East Jordan Football Team Shows It Is Coming

True the opposition wasn't as strenuous as the week before, yet the score was certainly different. The score would indicate that the boys were beginning to learn a little football, no matter what the opposition, 62 is an indication of some real punch. We hinted in last week's write-up that we were not discouraged by the Boyne City defeat, that we would keep plodding along until the worm had turned. It begins to look as though it was taking a turn. Harbor Springs kicked off to East Jordan at 11:15 and in about two minutes Ted Malpass plunged over for the first touchdown. About three minutes later they carried ball to the shadow of the Harbor Springs goal where Capt. Malpass stepped back for drop kick and punted the oval squarely between the bars, a pretty piece of work indeed. Near the middle of the second quarter, Edward Streeter made a beautiful end run of 25 yards. In the meantime long games were made by Floyd Walker. Time after time Henry LaCaire made from eight to ten yards at a plunge. In the latter part of the first quarter, Johnson had to be taken out of the game and Smith was substituted. The half ended with the score 15 to 0. The second half opened, Harbor Springs receiving the ball and after three plays punting the ball to East Jordan. Up to this time Harbor Springs hadn't made a first down. Early in the third quarter they made their only first down.

East Jordan Football men, beginning in this half, played the first real football they have displayed this year. It looked like a rejuvenated team, one that had suddenly grasped an idea. This is indicated by the score of the second half which was 47 to 0. Touchdowns were made so thick and fast, it was almost impossible to keep count. It was a matter of about a minute until East Jordan had another touchdown, Streeter carrying this across. About this point, Walker was pulled to the backfield in the place of Smith. Calkins was shoved out to T. and Chelles took his place at guard. Walker proved to be a real find in the backfield, simply running wild through the fast-tiring Harbor Springs team. He made two touchdowns in the last quarter. Almer Smith made one in the third quarter and one in the fourth. Ted Malpass made another in the fourth quarter. Walker at one time plunged thirty yards through the center of the Harbor Springs team for a touchdown, another time going around L. E. for about the same distance for a touchdown. Malpass almost seemed to hand it to the east side of the field carrying the ball over in steady line plunges. The game ended score 62 to 0.

EAST JORDAN GOES TO TRAVERSE CITY

Saturday, the East Jordan High School Football team will invade the city on the Bay. Traverse has been beaten once this year-but has a very powerful team. However, with the improvement in the East Jordan team, it ought to be a real game. It certainly would be encouraging to the players to see a large number of East Jordan fans on the side lines. Traverse City thinks that they are going to win as a matter of course. Let's show them the difference! One week from this Friday, Nov. 3, the brilliant and scrappy little Onaway team comes to the local field. Don't forget the date. If you do not say you have seen some real football, ask for your money. The following week, Nov. 11, Armistice Day, Cheboygan comes. The following week ought to be one of the big games of the year when Charlevoix comes, Nov. 18. This schedule is repeated so you have these games fresh in your memory. Remember you are going to see some real games before the season ends. If you have an extra place in your car, take an extra fan with you to Traverse City.

Give Them a Chance.

We do not believe in firing serenaders for disturbing the peace. They should either be encored or shot, according to the gravity of their syn-copation.—Kansas Industrialist.

C. J. Nelson Opens Studio

C. J. Nelson, who removed here recently from Tennessee, has opened an up-to-date Photographic Studio on the second floor of the Monroe block—over Gidley & Mae's Drug Store—and is now ready to serve the people of this vicinity in an efficient manner. Mr. Nelson is a photographer of no mean ability, as the samples of his work in other localities attests. His equipment is first class throughout, and among other up-to-date material installed is a new Hi-Power twin arc white flame photographic lamp which makes the studio independent of daylight—photos day or night, rain or shine. East Jordan has been without a photo studio for several years owing to certain conditions, and the coming of Mr. Nelson should be welcomed by our citizens in general. Call on him and get acquainted.

MRS. JAMES EVANS PIONEER RESIDENT PASSED AWAY, OCT. 24.

BONAR LAW SUCCEEDS LLOYD GEORGE AS PREMIER

ANDREW BONAR LAW.

London—Two hours after accepting the resignation of Premier Lloyd-George and his entire coalition cabinet, King George of Great Britain summoned Andrew Bonar Law, who in a 20-minute audience, accepted the post and set out to form a new ministry. The doughty Welshman, who has reigned supreme at Downing street for six years, went down to defeat smilingly and apparently unconcerned. But Lloyd George let it be known in no uncertain terms that he is not through. He intends to battle in the election with one object in mind—the re-establishment of himself in the premiership. He has the unwavering loyalty of the conservative ministers who are thrown overboard with him and who control no small coterie of the conservative body politico.

Therefore, Why Worry?

First Number Lecture Course

Webster Davis Opens Course, Friday, November Third

In a letter to Mr. Duncanson this week the Interstate Lyceum Bureau stated that "Webster Davis is making a wonderful record. Every day brings reports of his great work. Perhaps there is no more popular orator on the American stage today. Come out and meet him as we know him. You will enjoy it."

This certainly is a glowing tribute to the speaker who will open our Lecture Course next Friday evening. You recall that last year the best number on the Lecture Course proved to be the only speaker, William Raney Bennett. He came on a very stormy night and many were not there and many of those who were there express a great deal of satisfaction for the closing number, saying it was the best number on the Course. We hope you will buy your tickets just as early as possible and get them reserved at Hite's Drug Store. It is a great deal cheaper to buy the season ticket than to buy single admission. In fact, it is almost 100 per cent less. You can't afford to miss hearing Webster Davis, former Ass't. Sec'y. of the Interior of William McKinley's cabinet.

PLEADS FOR WAR PRISONERS

Dr. Ryan Says President Promised Amnesty in Letter.

Washington—President Harding has been taken to task for his refusal to grant general amnesty to political prisoners, in a letter from Dr. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Council.

Dr. Ryan at the same time made public a letter he received from the president on September 26, in which the executive, after reiterating his opposition to general amnesty, wrote:

"In a very short time there will be a considerable number of sentences commuted."

Envy German Motorless Success.

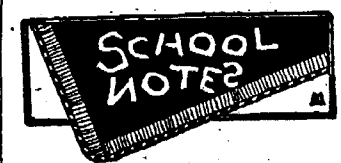

Paris—Many French aeronautic authorities are pooh-poohing, in publishing statements, the importance of the three-hour motorless flight made by the German, Hentzen, at Wasser Kuppe, which no French aviator has been able to duplicate. Other authoritative opinion, however, and the announcement of prizes to stimulate French ambitions in this direction, indicate that light dismissal of Germany's achievement is a clear case of "sour grapes."

The Advantages of Matrimony.

"I'm a believer in women getting married. It doesn't matter so much for men, but for women it's the correct thing. Does 'em good and improves their characters. Unless they've a man to be unselfish to and coddle a bit they grow selfish themselves." —From the Great Husband Hunt, by Mabel Barnes Grundy.

Degrees of Homage.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Eighth Graders Are New School Reporters.

This week the pupils of the eighth grade are taking the Sophomore's place as reporters for the school notes. The Sophomores have done their work well. But now the Eighth Grade English class will take their positions to prove their ability as news writers. Miss Hudkins is acting as editor, and will look over and correct their items. They aim to be the best reporters the school has ever had, and it seems as if they will be a promising group of editors.

The following pupils contributed to the school notes as the best paragraphs of their articles are printed.

NEWS-STORY CONTRIBUTORS.

Reading

The eighth grade reading class feel as if they are quite badly rushed. They have to look up about twenty-six famous authors of America. For Friday, they are to read about "The Return of Regulus." The class is to read a paragraph without mispronouncing a word or making any mistake, otherwise five per cent is taken off. There are about twenty-five pupils in the class, many who are good readers. The class has to learn four stanzas of The Star-Spangled Banner, and be able to answer some questions about "The Lady of the Grey Isle," and the poem of "Ask, Receive, and Give." Mrs. Blount is the teacher of this class.

Eighth Grade Manual Training

The eighth grade Manual Training class is now working on tie-racks. Mr. Gibbs, the teacher, is hanging these racks on the wall. Some are working on a taboret or foot-stool. These taborets are the first pieces of material made from hard wood. The class has all the planes and saws, and other tools sharpened. Some of them have been drawing different views of wood.

The Eighth Grade Party

The eighth grade had a party Monday night from six o'clock to nine fast time. They had supper at six sharp, which left about three hours for playing games. Most of the teachers were there. Mrs. Blount was chaperon and Mr. Snellenberger coached the games. Everyone had a delightful time.

Flowers for the Junior High

The Junior High has decided to have some flowers in their room this winter. Mrs. Blount suggested that each one bring a penny or as much as they could afford, with which they would buy bulbs from the Greenhouse. A good many have brought their pennies, but the most of them haven't just from sheer forgetfulness. Everyone bring your penny. Don't you like flowers?

Junior High Has a New Basket Ball.

The seventh and eighth graders have sold their basket ball to the Freshman and have purchased a new one. The money which they paid for the ball, came from the money received from their play and also from the sale of the old ball. The ball is a very good one, and half a size larger than any of the other balls in school. Mr. Snellenberger is coaching this young group of huskies and we expect to see them in the near future a peppy basket ball team.

Girl's Basket Ball Team of the Seventh and Eighth Grades.

The girls of the Junior High are out most every night practicing for a real good basket ball team. They are being coached by Miss Lillian Masselink. The players are as follows: Jumping Center—Gladys Nelson and Lillian Gorman. Running Center—Isabel Litner, Isabel Kitsman and Dorothy Clark. Guards—Mildred Best, Dorothy McKinnon, Leona Smith, Elizabeth Neeper and Margaret Sherman. Forwards—Dorothy Walton, Mary Parrot, Marcia Barnett, Alice Walker, Marian Sedgman and Beatrice Miles.

The eighth graders are handicapped by being so large and think the 7th grade has the advantage of them by having two running centers. Some of the players show a promising ability in their practice. These girls hope to have a good enough team to defeat all others. With such prospects in view I am sure they will have the support of the school and town.

Reports in Eighth Grade History Class.

The eighth grade history class under the instruction of Mrs. Blount, are giving reports on interesting things or something that will go down in history. They are very careful that they don't disobey her law, that their reports contain nothing of robberies, murders, or thefts. These reports are very good because it keeps the pupil in close contact with the newspapers. It also helps them toward getting main facts out of a topic. These reports will give the students good exercise and fit them for oratory work or debating. Some of the reports are of foreign countries, but mostly about the United States and Michigan. Each pupil has a report for a certain day. If the report is good and he falls in his recitation his marks are evened up.

Muskmelon Feast

Some time ago one of the Freshman, James Gleason, put too much confidence in himself by thinking he had worked a problem correctly. Each member of the class bet him a melon that he had worked it wrong, and he bet the class melons that they were wrong. One week ago last Tuesday Mr. Gleason met his fatal doom, when Mr. Snellenberger announced that he must treat the class. Some boys soon appeared with a paper sack, from which the melons started to emerge. To their surprise and disgust the melons weren't much larger than a base ball. When each had received a melon they were dismissed. Now came the joy of some and the sorrow of others. When they came to eat the melons about 4-10 of them were too ripe; 4-10 green and the other 2-10 fairly good. So you see Mr. Gleason worked the class, even if he couldn't work the problem.

Game With Traverse City

The Football boys of East Jordan go to Traverse City Saturday with that look of vengeance in their eyes that makes others flinch. Everyone is hoping that the game will be a success. Let your enthusiasm travel with them.

Cross Country Run

The High School has a number of boys out for the Cross Country Run. The boys show much improvement in speed and are able to hold out for a long run. Charlevoix is the first high school our boys run with, on Nov. 18th Don't forget the date.

Modern History

The Sophomore Modern History class have been having some very interesting work, both in and outside of class. Miss Shipp, teacher of the class is reading a novel of historical interest, "The Tale of Two Cities," while outside of school each member of the class is to look up the lives of thirteen famous painters. This with the name and discussion of two of each artist's masterpieces is to be put in their note books.

Ninth Grade Latin

The ninth grade Latin class with the help of their teacher, Mrs. Wyatt, have completed the first fourteen lessons of the book. The first thing they learned being the Alphabet in Latin. They have also studied the possessive pronouns and adjectives of the first declension, and the first principles. They are now in the second declension, and are studying the adjectives of this declension. They have had two or three tests.

Tenth Grade Latin Class

The Latin class is now beginning the study of Caesar, and find it very interesting. The introduction of Caesar contrasts the war implements of his time with the war implements of today. The students find that the implements of today are very similar to his. Although the class has not finished their Latin books, they find that they must also start their Caesar.

High School Newspaper

The English class of the 11th grade are publishing a newspaper in the school. This will be a benefit to the school. (Continued to Last Page)

"The bloody 'ell it is!" Then Harry dropped back on his pillow for a long time and simply gazed at the ceiling. Somewhat anxious, Fairchild leaned forward, but his partner's eyes were open and smiling. "I'm just letting it sink in!" he announced, and Fairchild was silent, saving his questions until "it" had sunk. Then:

"You were saying something about that fissure?" "But there is other things first. After you went to the assayers, I fooled around there in the chamber, and I thought I'd just take a flyer and blow up them 'oles that I'd drilled in the hanging wall at the same time that I shot the other. So I put in the powder and fuses, tamped 'em down and then I thinks, thinks I, that there's somebody moving around in the drift. But I didn't pay any attention to it—you know. I was busy and all that, and you often 'ear noises that sound funny. So I set 'em off—that is, I lit the fuses and I started to run. Well, I 'adn't any more'n started when blooey-y-y, right in front of me, the whole world turned upside down, and I felt myself knocked back into the chamber. And there was them fuses. All of 'em burning. Well, I managed to pull out the one from the foot wall and stomp it out, but I didn't 'ave time to get at the others. And the only place where there was a chance for me was clear at the end of the chamber. Already I was bleeding like a stuck hog where a whole 'ard mountain 'ad 'em on the 'ard, and I didn't know much what I was doing. I just wanted to get 'em and something—that's all I could think of. So I shielded for that fissure in the rocks and crawled back in there, trying to squeeze as far along as I could. And 'ere's the funny part of it—I kept on going!"

"You what?" "Kept on going. I'd always thought it was just a place where the hanging wall 'ad slipped, and that it stopped a few feet back. But it don't—it goes on. I crawled along it as fast as I could—I was about woozy, anyway—and by and by I 'eard the shots go off 'em. But there wasn't any use in going back—the tunnel was caved in. So I kept on.

"After a while, I ran into a stream of water that came out of the inside of the 'ill somewhere, and I took a drink. It gave me a bit of strength. And then I kept on some more—until all of a sudden, I slipped and fell, just when I was beginning to see daylight. And that's all I know. 'Ow long 'ave I been gone?"

"Long enough to make me gray-headed," Fairchild answered with a little laugh. Then his brow furrowed. "You say you slipped and fell just as you were beginning to see daylight?" "Yes. It looked like it was reflected from below, someway."

Fairchild nodded. "Isn't there quite a spring right by Crazy Laura's house?" "Yes; it keeps going all year; there's a current and it don't freeze up. It comes out like it was a waterfall—and there's a roaring noise behind it."

"Then that's the explanation. You followed the fissure until it joined the natural tunnel that the spring has made through the hills. And when you reached the waterfall—well, you fell with it."

"But 'ow did I get 'ere?" "Briefly Fairchild told him, while Harry pawed at his still magnificent mustache. Robert continued:

"But the time's not ripe yet, Harry, to spring it. We've got to find out more about Rodaine first and what other tricks he's been up to. And we've got to get other evidence than merely our own word. For instance, in this case, you can't remember anything. All the testimony I could give would be unsupported. They'd run me out of town if I even tried to start any such accusation. But one thing's certain: We're on the open road at last. We know who we're fighting and the weapons he fights with. And if we're only given enough time, we'll whip him. I'm going home to bed now; I've got to be up early in the morning and get hold of Farrell. Your case comes up at court."

"And I'm up in a 'ospital!" Which fact the court the next morning recognized, on the testimony of the interne, the physician and the day nurses of the hospital, to the extent of a continuance until the January term in the trial of the case. A thing which the court further recognized was the substitution of five thousand dollars in cash for the deeds of the Blue Poppy mine as security for the bail.

And with this done, the deeds to his mine safe in his pocket, Fairchild went to the bank, placed the papers behind the great steel gates of the safety deposit vault, and then crossed the street to the telegraph office. A long message was the result, and a money order to Denver that ran beyond a hundred dollars. The instructions that went with it to the biggest florist in town were for the most elaborate floral design possible to be sent by express for Judge Richmond's funeral—minus a card denoting the sender. Following this, Fairchild returned to the hospital, only to find Mother Howard taking his place beside the bed of Harry. One more place called for his attention—the mine.

Health returned slowly to the big Commissioner; it would be a matter of weeks before he could be the genial, strong giant that he once had represented. And in those weeks Fairchild was constantly beside him.

Nor that there were no other things which were represented in Robert's desires—far from it. Stronger than ever was Anita Richmond in Fairchild's thoughts now, and it was with avidity that he learned every scrap of news regarding her, as brought to him by Mother Howard. Dully he heard that Maurice Rodaine had told friends that the passing of the Judge had caused only a slight postponement in their marital plans.

Finally, back to his normal strength once more, Harry rose from the armchair by the window of the boarding house and turned to Fairchild.

"We're going to work tonight," he announced calmly.

"When?" Fairchild did not believe he understood. Harry grinned. "Tonight. I've taken a notion. Rodaine 'll expect us to work in the daytime. We'll fool 'im. We'll leave the guards on in the daytime and work at night. And what's more, we'll keep a guard on at the mouth of the shaft while we're inside, not to let nobody down. See?"

Fairchild agreed. He knew Squint Rodaine was not through. And he knew also that the fight against the man with the blue-white scar had only begun. The cross-cut had brought wealth and the promise of riches to Fairchild and Harry for the rest of their lives. But it had not freed them from the danger of one man—a man who was willing to do anything in the world, it seemed, to achieve his purpose. Harry's suggestion was a good one.

Well, then Harry ran, to do much as Fairchild had done, to chuckle and laugh and toss the heavy bits of ore about, to stare at them in the light of his carbide torch, and finally to hurry into the new stope which had been fashioned by the hired miners in Fairchild's employ and stare upward at the heavy vein of riches above him.

"Wouldn't it knock your eyes out?" he exclaimed, beaming. "That vein's certainly five feet wide."

"And two hundred dollars to the ton," added Fairchild, laughing. "No wonder Rodaine wanted it."

"I'll see so!" A long time of congratulatory celebration, then Harry led the way to the far end of the great cavern. "Ere it is!" he announced, as he pointed to what seemed to both of them never to be anything more than a fissure in the rocks. "It's the thing that saved my life."

Fairchild stared into the darkness of the hole in the earth, a narrow crack in the rocks barely large enough to allow a human form to squeeze within. He laughed.

"You must have made yourself pretty small, Harry."

"What? When I went through there? S'ye, I could 'ave gone through the eye of a needle. There were six charges of dynamite just about to go off 'em. I was just about to go off 'em myself."

and slips to the underground bed of some tumbling spring. Suddenly, however, Fairchild whirled with a thought. "Harry! I wonder—couldn't it have been possible for my father to have escaped from this mine in the same way?"

"E must 'ave." "And that there might not have been any killing connected with Larson at all? Why couldn't Larsen have been knocked out by a flying stone—just like you were? And why—?"

"E might of, Boy." But Harry's voice was negative. "The only thing about it was the fact that your father 'ad a bullet 'ole in 'is 'end." Harry leaned forward and pointed to his own scar. "It 'it right about 'ere, and glanced."

"But the gun? We didn't find any." "E 'ad it with 'im. It was Sissie Larsen's. No, Boy, there must 'ave been a fight—but don't think that I mean your father murdered anybody. If Sissie Larsen attacked 'im with a gun, then 'e 'ad a right to kill. But as I've told you before—there wouldn't 'ave been a chance for 'im to prove 'is story with Squint working against 'im." He ceased and perked his head toward the bottom of the shaft, listening intently. "Didn't you 'ear something?"

"I thought so. Like a woman's voice." "Listen—there it is again!" "Mr. Fairchild!" They ran to the foot of the shaft, and Fairchild cupped his hands and called:

"Who wants me?" "It's me." The voice was plainer now—a voice that Fairchild recognized immediately.

"I'm—'m under arrest or something—up here," was added with a laugh. "The guard won't let me come down."

"Wait, and I'll raise the bucket for you. All right, guard!" Then, blinking with surprise, he turned to the starting Harry. "It's Anita Richmond," he whispered.

The bucket was at the top now. A signal from above, and Fairchild lowered it, to extend a hand and to aid the girl to the ground, looking at her with wondering, eager eyes. In the light of the carbide torch, she was the same boyish-appearing little person he had met on the Denver road except that snow had taken the place of dust now upon the whipcord riding habit, and the brown hair which creased the corners of her eyes was moist with the breath of the blizzard. Some way Fairchild found his voice, lost for a moment.

"Are—are you in trouble?" "No," she smiled at him. "But out on a night like this—in a blizzard. How did you get up here?" She shrugged her shoulders.

"I walked. Oh," she added, with a smile, "it didn't hurt me any. The wind was pretty stiff—but then I'm fairly strong. I rather enjoyed it."

"But what's happened—what's gone wrong? Can I help you with anything—or—"

Then it was that Harry, with a roll of his blue eyes and a funny waggle of his big shoulders, moved down the drift toward the stope, leaving them alone together. Anita Richmond watched after him with a smile, waiting until he was out of hearing distance. Then she turned seriously.

"Mother Howard told me where you were," came quietly. "It was the only chance I had to see you. I—maybe I was a little lonely—or something. But, anyway, I wanted to see you and thank you and—"

"Thank me? For what?" "For everything. For that day on the Denver road, and for the night after the Old Times dance when you came to help me. I—I haven't had an easy time. Most of the people I know are afraid and—some of them aren't to be trusted. And—you—well, I knew the Rodaines were your enemies—and I've rather 'lied you for it."

"Thank you. But—" and Fairchild's voice became a bit frigid—"I haven't been able to understand everything. You are engaged to Maurice Rodaine." "I was, you mean."

"Then—" "My engagement ended with my father's death," came slowly—and there was a catch in her voice. "He wanted it—it was the one thing that held the Rodaines off him. And he was dying slowly—it was all I could do to help him, and I promised. But—when he went—I felt that my—my duty was over. I don't consider myself bound to him any longer."

"It meant more to me to be able to send them." Then Fairchild stared with a sudden idea. "Maurice's coming for you at midnight. Why is it necessary that you be there?"

"Why—? The idea 'ad struck her too—"it isn't. I—I hadn't thought of it. I was too badly scared, I guess. Everything's been happening so swiftly—since you made the strike up here."

"With them?" "Yes, they've been simply crazy about something. You got my note?" "Yes."

"That was the beginning. The minute Squint Rodaine heard of the strike I thought he would go out of his head."

"Why is it Necessary That You Be There?"

I was in the office—I'm vice president of the firm, you know," she added, with a sarcastic laugh. "They had to do something to make up for the fact that every cent of father's money was in it."

"How much?" Fairchild asked the question with no thought of being rude—and she answered in the same vein. "A quarter of a million. That's why I'm vice president."

"And is that why you arranged things to buy this mine?" Fairchild knew the answer before it was given. "I? I arrange—I never thought of such a thing."

"I felt that from the beginning. An effort was made through a lawyer in Denver who hinted you were behind it. Some way I felt differently. I refused. But you said they were going away?"

"Yes. They've been holding conferences—father and son—one after another. They're both excited about something. Last night Maurice came to me and told me that it was necessary for them all to go to Chicago, where the head offices would be established, and that I must go with him. I didn't have the strength to fight him then—there wasn't anybody nearby who could help me. So I—I told him I'd go. Then I lay awake all night, trying to think out a plan—and I thought of you."

"I'm glad," Fairchild touched her small gloved hand then, and she did not draw it away. His fingers moved slowly under hers. There was no resistance. At last his hand closed with a tender pressure—only to release her again. For there had come a laugh, shy, embarrassed, almost fearful—and the plan:

"Can we go back where Harry is? Can I see the strike again?" "Obviously Fairchild led the way, beyond the big cavern, through the cross-cut and into the new stope, where Harry was picking about with a gad, striving to find a soft spot in which to sink a drill. He looked over his shoulder as they entered and grinned broadly.

"Oh," he exclaimed, "a new mine?" "I wish I were," she answered. "I wish I could help you."

But Harry had turned and was staring upward. His eyes had become wide, his head had shot forward, his whole being had become one of strained attention. Once he cocked his head, then, with a sudden exclamation, he leaped backward.

"Look out!" he exclaimed. "Urry, look out!" "But what is it?" "It's coming down! I 'eard it!" Excitedly he pointed above, toward the black vein of lead and silver. "Urry for that 'ole in the wall—'urry, I tell you!" He ran past them toward the fissure, yelling at Fairchild. "Pick 'er up and come on! I tell you I 'eard the wall moving—it's coming down, and if it does, it'll bust in the 'ole tunnel!"

CHAPTER XVIII. Hardly realizing what he was doing, or why he was doing it, Fairchild seized Anita in his arms and, raising her to his breast as though she were a child, rushed out through the cross-cut and along the cavern to the fissure, there to find Harry awaiting them.

"But 'er in first!" said the Cornishman-anxiously. "The farther the safer. Did you 'ear anything more?" Fairchild obeyed, shaking his head in a negative to Harry's question, then squeezed into the fissure, edging along beside Anita, while Harry followed.

almost creeping, and whispering, as he reached the end of the fissure. "Come 'ere—both of you! Come 'ere!"

"What is it?" "Sh-h-h-h-h. Don't talk too loud. We've been blessed with luck already. Come 'ere."

He led the way, the man and woman following him. In the stope the Cornishman crawled carefully to the staging and, standing on tiptoes, pressed his ear against the vein above him. Then he withdrew and nodded sagely.

"That's what it is!" came his announcement at last. "You can 'ear it!" "But what?" "Get up there and lay your ear against that vein. See if you 'ear anything. And be quiet about it. I'm scared to make a move, for fear somebody 'll 'ear me."

Fairchild obeyed. From far away, carried by the telegraphy of the earth—and there are few conductors that are better—was the steady pound, pound, pound of shock after shock as it traveled along the hanging wall. Fairchild turned, wondering, then reached for Anita.

"You listen," he ordered, as he lifted her to where she could hear. "Do you get anything?" "The girl's eyes shone. "I know what that is," she said quickly. "I've heard that same sort of thing before—when you're on another level and somebody's working above. Isn't that it, Mr. Harkins?"

Harry nodded. "That's it," came tersely. Then bending, he reached for a pick and, muffling the sound as best he could between his knees, knocked the head from the handle. Following this, he lifted the piece of hickory thoughtfully and turned to Fairchild. "Get yourself one," he ordered. "Miss Richmond, I guess you'll 'ave to stay 'ere. I don't see 'ow we can do much else with you."

"But can't I go along—wherever you're going?" "There's going to be a fight," said Harry quietly. "And I'm going to knock somebody's block off!"

"But—I'd rather be there, than here. I—I don't 'ave to get in it. And I'd be scared to death here. I wouldn't if I was along with you two, because I know—" and she said it with almost childish conviction—"that you can whip 'em."

Harry chuckled. "Come along, then. I've got a 'unch, and I can't see it now. But it'll come out in the wash. Come along."

They started up the mountain side, skirting the big gullies and edging about the highest drifts, taking advantage of the cover of the pines, and bending against the force of the blizzard, which seemed to threaten to blow them back, step for step. No one spoke; instinctively Fairchild and Anita had guessed Harry's conclusions. The nearest mine to the Blue Poppy was the Silver Queen, situated several hundred feet above it in altitude and less than a furlong away. And the metal of the Silver Queen and the Blue Poppy, now that the strike had been made, had assayed almost identically the same. It was easy to make conclusions.

They reached the mouth of the Silver Queen. Harry reconnoitered a moment before he gave the signal to proceed. Within the tunnel they went, to follow along 'is regular, rising course to the stope where, on that garish day when Taylor Bill and Blindevy Bozeman had led the enthusiastic parade through the streets, the vein had shown. It was dark there—no one was at work. Harry unhooked his carbide from his belt, lit it and looked around.

"It ain't coming from 'ere!" he announced. "It's—" then his voice dropped to a whisper—"what's that?"

Again a rumbling had come from a distance, as of an ore car traveling over the tram tracks. Harry extinguished his light, and drawing Anita and Fairchild far to the end of the stope, flattened them and himself on the ground. A long wait, while the rumbling came closer, still closer; then, in the distance, a light appeared, shining from a side of the tunnel. A clanging noise, followed by clattering sounds, as though of steel rails hitting against each other. Finally the tramping once more—and the light approached.

Into view came an ore car, and behind it loomed the great form of Taylor Bill as he pushed it along. Straight to the pile of ore he came, unhooked the front of the tram, tripped it and piled the contents of the car on top of the dump which already rested there. With that, carbide pointing the way, he turned back, pushing the tram before him. Harry crept to his feet.

"We've got to follow!" he whispered. "It's a blind entrance to the tunnel som'eres." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Too Much Meat Hurts Kidneys

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you.

Eating too much meat may produce kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up, and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so that it is no longer irritating, thus often ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure any one; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help clean the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Centerville—Mrs. Eloise Cummings, 61 years old, was the recipient Monday of scores of telegrams, letters and flowers, in honor of her thirty-second wedding anniversary. She had been ill for a long time, but was able to sit up and read the telegrams and letters. Excitement over the celebration caused a relapse which resulted in her death.

Port Huron—A Pere Marquette passenger train on the Bad Axe division was held up for 30 minutes when John McSnares, locomotive fireman, quit his post at a crossing in the business section of the city. The patent fire box door on the boiler was not working, McSnares said, and he gave that as his reason for quitting his job shortly after the train pulled out from the depot. The train was held up until another fireman was rushed to the scene on a switch engine.

Detroit—While she and her husband struggled for an hour in the chill waters of Lake St. Clair, Mrs. Delmar McDaniel, bit desperately on a slender anchor rope until it parted, and an overturned canoe became a floating buoy that bore them to safety. The canoe was capsized while they were fishing. A mile from shore, beyond hauling distance, and their craft but a speck in the twilight, Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel fought their battle against death. Each used one hand to cling to the capsized canoe, and paddled with the other.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

Faulty Philosophy.

Nothing is more obviously false than that the remedy for the inequality among men consists in their return to the condition of savages and beasts. Philosophy will never be understood if we approach the study of its mysteries with so narrow and illiberal conceptions of its universality.—Shelley.

Secret of Administration.

The culminating point of administration is to know well how much power, great or small, we ought to use in all circumstances.—Montesquieu.

Many Needed to Save State.

To be a voice outside the state, speaking to mankind or to the future, perhaps shaking the actual state to pieces in doing so, one man will suffice. But to reform the state in order to save it, to preserve it by changing it, a body of workers is needed as well as a leader—a considerable body of workers, placed at many points, and operating in many directions.—Matthew Arnold.

Moon Absolutely Without Water.

There is no water on the moon. The mountains there are as dry as powder. They are desiccated far beyond the extremes of the most parched of earthly deserts. On this globe there is always a little water to be found, even in the most baked and unpromising spots. Only a few drops, perhaps, but water. On the moon there is not even one drop.—S. F. Maxwell, in the Chicago Tribune.

To Preserve Sandstone.

To preserve sandstone against decay, two methods have been suggested that have proved effective. If a piece of rotten sandstone is treated with certain chemical compounds of alcohol and silica and then exposed to moist air, the silica is deposited and forms a protective cement coating. Limestone has also been found very effective for the same purpose.—Popular Science Magazine.

Contributed Verse.

There's joy in the smile of an artless child; there's joy in a maiden's eyes; there's joy in the spring when the songbirds sing, there's joy in a lover's sighs. But such joys all pale and easily fall to compare with the joyous thrill, of the woman who knows that her new spring clothes gives her rival a nervous chill.—Boston Transcript.

Boring Metals.

Brass, copper, iron, steel and other metals are easily drilled if you use oil or grease as a lubricant. Do not try to drill too rapidly, and when nearly through the metal go very slowly, as a drill may easily be broken by trying to turn it too rapidly as it pushes itself through the surface.

Various Osier Willows.

There are about 40 varieties of osier willows known to botanists.

Philosopher's Nickname.

The Patriarch of Ferney was a name given to Voltaire (1694-1778), the French philosopher, of whom Thomas Carlyle said, "Voltaire is the Eighteenth century," because he retired to the village of Ferney, near Geneva, Switzerland, where he produced much of his work.

24 FAMILIES TRAPPED, 15 DIE

N. Y. Police Looking for Fire Bug Who Started Fire.

New York—Fifteen persons, including children, are dead, others are missing, and 20 or more are critically injured, as the result of a fire set by a pyromaniac, that burned two five-story Lexington avenue tenement houses here Sunday. So rapidly did the flames spread that members of the 24 families who were trapped in the buildings had to jump to safety.

After fighting the blaze that started in hallways in baby carriages for hours, an army of firemen, who were handicapped by intense heat, finally overcame the fire and began searching ruins for other dead.

Simultaneously police threw out a dragnet for a fendish fire bug, believed to have set Sunday's and four others in the same neighborhood.

France Submits Reparation Plan

ALL NATIONS OF WORLD INVITED TO JOIN CONFERENCE ON GERMANY.

DIFFERS FROM BRITISH PROJECT

M. Barthou Declares Moment Has Come When Allies Must Take Energetic Steps.

Paris—Complete and rigid control of all German finances, power to veto expenditures and regulate taxation, and authority to dictate the arrangement of the budgets of the various German states are among the chief proposals contained in the plan of the French government for a solution of Germany's financial difficulties and for placing that country in a position to meet her reparations payments.

The plan was submitted to the Reparations Commission by Louis Barthou, French representative on the commission, and discussion of the project has begun.

Though not mentioned in the official summary, M. Barthou's plan contemplates a meeting of leading business men of the world to determine Germany's capacity to pay and to consider the question of inter Allied debts.

The plan, in effect, is a reply to the British reparations project recently placed before the commission by Sir John Bradbury. It differs radically from the British point of view.

M. Barthou urges the calling of a Brussels conference to deal with a broad reparations settlement and Allied debts and the question of German payments in 1923 and 1924: France would limit the powers of the Reparations Commission to the application of new guarantees and reforms for Germany, leaving the more comprehensive issues to an international meeting.

The moment has come, according to M. Barthou, when the Allies must take energetic steps or else be faced by a Germany proclaimed before the world as a ruined nation, despite the fact that her actual capital is intact.

Fourth Grade

The fourth graders are studying about shelter. They are also getting ready for Hollowe'en. They have their room decorated with paper lanterns and cats.

Thursday, October 19th, there was a Mother's Meeting in the fourth grade room and all mothers of fourth grade children were expected to be present. Only a few turned out and we hope to see more next time. Refreshments were served which consisted of punch and wafers. The remainder of the refreshments were served to the children the next day.

Fifth Grade

The Geography class of the fifth grade is studying the Middle and Southern Atlantic States. They are doing exceptionally well in Arithmetic. The A class is studying fractions and the B class long division. They are decorating their room with corn shocks, pumpkins, and other paper cuttings. They are telling Hollowe'en stories, some of them weird and ghostly. Their collections in shells are rapidly increasing, especially from the Pacific Coast.

Sixth Grade

Miss Myers, teacher of the sixth grade is having the class study the weather. Each day they make charts of the temperature and wind conditions. In Arithmetic they are reviewing long division. In their history they are studying the French and Indian Wars.

Kindergarten

The Kindergarten class is making a little boy who is very pale. He lives in the city and he is going to take a trip to the country where he will have better health. He has a new trunk and new clothes with which to fill it and he is going to visit at his grandfathers. Here he will have all the fruit and vegetables he can eat. His grandfather's cellar is filled with these fruits and vegetables. The class hopes that he will have a good time, and when he returns expect to see him fat, with round rosy cheeks.

Common and Preferred Stock.
Preferred stock in a corporation is a share which is entitled to a dividend before any other dividend is payable. The amount of the dividend is limited, however. Common stock receives its dividend after the preferred stock, but the dividend is not limited. Holders of preferred and common stock in a company are contributors to its capital and are members of the corporation.

Lone and Mysterious.
There is an elderberry bush seven feet high on the tableland of Mesa Verde National park, in Colorado, that has the distinction of being the only one in that country. How it got there and whether the last of the Indian cliff dwellers had anything to do with its growth there is being investigated by scientists.

DEALERS TOLD TO SECURE LICENSES

POTTER SENDS APPLICATIONS TO COUNTY ADMINISTRATORS FOR DISTRIBUTION.

INFORMATION WILL BE SECURED

Application Will Give Facts As To Distributors and Amount of Coal on Hand in State.

Lansing—Distribution of application blanks for coal dealers licenses was begun by State Fuel Administrator W. W. Potter last week, through the county fuel administrators following the signing of the coal regulation bill by Governor Groesbeck. From the form of application blanks, two purposes will be served by the licensing of coal dealers as provided in the fuel regulation act, first, the application blank is in the form of a questionnaire, which, when filled out, will give the state fuel administrator accurate information as to the quantity of coal sold in the state through dealers last year, and the relative quantities sold to domestic, industrial and utility consumers.

The second purpose the application blank will serve, is to provide information concerning the length of time each dealer has been in business, whether he has an established yard and equipment for handling coal and the extent of his facilities for the distribution of fuel in his locality. These facts, it is said, will draw the line sharply between the legitimate, established fuel company, whether wholesale or retail and the fly-by-night broker who goes into the fuel business only during shortages or other unsettled conditions of the market to speculate in coal for the high prices that may be had.

According to Mr. Potter, it is those who enter the business purely as a speculative proposition, during an emergency, that work the most havoc with the fuel market, and bring hardships upon dealers and consumers alike.

It is pointed out that, during the war, much speculation in coal by unreliable persons was carried on with the result that mines were never paid for whole trainloads of coal shipped and artificial increases in prices were brought about.

A great many dealers, who ordered coal through these brokers, in good faith, contracting for it at the going market price, were forced to go into the market and buy at an increased price when they discovered that the coal they had ordered had been sold by the brokers to persons who had offered a slightly higher price than that at which it was contracted for.

One of the objects of the fuel control bill, Mr. Potter declared, is to discourage similar practices in cases of an acute fuel shortage this winter. All applications for licenses are to be made through the county fuel administrators, and are to be forwarded to the state fuel administrator with the approval of the county official.

ADVOCATES MERCHANT MARINE

Admiral Tells Legion Convention U. S. Needs Ship Subsidy.

New Orleans—"A strong merchant marine is the first element of sea power." Rear Admiral Pickett Magruder, representing the secretary of the navy, told the National American Legion convention.

"We have the ships for a merchant marine," declared Admiral Magruder, "now we must operate it. The merchant marine must be manned by American officers and seamen to the last man."

"They must be paid a living wage. The tariff keeps up the wages of employees of the manufacturers, there must be a ship subsidy, so American ship owners can compete with foreign owners."

Detroit—During the week of November 12 every hospital in the city will hold special diagnostic clinics in connection with the national "Cancer week" of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. Smuggle Dope Into Prison.

Atlanta, Ga.—Evidence that the United States prison here, was made a recruiting ground for the ranks of "dope" addicts by smugglers who passed the narcotics inside the prison walls, was given here in the trial of John Owens, a former guard at the prison, charged in the United States District court with smuggling "dope." Vinson Caucaurang, a prisoner, testified Owens' operations had caused men to become addicts who never before had used drugs.

Ancient Greeks Took Gymnastics.

In every Greek city was established a gymnasium where crowds of young men exercised themselves naked. This institution was originally intended for those only who were in training for the Olympic games, but afterward it became part of the daily life. The Greeks went to the gymnasium with the same regularity as the Romans went to the bath.—Winwood Reade in "The Martyrdom of Man."

Royal Road to Success.

Whatever your occupation in life may be apply yourself to it seriously and diligently. Let it be the subject which dominates your thoughts, because your success will be measured by the interest you take in what you are doing. Intense interest will mean close application and hard work and it is only along that road that success and contentment are to be found.—Exchange.

TILE LEAFLET'S DANCE

ONE day before the flowers had bloomed or the buds come out the little Leaflets began to complain to the Trees where they lived that they never had any fun; that no one ever noticed them, either, for all the Blossoms and Fruit took the attention from them.

"We never have a party or anything," sighed the Leaflets, "and no one cares anything about us. But if it were not for us I am sure the Trees would look queer and the Fruit or Blossoms would not be half as beautiful."

In vain did the Trees tell them that they were beautiful, and that everyone loved to look at their shining green dresses, but still the little Leaflets grumbled and fussed, and at last all the trees talked it over one night, and it was decided that the Leaflets should have a dance all by themselves, before the Blossoms or the Fruit came.

As all the festivals and parties take place on moonlight nights, the Trees waited until the moon was shining full and bright, and then they told the Leaflets about the dance.

All the little Breezes were invited to help with the dancing, and even Brisk Wind was asked to come around for a while. The Soft Sighing Winds were asked to furnish the music, for the Trees wanted the Leaflets to have a wonderful dance.

When the little Leaflets heard they were to have a dance they could not keep still, and long before the dance began they were swaying and fluttering about, practicing all the fancy steps they could think of for the wonderful dance.

By and by the Moon came up and the dance began. The little Breezes were their partners, and they enjoyed the frolic as well as the Leaflets.

Suddenly some of them discovered their shadows on the ground, and they danced faster than ever. In fact, old Mr. Moon grew tired and sleepy and went to bed, and still the dance went on, for now they had found something that amused them the Leaflets would not stop. They tired out the little Breezes and they went home; and not until then did the Leaflets stop dancing.

It was a long time ago that the Leaflets held their first dance, but ever since they are always calling the little Breezes or the Brisk Breeze to come and dance with them.

Often, when all the rest of the world seems quiet, if you look at the young Leaflets you will no doubt see some of them, at least, swaying and swinging, trying new steps and watching the shadows they make on the ground.

Never since that night long ago have the Trees been able to keep the Leaflets from dancing; but, as they never fuss or complain, the Trees do not mind. And so, while they sleep, the little Leaflets go on with their dance, sometimes even dancing in the rain.
