To Beautify Our City

Our Citizens Urged To Co-operate In Civic Improvement.

You will all agree that East Jordan is beautifully located—why not make East Jordan beautiful?

A campaign has been started by the Women's Clubs of East Jordan to beautify the city. The only way to accomplish this is for each individual to improve the property on which he resides. To encourage the children to help, flower seeds will be given to all grade pupils and in the fall there will be prizes for the best flower beds. Prizes are also to be given for the best bird houses made by grade children.

We want to improve all vacant property, especially in the business district.

Many people are passing through our city all summer—will it not be a nicer to have it look attractive. Take a look at your own home from every side; look at it as you would imagine a stranger might who was entering the city. Do what you can to make it look its best. It isn't necessary that your home be one of the finest. No matter how poor it is it can be improved by keeping it clean. If possible have new paint; anyway plant trees and shrubs and flowers. It won't help much if one yard is well kept and the next one has no care at all. Everyone try to make theirs look the best. There is no reason why we can't take our city beautiful only if we will have team work to do it.

If the committees who have this in charge can be of any help to anyone they will be only too glad to assist. We know that we all have not the same facilities to do with but let each one of us try to do our bit.

Will you all help in this campaign to beautify East Jordan?

Committees in charge from Study Club and Improvement Club.—Mrs. C. H. Pray, Mrs. H. W. Dicken, Mrs. Gus Muma, Mrs. George Carr, Mrs. A. J. Duncanson, Mrs. Howard Porter, Mrs. Gus Kitsman, Mrs. Dan Goodman.

FRANCE RUSHES ARMY TO SYRIA

WEYGAND'S FORCES TO BE NEARLY DOUBLED AS FRONTIER RISKS ON MENACE.

TWO DAYS' FOOD SUPPLY LEFT

Angora Government Recinds Order Requiring Payment On Relief Consignments.

Paris—France is sending more troops to Syria to hold the mandated territory against any possible aggression by the Turks. A considerable number of French colonials have already quietly embarked and are on their way to Syria, and two divisions, totaling 20,000 men, it is reported, will be sent in all to give General Weygand a sufficient army.

France now has 26,000 men in Syria, but the northern front is about 200 miles in length, and a Turkish army corps of 20,000 is concentrated there, with additional forces on the way.

The government, without divulging the details of its future Syrian policy, simply let it be known through a semi-official channel that because of the massing of Turkish forces across the border from the French "the dispatch of fresh contingents of French troops from the colonial forces is considered necessary."

The French government takes the stand that the Turkish troop concentration looks like a threat, even if the Turks do not intend a military offensive, and in any case it is regarded as a distinct effort to exert pressure on the French, which is considered intolerable.

The French government is considering asking Great Britain to co-operate.

Two Days' Food Left
Constantinople—The Turkish government has rescinded its order of a few days ago requiring payment of duties on relief supplies, with the provision that the red crescent shall be allowed to approve all incoming consignments.

Only two days rations for the refugees now remains in stock. The Chester agreement is to be signed, despite French objection.

A new feature of the 1923 Fair will be a public wedding to take place on the Free Exhibition platform in front of the Grand Stand Friday afternoon, Sept. 14th. Further particulars later.

East Jordan Wins Game

Defeats Petoskey Ten To Eight At Indoor Base Ball.

(From Petoskey News)

East Jordan all-stars, picked from the East Jordan winter indoor base ball league team, won from the Petoskey team at East Jordan, Tuesday evening, 10 to 8. The game was hard fought, filled with many tight plays and close decisions and the fans were kept keyed to high pitch throughout.

East Jordan took the advantage through the early innings but Petoskey players began a heavy attack in the sixth which looked most dangerous. The heavy hitting was continued in the seventh and eighth and these innings were also featured by some clever fielding by East Jordan and some close decisions at the plate.

Sweet pitched and Stannard and Holben caught for Petoskey. Other local players taking part were Stannard, Pitts, Comstock, Schomberg, Dudek, Kirwan and Hoffman. These men played well together and will start next Tuesday night's game here when East Jordan comes for a return contest.

East Jordan players who won the game were: Lewis Ellis, Jack McKinney, Dr. G. W. Bechtold, S. A. Covey, Leo LaLonde, Fred Vogle, Dr. W. H. Parks, Frank Nachazel, Floyd Morgan, Carl Hayes.

SEAPLANE FALLS INTO OCEAN

Machine Drifts Five Hours With Six Passengers Clinging to It.

New York—Six persons, one a woman, were rescued clinging to their disabled seaplane off Coney Island, after their machine which fell into the sea 26 miles off land, had drifted shoreward for five hours. They were bound from Miami, Florida, to the naval air station at Rockaway Point.

Robert L. Dewey, of New York, nephew of the late Admiral Dewey and owner of the seaplane, swam ashore when the machine approached the beach and notified the police of his companion's plight.

Lieutenant Rhodes, U. S. A., one of the pilots of the UC-4, and two mechanics were the rescuers.

A coast guard cutter also put out to the rescue from the station at Rockaway Beach.

A watchman on a pier at Coney Island notified police he had seen the plane drifting in the ocean a distance from the pier and that he had seen men clinging to it. As he watched, it drifted from his sight in the darkness.

The machine left Miami just after daybreak last Sunday, said Mr. Dewey planning to reach the Rockaway naval station before sundown.

Everything went well until the southern shore of Long Island was sighted when the port motor was disabled and the machine slumped into the water.

With a brisk wind it drifted steadily toward shore until it was close enough for Mr. Dewey to swim to the beach.

Hotel Installs Radio in Rooms.

Minneapolis—A large hotel here has contracted for the installing of each of several hundred rooms with radio plugs. The guest will not have to invest in a receiving set, as head-phones may be rented for a small fee from the clerk's office. According to the plan of engineers who have worked on the scheme for several weeks, a massive aerial and three power receiving stations will be equipped in one of the top floors of the hotel.

Island Houses Many Holy Men. On the sacred island of Putu, China, live more than 1,000 monks.

VET HOSPITAL WORK IS RUSHED

Camp Custer Institution Is Largest With 500 Beds.

Washington—Although Camp Custer's neuro-psychiatric hospital of 500 beds will be the largest, it also will be the last of five such projects to be completed, according to an announcement last Thursday from the war department.

The Knoxville, Iowa, hospital, to be ready with 400 beds, August, of this year, is the first on the list of delivery, and the others are to follow in this order: American Lake, Washington, 250 beds, October; Chillicothe, Ohio, 400 beds, December; Northampton, Mass., 400 beds, February, next year. The completion date for Camp Custer is to be July next year.

These new institutions mark an advanced step in the treatment of men whose minds have been affected by the strains of war. Instead of merely giving them custodial care for the rest of their lives, every effort will be made to bring the sufferers back to normal mental condition so far as it is humanly possible.

The hospitals have been designed so that different types of mental diseases may be treated separately, with the idea that while they are receiving medical attention, the patients may be taught useful occupations, with as much freedom allowed as their condition justifies.

Each institution is complete in itself and provided with all the necessary outside facilities, as well as roads, walks, sewers, heating plants, water and electric service.

The buildings are modern, fire-proof structures of reinforced concrete or brick and tile, with the necessary quarters for the physicians, nurses and attendants.

Thought for the Day. The fellow who never does any more than he is paid to do seldom has much to do.

BAN DEMANDED ON LIQUOR FLOW

IMMEDIATE REGULATIONS PLANNED BY CANADIAN PREMIER

DRASTIC METHODS TO BE USED

Shake Up in Enforcement Machinery In U. S. Looms—President Dissatisfied.

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada as a source of supply for liquor to the thirsty of the United States will soon become a matter of history, if plans now under way materialize, for the Dominion has signified its intention of stepping in and damming the flow of "wet goods" that finds its way over the international boundary line into Detroit and other points in Uncle Sam's domain.

Premier W. L. MacKenzie King has announced that the government proposes to exercise every possible care to see that the regulations are carried out. He declares that up to the present it had not been possible to devise more effective means to stop rum running over the border. He has called the subject to the attention of Sir Lomer Gouin, minister of justice, and demanded immediate action.

Rum running on the border was brought to the attention of the government by James Woodsworth, a Labor member, who asked that the Dominion government take more effective measures to stop rum running.

While no definite statements have been made as to just how the government will stop the flow of liquor to the United States, it was announced that members of the Canadian department will likely get in touch with the Washington department of justice officials and endeavor to work out an international plan of liquor law enforcement.

St. Pierre, one of the chief sources of supply, may soon be cut off as the members of the Canadian government are preparing to ask the British government to take this action.

Much of the liquor from this island is re-shipped to United States and the Canadian government is anxious to have the British government cooperate in having these chief centers of United States liquor supply cut off.

Washington—President Harding is preparing to go after prohibition enforcement most vigorously.

For some time he has been dissatisfied with the enforcement as it has been conducted.

The president is said to have several important moves in contemplation, one of which may involve a general shakeup in the prohibition unit which may extend to the office of Prohibition Commissioner Haynes himself.

Earnest officials who seek to do their best are constantly being interfered with.

Obstinate. There is no great virtue in doing a thing that no one else wants you to do, simply because you are "obstinate." If it is a matter of principle that is all right, but only fools stick to their own opinions when it is contrary to the opinions of other people, just to be contrary.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Health in Good Humor. Good humor is the health of the soul; sadness is its poison.—Stanislaus.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Senior Activities.

The Senior Class is trying to reduce in every way possible the individual expense of graduation. There are many necessary expenses connected with attending High School as every parent realizes, and in the senior year these expenses seem to be multiplied. In some places graduation brings with it so many unnecessary "trimmings" that it is impossible for all people to finish high school. The Class of 1923 believes that high school should be of all things democratic, not only in its ideas but in its customs. The Seniors have found three practical ways of working out these ideas.

The first method is a saving on invitations. Half of the money which was made at the Senior play will be used in paying for invitations. Twenty invitations will be allowed each person, over half the class ordered twenty, while those who wish more will pay the extra amount.

The second method of saving money is by adopting the custom of many of the larger high schools in regard to dress for the girls. This topic gives rise to heated arguments in some places, some girls being able to buy expensive clothes while others cannot afford elaborate dresses. This class is to be commended on their good sense in adopting a uniform dress to be worn on graduation night. They will wear middie which may be worn thereafter, thus not only eliminating the possibility of a "dress parade" for some but providing at the same time a sensible costume for future use. The girls did not stop with adopting a uniform dress, but have provided a way in which they may reduce the cost of these uniforms to the individual. On the next few Saturdays they will hold a bake sale downtown at which they hope to clear enough money to pay at least in part for their uniforms.

The third way of saving money is both valuable as an educational and decorative feature as well as advantageous financially. Each year it is the custom for the seniors to leave some of the school. East Jordan needs most of all worth-while pictures. The Porter-Motter Mfg. Co. loan an art exhibit to organizations free of charge except the advertising and transportation charges. The receipts are to be spent in buying pictures of this company. There will be a two-day exhibit May 11 and 12. An art lecture explaining the pictures will be given and admission of ten and twenty-five cents will be charged. It has been some time since the children and people in East Jordan have had an opportunity to see an exhibit of this kind and it will be to the credit of the seniors to give them this opportunity whether they make much over the expenses or not. However, such an exhibit should be of enough interest to receive the support of the citizens, especially of the parents for their children.

The Seniors in these three ways have shown their preparation for good citizenship by their interest in carrying out the ideals of democracy and service.

Junior Fair

The annual Junior Fair was held Friday afternoon and evening, April 27th, at the High School building.

Among the chief attractions was the side show put on by the Freshman girls. The six following freak ladies were shown: The Fat Lady known as Anna Farrel; the Bearded Lady, alias Lucille Bartlett; Topsy, or Aita Beebe, while you might have seen Marjorie Mackey, as the Two-Headed Lady and Ardith Richardson as the Tattooed Lady. There was also a special attraction "For Men Only."

The Eighth grade sold candy and sandwiches as well as Balloons and Balls.

A matinee was given in the auditorium, both in the afternoon and evening. The same entertainment was given each time with two or three alterations. The program was as follows:

Mother Goose Play—Miss Blanding's children (both afternoon and evening) Duet—Thyra Arnstson and Margaret Gunderson. Dance—Dorothy Clark. Dance—Marguerite Clark (afternoon only).

Reading—Bessie Kling (even'g only) Reading—Frances Rogers (afternoon only) Daily Dozen—H. S. Girls, even'g only Dance—Moreen Bulow, Rita LaValley Cinderella—Sophomore Girls.

The entertainment was enjoyed by all.

In the evening a boxing match took place between Franklin Calkins known as "Rough-House Riley" and Edd. Childs known as "Fig Iron Childs." They both showed great ability but Calkins was knocked out and Childs carried off the honors of the day.

After the entertainment was over there was a dance which lasted until eleven o'clock standard.

Much of the success of the Fair is due to the hard work of Miss Masselink who spent a great deal of time the week before in preparing it.

Destruction by Forest Fires. Every year $3,000,000 forest fires, involving some 12,500,000 acres of timber land, cost us $20,000,000.

The results of the Shorthand Contest have not yet been made known. As so many of the contestants has such long drives to make, they were very anxious to take advantage of the daylight as much as possible, so left before the shorthand papers were examined. We are all eagerly waiting to hear the results which have been promised at an early date.

In each contest the three contestants handing in the best papers are awarded neatly engraved certificates by the state contest committee. The contestants winning first and second places in each contest are eligible to attend the State High School Shorthand and Typewriting Contest which will be held at Kalamazoo the eighteenth of May. The contestant winning third place is eligible to go if the contestant winning second place is unable to go. East Jordan can rightly be proud of the honors the girls have won for themselves and for their school.

Art Exhibit

In ancient and medieval times the civilization of countries was measured by their appreciation of art and the master artists. It is still a strong issue. In these modern days of haste we are apt to neglect one of these corner stones—works of art. We cannot afford to do so. Our standing among the nations of the world cannot lightly push art aside.

We are very apt to undervalue the place of art in everyday life—in the home. By the aid of the Porter-Motter Mfg. Co., the Seniors have made it possible for everyone to see some of the paintings of the world's greatest artists. The exhibition has prepared an excellent art exhibition which will be loaned the Seniors.

There will be lectures to explain the paintings which will give the children an insight to fine arts, and it is hoped to implant a desire for it. A beautiful picture is an inspiration. In the home, pictures do much to influence the minds of people.

The Seniors are giving you this opportunity to visit an art gallery, and journey into many lands, among many peoples and enjoy the accumulated art treasures of all centuries. At the exhibitions anyone desiring to purchase may do so.

There will be a moderate price of admission of ten and twenty-five cents. The receipts will be used to get pictures from the Company for the school.

Shorthand and Typewriting Contest.

Last Saturday the third annual district High School and Typewriting Contest was held at Cheboygan. This district embraces Emmet, Cheboygan, Charlevoix, Otsego, Crawford and Roscommon counties. The following schools were represented: Cheboygan Charlevoix, Boyne City, Gaylord, Petoskey and East Jordan.

Two pupils from each class are eligible in the contest. Mildred Wangeman Hilda Olson, Olga Wagbo, Christine VanDerventer and Josephine Ekstrom represented East Jordan High School.

Christine VanDerventer won first place in the Novice Class in Typewriting; Olga Wagbo won first place in the Amateur Class in Typewriting, and Mildred Wangeman won third place in the same class.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Charlevoix Here Friday

Charlevoix High School will play East Jordan High here this Friday afternoon, May 4th, at 3 o'clock central standard time. This is bound to be a good game as Charlevoix defeated Central Lake 9-6 at Charlevoix last week. East Jordan defeated the Masons last Friday 7-3 in a practice game, and the team will be much stronger this week. Come out and help the boys get off to a winning start. Boyne City plays here Friday May 11th, and Central Lake Friday, May 18th.

LANSING LETTER

(By W. L. Calnon)

LANSING, MICH.

Drawing rapidly towards its close, the 1923 session of the Michigan legislature finds more than the usual swirl of important measures confronting it at the last moment. It looks as though the lawmakers who were heralded last January as the most business like in many years may wind up with a record lacking in real achievement. Much business can be transacted in the final days of a regular session, however, when bills that have been pending a long time in one house or the other are passed over for final decision and each house is acting only on the bills adopted by the other. Should there be no time-absorbing contests over some of these, real speed can be shown in clearing up the last of the calendar. The house originally set Friday, April 27, as the day of proposed business adjournment of the session. The senate held up this resolution for a time and finally added eight days to it, adopting a resolution to cease business of the session on Saturday, May 5. The house was expected to agree to this date and every effort was made to have on the calendars of the two houses by May 1 the bills that had any chance of passage.

Reapportionment Not Considered.

One big task of the session apparently will be left undone. That is the reapportionment of the seats in the senate and house on the basis of the 1920 census. The state constitution of 1907 contains a mandate to the legislature that the 1913 session shall reapportion the memberships of both houses on the basis of the 1910 census and that each ten years thereafter new apportionments shall be made. The 1913 session did pass a reapportionment bill, but it was thrown out by the courts later for disregarding the moiety clause in assigning seats in the house. So the old apportionment remained in effect since then. This year Rep. Vincent Dacey, of Detroit, introduced a proposed house reapportionment bill early in the session. It was permitted to remain in committee and after a time a sub-committee was named to work out a new bill to be a substitute for the Dacey proposal. The sub-committee finally got a bill ready which increases the Wayne county membership in the house to 25 seats from the present 14. The senate committee about the same time worked out a bill changing the boundaries of senatorial districts, the major change provided being for Wayne county, with seven seats assigned instead of the present five. Then, with the business adjournment date set, it was announced that the Dacey bill could not be found by the house committee and that its disappearance left nothing for the committee to offer a substitute for.

Wright Tax Bill Passed.

Several important items of proposed legislation escaped from committee in time to get action before the very last minute rush of bill passing. Among them were three big tax measures. The Smith weight tax bill for motor cars and trucks, designed to return the state a revenue of $15,000,000, was one of these, it had been held back after introduction while the battle raged over the gasoline tax, but after the latter finally landed in the discard action was taken to shove ahead the weight tax measure. The latter retains the present state machinery for collecting automobile license funds, but increases the revenue by a stiff raising of rates, heavier vehicles being given the heavy burden on the theory that they do the most damage to the roads. The bill sets up a highway fund and apportions it among the various items of highway costs, including interest and sinking funds, for highway bonds, maintenance funds and state reward funds. It further provides that these funds shall be raised and expended under the supervision and control of the state administrative board. This bill was reported out to the Senate, which later adopted it by a vote of 24 to 6.

Bill to Incorporate Banks.

The senate has adopted the bill of Senator Walter J. Hayes, of Detroit, to place under the supervision of the state banking department all banks in cities of more than 5,000 population. The bill aims to make compulsory the incorporation of these banks as state banks. It is estimated that the measure will affect more than sixty banking institutions. Senator Hayes was credited with a signal personal victory in obtaining 23 votes for this bill, at least 22 being needed to pass a banking bill, as in several past legislatures similar bills have passed the house only to meet defeat in the senate. This year the bill originated in the senate and it is thought certain that the house will approve it. The bill has the backing of the governor and the state banking department.

Another bill to get out was the Lennop measure for a stoppage of state rewards on roads for the next two years. This was amended in committee so that the rewards would be reduced one-half, instead of being wiped out. On this basis there could be issued $5,000,000 a year of road bonds.

Building Funds Given Slashing.

Terrific slashing of requests of state institutions for funds for building purposes during the coming two years was indulged in by the house ways and means committee, Rep. Nelson Farrier, of Presque Isle, chairman. The imposing total of $8,461,390 was asked of the legislature this year for buildings. Practically every institution wanted some additions or new buildings and felt that its need simply had to be taken care of. But the house committee was deaf to their pleas. It had decided on a program of economy and adhered to it like adamant. When the so-called omnibus appropriation bill was reported out to the house the total of eight million odd dollars requested had shrunk to $1,626,620 of approved requests. More than one-fourth of the favored items are for armories, the total allowed for this purpose being $519,000. This includes $128,000 for the city of Lansing, $140,000 for Flint, $50,000 for Adrian, $75,000 for St. Johns, $25,000 for Charlotte, $40,000 for Holland, $40,000 for the Benton Harbor naval reserves and $20,000 for the state's military camp at Grayling. The only item in the bill that may cause friction on the floor of the house or senate is $285,000 allowed for work already done at Marquette prison and the Lapeer hospital. This work was authorized by the state administrative board on the ground of necessity during the last two years, there being no appropriation to cover it. In the state campaign last autumn Democratic attacks on the state administration included criticism of this action by the administrative board. An important item dropped from the bill was that of $212,000 to build the Michigan Training School for Women at Okemos. Plans for the proposed buildings have been drawn and accepted by the state. The appropriation was backed by the governor and the administrative board and also by many women's organizations in the state. Originally included in a separate bill of its own the project finally was merged with the omnibus bill, only to be rejected in its entirety. Another rejected item was a million dollars for a new prison at Jackson, which had the recommendation of Gov. Grosbeck in his message at the opening of this session. A total of $2,044,000 asked for the state's four normal schools was slashed down to within $100,000. Ypsilanti normal, which sought $904,000, was allowed $8,850; Kalamazoo asked $526,000 and got $2,000 allowed; Mt. Pleasant asked $313,500 and got $35,100, of which $75,000 is for a new library.

Institutions Affected By Cut.

Much of the interest left in the legislative session rested in the appropriations to be granted and most of this froze up when the committee report showed such slashes as these: Pontiac state hospital from $155,000 to $3,627; Traverse City state hospital from $195,000 to $79,750; Newberry state hospital from $425,000 to $27,800; Ionia hospital from $56,000 to $9,000; state department of safety, for Lansing barracks, from $98,000 to $10,000; Adrian girls' home from $14,000 to $1,000; state school for the deaf from $95,000 to $600; employment institution for the blind from $245,000 to $10,000; state public school at Coldwater from $324,000 to $3,000; Kalamazoo state hospital from $491,000 to $129,400; Ionia reformatory from $225,000 to $34,000; and the state tuberculosis sanatorium at Howell from $205,000 to $500. Judging from these reductions the University of Michigan, whose requests are in a separate measure, fared much better than the average institution in that $3,500,000 of the $7,000,000 sought was allowed by the house ways and means committee. Some action may have to be taken by the legislature in regard to the balance of $1,374,000 left of the 1921 legislature's appropriation for the university's building program and which has not been released by the state administrative board. The house committee, in its deliberations, took into consideration the gift which Senator Couzens has pledged to the university of $650,000 for a nurses' home. All of these items will be gone over by members of both houses, but there is little hope anywhere of any drastic revision upward of the figures that were given the favorable report of the ways and means committee. As usual, despite the rosy predictions made last January of rapid handling of appropriations this year, the money bills will be right in the middle of the jam of legislation of the last few days of the session and at that stage of things there is small chance of any radical changes being made.

Limitation of Tax Levies Approved.

Limitation of tax levies in the state were approved by the house in its passage of the Evans bill for this purpose in various localities of the state and the resolution of Rep. Watson calling for a vote on a constitutional amendment in November, 1924, on having a state limitation established. Detroit members objected to the idea of the two proposals, declaring that they are not flexible enough for a rapidly growing community. For the Detroiters the house adopted a bill authorizing the issuance of bonds up to a limit of four percent of the assessed valuation, instead of two percent. This would permit of raising $80,000,000 for subway purposes.

The house taxation committee also released the bill calling for the removal of tax exemptions on bonds, a matter stressed in the special tax commission's report to the present legislature and by the governor in his message at opening of the session.

Governor Commutes Sentence.

Sandersville, Ga.—Governor Hardwick spared the life of Ralph Baker, 15, but refused to intervene for his older brother, George, who went to the gallows at Lafayette, Ga., last week, for the murder of Deputy Sheriff J. S. Morton. Ralph's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Clambake Artist' Dies.

Middletown, N. Y.—Wesley Decker, 53 years old, known in several states as "The Clambake Artist," is dead. He became interested in the production of clambakes, finally achieving so great a reputation that his services were sought in various states. Of the hundreds of bakes he put on he never had a failure.

Take Back Seized Money.

Cologne—The German government having declared a certain issue of 20,000 mark notes, the bulk of which were seized by the French, to be repudiated, the French authorities now announce that they are prepared to take back such of these notes as the French have issued and reimburse the holders of them.

Statue Will Not Be Moved.

Washington—The "hobby horse" statue of Andrew Jackson in the park in front of the White House will remain there until the end of time, so far as President Harding is concerned. Senator McKellar of Tennessee received a letter from the president in which he opposed the suggested removal of "Old Hickory" and the substitution of the statue of George Washington.

Eats and Sleeps Himself Out of Job.

Kansas City—While being searched at police headquarters after he had been caught in a raid on a gambling den, a tall Negro objected to the police reading a letter found in his pocket. However, the police ignored the protest. The letter in part: "I am taking the pleasure to notify you that you was eating three platters of meat for every meal, and sleeping most of the time. So stay where you are."

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—To the Three-Bar ranch, Arizona, owned jointly by Three-Bar, "Mormon" Peters and "Soda-Water Sam" Blanning, a dog makes its way, in the last stages of exhaustion. Inscription on its collar says its name is Grit, "property of F. Casey," denoting a desert tragedy. Blanning and Sam mount and let the dog lead them.

CHAPTER II.—The two find a dying man, Patrick Casey, pinned under an overturned wagon, and a young girl, his daughter. They get him out, but he dies almost instantly, murmuring, "Molly—mine." Sandy takes the girl, Molly, to the ranch.

CHAPTER III.—It is agreed that Molly stays as "mascot" of the ranch. Sandy insists, though, that she must have an education. Jim Pillsoll, gambler, visits the ranch, insults Molly. He claims he grubstaked Casey, which made him the old man's partner. Mormon drives him off.

CHAPTER IV.—Starting with a gold eagle, Molly's luck pieces, Sandy, with Sam, plays faro at Pillsoll's place, winning in the neighborhood of $10,000.

CHAPTER V.—It is arranged that Molly, to whom the half of Sandy's winnings belong, shall go East to be "educated."

CHAPTER VI.—A neighbor, Miranda Bailey, warns the ranchers that Jim Pillsoll, as Patrick Casey's "partner," claims guardianship of Molly, and the authorities stand in with him. Sandy determines to take the girl to New Mexico, visiting on the way to Grand Junction, Colorado, for advice as to Molly's going East. The three men, with the girl, set out.

CHAPTER VII.—Pursued by the sheriff, the ranchers separate. Mormon and Sam return, and Sandy and Molly go on.

CHAPTER VIII.—The two are caught in a pass by a chieftain, during which Sandy saves Molly's life. They reach the town of Carona, their objective.

CHAPTER IX.—A Carona Sandy meets a friend, who helps the pair elude the pursuing sheriff, and they safely board the train on their way out of the state.

CHAPTER X.—Sandy returns to his partners, announcing that Molly has been placed in a school recommended by Barbara Redline.

CHAPTER XI.—A party of riders headed by a man named Brandon visits the Three-Bar, announcing their suspicions of Jim Pillsoll's conduct of his horse ranch. They have all lost stock, and believe Pillsoll to be the thief, but are unable to prove it. Gold is struck at Dynamite where Molly's claim is located, the usual rush following. Pillsoll claims the Casey mine, by virtue of his alleged "grubstake." Determined to protect her interests, Sandy (who realizes he is much more than materially interested in her) and his two friends, with Miranda Bailey, proceed to Dynamite. They find Pillsoll counting up a fortune. Sandy rescues a young assayer, Clay Westlake, from a bully.

His face whitening from the rob of blood to his cowardly heart, Robin Russell opened his fingers wide, judging silent obedience his greatest safety. Sandy did not move wrist or finger as his guns spat fire, left and right, eight shots blending, eight bullets smashing their way through the door between the "V's" of the bully's fingers while the crowd held their breath for the exhibition.

Sandy quickly reloaded, quickly but without obvious haste. He did not return the guns to their holsters and he paid no attention to the admiring comments of the crowd.

"You-all interfered with a friend of mine," said Sandy. "It ain't a healthy trick. An' you ain't apologized to the lady. I don't know how Westlake feels about it, but you've sure got to apologize to the lady."

Russell's eyes rolled from side to side toward his still elevated hands.

"You can lower 'em if you can't talk with 'em up," said Sandy. "I'm waitin' fo' that apology, but I'm in a bit of hurry."

"I didn't see no woman," mumbled the bully, crest-fallen.

"I told you there was one," said Sandy. "I don't lie, even to strangers. You're sorry you swore, ain't you?"

"You're quicker'n I am on the draw with yore two guns," retorted the goaded Russell. "I c'ud lick you one-handed 'bout guns—or any man in this crowd," he blustered in an attempt to halt his departing prestige.

"You-all had a gun in yore hand when we stabled 'n," said Sandy equably. "You're sorry you swore—ain't you?"

The repeated words, backed by the cold gaze, the steady guns, were merciless as probes.

"I apologize to the lady," growled Russell.

"Now, that's fine," said Sandy. "Fine! Westlake, will you come along with me fo' a spell?"

He made his way through the opening group. Sam followed with the assayer who now began to realize that Sandy's interference had established a friendship that would continue protective. They met Mormon, almost purple in the face from suppressed feelings. Young Ed Bailey eyed Sandy with awe and new respect. Miranda Bailey's attempt to learn exactly what had happened was thwarted by Sandy's presentation of Westlake. During the introduction Mormon slipped away.

CHAPTER XII

White Gold.

"It was mighty decent of you to take me under your protection," said the young engineer to Sandy. He made hard going of the last word but shot it out with a snap that left his jaw advanced. Sandy told himself that he liked the clean-cut, well-set-up Westlake.

"Shucks," he answered, "I reckon you w'udn't have much trouble protectin' yo'self. Providin' terns was any way'n even. That Terarin' Russell throwed down on yo, figgerin' you packed no gun, seein' there was none in sight. How'd your fuss come to stah't?"

"A man was showing Russell and some others a piece of quartz picked up round here. It had nothing in it but some mica and galena, but Russell had given it as his opinion that it was the gold-bearing rock of the region. I told them I thought they would find that in the porphyry and Russell asked me what the h—l I knew about

"Sure does," assented Mormon. "If you locate here, marm," he said to Miranda, "an' we-all make a strike, we'll be on the same vein. I reckon."

"It's all Greek to me," said the spinner. "How do we locate? I've come this far, an' I'll see the thing through to some sort of finish. How many claims can we take up an' what's the size of 'em, Mr. Westlake?"

The three partners left Miranda and the engineer measuring off and setting up their monuments at the corners of the claim. They started directly down the slide-hill, making for the valley, in silence, like men with business ahead of them that called for action rather than words.

"Here's the situation, as I s'be it," said Sandy. "Pillsoll met up with Pat Casey from time to time. Molly said so. There's other witnesses to that. Pillsoll'll use some of them to swear that he grubstaked Casey. They'll be some of his own crowd. No doubt Pillsoll got the location of the claims from the old records an' these buckaroo pals of his, who are roostin' on said location, knew jest where to go an' stah'ted out well in front with their outfit. I don't reckon we'll find Pillsoll up there though we ain't seen him so far this mornin', but I'll bet our best bull ag'in a chunk of dog-meat that they're on his pay roll."

"Shucks, it don't make no difference whose pay roll they're on," said Mormon. "They're claim-jumpers an', like you said, Sandy, a jump can be made two ways. Let's go look 'em over."

The tent was pitched on the hillside where the grade was too steep to permit of level ground enough for more than the actual floor space. The tent flaps were open and showing cuts on which blankets and clothing were roughly spread. On two of these beds men sprawled asleep. Five others were looked on boxes atop a boulder that seated like porphyry outcrop. Its surface was flat enough to serve as a table. The five were playing poker. They were not a prepossessing lot, playing their game in silence, looking up with a scowl and movements toward gun butts at the visitors.

"I've seen that tent afore," whispered Sam to Sandy. The latter nodded.

"Campin' out, gents?" he asked amiably.

"No, we ain't. These claims are preempted. Trespassers ain't welcome. You're invited to move on."

"That's a new name fo' it," said Sandy pleasantly. "New to me. Preempted?"

"What in h—l are you driving at?" asked the other. "This is private property."

"Property of Jim Pillsoll?"

"None of your d—d business," said Sandy, with Mormon and Sam, narrow just above the group on the narrow bench that furnished the floor for the tent. Sandy's hands rested lightly on his hips, his thumbs hooked in his belt, fingers grazing the butts of his guns. There was a smile on his lips but none in his eyes. His tone and manner were easy.

"Saw his stencil on the tent," he said. "J. P. in a diamond. Same brand he uses fo' his hawsses. Or hebbe you found it?"

His drawing voice held a taunt that brought angry flushes of color to the faces of the men opposing him, yet they made no definite movement toward attack. There were seven against three but, when the odds are so big and the minority faces them with a readiness and an assurance that shows in their eyes, on their lips, vibrates from their compact alliance, the measure is one of will, rather than physical and merely numerical superiority, and the balance beam quivers undecidedly.

One of the crowd blustered. "I'm giving you men two minutes to clear out of here," he said. "No two-gunned cowpuncher can throw any bluff round here, if that's what you're trying to do."

Sandy laughed joyously. The smile was in his eyes now.

"If I figger a man's throwin' a bluff," he said, "I usually figger to call him, not to chew the lines come dusk. Well," said Mormon, "we'll have a chance to ask him in a minute. He's comin' up with that crowd of his rangin' erlong an' their ha'r lifted."

The three partners met the jumpers, now headed by Pillsoll, on the border of the claims. The gambler's face was livid. "You four-flushers get off this ground," he blustered. "You're claimin' to represent Molly Casey's rights after you've kidnaped the girl and sent her out of the state. It won't get you anywhere or anything. I've got a half interest in these claims and I've plenty of witnesses to prove it."

"I don't believe yore witnesses are half as vallyble as they might have been before politics shifted in Herefo'd county," said Sandy. "You ain't got a written contract an' it w'udn't do you a mite of good if you had, for as I'm concerned, because I've been duly an' legally appointed guardian to Casey's daughter, Molly an' I'm here to represent her interests, likewise mine. I've got my guardianship papers right with me."

"A h—l of a lot of good they'll do you in this camp," sneered Pillsoll. "Representin' her interests. Ill say you are, an' your own along with 'em." A laugh from his followers heartened him. "If the camp ever hears the yarn of your runnin' off with the girl and now, with her tucked away, coming back to clean up, I've a notion they'd show you four-flushers where you've s' in to the wrong game. Why s' it?"

Something in Sandy's face stopped him. It became suddenly devoid of all expression, became a thing of stone out of which blazed two gray eyes and a voice issued from lips that barely moved.

Sandy Told Himself That He Liked the Clean-Cut, Well-Set-Up Westlake.

It? That's how it started. I don't know how it would have finished if you hadn't taken a hand and said I was a friend of yours. Do you know anything about mining, Mr. Bourke?"

"Sandy is my name to my friends. A cowman with a muster to the front of his name seems to me like a hawss with an extra bridle. No, sir, I don't do you?"

Sandy's eyes twinkled as he put the quiz. Westlake laughed.

"I hope so. I think so. Experience counts a lot, of course, but I do know something about sylvanite, or white gold. I've seen it big field over in Boulder and Teller counties, Colorado. They call it graphic gold, sometimes, because the crystals are very frequently set up in twins and branch off so that they look like written characters. The crystals are monoclinic and occur in porphyry almost exclusively. It is a mixture of gold and silver telluride and it's also called tellurium."

"I'm much obliged," said Sandy. "I've learned a heap."

Westlake looked at him suspiciously, but Sandy's face was grave as that of the sphinx.

"The porphyry dykes here are in syncline," the engineer went on. "They dip toward each other from both sides of the valley and form loops or folds. If you imagine an onion sliced in half you catch the idea. Call every other layer porphyry, with rock and other dirt between. The bottom of a loop may be deep down or it may be missing altogether, ground away when the valley was gouged out by a glacier. There may be other loops beneath it. Some portions of the loops come to the surface on the hillside and you can guess at their dip. But—the gambler lies in this: The ones that are exposed may or may not carry the gold-bearing veins. This Casey, who made the original strike, did he take out much?"

"As I understand it," replied Sandy, "he hits the porphyry where it's shallow, or worn off, like you said. An' he finds rich pay stuff right away, enough to start the camp an' then it peters out. I reckon s'ed a bit about synclines, I see, fo' he kept faith in the camp, on'y he realized it 'ud take a heap of money to develop, mennis' to dig through the porphyry, I suppose. Now they've found some mo' of that float ore that the first crowd overlooked. Reckon that'll peter out too, after a while. But capital may come in on this second stab. Some Eastern folk were lookin' over the place a while back."

Westlake halted and took a small steel hammer from his pocket with which he struck off a fragment of rock protruding from the ground. The cleavage showed purple. He walked slowly along for some fifty feet, kicking the soil with his foot, breaking off other samples to which he put his tongue.

"Taste good?" asked Sam.

"Not bad, if you're looking for mineral. They've got a distinct flavor all their own, but I wetted them to show the color up more plainly. Here is the out-crop of the syncline reef. It may carry gold and it may not, but it's wide enough, it's near the surface and it's as good a place as any."

Sandy, glancing across the valley to where the engineer pointed, nodded his head. "Your judgment goes with Casey's," he said. "Right across from here is where he located his claims. I take it. How about it, Mormon? Fits the description to a T?"

and Mormon stood like dogs on point, watchful, unmoving, but instinct with suppressed motion.

"The girl may be his heir," said the man who had spoken, "but Pillsoll is assignee. Pillsoll staked him an' these claims are half his."

"So J. P. was hirin' you to do his dirty work," said Sandy, his voice cold with contempt. "You go back to hell, with the whole lousy pack of you, an' tell them from me he's a yellow-spined liar. They might have moved from a man marked by persistence. He stood trying to outface Sandy. He kept his eyes steady.

"You pack yore gun under yore coat-flap," said Sandy. "I don't know how quick you can draw but I aim to find out."

He handed one of his own guns to Mormon, announcing his action lest Pillsoll might mistake it.

"Now, then," he went on, "I once told you I looked to you to stop any gossip about Molly Casey. Same time Git! Take yore stuff with you or send back fo' it. Now, git off this property."

If a man can make movements with his hands so swiftly that they are covered in less than a tenth of a second, ordinary human sight cannot register them. He has achieved the magician's slogan—the quickness of the hand deceives the eye. It takes natural aptitude and long practice, whether one is juggling gilded balls or blue-steel revolvers. Sandy could, with a circling movement of his wrists, draw his guns from their holsters and bring them to bear directly upon the target to which his eyes shifted. Glance, twist of wrist, ar-rest of motion, pressure of finger, all co-ordinated. One moment his hands were empty, his glance carelessly contemptuous, the veriest movement of a split-second stop-watch and the gun in his left swang in an arc that menaced the five card players.

The other two were struggling beneath the crumpled folds of a collapsed tent, wriggling frantically like the stage hands who simulate waves by crawling beneath painted canvas. Sandy had shattered the pegs that held up the upper corners of the tent on the slope, had cut the cords of the remaining guys on that side and the structure had swayed and collapsed.

Sam and Mormon had lined up now with Sandy. There was no mistaking their intention to use their guns. But the exhibition had been quite sufficient. With one accord the men raised their hands shoulder high and began to shuffle down the hill, regardless of their equipment, which, having been paid for by Pillsoll, they regarded as of much less value than the necessity for departure.

"Scattered like a bunch of coyotes," said Sam.

"Sure did," agreed Sandy. "Minute they stah'ted talkin', 'stead of shootin', I knew they was ready to stampede. They'll beat it to Pillsoll an' we'll see jest how much sand he's got in his craw."

"Think Pillsoll show?" asked Sam.

"Got to—or quit," said Sandy. "That bunch of jumpers he got together'll spill the beans unless he makes some play. Let's take a pasear an' look at Casey's workings."

Patrick Casey had run in a tunnel from the face of his discovery. His mouth had been closed by timbers fitting closely into the frame of the horizontal shaft, forming, not so much a door, as a barricade, that had been firmly spliced to heavy timbers. This had been recently dismantled and then replaced, as recent marks on the weathered lumber showed. Sandy looked at these places closely, frowning as he gave his verdict.

"Some one monkey'n with this inside of the last month," he announced. "Like as not it was that bunch of Easterners. They'd figger the camp was abandoned an' consider themselves justified as philanthropists into bu'st'n' open anything that looked good—like this tunnel. Yes, sir," Sandy went on, warming to his own theory, "it w'udn't surprise me if this wasn't the mine they sampled which Pillsoll finds out is the real stuff an' clamps on it."

"Well," said Mormon, "we'll have a chance to ask him in a minute. He's comin' up with that crowd of his rangin' erlong an' their ha'r lifted."

The three partners met the jumpers, now headed by Pillsoll, on the border of the claims. The gambler's face was livid. "You four-flushers get off this ground," he blustered. "You're claimin' to represent Molly Casey's rights after you've kidnaped the girl and sent her out of the state. It won't get you anywhere or anything. I've got a half interest in these claims and I've plenty of witnesses to prove it."

"I don't believe yore witnesses are half as vallyble as they might have been before politics shifted in Herefo'd county," said Sandy. "You ain't got a written contract an' it w'udn't do you a mite of good if you had, for as I'm concerned, because I've been duly an' legally appointed guardian to Casey's daughter, Molly an' I'm here to represent her interests, likewise mine. I've got my guardianship papers right with me."

"A h—l of a lot of good they'll do you in this camp," sneered Pillsoll. "Representin' her interests. Ill say you are, an' your own along with 'em." A laugh from his followers heartened him. "If the camp ever hears the yarn of your runnin' off with the girl and now, with her tucked away, coming back to clean up, I've a notion they'd show you four-flushers where you've s' in to the wrong game. Why s' it?"

Something in Sandy's face stopped him. It became suddenly devoid of all expression, became a thing of stone out of which blazed two gray eyes and a voice issued from lips that barely moved.

"I've got a notion, too, Pillsoll. A notion that it 'ud be a good day's work to shoot you fo' a foul-mouthed, lynx, stealin' crook! You've called me a fo'-flusher twice, an' the only way to prove a fo'-flusher is to call fo' a show-down. I'm doin' it."

The words came cold and even, backed by a grim earnestness that imprinted itself on the lesser manhood of the jumpers as a finger leaves its print in clay. They shifted back a little from Pillsoll, circling out as Butch Parsons an' Slim Hahn got hubb. You don't seem able to s'be plain talk an' I'm tired of talkin' to you, Jim Pillsoll. Me, I'm goin' to roll me a cigarette. Any time you want to you can draw. I'm givin' you the alidge on me. If you don't take that alidge, Jim Pillsoll, I'm givin' you till sun-up tomorrow mornin' to git plumb out of camp. An' to keep drif'tin'."

Deliberately Sandy took tobacco sack and papers from the pocket of his shirt, his fingers functioning automatically, precisely, his eyes never shifting from Pillsoll's face, measuring by feel the amount of tobacco shaken into the little trough of brown paper.

The group gazed at him fascinated. Pillsoll's face beaded with tiny drops of sweat, his hands moved slowly upward toward his coat lapels, touched them as Sandy twisted the end of the cigarette, stayed there, shaking slightly with what might have been eagerness—or paralysis. For the look in the steel-gray eyes of Sandy Bourke, half mocking, all confident, spurred the doubts that surged through the gambler's chance-calculating mind, while he knew that every atom of hesitation lessened his chances.

His own hands were close to his chest. His right hand had a few inches to drag the automatic from its smooth holster. Sandy's hands were high above his belt, rolling the cigarette. They had four times as far to go. However, Pillsoll knew that if anything went wrong with his performance, if he failed to kill with that shooting, that nothing would be wrong with Sandy's shooting. But—if he did not take his chance and, failing it, did not leave camp . . .

"Gimme a match, Sam," said Sandy's voice came at Pillsoll across a gulf that could never be bridged. He watched the flame, pale in the sunshine, watched it lift to the cigarette and then a puff of smoke came into his face as Sandy lunged away the burnt stick and turned on his heel. Murder stirred dully in Pillsoll's brain at the sneer he surmised rather than read on the faces of his followers. His defeat was also theirs. But the moment had gone. He knew he lacked the nerve. Sandy knew it and had turned his back on him.

His prestige was gone. His boon companions would talk about it. Mormon gave Sandy back his second gun and Sandy slid it into the holster. He exhaled the last puff of his cigarette before he spoke again to Pillsoll.

"Sun-up, ter-morrer. You can send fo' yore stuff here any time you've a mind to. Fo' a gambler's man, Pillsoll, you're a d—d pore judge of a hand."

Pillsoll strode off down the hill alone. The men who had come with him hesitated and then crossed the gulch. They had severed connections with the J. P. brand for the time, at least. The three partners walked back toward the tunnel.

"We got to stay on the claims," said Sam. "If they happened to think of it they might heave a stick of dynamite in our midst atter it's good an' nasty. A flyin' chunk of dynamite is a dandy thing to dodge, at that."

"I don't think it likely, Sam. Camp know, or will know, what's been happenin'. If dynamite was thrown they'd s'be who did it, an' I don't believe the crowd 'ud stand for it. I w'udn't wonder if Jim Pillsoll forgets to send fo' that tent an' stuff of his. Hope he does."

"What do we want with it?" demanded Mormon.

"Nothin', with the stuff. We set it out beyond the lines come dusk. But the tent'll come in handy. We didn't bring one erlong."

"You don't aim fo' us to sleep in it, do you?" asked Mormon.

"Don't believe we'd rest well if we tackled it. But it mightn't be a bad scheme if we give the general idea that we are sleepin' in it. I put a lantern in the car when we stah'ted. Fetch that erlong too, will you, Mormon?"

It was late afternoon before Mormon reappeared, bearing a camp outfit, part of which was carried by Westlake. Sandy and Sam had replighted the tent on fairly level ground of the valley bottom. Mormon's eyebrows went up at the location with which Sandy and Sam, seated cross-legged on the ground, one smoking, the other draining low harmonies through his mouth organ, appeared perfectly satisfied.

"Why on the flat?" asked Mormon. "There's a heap of cover round here where they might snake up atter dawk an' sling anythin' they minded to at us from lend to giant powder!"

"Vail," drawled Sandy, flicking the ash from his cigarette, "it's hanky to watch, fo' one thing, an' yore right about that cover, Mormon. That's why we chose it."

Mormon sat down his load and took off his hat to scratch his head perplexed. Then his face lightened as he looked up-hill.

"You figger on settin' the lantern in here atter dawk," he said. "An' watchin' the fun from the tunnel?"

"Fritty close, Mormon. Come inside, you an' Westlake, an' I'll show you suthin'."

They followed him into the tent and came out again laughing.

CHAPTER XIII

A Rope Breaks.

The lantern, turned down, dimly illumined the tent and revealed the figures of three men seated about some sort of rough table. The flap was drawn and fastened. Occasionally a figure moved slightly. No passer-by would have guessed that the three partners were ensconced in the black hush of the tunnel, ramparted by the dump heap, watching for developments they were fairly sure would start with darkness. Every little while Sandy twitched a line that was attached to a clumsy but effective rocker he had contrived beneath one of the dummys they had built from the stuff that Pillsoll had not reclaimed.

"If Back Hurts Begin on Salts"

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

STOP NOSTRILLI OPEN

STOP CATARRHI OPEN

Says Cream Applied in Nostrills Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrills are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrills and let it penetrate through every air passage of your swollen and inflamed, aching, aching mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrills are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing, no more headache, dryness, or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

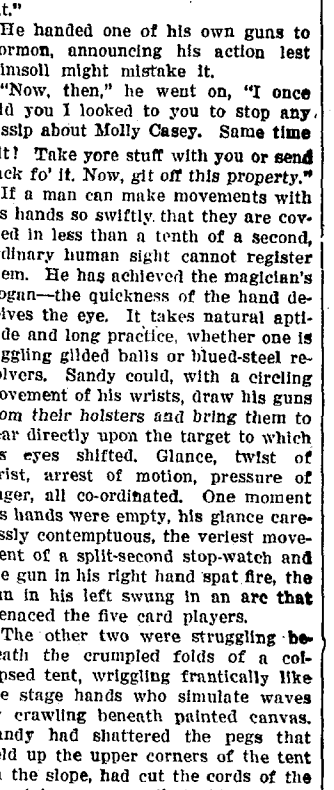

SULPHUR CURES ROUGH, RED SKIN

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist

Any itching out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and bring eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worms.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowley Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and see it like cold cream.

WHY THAT LAME BACK?

That morning lameness—those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't be handicapped by a bad back—look to your kidneys. You will make no mistake by following this East Jordan resident's example. Mrs. Wm. St. Charles says: "I was bothered quite a good deal with my back and after I did my washing my back was so lame and sore I dreaded to move. There was a soreness across my kidneys that hurt me all the time and when I was on my feet a little while my back gave out. I often had headaches and was troubled with dizziness. I was nervous, depressed and irritable. My kidneys were weak and irregular. I saw in the paper how well Doan's Kidney Pills were liked and I decided to try them. I purchased a few boxes at Hite's Drug Store and they cured me."
