had gone with dreams aglow was the son traveling now—back into the rumpled mountains where the blue haze hung low and protecting as though over mysteries and treasures which awaited one man and one alone. It thrilled Fairchild, it caused his heart to tug and pull—nor could he tell exactly why.

The hills came closer. Still closer; then, when it seemed that the train must plunge straight into them, they drew away again, as though through some optical illusion, and brooded in the background, as the long, transcontinental train began to bring over frogs and switches as it made its entrance into Denver. Fairchild sat through the long chute and to a ticket window.

"When can I get a train for Ohadi?" The ticket seller smiled. "You can't get one."

"But the map shows that a railroad runs there—"

"Ran there, you mean," chaffed the clerk. "The best you can do is to get to Forks Creek and walk the rest of the way. That's a narrow-gauge line, and Clear creek's been on a rampage. It took out about two hundred feet of trestle, and there won't be a train into Ohadi for a week. Stranger out here?"

"Very much of one." "In a hurry to get to Ohadi?" "Yes."

"Then you can go uptown and hire a taxi—they've got big cars for mountain work and there are good roads all the way. It'll cost fifteen or twenty dollars. Or—"

Fairchild smiled. "Give me the other system if you've got one. I'm not terribly long on cash—for taxis."

"Certainly. No use spending that money if you've got a little pep, and it isn't a matter of life or death. Go up to the Central loop—anybody can direct you—and catch a street car for Golden. That eats up fifteen miles and leaves just twenty-three miles more. Then ask somebody to point out the road over Mount Lookout. Machines go along there every few minutes—no trouble at all to catch a ride. You'll be in Ohadi in no time."

Fairchild obeyed the instructions, and in the baggage room rechecked his trunk to follow him, lightening his traveling bag at the same time until it carried only necessities. A lunchbox, then the street car. Three quarters of an hour later, he began the five-mile trudge up the broad, smooth, carefully groomed automobile highway which masters Mount Lookout. A rumbling sound behind him, then he stepped to one side, a grimy truck driver leaped out to shout as he passed:

"Want a lift? Hop on! Can't stop—too much grade."

A running leap, and Fairchild seated himself on the tailboard of the truck, swinging his legs and looking out over the fading plains as the truck roared and clattered upward along the twisting mountain road.

Upward, still upward! The town below became merely a checkerboard thing, the lake a dot of gleaming silver, the stream a scintillating ribbon stretching off into the foothills. A turn, and they skirted a tremendous valley, its slopes falling away in sheer descents from the roadway. A darkened, misty stretch of road, fringed by pines, then a fogging journey over rolling table-land. At last came a voice from the driver's seat.

"Turn off up here at Genesee mountain. Which way do you go?"

"Trying to get to Ohadi." Fairchild shouted it above the roar of the engine. The driver waved a hand forward.

"Keep to the main road. Drop off when I make the turn."

"Thanks for the lift."

"Aw, forget it."

The truck wheeled from the main road and chugged away, leaving Fairchild afoot, making as much progress as possible toward his goal until good fortune should bring a swifter means of locomotion. Suddenly he wheeled. Behind him sounded the swift droning of a motor, cut-out open, as it rushed forward along the road—and the noise told a story of speed.

Far at the brow of a steep hill it appeared, seeming to hang in space for an instant before leaping downward. Rushing, plunging, once skidding dangerously at a small curve, it made the descent, bumped over a bridge, was lost for a second in the pines, then sped toward him, a big touring car, with a small, resolute figure clinging to the wheel. Then, with a report like a revolver shot, the machine suddenly slewed in drunken fashion far to one side of the road, hung dangerously over the steep cliff an instant, righted itself, swayed forward and stopped, barely twenty-five yards away. Staring, Robert Fairchild saw that a small, trim figure had leaped forth and was waving excitedly to him, and he ran forward.

His first glance had proclaimed it a boy; the second had told a different story. A girl—dressed in far different fashion from Robert Fairchild's limited specifications of feminine garb—she caused him to gasp in surprise, then to stop and stare. Again she waved a hand and stamped a foot excitedly; a vehement little thing in a snug whipcord riding habit and a checkered cap pulled tight over closely braided hair, she awaited him with all the impatience of impetuous womanhood.

"For goodness' sake, come here!" she called, as he still stood gaping. "I'll give you five dollars. Hurry!"

Fairchild managed to voice the fact that he would be willing to help without remuneration, as he hurried forward. She dived for the tonneau, jerking with all her strength at the heavy seat cushion, as he stepped to the running board beside her.

"Can't get this dingy thing up!" she panted. "Always sticks when you're in a hurry. That's it! Jerk it. Thanks! Here!" She reached forward and a small, sun-tanned hand grasped a greasy sack. "Slide under the back axle and put this sack in place, will you? And rush it! I've got to change a tire in nothing flat! Hurry!"

Fairchild, almost before he knew it, found himself under the rear of the car, fussing with a refractory lifting jack and trying to keep his eyes from the view of trimly clad, brown-shod little feet, as they pattered about at the side of the car, hurried to the running board, then stopped as wrenches and a hammer clattered to the ground. Then one shoe was raised, to press tight against a wheel; metal touched metal, a feminine gasp sounded as strength was exerted in vain, then eddying dust as the foot stamped, accompanied by an exasperated ejaculation.

"Dig those old lugs! They're rusted! Got that jack in place yet?" "Yes! I'm raising the car now."

"Oh, please hurry." There was pleading in the tone now. "Please!"

The car creaked upward. Out came Fairchild, brushing the dust from his clothes. But already the girl was pressing the lug wrench into his hands.

"Don't mind that dirt," came her exclamation. "I'll give you some extra money to get your suit cleaned. Loosen those lugs, while I get the spare tire off the back. And for goodness' sake, please hurry!"

Astonishment had taken away speech for Fairchild. He could only wonder—and obey, while behind him a girl in whipcord riding habit and closed-poled cap fingered first on one tan-elud foot, then on the other, anxiously watching the road behind her and calling constantly for speed.

At last the job was finished, the girl fastening the useless shoe behind the machine while Fairchild tightened the last of the lugs. Then as he straightened, a small figure shot to his side, took the wrench from his hand and sent it, with the other tools, clattering into the tonneau. A tiny hand went into a pocket, something that crinkled was shoved into the man's grasp, and while he stood there gasping, she leaped to the driver's seat, slammed the door, spun the starter until it whined, and with open cut-out roaring again, was off and away, rocking down the mountain side, around a curve and out of sight—while Fairchild merely stood there, staring wonderingly at a ten-dollar bill!

A noise from the rear, growing louder, and the amazed man turned to see a second machine, filled with men, careening toward him. Fifty feet away the brakes creaked, and the big automobile came to a skidding, dust-throwing stop. A sun-browned man in a Stetson hat, metal badge gleaming from beneath his coat, leaned forth.

"Which way did he go?" "He? Robert Fairchild stared.

"Yeh. Didn't a man just pass here in an automobile? Where'd he go—straight on the main road or off on the circuit trail?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"I Made One Mistake—That of Fear."

"They Call Him 'Squint' Rodaine."

Bow on Left Side.

The reason why the bow on a man's hat is placed on the left side is because in the days when men wore long, sweeping plumes in their hats and swords at their belts it was important that the plumes should not in any way interfere with the free use of the sword arm. So, as most men were right-handed, they wore their plumes on the left side of their hats. In the plainer fashions of today the custom still survives in the simple bow of the hatband. In ultra-fashionable styles, of course, the bow is placed at the back of the hat.

Oysters Grow on Trees.
In the Farnata harbor of Italy the sight of oysters growing on trees may be seen. This does not mean that the oysters grow like apples and such fruit, but it is the custom there, where the oysters are cultivated, to put trees into the water for the young oysters to cling to. This scheme is said to save innumerable baby oysters which would otherwise be devoured by fish before they had a chance to develop. The trees are placed in the water with the trunks up and when it comes time to transplant the oysters the trees are taken up bodily and carried to the new grounds, saving much labor.

SCHOOL DAYS

Uncommon Sense
By JOHN BLAKE

REAL COURAGE
To be feared of a thing and yet do it, is what makes the prettiest kind of a man.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

If YOU have read "Kidnapped" you remember the quotation. It was spoken by Alan Breck after the boy, David, had stood for a minute terrified on the brink of a roaring torrent, and then, still sick with the fear of it, leaped across.
To Alan Breck, the leap meant little. It required no courage for him to make it, for he knew very little of fear. But for the boy, who did the thing he feared as he feared death, it was a real act of heroism.

The only real courage consists in doing the thing we are afraid to do. The hulking prizefighter-of the John Sullivan type, who has as much imagination as a grizzly bear, is not brave. He is sure he is going to win. It takes no courage to go into a winning fight.
The bully is never brave. In fact he is always a coward. Feeling sure that his superior size will carry him through, he picks quarrels as a pleasant method of passing his time.
Put this same bully into the ring with a large hungry tiger, face him with a man who looks as if he enjoyed shooting bullies as much as the bully enjoys thrashing his physical inferiors, and all the courage oozes out of the bully.
You will never know whether you are brave or not till you find yourself in a position where you are afraid to do something that ought to be done.
If you do it, you have courage. If you shrink from it and quit, you have not.

Never mistake a physical willingness to take a chance, to attempt some dangerous thing for the kind of courage that counts.
It is not a brave but a very foolish man who walks a tight rope over Niagara falls. It is a brave man, who not wanting to die, and knowing that an operation may send him out of the world, cheerfully goes to the table, to take the one chance that may mean his continued support of his wife or his dependents.
Often the timid school boy, who fears to quarrel, and tries his best to keep his peace with his fellows, gets the name of coward. But when this same boy has to fight for what he thinks is his honor, or to save a little boy from a bully, he becomes a very dangerous fighter.

Real courage is not daunted by pain. The boy or the man who fights when he is afraid to, stops being afraid of anything, pain, or a black eye, or punishment. He fights because he has courage, and he usually wins.
There is more real courage in this world than you fancy. It is behind all great achievement. If you have it, you are fortunate. But don't be sure, either that you have or that you haven't it till you have done or refused to do something you were afraid to do.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

I have a cinder in my eye,
A feeling that I much despise.
I s'pose I should rejoice because I haven't one in both my eyes.

Mother's Cook Book

"Our cares are the mothers, not only of our charities and virtues, but of our best joys and most cheering and enduring pleasures."

WHAT TO EAT

IF ONE has an old fashioned Scotch kettle with an iron cover there are so many toothsome dishes which may be prepared by cooking in it.
Chicken, the ordinary fried chicken, never tastes half so appetizing as when it is cooked in this little iron kettle, covered so tightly that all the flavors and juices are caught and stay in the delicious morsels of tender meat. Put the chicken with a little butter and sweet lard mixed into the hot kettle and stir until each piece is lightly browned, then add a tablespoonful of water, cover tightly and cook slowly, adding a tablespoonful of water occasionally as it is needed when the meat gets brown. The secret of this kind of cooking is in keeping as little water as possible to steam and cook the meat. Each piece will be moist, brown, and well cooked. The seasoning is added when the chicken has been first browned.
Pot roast of beef, veal, pork or mutton are delicious cooked in this kettle in the same way.

Parsnips.
Cook fresh hard parsnips in boiling salted water until tender. Peel and cut in halves lengthwise. In a frying pan have a tablespoonful or two of bacon or other sweet fat, lay in the parsnips, sprinkle lightly with sugar, salt and a dash of cayenne and brown on both sides.
Another way of serving parsnips is to cook them until tender, mash and drop a spoonful into a fritter batter; when cooked, fry in deep fat. Serve hot with roast.

Broiled Finnan Haddie.
Soak the fish twenty minutes in warm water, drain and dry thoroughly. Brush with melted butter and fry until browned on both sides. Transfer to a hot platter on which has been poured a cupful of cream or white sauce. Set into the oven a minute to heat the cream and serve hot with baked potatoes.

Southern Crullers.
Beat together one egg and one-half cupful of sugar, then add one-half cupful of sour cream, one-half teaspoonful of soda and two to three teaspoonful of flour, with a little salt. Flavor to taste; roll out as soft as possible. Chill before rolling and less flour will be needed to handle.

WHY?

DO WE "SEE STARS" WHEN HIT ON HEAD?

EACH of the five senses—sight, hearing, feeling, taste and touch—has its special set of nerves through which sensations are recorded in the brain. With the exception of the nerves of touch, which extend to all parts of the body, these perform special functions for certain individual organs—the nerves of sight being connected with the eye, those of smell with the nose, those of taste with the mouth and those of hearing with the ears.

Whenever the brain receives a sudden shock, such as would follow a blow on the head, the vision-nerves are disturbed in such a way as to produce the effect of seeing flashes of light or "stars," as the resultant impression is usually called. The extremely sensitive eye-nerves cannot be jarred without producing this effect of light—while a severe blow will often react in a similar manner upon the nerves of hearing, thus leading the person who is struck to imagine that he is listening to odd unusual sounds.

WHY THAT LAME BACK?

That morning lameness—those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't be handicapped by a bad back—look to your kidneys. You will make no mistake by following this East Jordan resident's example.
Mrs. Wm. St. Charles says: "I was bothered quite a good deal with my back and after I did my washing my back was so lame and sore I dreaded to move. There was a soreness across my kidneys that hurt me all the time and when I was on my feet a little while my back gave out. I often had headaches and was troubled with dizziness. I was nervous, depressed and irritable. My kidneys were weak and irregular. I saw in the paper how well Doan's Kidney Pills were liked and I decided to try them. I purchased a few boxes at Hite's Drug Store and they cured me."

Las Palmas.
Las Palmas is the chief town in the Canary Islands, and is situated on the northeast shores of the Grand Canary. The town enjoys considerable trade and is coming into prominence as a health resort. Its population is about 45,000.

Cheese Seasoned Four Years.
One of the best grades of Italian cheese is sold only after it has been seasoned for at least four years.

He Loses.
When a girl discovers she can't make a fool of a man, she decides there is no use wasting time with such a fool.

NO MORE BACKACHE FOR HER
Mrs. J. M. Gaskill, Etna Green, Ind., writes: "I suffered from severe backache and sharp pains. I could not stoop over. Foley Kidney Pills gave me such relief that I can not praise them too highly." This standard remedy for kidney trouble and bladder ailments can be taken with absolute safety.—Hite's Drug Store.

PROBATE ORDER.
STATE OF MICHIGAN, The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.
At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix in said County, on the 17th day of July A. D. 1922.

It is ordered that four months from this date be allowed for creditors to present their claims against said estate, and that such claims will be heard by said court on Thursday the 24th day of November A. D. 1922, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the Probate office in the city of Charlevoix.

GRANDMA NEVER LET HER HAIR GET GRAY

She Kept Her Locks Dark and Glossy, with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it is done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation. Improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.
Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY SKIN

Irritation and Breaking Out Often Healed Over Night, Says Skin Specialist

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.
Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It never fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.

There in a graveyard surrounded by high white walls, which has not been opened for a single interment for more than a thousand years, is a great tomb with a palm tree growing out of the stone roof, a wonder of the Orient in itself, which is supposed to mark the last place of rest of our first mother.
