Harvest Time Is Fair Time

County Fair is the Great Holiday Week for Farmers.

With the ripening of rye and oats comes the whirl of the binder among the waving fields of gold; and while midsummer still reigns supreme, autumn awaits on the threshold. Harvest time should be and usually is the most satisfying part of the farmer's year, for it is then that he reaps the reward of his efforts.

Fair time comes before the main harvesting, and is a week of pleasure for the live farmer and his family. The automobile having solved the transportation problem, there is no reason why all farmers of the present day should not support their home fair, if not as exhibitors, at least as patrons of the booster type. We are all interested in the fall fair, though some of us may not realize it. You, Mr. Grouch, and you, Mr. Pess I. Mist, are affected by crops, by dairy products, by everything pertaining to the products of the soil.

Fairs cannot be held without the wholehearted support of the community. Make your plans accordingly. Get out of the rut and arrange to attend the Charlevoix County Fair at East Jordan beginning Monday, lasting the entire week.

A big program is being prepared for your enjoyment; and you will learn a lot besides. There will be baseball games, horse races, good music, splendid exhibits of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and grain.

Frank F. Bird, R. F. D. 3, Charlevoix, is the Secretary. He will gladly furnish any information desired.

DEBT CANCELLING NOT CONSIDERED

BRITISH SUGGESTION IN NOTE GETS NO FAVORABLE RESPONSE IN U. S.

AMERICAN ATTITUDE UNCHANGED

Secretary Mellon Declares Government Will Continue Negotiations for Funding of Foreign Obligations.

Washington—Cancellation of inter-allied indebtedness, as suggested by Great Britain in a recent note to European nations, has no place in the policy of the United States toward war time advances, high treasury officials have declared.

In the view of Secretary Mellon, as explained at the treasury, the United States has all to lose and nothing to gain through an all around cancellation of an international war debt and such a suggestion has never been considered by this government.

The British note, according to Mellon, in no way changes the attitude of the United States toward the expected liquidation of foreign indebtedness and will not alter its intention of continuing negotiations for funding the foreign obligation.

Latest figures obtained at the treasury department showed the obligations of the various foreign governments to the United States, including interest, accrued and unpaid, is close to $12,000,000,000. Of this amount Great Britain owes $4,746,000,000.

The loans of Great Britain to her allies during the war totalled $8,765,496,000. This does not include $699,840,000 loaned by the British governments to the United States, dominions and colonies. The total loans of the United States under the Liberty loan act, not including unpaid interest, were $9,434,000,000 so that the original amount of the loans of the British were about equal to those of the United States.

Senator McCumber, North Dakota, chairman of the senate finance committee, and second in rank among the republican members of the influential foreign relations committee, reflected the overwhelming view of the majority in congress.

"We will never cancel our war debts," said Senator McCumber. "There is a very pronounced sentiment in the United States that our war debts should be taken up as soon as possible."

"I am opposed to cancellation of war debts," said Senator Lodge, Massachusetts, republican leader in the senate. "I favor liberal terms of settlement, however."

MISS FRANCES W. MOLLARD BECOMES BRIDE OF PRESLEY E. BERGER.

The following article, taken from the San Bernardino Sun of Aug. 1st, refers to a former East Jordan girl who grew to young womanhood in our city.

Ontario, California, Aug. 1.—Coming as a distinct surprise to scores of their friends was the marriage at eight o'clock this evening of Miss Frances Winifred Mollard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mollard, to Presley E. Berger, son of County Auditor S. G. Berger and Mrs. Berger, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, 316 West F. Street.

The Rev. John Barron Toomay, pastor of Bethel Congregational Church, was the officiant and the ceremony was witnessed by members of the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom only.

The engagement of Mr. Berger and Miss Mollard was no secret, but plans for the wedding had been kept secret so that the event caused a real surprise. The original intention had been for a large wedding, but a recent threatened breakdown on the part of the bride's mother resulted in the decision for the more simple ceremony.

Blossoms and fernery were used artistically in the decoration of the rooms of the Mollard home. There were no attendants, the entire ceremony being marked by its simplicity. The bride was attired in a smart gown of black tulle and crepe paneled in white with jet bead trimming. Her going-away gown was a tailored creation of periwinkle blue with hat and gloves to harmonize.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Berger left by motor for Del Monte, where they will honeymoon for a fortnight. Upon their return they are to be at home to their friends at bungalow No. 3, El Morado Court.

The bride, an attractive blonde, has made her home in Ontario for a number of years and is popular in a large circle of friends.

The bridegroom has spent the greater part of his life in Ontario and numbers his friends by his acquaintances. For the past 14 years he has been a valued member of the clerical force at the Ontario postoffice and is now in line for the postmastership of the local office.

A few specimens escaped, and about twenty years later the insect had become a serious pest. Between 1890 and 1900 the state of Massachusetts spent about a million dollars in combating the insect, which became scarce temporarily, but speedily resumed its depredations when the campaign against it was discontinued.

Friday See Rise In Farm Income

May Be Increased By $50,000,000 Annually In Five Years

Within five years President David Friday of M. A. C. hopes to increase the annual net income of the farming industry in the state by $50,000,000, he told several thousand visitors at the annual summer farmers' day at the college last Friday. This is possible by improved production and marketing, he said.

In order to accomplish his aim, he will ask the legislature at its next meeting for an appropriation of $2,000,000, chiefly for agricultural extension. "We must enlist the aid of every newspaper, every Grange, every Gleaners' organization, every farmers' club, every farm bureau and every chamber of commerce in the state," said President Friday. "Even the Catholic priest and the Methodist preacher and the Jewish rabbi will be glad to come along."

He referred to the egg production of the state, 60,000,000 dozen during the last year, and declared that by getting rid of the eggless hens the annual production may be raised to 100,000,000 dozen. The same can be done with dairy cattle, hogs fruit and every other branch of Michigan agriculture, he held.

The other and more important phase of the problem is one of marketing and distribution, said President Friday. "Twenty years ago there were one million people on the farms and one million people in the cities of Michigan. Now there are still one million people on the farms, but two and a quarter million people in the cities.

We haven't adjusted ourselves to the change. Our farmers haven't taken advantage of the markets at their doors, to say nothing of the possibilities of shipping goods to Chicago by cheap water transportation. My duty is to analyze the markets of Lansing, Flint, Battle Creek, Jackson, Detroit, Grand Rapids and the other Michigan cities and find out what the people are eating, what they will pay for. The middleman is too busy to do it for himself. We must do it for him. We must lay out for the farmer a program of what to produce, how to pack it, how to study the market. That's what the manufacturer is doing for himself. By performing this service for the farmer, we may make it possible for him to get from 25 per cent more to double what he is getting today.

"If the people of the state will help me put through this program, we'll sow alfalfa until we have 2,000,000 acres after the next five years. We'll show the people of America what can be done when we go about it. Michigan was the first state to establish an agricultural college even though people said the idea was a farce. I propose to duplicate this experience once more by giving the United States an object lesson in what can be done in efficient agricultural production and marketing."

President Friday warned his hearers not to expect an increase in farm prices during the next two years. However other commodities are becoming cheaper, he said. Taking up national issues, he declared that railway wages must be cut by $50,000,000 annually if railway workers are not to receive an income proportionately greater than that of farmers. He deplored the bickering between industrial groups and predicted that when this strife is eliminated poverty will be unknown.

In concluding he said, "I dedicate this college and all its resources for building a nation such as the world has always dreamed of and has never seen before."

The afternoon program was featured by a parade of all the blooded livestock owned by the college. Preceding President Friday's address, short talks were given by C. L. Brody, secretary of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, who presided; L. Whitney Watkins of Manchester, chairman of the state board of agriculture; and H. H. Halladay, secretary of M. A. C. During the morning the visitors spent their time looking over the various departmental exhibits, the college barns and the experimental crop plots.

TROTTER DIVORCE TRIAL ENDED

Judge M. L. Dunham Holds Up Decision in Sensational Case.

Grand Rapids—Arguments of counsel, in Mrs. Melvin E. Trotter's action against her preacher husband for a decree of separate maintenance, were completed before Judge M. L. Dunham, in superior court, August 3.

The written opinion of the court, expected to go into many of the details of the case, will not be filed for some time, Judge Dunham indicated. He has gone on a trip to northern Michigan for rest and recreation, following 27 days' attention to the Trotter case. When he returns, he said, he will dispose of a matter from Bay county before him for decision, and then he will turn to the Trotter matter.

FRENCH RADICALS STILL BUSY

Second Anarchist Plot Against Poincare Unearthed By Police.

Paris—That another anarchist plot exists against the life of Premier Poincare was revealed through a police search for a member of the society of anarchists in this city.

The police had arrested one anarchist who confessed the plot and gave the name of another anarchist who, he said, was involved. The police made a vigorous search in all the places frequented by anarchists, but were unable to locate the accomplice. An attempt was made recently to kill Premier Poincare while he was returning from a military review at Longchamps.

Townsend For U. S. Senator

Has Served Michigan Faithfully For Twenty Years.

For the past twenty years Chas. E. Townsend of Jackson has been a representative of the state of Michigan and the United States in Washington as a member of Congress, eight years of which period he was a member of the lower house, and with the ending of the present term twelve years in the senate.

With years of experience in the legislation of the nation, a broad and comprehensive understanding of world-wide affairs, Mr. Townsend is particularly well fitted to continue in his present official capacity, and this when taken in connection with an honest ambition to perform the greatest amount of good for the greatest number of people in this country wherever located, makes him a valuable national character.

Senator Townsend has attained his high rank through ability and peculiar fitness, and this bespeaks the character of the man; and the fact that he progresses and overcomes obstacles that are apparently unsurmountable adds luster to his character.

Senator Townsend's raise to a position of first rank of American statesman and statecraft has been by steady and continuous progression,—never a backward slip, but always a step forward,—safe, steady and sure of his course.

In public life Senator Townsend has steadily grown in public favor. In his everyday life he is an individual of keen conception, rare judgement, with an exceptional faculty for seeing into the distant future, discovering obstacles which are a long way off and with requisite intellectual capacity to forestall any approaching disaster of national character as well as to differentiate between a local desire and a nation's need. Senator Townsend is entitled to the support of every republican of the state. He is one hundred per cent American. His record in Washington is clean. His reputation as a citizen is unimpaired. In his entire history of public life there is ample evidence of faithful service for the public good.

State May Get Kentucky Coal

Ford Representatives Appeal to Gov. Morrow to Help.

Frankfort, Ky.—Representatives of Henry Ford on Sunday appealed to Governor Edwin P. Morrow to assist them in obtaining hurried relief for Michigan by devising some means whereby the production of Ford's eastern Kentucky coal mines can be diverted to the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad, which is prepared to transport it at once to Detroit and other Michigan cities.

Following a conference which was held for several hours in the afternoon at the governor's mansion, the Ford officials left here apparently satisfied with their visit and with the hope they will be able to get some of the coal consigned to their tracks.

Governor Morrow declined to state what took place at the conference with the Michigan men. It is reported however, that he reiterated to the visitors his previous statement that he wanted just as large a production of coal by Kentucky mines in the present national emergency as could be arranged for, and that surplus supplies might be forwarded to northern cities which are natural customers of Kentucky.

It was understood that E. G. Liebold, Charles E. Sorenson, W. L. Rockettman and C. B. Longley, members of the Ford party, would return to Louisville in time for the first meeting the following day of the Kentucky coal commission which was appointed by Morrow to take charge of production and rationing of the product in this state.

Kentucky operators have been notified by Herbert Hoover that they would be allowed a rate of $3.75 a ton at the mine, instead of $5.50 previously fixed as a fair price. It was also reported here that some northern utilities are paying as high as $11 a ton at the mines.

Sulphur Springs, Mo.—Failure of an engineer to heed a block signal caused the rear-end collision on the Missouri Pacific here August 5 in which 37 persons were killed and 138 injured, 25 seriously, according to John Cannon, assistant general manager of the road.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

GIVE THE BEST

TO GET the best from life you must give the best.

In whatever position you may be, there should be no reluctance to make a full exchange in which measure for measure is given on both sides in absolute sincerity.

That you should make a fashion of doing this encourages others who are taking note of you to do likewise.

They find through experience that there comes with continued actions of this kind an inexpressible gladness which fills their hearts with friendship and lightens their countenances with sunny complacency.

There are no pleasurable experiences of this sort felt by those who are constantly complaining about the shortcomings of others, forgetful all the while of their own.

You cannot feel the balmy air of spring mornings unless you go forth into the glorious outdoors and become a part of it, nor can you give to others if you have nothing to give.

That you should waste your days in ignorance of this fundamental truth underlying happiness is a deplorable error, which, as the years pass softly over you, graying your hairs and marking little lines upon your face, often becomes a burden almost too heavy for self-respect.

You cannot have the best without divorcing from your heart all forms of selfishness, egotism, jealousy, covetousness, doubt and pride.

Your kit of fine sentiments may be packed to the top, but unless you shall stoop, open the bag, take out each sentiment one by one and use them as a plumber uses his tools in daily life, the opportunity to get the best in life will never come to you.

Like diamonds, such inspirations must be cut and polished to bring out their beauty, brilliancy and worth.

High-born ideas, unless put to use at their birth, soon become rusty and of no value.

In your privacy you may fondle them and dream of the wonderful things you intend to do, but if you replace them time and again in the old worn bundle without attempting to test their value in noble work you are not making an effort to get the best, or even a portion of the best, waiting anywhere for every man and woman willing to sacrifice, help others and give the best within them.

LIFE

THE POWER OF OBERON

THE Fairies as everyone knows do not like to be out in the daytime or at least in the sunlight, but one day they had to be out to undo the work of King Oberon, who is very jealous of the power of the Fairies and never loses a chance to display his powers of magic charm.

King Oberon is called the King of the Fairies, but he really has little to do with ruling and has power only during the hour between the night and day.

One night the Goblins capering about came across King Oberon sitting under a leaf in the woods waiting for the charmed hour when at his command all things would be under his control.

"Could you change us into big spiders with lots of legs?" asked one Goblin.

"Of course I could. Nothing easier," replied King Oberon. "Why do you wish to become spiders?" he asked. "You can be lions just as well if you like."

Sitting under a leaf in the woods.

"Oh, no, we'd rather be spiders with lots of legs so we can run fast," said the mischievous little fellow. "We want to frighten the Fairies at their feast in the dell."

This pleased King Oberon very much, but he did not tell the Goblins that his power lasted only a short time, and that they might have to remain spiders until the next night unless they returned within the magic hour.

So the Goblins called all their brothers to be right on time when the magic hour came around and King Oberon changed them all into spiders which scampered to the dell as fast as their legs would carry them.

The little Fairies and their Queen were sitting around a cobweb table, cloth spread upon the ground eating fairly food when all at once from the tree and bushes dropped those naughty spider Goblins right in their midst.

Up jumped the Fairies crying out with fright and away they ran, hiding under all sorts of things to escape their tormentors.

But the Goblins were not satisfied with frightening the Fairies once; they ran this way and that, trying to find them and send them flitting about like so many scared little butterflies.

When the Fairy Queen saw the spider Goblins looking for the Fairies she knew that some charmed spell was upon them and when she touched one with her wand and that did not change it to a Goblin she knew that it was King Oberon's work, for she could not undo his work until his hour was over.

So she whispered to all of her Fairies telling them not to be frightened, that it was the mischievous Goblins and that they would be sorry little fellows if they could be kept in the dell until the magic hour of King Oberon's power had passed.

So the Fairies pretended to be very much frightened and the Goblins intent upon their pranks and thinking it was great fun stayed until the sun was up.

They scampered off in a hurry when they saw the light, but, of course, King Oberon had gone home long before.

"Oh, what shall we do?" moaned the Goblins, for in their spidery forms they could not give the magic signal, the three knocks that opened the door to their homes inside the moss-covered rocks.

And there the Queen and her Fairies found them, for they followed them soon after they ran, well knowing what would happen and if anyone begged hard to be helped out of trouble those mischievous little Goblins did when they saw the Fairy Queen.

They promised to be good, they promised never, never again to go to King Oberon to be changed into any form and they told the Queen she was the most powerful among the magic folk, and they thought King Oberon only a pretender and not at all a king.

With one wave from the Queen's wand and those of her subjects, the Goblins received their own forms again, and as soon as they had thanked the Queen and the Fairies they ran with shamed faces for their homes, while the Fairies and their Queen flitted off to Fairyland and were soon in their beds fast asleep. U. S. POWERLESS, SAYS PRESIDENT

HARDING TELLS GOVERNOR THAT GOVERNMENT CANNOT INTERFERE NOW.

MINERS REFUSE STATE'S PLEA

President of Union Refuses to Cooperate in the Plan Suggested by Gov. Groesbeck.

Lansing—A letter from President Harding declares in effect that the Federal Government is powerless to interfere with the hostile attitude of the national organization of the United Mine Workers toward independent local agreements; that at present nothing can be done except to enable men, willing to work, to work in safety, and that the big issue in the coal strike dispute is national dictation "unhesitatingly assumed by the mine workers" which must be taken care of by legislation.

The President's letter was in reply to a telegram sent by Gov. Groesbeck when he informed the President that he was asking John L. Lewis, president of the United Workers, to grant Michigan miners permission to enter agreements independently of their national affiliation and return to work.

The Governor answered the President's letter by writing that he could not concede that the Federal Government has not the power "to protect our citizens from the embarrassing situation that faces us."

President T. Leo Jones, of the Michigan mine workers, refused to cooperate in the move suggested by the Governor at Saginaw last week. The refusal was brought about partly by the miners' disquietment over alleged discrimination by Michigan consumers in favor of Kentucky and Pennsylvania producers, Jones hinted. Besides refusing to order his men back to work under the arrangement suggested by the governor, Jones declined to ask John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, for permission to accede to the governor's request.

"Governor Groesbeck is simply asking the Michigan miners to dig their own graves," he declared in a statement issued after the conference.

HOPE FOR RAIL SETTLEMENT

Lewis Says Men Will Be Working In Less Than 30 Days.

Philadelphia—Filled with optimism after his conference with four district leaders of the central competitive field, John L. Lewis, International president of the United Mine Workers, declared Sunday he expected to see the miners back in the pits shortly.

When pressed as to what he meant by "shortly," Lewis said he expected to see the miners at work within 30 days.

He reported his assertion that an interstate joint conference between miners and operators would be held within the next few days.

Sailors' Union Votes Strike.

Chicago—Ninety-four per cent of the membership of the Sailors' Union of the Great Lakes has voted in favor of authorizing the executive committee to call a strike on the ships of the Lake Carriers' association, K. About 4,000 sailors are included in the union.

Superstition About Sneezing.

Sneezing was the subject of much superstition in the ancient world, and almost always endowed with sinister import. Jewish folk lore has it that in the first ages of the world sneezing was always a presage of death until the coming of Jacob. That astute patriarch, anxious lest he himself should perish from such an insignificant cause, besought the Almighty to endow sneezing with more beneficent attributes, and since then it has been lucky to sneeze between noon and midnight.

MARJORIE

MARJORIE, sometimes spelled Margery, is one of the many popular derivatives of Margaret, which has gained a place of its own as a separate name. Since it was evolved from Margaret it necessarily signifies "pearl" and was taken from the Persian term for the jewel.

When Margaret was subjected to the influence of other countries and became Marguerite in France; Margherita in Italy and Spain, the Scotch favorite was the fitting name of Marjorie. Margaret Ethel took it to the land of the thistle and seems to have contrived to make it almost the national Scottish name. Margaret gained vogue in England through the famous Margaret of Anjou, Margaret Beaufort, mother of Henry VII, and her granddaughter Margaret Tudor.

But the oldest of all derivatives is Marjorie. Bruce's daughter is perhaps the most famous of the Scottish women so called. It was readily contracted to Malsie—who does not recall "prond Malsie" of the ballad? The surname Marjoribanks was derived from the barony of Raltilo granted to Marjorie Bruce on her marriage with the high steward of Scotland. Margery also flourished in Scotland where the little poem originated:

"My sister Margery, gentle May,
Took all my little bones away."

May is an endearment evolved from Marjorie and Margaret. Edward Steadman wrote a poem combining the two names which runs:

"One can never quite forget
Eyes like yours, May Margaret,
Eyes of dewy violet.
Nothing like them, Margaret,
Save the blossoms newly born
Of the May and of the morn."

Marjorie's talismanic jewel is the pearl. Old superstition has it that she will be blessed with good fortune and will win great love. Monday is her lucky day and two her lucky number. The daisy is her flower.

YOUR HAND How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE HAND OF A MUSICIAN

WHEN the lower joints of the fingers, and especially of the finger of Saturn, the middle finger, are well knotted, it is a mark of skill in musical composition. Skill in execution of music is indicated by finger tips that are well padded.

Some authorities on palmistry hold that a very good sign of skill and talent—perhaps even genius—in music is indicated by a finger of Jupiter (or forefinger) that is bent or curved; in rare cases, even to a degree approaching the semi-circled. This mark or sign is accentuated and strengthened if the finger of Mercury, the little finger, is also bent in similar fashion. This shows a good musician of any sort, but especially a pianist. If only one finger is bent, some hold, it is a sign of a person who simply has a great love of music, while the bending of both fingers means a performer of music.

A short, sharp vertical line on the mount of Apollo, at the base of the third finger, is held to mean, invariably, skill in music. If the line of fortune (running from the line of life toward Mercury) leaves the line of life at a sharp angle, it means love of music.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—At Thornton Fairchild's death his son Robert learns there has been a dark period in his father's life which for almost thirty years has caused him suffering. The secret is hinted at in a document left by the elder Fairchild, which also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to see Henry Beamish, a lawyer.

CHAPTER II.—Beamish tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Ohadi, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against a certain man, "Squint" Rodaine, his father's enemy. Robert decides to go to Ohadi.

CHAPTER III.—On the road to Ohadi from Denver Fairchild assists a girl, apparently in a frenzy of haste, to change a tire on her auto. When she has left, the sheriff and a posse appear, in pursuit of a bandit. Fairchild bewildered, misleads them as to the direction the girl had taken.

"It wasn't a man. It was a boy, just about fifteen years old."

"Sure?"

"Oh, yes—" Fairchild was swimming in deep water now. "I got a good look at him. He—he took that road off to the left."

It was the opposite one to which the hurrying fugitive in whipcord had taken. There was doubt in the interrogator's eyes.

"Sure of that?" he queried. "I'm the sheriff of Arapahoe county. That's an auto bandit ahead of us. We—"

"Well, I wouldn't swear to it. There was another machine ahead, and I lost 'em both for a second down there by the turn."

"Probably him, all right." The voice came from the tonneau. "Maybe he figured to give us the slip and get back to Denver."

"Let's go!" The sheriff was pressing a foot on the accelerator. Down the hill went the car, to skid, then to make a short turn on to the road which led away from the scene, leaving behind a man standing in the middle of the road, staring at a ten-dollar bill—and wondering why he had lied!

CHAPTER IV

Wonderment which got nowhere. The sheriff's car returned before Fairchild reached the bottom of the grade, and again stopped to survey the scene of defeat.

"Dangerous character?" Fairchild hardly knew why he asked the question. The sheriff smiled grimly.

"If it was the fellow we were after, he was plenty dangerous. We were trailing him on word from Denver—described the car and said he'd pulled a daylight hold-up on a pay-wagon for the Smelter company—so when the car went through Golden, we took up the trail a couple of blocks behind. He kept the same speed for a little while until one of my deputies got a little anxious and took a shot at a tire. Man, how he turned on the juice! I thought that thing was a jack rabbit, the way it went up the hill! I guess it's us back to the office."

The automobile went its way then, and Fairchild, still wondering, and so thoroughly did the incident engross him that it was not until a truck had come to a full stop behind him, and a driver mingled a shout with the tooting of his horn, that he turned to allow its passage.

"Didn't hear you, old man," he apologized. "Could you give a fellow a lift?"

"Guess so." It was friendly, even though a disgruntled, "hop on." And Fairchild hopped, once more to sit on the tailboard, swinging his legs, but this time his eyes saw the ever-changing scenery without noticing it. In spite of himself, Fairchild found himself constantly staring at a vision of a pretty girl in a riding habit, with dark-brown hair straying about equally dark-brown eyes, almost frenzied in her efforts to change a tire in time to elude a pursuing sheriff. Some way, it all didn't blend. If she hadn't committed some sort of deprecation against the law, why on earth was she willing to part with ten dollars, merely to save a few moments in changing a tire and thus elude a sheriff? If there had been nothing wrong, could not a moment of explanation have satisfied anyone of the fact?

It was too much for anyone, and Fairchild knew it. Yet he clung grimly to the mystery as the truck clattered on, mile after mile. A small town gradually was coming into view. A mile more, then the truck stopped with a jerk.

"Where you bound for, pardner?"

"Ohadi."

"That's it, straight ahead. I turn off here. Miner?"

Fairchild shrugged his shoulders and nodded noncommittally.

"Just thought I'd ask. Plenty of work around here for single and double Jackers. Things are beginning to look up a bit—at least in silver."

"Thanks. Do you know a good place to stop?"

"Yeh. Mother Howard's boarding house. Everybody goes there, sooner or later. You'll see it on the left-hand side of the street before you get to the main block. Good old girl; knows how to treat anybody in the mining game from operators on down. She was here when mining was ailing!" Fairchild lifted his bag from the rear of the vehicle, waved a farewell to the driver and started into the village. And then the vision of the girl departed, momentarily, to give place to other thoughts, other pictures, of a day long gone.

The sun was slanting low, throwing deep shadows from the hills into the little valley with its chattering, milk-white stream, softening the scars of the mountains with their great refuse dumps; reminders of hopes of twenty years before and as bare of vegetation as in the days when the pick and gad and drill of the prospector tore the rock loose from its hiding place under the surface of the ground. The scrub pines of the almost barren mountains took on a fluffier, softer tone; the jutting rocks melted away into their own shadows; it was a picture of peace and of memories.

And it had been here that Thornton Fairchild, back in the nineties, had dreamed his dreams and fought his fight. A sudden cramping caught the son's heart, and it pounded with something akin to fear. The old foreboding of his father's letter had come upon him, the mysterious thread of that, elusive, intangible thing great enough to break the will and resistance of a strong man and turn him into a weeping, silent, white-haired—sitting by a window, waiting for death. "What had it been? Why had it come upon his father? How could it be fought? He brushed away the beady perspiration with a gesture almost of anger, then with a look of relief, turned in at a small white gate toward a big, rambling, building which proclaimed itself, by the sign on the door, to be Mother Howard's boarding house.

A moment of waiting, then he faced a gray-haired, kindly faced woman, who stared at him with wide-open eyes as she stood, hands on hips, before him.

"Don't you tell me I don't know you! If you ain't a Fairchild, I'll never feed another miner corn beef and cabbage as long as I live. Ain't you, now?" she persisted, "ain't you a Fairchild?"

The man laughed in spite of himself. "You guessed it."

"You're Thornton Fairchild's boy?" She had reached out for his hand, and then, bustling about him, drew him into the big "parlor." "Didn't I know you the minute I saw you? Land, you're the picture of your dad! Sakes alive, how is he?"

There was a moment of silence. Fairchild found himself suddenly hating and loathing as he stood before her.

"He's—he's gone, Mrs. Howard."

"Dead?" She put up both hands. "It don't seem possible. And me remembering him looking just like you, full of life and strong and—"

"Our pictures of him are a good deal different. I—I guess you knew him when everything was all right for him. Things were different after he got home again."

Mother Howard looked quickly about her, then with a swift motion closed the door.

"Son," she asked in a low voice, "didn't he ever get over it?"

"It?" Fairchild felt that he stood on the threshold of discoveries. "What do you mean?"

"Didn't he ever tell you anything, Son?"

"No. I—"

"Well, there wasn't any need to." But Mother Howard's sudden embarrassment, her change of color, told Fairchild it wasn't the truth. "He just had a little bad luck out here, that was all. His—his mine pinched out just when he'd thought he'd struck it rich—or something like that."

"Are you sure that is the truth?"

For a second they faced each other. Robert Fairchild serious and intent, Mother Howard looking at him, with eyes defiant, yet compassionate. Suddenly they twinkled, the lips broke from their straight line into a smile, and a kindly old hand reached out to take him by the arm.

"Don't you stand there and try to tell Mother Howard she don't know what she's talking about!" came in tones of mock severity. "Hear me? Now, you get up them steps and wash up for dinner. Take the first room on the right. It's a nice, cheery place."

In his room, Fairchild tried not to think. His brain was becoming too crammed with queries, with strange happenings and with aggravating mysticisms of the life into which his father's death had thrown him to permit clearness of vision. Even in Mother Howard he had not been able to escape it; she told all too plainly, both by her actions and her words, that she knew something of the mystery of the past—and had failed to keep the knowledge from him.

It was too galling for thought. Robert Fairchild hastily made his toilet, then answered the ringing of the dinner bell, to be introduced to strong-shouldered men who gathered about the long tables; Cornishmen, who talked an "h-less" language, ruddy-faced Americans, and a sprinkling of English, all of whom conversed about things which were to Fairchild as so much Greek—"levels" and "stopes" and "winzes," of "skips" and "manways" and "rises," which meant nothing to the man who yet must master them all, if he were to follow his ambition.

Robert Fairchild spoke but seldom, except to acknowledge the introductions as Mother Howard made him known to each of his table mates. But it was not aloofness; from the first, the newcomer had liked the men about him, liked the ruggedness, the mingling of culture with the lack of it, liked the enthusiasm, the muscle and brawn, liked them all—all but two.

Instinctively, from the first mention of his name, he felt they were watching him, two men who sat far in the rear of the big dining room, older than the other occupants, far less inviting in appearance. One was small, though chunky in build, with sandy hair and eyebrows; with weak, filmy blue eyes over which the lids blinked constantly. The other, black-haired with streaks of gray, powerful in his build, and with a walrus-like mustache drooping over hard lips, was the sort of antithesis naturally to be found in the company of the smaller, sandy-complexioned man. Who they were, what they were, Fairchild did not know, except from the general attributes which told that they too followed the great game of mining. But one thing was certain; they watched him throughout the meal; they talked about him in low tones and ceased when Mother Howard came near; they seemed to recognize in him someone who brought both curiosity and innate enmity to the surface. And more; long before the rest had finished their meal, they rose and left the room, intent, apparently, upon some important mission.

After that, Fairchild ate with less of a relish. In his mind was the certainty that these two men knew him—or at least knew about him—and that they did not relish his presence. Nor were his suspicions long in being fulfilled. Hardly had he reached the hall, when the beckoning eyes of Mother Howard signaled to him. Instinctively he waited for the other diners to pass him, then looked eagerly toward Mother Howard as she once more approached.

"I don't know what you're doing here," came shortly, "but I want to."

Fairchild straightened. "There isn't much to tell you," he answered quietly. "My father left me the Blue Poppy mine in his will. I'm here to work it."

"Know anything about mining?"

"Not a thing."

"Or the people you're liable to have to buck up against?"

"Very little."

"Then, Son," and Mother Howard laid a kindly hand on his arm, "what-ever you do, keep your plans to yourself and don't talk too much. And what's more, if you happen to get into communication with Blindeye Bozeman and Taylor Bill, lie your head off. Maybe you saw 'em, a sandy-haired fellow and a big man with a black mustache, sitting at the back of the room?" Fairchild nodded.

"Well, stay away from them. They belong to 'Squint' Rodaine. Know him?"

She shot the question sharply. Again Fairchild nodded.

"I've heard the name. Who is he?"

A voice called to Mother Howard from the dining room. She turned away, then leaned close to Robert Fairchild. "He's a miner, and he's always been a miner. Right now, he's mixed up with some of the biggest people in town. He's always been a man to be afraid of—and he was your father's worst enemy!"

Then, leaving Fairchild staring after her, she moved on to her duties in the kitchen.

CHAPTER V

Impatiently Fairchild awaited Mother Howard's return, and when at last she came forth from the kitchen, he drew her into the old parlor, shadowy now in the gathering dusk, and closed the doors.

"My father never harmed a soul in his life!" Fairchild's voice was hot, resentful. Mother Howard went on:

"I know he didn't, Son. I'm only telling the story. Miners are superstitious as a general rule, and they're childish at believing things. It all worked in your father's case—with the exception of Harry and 'Sissie' Larsen, a Swede with a high voice, just about like mine. That's why they gave him the name. He went to work. A few months later they got into good ore. It looked like the bad luck was over at last. Then—"

Mother Howard hesitated at the brink of the very nubbin of it all, to Robert Fairchild. A long moment followed, in which he repressed a desire to seize her and wrest it from her, and at last—

"It was about dusk one night," she went on. "Harry came in and took me with him into this very room. He kissed me and told me that he must go away. He asked me if I would go with him—without knowing why. And, Son, I trusted him. I would have in the dark as you. All that I ever knew was that your father came to this boarding house when he was a young man, the very first day that he ever struck Ohadi. He didn't have much money, but he was enthusiastic—and it wasn't long before he'd told me about his wife and baby back in Indianapolis and how he'd like to win out for their sake. As for me—well, they always called me Mother Howard, even when I was a young thing, sort of setting my cap for every good-looking young man that came along. I guess that's why I never caught one of 'em—I always insisted on darning their socks and looking after all their troubles for 'em instead of going out buggy-riding with some other fellow and making 'em jealous." She sighed ever so slightly, then chuckled. "But that ain't getting to the point, though, is it?"

"If you could tell me about my father—"

"I'm going to—all I know. Things were a lot different out here then from what they were later. Everywhere around the hills and gulches you could see prospectors, with their rags and little picks, fooling around like life didn't mean anything in the world to 'em, except to grub around in those rocks."

"Your father was one of these men. 'Squint' Rodaine was another—they called him that because at some time in his life he'd tried to shoot faster than the other fellow—and didn't do it. The bullet hit right between his eyes, but it must have had poor powder behind it—all it did was to cut through the skin and go straight up his forehead. When the wound healed, the scar drew his eyes close together, like a Chinaman's. You never see Squint's eyes more than half open."

"And he crooked, just like his eyes—" Mother Howard's voice bore a touch of resentment. "I never liked him from the minute I first saw him, and I liked him less afterward. Then I got next to his game."

"Your father had been prospecting just like everybody else. He'd come on float on Kentucky gulch and was trying to follow it to the vein. Squint saw him—and what's more, he saw that float. It looked good to Squint—and late that night, I heard him and his two drinking partners, Blindeye Bozeman and Taylor Bill—they just reverse his name for the sound of it—talking in Blindeye's room. I'm a woman—" Mother Howard chuckled.

"So I just leaned my head against the door and listened. Then I flew downstairs to wait for your father when he came in from sitting up half the night to get an assay on that float. Squint and them two others was figuring on jumping his claim before he could file on it and all that."

"Well, there was a big Cornishman here that I was kind of sweet on—and I guess I always will be. He's been gone now, though, ever since your father left. I got him and asked him to help. And Harry was just the kind of a fellow that would do it. Out in the dead of night they went and staked out your father's claim—Harry was to get 25 per cent—and early the next morning your dad was waiting to file on it, while Harry was waiting for them. And what a fight it must have been—that Harry was a wildcat in those younger days." She laughed, then her voice grew serious.

"But all had its effect. Rodaine didn't jump that claim, and a few of us around here filed dummy claims enough in the vicinity to keep him off of getting too close—but there was one way we couldn't stop him. He had power, and he always had it—and he's got it now. A lot of awful strange things happened to your father after that—charges were filed against him for things he never did. Men jumped on him in the dark, then went to the district attorney's office and accused him of making the attack. And the funny part was that the district attorney's office always believed them—and not him. Once they had him just at the edge of the penitentiary, but I—I happened to know a few things that—well, he didn't go." Again Mother Howard chuckled, only to grow serious once more. "Men who went to work for your father and Harry disappeared, or got hurt accidentally in the mine or just quit through the bad name it was getting. Once Harry, coming down from the tunnel at night, stepped on a little bridge that always before had been as secure and safe as the hills themselves. It fell, with him—they went down together thirty feet, and there was nothing but Nature to blame for it, in spite of what we three thought. Then, at last, they got a fellow who was willing to work for them in spite of what Rodaine's crowd—and it consisted of everybody in power—hinted about your father's bad reputation back East and—"

"My father never harmed a soul in his life!" Fairchild's voice was hot, resentful. Mother Howard went on:

"I know he didn't, Son. I'm only telling the story. Miners are superstitious as a general rule, and they're childish at believing things. It all worked in your father's case—with the exception of Harry and 'Sissie' Larsen, a Swede with a high voice, just about like mine. That's why they gave him the name. He went to work. done anything for him—but I wasn't as old then as I am now. I refused—and to this day, I don't know why. It was just woman, I guess. Then he asked me if I would help him. I said I would.

"He didn't tell me much; except that he had been uptown spreading the word that the ore had pinched out and that the hanging rock had caved in and that he and 'Sissie' and your father were through, that they were beaten and were going away that night. But—and Harry waited a long time before he told me this—'Sissie' was not going with them."

"I'm putting a lot in your hands," he told me, 'but you've got to help us. 'Sissie' won't be there—and I can't tell you why. The town must think that he is. Your voice is just like 'Sissie's.' You've got to help us out of town."

"And I promised. Late that night, the three of us drove up the main street, your father on one side of the seat, Harry on the other, and me, dressed in some of 'Sissie's' clothes, half hidden between them. Nobody dreamed that I was anyone else but the Swede—my head was tipped forward, so they couldn't see my features. We drove outside town and stopped. Then we said goodby, and I put on an old dress that I had brought with me and sneaked back home. Nobody knew the difference."

"But Larsen—?"

"You know as much as I do, Son." "You never saw Larsen again?"

"I never saw any of them. That was the end."

"But Rodaine—?"

"He's still here. You'll hear from him—plenty soon. I could see that, the minute Blindeye Bozeman and Taylor Bill began taking your measure. You noticed they left the table before the meal was over? It was to tell Rodaine."

"Then he'll fight me, too?"

Mother Howard laughed—and her voice was harsh.

"Rodaine's a rattlesnake. His son's a crazy Laura. He drove her that way. She lives by herself, in an old house on the Georgetown road. And she'd kill for him, even if he does beat her when she goes to his house and begs him to take her back. That's the kind of a crowd it is. Just to put a good finish on it all, the young 'un moves in the best society in town and spends most of his time trying to argue the former district judge's daughter into marrying him. So there you are. That's all Mother Howard knows, Son."

She turned to the door and then, turning, patted Fairchild on the shoulder.

"Boy," came quietly, "you've got a broad back and a good head. Rodaine beat your father—don't let him beat you. And always remember one thing: Old Mother Howard's played the game before, and she'll play it with you—dark streets aren't exactly the place for you."

Robert Fairchild obeyed the instructions, a victim of many a conjecture, many an attempt at reasoning as he sought sleep that was far away. Again and again there rose before him the vision of two men in an open buggy, with a person between them whom Ohadi believed to be an effeminate-voiced Swede; in reality, only a woman. And why had they adopted the expedient? Why had not Larsen been with them in reality? It was hours before Fairchild found sleep, and even then it was a thing of troubled visions.

Streaming sun awakened him, and he hurried to the dining room to find himself the last lodger at the tables. He ate a rather hasty meal, made more so by an impatient waitress, then with the necessary papers in his pocket, Fairchild started toward the courthouse and the legal procedure which must be undergone before he made his first trip to the mine.

A block or two, and then Fairchild suddenly halted. Crossing the street at an angle just before him was a young woman whose features, whose mannerisms he recognized. The whipcord riding habit had given place now to a tailored suit which deprived her of the boyishness that had been so apparent on their first meeting. The cap had disappeared before a close-fitting, varicolored turban. But the straying brown hair still was there, the brown eyes, the piquant little nose and the prettily formed lips. Fairchild's heart thumped—nor did he stop to consider why. A quickening of his pace, and he met her just as she stepped to the curb.

NO MORE BACKACHE FOR HER Mrs. J. M. Gaskill, Etna Green, Ind., writes: "I suffered from severe backache and sharp pains. I could not stoop over. Foley Kidney Pills gave me such relief that I can not praise them too highly. This standard remedy for kidney trouble and bladder ailments can be taken with absolute safety.—Hite's Drug Store."

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health. When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair. A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. It's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears. After another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Making Use of Dreams.

Dreams can be made use of. If you have a problem to solve, then set your subjective to work on it overnight.

Robert Louis Stevenson conscientiously used the visions of the night for this purpose and turned them to much profit.

Coleridge's exquisite poem, "Kubla Khan," is a famous instance of dream work; while Dante and Voltaire worked in their sleep.

Forming Habits.

Whatever you would make habitual, practice it; and if you would not make a thing habitual, do not practice it, but habituate yourself to something else.—Epictetus.

RUPTURE

Expert Called To Bellaire

Seeley Co.'s truss expert from Chicago will be at the Riverside Hotel, and will remain in Bellaire this Tuesday only, Aug. 15th. He says: "The Spermatic Shield will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Being a vast advancement over all former methods—exemplifying instantaneous effects—immediately appreciable and withstanding any strain or position no matter the size or location. Large or difficult cases, or incisional ruptures (following operations) specially soiled. Birds Alone Save World.

The world is rapidly learning that deeds of kindness toward birds and animals pay dividends no less than those bestowed upon mankind. The returns from bird protection are, both large and constant. Of the economic value of the birds Mr. Henshaw, chief of the biological survey, stated long ago his firm conviction that without them the globe in a comparatively short time would become uninhabitable because of the ravages of destructive insects.

Flight of Pigeons.

Experiments have shown that pigeons are able to outstrip the fastest express trains, although on the average they fly at the rate of only 34 miles an hour. A French expert expresses the opinion that they can attain a velocity of more than 70 miles an hour. They are said to be unable to fly long distances in a perfectly straight line; apparently they are easily driven aside by shifting air currents.

Amphibian Fish.

The climbing fish or climbing perch is able to live out of water for several days without distress, during which it regularly breathes air; when it returns to the water it uses its gills, so that it may be regarded as truly amphibian.

A Five-Minute Sermon on Church Advertising

DID you ever think of the church as a business proposition? Why should a church always be considered a subject for charity? How often have you heard men say: "I don't go to church very often, but when I do go they are always begging for money. That's the reason I don't go often."

It's a narrow point of view, of course, for a church needs money to run it, just the same as a business. But why shouldn't a church be run as a business and be independent and not dependent? It can be, but business methods must be adopted.

All successful businesses advertise. The greatest competitor of the church on Sundays—the movies—advertises liberally. You have attractions in your church. You have a story to tell. You have a minister who can preach with a punch. The "regulars" may know it, but it isn't the "regulars" you want to reach—it's the "irregulars" and the "never-rememberers." That's where the church has got to grow. And you have got to go after them the same as the business house goes after business.

You know that every business man keeps track of his sales every week and every month and he compares them with a year ago. And if he isn't running ahead he wants to know why. Do the churches keep track of their attendance? They know what the subscriptions are

WHY THAT LAME BACK?

That morning lameness — those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't be handicapped by a bad back—look to your kidneys. You will make no mistake by following this East Jordan resident's example. Mrs. Wm. St. Charles says: "I was bothered quite a good deal with my back and after I did my washing my back was so lame and sore I dreaded to move. There was a soreness across my kidneys that hurt me all the time and when I was on my feet a little while my back gave out. I often had headaches and was troubled with dizziness. I was nervous, depressed and irritable. My kidneys were weak and irregular. I saw in the paper how well Doan's Kidney Pills were liked and I decided to try them. I purchased a few boxes at Hite's Drug Store and they cured me."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Owosso—After having been an invalid for 10 years and having been confined to her bed for the last nine years, Mrs. Emma Kelly, 63 years old, died at her home here.

Saginaw—Employment work for veterans for the entire lower peninsula of Michigan will be directed hereafter from the Saginaw office of the U. S. Veterans' bureau.

Marquette—Municipal Judge Charles F. Button has returned after a three weeks' vacation, in company with John Van Horn. They made a tour of the lake shore in a rowboat.

Ann Arbor—Professor T. H. Read, professor of municipal science in the University of California, was appointed professor of municipal science at University of Michigan, for the ensuing term.

Ontonagon—Attempting to save Miss Doris McKinnon from drowning in the river near here, Al Nelson, Edgin, Ill., lost his life. The young woman was rescued by Leo Goulet of Ontonagon.

Pontiac—Three persons are recovering from injuries suffered when a Michigan Airline passenger train jumped the track and rolled down an embankment near South Lyons. None of the injured was seriously hurt. Traffic was delayed for about an hour.

Traverse City—A report has reached here which probably gives the record for cherry picking in this region. George McManus picked 40 crates of cherries in 12 hours at the farm of his father, Arthur McManus, on the Peninsula.

Lansing—Michigan voters will probably be asked at the April election to pass on a proposed constitutional amendment providing for 2 per cent tax on gross incomes. Clifford L. Chapman, of Gaylord, is proponent of the change.

Flint—One thousand bottles of Canadian beer, camouflaged as tinne goods, and 40 quarts of moonshine whisky, were found here by liquor officers in a barn at the rear of 905 Pleasant street. The owner of the place is sought.

Saginaw—Charles Hudson, former auto salesman, who was arrested at Melette, South Dakota, for stealing a demonstration car, escaped in a crowd from a Saginaw officer in Illinois Central passenger station, Chicago, as he was being brought back here.

Saginaw—About 500 children, frequenters of Saginaw's playgrounds, are being trained by Miss Florence Roeter, one of the city's talented dancing teachers, for a pageant to be held at Hoyt park, August 26. "The Golden Apple of Venus" is to be presented.

Port Huron—The Park hotel at Algonac, leased by Paddy McGraw, former Detroit saloonkeeper, has been ordered closed for one year by Judge Harvey Tappan. The court order for the closure of the hotel comes as a climax to a series of recent liquor raids.

Ann Arbor—"Just married and hurrying home," Hugh M. Edwards, Detroit attorney, explained to Justice Thomas when arraigned here on a speeding charge. The court let Edwards off with a $10 fine. "That's the best excuse you could have," he told him.

Lansing—Howard D. Bloomer, manager of the Dodge estates, notified Governor Grosbeck that the estates will donate and install radio sets at the state school for girls, Adria, industrial school for boys and the Michigan school for the blind at Lansing, and at the Ionia reformatory.

Detroit—A boarder, who, it is alleged, bought sentimental talking machine records for the wife of the man with whom he lived, is being sued by the latter for $25,000. Allan Reid, 5044 Tillman avenue, charges that Carson Lester, by the talking machine and other methods, alienated the affections of Elizabeth Adelaide Reid.

Mt. Clemens—Circuit Judge Harvey Tappan, of Port Huron, has handed down a decision in favor of the village of New Baltimore in the case of William Buesser against the village. Buesser started suit against the village for $500, alleging that he was erroneously assessed this amount on the village tax rolls. Judge Tappan's decision states that the assessment was valid.

Battle Creek—City and county authorities are carrying on what appears to be a fruitless search for the driver of a Ford touring car from which Mrs. Minnie C. Ward, 21-year-old wife of Ernest Ward, jumped when the man she believed was befriending her refused to stop his car at a street intersection near her home. The bride of a few months is in a critical condition suffering from a concussion of the brain.

Lansing—Michigan autoists are due for retrenchment and retaliation against the hated and despised "speed cop." In an opinion, Merlin Wiley, attorney general, stated highway guardians are not excepted from violation of the same statutes which they are paid to enforce. The tourist can make complaint against the speed cop providing he is not in the act of performing his duty. Mr. Wiley wrote in answer to a letter received from an autoist who claimed traffic police there were speeding flagrantly while not chasing a speeder.

Detroit—Under an ordinance passed by the city council, the Pennsylvania Railway Co. is given right to make extensive improvements on its property here and to begin work on a $15,000,000 terminal.

Ionia—Samuel Thuma, 55 years old and Salem Ostrander, 5 years old, are dying at their homes, here as the result of being kicked by horses. Thuma was standing by his team, when one of the horses lashed out and struck him. The child was at play when injured.

Albion—When a large piece of sheet iron being carried by them at the Union Steel Products company's factory here, touched two electric wires, Claude Pritchard was killed and another employee was uninjured. Pritchard, 45 years old, leaves a wife and two daughters.

Ironwood—A new bond issue of $75,000 will be issued shortly by the Gogebic Masonic Temple association for the completion of the Masonic temple here. The old issue of $50,000 will be recalled. The building, when completed will represent an investment of $175,000.

Cheboygan—Robbers broke into Horne & Emerts store at Mackinac Island and carried away a 1,200-pound safe. It is believed the thieves rolled the safe to the shore of the lake, a few rods away, and carried it off in a boat. The safe contained several thousand dollars.

Marshall—The Marshall school district will receive $13,620.80 as this year's allotment of primary school money. The second census taken in 1921 shows 994 persons of school age, with the rate fixed at $11.70 per capita. The school census this year is 1,003, the largest in many years.

Pontiac—Nathan E. Walker, Detroit jitney bus driver, was exonerated by a coroner's jury of any blame in connection with the death of Hammer Boushaw, a passenger who was killed July 22 when Walker's bus went off the road near Deer Lake Inn. Lansing—Acceptance of a bid of $7,678 by the state for the purchase of a "bargain lot" of Army supplies was received from the War Department by the State Administrative Board. It may be foolish, but I can not get away from the idea, and tonight, when I am through, I'm going to quit the job and find something else to do." That is what Clarence Morlock, 17 years old, told his mother when he left the house to work in the fields for a neighbor. A half hour before quitting time the tractor swerved sharply and turned over and the boy was killed.

Pontiac—The city commission cut the knot on the municipal salary question which has excited comment for several weeks. Petitions signed by several persons that they not put into effect a 10 per cent reduction voted last winter for August 1, were considered. Then a resolution was passed cutting heads of all departments, including city manager, 10 per cent. The heads were instructed to report schedules for employees based on the budget, which was made up with some leeway over the 90 per cent basis. A general cut may result.
