East Jordan Juniors Win

Junior Stock Judging Contest Won By Local Youths.

The first annual Boys and Girls Stock Judging Contest held at the County Fair, Thursday, under the auspices of the County Farm Bureau, exceeded all expectations. Following are the results:

Highest Score in Dairy Cattle—Jasper Stallard, East Jordan.
Beef Cattle—Nellie Raymond, Deer Lake.
Sheep—3 ties, L. Mayne, Harry Chorpene and Roy Vance, East Jordan.
Hogs—Jasper Stallard, East Jordan.
Those having the highest score in all four departments were the ones that were declared winners of the various livestock prizes. The judging was based as follows:
Placing—50 per cent.
Reasons for placing—40 per cent.
Neatness—10 per cent.
Those winning prizes under those conditions were as follows:
First Prize—Holstein Heifer Calf, Harry Chorpene, East Jordan.
Second Prize—Duroc Jersey Gilt, Merril Shaw, East Jordan.
Third Prize—Pen of Three Ewe Lambs, Manuel Bartholomew, East Jordan.
Fourth Prize—Poland-China Boar, Jasper Stallard, East Jordan.
Fifth Prize—Hampshire Gilt, Nellie Raymond, Deer Lake.

The three teams judging were from East Jordan, Deer Lake and Boyne Falls. East Jordan, first; Deer Lake, second; Boyne Falls, third.

The writer wishes to take this means of again thanking the Fair Association, The Farm Bureau, the Banks in the County, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Co-operative Marketing Associations in making it possible to buy the first three prizes. Also thanks should be expressed to Zimmerman Bros. of Traverse City who donated a Poland-China Boar as fourth prize, and Mr. Herbert Chorpene of East Jordan who donated the Hampshire Gilt as fifth prize.

From a standpoint of interest, it is needless to say that it was sufficient to warrant a contest of similar nature next year. Not only were the parents of children in the contest interested, but also many other adults were attracted by the crowd and it was only by repeated request that the adults were kept back so room could be made for the contestants.

The livestock used in the contest was judged by the regular stock judge, Geo. Boyce of the Soo, and he also scored all papers and all places were made by him.

It is the sincere and earnest desire of the County Agricultural Agent that this be the entering wedge for considerable more work with the boys and girls in the county along better livestock lines. No one can question but what there is a chance for great improvement in the livestock of Charlevoix County, and also but what Charlevoix County might be one of the best dairy and livestock counties in the State of Michigan. Now that the interest is started both in the young and the adults, let us maintain our present feeling, and accomplish results which are not only but gratifying to all but compensating to all.

Doings In Court

The residence of Charles Dickinson in East Jordan was searched by Sheriff Weaver, Monday, Sept. 11th, the Sheriff gathering in one perfectly good still and six gallons of the still's product. Dickinson was arranged before Justice Blount last Tuesday, Sept. 19th, pleaded guilty, and was bound over to the December term of Circuit Court. Bail was furnished.

James R. Doyle, arrested on the Fair grounds last week for assault and battery, was assessed $15.00 and costs by Justice Blount.

Earl Beardley (on parole) was arrested for drunkenness. Roy Bishaw was taken into custody by Under-Sheriff Cook for buying and furnishing liquor. Both were bound over to Circuit Court and in the County jail awaiting trial.

Gene Sutton was picked up by Under-Sheriff Cook Saturday night on a d. and d. charge. On Monday, Justice Blount assessed $15.00 and costs.

Several other cases are pending, but have not, as yet, come to the point for newspaper publicity.

ARE ABUNDANT CROPS A BLESSING?

"Are abundant crops a blessing?" This is the subject of an article which appeared in a recent issue of the American Farm Bureau Weekly News Letter.

It goes on to state that as the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture forecasts indicate another bumper crop for this year they are wondering what effect this will have on farm prosperity. Will big crops with the tendency to drive down prices yield less to producers than small crops or will the additional volume compensate for the probable lower prices?

There are many instances of the larger crops bringing smaller returns. This was true of some products in the year of 1910 compared with the year of 1911.

The potato production of 1910 was 349 million bushels, with a value of 195 million dollars or approximately 56 cents per bushel. In 1911 the production was 293 million bushels with a value of 234 million dollars or approximately 80 cents per bushel.

Let us take some figures in the case of wheat. In the case of wheat beginning with the year 1886 and comparing production and value for each year with the preceding year, it is noted that value moved in the same direction as volume 35 times and in the opposite direction 19 times. This means that the bigger crop brought a higher value and a smaller crop a lower value in 35 years out of 54, which is decidedly over half in favor of volume production. We may not especially be interested in cotton, but nevertheless over a series of 41 years, 22 times the bigger crop brought a higher value and a smaller crop a lower value.

However, these are not fair and just comparisons. The true issue at stake is the buying value of a crop. The money value of a crop, whether big or small is only half the story. The heart of the matter is this: Will the money received for the crop buy more or less of other commodities? Prices of other goods must be compared with the value of the crop. In this way, the purchasing power of the output is measured and the true condition of farm prosperity determined.

Beginning with the year 1913, the department of Research, which edited this article, has compiled the progress of the volume of production of 12 crops with the total value of crops and also their purchasing power. It was found that there is not a close correlation between the volume and value of production. Demand has been so variable during the period under review that it overshadows supply as a value determining factor. These variations must be largely explained by the character of demand in those periods.

During this same period (1913 to 1922) the value of the 12 crops combined increased or decreased with volume 4 times. In four of the nine years the larger output did mean a higher value, and the smaller output a lower value. This again signifies the fact that it is the purchasing power of the commodities which should govern our activities.

In analyzing the relationship between value of production and purchasing power it is seen that in 5 of the 9 years since 1913 volume and purchasing power move together. In other words 5 out of nine times the greater production would mean more favorable purchasing power, and the decreased production less favorable purchasing power.

Quoting the article as follows, it states: "The evidence thus far gained from the study of the combined crop figures since 1913 indicates that approximately half of the time farmers are better off during the big crop years and the other half of the time suffer loss. This is true, considered both from the standpoint of value and purchasing power. This study has taken no account of the increased expense of producing the bigger volume. If the abundant harvest comes as a result of favorable growing conditions, the extra expense would not be large. If it is due to the expansion of the acreage, the added cost would be an important item."

There are indirect influences flowing from abundant crops which are beneficial to the whole nation and react to the benefit of agriculture. With the promise of generous harvests, factories are likely to expand their activities and this will later bring to the farmer a greater volume and variety of finished goods, presumably at lower prices. This will add to his real prosperity."

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Tardiness

"Promptness" is the teacher's motto this year. Other years there have always been too many tardy marks, but this year the teachers are going to be very severe about it. In the grades all that are tardy must report to Mr. Duncanson. There have been only a few tardy so far and the best of school records is hoped for.

Alumni Versus High School

The Alumni and the High School will play their first game Friday, Sept. 22, at 4:15. This will be a preparation for the new boys for the bigger games of the season.

Of course the new boys are not expected to play a star game, but some of them who will make it interesting are Malpass, Kiling, Stewart, Johnson, Calkins, and Kenneth and Ronald Love and Walker.

Some of the old boys are Hudkins, Phillips, Hegerberg and Jones. The game promises to be snappy! Everybody come! If you like it, come again!

Girl's Basket Ball

Monday, after school, all the girls interested in Basket Ball met in the gymnasium, where they tore down crepe paper decorations from last year's Junior Hop.

The girls under direction of Miss Lillian Masselink, will have physical exercises, practice "peppy" passing of the ball, and accurate throwing of baskets, for some time before they start regular basket ball.

Senior Class Organization.

The Seniors called a class meeting Monday, Sept. 18th, for the purpose of electing officers. Roy Vance called the meeting to order and asked for nominations for president. Mabel Maddock being elected, then took charge of the meeting and the following officers were elected:

Mary Shedina—Vice-president.
Roy Vance—Treasurer.
Fern Flannery—Secretary.
Miss Shipp—Class Advisor.

Junior Class Organize

The Juniors were the third class to organize this year. On Monday, Sept. 18th, the Juniors elected for their class advisor, Miss Lillian Masselink and on the following day after school they had a class meeting to choose their officers. They elected for President—Aura McBride. Vice-President—Josephine Ekstrom. Secretary and Treasurer—Barton Stevenson.

Sophomore Class Organized

The Sophomores held a class meeting Friday the eighth to organize the class. The following officers were chosen for the year:

President—Kenneth Love.
Vice-President—Marie McDonald.
Secretary—Dorothea Malpass.
Treasurer—Leatha Cox.

The first part of the class meeting was conducted by the Class Advisor, Mrs. Wyatt, and the latter part by the new president, Kenneth Love. This is the first class in the Senior High School to organize this year.

Work in the Grades

Forty Kindergartners, under the instruction of Miss Clark, are learning about butterflies and trains. This week they will make paper houses and furniture, with some mamas and papas to "keep house."

The forty-four first graders are getting nicely started with Miss Gregory for a teacher.

The second graders have learned "At the Seaside" and "The Swing" by Robert L. Stevenson. There are forty in this grade.

Thirty-two people make up the third grade.

The Thirty-four, fourth graders, headed by Miss Franseth, are taking imaginary journeys to different parts of the world where food, shelter and clothing are obtained.

The fifth graders aim to have the least number of tardy marks of any grade in the building. They are studying the contrast between Lincoln and Roosevelt. There are twenty-nine in this class.

There are thirty-six enrolled in the sixth grade, making a total of two hundred fifty-two pupils in the entire grade school.

E. J. H. S. Student Wins First Prize.

East Jordan High School students won highest honors in the Boys' and Girls' Stock Judging Contest at the Charlevoix County Fair. About fifty people took part in the contest which open to boys and girls between the ages of twelve and twenty. The prizes, pure-bred livestock, valued at $15 to $200, were made possible through the co-operation of the banks and Co-operative Association of Charlevoix County, the Loeb Farm, Hubert Chorpene, and Zimmerman and Son (of Traverse City). Hubert Chorpene and Zimmerman and Son each gave a purebred pig as prize.

The winners were as follows:
1st—Harry Chorpene, E. J. H. S.
2nd—Merritt Shaw, E. J. H. S.
3rd—Manuel Bartholomew, E. J. H. S.
4th—Jasper Stallard, E. J. H. S.
5th—Nellie Raymond, Deer Lake

East Jordan's team (Chorpene, Wangeman, and Second) won first place in the team competition and therefore East Jordan High School gets the loving cup. This cup must be won three years in succession before it becomes the permanent property of the school.

Next year there will be another contest. Every boy and girl interested in livestock should prepare early. East Jordan should win the honors again next year.

East Jordan should indeed be proud of her department of Agriculture. Whereas adjoining towns have only a few enrolled in the department, East Jordan has sixty-two, this being an advance of twelve over a school as large as Traverse City. The success of the practical test of the course as exhibited by the boys last week should be a strong inducement for boys to come to East Jordan High School.

Concerning the Fair.

One of the greatest attractions of our County Fair this year was left out of last week's paper and I consider it my moral duty to the 10th grade English class to average this great wrong.

The central magnet of the thronging crowds; the ideal towards which aspirants looked fearfully with fluttering hearts; in fact the very symbol of frivolity; all sought the ticket stand of the merry-go-round.

First you purchase your ticket then you scramble for your Sir Galahad steed. Then the race is on.

Your steed rears and plunges which near unseats you and sends your hands to his sharp pointed ears and your heart fluttering in your throat. This continues until you are about deprived of your senses and it seems as if the ride will never end. But at last the shrill, sharp whistle of the engine is heard announcing that your ride is near a close. Oh! at last the joy of it to think that you are at last on solid ground. You leave this place of horror vowing never again to be deceived by a good looking ticket agent.

SALES SCHEDULED

GREENMAN & NICHOLS—(J. W. and Jas. R.) will hold a Sale at the Jesse Carpenter place, Bridge St., on West Side, East Jordan, on Wednesday, Sept. 27th. Horses, Cattle, farm implements and tools, household goods. Byers, Auctioneer. Mikula, Clerk.

How to Open a New Book.

To the lover of books there is nothing so exasperating as to see a new book ruined by careless opening. To open a new book correctly let it rest on its bound edges then put one back carefully down and then the other. Put down a portion of the leaves, alternating back and front until all the leaves are down. A new book opened this way a few times will not be ruined by the leaves coming loose.

Great Writer's Work Analyzed.

Turgenev's novels are nearer to poetry than any others, because his comment on life is so purely emotional. Like Schubert, he makes his songs out of sorrow; all his exquisite precision of detail, all his skill of construction, are means of expressing that. His very characters are mouthpieces of it, and subdued to the minor key. So his books have the unity of music.—A. Clifton Brock.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT, BURNS AND ITCHES, APPLY THIS SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place. Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness. You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

Eat less meat if you feel Backache or have Bladder trouble—Salts fine for Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The uric is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night. To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

VACANT HOUSES

IN THEIR grave solitude and desolation, vacant houses are pathetic reminders of empty minds, neglected and forgotten by those able to take best care of them.

On old country roads you may often see such habitations, seemingly eager to proffer a smile of welcome, but quite unable to do it.

Tank weeds are about the doors, the walls are weather-worn and stained, presenting altogether a sad picture.

And these vacant houses started early in life; warm in friendship and love, full of hope and aspiration, dreaming of enduring usefulness and happiness.

As the years rolled by they dreamed less and finally sank into a hopeless state of despondency. You may like vacant houses or not, but there they are, telling in a language of their own of the days that are departed and the joys that are done.

And what happens to vacant houses happens in a far more lamentable way to empty minds, whose owners habitually neglect them, and pay for their disregard the sharpest penalties, at a time when their own reward should be munificent.

If you are willfully neglecting your mind, allowing the weeds to grow about the doorway, you will find some day that you are living in solitude in a dreary dwelling, from which your friends of old turn away in sadness.

You were so self-reliant in your youth that you did not care to enlarge and beautify your thoughts.

Gradually you neglected this important duty until the weeds grew and crowded out the flowers. Too proud to stand up straight and stretch out your arms to embrace knowledge, you sat down in idleness or shirked your opportunity.

Being now your own witness and your own judge, there is alas! no possible escape from punishment.

The world has moved on and left you behind in a wilderness of mold and darkness, where you have time to reflect and repent.

But, be it known, whatever your age, you may yet improve your vacant house and make of it a thing of beauty.

Women, as a rule, can do this more readily than men, yet men at forty and fifty have been known to form studious habits and flood their old vacant houses with light until its brilliancy illuminated up the whole world!

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"CLOTH"

BACK in the days when the original Teutonic race roamed the forests of northeastern Europe—centuries before it migrated north, west and south to split up into the Scandinavians, the Anglo-Saxons and the modern Germanic races—these tribes had a word which they pronounced as though it were spelled klar-eth, though they spoke it more rapidly and almost as a single syllable.

If we lengthen the vowel sound just a trifle, making it "aw," we will have the word "cloth" used by millions of people today with reference to their garments and the materials used for many other purposes. Those who are expert in the study of languages and the changes which occur in the transition of centuries have not been able to trace this word any farther than the forests of northeastern Europe. But they incline to the belief that it was derived from a still more ancient word-root of the ancient Teutonic language—klid, meaning to stick or cling. "Cloth," therefore, literally means something which sticks or clings, either together or to the wearer and probably made its way into the language in contradistinction to the clothing of hides which are hard and far from clinging.

CONDITIONS IN CUBA SERIOUS

Island Congress' Action Strains Relations With United States. Washington—Relations between the United States and Cuba are growing serious, due to the failure of the Cuban congress to enact the fiscal reform program recommended by the government and accepted by President Zayas.

State department officials have admitted the gravity of the situation, but expressed the hope and the belief that it would still be possible for Cuba to carry out the reforms proposed by General Enoch H. Crowder, President Harding's special envoy at Havana, who has been struggling for months to get Cuba out of the financial entanglements threatening the government.

HAY FEVER SUFFERERS UNLUCKY

Clear 1/3 more land per dollar with DUMORITE—the lowest cost explosive. We handle Dumorite, the newest du Pont explosive. This is the dynamite that has cut land clearing costs. Dumorite has approximately the same strength as regular 40% dynamite, stick for stick, and shoots with the slow, heaving action of 20%. It is the only dynamite of its type. The du Pont Chemical Engineer has found the way to add 1/3 more sticks to each case. He has increased the purchasing power of your dollar by 30 to 40 cents. For blasting ditches, we carry a stock of du Pont 50% Straight dynamite. If you are thinking of clearing more land this fall, stop in. Let's talk it over. Land-clearing costs a lot less now—your dollar will buy more dynamite!

"That's something for the future. In that case things might be different. But I can only follow the law, with the members of the jury instructed, of course, to accept the evidence for what they deem it is worth. You will proceed, Mrs. Rodaine. What did you see that caused you to come to this conclusion?"

"Can't you even stick to the rules and ethics of testimony?" It was the final plea of the defeated Farrell. The coroner eyed him slowly.

"Mr. Farrell," came his answer, "I must confess to a deviation from regular court procedure in this inquiry. It is customary in an inquest of this character; certain departures from the usual rules must be made that the truth and the whole truth be learned. Proceed, Mrs. Rodaine, what was it you saw?"

Transfixed, horrified, Fairchild watched the mumbering, munching mouth, the staring eyes and straying white hair, the bony, crooked hands as they waved before her. From those toothless jaws a story was about to come, true or untrue, a story that would stain the name of his father with murder. And that story now was at its beginning.

"I saw them together that afternoon early," the old woman was saying. "I came up the road just behind them, and they were fussing. Both of 'em acted like they were mad at each other, but Fairchild seemed to be the maddest.

"I didn't pay much attention to them because I just thought they were fighting about some little thing and that it wouldn't amount to much. I went on up the gulch—I was gathering flowers. After awhile the earth shook and I heard a big explosion, from away down underneath me—like thunder when it's far away. Then, pretty soon, I saw Fairchild come rushing out of the mine, and his hands were all bloody. He ran to the creek and washed them, looking around to see if anybody was watching him—but he didn't notice me. Then, when he'd washed the blood from his hands, he got up on the road and went down into town. Later on, I thought I saw all three of 'em leave town, Fairchild, Sissie and a fellow named Harkins. So I never paid any more attention to it until today. That's all I know."

She stepped down then and went back to her seat with Squint Rodaine and the son, fidgeting there again, craning her neck as before, while Fairchild, son of a man just accused of murder, watched her with eyes fascinated from horror. The coroner looked at a slip of paper in his hand. "William Barton," he called. A miner came forward, to go through the usual formalities, and then he asked the question:

"Did you see Thornton Fairchild on the night he left Ohndi?"

"Yes, a lot of us saw him. He drove out of town with Harry Harkins, and a fellow who we all thought was Sissie Larsen."

"That's all. Gentlemen of the jury," he turned his back on the crowded room and faced the small, worried appearing group on the row of kitchen chairs. "You will have heard the evidence. You will find a room at the right in which to conduct your deliberations."

Shuffling forms faded through the door at the right. Then followed long moments of waiting, in which Robert Fairchild's eyes went to the floor, in which he strove to avoid the gaze of every one in the crowded courtroom. He knew what they were thinking. That his father had been a murderer, and that he—well, that he was blood of his father's blood. He could hear the buzzing of tongues, the shifting of the courtroom on the unstable chairs, and he knew fingers were pointing at him. For once in his life he had not the strength to face his fellow men. A quarter of an hour—a knock on the door—then the six men clattered forth again, to hand a piece of paper to the coroner. And he, adjusting his glasses, turned to the courtroom and read:

"We, the Jury, Find That the Deceased Came to His Death From Injuries Sustained at the Hands of Thornton Fairchild."

"We, the jury, find that the deceased came to his death from injuries sustained at the hands of Thornton Fairchild, in or about the month of June, 1892."

That was all, but it was enough. The stain had been placed; the thing which the white-haired man who had sat by a window back in Indianapolis had feared all his life had come after death.

It seemed hours before the courtroom cleared. Then, the attorney at one side, Harry at the other, he started out of the courtroom.

The crowd still was on the street, milling, circling, dividing itself into little groups to discuss the verdict. Through them shot scrambling forms of newshoys. Dazedly, simply for the sake of something to take his mind from the throngs and the gossip about him, Fairchild bought a paper and stepped to the light to glance over the first page. There, emblazoned under the "Extra" heading, was the story of the finding of the skeleton in the Blue Poppy mine, while beside it was something which caused Robert Fairchild to almost forget, for the moment, the horrors of the ordeal which he was undergoing. It was a paragraph leading the "personal" column of the small, amateurish sheet, announcing the engagement of Miss Anita Natalie Richmond to Mr. Maurice Rodaine, the wedding to come "probably in the late fall!"

CHAPTER XIII.

Fairchild did not show the item to Harry. There was little that it could accomplish, and besides, he felt that his comrade had enough to think about. The unexpected turn of the coroner's inquest had added to the heavy weight of Harry's troubles; it meant the probability in the future of a grand jury investigation and the possible indictment as accessory after the fact in the murder of "Sissie" Larsen. Not that Fairchild had been influenced in the slightest by the testimony of Crazy Laura; the presence of Squint Rodaine and his son had shown too plainly that they were connected in some way with it, that, in fact, they were responsible. An opportunity had arisen for them, and they had seized upon it. More, there came the shrewd opinion of old Mother Howard, once Fairchild and Harry had reached the boarding house and gathered in the parlor for their consultation:

"Ain't it what I said right in the beginning?" Mother Howard asked. "She'll kill for that man, if necessary. It wasn't as hard as you think—all Squint Rodaine had to do was to act nice to her and promise her a few things that he'll squirm out of later on, and she went on the stand and lied her head off."

"But for a crazy woman—"

"Laura's crazy—and she ain't crazy. I've seen that woman as sensible and as shrewd as any sane woman who ever drew breath. Then again, I've seen her when I wouldn't give her fifty miles of her. Goodness only knows what would happen to a person who fell into her clutches when she's got one of those immortality streaks on."

"One of those what?" Harry looked up in surprise.

"Immortality. That's why you'll find her sneaking around graveyards at night, gathering herbs and taking them to that old house on the Georgeville road, where she lives, and brewing them into some sort of concoction that she sprinkles on the graves. She believes that it's a sure system of bringing immortality to a person. Poison—that's about what it is."

Harry shrugged his shoulders.

"Poison's what she is!" he exclaimed. "Ain't it enough that I'm accused of every crime in the calendar without 'er getting me mixed up in a murder? And—" this time he looked at Fairchild with dolorous eyes— "you're going to furnish bond this time, if the grand jury indicts me?"

"I'm afraid there won't be any."

Mother Howard set her lips for a minute, then straightened proudly.

"Well, I guess there will! It's bondable—and I guess I've got a few things that are worth something—and a few friends that I can go to. I don't see why I should be left out of everything, just because I'm a woman!"

"Lor' love you!" Harry grinned, his eyes showing plainly that the world was again good for him and that his troubles, as far as a few slight charges of penitentiary offenses were concerned, amounted to very little in his estimation. Harry had a habit of living just for the day. And the support of Mother Howard had wiped out all future difficulties for him. The fact that convictions might await him and that the heavy doors at Canon City might yawn for him made little difference right now. Behind the great bulwark of his mustache, his big lips spread in a happy announcement of joy, and the world was good.

Silently, Robert Fairchild rose and left the parlor for his own room. Some way he could not force himself to shed his difficulties in the same light, airy way as Harry. Looking back he could see now that his dreams had led only to catastrophes. From the very beginning, there had been only trouble, only fighting, fighting, fighting against insurmountable odds, which seemed to throw him ever deeper into the mire of defeat, with every onslaught. The Rodaines had played with stacked cards, and so far every hand had been theirs. Fairchild suddenly realized that he was all but whipped, that the psychological advantage was all on the side of Squint Rodaine, his son, and the crazy woman who did their bidding. More, another hope had gone glimmering; even had the announcement not come forth that Anita Richmond had given her promise to marry Maurice Rodaine, the action of a coroner's jury that night had removed her from hope forever. A son of a man who has been called a slayer has little right to love a woman, even if that woman has a bit of mystery about her. All things can be explained—but murder!

It was growing late, but Fairchild did not seek bed. Instead he sat by the window, staring out at the shadows of the mountains, out at the free, pure night, and yet at nothing. After a long time, the door opened, and a big form entered—Harry—to stand silent a moment, then to come forward and lay a hand on the other man's shoulder.

"Don't let it get you, Boy," he said softly—for him. "It's going to come out all right. Everything comes out all right—if you ain't wrong yourself."

"I know, Harry. But it's an awful tangled right now."

"Sure it is. But it ain't as if a sane person 'ad said it against you. There'll never be anything more to that; Farrell'll 'ave 'er adjudged insane if it ever comes to anything like that. She'll never give no more testimony. I've been talking with 'im—'e stopped in just after you came upstairs. It's only a crazy woman."

"But they took her word for it, Harry. They believed her. And they gave the verdict—against my father!"

"I know. I was there, right beside you. I 'eard it. But it'll come out right, some way."

There was a moment of silence, then a gripping fear at the heart of Fairchild.

"Just how crazy is she, Harry?"

"Er? Plumb daff! Of course, as Mother 'Oward says, there's times when she's straight—but they don't last long. And, if she'd given 'er testimony in writing, Mother 'Oward says it all might 'ave been different, and we'd not 'ave 'ad anything to worry about."

"In writing?"

"Yes, she's 'arfway sane then. It seems 'er mind's disconnected, some way. I don't know 'ow—Mother 'Oward's got the 'ole thing, and everybody in town knows about it. Whenever anybody wants to get anything real straight from Crazy Laura, they nudge 'er write it. That part of 'er brain seems all right. She remembers everything she does then and 'ow crazy it is, and tells you all about it. Notice 'ow flustered 'er she got when the coroner asked 'er about that book?"

"I wonder what it would really tell?"

Harry chuckled.

"Nobody knows. Nobody's ever seen it. Not even Squint Rodaine. I guess it's a part of 'er right brain that tells 'er to keep it a secret! I'm going to bed now. So 're you. And you're going to sleep. Good night."

He went out of the room then, and Fairchild, obedient to the big Cornishman's command, sought rest. But it was a hard struggle. Morning came, and he joined Harry at breakfast, facing the curious glances of the other boarders, staying off their inquiries and their ill-concocted consolations. For, in spite of the fact that it was not voiced in so many words, the conviction was present that Crazy Laura had told at least a semblance of the truth, and that the dovetailing incidents of the past fitted into a well-connected story for which there must be some foundation. There were those who were plainly curious; there were others who professed not to believe the testimony and who talked loudly of action against the coroner for having introduced the evidence of a woman known by every one to be lacking in balanced mentality. There were others who, by their remarks, showed that they were concealing the real truth of their thoughts and only using a cloak of interest to guide them to other food for the carrion proclivities of their minds.

An hour later Harry, wandering by the younger man's side, strove for words and at last uttered them.

"I know it's disagreeable," came finally. "But it's necessary. You 'aven't quit?"

"Quit what?"

"The mine. You're going to keep on, ain't you?"

Fairchild gritted his teeth and was silent. The answer needed strength. Finally it came.

"Harry, you with me?"

"I ain't stopped yet!"

"Then that's the answer. As long as there's a bit of fight left in us, we'll keep at that mine."

Harry hitched at his trousers.

"They've got that blooming skeleton out by this time. I'm willing to start—any time you say."

The breath went over Fairchild's teeth in a long, slow intake. He clenched his hands and held them trembling before him for a lengthy moment. Then he turned to his partner.

"Give me an hour," he begged. "I'll go then—but it takes a little grit to—"

"Who's Fairchild here?" A messenger boy was making his way along the curb with a telegram. Robert stretched forth a hand in surprise.

"I am. Why?"

The answer came as the boy shoved forth the yellow envelope. Fairchild, wondering, read:

"Please come to Denver at once. Have most important information for you."

"R. V. BARNHAM,"
"11 & R. Building."

A moment of staring, then Fairchild passed the telegram over to Harry for his opinion. There was none. Together they went across the street and to the office of Farrell, their attorney. He studied the telegram long. Then:

"I can't see what on earth it means, unless there is some information about this skeleton or the inquest. If I were you, I'd go."

"But supposing it's some sort of trap?"

"No matter what it is, go and let the other fellow do all the talking. Listen to what he has to say and tell him nothing. I'd go down on the noon train—that'll get you there about two. You can be back by 10:30 tomorrow."

"No 'e can't," it was Harry's interruption as he grasped a pencil and paper. "I've got a list of things a mite long for 'im to get. We're going after this mine 'ammer and tongs now!"

When noon came, Robert Fairchild, with his mysterious telegram, boarded the train for Denver, while in his pocket was a list demanding the outlay of nearly a thousand dollars: supplies of fuses, of dynamite, of drills, of a forge of single and double jack sledges, of fulminate caps—a little of everything that would be needed in the months to come, if he and 'Arry were to work the mine. It was only a beginning, a small quantity of each article needed, part of which could be picked up in the junk yards at a reasonable figure, other things that would eat quickly into the estimate placed upon the total. And with a capital already dwindling, it meant an expenditure which hurt, but which was necessary, nevertheless.

Slow, puffing and wheezing, the train made its way along Clear Creek canon, crawled across the newly built trestle which had been erected to take the place of that which had gone out with the spring flood of the milky creek, then jangled into Denver. Fairchild hurried uptown, found the old building to which he had been directed by the telegram, and made the upward trip in the ancient elevator, at last to knock upon a door. A half-whining voice answered him, and he went within.

A greasy man was there, greasy in his fat, uninviting features, in his seemingly well-oiled hands, as they crept in constant kneading, in his long, straggling hair, in his old, spotted Prince Albert—and in his manners.

"Mr. Barnham?"

"That's what I'm called." He

"Who's Fairchild Here?"

wheezed with the self-imputed humor of his remark and motioned toward a chair. "May I ask what you've come to see me about?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. You sent for me." Fairchild produced the telegram, and the greasy person who had taken a position on the other side of a worn, walnut table became immediately obsequious.

"Of course! Of course! Mr. Fairchild! Why didn't you say so when you came in? Of course—I've been looking for you all day. May I offer you a cigar?"

He dragged a box of domestic perfectos from a drawer of the table and struck a match to light one for Fairchild. Then with a bustling air of urgent business he hurried to both doors and locked them.

"So that we may not be disturbed," he confided in that high, whining voice. "I am hoping that this is very important."

"I also," Fairchild puffed dubiously upon the more dubious cigar. The greasy individual returned to his table, dragged the chair nearer it, then, seating himself, leaned toward Fairchild.

"If I'm not mistaken, you're the owner of the Blue Poppy mine."

"I'm supposed to be."

"Of course—of course. Could you possibly do me the favor of telling me how you're getting along?"

Fairchild's eyes narrowed.

"I thought you had information— for me!"

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

PATRICIA

IT CAN truthfully be stated, without fear of passing, that Patricia is a patrician name. It signifies "noble" and comes from the Latin pater—father—which was the source of "patris," the "fatherland."

The patrici were the privileged class of Rome since its members were descended from the original thirty fathers, or patres. Patricus, meaning the noble, was the title given to the young Roman-British Calpurnius who was stolen by Irish pirates in his youth and, when ransomed, returned as an apostle to the land of his captors, bringing the name of Patrick, which is so popular and so revered in Ireland, in memory of the patron saint.

Patricia is a Scottish invention, according to etymologists. The name made its appearance there as the feminine of the masculine Patie, which was the Scotch form of Patrick. Though Patricia spread to England and won great popularity there and later found vogue in Ireland, no attempt has ever been made to change its form or spelling.

Patty, which is often thought to be the diminutive of Patricia, has no relation whatever to the noble name. It is the diminutive of Mary, in its rightful sense, and means "becoming bitter."

The ruby is Patricia's talismanic stone. It is the gem of kings and promises for its patrician daughter courage, a dauntless ambition, success, and bodily health. Wednesday is Patricia's lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

WHY?

IS THERE "SILK" ON AN EAR OF CORN

THE substance which we term "silk" on an ear of corn before it has been husked and cleaned is really the father of the corn itself, because each little grain on the ear has received sustenance—has been "fertilized" and enabled to reach its full growth—by means of the threads of silk-like construction.

Each ear of corn is composed of three principal parts: The grains which grow on a cob, the silk and the husk. The function of the latter is merely of a protective nature. It keeps the driving rain and the burning sun from damaging the tender kernels or grains, which are the seeds of the plant. But each one of these grains must receive its supply of pollen-powder if it is to develop into a large, juicy, tempting morsel or if it is to grow into a fully developed seed which, in turn, will produce another stalk of corn. This pollen it gets from the silken fibres which appear even before the grains themselves are well differentiated, while they are almost indistinguishable marks or ridges upon the cob. But even then it is possible to tell just how many grains of corn will appear upon the full-grown ear. To do this it is necessary only to count the strands of "silk," for each one of these fertilizes a grain and assists in bringing it to maturity.

"Old Colony."
The expression "Old Colony" was originally applied to that part of Massachusetts included within the limits of the Plymouth colony, but afterwards used to designate the entire state. In 1692, the Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies, which, for many years, had been independent of each other, were united in one province, bearing the name of Massachusetts.

It Scatters Yellow Fever.
The frightful disease, yellow fever, is carried and spread exclusively by a species of mosquito, the Stegomyia, which is the common house skeet of the tropics. It is very tiny—so small, indeed, that ordinary wire screens will not keep it out—and strikingly marked—a silvery white lyre-shaped pattern on the thorax, white stripes on the abdomen and legs banded black and white.

They Guessed It
A few weeks after I was married I went to a department store and purchased a rug which I wanted delivered. I gave the clerk my money and she asked me my name. It completely slipped my mind, and I stood in front of her and numerous inquisitive customers for two endless minutes, when the clerk remarked: "It must be a new one."—Chicago Tribune.

What's in a Name? By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

PATRICIA

IT CAN truthfully be stated, without fear of passing, that Patricia is a patrician name. It signifies "noble" and comes from the Latin pater—father—which was the source of "patris," the "fatherland."

The patrici were the privileged class of Rome since its members were descended from the original thirty fathers, or patres. Patricus, meaning the noble, was the title given to the young Roman-British Calpurnius who was stolen by Irish pirates in his youth and, when ransomed, returned as an apostle to the land of his captors, bringing the name of Patrick, which is so popular and so revered in Ireland, in memory of the patron saint.

Mr. and Mrs. Reader

When you pick up a copy of your home paper, do you give any thought how it was produced, or the money that is spent to print it and deliver it at your home?

The newspaper of today, no matter if 25 cents a copy was charged, would be the cheapest thing you bought.

In the first place it represents an investment in plant and equipment of many thousands of dollars.

Its editor and staff work diligently day in and day out to gather all the news and present it to you in readable fashion. It aims to keep you informed on all the news that's "fit for ink."

With the average paper, the price you pay for subscription does not cover the cost of WHITE PAPER.

Yes, the newspaper is the cheapest thing you buy.

Think it over. Look it over. Then support your home paper. It's the best investment you can make, for it brings the largest returns.

PARTIES PREPARE FOR CONVENTIONS

REPUBLICANS TO MEET SEPT 27 AT MUSKOGON; DEMOCRATS AT BAY CITY NEXT DAY.

PRIMARY VOTE NEARLY 400,000

Townsend Beats Three Opponents for U. S. Senatorship and Will Be Opposed by Ferris.

Lansing—Now that the primaries are over, plans are being consummated for the State conventions which will be held the last week of September. The Republicans will have their state convention in Muskegon Sept. 27 and the Democrats will gather the next day in Bay City. County conventions to elect delegates to the state conventions are to be held Sept. 21.

Five nominations will be made at the State conventions. Secretary of State Charles J. De Land, State Treasurer Frank E. Gorman, Auditor General Ormel B. Fuller, Attorney General Merlin Wiley are candidates to succeed themselves, as is also Justice John S. McDonald, of the Supreme Court, appointed early this year by Gov. Groesbeck to succeed the late Justice John W. Stone.

There are no Democratic candidates seeking nominations at their party's State convention, so far as heard.

The number of votes cast at the Republican primary for the four candidates for United States Senator, as shown by the unofficial returns, was in excess of 370,000. These returns are incomplete. The official canvass may show nearly 400,000.

Two years ago in an exceedingly warm contest by nine candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, a total of 362,223 votes were cast. The Democratic primary vote in 1920 for Governor, with but one candidate, was 22,279. This year, with two Democrats competing for the Governor's nomination, only about 30,000 votes were cast.

A few of the state's smaller out-of-the-way precincts remained unreported early in the week, but the unofficial count of the vote for the four candidates for nomination for United States Senator, in 2,636 precincts out of a total of 2,856, was divided as follows:

Townsend	139,977
Baker	116,305
Kelley	65,744
Emery	53,136

Former governor Woodbridge N. Ferris was unopposed for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator, and the minority party gives indication of putting up a strong bid for the office at the November election.

Governor Alex J. Groesbeck was well in front of his two opponents. The vote tabulated for 2,623 precincts was:

Groesbeck	226,146
Fletcher	101,809
Joslin	35,855

Alvah Cummins, of Lansing, defeated James B. Balch, former mayor of Kalamazoo, for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination and will oppose Governor Groesbeck for election.

MASONS DEDICATE NEW TEMPLE

Secretary Denby Officiates At Epochal Cornerstone Laying Ceremonies.

Detroit—The greatest event in the Masonic history of Michigan was the laying of the cornerstone Monday noon of Detroit's new Masonic Temple, which will cost between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. It will be the finest Masonic edifice in the world. More than 40,000 Masons participated in the ceremonies.

A parade of 40,000 Masons, the largest in the history of the order, was held as a prelude to the impressive ceremony.

Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, acted as President Harding's representative at the cornerstone laying ceremonies.

PLAN TO HELP COAL SHORTAGE

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Launches Drive for Co-operation.

Washington—To relieve the strain on the general business fabric of the nation, caused by five months of strikes in the coal and rail industries, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States Sunday night launched a nationwide drive to stabilize the coal situation. Included in the program of the chamber is an effort to enable Henry Ford to re-open his great automobile plants in Detroit, and to prevent threatened shut downs among other establishments throughout the country.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The leading pilots in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and civil aviation will participate. Their machines will be the latest product of American engineers; and indications are that many of the leading foreign designs will be entered before the entry lists are closed.

COMMISSION IGNORES ATTACK

Members of I. C. C. Do Not Reply to Mr. Ford's Charges.

Washington—Maintaining judicial calm, members of the Interstate Commerce commission collectively, and individually, have refused thus far to "lower the dignity" of that body by answering or giving heed to the charges made against it by Henry Ford.

Answering press correspondents, a member of the commission said today:

"It has become a policy with the I. C. C. never to answer newspaper attacks."

Mr. Ford in a statement said that the commission has outlived its usefulness.

INSURANCE MEN PICK OFFICERS

Raymond, Detroit, and R. S. Rudd, Saginaw.

MANY STRIKERS RETURN TO JOBS

RAIL PEACE DECLARED ON ABOUT ONE-FOURTH OF ROADS AFFECTED BY STRIKE.

EXPECT COMPLETE SETTLEMENT

Believed Every One of 4,000,000 Will Be At Work Soon; Pay and Working Conditions Unchanged.

Chicago—Railway strike peace has been virtually declared on approximately one-fourth of the country's 201 class one roads. The announcement was made late last week by the Railroad Shop Crafts general conference committee which had been considering a separate settlement plan drawn up at secret conferences held in Baltimore ten days before.

While the settlement includes only 30 per cent of the roads of the country, it was believed that every one of the 400,000 men who have been on strike for the past 10 weeks would be back at work shortly.

This will be possible through day and night shifts on the peace-making roads, where equipment is in bad shape and through the possibility of peace on other roads.

The men will return to work at the present rates of pay as quickly as the agreements are signed. Each road will sign individually, but all will be the same agreement.

Under the terms of the agreement all of the men will be back at work within 30 days or will be given full pay, even if not working.

They will receive all of the pension and working privileges they held when they quit work. This in effect, restores seniority rights although the word seniority is not mentioned in the agreement. All men now at work will be retained if they are competent, and there will be no discrimination against them.

All other matters will be settled by a committee of 12, six from each side, until May 1, 1923.

MICHIGAN PAYS $182,102,205

State Comes Fourth in Its Yield To Internal Revenue.

Detroit—Michigan stands fourth among the states of the Union in its contribution to the internal revenue, according to a report received by Collector Fred L. Woodworth. The states that exceeded Michigan were New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

While the country as a whole showed a decrease of 30.41 per cent as compared with the preceding year Michigan collections were only 26.5 per cent below the mark. In income and profit taxes Michigan was nosed out for fourth place by Massachusetts, Michigan showing a decrease in this item a little larger than that of the whole country.

Collections of the Detroit office for 1922 were $182,102,205, against $245,198,048 for the previous year.
