NOTICE TO WATER USERS.

At the last Council meeting a resolution was passed limiting the hours for sprinkling to four hours, from 6 to 8 morning and evening. We were forced to this measure by the fact that during the last two weeks we were unable to supply adequate fire protection in spite of continual pumping. We request the co-operation of the citizens in this matter, urging conservation and no waste of water. In case of fire make sure that all hydrants and taps are closed.

HUGH W. DICKEN, Mayor.

Rent Raised, Kills Self.

Columbus, O.—High rents took their first toll in human life here when George Edley, 60 years old, sent a bullet through his heart. Edley, who conducted a shoe repairing shop, despaired of making a living for his wife and three children, when informed his rent would be increased $30 a month.

Michigan Men Win Commissions

Washington—Application for commissions in the army reserve corps have been accepted from three Michigan men: Osmond Elton Rowey, Detroit; second lieutenant, quartermaster corps; Chris Louis Bolger, Saginaw, second lieutenant, infantry; Wilham Richards, Lansing, Captain, finance corps.

Claims the Smallest Mules

Yuba, Calif.—While Missouri and Kentucky may boast the raising of the largest mules, Sutter County is laying claim to the two smallest mules. One weighs 44 pounds, and is 30 inches high, while the other stands 28 inches high and tips the scales at 34 pounds, the smallest mules in the world.

Large Audience Hear Sermon

Rev. Hulme Gives Fine Advice To the Class of 1923.

The first event of the graduation week for the Class of 1923, East Jordan High School, took place at the Auditorium Sunday evening, when Rev. Henry Hulme spoke on the text "Knowledge and its Beginning, the substance of a very wholesome talk, yet positive in its message that young men and women must not depend upon their own knowledge. Education is one of the finest things in the world but there is something greater even than this. A large audience saw the debut of the debut of the great and glorious class of 1923. Their first appearance made a rather striking showing, the girls wearing their sailor uniforms of blue. They not only looked well but in a very pleasing and dignified way showed that they were modest yet sure of themselves. It looks very much as though another body from the East Jordan High School would only add further laurels to the institution.

Another part of the program that made an unusually pleasant and profitable evening was the very fine music furnished by the Methodist people. Their young choir really has been one of the distinct features of two occasions of late. The Methodist people in this choir are to be congratulated on their work. In fact, the town should be proud of such an organization.

Mr. Voice, in his violin solo was appreciated by the large audience.

Mrs. Archie Kowalske sang a very beautiful solo in a most charming manner. This Friday night, Charles T. Grawn of Detroit will be the Commencement Orator, and, as was hinted before in these columns, any East Jordan citizen missing his lecture on "Determining Factors in Success" will be disappointed when he hears the reports from those who attend. Grawn is not only a pleasing and very energetic speaker but he lives what he says and is a wholesome gentleman whom it is a pleasure to meet.

Come out and see the exit of the Class of 1923 and listen to one of the best lectures given on the East Jordan platform.

FOREST FIRES CAUSE DAMAGE IN COUNTRY

Pentwater—Hundreds of men, women and children were putting up a grim fight Thursday, to save their homes and villages as wind-fanned forest fires swept through this district. Thousands of dollars' worth of damage was done in some sections and the battle against the flames promised to continue all night.

The volunteer fire fighting force had waged a futile battle during the early hours of the day and when the settlement itself was in extreme danger schools were dismissed and the students joined in the work.

Fighting with blistered hands, eyes swollen and almost blinded by the dense smoke, in some cases with shoes almost burned from their feet, the villagers were beginning to make a little headway late Thursday evening and it was believed the flames would be halted before the main part of the town was reached.

St. Paul, Minn.—Federal and state forestry officials combined with lumber companies and railroads Thursday to fight menacing forest fires in the north woods.

Thousands of acres of timber and brush are reported afire in northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

In southern Ontario the situation is even more menacing, according to reports here.

Many new fires were reported on both sides of the Rainy river, and in the Lake Kabetogama district. More were discovered on the north shore of Lake Superior, adjacent to the Superior national forest.

Munising—Thousands of acres of timber had been burned over up to Thursday night by the forest fires raging in this district. Rangers and men everywhere have been fighting them for days with little result.

Quebec—Serious fires have broken out in western Quebec, said reports received at the forestry branch of the department of lands. Sixteen hundred fire rangers are fighting the flames. Sportsmen and settlers are forbidden to enter the affected area without permits.

Johnny Johnson Hurls No Hit, No Run, Game.

At the fair grounds, Sunday, the last of the preliminary games before the league season opens was played between East Jordan and Charlevoix. The locals mopped up Cy Powers aggregation to the tune of 11 to 0.

Johnny Johnson pitched one of the best games of his career, and with the whole East Jordan team playing errorless ball behind him he turned back Charlevoix without a hit and with only one visitor reaching third base.

Cy Powers had a bunch of reserves with him and he kept putting in new players so fast that the score-keeper used up a perfectly good lead pencil recording their names.

Our boys are in fine shape for the opening game of the league season at Boyne City next Sunday.

SETH REED IS 100 YEARS OLD

Methodists From All Over the State Gather to Celebrate Affair.

Flint—Church and civic ceremonies in Flint will mark the last day of the hundredth year of the life of the Rev. Dr. Seth Reed, for 79 years a Methodist minister in Michigan and the oldest clergyman of that church in the world.

About 200 Methodist ministers and their wives from the Michigan and Detroit Conferences, were expected at the noonday luncheon to be served at the Court Street Church.

Dr. Reed was admitted to the old Michigan Conference, before the division into two conferences, June 15, 1844; hence both the Michigan and Detroit conferences of the church look upon him as the patriarch of the state.

War Ace Killed in Test Flight. Paris—Former Captain Doullin, one of France's leading aviators in the World War, was killed last week in the fall of a new machine which he was testing at Villacoublay. During the war Doullin achieved 24 victories over German planes.

Hit By Base Ball, Dies. Salem, Mass.—Walter Hhenski, a grammar school pupil, was struck above the heart by a pitched ball during an elementary school league baseball game here and died in a few minutes. He was 13 years old and one of a family of 11 children.

Daugherty's Aide Kills Self. Washington—Jesse W. Smith, for years the close personal friend and political aide of Attorney Gen. Daugherty, committed suicide last week in the hotel apartment where he and the attorney general had lived together since the beginning of the Harding administration.

American Women Meet Royalty. London—America was represented by a large number of presentations when King George and Queen Mary held their first court of the season at Buckingham palace last week. Mrs. Post Wheeler, wife of the American charge d'affaires, introduced thirteen of her countrywomen.

Poor Box Thief Shot by Priest. Boy Caught in Church—Wounded as He Attempts to Escape.

Detroit—The Rev. Fr. Michael G. Esper, pastor of St. Boniface Church, shot a 14-year-old boy who sought to escape after the priest caught him robbing the church poor box. The boy, who gave his name as Harold Smith, of St. Clair, Wis., said his elder brother, John, 13 years old, had been acting as lookout, and escaped during the excitement.

Awakened by the ringing of a bell, which is so arranged that it sounds when persons enter the church, Father Esper got his revolver and went to investigate.

He had been made wary of burglars because the church was entered several times in the last two weeks, he said.

The captive was only slightly wounded, and is held at the Juvenile Detention Home.

Hybridizing Plants Old Idea. The practice of hybridizing to produce new varieties of plants was first used in Europe by the Romans, who bred races of roses by its means.

Reverence for Flag Is Urged

Gov. Groesbeck Sets June 14th as State's Flag Day.

Governor Groesbeck has issued a Flag Day proclamation setting next Thursday, June 14th, as the 1923 Flag Day in Michigan. The proclamation follows:

There is a disposition in some quarters to sneer at the homage we pay the flag of our country, but we reverence and honor the flag not for what it is in itself but what it symbolizes. It is a visible token of those great principles upon which the Republic was founded, and, unless we are ready to uphold these principles at any cost, this nation with its free institutions cannot long endure.

Flag Day, then, is to remind us of the real significance of our national emblem.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as governor of the State of Michigan, I hereby proclaim Thursday, June 14, 1923, Flag Day.

Let flags be displayed on both public and private buildings and let community exercises appropriate to the day be held wherever practicable.

MICHIGAN TAKES LEAD IN COW TESTING WORK.

With an increase of nearly 400 per cent in organized cow testing work during the past year, Michigan dairy men have assumed a position among America's leading state's in systematic dairy improvement operations. From a comparatively humble start with 14 cow testing associations in May 1922, the state has reached a point this week where 46 associations were in actual operation, while nine additional groups were organized and merely waiting the assignment of official testers before getting under way.

Cow test associations, each including some 25 herds in a district, serve as a powerful influence for better dairy methods and conditions, and result in a more efficient industry where they operate. The spread of more than half a hundred of these groups over the state is considered by specialists in agricultural matters as the most significant happening in Michigan dairy circles of recent years. Few states are now better organized than Michigan for extension of better dairy principles and standards.

That efficient production of milk and butterfat is the only paying proposition on the dairy farm at all times, is being proved daily by the records of the associations testers, and more and more communities are taking steps to join the "better dairy" movement.

Among the chief advantages of association work, as outlined by A. C. Baltzer, of the M. A. C. dairy extension division, are: showing the real value of each individual in a herd; giving a basis for the building up of a better herd; increasing market value of animals with official production records; proving value of a herd sire through the records of his daughters; and pointing out most economical and efficient feeding and handling practices.

War Ace Killed in Test Flight. Paris—Former Captain Doullin, one of France's leading aviators in the World War, was killed last week in the fall of a new machine which he was testing at Villacoublay. During the war Doullin achieved 24 victories over German planes.

EAST JORDAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

TRACK

The past Saturday marked the closing of East Jordan High School's most successful Track Season. The event was the State Interscholastic Meet at Lansing in which five of East Jordan's men competed, of which three won honors and brought home medals.

The quarter-mile has proven East Jordan's strong event all season in the Northern Michigan Meets and it also proved so at Lansing. The two entries Love and Walker placed second and third respectively. The race started with Love at the pole and leading the field for the first four hundred yards, setting the pace so fast that the Plainwell man who managed to nose him out at the finish broke the former record by three-fifth seconds. Walker placing third in this record event shows that he is a comer. Streeter in the low hurdles, after placing well in the preliminaries managed to win a third place in the finals of this event, thereby winning two more points.

In the Relay Race our team which won at Cadillac found that Southern Michigan has good sprinters too, and were only able to get another point with a fourth place to their credit, Plainwell winning the event in record breaking time.

The State Meet has given the boys something to work for and another year instead of placing seventh, the team is sure to be one of the first three teams as every member of this year's squad remains in school.

Resolved, that until further action by this council, the time for sprinkling laws be limited to the hours of 6:00 to 8:00 o'clock a. m. and 6:00 to 8:00 p. m. Further

Resolved, that violators of this resolution suffer the penalty of having the water shut off and of paying a fee of one dollar before the water is turned on again.

DOES YOUR BACKACHE?

It's usually a sign of sick kidneys, especially if the kidney action is disordered, passages scanty or too frequent. Don't wait for more serious troubles. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this East Jordan man's testimony.

Albert Turk says: "Mornings my back felt lame and at times I found it hard to get up. Those jerky pains pulled me back more than once. I was handling lumber at that time and my back got so weak and sore I couldn't stoop over. I couldn't get rested and always felt tired and worn out. When dizzy spells came over me I couldn't see anything. My kidneys were often weak and irregular and I had to get up during the night. The secretions were often badly colored and painful in passage. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

WORLD POWERS ACT TO SAVE CAPTIVES

INTERNATIONAL MILITARY COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE BRIGAND SITUATION

OUTLAWS ON VERGE OF SPLIT

One Faction Would Take Victims Farther into Hills—Demand Separate Ransoms.

Tsao Chuang—The international military commission, sent here to investigate the brigand situation, has arrived here. Brigadier-General William D. Connor, U. S. A., who heads the mission, declared he had come to obtain accurate information.

"As military men and trained observers," he said, "we shall obtain information which it would be impossible for others to obtain. We shall have no dealing with the bandits, directly or indirectly."

A serious difference exists among the brigands, one element preferring to continue their outlawry holding the remaining captives.

Leaders Kuo Chiti Sai and Hun Kang Ching, the latter an elder brother of Sun Mai Yao, head of the band, visited Tsao Chuang Sunday afternoon, telling the deputy Tuchun of the opposition of certain elements to further releases and also their objection to joining the army.

The international military commission has decided to await developments before making reconnaissances. The split in the band worries the consuls.

Representatives of the Chinese government last Saturday began enrolling members of the bandit band in the army. Groups were brought into a village in the neutral zone, six miles from the mountain fortress, where the army oath was administered.

Villagers, who joined the band and whose homes were destroyed by Chinese troops, have been granted full compensation.

The brigands demanded separate ransoms for the 26 Chinese captives still held.

The Chinese chamber of commerce is expected to furnish funds for their ransom.

FRENCH FACE CABINET CRISIS

Government Refuses to Investigate Fascist Movement.

Paris—Decision of the Poincare government not to ferret out the royalist Fascist movement in France has laid the foundation for a new ministerial crisis.

Despite the declaration of Minister of Interior Manoury that clear evidences had been found that the royalists were plotting overthrow of the French republic, the ministry has decided it will keep hands off.

Communists and socialists are up in arms. They are strong in the French senate where they recently forced the temporary resignation of Premier Poincare by voting down his anti-communist program.

The chamber, too, regards the decision as a "direct slap in the face," one of the leaders said Sunday.

It is also considered as a repudiation of Manoury, who promised that the royalists would be quelled.

Extremists have for a long time contended that Deputy Leon Daudet, the royalist chieftain, holds Poincare and the government in the hollow of his hand.

They are preparing now for a showdown.

MICHIGAN MEN FINISH COURSE

Sixteen Enter Class Four Years Ago, Only Seven Survive.

West Point, N. Y.—Seven cadets who are on the records of the United States Military Academy as being representatives from the State of Michigan, and who are members of the West Point class of 1923, are among the 262 young men who will graduate from Uncle Sam's big war school, on the banks of the Hudson, on June 12.

This class, which entered the academy 479 strong four years ago, is one of the largest ever to be graduated from the academy, and the seven Michigan men are the survivors of a lot of 16 cadets from that state.

Two of the 16 graduated last year, thereby exercising an option which congress gave every cadet in the class a few years ago. The other seven fell by the wayside.

More Cars Shake Themselves to Pieces Than Ever Wear Out

Charge that up to vibration. Vibration causes cars to grow old prematurely by racking their chassis, destroying the "metal life" of vital parts, loosening up their bodies and causing squeaks and rattles. Frequent, costly repairs are the result.

The Studebaker Light-Six is freer from vibration than any car of its approximate size or weight yet produced.

This has been accomplished largely by a complete machining of the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces—a practice used by Studebaker exclusively on cars at this price and found only on a very few other cars whose selling prices are from three to ten times as high as the Light-Six.

There are 61 precision operations in the manufacture of the crankshaft alone, 40 of which range in accuracy from one-quarter thousandth to one thousandth of an inch. The Light-Six motor embodies the most advanced design known to automobile construction. And no chassis at any price built to more exacting standards of materials and workmanship.

Aside from its mechanical excellence and its consequent long life, the Light-Six is handsome in design, extremely comfortable, sturdy, and we believe the most economical car to buy and operate ever offered at $975 or anywhere near this figure.

Its substantial all-steel body, one-piece, rain-proof windshield, ten-inch cushions upholstered in genuine leather, cowl lamps—these are among many features heretofore to be had only in higher-priced cars.

For 71 years the name Studebaker has stood for integrity, quality and value.

Flint—Charles Austin, charged with killing his former employer, Paul DeLisle, a wealthy cattle buyer, Dec. 10, 1921, by giving him a mixture of poison and whiskey, was acquitted by a jury in the Circuit Court. Austin and his alleged accomplice, Clifford Thorpe, were convicted in their first trial and both had served more than a year in prison when the Supreme Court ordered a new trial.

Traverse City—Winging its way toward Chicago, the huge Brigette biplane which laid on South Fox island, disabled, in a relief expedition to starving lumbermen, more than a month ago, took off from a field here last week. More than 150 priests and nuns from all parts of Michigan attended mass at St. Michael's church, in the morning, at which time the Rt. Rev. Bishop Michael J. The snowfall last week saved the State many hundreds of thousands of dollars damage by extinguishing every forest fire in the State, according to Albert Stoll, Jr., Secretary of the Conservation Commission. Where the fall itself was not sufficient to put out the fires, state foresters shoveled snow on the flames, Mr. Stoll said.

Ida Stevens, Ionia high school girl, who was burned at Portland, while riding in an automobile bus when the gasoline caught fire at a filling station, died in a Lansing hospital. The girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, who were summoned to her bedside, were injured when their automobile went over an embankment in the dark.

More than $4,000,000 will be spent in the construction of a new steel and concrete ore dock at Escanaba. A survey of the site has been made and the plans are in the hands of engineers. No definite date has been given out for the commencement of work, which will give employment to hundreds of men for more than a year.

The High-Grade Gasoline
Has the Punch

It follows through — there is no halfhearted piston stroke; neither is there a slapping piston stroke to rack your engine. Instead, Red Crown imparts a steady, steam-engine-like pressure to the piston that sustains and follows through the length of the stroke. That explains both the smooth flow of rhythmic power and the abundance of sustained pulling power. Red Crown offers to the motorist

The Utmost of Service

It has all the intrinsic merit that science has been able to put into any gasoline. "I hate leaving the country without evening up some way with the Bourke outfit," said Pillsoll. "D—n him and the rest of them, they broke the luck for us. As for the girl, if . . ."

"Oh, quit throwing the bull on about that, Jim," said Parsons bluntly. "Sandy Bourke's a d—n good man for you to leave alone and you know it. Talk ain't goin' to hurt him."

"I'm coming back some time," said Pillsoll with a string of oaths. "Then you'll see something besides talk."

Parsons jeered at him. Pillsoll was no longer the leader and he knew it. But he hung on to the semblance of authority that an open quarrel with Butch might shatter. Butch was a bully, but Pillsoll respected his shooting. And Hahn sided with him. The cook did not count.

Pillsoll carried with him a fine pair of binoculars and, as they rode leisurely on and reached a vantage point, he swept the tumbled horizon for signs of any strange riders. It was the caution of habit as much as actual fear of a raid.

At times Pillsoll rode aside from the trail to a ridge crest for wider vision. At last, coming up the pass of Willow creek, he sighted Molly and Donald with Grit trotting beside them. It was the dog that confirmed his first surmise. He had heard that Molly had returned, but he had not dared a visit to the Three Star. Who the rider with her was he did not care. That it was a tenderfoot was plain by his clothes and by his seat. As he adjusted the powerful glasses to a better focus Pillsoll's face twisted to an ugly smile.

"I'll show you if I do nothing but talk," he said to Butch after he told them of his discovery. "We'll wait for them along the trail. We'll send the chap with her back about."

"And what'll you do with her?" asked Hahn. "We've had enough of skirts, Pillsoll. This is no time to be mixed up with them."

"Isn't it?" The drink had given Pillsoll some of his old swagger, and the prospect of hatching the revenge over which he had brooded so long took possession of him. "Then you're a bigger fool than I thought you, Hahn. That particular skirt, aside from my personal interest in her, represents about a quarter of a million dollars—maybe more. She's got a quarter interest and a little better in the Molly mine. The Three Star owns another quarter. How much will they give up to have her back? Bourke's her guardian, remember. I think the chap with her may be young Keith. We won't monkey with him. He'll do to tell what happened. We'll take the girl along and we'll send back word of how much we want to let her go. After I'm through with her. She may not go back the same as she came, but they won't know that and they'll pay enough to set us up and to h—l with the herd."

"You'll have the whole county searching the range," objected Parsons. "There's a lot know something about the Hideout and they'll use Wyatt to show 'em the way. Bourke'll guess where she is."

"Let him. Wyatt don't know about the caves, does he? We can take her some other place tomorrow. We won't say anything now to the kid about a ransom. We'll mail a letter after we fix details. But we'll take the girl into the Hideout now. That tenderfoot'll be lucky if he drifts back to the Three Star by nightfall about. We'll be out of the place long before that. And we'll put her where they can't find her till they come through. I'm running this."

The cook had ridden on ahead. Now he was waiting for them, looking back. Parsons shrugged his shoulders.

"How do we split?" asked Hahn. "Three ways," said Pillsoll. "We'll take her to the cabin. The rest'll be at the other end. We'll keep Cookie with us—for the present. No need for the boys to know about it. We can manage that all right. Three ways, and I handle the girl."

Butch Parsons grinned at him. "I thought you'd lost all your nerve, Jim, but I guess I was wrong. All right, it goes as it lays. Now, then, how'll we bring it off?"

Pillsoll talked glibly, convincingly. Hahn had some objections, but Pillsoll overruled them plausibly enough. "I don't see the sense of letting the kid go," questioned Hahn. "He's good for a big split as well as the girl."

Bridge Has Had Vicissitudes. London bridge, over the Thames river, in London, England, has been pulled down and rebuilt six times.

"You're a fool when it comes to looking ahead, Hahn. You always were," answered Pillsoll. "Keith—the old man—is too big a fish to monkey with. Got too many pulls and connections. He'd have the whole country out and the trick played up big in every dinky newspaper. We've got one fish—of will have—no sense straining the net. We don't want the kid. Let him string along back best way he can. We'll get all the start we need. What else would you do with him?"

"Stow him away somewhere and send a tip where they can find him in a day or two."

Pillsoll shot a look of contempt at Butch, making the proposal. "You and Hahn make a good team," he said. "No. One's enough. He may get lost—we'll take his horse—and that won't be our fault. He may make Three Star late this afternoon. I wish I could be with him when he tells what he knows. Time they locate the Hideout, we'll be miles away through the south end and they'll have one h—l of a time trailing us over the rocks. The horses can stay in the park. If we put this deal over right we don't need to bother about horse-trading. We can get clean out of the country with a big stake, go down to South America and start up a place. There are live times and good plays down there, boys. All right, Cookie, we're coming. I'm going to take another look. It's ten to one they're making for Deaver Dam lake—on a picnic."

He laughed and the two laughed with him as he went for his survey and returned, announcing that the girl and her escort were entering the ravine at the other end. "They didn't recognize us," he said. "We've got to take Cookie into this. You and Butch ride on through the trees a ways, Hahn, till you get back of them. Then we'll get 'em between us. I'll wise Cookie up to what we are doing."

It was more than doubtful whether the three ever intended for a second to allow Cookie to share in the ransom money, but Pillsoll easily persuaded him that it would be foolish to let all the riders into the pot.

"She's Molly Casey of the Casey mine," he told him. "Sandy Bourke's her guardian. We'll make him come through with twenty or thirty thousand, safe? But there ain't enough to go all round and make a showing."

Cookie was a willing rascal and a natural adept at the double-cross. He raised no objections and the trap was set and sprung.

"You go ahead, Cookie, and open up the gate," said Pillsoll. Hahn and Butch were speeding Donald Keith on his way with close-range bullets. "I'm going to have a little private talk with this lady. Go to the cabin and get some grub ready. There's plenty there. Spread yourself. We'll be along in a little while. That was a nice job of roping you did. I won't forget it."

"Alius e'ud lass' fair to middlin'," grinned the man through yellow, stumpy teeth. "That's why I tote a rope. An I sure had a purty target."

Pillsoll scowled at him and he rode off. Molly, the larlet twisted about her upper body from shoulders to waist, constricting her arms, fastened where she could not reach it, by a hitch, sat on. Blaze, looking with steady contempt at Pillsoll, who held her bridle rein. He regarded her with sleek complacency and then his eyes slowly traveled over her rounded figure, accentuated by her riding tregery.

"Grown to be quite a beauty, quite a woman, Molly, my dear," he said.

"Grown to Be Quite a Beauty, Quite a Woman, Molly, My Dear," He Said.

"Never should have suspected you'd turn out such a wonder. Clothes make the woman, but it takes a proper figure to set them off. And you've got all of that."

"What are you going to do with me?" she asked.

"I'm not going to tell you—yet. It depends upon circumstances, my dear. We'll have a little chat after lunch. I'd take that rope off if I wasn't afraid I might lose you. You are quite precious."

She looked through him as if he had been a sheet of glass. From her first sight of him, back in childhood, she had known instinctively the man was evil. But she was not afraid. The blood that ran in her veins was pure and bore in its crimson flood the sturdy heritage of pioneers who had outlasted dangers of death and torture. She was all Westerner. The blood was fighting blood. She felt it urged in her pulses while her brain bade her bide her time. Rage mounted as she faced the possible issues of this capture, the flaunting dismissal of young Keith. She heard the laughter that followed the rifle shots and surmised that they were having their idea of a joke with the lad.

If he got back—then Sandy would come after her. She was very sure of Sandy and that he would find her. Until he did she must use her wits.

And Grit, gallant Grit, wounded and lying in the chaparral!

Though she still gazed through Pillsoll rather than at him, the scorn showed in her eyes and bit through his assumption of ease as acid bites through skin, eating its way on. He burned to wipe out his own trickeries, his cowardice, his failures, to wreak a vile satisfaction on this girl who sat so disdainfully, with her chin lifted, her lips firm, oblivious of him. She baffled him. A mind like Pillsoll's never had the clarity of prevision to see the strength of character that had been in the prospector's child, even as he had never suspected her unfolding to beauty. It roused the vandal in him—he longed to break her, mar her.

The return of Butch and Hahn brought him back to the fact that he was not playing this deal alone. While they might allow him some personal license, to them the girl represented so much money.

He cut short Butch's boast of the way they had scared young Keith. Both Hahn and Parsons felt a coil of embarrassment at the silence, almost the serenity, of their captive. They had expected her to act far differently, to rage, threaten, cry out. She almost abashed them.

"See if you can round up that d—n dog, Butch," said Pillsoll. "I plugged him but we want to be sure he don't get away. He might help Keith's kid, for one thing. And he clamped my arm."

Parsons rode into the chaparral until he was barred by its thickness, trying to stir out the dog, without success.

"Dead, I reckon," he reported. "Crawled in somewhere. You hit him hard, Plim. Plenty blood on the leaves."

Molly bit her lips and paled a little, but turned away her head so that they could not see. She winked back the tears that came to her thought of Grit helpless, panting, bleeding.

They rode on up the rocky ravine. Presently they turned aside from the stony trail. To one side appeared a narrow opening, unseen from below by the curve of the great rock, just wide enough to admit horse and rider. A few feet in, they halted, and Pillsoll turned in his saddle while the other three men dismounted and carefully adjusted several rock fragments in the opening, piling them with a swift care that showed familiarity with their task, so placing them that they appeared as if a part of the wall.

Below them, Molly saw the hidden park that lay so snugly back of the better walls. It was an irregular oval that appeared to curve at the far end. The trail down was plainly marked. It forked after they reached the general level and the branch they took led into a side gulch where a log cabin stood, smoke coming from its chimney. Pillsoll took the rein of Blaze again and they broke into a canter. At the cabin Pillsoll took Molly from the saddle and carried her into the rude interior. There he set her on a chair. Cookie was busy at a stove frying ham and eggs, with coffee sizzling.

"You'd better sit up and eat nicely, my dear," said Pillsoll as he unbound her. "You'll have to sooner or later, you know. No sense in being stubborn."

She said nothing but he saw a gleam in her eyes as she glanced toward the table where Hahn was setting out plates and cutlery.

"You'll eat with a fork, Molly," said Pillsoll. "Those steel knives are too handy for you. There's a nasty look in those blue eyes of yours that will have to be tamed—have to be tamed," he repeated as he took a demijohn from a corner and poured out a liquor that sent the reek of its raw strength sickeningly through the cabin. "Here's to your health, Molly—Molly Mine!"

The others laughed and drank their share before they ate the food that Cookie placed before them, talking louder, growing flushed with the crude whisky, while Molly sat facing the door, striving to catch something that might help, might give some clue. But the talk was all of the brawl at the Waterline with contemptuous mention of Wyatt and the rest. They seemed by common consent to ignore her once she had refused the food.

This attitude weakened her resistance though she strove against it. She had nerved herself to meet action. Now she seemed to count for little more than a bundle, of more or less value, that, having been secured, could wait its time for utility. Yet, before she had telescoped her vision to extend through and beyond Pillsoll, she had seen devils looking from his eyes, smug devils, but none the less menacing, risen from the man's own private hell pit.

Pillsoll looked at his watch. "The horses should be showing up pretty soon," he said and rose, a little unsteadily. The effects of the liquor were patent on all of them. "Butch, you and Hahn go down with Cookie and keep 'em down at the south end. Get 'em to turn the horses loose. And get them out of the place as soon as you can after they've eaten. Better take what stuff you want, Cookie."

"Keep your eyes peeled on Cookie," Pillsoll said in a lower voice as the ranch chef went out of the door with his arms piled with provisions. "He might take a notion to talk too much."

"Where are you going to stow her?" asked Hahn. "Leave her here in Split Rock cave?"

The callous reference to her as if she was something inanimate chilled Molly. If only she had a gun! She had laughed at Donald's tenderfoot insistence upon carrying the one he had brought West as a part of his outfit and had never attempted to use. The cook's too well thrown rope would have probably thwarted any move of hers if she had had a weapon. Her fingers crept up toward her throat touching a slender chain upon which, ever since she had returned to the Three Star, hung a gold disk, the coin with which Sandy had gambled, the luck-piece. To Molly, even now, it was a talisman that held promise. If they lay her behind them, somehow Sandy would unearth her. But that hope died.

"She'll stay in sight and touch," said Pillsoll. "Then we'll know she's safe. We'll make Windy gulch tonight and stay there. It's as good a place as I know. One of us can ride over the mountain to Redding and mail the letter."

Butch nodded. "Come on, Hahn," he said. "Let's leave 'em together."

Molly cast an involuntary glance at the opening door, watched it close after the pair of blackguards and braced herself. The issue was in hand.

Pillsoll slid a bolt on the door, brought over one of the makeshift chairs and placed it in front of Molly, seating himself. His alcohol-laden breath reached her nauseatingly and she turned her head aside. As if a trigger had been released Pillsoll's face became inflamed with a passionate fury.

"D—n you!" he said. "Don't you turn your head away from me. I'll train you to better manners before I'm through with you. You'll be jumping to do what you think I want you to before long. You'll be begging me for favors. You may think you're too good for me now. You won't presently."

She saw that she had gone too far in her disdain; that she must try to leash the devils that had broken loose in his brain.

"Just what do you want?" she asked, and her voice seemed not to belong to her as she uttered the words that shored no tremor.

"You! Not for love, my beauty! Because you are good to look at—yes. But I'll take my time. I'll sip at the dish, my dear. I've got a big score to settle and I'll do it properly. We'll go over some of the items."

He got up and emptied a bottle that still held a generous measure. He staggered slightly and fumbled the chair as he sat down again. Molly watched him intently. If only he got sufficiently drunk. Before the rest came back. Perhaps she could get his own gun? Pillsoll laid a familiar finger on her knee and instantly his breathing showed in her eyes. He laughed.

"Using that busy little brain of yours, eh? Figurin' I'll get drunk. Nothin' doin', my dear. I made that booze and I know just how it treats me, sabs? Now, then."

"Your guardian angel Sandy chisled me out of my share in the Molly mine belongin' to me 'count of grub stakin' your father."

"That's a lie."

"That's easy to say when it nets you a fortune. Easy to go back on a dead man's agreement. Four-flushing Sandy Bourke . . ."

Molly suddenly slipped back into the primitive. Something seemed to click and the refinement she had learned and used so far fell like a cloak that is dropped for freedom in battle. With the malignment of Sand and her father she was Molly Casey, daughter of a desert rat, once more.

"That's another d—n lie," she said. "Haven't forgotten how to swear, have you?"

"I've heard how Sandy Bourke chased your rotten-hearted jumpers out of the claim and gave you until sundown to sneak out of town. I've heard how you were afraid to look at him through the smoke but went galloping off while the whole camp laughed at you. Sandy a four-flusher! A coyote'll fight when it's cornered, but you . . ."

Pillsoll grew slowly livid. "Heard all about it did you?" he said slowly.

"Then you know some of the score. And I can wipe off what I owe Sandy Bourke through you. And there are more items. There was the first time we met. I haven't forgotten that. There was the kiss you said you tried to bite out after you'd burned the doll I gave you. You told about that the next time I kissed you in the hammock at Three Star. You tried to rub out that kiss, too. Maybe the next ones will stay put."

"That was the time Mormon man-handled you." She saw the blue snakes crawl on his purpling skin, and she kept her eyes on them, though her mental vision was on the holster beneath his vest. She deliberately taunted him to provoke him to an uncalculated move. Molly knew her own litheness, her strength. If she could get inside his arms, if even to endure a moment of his beastly embrace, and could get a grip on the gun?

But there was something in Pillsoll that delighted in playing with a victim he felt sure of. It soothed his broken vanity.

"So," he said, "I'm going to get even with Sandy and with Mormon and that bow-legged fool Sam Manning, who call you the Mascot of the Three Star, all at once; while I get even with you. And get what should have been mine at the same time. We'll have you tucked away while we mail the letter that will bring your ransom. Never mind the details of handling the money. I'll attend to that. But we'll bleed you dry. The price of all your stock and that of the three suckers at the Three Star at par—and all they can borrow on the ranch—that will be the price for you, my lady. With three days to deliver in."

"You talk like a crazy man, or a drunken one. If you lay a finger on me they'll trail you to h—l, Jim Pillsoll, and the devil himself won't stop them from skinning you alive."

Pillsoll shrugged his shoulders, but his eyes flickered and for a second his cowardly soul shrank.

"I'll look out for that," he said. "If you are delivered back to them as damaged goods they'll never know it till you tell them. Maybe you won't be over-anxious to do that." His eyes grew moody, his manner sullen. He was passing into another alcoholic phase. Molly sensed imminent danger.

"I'll take those kisses now," he cried, and lunged for her, catching her about the waist as she rose from the chair. "And more to boot," he added thickly as he drew her to him, one hand at the back of her head, fingers twining in her hair, twisting her face forward, upward. She had both arms inside of his, her hands on his chest. With all her strength she strained and pushed away, her right hand slid up to the holster, groping hard for the gun. Pillsoll had released it during the meal and left it on the table. His breath sickened her. She got her arm clear and struck him viciously on the mouth, breaking the lips against his teeth. Fighting like a cave-woman, she scored his cheek with nails that dug deep from the corner of his eyelid and brought the blood. As she shifted his hold she wrenched loose, leaving strands of brown hair in his fingers, and jumped for the door. In her spring she saw, too late, the pistol on the table. She drew the bolt, half opening the door before he caught her and dragged her back again.

"You wident," he panted. "I'll fix you."

Like a panther Molly fought, matching her young muscles against his, striking, clawing, biting. Her riding coat ripped, the neck of her waist was torn away. Maddened at her resistance, he struck back. Once he got her about the throat, but her fingers were at his face, tearing at his eyes and he had to beat her off.

The girl fought with all the sublimated despair of attacked womanhood, the man like a gorilla. The struggle was unequal, with more than forty pounds in favor of Pillsoll, though if Molly had possessed the pinkest of weapons, she might have won. He held her at last, close to him, one arm wrapped about her, his right hand forcing the heel of the palm under her tucked-in chin, slowly, inexorably forcing it back while his breathing, distorted face lowered. This time her arms were locked in, bent double, useless. Her kicks were futile; she had only her teeth left and she was going to try those. But she knew her strength sapped, knew in another moment or two she would be at the mercy of this brute who did not know the meaning of the word.

A shadow barred the half-open door, low down. A pointed head appeared with blinding eyes, with a neck-ruff flaring high. White teeth showed as red gums bared in hate, and, forgetting the wounded leg that had held him back, Grit hurled himself in a staggering but magnificent leap. He could not reach Pillsoll's throat, he had lost much momentum through the damaged leg, he lacked power from loss of blood, but fury gave him strength for the spring that brought his teeth within reach of Pillsoll's right wrist, exposed; the cuff half-way up the forearm. Grit's teeth slashed like chisels, ripping through flesh, tendon and artery, sending jets of blood spurting before Pillsoll, with a yell of surprise and consternation, flung Molly into a corner, dazed and weak, and threw up his left forearm to guard against the dog's second leap.

It fell short. Pillsoll's right hand, scattering blood, groped blindly for the gun on the table behind him. He found the barrel and brought the heavy butt down with a crash on Grit's head, back of the ear. The dog dropped like a length of chain. Pillsoll kicked the body viciously, taking the bandanna from his neck and tying it tight about his wrist, fastening the knots with his teeth. With a look at Molly, crumpled unconscious in the corner, he sought for more liquor, found it and poured himself a big jorum, gulping it down while the blood dripped heavily from the bandage. He was soggy with shock and fatigue, the strong stuff half paralyzed his faculties and he dropped into a chair, gazing stupidly at his wrist.

His imagination was a curse to him. He had seen Grit's slavering jaws as they rose in the leap, the crimson glare in his eyes. To all intents the dog was mad. It had been lying wounded in the sun. Only madness could have given it strength to track so far. What if it meant lockjaw—hydrophobia.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR. Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre At Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients in a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys. Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent Rhia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

TURKS TO FIRE ON ALLY SHIPS

Constantinople—The Turkish government Thursday officially notified the Allies that ships are prohibited from approaching the Turkish coast after sundown. The Turkish outposts are instructed to fire upon ships violating this order.

The Allies officially have informed the Turks that diplomatic representations have been made to Athens to prevent the Greeks from carrying out their threats.

However, the Turks do not expect great effects from the allied protest to Athens, remembering that the Greek leaders ignored the allied appeals to save the lives of the former ministers.

Lausanne—M. Venizelos grimly notified the Allied delegates that Greece is withdrawing from the conference, resuming liberty of action, unless given satisfaction.

By liberty of action the Greek leader means the army will march upon eastern Thrace and Constantinople.

What the military government of Greece demands is that the Turkish claims of reparations on account of the devastation done during the Greek retreat in Anatolia be entirely withdrawn or cancelled against the Greek claims, and that this understanding be inscribed in the treaty before the conference continues further.

In face of the gathering war clouds the allied delegates at Lausanne have absolutely failed to reach a solution and the two opponents are further apart than ever before.

The question is now in the hands of the governments, who are putting pressure on Athens.

The conference has also practically broken down on four other major questions which remain to be settled. The Turks firmly refuse to give up the island of Castellorize to Italy, who refuses to make peace without getting the island.

Communists Outbreaks Spread Over Occupied Territory.

Gelsenkirchen, Germany—A red wave of terror, sweeping over the Ruhr with increasing fury Sunday, had resulted in 25 killed, innumerable wounded and a huge property loss.

Strikes are spreading feverishly through Gelsenkirchen, Bochum, Dortmund and Essen—the heart of Germany's industry.

Disorders are reported in increasing numbers in villages and towns throughout the region occupied by French forces.

Municipal authorities only succeeded in aggravating the situation with their small police and fire forces. The force of defenders is too small to quell marauding bands who are stalking through the district looting stores and pillaging.

Deserted mine pits are flooding. It is estimated that more than 300,000 former workers are idle or have joined the Communists.

RED DEATH WAVE SWEEPS RUHR

SOVIET YIELDS TO ULTIMATUM

Concedes Most Demands of British in Second Reply.

London—Soviet Russia's second reply to the British ultimatum accepts the majority of the British demands, and suggests the holding of a conference to consider points in dispute.

The soviet expresses readiness to conclude forthwith an agreement granting British citizens the right to fish outside the three-mile limit of the Russian coasts, pending settlement by an international convention of the dispute over the extent of territorial waters.

Diplomatic circles continue their attitude of extreme reserve regarding the ultimate outcome of the present controversy between Great Britain and Soviet Russia declaring the decision rests with Moscow.

In other quarters the predictions are about equally divided between a break and continuance of relations.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Flint—Loomis Remington, 86 years old, Civil war veteran and pioneer of Swartz Creek nine miles from Flint, is dead.

Iron Mountain—Mrs. Hilda Franz was the first woman in Schoolcraft County to apply for citizenship papers. She appeared last week before the court with 11 men who also want to be naturalized.

Lansing—The legislature adjourned last week, with no incident other than the discussion among the few members present and state officials of the prospects of a special session in the near future.

Ann Arbor—James S. Gorman, 73 years old, who died in a Sanitarium, last week, was, until a year ago, a resident of Chelsea, 15 miles from here, and a prominent figure in politics in Washtenaw county.

Royal Oak—At sunrise Memorial Day while thousands of persons were preparing to honor the country's soldier dead, Dr. Pirman W. Clawson, a veteran of the Civil war who had passed the 82d anniversary of his birth, died in his home here.

Benzon—The annual old settler picnic will be held at Old Mission June 22, when pioneers from all parts of northern Michigan will attend. Old Mission was the place where the first white settlement was made in the Grand Traverse region.

Lansing—Lansing high school will graduate a class of 178 this June, according to a report made to the board of education. This class, with the graduating class of February, brings the total number of students graduating during the current year to 295.

Milan—Fred E. Fulkerson, 47 years old, a member of the village council, was killed last week, at the Ideal Furnace factory, when he was caught in the freight elevator. Fellow workmen left him alone for a few minutes and when they returned he was hanging dead.

Grand Rapids—A 20-acre tourists' camp site, adjacent to the Reed's Lake boulevard, owned by the city of East Grand Rapids and occupying a strip of water front around the lake, will be acquired this summer by popular subscription. It has been announced by the allied improvement association.

Lansing—The state administrative board last week referred plans for the new athletic stadium at the Michigan Agricultural college to its building committee, with authority to accept plans and make arrangements with the college for the advancement of money in the shape of a loan, as authorized by the legislature.

Pontiac—Harvey Scribner, 15 years old, was instantly killed in Armada last week when he climbed one of the new poles of the Edison company, not knowing the current had been turned on, and came in contact with a high tension wire. The boy was an orphan and made his home with his sister, Mrs. Ashley Smith.

Blowing Trouble.
Fable: Once upon a time there was a married lady, who never liked to give advice to her husband as to how to drive their car.—Detroit Free Press.

Ironwood—Forest fires were raging last week in Vilas county, Wisconsin, and Gogebic county, Michigan, large areas of cut-over land were burned and the spreading flames threatened valuable timber tracts between Lac Vieux desert and Watersmeet. Hot ashes fell in those towns, which are several miles from the scene of the fires.

Kalamazoo—Preliminary plans were made here last week for the launching next year of a campaign to raise $500,000 in Michigan for the support of the 90 or more superannuated ministers and their widows in the Michigan Methodist Conference. The Rev. W. T. Puffer, of this city, was made chairman of the committee which will have charge of the campaign.

Detroit—John R. Sneathen, 35 years old, manager of the Shaw-Walker company, plunged to his death from the twenty-second story of the Dime Bank building last week, striking the roof of the Peninsular bank building, and though thousands of persons swarmed the streets in the heart of the financial district, where the tragedy occurred only one man was a witness.

Ironwood—Judge Landis has definitely consented to speak at the Michigan state convention of the American Legion here next August, according to word received here. Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, will be here and General Pershing will come providing he is in the middle west when the convention convenes. Governors of three states have been invited to take part in the big program.

Bay City—If the Detroit Trust Co., receiver of the Detroit, Bay City and Western Railroad, is permitted to discontinue the operation of this road, and that seems probable now, for the bond holders refuse to furnish any funds for further operation and the receiver has no means of providing the money to keep the road going at a loss, business men, chiefly elevator owners along the road, stand to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars, for without railroad service their elevators and hay sheds will be of little value.

Detroit—Maj. Gen. William G. Haan, U. S. A., former commander of the 32nd ("Red Arrow") Division, decorated Brig. Gen. Edward G. Heckler, former commander of the 125th Infantry, with the Distinguished Service Medal last week. The ceremony which took place at Belle Isle was witnessed by Detroit units of the National Guard and the Organized Reserves took part in the ceremony.

South Branch—An underground lake covering more than an acre has been investigated, following the collapse last week, of a stretch of country road 100 yards in length, just south of here. The section of road sank suddenly a few days ago and last week totally disappeared, being replaced by the lake, several feet below the level of the surrounding country. Sounding at one section of the lake showed it to be 36 feet deep.

Lansing—Word was received here of the death last week of Egbert Ingersoll, centenarian, and one of the earliest pioneer residents of Lansing, at Los Angeles, Cal., where he was visiting a nephew, Luther Ingersoll. Ingersoll settled in Delta township in 1836 and for 75 years lived in the vicinity of Lansing. He installed the first electric power plant in Lansing. He was government detective during the Civil war and was one of the party that captured John Wilkes Booth. Ingersoll would have been 1st of this year.

Hart—Ted Dayharsh, 17 years old, eldest son of Postmaster I. B. Dayharsh, last week passed the Annapolis naval academy examination with an average of 347.

Muskegon—Henry A. Bauknecht, of Muskegon, has been elected president of the Michigan-Ohio-Indiana Coal association. His election was announced following the recent convention at Cincinnati.

Kalamazoo—M. Garrison, of Grand Rapids, engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, may lose the sight of one eye as the result of being struck by a missile thrown by boys who stoned his freight train last week as it pulled into this city.

Ann Arbor—Six nurses were graduated from St. Joseph Mercy training school here last week. They are: Clara Smith, Dowagiac; Mary Trader, Detroit; Alice Murphy, Chelsea; Florence Carven, Ypsilanti; Veronica Ledwige, Dexter.

Iron Mountain—A county health center may be established in this city as the result of a visit last week of Mrs. Alta Fulcher, Detroit, organizer representing the state department of health. A joint meeting of the various towns will be held here soon.

Owosso—A loss estimated at $10,000 was suffered last week by Frank Bonsor, Middlebury township farmer, when fire destroyed all his buildings except his house. Bonsor was seriously burned while trying to release cattle from the basement of a burning barn.

Albion—The student senate of Albion college elected the following officers for the first semester of next year: President, Max McKone, Jackson; vice-president, Miss Elizabeth Blair, Albion; secretary, Miss Anna Nye, Lansing; treasurer, Miss Lillian Moynes, Detroit.

East Lansing—More than 250 students will receive diplomas from Michigan Agricultural college here at the graduation exercises next month. Diplomas will be granted to those finishing the agricultural, home economics, engineering, forestry, science and veterinary science courses.

Flint—Closing of the Smith, Bridgman & Co. department store, after being operated at the same stand for 61 years, was marked by a unique event when Mrs. Mary Smith, 89 years old, who made the first purchase when the store was opened in 1862, also made the last purchase.

River Rouge—Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Bishop of Detroit, assisted by half a dozen priests from Wayne county parishes, last week laid the cornerstone of the new Roman Catholic church at River Rouge. A great crowd was at the ceremonies, which were preceded with a reception to the bishop.

Lansing—Richard, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen D. Shook, died in the chair in a local dentist's office here last week as his baby teeth were being removed. The Shook family physician had administered an anesthetic and the dentist had pulled only two teeth when the boy sank into the chair lifeless.

Bessemer—The iron mines of the Gogebic range still are handicapped in shipping ore by the ice fields in Lake Superior. Practically all the ore shipped from this range goes through Ashland and volume of ore shipped from the range is dependent directly upon the rapidity with which the ore boats move on the lake.
