Great Game Monday Night

M. F. Club Drop H. N. in Great Exhibition.

However, there were two games. The first one was also a very good battle in which the Masons did some old time slugging to win 23 to 14 against the K. of P. team. This game was more of a slugging exhibition although some especially fast work was shown at times. Most of the scoring was done in but two or three innings. The real feature of this game, outside of the heavy hitting, was the pitching of Sedgman, holding the heavy hitting K. of P. team to four runs in six innings, the pitching of Sedgman and the all around work of Gibbs, Bechtold and Shay was a feature. For the K. of P's. Covey and Vogel played fine games. Covey's pep was especially noteworthy.

Of course the second game was the feature of the evening. This game, without a doubt, was the best exhibition ever staged in East Jordan in the Indoor game. The pitching and, in fact, the battery work of the Methodist team was magnificent. McKinnon certainly came back to his real form in this exhibition. When Mac is going good he is hard to beat. Other stars for the Methodist team, in fact men who always play a mighty consistent and scrappy game, was Barnett and Freiberg. They are about as good a pair as we have in the League at the short stop position. Barnett's knack of throwing underhand to the first base is especially commendable. Any game that ends 5 to 4 surely would indicate that all the stars were not on one team, for the Holy Name boys, as is their custom, gave a real exhibition not only of good ball playing but first class sportsmanship, fought every inch of the way and took their medicine like gentlemen. Green pitched his very best. In fact, if he pitches as well as he did on this particular evening, he will not be beaten many times and he was ably supported by Ed. LaLonde behind the bat, Archie LaLonde in the field and Leo LaLonde at the bat and the good playing of Nachazel. This game surely was enjoyed by the usual crowd of fans. All of the teams played well and are to be commended.

The League race was tightened up somewhat and maybe a real fight before the season is over, for the heavy hitting of the K. of P's. and Masons is liable to upset the dope at any time. The standing to date is as follows:

LEAGUE STANDINGS
	won	lost
Holy Name.....	6	2
Methodist Fellowship..	5	3
Masons.....	3	5
Knights of Pythias....	2	6

The first game next Monday night is between the Holy Name and the K. of P's., and the Masons play the Methodists in the second game. Without a doubt, these games will be interesting for the tail-enders are going to try their best to even the League standing up by whipping the leaders and the League is showing a better class of ball each week. You ought to see these games!

PARENTS AND TEACHERS TO ORGANIZE.

A meeting of all parents interested in organizing a Parent-Teachers Association will take place at the High School Auditorium, Wednesday evening, Feb'y 7th, at 7:30 standard. Preliminary announcements have already been made for this meeting and it is hoped the committee's desire to have as many parents, men as well as women, in attendance at this meeting as possible, for there is no greater asset to the Public Schools than a good spirit of cooperation between the parents and teachers. We have considered the ground carefully and are not organizing on the spur of the moment but are organizing with the idea that it shall be a permanent asset to the Public Schools of East Jordan. Therefore, Mrs. H. C. Clark, temporary chairman of the Parent-Teachers Association, calls the above meeting.

Electors of Charlevoix County

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the position of Commissioner of Schools of Charlevoix County and will appreciate the votes of all who see fit to honor me with the same.

EAST JORDAN GIRLS LOSE TO TRAVERSE CITY

The Traverse City Record Eagle had the following to say about the East Jordan-Traverse City girls game last Friday night at Traverse. In big headlines at the top of the article it said, "East Jordan girls best yet. Gave locals hardest run for their money. Although the exhibition was 46 to 15, the game was exciting throughout. The East Jordan girls even threatened Traverse's lead in the first half at times." The above is very favorable comment on the work of the local girls, most of them new to the game this year, while the Traverse City team is thoroughly experienced from end to end. In fact, it looks very much as though Traverse would be contending for the championship of the state. Their forwards played the game more like boys when it came to shooting baskets. In fact, they only missed two or three tries at the basket the whole evening. They turn and shoot for the hoop immediately upon receiving the ball and their aims seem to be deadly. The East Jordan girls were handicapped somewhat by playing on a strange floor before a large crowd and the fact that Alma Anderson had been ill for a couple days. However, it was a lot of satisfaction to hear a home and strange crowd yelling for the visiting team every time they made a good play. It's worth noting in our next games to try to give Traverse City similar treatment for the coach and girls carried back glowing stories of the fine treatment received Traverse City and said that they had one of the best times ever.

The stars of the Traverse City team were Mary Lawton at C. and F. and Miss Nuttin. For East Jordan was East Jordan's two guards, Miss Sweet and Miss Liskum; Miss Anderson and Miss Dorothea Malpass, forward.

The Traverse City champions take the floor against the local girls tonight in what should be a first class exhibition of basketball. Although the score was one-sided down there, it should be much closer here with a real chance of putting one over. There has been a number of shifts made in the team which will materially strengthen the local lineup. Alright, East Jordan, let's after Traverse City! Let's show that we are good sports then proceed to give them a clean exhibition of how play basket ball. The lineup of the team is as follows: C.—Dorothy Kistman; S. C.—Mary Shedina; Guards—Elizabeth Sweet and Azalia Liskum; Forwards—Alma Anderson, Dorothea Malpass, and LaBerta Stewart, Subst.

Traverse City lineup: C.—Mary Lawton; Guards—Marine Kelly, Miss Wright; Forward—Miss Nuttin.

The price of admission Friday night is 25 cents. The preliminary game will start at 7:00 and the big game will be at 8:00 standard.

JOSEPH NELSON WALKER

Joseph Nelson Walker was born Feb'y 2nd, 1856 in Carleton Twp., Orleans Co., New York. In 1857 his parents, Thos. and Lydia Walker, moved to Huron Co., Mich. Nine years later they moved to Boyne City, Mich. In 1875 they moved to Tennessee remaining one year and then returning to Michigan settling on a farm near Intermediate Lake.

Joseph resided with his parents until Nov. 11th, 1890, when he was united in marriage to Miss Emma King of the same place. They settled on a farm on the east side of Intermediate Lake. To this union were born five children—Carrie, Hazel, Ralph, Morris and Russell—all are living near this place except Russell who passed away in infancy.

Joseph was a man of usual health until about six months ago when he suffered an attack of multiple neuritis which confined him to his bed until his death which was on Jan. 23rd, 1923—Deceased was aged 66 years, 11 mos., 2 days.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife two daughters—Mrs. Carrie Murray and Hazel Walker—and two sons—Ralph and Morris. Also three brothers William, Robert and Thomas; two grandchildren, Hazel and Joseph Murray.

Funeral services were held from his late home Friday afternoon, conducted by Elder C. H. McKinnon of the L. D. S. Church. Interment at the Jones Cemetery.

The old-timer would rather wear a greasy countenance than to use talcum, but he never objects when the barber powders him.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

This is second week of the new semester. After the pupils had received their Report Cards, it was easy to detect the work they had been doing the first semester by the joyful smile some of their faces, and a "Scrooge" expression on others with a triumphant throb in their heart that seems to say: "I'll do better next half."

Botany Seed Collections

At the end of the first semester Mary Chew brought in a seed collection containing over one hundred different kinds of seeds. At the same time Earl Jackson brought in a collection containing 97 kinds of seeds, all of which he had collected himself, and none of which he purchased. Just for a moment stop and name all the seeds you know, and you will realize what it requires to make a collection containing one hundred seeds.

All of the seeds in these two collections were nicely mounted in a frame covered with glass, and with a key to names of the seeds.

Mass Meeting

Last Friday the first hour in the afternoon a mass meeting was held to give the Girls Basket Ball team a send-off as they were to play Traverse City on Traverse's own floor. It was also given for the benefit of the Boy's Basket Ball team who were to play Harbor Springs here. Both games were held on Friday night. Roy Stewart acted as yell master and gave a few yells beginning with the "Old Locomotive" which was followed by a talk given by Mr. Duncanson after which the Captains of both teams, Alma Anderson and Floyd Walker, gave a short talk on their teams. Mr. Sjaellenberger, the coach of the boys team, and Miss Massink, the coach of the girls team, gave a speech. Mr. Nesman also gave a short talk on basket ball, followed by an announcement by Mrs. Sebring showing some cartoons of the characters in the play to be given Wednesday night. A few yells was given ending the meeting.

Radio

A new Radio set is going to be installed Wednesday in the Auditorium of the New School Building. It will be strong enough to receive from anywhere along the Atlantic or Pacific Coasts. It is one of the most important and largest in the city of East Jordan.

The Bookkeeping class are coming fine with their work. They have the first set nearly finished which includes March. They hope to start their other set soon.

Juniors vs Sophomores.

Friday, Jan. 26, the Sophomores played the Juniors in the High School Auditorium. It was a fast game from start to finish as both sides were well balanced. The Sophomore team has beaten everything that has come their way, so far. They have not had a chance to play the Seniors yet, although we are depending on an easy victory. The forwards for the night were L. Halstad and M. Benson; for the Juniors A. Jackson and H. Chorpenting. The score was 22 and 6 in favor of the Sophomores. They are all looking forward to a Championship team this year.

The Sophomore English Class

The Sophomore English Class has been divided the last week. Miss Shipp decided that some of the pupils weren't doing very good work in composition.

Those whom she thought were good enough she assigned books to be read and reported on, and composition work was given to the rest of the class.

Hereafter one or two days a week will be given to composition work until the class shows a decided improvement.

Harbor Springs vs East Jordan

Last Friday the Harbor Springs basket ball team played East Jordan, at East Jordan. East Jordan won by a score of 29—12. East Jordan has a good team this year and are very fast. So far they have played 6 games and lost two those played with Charlevoix and Elk Rapids. Although Charlevoix has a good team the boys say that they can beat them when they come here. Thursday the team will start on their two day trip to Manton and Kalkaska.

B. O. HAGERMAN

Co. Agricultural Agent, Boyne City.

"Modified Accredited Area"

Following is a letter received by the County Agricultural Agent, B. O. Hagerman, relative to the tubercular work in the State.

This letter was from B. J. Killham, State Veterinarian. The latest developments along these lines are toward a "Modified Accredited Area" plan. The idea of this plan is that livestock shipped from an accredited area of this kind will receive a premium over the regular market prices when shipped to certain livestock markets. Following is the letter:—

"With a view to complying with the Modified Accredited Area requirements, the following regulations, signed by the Commissioner of Agriculture Director of Animal Industry and State Veterinarian, has been drafted to cover Antrim, Charlevoix, Eaton, Emmett, Gogebic, Grand Traverse, Hilldale, Ingham, Jackson, Kent, Livingston, Shiawassee, Washtenaw and Wayne Counties, Michigan.

"It is ordered that after January 1st, 1923, the importation of cattle into Charlevoix County, Michigan is hereby prohibited, except when such cattle are accompanied by a certificate indicating that the cattle are from a fully accredited herd or have been subjected to an approved tuberculin test applied by an accredited veterinarian within sixty days of importation. Exception will be made in case of cattle for immediate slaughter (to be slaughtered within ten days), and steers, provided such cattle are kept separate and apart from the other cattle until slaughtered or removed from the county.

No cattle shall be offered at any public sale in Charlevoix Co. Michigan for breeding or dairying purposes, except when such cattle have been subjected to a tuberculin test approved by the State Department of Agriculture and found to be free from any contagious or infectious disease."

Will you not kindly call the attention of all concerned to this regulation? Assuring you that we shall greatly appreciate any assistance you may be able to give, I am

Yours very truly,
B. J. Killham,
State Veterinarian.

Following are some of the facts unearthed by the Bovine Tuberculosis Eradication Committee of Michigan:

DO YOU KNOW?

That the annual loss from tuberculosis in livestock in the United States is between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

That seventy trainloads of 40 cars each of hogs and cattle are condemned for tuberculosis at five of the largest packing centers every year.

That 25,000,000 pounds of tuberculous meat were destroyed last year.

That a nice fat cow may be a spreader of tuberculosis.

That milk from clean, healthy cows is absolutely essential to proper nourishment and growth of children.

That milk from tuberculous cows, unless properly pasteurized, is infectious.

That 40 per cent of all tuberculous children under five years of age contracted the disease from milk of tuberculous cows.

That 168,000 cattle were tested under this plan in Michigan last year.

That 33 counties in Michigan have appropriated $175,000 to co-operate in this work.

That the percentage of tuberculosis in Michigan cattle is lower than in any other of the dairy states.

LANSING LETTER

(By W. L. Calnon)

Lansing, Mich.

Reapportionment Still Pends.

Though the present session of the legislature has shown more "pep" and speed in getting under way than is usual with lawmaking bodies, those experienced in legislative work are wondering if this year's most important legislation will be cared for in the ordinary length of time covered by a regular session.

Thus far no bills have been introduced that are intended to cover the really big things it is necessary to accomplish this year. One of the biggest problems before this legislature, for instance, is that of reapportioning the seats in the senate and house for the next ten years. The constitution makes this reapportionment mandatory for this year. It was equally mandatory in 1913, when a bill was passed that later was declared lacking in adherence to constitutional provisions and therefore was set aside by the supreme court.

As a result there has been no change in the apportionment of seats in the legislative halls for twenty years and everyone is interested in what will be done in the matter this year. Detroit and other centers that have made big gains in population expect to obtain larger representation, but their interest in this regard is no greater than that of other districts which expect changes in their boundaries. Probably the two houses this time will be more careful of the so-called "mole" clause" on which the 1913 legislators tripped up. But thus far no bill has been prepared to show how the matter may be handled and report about the Capitol is that it may be March 1 before one does appear, with every prospect of weeks of argument over it afterwards.

Also slow in making their appearance are the bills which everyone is looking for and which will be known as "administration measures" because they will aim to carry out the recommendations of the governor. Just how many such bills will come in also is uncertain, though it is probable that all the main points covered by Gov. Groesbeck in his message to the legislature on its opening will be covered by suggested measures.

Bills Already Being Passed.

The bill-passing stage has been reached by the 1923 legislature, along with daily sessions in committee of the whole in both houses for consideration of bills reported out of committee. The first bill to go through either house was adopted by the senate, with a unanimous vote. It was introduced by Senator Condon, of Detroit, and permits the presiding judge of the circuit courts of the state to call the annual meeting of the judges in any city of the state. At present the judges are required to meet in Lansing.

The house, in its first committee of the whole session, sent on to third reading two bills, one aiming to limit private hunt clubs to 8,000 acres of land, with the public permitted to go through to any enclosed lakes; and the other amending the law against throwing stones at passenger trains so as to include freight trains and automobiles.

Capital Punishment Faces Defeat.

Capital punishment for murder in Michigan, over which much oratory ensued two years ago, again is to be brought to the attention of the legislature this year, both in the house and the senate, but it has developed in connection with discussion of the prospects of such bills that they will be opposed by Gov. Groesbeck, Lieut. Gov. Read and Speaker Weisk. It is hard to see much progress for them with the presiding officer in each house against them and a probable veto awaiting any such bill if it did chance to get by senate and house.

Administrative Board Changes.

Considerable discussion has been started over proposed alterations in the law creating the state administrative board. The governor is understood to favor the board being given latitude to handle appropriations after they are made by the legislature and some argue that such a move would be delegating legislative authority to the executive branch. Rep. George M. Long, of Pompeii, one of the five Democratic members of the house, has introduced a bill to amend the state administrative board act by removing the clause giving the governor veto power over acts of the board. This is a follow-up to the Democratic campaign charge that the act gives a governor autocratic power in the handling of state affairs.

Supporters of the administrative board assert that this feature is one of the best things about the act, as it centers responsibility on the governor of the state. The Long bill may go no further than the state affairs committee, but it is provoking some discussion.

Some very ambitious measures designed to make absolutely equal before the law both male and female citizens, and to give married women independent property rights now possessed by them, are reported to be ready for introduction soon. Two or three already introduced have been referred to committees, but have had no consideration as yet. Warns Against Gas Tax.

A warning to legislators not to become too enthusiastic over putting a tax on gasoline, but to ponder on possible results of such a move, has been sounded to the tax committees of both houses in a letter from Congressman Vincent M. Brennan, of Detroit, a former state senator. Congressman Brennan told the state lawmakers that the Michigan delegation has had its troubles in Washington keeping congress from levying new taxes on the automobile industry and that if Michigan itself opens up the avenue of gasoline taxation it may mean further taxes from federal sources.

One Man Tax Board.

One of the bills expected to have the backing of the governor and the administrative board, will aim to place a single state tax commissioner in charge of the present work of the three tax commissioners on the state board. The state securities commission also may be aimed at in a bill to place it under a single commissioner, or else in a bill to transfer its work to the utilities commission.

Brief Notes of Interest.

The University of Michigan committees and the Jackson prison committees have before them projects for huge building enterprises at both institutions. Numerous other building plans, smaller in each case, but involving millions in the aggregate, are before other committees. Trying to accord these with their avowed intention of lowering the state tax rate is a tough job for the legislators, who are harking back to Gov. Groesbeck's remark in his biennial message that the state needs a "breathing spell" in the matter of big building development.

With this week it is expected that institutional trips of committees will be ended and the work of the session tackled in earnest in the daily sessions of both houses.

The honor of presiding over the first committee of the whole session of the senate went to Senator James Henry, of Battle Creek, the nestor of the legislature. In the house the similar honor went to Rep. Thomas D. Meggison, of Antrim, speaker pro tem.

The labor measure known as the "full crew" bill, which has caused hard battles in several legislatures, has been introduced by Senator Young, of Lansing, to the present session. Its prospects of passage are said to be much brighter than ever before. It would require railroads to have crews of six men on all trains of more than 50 cars and of five men on all trains of less than 50 cars.

Senator Baborski, of Detroit, has introduced an anti-gambling bill drawn up by Prosecuting Attorney Voorheis, of Wayne county. It makes gambling in any form a felony, subject to $500 fine and six months imprisonment. The original aim of the bill is to suppress handbooks in Detroit that take racing bets all the year around.

Senator Condon, of Detroit, has put in a bill to amend the law governing automobile drivers' licenses so that these licenses, now revocable only by the secretary of state, may be revoked by judges and magistrates and permitting the courts also to impose cars of reckless drivers for from ten days to a year, according to the gravity of the offense.

Redistricting of the judicial circuits of the state is the object of a bill introduced by Senator Henry, of Battle Creek. He would change the present forty judicial circuits to ten circuits, with one to four judges in each circuit except Wayne, where there would be twelve judges. Senator Henry believes that this would divide up court work better, instead of having some judges unable to keep up with their dockets while others have but few cases to handle in a year.

Nearly all the discussion to date of proposed laws has had to do with suggested new forms of specific taxation, a dozen or so plans being talked of with enthusiasm by their advocates. But bills to carry out these ideas still are to be introduced, in most cases. Also pending are numerous proposed "women's bills", "labor bills", "farm bills" and others that are popular with some one class or more.

With so much still to come it probably is a good thing for the law-

The largest web that the writer ever heard of was not a spider's web, but was built by a butterfly larva, or rather by several of them. RUHR PARALYZED BY RAIL STRIKES

TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM IN SEIZED TERRITORY NEAR COMPLETE STANDSTILL.

UNREST SEETHES IN GERMANY

Whole Country Reported On Verge of Bolshevism—Food Scarce, Money Worthless.

Berlin—Complete disorganization prevails on the railway system in the occupied area, according to advices from Essen, as a result of the intervention of the French and the resultant walkout of the German railway employees.

Most of the regularly scheduled trains already have ceased running, while the others, continue to arrive several hours late. As the French do not understand the German block signal and switching system, the dispatches say they freely resort to the use of crowbars, with which the switches are forcibly pried open, thus ruining the trackage and causing frequent derailments.

Complete collapse, dismemberment and civil war threaten the once proud and powerful German empire.

The German people are in despair. Industry, trade and commerce are paralyzed. Secessionists are active in the Rhineland and Bavaria. German money is virtually worthless. Over the eastern frontier like a black and melancholy pall hangs the threatening storm cloud of bolshevism.

The Fascist are meeting in Munich, where, it is believed, a monarchist coup against the republic is being plotted. All Bavaria is described as a powder barrel which may explode at any hour. A virtual state of martial law has been proclaimed throughout Bavaria and troops are reported massed at Munich to meet an uprising.

Although there is a deep undercurrent of anger against the French, the people are helpless. They are without weapons and cannot fight. The workers can strike, but they need the pittance they can earn for food for their families.

A feeling of resignation to any fate whatsoever is settling down over the population.

Despite the common suffering seizure of the Rhineland and Ruhr by the French failed to end internal dissensions. The country is compared with France after the French revolution, but there is no Napoleon to unite the hostile factions, and even if there should be a German Napoleon there are no arms and munitions with which to fight.

Ruhr Valley cities have revealed an ugly spirit against French and Belgians and the occupying forces are prepared to subdue active resistance that is apparently prompted by open hatred on the part of Germans. Two more French army corps have been rushed to the occupied zone.

DAUGHERTY IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Attorney General Ordered to Bed for An Indefinite Period.

Washington—Attorney General Daugherty has been ordered to bed for an indefinite period by Brigadier General Sawyer, President Harding's physician, because of a "dangerous condition of high blood-pressure with complications."

Sawyer, who revealed Daugherty's condition Saturday, declared that the attorney general may be confined to his apartment at the Wardman Park for several weeks, in which he will be completely isolated from the cares of his office.

His immediate condition, Sawyer said, is not alarming, but absolute rest is essential to his recovery.

Daugherty's condition, according to Sawyer, is similar to that of ex-President Wilson, just before he was stricken with apoplexy and paralysis.

KLAN EVIDENCE CALLED FALSE

Head of Ku Klux Says Money Was Paid for Testimony

Bastrop, La.—Much of the evidence produced by the state at its open hearing investigation of "hooded mob" outrages in Morehouse Parish will be found absolutely false and untrue, according to a statement by Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted clogs.

"Not only is it without foundation," declared Captain Skipwith, "but a great deal of the most important evidence will have been secured from parties giving it as absolutely false and untrue and they will tell of money given them for their statements."

Army-Men Guilty to $80,000 Fraud.

Callagan, former army officer, guilty of criminally receiving $80,000 worth of securities he was charged with having stolen from a brokerage firm in February, 1920. He is scheduled not only to deliver explanatory lectures in Orchestra hall, but to give demonstrations of his doctrine. Coue's vehemence in his claim that his scheme of auto-suggestion will correct many ailments, physical and mental, without aid of drugs or prayer.

STOP EMBASSY LIQUOR LEAK

Officials Say Cuban Legation Was Supplying Bootleggers Booze

Washington—One of the "leaks" through which great quantities of fine whiskies and champagnes have been poured into thirsty Washington has been stopped, prohibition officials say, by the arrest of John J. Lynch, 23, and his subsequent confession that he obtained his supplies through the Cuban legation.

Lynch made an affidavit, according to the police, in which he implicated a number of servants at the legation.

A search of his apartment disclosed a considerable stock of Scotch, rye, and champagne and a client list de luxe on which appeared, the police said, the names of many persons prominent in business and social life of the capital. The names were withheld.

WIVES OF RHINE YANKS SAIL

Accompany Soldier Husbands Withdrawn From Germany

Washington—Fifty-seven wives and 20 children of American soldiers who feared that the order bringing the troops home from the Rhine would separate them from their families, sailed last week on the transport, St. Mihiel, for America.

In official language, they are "dependents not entitled to transportation at government expense," but the war department devised a way to get them home.

A special section of the St. Mihiel set aside for them; and it is expected that the Red Cross will see to it that they are taken care of after their arrival until their husbands and fathers can find suitable employment.

Families of officers and certain grades of non-commissioned officers are entitled to government transportation, and most of these will sail for the United States Feb. 7, on the shipping board steamer America.

PAYMASTER KILLED IN HOLDUP

Thugs Shoot Company Official—Escape With $10,000 Loot.

Detroit—While attempting to defend his company's payroll of more than $10,000 against three armed hold-up men, Robert H. Anderson, 37 years old, secretary-treasurer and paymaster of the Michigan Tool company, 145-147 Joseph Campau avenue, was shot through the head and killed Thursday afternoon of last week.

This is the sixth murder since December 30 in Detroit which it is believed likely will be listed with other unsolved killings.

Leo Sullivan of Redford, who had been conversing with Anderson in the office, ran down the stairway. Half way, he found Anderson dying with bullets in his head and neck. Sullivan continued down the stairway and reached the front of the building in time to see a large touring car, the curtains drawn, rushing away.

makers themselves that they are showing speed in getting the regular appropriation bills into committee where they can be ground through while daily sessions find time to debate the new proposals. It still is too early to attempt any forecast as to what this year's legislators will do with any especial variety of legislation.

One of the latest economy proposals advanced here is to merge the Employment Institution for the Blind, at Saginaw, with the School for the Blind, at Lansing. The latter has about 160 inmates and the former about 75.

A suggested merger is that of placing the board of examiners for barbers under the state board of health. Some barbers are reported to favor such a move and to have licensed barbers posted on skin diseases, so that they may aid in fighting them.

An insurance department bill introduced by Senator Brower, of Jackson, aims to create a state rate-making bureau to govern fire insurance rates which now are made by a bureau established by the companies. Discrimination and high rates are charged to the present bureau by backers of the new bill.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Mych's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Noted Film Star Dies—Breakdown Caused by Drugs

Los Angeles—Wallace Reid, hero of filmdom, died last week in a sanitarium at Hollywood in which he had been under treatment for more than a month. The direct cause of death, according to his physicians, was congestion of the lungs and kidneys, induced by the patient's recent nervous collapse.

According to Dr. G. S. Herbert, who has been attending Reid since he entered the sanitarium, the actor's health was broken by his fight to break himself of the use of narcotics.

Reid, who was six feet tall and whose normal weight was 185 pounds, had lost 60 pounds during the past several weeks.

Reid was born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1892. He leaves a widow, one son and an adopted daughter.

DYNAMITE USED IN DRY RAID

Police Blow Up Safe When Employee Refuses to Open It.

Detroit—Champagne, booze, great quantities of bottled and bottled beer and an army pistol with a case of cartridges were seized when federal and police agents conducted a sensational raid on the near-beer saloon of Al Wertheimer, 1923 Grand River avenue.

When an employee of the place stubbornly refused to open a safe in a rear room, holes were drilled in the door and it was dynamited, filling the room with flying pieces of steel and broken glass.

Millionaire's Son Turns Burglar

Chicago—Thomas Lansing, 17, millionaire's son, turned burglar for the adventure that was in it, he told the police. Lansing and pal, Elmer Schneider, 20, were arrested for breaking into a North side drug store and taking $50 from the cash register. Lansing's father, R. U. Lansing, former president of the National City bank here, rushed from New York and after intervening in behalf of his son, the youth was rebooked on a technical charge of disorderly conduct.

reach. How slow were his motions! Would Yaqui never—never end it? A wall drifted across the crater to Gale's ears. Rojas fell backward and plunged sheer. The bank of white choyas caught him; held him upon their steel spikes. How long did the dazed Gale sit there watching Rojas wrestling and writhing in convulsive frenzy? The bandit now seemed mad to win the delayed death. When he broke free he was a white patched object no longer human, a ball of choyas burrs, and he slipped off the bank to shoot down and down into the purple depths of the crater.

CHAPTER XIII

Changes at Fortorn River. The first of March saw the federal occupation of the garrison at Casita. After a short, decisive engagement the rebels were dispersed into small bands and driven eastward along the boundary line toward Nogales. It was the destiny of Fortorn River, however, never to return to the slow, sleepy tenor of its former existence. Belding's predictions came true. That straggling line of home-seekers was but a forerunner of the real invasion of Altar valley. Refugees from Mexico and from Casita spread the word that water and wood and grass and land were to be had at Fortorn River; and as if by magic the white tents and red adobe houses sprang up to glisten in the sun. Belding was happier than he had been for a long time. He believed that evil days for Fortorn River, along with the apathy and lack of enterprise, were in the past. He hired a couple of trustworthy Mexicans to ride the boundary line, and he settled down to think of ranching and irrigation and mining projects. Every morning he expected to receive some word from Sonoyta or Yuma, telling him that Yaqui had guided his party safely across the desert. Among the many changes coming to pass in Fortorn River were the installing of post office service and the building of a mesal drinking-house. Belding had worked hard for the post office, but he did not like the idea of a saloon for Fortorn River. Still, that was an inevitable evil. The Mexicans would have mesal. A good many Americans drifted into Fortorn River—miners, cowboys, prospectors, outlaws, and others of nondescript character; and these men, of course, made the saloon, which was also an inn, their headquarters. Belding, with Carfer and other old residents, saw the need of a sheriff for Fortorn River. One morning early in this spring month, while Belding was on his way from the house to the corral, he saw Nell running Blanco Jose down the road at a gallop that amazed him. She did not take the turn of the road to come in by the gate. She put Jose at a four-foot wire fence, and came clattering into the yard. It did not take more than half an eye for Belding to see that she was furious. "Nell, what's come off now?" asked Belding. "I'm not going to tell you," she replied, and started away, leading Jose toward the corral. Belding leisurely followed. She went into the corral, removed Jose's bridle, and led him to the water-trough. Belding came up, and without saying anything began to unbuckle Jose's saddle girths. But he ventured a look at Nell. The red had gone from her face, and he was surprised to see her eyes brimming with tears. Most assuredly this was not one of Nell's tantrums. While taking off Jose's saddle and handing it in the shed Belding pondered in his slow way. When he came back to the corral Nell had her face against the bars, and she was crying. He slipped a big arm around her and waited. "Dad, I don't want you to think me a baby any more," she said. "I've been insulted." With a specific fact to make clear thought in Belding's mind he was never slow. "I knew something unusual had come off. I guess you'd better tell me." "Dad, I will, if you promise."

"Not to mention it to mother, not to pack a gun down there, and never, never tell Dick." Belding was silent. Seidom did he make promises readily. "If you don't promise I'll never tell, that's all," she declared, firmly. Belding deliberated a little longer. He knew the girl. "Well, I promise not to tell mother," he said, presently; "and seeing you're here safe and well, I guess I won't go packing a gun down there, wherever that is. But I won't promise to keep anything from Dick that perhaps he ought to know." Nell, regarding her composure, wiped her eyes and smoothed back her hair. "The other day, Wednesday," she began, "I was coming home, and in front of that mesal drinking place there was a crowd. It was a noisy crowd. I didn't want to walk into the street or seem afraid. But I had to do both. There were several young men, and if they weren't drunk they certainly were rude. I never saw them before, but I think they must belong to the mining company that was run out of Sonora by rebels. Anyway, these young fellows were Americans. They stretched themselves across the walk and snuffed at me. I had to go up in the road. One of them, the ruder, followed me. He was a big fellow, red-faced, with prominent eyes and a bold look. He came up beside me and spoke to me. I ran home. And as I ran I heard his companions jeering. "Well, today, just now, when I was riding up the valley road I came upon the same fellows. They had instruments and were surveying. Remembering Dick, and how he always wished for an instrument to help work out his plan for irrigation, I was certainly surprised to see these strangers surveying—and surveying upon Laddy's plot of land. It was a sandy road there, and Jose happened to be walking. So I reined in and asked these engineers what they were doing. The leader, who was that same bold fellow who had followed me, seemed much pleased at being addressed. He said he was glad to tell me he was going to run water all over Altar valley. Dad, you can bet that made me wild. That was Dick's plan, his discovery, and here were surveyors on Laddy's claim."

"Then I told him that he was working on private land and he'd better get off. He said something about not seeing any squatters on the land, and then he shut up tight on that score. But he began to be flirty again. He got hold of Jose's bridle, and before I could catch my breath he said I was a peach, that he wanted to make a date with me, that his name was Chase, that he owned a gold mine in Mexico. He said a lot more I didn't gather, but when he called me 'Dearie' I—well, I lost my temper. "I jerked on the bridle and told him to let go. He held on and rolled his eyes at me. He seemed sure of conquest. One thing was certain, he didn't know the least bit about horses. It scared me the way he got in front of Jose. I thanked my stars I wasn't up on Blanco Diablo. Well, Dad, I'm a little ashamed now, but I was mad. I slashed him across the face with my quirt. Jose jumped and knocked Mr. Chase into the sand. I didn't get the horse under control till I was out of sight of those surveyors, and then I let him run home."

"Nell, I guess you punished the fellow enough. Maybe he's only a conceited softy. But I don't like that sort of thing. It isn't western." "I'm sorry now, Dad. Perhaps the fellow was hurt. But what could I do? Let's forget all about it, and I'll be careful where I ride in the future."

Dad, what does it mean, this surveying around Fortorn River? "I don't know, Nell," replied Belding, thoughtfully. "It worries me. It looks good for Fortorn River, but had for Dick's plan to irrigate the valley. Lord, I'd hate to have some one forestall Dick on that!" "No, no, we won't let anybody have Dick's rights," declared Nell. "Where have I been keeping myself not to know about these surveyors?" muttered Belding. "They must have just come." Belding discovered that he was, indeed, the last man of consequence in Fortorn River to learn of the arrival of Ben Chase and son, mine owners and operators in Sonora. They, with a force of miners, had been besieged by rebels and finally driven off their property. This property was not destroyed, but held for ransom. And the Chases, pending developments, had packed outfits and struck for the border. Casita had been their objective point, but, for some reason which Belding did not learn, they had arrived instead at Fortorn River. It had taken Ben Chase just one day to see the possibilities of Altar valley, and in three days he had men at work. Belding returned home without going to see the Chases and their operations. He wanted to think over the situation. Next morning he went out to the valley to see for himself. Mexicans were hastily erecting adobe houses upon Laddy's one hundred and sixty acres, upon Dick Gale's, upon Jim Lash's and Thorne's. There were men staking the valley floor and the river bed. That was sufficient for Belding. He turned back toward town and headed for the camp of these intruders. He came to a big tent with a huge canvas stretched in front, under which sat several men in their shirt sleeves. They were talking and smoking. "My name's Belding. I want to see this Mr. Chase," said Belding, gruffly. Slow-witted as Belding was, and absorbed in his own feelings, he yet saw plainly that his advent was disturbing to these men. One of them, a tall, rugged man with sharp face and shrewd eyes and white hair, got up and offered his hand. "I'm Chase, senior," he said. "My son Radford Chase is here somewhere. You're Belding, the line inspector, I take it? I meant to call on you." He seemed a rough-and-ready, tough-spoken man, withal cordial enough. "Yes, I'm the inspector," replied Belding, ignoring the proffered hand, "and I'd like to know what in the hell you mean by taking up land claims—staked ground that belongs to my rangers?" "Land claims?" slowly echoed Chase, studying his man. "We're taking up only unclaimed land." "That's a lie. You couldn't miss the stakes." "Well, Mr. Belding, as to that, I think my men did run across some staked ground. But we recognize only squatters. If your rangers think they've got property just because they drove a few stakes in the ground they're much mistaken. A squatter has to build a house and live on his land so long, according to law, before he owns it." This argument was unanswerable, and Belding knew it. "According to law!" exclaimed Belding. "Then you own up; you've jumped our claims."

"Mr. Belding, I'm a plain business man. I come along. I see a good opening. Nobody seems to have tenable grants. I stake out claims, locate squatters, start to build. It seems to me your rangers have overlooked certain precautions. That's unfortunate for them. I'm prepared to hold my claim and to back all the squatters who work for me. If you don't like it you can carry the matter to Tucson. The law will uphold me." "The law? Say, on this southwest border we haven't any law except a man's word and a gun." "Then you'll find United States law has come along with Ben Chase," replied the other, snapping his fingers. "You're not a westerner?" queried Belding. "No, I'm from Illinois." "I thought the West hadn't bred you. I know your kind. You'd last a long time on the Texas border; now, wouldn't you? You're one of the land and water hogs that has come to roost in the West. Mr. Chase, the West would fare better and last longer if men like you were driven out." "You can't drive me out." "I'm not so sure of that. Wait till my rangers come back."

CHAPTER XIV

A Lost Son. Time passed. The population of Fortorn River grew apace. Belding, who had once been the head of the community, found himself a person of little consequence. Even had he desired it he would not have had any voice in the selection of postmaster, sheriff, and a few other officials. The Chases divided their labors between Fortorn River and their Mexican gold mine, which had been restored to them. The desert trips between these two places were taken in automobiles. A month's time made the motor cars almost as familiar a sight in Fortorn River as they had been in Casita before the revolution. Belding's wrath at the usurping Chases increased as he slowly realized his powerlessness to cope with such men. They were promoters, men of big interests and wide influence in the Southwest. The more they did for Fortorn River the less reason there seemed to be for his own grievance. He had to admit that it was personal; that he and Gale and the rangers would never have been able to develop the resources of the valley as these men were doing it. April arrived with no news of the rangers. From Casita came vague reports of raiders in the Sonoyta country—reports impossible to verify until his Mexican rangers returned. When these men rode in, one of them, Gonzales, an intelligent and reliable half-breed, said he had met prospectors at the oasis. They had just come in on the Camino del Diablo, reported a terrible trip of heat and drought, and not a trace of the Yaqui's party. "That settles it," declared Belding. "Yaqui never went to Sonoyta. He's circled round to the Devil's road, and the horses—they—I'm afraid they have been lost in the desert. It's an old story on Camino del Diablo." He had to tell Nell that, and it was an ordeal which left him weak.

Mrs. Belding listened to him, and was silent for a long time while she held the stricken Nell to her breast. Then she opposed his convictions with that quiet strength so characteristic of her arguments. "But mother, they're gone seven weeks. Seven weeks! At the most I gave them six weeks. Seven weeks in the desert!" "How do the Yaquis live?" she asked. Belding could not reply to that, but hope revived in him. He had faith in his wife, though he could not in the least understand what he imagined was something mystic in her.

"Years ago when I was searching for my father I learned many things about this country," said Mrs. Belding. "You can never tell how long a man may live in the desert. The fiercest, most terrible and inaccessible places often have their hidden oasis. In his later years my father became a prospector. That was strange to me, for he never cared for gold or money. I learned that he was often gone in the desert for weeks, once for months. Then the time came when he never came back. That was years before I reached the southwest border and heard of him. Even then I did not for long give up hope of his coming back. I know now—something tells me—indeed, it seems his spirit tells me—he was lost. But I don't have that feeling for Yaqui and his party. Yaqui has given Rojas the slip or has ambushed him in some trap. Probably that took time and a long journey into Sonora. The Indian is too wise to start back now over dry trails. He'll curb the rangers; he'll wait. I seem to know this, dear Nell, so be brave, patient. Dick Gale will come back to you."

That talk with the strong mother worked a change in Nell and in Belding. Nell, who had done little but brood and watch the west and take violent rides, seemed to settle into a waiting patience that was sad, yet serene. Belding, who had been breaking under the strain of worry, recovered himself so that to outward appearance he was his old self. He alone knew, however, that his humor was forced, and that the slow burning wrath he felt for the Chases was flaming into hate. Belding argued with himself that if Ben Chase and his son, Radford, had turned out to be big men in other ways than in the power to carry on great enterprises he might have become reconciled to them. But the father was greedy, grasping, hard, cold; the son added to those traits an overbearing disposition to drink and he showed a fondness for drink and cards. These men were developing the valley, to be sure, and a horde of poor Mexicans and many Americans were benefiting from that development; nevertheless, those Chases were operating in a way which proved they cared only for themselves. Belding went to Casita with a number of his white thoroughbreds and shipped them to ranchers and horse-breeder in Texas. Then, being near the railroad, and having time, he went up to Tucson. There he learned some interesting particulars about the Chases. They had an office in the city; influential friends in the capitol. They were powerful men in the rapidly growing finance of the West. They had interested the Southern Pacific railroad, and in the near future a branch line was to be constructed from San Felipe to Fortorn River. These details of the Chase development were insignificant when compared to a matter striking close home to Belding. His responsibility had been subtly attacked. A doubt had been cast upon his capability of executing the duties of immigration inspector to the best advantage of the state. Belding divined that this was only an entering wedge. The Chases were bent upon driving him out of Fortorn River; but, perhaps to serve better their own ends, they were proceeding at leisure. Belding returned home consumed by rage. But he controlled it. For the first time in his life he was afraid of himself. He had his wife and Nell to think of; and the old law of the West had gone forever. "Dad, there's another Rojas round these diggings," was Nell's remark, after the greetings were over and the usual questions and answers passed. Belding's exclamation was cut short by Nell's laugh. She was serious with a kind of amused contempt. "Mr. Radford Chase!" "Now Nell, what the—!" roared Belding. "Hush, Dad! Don't swear," interrupted Nell. "I only meant to tease you."

"Nell, you may as well tell him and have it over," said Mrs. Belding, quietly. "Well, if you weren't such a good old blind dad you'd have seen long ago the way Mr. Radford Chase ran round after me. At first it was only annoying, and I did not want to add to your worries. But these two weeks you've been gone I've been more than annoyed. After that time I struck Mr. Chase with my quirt he made all possible efforts to meet me. He did meet me wherever I went. He did meet me till I got tired of sending them back. He followed me until it was less embarrassing for me to let him walk with me and talk his head off. He made love to me. He begged me to marry him. I told him I was already in love and engaged to be married. He said that didn't make any difference. Then I called him a fool. "Next time he saw me he said he must explain. He meant I was being true to a man who, everybody on the border knew, had been lost in the desert. That—that hurt. Maybe—maybe it's true. Sometimes it seems terribly true. Since then, of course, I have stayed in the house to avoid being hurt again. I feel like a poor little rabbit holed by a hound. And I don't peep out."

Somehow the thing struck Belding as funny, and he laughed. He had not had a laugh for so long that it made him feel good. He stopped only at sight of Nell's surprise and pain. Then he put his arms around her. "Never mind, dear. I'm an old bear. Nell, it's only the old story. The fellows fall in love with you. It's your tired. Come in, and let mother and Nell make you comfortable. Of course you'll stay. We've a big house. You must stay till Dick comes back. Maybe that'll be—Aw, I guess it won't be long. . . . Let me handle the baggage, Mr. Gale. . . . Come in. I sure am glad to meet you all."

Eager, excited, delighted, Belding went on talking as he ushered the Gales into the sitting-room, presenting them in his hearty way to the astounded Mrs. Belding and Nell. For the space of a few moments his wife and daughter were bewildered. When the Gales had been shown to rooms, Mrs. Belding gained the poison momentarily lost; but Nell came rushing back, wilder than a deer, in a state of excitement strange even for her. "Oh! Dick's mother, his sister!" whispered Nell. "Oh, I knew it! I always guessed it! Dick's people are proud, rich; they're somebody. I thought I'd faint when she looked at me. She was just curious—curious, but so cold and proud. She was wondering about me. Dick has never written her that he's—he's engaged to me. I'm wearing his ring. It was his mother's, he said. I won't—I can't take it off. And I'm scared. . . . But the sister—oh, she's lovely and sweet—proud, too. I feel warm all over when she looked at me. I—I wanted to kiss her. She looks like Dick when he first came to us. But he's changed. They'll hardly recognize him. . . . To think they've come! And I had to be looking a fright, when of all times on earth I'd want to look my best."

Nell, out of breath, ran away evidently to make herself presentable, according to her idea of the exigency of the case. Belding caught a glimpse of his wife's face as she went out, and it wore a sad, strange, anxious expression. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

WHY THAT LAME BACK?
That morning lameness—those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't be handicapped by a bad back—look to your kidneys. You will make no mistake by following this East Jordan resident's example. Mrs. Wm. St. Charles says: "I was bothered quite a good deal with my back and after I did my washing my back was so lame and sore I dreaded to move. There was a soreness across my kidneys that hurt me all the time and when I was on my feet a little while my back gave out. I often had headaches and was troubled with dizziness. I was nervous, depressed and irritable. My kidneys were weak and irregular. I saw in the paper how well Doan's Kidney Pills were liked and I decided to try them. I purchased a few boxes at Hite's Drug Store and they cured me."

good looks, Nell. What a price women like you and Mercedes have to pay for beauty; I'd a—good deal rather be ugly as a mud fence. . . . Well, the first time I catch this looted Romeo sneaking round here I'll—!" "Dad, you promised." "Confound it, Nell, I promised not to pack a gun. That's all. I'll only shoot this fellow off the place, gently, mind you, gently. I'll leave the rest for Dick Gale!"

April grew apace, and soon gave way to May. One morning Belding was called from some garden work by the whirring of an automobile and a "Holloa!" He saw an elderly, saw-toothed, rather frail-looking man who was an entire stranger to him; a handsome dark-eyed woman whose hair showed white through her veil; and a superbly built girl, whose face made Belding at once think of Dick Gale. "Is this Mr. Tom Belding, inspector of immigration?" inquired the gentleman, courteously. "I'm Belding, and I know who you are," replied Belding in hearty amazement, as he stretched for his big hand. "You're Dick Gale's dad—the governor, Dick used to say. I'm sure glad to meet you."

"Thank you. Yes, I'm Dick's governor, and here, Mr. Belding—Dick's mother and his sister Elsa." Bending his pleasure, Belding shook hands with the ladies, who showed their agitation clearly. "Mr. Belding, I've come west to look up my lost son," said Mr. Gale. "His sister's letters were unanswered. We haven't heard from him in months. Is he still here with you?" "Well, now, sure I'm awful sorry," began Belding, his slow mind at work. "Dick's away just now—been away for a considerable spell. I'm expecting him back any day. . . . Won't you come in? You're all dusty and hot and

He meant I was being true to a man who, everybody on the border knew, had been lost in the desert. That—that hurt. Maybe—maybe it's true. Sometimes it seems terribly true. Since then, of course, I have stayed in the house to avoid being hurt again. I feel like a poor little rabbit holed by a hound. And I don't peep out."

Somehow the thing struck Belding as funny, and he laughed. He had not had a laugh for so long that it made him feel good. He stopped only at sight of Nell's surprise and pain. Then he put his arms around her. "Never mind, dear. I'm an old bear. Nell, it's only the old story. The fellows fall in love with you. It's your tired. Come in, and let mother and Nell make you comfortable. Of course you'll stay. We've a big house. You must stay till Dick comes back. Maybe that'll be—Aw, I guess it won't be long. . . . Let me handle the baggage, Mr. Gale. . . . Come in. I sure am glad to meet you all."

Eager, excited, delighted, Belding went on talking as he ushered the Gales into the sitting-room, presenting them in his hearty way to the astounded Mrs. Belding and Nell. For the space of a few moments his wife and daughter were bewildered. When the Gales had been shown to rooms, Mrs. Belding gained the poison momentarily lost; but Nell came rushing back, wilder than a deer, in a state of excitement strange even for her. "Oh! Dick's mother, his sister!" whispered Nell. "Oh, I knew it! I always guessed it! Dick's people are proud, rich; they're somebody. I thought I'd faint when she looked at me. She was just curious—curious, but so cold and proud. She was wondering about me. Dick has never written her that he's—he's engaged to me. I'm wearing his ring. It was his mother's, he said. I won't—I can't take it off. And I'm scared. . . . But the sister—oh, she's lovely and sweet—proud, too. I feel warm all over when she looked at me. I—I wanted to kiss her. She looks like Dick when he first came to us. But he's changed. They'll hardly recognize him. . . . To think they've come! And I had to be looking a fright, when of all times on earth I'd want to look my best."

Nell, out of breath, ran away evidently to make herself presentable, according to her idea of the exigency of the case. Belding caught a glimpse of his wife's face as she went out, and it wore a sad, strange, anxious expression. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED BY THIS SULPHUR
Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist. The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up. A small jar of Rowley's Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.

Big Eaters Get Kidney Trouble

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache. The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat often too much red meat and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health. When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Say, on this southwest border we haven't any law except a man's word and a gun." "Then you'll find United States law has come along with Ben Chase," replied the other, snapping his fingers. "You're not a westerner?" queried Belding. "No, I'm from Illinois." "I thought the West hadn't bred you. I know your kind. You'd last a long time on the Texas border; now, wouldn't you? You're one of the land and water hogs that has come to roost in the West. Mr. Chase, the West

MOTORISTS ARE DELINQUENT

Nearly One-Third in State Have Not Applied for 1923 Licenses.
Lansing—Michigan motorists, who have accepted the 30-days' extension of time, announced by Secretary of State Charles J. Deland in the matter of 1923 automobile license plates, as an invitation to further procrastinate in applying for their licenses are out of luck.
Explaining the 30-day extension which expires February 1, Mr. Deland declares the rush of applicants for licenses, during the closing days of 1922, was so great the department was literally swamped and required additional time to clean up 1922 business.
But the tardy motorist, who decided, then, to postpone making his application until the last few days of January faces the prospect of being without his car for several days. There will be no new extensions of time.
Approximately one-third of the 600,000 motorists of the state are still without their 1923 license plates.

MONROE FIGHTING SMALLPOX

The economic loss sustained by Monroe citizens since the epidemic started has been fixed at $25,000, and will be much greater unless decisive means are taken.
Commencing with this week, a systematic campaign has been instituted by state officials in the townships, and those refusing to be vaccinated are being reported to the authorities.

It Pays To Advertise

"It Pays to Advertise" was one of the snappiest plays given in the High School auditorium in many a day. The choosing of this play showed good judgment in that it is one of the few plays that carries a plot which takes very unexpected turns. The audience itself was not large but that does not hinder us from calling the play a grand success for, after all, the pecuniary end of it is secondary. However, the audience present showed their interest and appreciation from the beginning to the end and the only fault that was found with it was that it ended so suddenly, although it was a long play. Nearly every character in the play did superior work. No one realizes what a difficult task it is to choose the cast to fit the parts and do it in these busy times when Football, Basketball, work, and people from the country prevent many from taking part.
By the way, coaching plays draws out the ability of a coach more than many other lines of work such as athletics, etc. Knowing the amount of work that Mrs. Sebring has put on this play and the handicaps of the use of the auditorium, etc., she is to be congratulated in the beginning. She was largely the reason for so many stars arrayed in one play. Miss Aura McBride, taking the part of Mary Grayson, the secretary of Cyrus Martin, millionaire soap manufacturer, had a presence that is quite unusual for amateurs. Rodney Martin, Cyrus Martin's son, falls deeply in love with his father's secretary and right here one good thing about the play is the fact that the love-making took place at once in a very business like way and was over in about five minutes. It seems that Rodney Martin never did a day's work and Cyrus and his secretary worked up a scheme by which he would get him to work. On the side, Mr. Cyrus Martin had bet thirty thousand dollars with his great rival, Clark, Ivory Soap manufacturer, whose son also was in the idle rich class, that his son, Rodney Martin would make more money in the next year than Clark's son.
A friend of Rodney's, Ambrose Peal, in the person of Cecil White, a great advocate of modern business advertising, took a heavy part and did it just as Cecil White can do things. He had the reserve and poise that goes with good players of experience.
Mabel Maddock, the French Countess de Beaurien, took the part of a French swindler and displayed a quality of French that was surprising for one who has not taken a good deal of it. This isn't the first time that Miss Maddock showed herself to be far above the ordinary amateur in her ability in theatrics. Miss Maddock surely played like a veteran of the footlights. Alfred Smith took his part of Rodney Martin and the young business man who is thoroughly converted to the idea that "it pays to advertise", well for one so young. Most of the others were in advanced grades. Lucas Knight, the great soap manufacturer, as the person of Cyrus Martin, of course did exceptionally well. Lucas is sort of an established success in High School theatricals and is almost worth the price of admission alone. In fact, all of the cast did remarkably well.

We want to thank all those who helped to make the play a success. The Athletic Association owe a vote of thanks, not only to the cast, but to Mrs. Sebring, who so ably put the thing across. We, therefore, take this opportunity to show our appreciation. The High School gave the cast a fine little luncheon after the play. Perhaps the first of the article gives a wrong impression for we had a good audience but should have had the auditorium filled. The receipts were around $65.00.

Budding Romance Nipped.

I was eight and he was ten. We attended the same school and our two grades were in the same room. When 4 o'clock came his grade rose and marched out of the room first. When he reached the door he would turn toward me slightly and I would wink at him. One evening the teacher caught me winking, and kept me after school. You can imagine that put a quick stop to that budding romance.

Lansing—The value of the Citizen's Telephone company property, not including exchanges at Jackson, Battle Creek and Marshall, is $7,696,213, figures in the hands of the state public utilities commission indicate. The figures were submitted to the commission in connection with the forthcoming merger of the Citizen's company and the Michigan State Telephone company.

Grand Rapids—The hearing on the petition filed by Mrs. Melvin E. Trotter for a re-hearing of the divorce proceedings against the Rev. Melvin E. Trotter, the evangelist, has been set for Feb. 15 by Circuit Judge M. L. Dunham. The Trotter divorce case was tried last summer, a decree having been granted to Mr. Trotter. Mrs. Trotter was given a property settlement. She desires a re-hearing to substantiate her claims.

Pontiac—Michigan has been failing to provide adequate sums for road maintenance in Oakland county, according to G. Ross Thompson, county road commissioner. He says an agreement was made last year for $104,000 for maintenance of state trunk lines. This was paid down until only $60,000 was paid by the state, although it actually cost $90,000, the additional sum being expended by the county. An effort will be made to have the state legislature adjust the situation, Thompson says.

Muskegon—Frank Denato, who took possession of a house here during the night after it had been rebuilt by another man, has been given legal possession by the court. Mr. Denato held a contract for purchase of the house, on which he failed to continue payments. The house was partly destroyed by fire, and Iver Anderson, who purchased the Denato contract, rebuilt the burned house. Then Denato moved into the house. The court held the notice of forfeiture of contract served on Denato was faulty.

Lansing—The State of Michigan will start action in the United States Supreme Court to prevent the State of Illinois from diverting excessive quantities of water from Lake Michigan. It is alleged by State officials and representatives of shipping and fruit interests that Illinois is diverting too much water through Chicago drain canals; that the level of Lake Michigan has been lowered 5.5 inches, and the levels of Lake Huron, Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River in proportion, damaging harbors and increasing freight rates.
