Amendments To State Constitution

Three Amendments To Be Voted Upon Tuesday, Nov. 7.

At the election to be held in this state on Tuesday, November 7, 1922, there will be submitted to the electors three proposed amendments to the Constitution of the state, as follows:

A proposed amendment to the Constitution providing that Article XIII be amended by adding a section to be known as section 5, to read as follows:

Sec. 5. Subject to this Constitution the legislature may authorize municipalities, subject to reasonable limitations, to condemn and to take the fee to more land and property than is needed in the acquiring, opening and widening of parks, boulevards, public places, streets, alleys, or for any public use, and after so much of the land and property has been appropriated for any such needed public purpose, the remainder may be sold or leased with or without such restrictions as may be appropriate to the improvement made. Bonds may be issued to supply the funds to pay in whole or in part for the excess property so appropriated, but such bonds shall be a lien only on the property so acquired and they shall not be included in any limitation of the bonded indebtedness of such municipality.

This proposed amendment, if adopted, will empower the legislature to authorize municipalities to acquire land and property in excess of that needed for parks, boulevards, streets, etc., and issue bonds for the payment of same.

A proposed amendment to section 3 of Article X, to read as follows:

Sec. 3. The legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule of taxation, except on property paying specific taxes, and taxes shall be levied on such property as shall be prescribed by law.

Provisions may be made by law for a tax of not to exceed four per cent upon or with respect to the net gains, profits and incomes, from whatever source derived, which tax may be graduated and progressive and which may provide for reasonable exemptions. For the purposes of such tax, property and persons, firms and corporations, upon which such tax may operate may be classified: Provided, That the legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule of taxation for such property as shall be assessed by the state board of assessors, and the rate of taxation on such property shall be the rate which the state board of assessors shall ascertain and determine is the average rate levied upon other property upon which ad valorem taxes are assessed for state, county, township, school and municipal purposes.

This proposed amendment, if adopted, will authorize the enactment of an income tax law providing for a tax of not to exceed four per cent upon net gains, profits and incomes, and providing for a classification of property and persons upon which such tax may operate.

A proposed amendment to Article VIII, by adding section 30, to read as follows:

Sec. 30. The legislature may provide for the incorporation of ports and port districts, and confer power and authority upon them to engage in work of internal improvements in connection therewith.

This proposed amendment, if adopted, will authorize the legislature to provide for the incorporation of ports and port districts with power to engage in work of internal improvements in connection therewith.

This statement is made in compliance with Section 7 of Chapter XXIV of Act 203, P. A. of 1917, which in part is as follows: The Secretary of State shall duly prepare a concise statement, setting forth the purport, nature and effect of any proposed amendments, and shall send copies of such statement to the daily and weekly newspapers with a request that said papers give as wide publicity as possible. Publication of any matter by any paper under the provisions of this section shall be without expense or cost to the State of Michigan.

Very respectfully,
CHARLES J. DeLAND,
Secretary of State.

GOOD CROWD SEES A SNAPPY GAME AT PETOSKEY

In the first football game of the year and for many of the East Jordan players, the first football game of their career, they lost to the veteran Petoskey High School team. By all the rules of the game we should have lost by even a larger score. The Petoskey team had 12 veterans in their line-up during some part of the game and 11 more men were on the field in suits, of whom many were in the fray at different times. The game was closer than the score indicates. In fact in the second half East Jordan gained more ground than the Petoskey team.

Although Petoskey apparently won quite easily, a number of the school people, including the editor of the paper, admitted that East Jordan had thrown a surprise bomb into camp. They said that the crowd certainly were surprised and repaid for their attendance at the game. In the matter of fight East Jordan more than held her own and with experience, many of the spectators admitted that somebody was going to lose to the East Jordan team before they were through with season. Quoting from the Petoskey paper, "Petoskey's line showed to better advantage in all departments, and whenever the men worked hard they opened big holes in the East Jordan forward wall through which the backs charged for big gains."

"The locals excelled on straight football while the visitors showed better with the air attack and worked a number of very neat forward passes. Fumbles were responsible for two touchdowns and came nearly giving another to East Jordan. Smith proved a star for the visitors, making practically all of the long games on end runs on the receiving end of passes. He looked like a natural football player—powerful, fast, hard to down—and was in on about every play. He always came up smiling and made a big hit with the fans."

The East Jordan team has many faults to correct, greenness being the principal one. The line showed lack of team work, the back field did not run interference. It was an individual matter with them. However time and work will correct these faults and some of the teams may have a very difficult time defeating East Jordan High School. Smith was not the only man who showed up well. Floyd Walker as T., Eddie Streeter at H., and leader Kling at E. also did some stellar work. In fact, four or five of the more experienced men had to play most of the game. We expect an improvement in the Onaway game this Friday afternoon.

Lyceum Dates Are Announced

Strong Attractions Secured For Local Course. First Number Nov. 3

Those who love music and enjoy good clean entertainment and an inspiring lectures are promised a real treat in the coming Lyceum attractions furnished by the Interstate Lyceum Bureau of Chicago.

As has been the custom in the past number of years, the course is being put on under the auspices of the High School and all numbers will be held in the High School auditorium.

The following dates are announced: Webster Davis, November 3. Lock Hart Co., December 12. Joseph Crowell, January 20. Southern Musical Co., February 16. Chicago Lyceum Players, April 3.

We feel this is a very strong course and confidently look forward to the fine patronage of East Jordan citizens that the course has always had. The Southern Musical Co. is headed by Edward Stallings, a distinguished violinist. He is assisted by a cellist and pianist in a program that promises to be beautiful and delightful in every way. High class vocal and instrumental numbers, both classical and popular readings, and clever sketches in handsome costumes are included.

In the well known J. Coates, Lockhart and his Scotch Lassies Co.—is offered a noted concert tenor and Scotch humorist entertainer, supported by three talented young ladies playing the saxophone, violin and piano, each an accomplished singer. Part of the program is given in the picturesque Highland costume.

The Chicago Lyceum Players present the three act farce-comedy (SARAH SIDE STEPS). The play is very funny and the acting is excellent. In addition a miscellaneous musical program is given.

Joseph Crowell is a portrayal or character impersonator, using wigs, make-up, dialect and costumes. Comedy predominates and he comes from Boston. Webster Davis, the lecturer on the course is a real celebrity, one of the leading lights of the platform. In addition to being mayor of Kansas City at 28 years of age, ASST. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR IN PRESIDENT McKINLEY'S CABINET, Mr. Davis has a national reputation as an orator. His engagement here is anticipated with much pleasure and a packed house is naturally expected. The season tickets will be out some time next week as well as the places where the same can be procured. Without a doubt, the usual method will be pursued. That is, the High School pupils will very likely call on you to buy tickets. The price of the ticket and other details will likely be announced in next week's Herald.

WATERWAY TO GET ATTENTION

Canadian Northwest to Demand Action in January, Report.

Washington—That the convening of the Canadian parliament early in January will be marked by a demand from the Canadian Northwest for immediate consideration of the St. Lawrence waterway project, is the opinion of Charles P. Craig, executive director of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association.

Wheat growers in the prairie country on both sides of the international boundary are peculiarly concerned in the waterway project, Craig pointed out, as they are losing upward of a million dollars a week this fall, from inadequacy of communication with world markets.

UNDECIDED ON EXTRA SESSION

President To Decide Later Whether to Summon Congress.

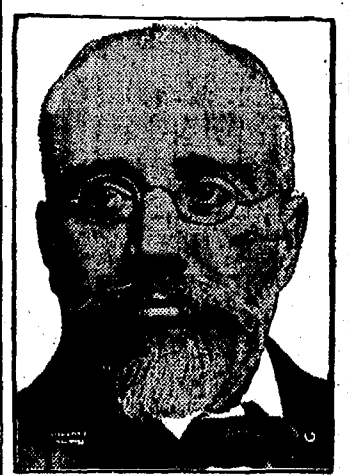

Washington—It has been stated officially at the White House that President Harding will decide on or about November 1 whether to call congress into extra session in November for the purpose of pushing through the ship subsidy bill before congress becomes jammed with appropriation measures in the regular session beginning in December.

It was frankly admitted by the White House spokesman that many members of congress object to an extra session for the middle of November, but it was made equally clear that the idea is still very strong in the mind of the president.

BOYNE CITY HERE FRIDAY, OCT. 13th

The slogan this week for the High School and all supporters of the team is "On to Boyne City." Now let's give them a game worthy of their metal. We need every supporter in East Jordan. We need the encouragement and we need the money. Let's out on the old High School Athletic Field with all the pep of the Maddock days. If the Boyne City-East Jordan High School game is not worth half the price of the season ticket, call at the box office and get your money. We will have season tickets in the following places: Hite's Drug Store, Bulow Bros., Gidley & Mac's and Giles. We have five games at home, the admission per game will be $3.50 for adults. We are selling the season tickets for five games for $1.25, to High School students $1.00, and all people below the ninth grade, $0.75. This is your opportunity to put pep not only in the school but in the town. Let's get on map. Nearly everyone knows that every boy that plays on the team must train and is training, not only that, he must be passing his work in school this year, and have passed it last semester, so they are worthy of your support. Remember the old slogan "ON TO BOYNE CITY." We must beat Boyne City.

GREECE TURNS TO FORMER PREMIER FOR SALVATION

ELEUTHERIOS VENIZELOS

Athens—In her tragic plight, Greece turns her sorrowful eyes to former premier Venizelos, who was deposed about a year ago when King Constantine was recalled to the throne. Now the menace of the Turk which the Greek army has been unable to check has resulted in the abdication of the king, and the former premier, called by former President Wilson "the greatest statesman in Europe," comes back from exile in Deauville, France, to save the nation. Crown Prince George will take his place as ruler of the nation and it is recalled that the former premier once stated he would work with the crown prince but not with King Constantine.

DEMOCRATS NAME CANDIDATES

Full State Chosen At Conventions Held At Bay City.

Bay City—Democrats of Michigan nominated a full slate of candidates for state offices, below governor, at their convention held in this city Sept. 25. The candidates chosen are: Jessie C. Porter, of Marshall, for secretary of state; Thomas J. Cavanaugh, of Paw Paw, for attorney-general; Orlando Barne, of Lansing, former state tax commissioner, for state treasurer; Attorney Michael J. Doyle, of Monroeville, for state supreme court to fill the unexpired term. The convention unanimously endorsed Oramel B. Fuller, Delta county, present auditor-general, and again the Republican nominee.

An effort to laudise Henry Ford for president in 1924 was defeated after party leaders contended the question should not be made an issue now.

A Friendly Tip.

A young woman tells of dining out and being seated next to the six-year-old daughter of the house. When her mother left the table for a moment the little one leaned toward their guest and said in a low, admonitory tone: "Now do be careful, 'cause these are our best table glasses."—Boston Transcript.

Pep Meeting Held in High School Auditorium.

A real snappy pep meeting was held last Friday, Sept. 29th at 1:15 in the high school auditorium. The meeting was opened by Mrs. Wyatt, leading in the chorus of the songs—"Bools, Bools" and "Yankee Doodle."

Then after some snappy yells were given and the students were about to pat themselves on the back for their splendid courage in sacrificing their vocal cords, Mr. Snellenberger asked them to yell! Did you ever hear of such audacity? "Now come on and yell." That's what he said, and they certainly did that very thing, not forgetting to give the old locomotive, that hard-hearted "Give 'em the axe," and a rousing cheer for John Peebles, who was injured in practice game.

Two splendid speeches were made by Mr. Wilson and Rev. Sidebotham, who gave interesting accounts of some of their own football experiences in college. Mr. Sidebotham gave a few effective hints on personal contact and playing fair and square.

Ted Malpass the new football captain was brought upon the platform and cheered roundly.

After Mr. Duncanson made a few comments on the meeting and also made some announcements, the meeting came to a close.

The boys certainly had a good "send off" to Petoskey.

Yelling For Our School

"Yelling" is probably the main source of pep to any team from any where. We ought to get a yell leader who is so lively and quick that he hasn't time to catch cold or the icicles won't have time to hang on his nose or he won't get "cold feet". But in order to get a good yell master we have to have a student body behind him. I don't mean behind his back or behind or behind some building, but willing to help him yell and ready to go at the drop of the hat. At most of the games the students "hang" some at one end of the field some at the other as though if they crossed a certain portion of the field they would get stoned. What they want to do is move with their team and push them thru the line for a touch down, then is when you are doing good for your team. At the next football game "Let's Go" and win from the team so bad that they won't have time to look at the football goal.

Girl's Basket Ball.

The girls taking Basket Ball have been practicing on Monday and Wednesday nights after school. But practice has been discontinued for this week as the children in the play Jokes on the Toymaker" which is to be given next Monday evening are practicing.

Grand Rapids Business Men Present Flag to School.

One hundred business men of Grand Rapids visited East Jordan, Thursday, September 28th. They gave the school children various souvenirs in the forms of kites, blotters, pencils, feathers and pop-guns. To the school they presented a large flag which measures nine by six feet in size.

Onaway vs East Jordan Last Year And This Year

Last year Onaway came here on a Saturday, it was our big game. A few days before this Onaway played Cheboygan and defeated them, so the chances looked slim to some people but not to the players. Every man went into the game hard, Onaway did not score in the first half and neither did East Jordan. The next half Onaway put across a touchdown and the score was 6 to 0 because the failed to kick a goal. At last came the chance and Dicken caught the ball and Johnson's toe hit it and it whirled as it traveled on its journey, square over goal 3 to 6 the game was drawing to a close, and once more the opportunity came to make a place kick and it was done 6 to 6 last year.

The game at Onaway will be a hard fought game if both teams fight as hard as the East Jordan team is going to fight. With the history of last year's scrap in mind and the promise of a one this year, all who can should plan to see the game at Onaway Friday.

East Jordan vs. Petoskey.

The 1922 Foot Ball team of E. J. H. S. made their debut Saturday, Sept. 30, 1922 in a real Foot Ball game at Petoskey. Fifteen men garbed in the Red and Black of E. J. H. S. with nose guards, shoulder pads and helmets climbed into their limousines and about 12:00 o'clock were on their way.

At 2:15 they arrived at the Foot Ball field all dressed, padded and bandaged. There they met twenty-two men dressed in blue and white, ready to fight to the drop of the hat.

The game began! Oh the holding of breaths. The E. J. team started in well, but Petoskey was there with eleven large, quick men in every play and they make some rapid gains.

Several of our players were knocked out, but came right back in more determined to win.

The game ended 26-6 in favor of Petoskey, but East Jordan is a good loser and no hard feelings were felt.

The Captain, Ted Malpass, the English bulldog put over one touchdown for the team and Elmer Smith the full back would come out from under the jam piles with a smile on his face which would make all football fans clinch their fists, set their jaws and stand paralyzed for a moment thinking of the "old days." He is certainly a good ground gainer. Yea! for Smith and his smile!

Tenth Grade English

The tenth grade English class has been studying about strikes for several days, and a peppy debate will be given Friday on the Government Ownership of the Coal Mines. The class is preparing some very heated questions on the problem, and are ready for any arguments concerning it.

Tests

As the time drew near for the report cards to be marked for the first time of this school year, all of the teachers (or at least most of them) decided that they would like to look over a collection of test papers, so the students, much to their unexpected delight, prepared to commit to paper, what they had learned recently. On the day appointed, the students entered their class rooms with thumping hearts, and eyes, ears and mouth wide open. Surely the teachers must have looked something similar to that when they sat down to grade those papers.

The cards will be handed out on Wednesday for the inspection of the pupils and parents, and I am sure nearly all of them will resolve to do better next month.

Junior High School Has Charge of Entertainment.

The Junior High School students had charge of the selling of tickets for the play "The Little Minister" which was on Tuesday evening, Oct. 3rd at 7:00.

With the money which they made, they contributed forty dollars toward the fund for the stereopticon views. They also had enough money left after this large contribution to buy a new basketball for the Junior High students. They are certainly to be congratulated upon their success and splendid contribution.

The play was taken from Sir James M. Barrie's famous book "The Little Minister" and was a remarkable success.

Kindergarten

One day last week the Kindergarten-ers were allowed to work at the blackboard and they had only one eraser among them, which they traded back and forth. At last one boy got it and refused to give it up. A little girl turned to the teacher and said, "Robert's got the strubbly' brush an' won't give it up, an I need it."

All of these little people have their names written on the blackboard and those who are not absent nor tardy have a star after theirs. One little girl turned to the teacher and said, "Tee a 'tar dir', isn't I."

They are making rugs and chairs for their houses now.

First Grade

The first graders are having a reading contest.

Second Grade

The second graders have arithmetic base ball. They are divided into two teams. The pitcher, catcher, first, second and third basemen are from one team, while the batters are from the second team. The pitcher throws the ball (arithmetic combinations in scrap in mind and the promise of a

I. C. C. SAYS CAR SHORTAGE EXISTS

COMMISSION REPORT SHOWS FOOD SHIPMENTS IMPERILED BY POOR SERVICE.

ESSENTIALS GIVEN PREFERENCE

Extension of Priority Order System May Be Necessary to Cope With Continued Seriousness.

Washington—Figures and reports in the possession of the interstate commerce commission show plainly that the fear of an early car shortage which officials of the American Rail way association expressed recently, is distinctly conservative and that a car shortage already exists in the refrigerator service handling perishable food.

The commission is devoting itself to careful studies of the whole situation, to the end that the most efficient use may be made of the available equipment. That boils down mainly, to seeing that when there are not enough cars to take all traffic offered for transportation, preference is given by the railroads to essential articles.

In a broad way, that already has been done in the issuance of priority orders, covering fuel, foodstuffs and other essentials. But it is stated that the commission is making a constant study of the general situation, in order to be prepared to use its priority powers to meet promptly and effectively each phase of the general situation as it is presented.

In addition, a study now is being made in the commission's offices of the recognition practices in the movement of open top cars, used principally for coal and building materials. The commission is considering whether, in view of the conditions prevailing in the transportation, some restriction of the privileges now granted could not be made for the benefit of the whole situation. The views of railroad executive have been sought.

In part, government officials attribute the difficulties of the situation to failure of the roads to make replacements and additions. The roads say they have not kept their equipment up to the necessary standard because government regulations has not allowed them sufficient profits to finance the necessary improvements.

Anyway, It's a Pretty Legend.

There is an ancient Chinese superstition that if you eat enough peaches you will live forever. Many years ago, it is said, a Chinese girl, believing in this superstition, gave her sailor sweetheart a peach seed to carry for luck on a trip to America. While in this country he lost the seed, and from it grew the first peach tree in the United States.

Nature-Painted Grass.

The greenest grass in the world is what visitors say of the lawns in Denver, after they find out that the emerald-green velvety appearance is not some bogus points of gardeners to fool tourists, but is due to the action of the mineral salts in the soil.

The Ring Finger.

The fourth finger, which has less motion than the others, has the advantage of being protected by the other fingers. It owes to this circumstance a comparative immunity from injury, and this accounts for its use as the ring finger.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

ARE YOU WORTHY?

A COMMON and frequent complaint nowadays among self-esteeming young men and women is that they are not making satisfactory progress.

With more or less petulance they declare that their incomes are not sufficient to keep them in the style in which they want to live.

Instead of being compelled to depend on popular shops for their clothes, they yearn to be in position to patronize high-priced tailors and dressmakers, and thus in their false estimation keep step with the rich by making repeated shows of fine feathers.

The plebian atmosphere in which these hapless mortals are surrounded is most displeasing.

Any real effort to improve their mental qualifications is apart from the question, and contrary to their inmost wishes.

Though apostles of laxity, devotees of empty pleasures and devout disciples at the shrine of profligality, these disgruntled young men and women openly blame the world for their imagined plight, often condemning their employers for holding them down, when as a matter of fact their employers have nothing whatever to do with it.

The man or woman who is really desirous of rising to the surface where he or she can swim with head above water must pull a hard, continuous stroke, quite regardless of what others are doing.

It is the only way to keep at the top and keep moving ahead.

Drifting is perilous to everybody who indulges in it, certain in the end to lead to disaster by wrecking the fondest hopes and highest aspirations.

In spite of our vaunted pride of progress, drifting is becoming a national habit, particularly among the jumpy-minded who bend their knee to the god of gold rather than to the god of wisdom.

Every good thing in life is measured by such persons with the tape bearing the dollar mark and its decimals, even morality, friendship and love.

Yet alas! these handlers of this iniquitous tape line perversely lament their position in life and condemn the irresponsible for faults and failures that are their own.

To make yourself worthy in any calling it is necessary to prove your worthiness.

And this cannot be done except by honest endeavor, long hours of hard work and a manifest willingness always to put personal industry above personal indulgence.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

BE A GOOD LOSER

IF WE all liked to lose, this world would be a shiftless and an ambitionless life.

It is natural to want to win in any competition, business or athletic.

Any self-respecting man would like to feel that he can outstrip the other fellow in any race he enters.

He feels chagrined when he loses. But if he amounts to anything he does not show it.

To whine, to lose your temper, to invent excuses, to show jealousy if you lose, is poor sportsmanship and poor judgment.

You may feel badly because you have lost, and you ought to, but remember that you, and no one else, are responsible. For if the competition was one in which you had no chance of winning you shouldn't have entered it. If you did have a chance, it was your fault that you did not improve it.

Be a good loser, therefore, and generous to your opponent. But don't lose too often.

Don't be so little concerned about losing that you never try to win.

Don't feel that it makes no difference how the race goes. When it is over have a quiet little conversation with yourself, and give general instructions not to let the same thing happen again.

There is such a thing as being so good a loser that you like to lose. And there are no competitors run off in this world which you can afford to enter merely for the pleasure of letting some other man win.

You are perfectly justified in feeling bad when you have lost. You are justified in taking yourself into a corner for a lecture on the folly of losing. The continual loser will in the end have to part with his self-respect and his courage, and become a mere cumberer of the earth.

Try to win as hard as you can. If you lose next time make up your mind that you will win the next. Determine that you will win oftener than you lose and that you will win as nearly 100 per cent as possible.

Then when you do lose, you can hear it with a better grace, for you will know that such a thing is not going to happen very frequently.

If the catcher answers two out of three combinations correctly and before the batter does, the batter sits down and another man is up to bat. When a batter makes a home run, one score is given to his side. When three men are out the other team is up to bat.

Studebaker

Let Us Show You the Difference!

Vibration is destructive. It shortens the life of a car. It takes the pleasure out of riding because it causes rattles, squeaks and other irritating noises.

Vibration is particularly annoying in closed cars.

There is no perceptible period of vibration in the Studebaker Light-Six at any speed. This is due in part to Studebaker's method of machining the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces. No other car, at anywhere near the price, follows this practice.

Lack of vibration and the quiet, smooth-running motor find quick approval from everyone who rides in the Light-Six Sedan.

And every driver is similarly enthusiastic over the way it throttles down to a walking gait in high gear—and the quick response that follows the touch of the accelerator.

Aside from its mechanical excellence, the Light-Six Sedan is notable for its sterling coach work. The substantial body, like the chassis, is built complete in Studebaker plants. Materials and workmanship are of highest grade.

Long, semi-elliptic springs and deep, restful, nine-inch cushions afford genuine comfort. Upholstery is of a rich, mohair velvet plush—good-looking and durable.

Today's price is the lowest at which the Light-Six Sedan has ever been sold.

The name Studebaker on your car is the best protection you can have!

ALLIES TO GRANT TURKISH DEMANDS

WOULD GIVE ADRIANOPLE AND THRACE FOR FREEDOM OF STRAITS. MUST LEAVE NEUTRAL ZONES. Kemalists Must Also Pledge Themselves Not To Cross Dardanelles During Negotiations.

Paris - Freedom of the Turkish straits and extension of Turkish sovereignty into eastern Thrace (European territory) are two of the main principles contained in the collective note which France, Great Britain and Italy have sent to Turkey.

The British are understood to have agreed to give Adrianople to the Turks and extend the Turkish frontier 135 miles northward from Constantinople along the Maritza river. This would bring the line virtually to the point it occupied prior to the first Balkan war in 1912 when the Turkish and Bulgarian boundaries in Thrace joined one another.

Chief of the conditions which the Angora government must accept are as follows: 1. The Kemalists must refrain from sending troops into the provisional neutral zones during the peace negotiations;

Fairchild followed his gaze, to see in the torn rock above him only a narrow streak now, fully an inch and a half narrower than the vein had been before the powder holes had been drilled. It could mean only one thing; that the vein had been played and lost, that the vein had been one of those freak affairs that start out with much promise, seem to give hope of eternal riches, and then gradually dwindle to nothing. Harry shook his head.

"It won't last."
"Not more than two or three more shots," Fairchild agreed.
"You can't tell about that. It may run that way all through the mountain—but what's a four-inch vein? You can go up here in the Argonaut tunnel and find a dozen of them things that they don't even take the trouble to mine. That is, unless they run 'ch in silver'—he picked up a chunk of the ore from the muck pile where it had been deposited and studied it intently—but I don't see any pure silver sticking out in this stuff."

"But it must be here somewhere. I don't know anything about mining—but don't veins sometimes pinch off and then show up later on?"
"Sure they do—sometimes. But it's a gamble."

"That's all we've had from the beginning, Harry."
"And it's about all we're going to have any time unless something hops up sudden like."

Then, by common consent, they laid away their working clothes and left the mine, to wander down the gulch and to the boarding house. After dinner they chatted a moment with Mother Howard, then went upstairs, each to his room. An hour later Harry knocked at Fairchild's door, and entered, the evening paper in his hand.

"Here's something more that's nice," he announced, pointing to an item on the front page. It was the announcement that a general grand jury was to be convened here in the summer and that one of its tasks would be to seek to unravel the mystery of the murder of Sisse Larsen!

Fairchild read it with morbidity. Trouble seemed to have become more than occasional, and further than that, it appeared to descend upon him at just the times when he could least resist it. He made no comment; there was little that he could say. Again he read the item and again, finally to turn the page and breathe sharply. Before him was a six-column advertisement, announcing the strike in the Silver Queen mine and also spreading the word that a two-million-dollar company would be formed, one million in stock to represent the mine itself, the other to be subscribed to exploit this new find as it should be exploited. Glowing words told of the possibilities of the Silver Queen. Offices had been opened; everything had been planned in advance and the advertisement written before the town was aware of the big discovery up Kentucky gulch. All of it Fairchild read with a feeling he could not down—a feeling that Fate, somehow, was dealing the cards from the bottom, and that trickery and treachery and a venomous nature were the necessary

He finished the last line and gasped. Ingredients, after all, to success. He finished the last line, looked at the list of officers, and gasped. For there, following one another, were three names, two of which Fairchild had expected. But the other— They were, president and general manager, R. B. (Squint) Rodaine; secretary-treasurer, Maurice Rodaine; and first vice president—Miss Anita

Natalie Richmond!

After that, Fairchild heard little that Harry said as he rumbled on about plans for the future. He sat and stared, until finally his partner said good-night and left the room.

That name could mean only one thing; that she had consented to become a partner with them, that they had won her over, after all. Now, even a different light came upon the meeting with Barnham in Denver and a different view to Fairchild. "What if she had been playing their game all along? What if she had been merely a tool for them; what if she had sent Farrell at their direction, to learn everything he and Harry knew? Had not another lawyer played the friendship racket, in an effort to buy the Blue Poppy mine?"

And here Fairchild smiled grimly. From the present prospects, it would seem that the gain would have been all on his side, for certainly there was little to show now toward a possibility of the Blue Poppy ever being worth anything near the figure which he had been offered for it. And yet, if that offer had not been made as some sort of stiletto jest, why had it been made at all? Was it because Rodaine knew that wealth did lie concealed there? Fairchild suddenly took hope. He clenched his hands and he spoke, to himself, to the darkness and to the spirits of discouragement that were all about him:

"If it's there, we'll find it—if we have to work our fingers to the bone, if we have to starve and die there—we'll find it!"

With that determination, he went to bed, to awake in the morning filled with a desire to reach the mine, to claw at its vitals with the sharp-edged drills, to swing the heavy sledge until his shoulders and back ached, to send the roaring charges of dynamite digging deeper and deeper into that thinning vein. And Harry was beside him every step of the way.

A day's work, the booming charges, and they returned to the stope to find that the vein had neither lessened nor grown greater. Another day—and one after that. The vein remained the same.

Squint Rodaine had established his office in a small, vacant store building on the main street, and Fairchild could see, as he went to and from his work, a constant stream of townspeople as they made that their goal—there to give their money into the keeping of the bes-cursed man and to trust to the future for wealth. It galled Fairchild, it made his hate stronger than ever. As for the girl who was named as vice president—

He saw her, day after day, riding through town in the same automobile that he had helped re-tire on the Denver road. But now she did not look at him; now she pretended that she did not see him. She had gone over to the Rodaines, she was engaged to marry the chalky-faced, hook-nosed son and she was vice president of their two-million-dollar mining corporation. Fairchild did not even strive to find a meaning for it all; women are women, and men do well sometimes if they diagnose themselves.

The summer began to grow old, and Fairchild felt that he was aging with it. The bank deposits were thinning, and the vein was thinning with it. Slowly but surely, as they fought, the strip of pay ore in the rocks was pinching out. Soon would come the time when they could work it no longer. And then—but Fairchild did not like to think about that.

September came, and with it the grand jury. But here for once was a slight ray of hope. The body of twelve good men and true wore themselves out with other matters and adjourned without even taking up the mystery of the Blue Poppy mine. But the joy of Fairchild and Harry was short-lived. In the long, legal phraseology of the jury's report was the recommendation that this important subject be the first for inquiry by the next grand inquisitorial body to be convened—and the threat still remained.

But before the two men were now realities which were worse even than threats, and Harry turned from his staving late one afternoon to voice the most important.

"We'll start single-jacking tomorrow," he announced with a little sigh. "In the hanging wall. The vein's pinched down until we ain't even getting day laborer's wages out of it—and it's October now."

October! October—and winter on the way. October—and only a month until the time when Harry must face a jury on four separate charges, any one of which might send him to Canon City for the rest of his days. Fairchild's hopes lay inert. He was only working now because a great, strong, big-shouldered man had come from Cornwall to help him and was willing to fight it out to the end. October—and the announcement had said that a certain girl would be married in the late fall, a girl who never looked in his direction any more, who had allowed her name to become affiliated with that of the Rodaines, now nearing the task of completing their two million. October!

For a long moment, Fairchild said nothing, then as Harry came from the staving, he moved to the older man's side.

"I—I didn't quite catch the idea," came at last. Harry pointed with his sledge.

"I've been noticing the vein. It keeps turning to the left. It struck me that it might 'ave branched off from the main body and that there's a bigger vein over there somewhere. We'll just have to make a try for it. It's our only chance."

"And if we fail to find it there?"
"If it ain't there—we're whiloned!"

It was the first time that Harry had said the word seriously. Fairchild pretended not to hear. Instead, he picked up a drill, looked at its point, then started toward the small forge which they had erected just at the foot of the little raise leading to the stope. There Harry joined him; together they heated the long pieces of steel and pounded their biting faces to the sharpness necessary to drilling in the hard rock of the hanging wall, tempering them in the bucket of water near by, working silently, slowly—hampered by the weight of defeat. They were being whipped; they felt it in every atom of their beings. But they had not given up their fight. Two blows were left in the struggle, and two blows they meant to strike before the end came. The next morning they started at their new task, each drilling holes at points five feet apart in the hanging wall, to send them in as far as possible, then at the end of the day to blast them out, tearing away the rock and stopping their work at drilling that they might muck away the refuse. And day after day, each, without mentioning it to the other, was tortured by the thought of that offer of riches, that mysterious proffer of wealth for the Blue Poppy mine—tortured like men who are chained in the sight of gold and cannot reach it. For the offer carried always the hint that wealth was there, somewhere, that Squint Rodaine knew it, but that they could not find it. Either that—or flat failure. Either wealth that would yield Squint a hundredfold for his purpose, or a sneer that would answer their offer to sell. And each man gritted his teeth and said nothing. But they worked on.

October gave up its fight. The first day of November came, to find the chamber a wide, vacuous thing now, sheltering stone and refuse and two struggling men—nothing more. Fairchild ceased his labors and mopped his forehead, dripping from the heat engendered by frenzied labor. A long moment, then:

"Harry."
"Aye."
"I'm going after the other side. We've been playing a half-horsed game here."

"I've been thinking that, Boy." "Then I'm going to tackle the foot wall. It was at the bank today."

"Yeh."
"My balance is just 'two hundred." Harry claved at his mustache. "We're nearing the end, Boy. Tackle the foot wall."

They said no more. Fairchild withdrew his drill from the "swimmer" or straightforward powder hole and turned far to the other side of the chamber, where the sloping foot wall showed for a few feet before it dived under the muck and refuse. Spot after spot he prospected, suddenly to stop and head forward. At last came an exclamation, surprised, wondering:

"Harry!"
The Cornishman left his work and walked to Fairchild's side. The younger man pointed.

"Do you ever fill up drill holes with cement?" he asked.

"Not as I know of. Why?"
"There's one." Fairchild raised his hand and chipped away the softer surface of the rock, leaving a tubular protrusion of cement extending. Harry stared.

"What the bloody 'ell?" he conjectured. "D'you suppose—" Then, with a sudden resolution: "Drill there! Gad a'ote off to one side a bit and drill there. It seems to me Sisse Larsen put a 'ole or something—I can't remember. But drill. It can't do any harm."

The gad chipped away the rock. Soon the drill was hitting into the surface of the foot wall. Quitting time came; the drill was in two feet, and in the morning, Fairchild went at his task again, pounding away at the long, six-foot drill with strokes that laid behind them only muscles, not the intense driving power of hope. A foot he progressed into the foot wall and changed drills. Three inches more. Then—

"Harry!"
"What's 'appened?" The tone of Fairchild's voice had caused the Cornishman to lean from his staving and run to Fairchild's side. That person had cupped his hand and was holding it beneath the drill hole, while into it he was pulling the muck with the scraper and staring at it.

"This stuff's changed color!" he exclaimed. "It looks like—"
"Let me see!" The older man took a portion of the blackish, gritty mass and held it close to his carbide. "It looks like something—it looks like something!" His voice was high, excited. "I'll finish the 'ole and jam enough dynamite in there to tear the insides out of it. I'll give 'er 'ell. But in the meantime, you take that down to the assayer!"

CHAPTER XV

Fairchild did not hesitate. Scraping the watery conglomeration into a tobacco can, he threw on his coat and ran for the shaft. Then he pulled himself up, singing, and dived into the fresh-made drifts of a new storm as he started toward town; nor did he stop to investigate the fast-fading footprints of some one who evidently had passed the mine a short time before.

Into town and through it to the scrambling buildings of the Sampler, where the main products of the mines of Ohadi found their way before going to the smelter. There he swung wide the door and turned to the little room on the left, the sanctum of a white-haired, almost tottering old man who wandered about among his test tubes and "buttons" as he figured out the various weights and values of the ores as the samples were brought to him from the dirty, dusty, bin-filled rooms of the Sampler proper. A queer light came into the old fellow's eyes as he looked into those of Robert Fairchild.

"Don't get 'em too high!" he admonished. Fairchild stared.

"What?"
"Hopes. I've seen many a fellow come in just like you. I've been here thirty year. They call me Old Undertaker Chastine!"

Fairchild laughed.
"But I'm hoping—"
"Yeh, Son." Undertaker Chastine looked over his glasses. "You're just like all the rest. You're hoping. Trot 'er out and let the old Undertaker have a look at 'er."

Sobered now, Fairchild reached for his tobacco can, which had been stuffed full of every scrap of slime that he and 'Arry had been able to drag from the powder hole. Evidently, his drill had been in the ore, whatever it was, for some time before he realized it; the can was heavy, exceedingly heavy, giving evidence of purity of something at least. But Undertaker Chastine shook his head.

"Can't tell," he announced. "Feels heavy, looks black and all that. But it might not be anything but straight lead with a sprinkling of silver. And then again—"

He began to tinker about with his pottery. He dragged out a scoop from somewhere and prepared various white powders. Then he turned to the furnace, with its high-chimneyed draft, and filled a container with the contents of the tobacco can.

"Let 'er roast, Son," he announced. "That's the only way. Let 'er roast—and while it's getting hot, well, you just cool your heels."

Long waiting—while the eccentric old assayer told doleful tales of other days, tales of other men who had rushed in, just like Fairchild, with their sample of ore, only to depart with the knowledge that they were no richer than before, days when the news of the demonization of silver swooped down upon the little town like some black tornado, closing down the mines, shutting up the gambling halls and great saloons, nailing up the doors, even of the Sampler, for years to come.

He turned to the furnace and took out the pottery dish in which the sample had been smelting white-hot now. He cooled it and tinkered with his chemicals. He fussed with his scales, he adjusted his glasses, he coughed once or twice in an embarrassed manner; finally to turn to Fairchild.

"Young man," he queried, "it ain't any of my business, but where'd you get this ore?"

"Out of my mine, the Blue Poppy!"
"Sure you ain't been visiting?"
"What do you mean?" Fairchild was staring at him in wonderment.

Old Undertaker Chastine rubbed his hands on his big apron and continued to look over his glasses.

"What'll you take for the Blue Poppy ore, Son?"

"Why—it's not for sale."
"Sure it ain't going to be—soon?"
"Absolutely not." Then Fairchild caught the queer look in the man's eyes. "What do you mean by these questions? Is that good ore—or isn't it?"

"Son, just one more question—and I hope you won't get mad at me. I'm a funny old fellow, and I do a lot of things that don't seem right at the beginning. But I've saved a few young bloods like you from trouble more than once. You ain't been high-grading?"

"You mean—"
"Just exactly what I said—wandering around somebody else's property and picking up a few samples, as it were, to mix in with your own product? Or planting them where they can be found easily by a prospective buyer?"

Fairchild's chin set, and his arms moved slowly. Then he laughed. "No—I'll give you my word I haven't been high-grading," he said. "My partner and I drilled a hole in the foot wall of the stope where we were working, hoping to find the rest of a vein that, was pinching out on us. And we got this stuff. Is it any good?"

"Is it good?" Again Old Undertaker Chastine looked over his glasses. "That's just the trouble. It's too good—it's so good that it seems there's something funny about it. Son, that stuff assays within a gram, almost, of the ore they're taking out of the Silver Queen!"

"What's that?" Fairchild had leaped forward and grasped the other man by the shoulders, his eyes agleam, his whole being trembling with excitement. "You're not kidding me about it? You're sure—you're sure?"

"Boy, you've got a bonanza, if this holds out. It's almost identical. I never saw two samples of ore that were more alike. Let's see, the Blue Poppy's right up Kentucky gulch, not so very far away from the Silver Queen, isn't it? Then there must be a tremendous big vein concealed around there somewhere that splits, one half of it running through the mountain in one direction and the other cutting through on the opposite side. It looks like peaches and cream for you, Son. How thick is it?"

"I don't know. We just happened to put a drill in there and this is some of the scrapings."

"You haven't cut into it at all, then?"

"Not unless Harry, my partner, has put in a shot since I've been gone."

"Well, Son, now you can hurry back and begin cutting into a fortune. If that vein's only four inches wide, you've got plenty to keep you for the rest of your life. Run along."

And Fairchild "ran." Whistling and happy, he turned out of the office of the Sampler and into the street, his coat open, his big cap high on his head, regardless of the sweep of the cold wind and the fine snow that it carried on its icy breath. The waiting of months was over, and Fairchild at last was beginning to see his dream come true.

So this was the reason that Rodaine had acknowledged the value of the mine that day in court! This was the reason for the mysterious offer of fifty thousand dollars and for the later one of nearly a quarter of a million! Rodaine had known; Rodaine had information, and Rodaine had been willing to pay to gain possession of what now appeared to be a bonanza. But Rodaine had failed. And Fairchild had won!

Won! But suddenly he realized that there was a blankness about it all. He had won money, it is true. But all the money in the world could not free him from the taint that had been left upon him by a coroner's investigation, from the hint that still remained in the recommendation of the grand jury that the murder of Sisse Larsen be looked into further.

Nor could it remove the stigma of the four charges against Harry, which soon were to come to trial, and without a bit of evidence to combat them. Riches could do much—but they could not aid in that particular, and somewhat sobered by the knowledge, Fairchild turned from the main road and on up through the high-piled snow to the mouth of the Blue Poppy mine.

A faint acid odor struck his nostrils as he started to descend the shaft, the "perfume" of exploded dynamite, and it sent anew into Fairchild's heart the excitement and intensity of the strike. Evidently Harry had shot the deep holes and now, there in the chamber, was examining the result, which must, by this time, give some idea of the extent of the ore and the width of the vein. A moment more and he had reached the bottom, to leap from the carrier, light his carbide lamp which hung where he had left it on the timbers, and start forward.

The odor grew heavier; Fairchild held his light before him and looked far ahead, wondering why he could not see the gleam from Harry's lamp. He shouted. There was no answer, and he went on.

Fifty feet! Seventy-five feet! Then he stopped short with a gasp. Twisted and torn before him were the timbers of the tunnel, while muck and refuse lay everywhere. A cave-in—another cave-in—at almost the exact spot where the one had occurred years before, shutting off the chamber from communication with the shaft, tearing and rending the new timbers which had been placed there and imprisoning Harry behind them!

Fairchild shouted again and again, only gaining for his answer the ghostly echoes of his own voice as they traveled to the shaft and were thrown back again. He tore off his coat and cap, and attacked the timbers like the fear-maddened man he was, dragging them by superhuman force out of the way and clearing a path to the refuse.

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS ACT BADLY

Take tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Drink lots of water.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained. The blood is poisoned the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bed, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithine, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. You clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snufling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; you cough or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

Ouch! My Back! Rub Lumbago Pain Away

Rub Backache away with small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

When your back is sore and lacerated, or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lame ness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing penetrating oil needs to be used once. It takes the pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism so promptly. It never disappoints!

TIERNAN BABY WINS A NAME
 Court Protects Child But Flays Mother and Accused Man.

South Bend, Ind.—Harry Poulin, South Bend haberdasher accused of being the father of the third child of Mrs. Augusta Tiernan, wife of a Notre Dame professor, was discharged by the court which heard the evidence.
 The judge declared he did not want to question the legitimacy of the child.
 The long decision flayed Mrs. Tiernan and Poulin for their actions and declared that they showed no "refinement," but held that that state failed to prove that Tiernan could not be the father of the baby.
 Judge C. L. Ducomb made it plain in his comment that he found the defendant "not guilty" in the strict sense of the word. He said that he believed there had been improper relations between Mrs. Tiernan and Poulin.

Adopted on the 2nd day of Oct. 1922.

OTIS J. SMITH, City Clerk.
HUGH W. DICKEN, Mayor.

On the first day of March of each year the city treasurer shall certify to the city clerk all unpaid water rents and charges, together with a description of the premises where used, the name of the owner of the premises and the name of the user of the water.

The city clerk shall present such report at the first meeting of the city commission held thereafter. Upon receiving such report the commission shall fix a time and place for hearing any objections to the placing of said water rents and charges upon the city tax roll for collection. Such time of hearing shall be not less than twenty days nor more than forty days from the date of fixing the same and notice of the time and place of hearing shall be served upon the owner of the premises upon which the said water rents and charges constitute a lien at least ten days before said time of hearing.

Written notice of the time and place of hearing shall be served personally by the chief of police of the city upon such owner if a resident of and living within the city of East Jordan. If not a resident or if living within said city at the time the same shall be served upon such owner by registered mail addressed to such owner at his or her last known address, and a return receipt demanded. The chief of police shall make due return to the city clerk of his doings in the premises. No particular form of notice shall be required but it shall be sufficient if such owner is duly informed in the premises.

The city commission shall meet at the time and place of hearing and all persons interested shall be heard. The commission shall then and there determine by resolution all water rents and charges which shall constitute a lien upon any premises, and shall in said resolution direct the city clerk to certify the same to the city assessor with instructions to enter the same upon the tax roll of said city for said year in an appropriate column for collection.

Such determination shall be the best known owner of the premises, a description of the premises and the amount of the water rent and charges. To the amount reported on the books of the treasurer shall be first added the ten per cent collection fee and then a further charge of ten per cent shall be added to cover the expense of enforcing said lien.

Such water rents and charges shall thereupon be collected, receipted and returned in the same manner as other taxes.

Rule 26. The owner of any metered premises supplied with water shall pay, in addition to all other charges, a meter rent, to be paid quarterly at the time of paying the water rent, as follows:

Less than 1 inch meters shall pay one dollar per year.

1 inch and less than 2 inch meters shall pay $3.00 per year.

2 inch and less than 3 inch meters shall pay $5.00 per year, and meters 3 inch or over shall pay $8.00 per year.

Rule 30. Unmetered premises shall pay a minimum charge for water of 6 dollars per annum, to be paid quarterly as hereinbefore provided. No meter rent shall be charged.

In any case where, in the opinion of the water commissioner, an unusual amount of water is being used and a meter cannot be properly installed, for any reason, a special contract shall be made with such user based upon an estimate of the water used.

Rule 31. Metered premises shall pay quarterly according to the amount of water used each quarter as follows:

Less than 500 cu. ft. Minimum charge $1.00.

Over 500 cu. ft. and less than 1000 cu. ft., minimum charge $1.25.

TURKS OCCUPY NEUTRAL ZONES

KEMALIST ARMY IS MASSES IN DARDANELLES AREA IN DEFIANCE OF EDICT.

BRITISH SEND REINFORCEMENTS

Naval and Air Fighting Machines in Readiness for Climax That May Break Anytime.

Constantinople—Events are surely approaching a climax. The Turks on Sept. 29 occupied the entire neutral zone on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles with the exception of the Chanak area, around which they have established infantry units in a semi-circle, virtually infesting the British lines.

The Turkish cavalry squadrons are retiring and the British forces who are in strong force at Chanak are ready for what may happen.

British reinforcements are reaching here and the threatened area. The super-dreadnaughts Revenge and Revolution, the most powerful fighting machines afloat, have arrived in the Dardanelles, while a battalion of North Staffordshiremen of 1,000 men landed and marched through Constantinople with bands playing. Their presence has helped to bring about a reassuring effect.

An important concentration of British aircraft in the Near East is under way. An augmented squadron now in en route from Egypt for here. It includes 16 first-class machines and 15 reserve planes. Another squadron of about 40 machines left Malta with the fleet and it is reported three more squadrons are in readiness for immediate departure if developments necessitate their services.

The Turkish instructions to the men in Chanak sector are to advance the farthest point possible without meeting resistance. They are now practically against the British entrenchments and obviously the situation can not be indefinitely prolonged.

Notwithstanding the Kemal concentrations around Chanak, however, the British are confident of holding their lines against all odds. They detected by the fleet. The battleships with their 16-inch guns can sweep the whole area around Chanak for a distance of 20 miles, and it is possible for the British to dismount some of their giant naval guns and use them for shore batteries.

The Turks at present have only machine guns in the Chanak area. If they brought up heavy artillery the security of Chanak might be seriously challenged, the British admit, but the entrenchments in this sector are said to be more efficient than any used in the world war. Since September 11, 2,000 men from the labor squad, 1,000 from the fleet and several thousand from the army have been steadily building trenches and setting up gun emplacements.

FIND CLUE IN DUAL SLAYING

Believe Gun Men Hired to Kill Rector and Choir Singer.

New Brunswick, N. J.—The theory that a blackmail plot led to the slaying of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of the fashionable church of St. John the Evangelist, and Mrs. James Mills, member of the choir, and wife of the church sexton, was strengthened Sunday when Somerset and Middlesex county authorities learned that two strange Italians flashed revolvers in New Brunswick the night before the double murder.

The two Italians are known to have spent the night before the killing on a barge in the Raritan canal.

The investigators are seeking now to learn if the swarthy strangers were not paid gunmen hired to kill the rector and the choir singer.

LABOR WILL APPEAL DECISION

Judge Wilkerson Rules Shop Crafts Strike a "Conspiracy."

Chicago—With the concerted action of the shop crafts in striking held to be a "conspiracy" in the opinion handed down Sept. 23 by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson in the restraining order prayed for by Attorney General Daugherty, plans for a bitter legal battle to nullify the court's opinion have been started by attorneys for the defendants, assisted by attorneys for other railroad organizations working in harmony with the American Federation of Labor.

In the opinion of the government Judge Wilkerson's decision was hailed as a clear cut victory with respect to the future handling of strikes.

INVESTIGATE PLANE DISASTER

Board Tries to Place Blame for Fatal Plunge to Death.

Mineola, N. Y.—An army board is investigating into the crash of a Martin bombing plane which killed six army men at Mitchell field, last Saturday night at the conclusion of the mimic air attack on the land forces at the cantonment. Major Weaver, commanding the field, appointed a board of army officers to hold an inquiry into the crash, the cause of which, it is said, probably never will be known.

The pilot of the machine was First Lieutenant Raymond E. Davis.

Centenarian Flashes Almost Daily.

Lexington, Tenn.—Henderson County has the distinction of numbering among its citizenship a centenarian in the person of Mrs. Jane Lackey Davis, of Darden, who is probably the oldest woman in the county, the records showing her to be slightly more than 100 years old. Recently she attended large annual singing at Oak Grove Church, and mingled freely with the throng. She goes fishing almost every day and can walk a mile.

CHOOSE G. O. P. STATE TICKET

Present Office Holders Re-Nominated At Muskegon Meeting.

Muskegon—Secretary of State Charles Deland, of Jackson; Auditor General Merin Wiley, of Sault Ste. Marie, and Supreme Court Justice John S. McDonald, of Grand Rapids, were unanimously renominated by the Republican party at the state convention held here last week. Frank McKay, of Grand Rapids and Roy Clarke of Berrien, has been entered as contestants for state treasurer, but in the interests of the party their names were withdrawn and State Treasurer Frank A. Gorman was renominated.

Senator Charles E. Townsend and Governor Groesbeck, the party's nominees chosen at the primaries, were given an enthusiastic reception at the convention.

FORD DONATES $10,000 PRIZE

Will Be Award At Airplane Races At Selfridge Field.

Detroit—Edsel Ford has sent his check for $10,000 to Sidney D. Waldon, president of the Detroit Aviation society, to be deposited as prize money for the National Aeroplane races, which will be held at Selfridge field, Mt. Clemens, October 12, 13 and 14.

Mr. Ford explained that while the members of the Detroit Aviation society, of which he is a director, were financially responsible for any money that might be awarded for prizes, he had contributed the full amount to offset the allegations of Henry Woodhouse of New York, who in a letter to President Harding complained that the people of Detroit had not put up prize money sufficient for the National Aeroplane races.

Civil Veterans To Get Raise.

Washington—A pension pay envelope increase from $50 to $72 a month for Civil and Mexican War veterans, possibly as a Christmas gift from Uncle Sam, is planned by Republican leaders in Congress. A bill providing the pension increase already has passed the Senate and Senator Bursum (Rep.), New Mexico, its author, says he has been promised by House Republican leaders that it will be passed by the House soon after it reconvenes.
