Johnson Gets No Hit; No Run

East Jordan Wins Exciting Game from Pellston 1 to 0.

East Jordan's Base Ball team defeated Pellston on the grounds here last Sunday by the close score of 1 to 0. C. Johnson, hurling for East Jordan, was in fine form and pitched a no-hit, no run game.

Miller pitching for Pellston was effective but lacked the support that East Jordan's team gave their pitcher.

The game was everything that a base ball fan could desire. It was a pitcher's battle throughout, Johnson winning the enviable record of a no-hit, no run game, while Miller was touched by our boys for four hits.

The contest was a blank until the last half of the sixth when two out a fumbled ball by Pellston, followed by a clean hit by Sam Kamradt, sent the one and winning run across.

Another one for us—

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY WINS PENNANT AT WESTERN STATE NORMAL

Tuesday, July 19, Charlevoix County assembled at the annual Rural Seminar Picnic, and walked away with the First Prize. The nineteen counties represented at Western State Normal were all diligently working to produce the most original costumes and songs which were displayed at the picnic.

Charlevoix County won the hearts of the judges completely. The girls all wore white costumes with blue ties and white caps with Charlevoix printed on them, in blue letters. A May Pole draped with streamers and carried by the group, effectively carried out the blue and white color scheme.

At special assembly, the following Tuesday, Charlevoix was awarded with a beautiful brown and gold pennant, which will be displayed at the Charlevoix County Normal. The towns represented were:—East Jordan, 10 students. Charlevoix, 3 students. Boyne City 3 students.

GOING TO BE MARRIED? HERE'S YOUR CHANCE

If you are contemplating marriage or would like to be married in real style with flower girls, ring bearers, attendants and all the trimmings, here is your chance.

The Charlevoix County Agricultural Society want some couple to take the vows of matrimony before the large crowd at the Charlevoix County Fair at East Jordan on Thursday afternoon, September 13th.

For whoever accepts the opportunity the society will not only furnish the minister and complete arrangements, but will also make the couple a present of many valuable wedding gifts. Send in your names to Secretary Frank F. Bird, Charlevoix. They will be held in strict confidence.

County Wide Pig Club

Thirty-Six Pure Bred Pigs Gets New Homes.

The much talked of pig club which so many boys and girls in the County have been waiting to get into is now another completed project.

Tuesday July 24 was pig club day at the Loeb Farms. The pig club members with their parents and several of their friends were there in full array each anxious to get a squirt at the pigs which were to be put out as the foundation stock for a county wide Pure-bred pig club.

The Loeb Farms are cooperating with the County Farm Bureau in this fine piece of extension work and are putting these pigs out on a contract which is principally as follows:

A boy or girl takes a pig, keeps in until breeding time, takes it back to Loeb Farms to be bred and then cares for the pig until she farrows when these little pigs are approximately three months old the pig club members give one of the litter back to the Loeb Farms in place of the one he or she got at the start. Following this Loeb may buy a half of the remaining litter at market price plus a dollar a month for each month the pig is old.

This makes a very liberal contract and as no money is involved it affords an excellent opportunity to get a lot of pure bred stock throughout the county.

When one stops to consider what thirty-six pure bred pigs through out the county will mean in a few years to the pure-bred pig population it is easy to see the value of this type of extension work. It is also advocated that in order to keep the boy on the farm we must get him to like agriculture before he form his prejudices against it. It is hoped that this pure-bred pig club will have some effect this way also.

The days events were started off in the forenoon by tours of inspection by the youngsters and their parents throughout the barns and the place in general.

A basket picnic dinner was served, the Loeb Farms furnishing some of their good Holstein Milk and a few other goodies. After lunch there was a short program followed by the children drawing numbers for their pigs. Each pig was numbered and a corresponding number was written on a piece of paper, put in a hat, mixed up and then the number a boy or girl drew out of the hat was the number of the pig which was to be his or hers.

Words cannot picture the excitement which raged as this was going on. As soon as youngster got his number, off he went to the pig pen to find his pig. Shouts of "OH, there it is," "Here it mine," etc. were heard above the agreeable comments of the pigs exemplified by their vigorous squealing.

At last the pigs were all located, loaded in their respective conveyances, and the procession of new stock owners many of whom will be the future farmers of Charlevoix County ready to start on their way homeward, each the proud possessor of a pure-bred Puroc Jersey Gilt.

Following is a list of names of the boys and girls getting pigs.

East Jordan Takes Great Forward Step

Elimination of Unsightly Wires and Poles and Installation of Boulevard Lighting System Is Assured.

The City Council and Mayor Dicken have been working for over a year to bring about changes on our main thoroughfare, that means much to our city as a whole. This work consists of the elimination of unsightly telephone and electric light poles and wires from parts of Main and State streets and the installation of a boulevard lighting system.

Contract agreements call for the removal of all telephone and electric light wires on Main street from Division street south to State street and on State street from the bridge east to Third street, and the establishment of a boulevard lighting system.

Under the agreement entered into, East Jordan is to pay one-half the expense of this improvement, the City to own the boulevard lighting system and fixtures.

The Johns Construction Co. have been employed to make the alterations for the electric light system and already the standards and fixtures for the boulevard lights as well as several rolls of cables are on the ground. This work will start in the very near future.

The Michigan State Telephone Co. will have a large crew of men here by Sept. 1st, and the work of moving their poles and wires to the alleys will then start.

When this work is completed East Jordan will have a main thoroughfare that our citizens may well feel proud of. At present the entanglement of wires and unsightly poles is far from a thing of beauty and gives the visitor to our little city a mighty bad first impression.

Not alone is the entanglement of wires unsightly, but they are an actual menace to safety. Particularly is this true when a heavy storm is prevalent and people are continually passing under swinging electric wires that are heavily charged.

Many of the cross-street wires are swung low and at present present a serious obstacle to a vehicle that is any wise loaded high. In the past we have never attempted a parade with floats but what these cross-wires were forever in the way.

Among our forward looking citizens the above change has been considered for many years and our present city administration is to be commended on bringing about this long-looked-for highly important improvement.

Muskegon—Edgar Newbitt, alias Edward Nelson, sentenced from Grand Rapids last January to the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia to serve from two to five years for larceny, was captured here, after having escaped two months ago. He had been working in Milwaukee and came to Muskegon, his former home, to spend his vacation.

Iron Mountain—The sum of $40,000 was saved last year in the municipal utilities of Escanaba, according to the annual report of Fred Harris, city manager. The city owns its own electric light and power system, gas plant and water works. The rates of these utilities to the consumer have been reduced as follows: Electric light, 28 per cent; gas, 15 per cent and water, 15 per cent.

A note is something that is made so it can be renewed.

Olivet—Plans are under way for an extension course in music to be offered by Olivet college during the coming year.

Sturgis—The funeral of Thomas J. Collins, 68 years old, last village president and first mayor of Sturgis, was held here last week.

Kalamazoo—Sixty-six counties of Michigan, 13 states outside of Michigan, and Toronto, Ont., are represented in the summer term enrollment at Western State Normal school which has reached 1,327.

Boyne City—While preaching at the Free Methodist church, Henry Toonder, 80 years old, was overcome by a stroke of apoplexy and died almost instantly. He was a native of Holland and had lived in this vicinity nearly all his life.

Holland—More than one million chicks will be shipped through the Holland postoffice by parcel port from the 40 hatcheries in this section during the season. The season will close in about three weeks. One week 125,000 chicks were handled at the local office.

Pontiac—Emerson G. Brown, a tree surgeon, was trimming a tree near Silver Lake when his foot slipped. To avoid falling to the ground Brown grabbed a wire that ran close to the tree. It was a high tension wire and Brown was so severely burned that he may not recover.

Port Huron—State Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers, entered an agreement with Macomb county for the construction of 4 1/2 miles of 20-foot pavement on the Gratiot turnpike, to fill the only remaining gap between Detroit and Port Huron. The work will be done by the county, the state to share the expense.

Charlotte—The Granges of the Fifth Regional District, including Calhoun, Ingham, Barry and Eaton counties, held a joint meeting here last week. John A. McSparran, master of the Pennsylvania State Grange, was the chief speaker. A. B. Cook, of Owosso, master of the Michigan State Grange, and other State Grange officers also spoke.

Strange, but a snappy salesman doesn't dare to be.

Increase Present Low Yield of Milk

Selection, Feeding and Breeding Would Double Average Production.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It has been estimated that the average dairy cow in this country produces yearly about 4,000 pounds of milk containing about 100 pounds of butterfat. Selection, feeding and breeding, says the United States Department of Agriculture, could double this low average. Doubling the present average production would make it possible to furnish the present supply of dairy products with fewer cows and at a much less cost.

Average Income.

A study of yearly butterfat and income records of 18,014 cow-testing association cows for the period 1910 to 1920 showed that the cows giving 100 pounds of butterfat a year produced an average income for the farmer above feed cost of about $10; at 200 pounds of butterfat a year the income above feed cost averaged about $42; at 300 pounds a year the income averaged about $72; and at 400 pounds of butterfat the average income was about $106 a year per cow. While the cows in the last class averaged four times as much in production as those in the first class, they gave an average income over cost of feed that was more than ten times as great. A tabulation of the records of dairy cows from those districts where the product was sold as milk showed similar results. In all cases the high-producing groups were the profitable producers from the standpoint of income over cost of feed.

Largest Gains Obtained.

The groups of high-producing cows were also the groups that produced milk and butterfat economically from the standpoint of cost of feed per pound of butterfat or per 100 pounds of milk. As production increased from the lowest-producing to the highest-producing groups, the feed cost per unit of production went down, rapidly at first, but more slowly as production reached a high average. In the economical production of milk and butterfat, the largest gains are to be obtained through the culling out of those cows that produce less than 4,000 pounds of milk, containing less than 100 pounds of butterfat.

Small Fruits Bring Best Price When Well Handled

It is considered advisable to pick strawberries, raspberries and other small fruits, as far as possible, in the cooler part of the day, early morning being preferable, says R. A. McGinty of the Colorado Agricultural college. "As soon as picked, the berries should be carried into a cellar or at least into the shade where they will remain as cool as possible. They should not be left where the sun will shine upon them, as, after such exposure, they will not stand up as well in shipping and marketing as when properly handled. When subjected to heat, decomposition processes set in and the berries are soon unfit for use.

"Grading and packing should be done in a cool place. The best growers find that it pays to do a certain amount of grading even with these fruits. All deformed or over-ripe berries, or foreign material of any kind should be removed. Attention to this improves not only the appearance of the berries, which is important, but affects their keeping qualities as well. "Improvement of appearance is also obtained by facing the top layer of berries in each box so that they will present their best side.

"Good berries, properly handled and neatly packed in attractive containers, rarely fail to bring a good price, and please the customer who gets them."

Sudan Grass Is Superior to Many Other Grasses

Because of its ability to withstand drought and hot weather during the summer months sudan grass is superior to other grasses and has attained popularity as a summer pasture crop. It furnishes good pasture for cattle, horses, sheep, and hogs. It is not advisable to start pasturing until the crop is about a foot high so that the crop can become firmly rooted in order to stand tramping and pulling.

Oilers Tend to Lessen Spread of Many Insects

Hog oilers should not be depended upon to eradicate lice and mange or to prevent losses from gross infestation, but they tend to lessen the spread of the mange mites and lice which kept supplied with oil and hog working condition and when the hogs use them. When a hog wants to rub it does so against the handiest object and does not go to the rubbing post or oiler unless it is the handiest thing around.

Give Liberal Allowance of Feed to Work Horses

Work horses need a liberal allowance of feed. Oats are more than acceptable, but if corn, kafir or barley is used, horses will stay in better condition if they can be furnished with a small allowance of wheat bran. Bran not only is a good conditioner but it also furnishes protein and mineral matter which the horse needs.

Lansing—A special report submitted to L. Whitney Watkins, state agricultural commissioner, by Verne Church, federal agricultural statistician, forecasts the best apple crop in point of quality, in recent Michigan history. It declares the commercial crop will be larger than last year and the winter crop will be better than the summer harvest. The report was based on a survey from Emmet south to Berrien county, just completed.

River Rouge—The Detroit & Ironton, latest addition to the Ford railroad interests, to be conducted in conjunction with the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton system, is expected to be in full operation by October 1. It is just announced. This new road, the first division to be operated by electric motive power, will run between River Rouge and the D. T. & I. yards north of Flat Rock, a distance of 13 1/4 miles. Power will be furnished from River Rouge.

Kalamazoo—State Representative Chester M. Howell, of Saginaw, was named secretary of the Kalamazoo county fair at a meeting of the committee, held here. The county has been without a fair for several years and the committee recently was named to revive the project. Howell will come to Kalamazoo at once to take charge of arrangements for the exhibits in the fall. The committee announced that $2,500 of the necessary $7,500 guarantee funds already had been raised.

Owosso—Cyrus P. Hall, 88 years old, pioneer railroad man of the country, died at his home here. He took up railroading on the Lake Shore before the Civil war and during the war he carried soldiers to the front and brought back prisoners of war. Hall was fireman on the engine, "George Miner" which won the famous race from Elkhart, Ind. to Chicago, shortly after the Civil war. He joined the Michigan Central some years after the war and drove the first locomotive over the new Lansing-Bay City road.

Ann Arbor—Recent experiments in the laboratory of the physics building in the University of Michigan have resulted in producing the highest temperature ever produced by artificial means, and similar to that believed to be a property of some of the stars. Just what that temperature is is variously estimated at from 25,000 to 30,000 degrees Fahrenheit, and sometimes set as high as 80,000 degrees. To measure it accurately was impossible because the heat was attained and maintained for only the minutest part of a second.

The Branding Iron

By Katharine Newlin Burt

Copyright by Katharine N. Burt

He was bending over the fire, and when he straightened she saw that he held something in his hand—a long bar of metal, white at the shaped end. At once her memory showed her a broad glow of sunset falling over Pierre at work. "There'll be stock all over the country marked with them two bars," he had said. "The Two-Bar brand, don't you forget it!" She was not likely to forget it now.

She shut her eyes. He stepped close to her and jerked her blouse down from her shoulder. She writhed away from him, silent in her rage and fear and fighting dumbly. She made no appeal. At that moment her heart was so full of hatred that it was hardened to pride. He lifted his brand and set it against the bare flesh of her shoulder.

Then terribly she screamed. Again, when he took the metal away, she screamed. Afterward there was a dreadful silence.

Joan had not lost consciousness. Her healthy nerves stanchly received the anguish and the shock, nor did she make any further outcry. She pressed her forehead against the sharp edge of the shelf, she drove her nails into her hands, and at intervals she writhed from head to foot. Circles of pain spread from the deep burn on her shoulder, spread and shrank. The bones of her shoulder and arm ached terribly; fire still seemed to be eating into her flesh. The air was full of the smell of scorched skin so that she tasted it herself. And hotter than her hurt her heart burned, consuming its own tenderness and love and trust.

When this pain left her, when she was free of her bonds, no force nor fear would hold her to Pierre. She would leave him as she had left her father. She would go away. There was no place for her to go to, but what did that matter so long as she might escape from this horrible place and this infernal tormentor? She did not look about to see the actuality of Pierre's silence. She thought that he had dropped the brand and was sitting near the table with his face hidden. How long the stillness of pain and fury and horror lasted there was no one to reckon. It was most strangely broken by a voice. "Who screamed for help?" It said, and at the same instant a draft of icy air smote Joan. The door had opened with suddenness and violence. With difficulty she mastered her pain and turned her head.

Pierre had staggered to his feet. Opposite him, framed against the open door filled with the wan whiteness of the snow, stood a spare, tall figure. The man wore his fur collar turned up about his brow, a sharp aquiline nose stood out above frozen mustaches, keen and brilliant eyes searched the room. He carried his gun across his arm in readiness, and sniffed the air like a suspicious hound. Then he advanced a step toward Pierre.

"What devil's work have you been at?" said he, his voice cutting the ear in its sharpness of astonished rage, and his hand slid down along the handle of his gun.

Pierre, watching him like a lynx, side-stepped, crouched, whipped out his gun and fired. At almost the same second the other's gun went off. Pierre dropped.

This time Joan's nerves gave way and the room, with its smell of scorched flesh, of powder and of frost, went out from her horrified senses. For a moment the stranger's stern face and brilliant eyes made the approaching center of a great cloud of darkness, then it, too, went out.

CHAPTER VII

The Judgment of God.

The man who had entered with such sudden violence upon so violent a scene stood waiting till the smoke of Pierre's discharge had cleared away, then, still holding his gun in readiness, he stepped across the room and bent over the fallen man.

"I've killed him!" he said, just above his breath, and added presently, "That was the judgment of God." He looked about, taking in every detail of the scene, the branding iron that had burnt its mark deep into the boards where Pierre had thrown it down, the glowing fire heaped high and blazing dangerously in the small room, the woman bound and burnt, the white night outside the uncurtained window.

Afterward he went over to the woman, who drooped in her bonds with head hanging backward over the wounded shoulder. He untied the silk scarf and the rope and carried her, still unconscious, into the bedroom, where he laid her on the bed and bathed her face in water. Joan's crowns of hair had fallen about her neck and temples. Her bared throat and shoulder had the firm smoothness of marble, her lifeless face, its pure, full lips fallen apart, its long lids closed, black-fringed and black-browed, owing little of its beauty to color or expression, was at no loss in this deathlike composure and whiteness. The man dealt gently with her as though she had been a child. He found clean rags, which he soaked in oil and placed over her burn, then he drew the coarse clothing about her and resumed his bathing of her forehead.

She gave a moaning sigh, her face contracted woefully, and she opened her eyes. The man looked into them as a curious child might look into an opened door.

"Did you see what happened?" he asked her when she had come fully to herself.

"Yes," Joan whispered, her lips shaking.

"I've killed the brute."

Her face became a classic mask of tragedy, the drawn brows, horrified eyes and widened mouth.

"Pierre? Killed?" Her voice, hardly more than a whisper, filled the house with its agony.

"Are you sorry?" demanded her rescuer sternly. "Was he in the habit of tying you up or was this—branding—a special diversion?"

Joan turned her face away, writhed from head to foot, put up her two hands between him and her agonizing memories.

The man rose and left her, going softly into the next room. There he stood in a tense attitude of thought, sat down presently with his long, narrow jaw in his hands and stared fixedly at Pierre. He was evidently trying to fight down the shock of the spectacle, grimly telling himself to become used to the fact that here lay the body of a man that he had killed.

In a short time he seemed to be successful, his face grew calm. He looked away from Pierre and turned his mind to the woman.

"She can't stay here," he said presently, in the tone of a man to himself. He looked about in a hesitant, doubtful fashion. "G—d!" he said abruptly and snapped his fingers and thumb. He looked angry. Again he bent over Pierre, examined him with thoroughness and science, his face becoming more and more calm. At the end he rose and with an air of authority he went in again to Joan. She lay with her face to the wall.

"It is impossible for you to stay here," said he in a voice of command. "You are not fit to take care of yourself, and I can't stay and take care of you. You must come with me. I think you can manage that. Your husband—if he is your husband—is dead. It may or may not be a matter for sorrow to you, but I should say that it ought not to be anything but a merciful release. Women are queer creatures, though. However, whether you are in grief or in rejoicing, you can't stay here. By tomorrow or next day you'll need more nursing than you do now. I don't want to take you to a neighbor, even if there was one near enough, but I'll take you with me. Will you get ready now?"

His sure, even, commanding voice evidently had a hypnotizing effect upon the dazed girl. Slowly, winching, she stood up, and with his help gathered together some of her belongings, which he put in the pack he carried on his shoulders. She wrapped herself in her warmest outdoor clothing. He then put his hand upon her arm and drew her toward the door of that outer room. She followed him blindly with no will of her own, but, as he stopped to strap on his snowshoes, her face lightened with pain, and she made as if to run to Pierre's body. He stood before her: "Don't touch him," said he, and, turning himself, he glanced back at Pierre. In that glance he saw one of the lean, brown hands stir. His face became suddenly suffused, even his eyes grew shot with blood. Standing carefully so as to obstruct her view, he caught at the corner of an elk hide and threw it over Pierre. Then he went to Joan, who stared at him, white and shaking. He put his arm around her and drew her out, shutting the door of her home and leaning against it.

"You can't go back," said he gently and reasonably. "The man tried to kill you. You can't go back. Surely you mean to go away."

"Yes," said Joan; "yes, I did mean to go away. But—but it's Pierre."

He bent and began to strap on her snowshoes. There was a fighting brilliance in his eyes and a strange look of hurry about him that had its effect on Joan. "It's Pierre no longer," said he. "What can you do for him? What can he do for you? Be sensible, child. Come. Don't waste time. There will be snow today."

Joan bent over her head and followed him across the snow.

CHAPTER VIII

Delirium.

It is not the people that have led still and uneventful lives who are best prepared for emergencies. They are not trained to face crises, to make prompt and just decisions. Joan had made but two such resolutions in her life: the first when she had followed Pierre, the second when she had kept Fittwell's books in defiance of her husband's jealousy. The leaving her father had been the result of long and painful thought. Now, in a few hours, events had crashed about her so that her whole life, outer and inner, had been shattered. Beyond the pain and fever of her wound there was an utter confusion of her faculties. Before she fainted she had, indeed, made a distinct resolve to leave Pierre, delicious coolness, cleanliness, and

"Don't Waste Time. There Will Be Snow Today."

It was this purpose, working subconsciously on her will, as much as the urgent pressure of the stranger, that took her past Pierre's body out into the dawn and sent her on that rash journey of hers in the footsteps of an unknown man. This being seemed to her then hardly human. Mysteriously he had stepped in out of the night, mysteriously he had condemned Pierre, and in self-defense, for Joan had seen Pierre draw his gun and fire, he had killed her husband. Now, just as mysteriously, as an inevitably it seemed to her, he took command of her life. She was a passive, shipwrecked thing—a derelict. She had little thought and no care for her life.

As the silent day slowly brightened through its glare of clouds, she plodded on, setting her snowshoes in the tracks her leader made. The pain in her shoulder steadily increased, more and more absorbed her consciousness. She did not know that they were traveling north and west toward the wildest and most desolate country, that every time she set down her foot she set it down farther from humanity. She began soon to be a little light-headed and thought that she was following Pierre.

At noon they entered the woods, and her guide came behind her and led her through fallen timber and past pitfalls of soft snow. Suddenly, "I can't go no more," she sobbed, and stopped, swaying. At that he took her in his arms and carried her a few hundred feet till they entered a cabin under the shelter of firs.

"It's the ranger-station," said he; "the ranger told me that I could make use of it on my way back. We can pass the night here."

Joan knew that he had carried her across a strange room and put her on a strange bed. He took off her snowshoes, and she lay watching him light a fire in the cold, clean stove and cook a meal from supplies left by the owner of the house. She was trying now to remember who he was, what had happened, and why she was in such misery and pain. Sometimes she knew that he was her father and that she was at home in that wretched shack up Lorie river, and an ineffable satisfaction would relax her cramped mind; sometimes, just as clearly, she knew that he was Pierre who had taken her away to some strange place, and in this certainty, she was even more content. But always the horrible flame on her shoulder burnt her again to the confusion of half-consciousness. He wasn't John Carver, he wasn't Pierre. Who, in God's name, was he? And why was she here alone with him? She could not frame a question; she had a fear that, if she began to speak, she would scream and rave, would tell impossible, secret things. So she held herself to silence, to a savage watchfulness, to a battle with delirium.

The man brought her a cup of strong coffee and held up her head so that she could drink it, but it nauseated her and she thrust it weakly away, asking for cold water. After she had drunk this, her mind cleared for an instant; she tried to stand up.

"I must go back to Pierre now," she said, looking about with wild but resolute eyes.

"Lie still," said the stranger gently. "You're not fit to stir. Trust me. It's all right. You're quite safe. Get rested and well, then you may go wherever you like. I want only to help you."

The reassuring tone, the promising words coerced her and she dropped back. Presently, in spite of pain, she slept.

She woke and slept in fever for many hours, vaguely aware, at times, that she was traveling. She felt the motion of a sled under her and knew that she was lying on a warm hide of some freshly killed beast and that a blanket and a canvas covering protected her from a swirl of snow. Then she thought she heard a voice babbling queerly and saw a face quite terribly different from other human faces. The covering was taken from her, snowflakes touched her cheek, a lantern shone in her eyes, and she was lifted and carried into a warm, pleasant-smelling place from which were magically and completely banished all sound and bitterness of storm. She tried to see where she was, but her eyes looked on incredible colors and confusions, so she shut them and passively allowed herself to be handled by deft hands. She knew only that softness were given to her body, that the pain in her shoulder was soothed, that dreamlessly she slept.

CHAPTER IX

Dried Rose-Leaves.

The house that Prosper Gael had built for himself and for the woman whom Joan came to think of as the "fall child," stood in a canyon, a deep, secret fold of the hills, where a cliff stood behind it, and where the pine, needled ground descended before its door, under the far-flung, greenish-brown shade of fir boughs, to the lip of a green lake. In January, the lake was a glare of snow, in which the big firs stood deep, their branches heavily weighted. Prosper had dug a tunnel from his door through a big drift which touched his eaves. It was curious to see Wen Ho come pattering out of this northern cave, his yellow, Oriental face and slant eyes peering past the stalactite icicles as though they felt their own incongruity almost with a sort of terror. The interior of the five-room house gave just such an effect of bizarre and extravagant contrast; an effect, too, of luxury, though in truth it was furnished for the most part with stuffs and objects picked up at no very great expense in San Francisco shops. Nevertheless, there was nothing tawdry and, here and there, something really precious. Draperies on the walls, furniture made by Wen Ho and Prosper, lacquered in black and red, brass and copper, bright pewter, gay china, some fur rugs, a gorgeous oriental lamp, bookcases with volumes of a sober richness, in fact the costliest and most laborious of imports to this wilderness, small-paneled, horizontal windows curtained in some heavy green-gold stuff which slipped along the black lacquered pole on rings of jade; all these and a hundred other points of softly brilliant color gave to the living room a rare and striking look, while the bedrooms were matted, daintily furnished, carefully appointed as for a bride. Much thought and trouble, much detailed labor, had gone to the making of this odd nest in a Wyoming canyon. Whatever one must think of Prosper Gael, it is difficult to shrirk heartache on his account. A man of his temperament does not lightly undertake even a companioned isolation in a winter land. To picture what place of torment this well-appointed cabin was to him before he brought it to Joan, as a lonely man brings in a wounded bird to nurse and cherish, stretches the fancy on a rack of varied painfulness.

On that night, snow was pouring itself down the narrow canyon in a crowded whirl of dry, clean flakes. Wen Ho, watchful, for his master was already a day or so beyond the promised date of his return, stopped rubbing his hands. He had heard the packing of snow under webs and runners. After listening a moment, he nodded to himself, like a figure in a pantomime, ran into the kitchen, did something to the stove, then lighted a lantern and pattered out along the tunnel, dodging the icicle stalactites. Between the firs he stopped and held the lantern high so that it touched a moving radius of flakes to silver stars. Back of him through the open door streamed the glow of lamp and fire filling the icicles with blood and flushing the walls and the roof of the cave.

Down the canyon Prosper shouted, "Wen Ho! Wen Ho!"

The Chinaman plunged down the trail, packed below the new-fallen snow by frequent passages and presently met the bent figure of his master pulling and breathing hard. Without speaking, Wen Ho laid hold of the sled rope and together the two men tugged up the last steep bit of the hill.

"Velly heavy load," said Wen.

Prosper's eyes, gleaming below the visor of his cap, smiled half-maliciously upon him. "It's a deer killed out of season," he said, "and other cattle—no maverick, either—fairly marked by its owner. Lend me a hand and we'll unload."

Wen showed no astonishment. He removed the covering and peeped slantwise at the strange woman who stared at him unseeing with large, bright eyes. She closed them, frowning faintly as though she protested against the intrusion of a Chinese face into her disturbed mental world.

The men took her up and carried her into the house, where they dressed her wound and laid her with all possible gentleness in one of the two beds of striped and lacquered pine that stood in the bedroom facing the lake. Afterward they moved the other bed and Prosper went in to his meal.

He was too tired to eat. Soon he pushed his plate away, turned his chair to face the fire, and, slipping down to the middle of his spine, stuck out his lean, long legs, locked his hands back of his head, let his chin fall, and stared into the flames.

Wen Ho removed the dishes, glancing often at his master.

"You velly tired?" he questioned softly.

"It was something of a pull in the storm."

"Velly small deer," babbled the Chinaman, "velly big lady."

Prosper smiled a queer smile that sucked in and down the corners of his mouth.

"She come after all?" asked Wen Ho.

Prosper's smile disappeared; he opened his eyes and turned a wicked, gleaming look upon his man. What with the white face and drawn mouth the look was rather terrible. Wen Ho vanished with an increase of speed and silence.

Alone, Prosper twisted himself in his chair till his head rested on his arms. It was no relaxation of weariness or grief, but an attitude of cramped pain. His face, too, was cramped when, a motionless hour later, he lifted it again. He got up then, broken with weariness, and went softly across the matted hall into the room where Joan slept, and he stood beside her bed.

A glow from the stove, and the light shining through the door, dimly illuminated her. She was sleeping very quietly now; the flush of fever had left her face and it was clear of pain, quite simple and sad. Prosper looked at her and looked about the room as though he felt what he saw to be a dream. He put his hand on one long strand of Joan's black hair.

"Poor child!" he said, "Good child!" And went out softly, shutting the door.

In the bedroom where Joan came again to altered consciousness of life, there stood a blue china jar of pot-pourri, rose-leaves, dried and spiced till they stored all the richness of a southern summer. Joan's first question, strangely enough, was drawn from her by the persistence of this vague and pungent sweetness.

She was lying quietly with closed eyes, Prosper looking down at her, his finger on her even pulse, when, without opening her long lids, she asked, "What smells so good?"

Prosper started, drew away his fingers, then answered, smiling. "It's a jar of dried rose-leaves. Wait a moment, I'll let you hold it."

He took the jar from the window sill and carried it to her.

She looked at it, took it in her hands, and when he removed the lid, she stirred the leaves curiously with her long forefinger.

"I never seen roses," she said, and added, "What's basil?"

Prosper was startled. For an instant all his suppositions as to Joan were disturbed. "Basil? Where did you ever hear of basil?"

"Isabella and Lorenzo," murmured Joan, and her eyes darkened with her memories.

Prosper found his heart beating faster than usual. "Who are you, you strange creature? I think it's time you told me your name. Haven't you any curiosity about me?"

"Yes," said Joan; "I've thought a great deal about you." She wrinkled her wide brows. "You must have been out after game, though 'twas out of season. And you must have heard me a-cryin' out an' come in. That was right courageous, stranger. I would surely like you to know why I come away with you," she went on, wistful and weak, "but I don't know as how I can make it plain to you."

She paused, turning the blue jar in her hand. "You're very strange to me," she said, "an' yet, someways, you takin' care of me so well an' so—so awful kind—her voice gave forth its tremolo of feeling—"seems like I knowed you better than any other person in the world."

A flush came into his face.

"I wouldn't like you to be thinkin'—" She stopped, a little breathless.

He took the jar, sat down on the bed, and laid a hand firmly over both of hers. "I won't be thinkin' anything," he said, "only what you would like me to think. Listen—when a man finds a wounded bird out in the winter woods, he'll bring it home to care for it. And he won't be thinkin' the worse of its helplessness and tame-ness. Of course I know—but tell me your name, please!"

"Joan Landis."

At the name, given painfully, Joan drew a weighted breath, another, then, pushing herself up as though oppressed beyond endurance, she caught at Prosper's arm, clenched her fingers upon it, and bent her black head in a terrible paroxysm of grief. It was like a temp-st. Prosper thought of storm-driven, rain-wet trees wild in a wind of music, the prelude to "Fliegende Holländer." Joan's weeping bent and rocked her. He put his arm about her, tried to soothe her. At her cry of "Pierre! Pierre!" he whitened, but suddenly she broke from him and threw herself back amongst the pillows.

"'Twas you that killed him," she moaned. "What hev I to do with you?"

It was not the last time that bitter exclamation was to rise between them; more and more fiercely it came to bring his peace and hers. This time he bore it with a certain philosophy, calmed her patiently.

"How could I help it, Joan?" he pleaded. "You say how it was?" As she grew quieter, he talked. "I heard you scream like a person being tortured to death—twice—a growl-ome enough sound, let me tell you, to hear in the dead of a white, still night. I didn't altogether want to break into your house. I've heard some ugly stories about men venturing to disturb the work of murderers. But you see, Joan, I've a fear of myself. I've a cruel brain. I can use it on my own failures. I've been through some self-punishment—not of course, you don't understand all that. Anyway, I came in, in great fear of my life, and saw what I saw—a woman tied up and devilishly tortured, a man gloating over her helplessness. Naturally, before I spoke my mind, as a man was bound to speak it, under the pain and fury of such a spectacle, I got ready to defend myself. You—Pierre—there was a biting contempt in his tone—saw my gesture, whipped out his gun, and fired. My shot was half a second later than his. I might more readily have lost my life than taken his. If he had lived, Joan, could you have forgiven him?"

"No," sobbed Joan; "I think not."

She trembled. "He said terrible hard words to me. He didn't love me like I loved him. He planned to put a brand on me so's I'd be his own like as if I was a beast belongin' to him."

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN OUT SKIN

Any breaking out of skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon-juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

KLAN ENJOINED BY N. Y. STATE

Organizers Summoned to Face Charge of Tampering With Charter.

Albany, N. Y.—The Ku Klux Klan and its women's auxiliary, the Kamella, stood enjoined by court order from exercising any of the functions or benefits of a membership corporation in this state.

The injunction was issued by Justice Hinman, of the appellate division of the supreme court, on the request of Deputy Attorney General Edward Griffin, who produced an affidavit from Supreme Court Justice George E. Pierce that the incorporation papers of the organization had been altered after Pierce had approved them.

A bitter legal argument is expected to be made before Supreme Court Justice Staley, before whom the papers are returnable, and at which time the Klan is ordered to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent.

Dreams He Falls and Does

Detroit—William Hareus, 60 years old, sleeping in his room on the third floor of the Vinton Hotel, had one of those dreams of falling through space. Jack London said they are race dreams, harking back to the time when men lived in trees like monkeys and falls were common and often fatal. Hareus' dream was no ancestral vision, however, for he woke as he was passing the second floor, accelerating his pace at the rate of 32.17 feet per second. He landed on his feet.

WHY THAT LAME BACK?

That morning lameness—those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't be handicapped by a bad back—look to your kidneys. You will make no mistake by following this East Jordan resident's example. Mrs. Wm. St. Charles says: "I was bothered quite a good deal with my back and after I did my washing my back was so lame and sore I dreaded to move. There was a soreness across my kidneys that hurt me all the time and when I was on my feet a little while my back gave out. I often had headaches and was troubled with dizziness. I was nervous, depressed and irritable. My kidneys were weak and irregular. I saw in the paper how well Doan's Kidney Pills were liked and I decided to try them. I purchased a few boxes at Hite's Drug Store and they cured me."

PARCEL POST BOOST IS TALKED

Government To Make Survey As to Increase in Carrying Rates.

Washington—Investigation of the parcel post service throughout the United States with a view to a possible increase in rates is contemplated by Postoffice officials.

In various leading American post-offices the greatest count in mail history will be made between Sept. 21 and Oct. 21 to determine whether Uncle Sam is carrying parcels at lower rates than he can afford.

Away back in 1913 the Postoffice department sought to learn what the service was costing and found that over a 15-day period a total of 17,148,129 parcels had been mailed, bringing a return of $1,645,426.50 or an average of $0.069 for each parcel, the average weight of which was one pound and 12 ounces.

In 1920 more than 55,000,000 parcels were mailed, bringing in more than $5,500,000 or an average of $0.101 for each parcel.

It is now proposed to learn whether the Government can afford to carry parcels at such low rates, consequently for 18 months officials have been preparing for a test which will cover all classes of mail.

MANY KILLED IN TRAIN CRASHES

Two Crossing Tragedies on One Trip One Train's Record.

Chicago—Thirty persons were reported killed Sunday in railroad crossing accidents in various parts of the country. Several others also were injured in nine different accidents, a train striking an automobile in each instance.

One Pennsylvania train struck two automobiles within a few hours, four being killed in the first crash and two in the second. The first accident occurred at Highland, Ill., where an automobile apparently became stalled on the tracks as the speeding passenger train approached.

A few hours later, the train, hurrying to make up for lost time, struck another automobile at Liggett, Ind., eight miles from Terre Haute, nine persons being killed. The driver apparently had made an attempt to cross the tracks before the train reached him.

At Iron Mountain, Mo., a Missouri-Pacific express train struck an automobile and killed four persons returning from Sunday school.

Fearful to Contemplate.

According to a contemporary Zulu-land camel became panic-stricken at the scent of a white man. Imagine what will happen to the poor beasts if ever they get a noseful of the white women who immerse themselves in that three-gallons-for-a-dollar perfume that is so much in vogue for street-car riding and the movies.—Buffalo Express.

Inventor of the Saw.

According to Pliny, Daedalus invented the saw. Apollonius gives the honor to Talus, who first used the jawbone of a snake and then made an instrument of iron. Use of the saw in Egypt antedates its use in Greece.

Boarder Cows May Lose Their Homes

Owner Fails to Realize High Cost of Milk.

From the number of "boarder" cows found upon many of our dairy farms, one might think that their owners grow so fond of these three-teated, dry-six-months-a-year, perambulating feed bins that no cost is too great if they can be kept stuffed with good feed. In return for this treatment each "boarder" presents the world with a calf fully as worthless as its mother, dirties the milk pail for a few months, and eventually sends her owner to the window marked "Losses," rather than to the one marked "Deposits."

In most cases, however, it is not the owner's affection for scrubs but his failure to realize the high cost of producing milk with these cows, that keeps them in comfort on the farm when they should be in the stock yards awaiting their turn to increase the supply of hamburger. If use is made of the information contained in bulletin No. 244 of the University of Illinois agricultural experiment station, many of these "boarders" will be pried loose from their comfortable homes and started on a long journey, the last stage of which will be made in a nice cool refrigerator car.

This publication reports in detail the feed cost (exclusive of pasture) of producing milk and butterfat with 1,605 Holstein cows kept on practical dairy farms. It compares the cost of feed for cows of one production level with the cost of feed for cows of various other production levels. The method of comparison is based upon digestible nutrients in the feed consumed and may be used however much the prices of feeds may fluctuate.

It was found that the feed consumed per 100 pounds of milk produced, decreased at an ever-decreasing rate as production increased. Figures are presented showing the relative feed cost of production for cows of various yields. For instance, it is shown that for a 3,000-pound cow, the feed cost of producing 100 pounds of milk is one and two-thirds times as much as for a 10,000-pound cow. With this great variation in cost, it may be seen why a dairyman with a low-producing herd makes little or no profit. The bulletin may be obtained by writing to the Agricultural Experiment station, Urbana.

Distinct Advantages in Use of Manure Spreader

Most men who use a manure spreader are agreed that it is a profitable piece of farm machinery, but the greater number will also admit that it isn't kept going enough of the time.

There are several distinct advantages in the use of a manure spreader. One of the most attractive features of course is that the horses do the unloading, and this is indeed a real advantage. However, the fact that manure can be spread uniformly is one of the best reasons for the use of this machine. This is of particular value in top-dressing wheat with manure. If wheat is given a light coating of manure during the early winter there will be an increase not only in the grain crop, but also in the stand of grass or clover following.

The improvement in grass and clover stands and the increased certainty of maintaining the regular rotation without serious interruption, should be of sufficient value to pay the cost of manure spreader in a very short time, says F. L. Duley of the Missouri College of Agriculture. A manure spreader, however, is profitable only when used. It won't help much while standing in the barnyard while the manure pile decays.

Ohio Farmers Grow 100 Bushels Corn to Acre

Extension specialists at Ohio State university have compiled the experience of the forty Ohio farmers who in the last six years have succeeded in growing 100 or more bushels of corn to the acre on ten acres. The tabulation shows that of all those who have made the "Hundred Bushel club," 68 per cent planted corn following clover; 48 per cent manured the land; 65 per cent used mixed fertilizer; 48 per cent used acid phosphate and 35 per cent used acid phosphate and manure. Fifty-five per cent of the successful contestants planted their corn in checks; and 45 per cent in drills; 65 per cent planted yellow corn and 35 per cent planted white varieties. The facts are presented in detail in a recent issue of "Timely Soil Topics" published by the university. One thing the figures show is that to raise 100 or more bushels of corn to the acre is more than a performance; it is excellent business. High yields to the acre cut down overhead, and reduce the bushel cost. W. H. Gilmore, who broke all known records last summer by raising 134 bushels to the acre on ten acres, cleared nearly 50 cents a bushel.

Rhubarb Plant Requires Big Amount of Fertilizer

Just because it comes up regularly every year, don't forget to treat the rhubarb as if it were a regular vegetable. Give it manure and cultivation and you won't have the skinny stalks that are bound to appear if you neglect it. It needs a lot of fertilizer to give juicy stalks.

Spraying to Prevent Injuries by Insects

Watch Various Vegetable Crops for Numerous Pests.

Tons of food are lost annually in the thousands of home gardens in every state because of insect injuries which could have been prevented if simple control measures had been promptly adopted. It is just as important—in some cases even more important—that the vegetable crops be as carefully watched for insect pests as the actual cultivating of the crops and a little watchfulness and prompt application of remedies will prevent to a large measure the losses which otherwise will occur.

In general, insects are controlled according to the type of mouth parts or habits of feeding. For chewing insects which consume the external plant tissue, such as beetles, caterpillars, slugs, grasshoppers, and the like, an arsenical poison is usually efficient. Arsenate of lead is the safest and for small amounts of spray use nine and a half level teaspoonfuls or three level tablespoonfuls of the powder to a gallon of water, the powder first being mixed uniformly with a small amount of water and then diluted to the proper strength.

It may also be used as a dust, thoroughly mixing one part of the poison with ten parts of a diluent such as flour, or hydrated or air-slaked lime. If used as a dust apply in the morning when the dew is on the plants. It may be dusted through a cheesecloth bag or tin can punched with small holes, but is better applied with hand dusters made for the purpose.

Insects which do not consume the plant tissue but instead insert the beak in the plant and suck the juices cannot be controlled with arsenical or other internal poisons but must be destroyed with insecticides which kill in contact with the body. Thus plant lice, leaf hoppers, scale insects and the like are controlled with contact sprays.

Where to buy U.S. Tires

HEALEY TIRE & VULCANIZING CO.

Before you buy any car, see the STUDEBAKER 1924 MODELS

Studebaker presents its complete line of 1924 models, announced a week ago, with the conviction that they will increase the prestige of the name Studebaker which, for 71 years, has stood for the best in transportation, quality and value of product.

Into these 1924 cars are built every proved feature in design that makes for the comfort, convenience and safety of passengers, and many refinements that further enhance the value of a line of cars already highly perfected.

It is common knowledge in the steel industry that Studebaker uses only the highest grades of the finest steels. And the same is true of the electrical equipment, instruments, bearings, batteries, upholstery, finishing paints, tires and accessories used in Studebaker cars.

It is equally well known that Studebaker, with $90,000,000 of actual net assets, including $45,000,000 of plant facilities, is unsurpassed in ability and resources to manufacture economically and give maximum intrinsic value for a given price.

Produced under these favorable conditions, the 1924 Studebakers are distinctly the finest cars and greatest values Studebaker ever offered.

These are not careless statements. They are facts that reflect the honesty and integrity of the manufacturer and its product just as they do the truth of Studebaker advertising.

The public has placed its confidence in Studebaker by accepting these facts, supported by the performance of Studebaker cars in owners' use. That's why Studebaker sales for the past six years have increased progressively each year and sales for the first six months of 1923 of 81,880 cars broke all six months' records.

Studebaker never cheapens quality to meet competition. The name Studebaker stands for satisfaction and service.

About a month ago, Ayers, who was engineer of the "Cannon Ball" flyer of the Michigan Central, was killed in a wreck at Grayling. Mrs. Ayers was ill at the time and was brought to the city in a specially fitted Michigan Central car from Detroit. She returned for treatment following the funeral.

Their Golden Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Bartlett Celebrate Event.

Tuesday, July 31st, marked the half-century milestone in which Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Bartlett have journeyed together over the sea of matrimony.

The event was observed by an informal At Home at their residence on Third Street, during the evening. Over sixty friends were in attendance. Violin music was furnished by Wm. Webster, accompanied by Miss Emma Lou Hoyt. Mrs. Dick Dicken favored with several vocal selections, accompanied on the piano by Miss Hoyt. The decorations were in gold colors and presented a striking appearance. The same color-scheme was worked out in the refreshments.

Isaac W. Bartlett and Miss Rachael Cook were united in marriage at LeLand, Mich., July 31st, 1873, Rev. Geo. Thompson being the officiating clergyman. Shortly after their marriage they located at East Jordan and have spent forty years of their married life as residents of this city.

Seven children were born to them all of whom grew to maturity. They are as follows:—Austin and Ira of East Jordan; Orrin of Jackson; Alden of Detroit; Mrs. Josephine Herron of Port Angeles, Wash.; Mrs. Laura Sadler of East Jordan; and Mrs. Florence Brown of Bellingham, Wash. There are thirteen grand-children and one great-grand-child.

A pleasing feature golden wedding celebration was in the attendance of Prof. John Thompson of Galesburg, Ill. and Mrs. M. H. Thompson of Oberlin, Ohio. These people were present at the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett fifty years ago.

Will Make Plans for County-wide Picnic Here This Evening

A county meeting of those interested in planning a County Wide Picnic will be held at the K. of P. Hall in East Jordan this Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock standard time.

Everyone interested is urged to be in attendance so that complete plans may be made at this meeting.

The meeting tonight will be in charge of B. O. Hagerman, Co. Agr'l Agent.

Cultivate Cheerful Thoughts.

No one can do work when the mind is clouded with unhappy or vicious thoughts. The mental sky must be clear or there can be no enthusiasm, no brightness, clearness, or efficiency in our work. To do the maximum of which you are capable, you must keep your mind filled with cheerful, uplifting thoughts.

Trouble Ahead for Pussy.

Mattie came running into the house, excitedly exclaiming, "My pussy has borned five kittens! I don't know how she'll manage to take care of five children when it keeps me and you busy every minute with nothing but the twins, muvver."

Poor Richard.

"The way to wealth, if you desire it, is as plain as the way to market. It depends chiefly on two words, industry and frugality; that is, waste neither time nor money but make the best use of both. He that gets all he can honestly and saves all he gets (necessary expenses excepted), will certainly get rich."—Benjamin Franklin.

Uplifting Sentiments.

Love, charity, benevolence, kindness, good will towards others, all arouse the noblest feelings and sentiments within us. They are life-giving, uplifting. They make for health, harmony, power. They all tend to the normal, to put us in tune with the infinite.

INTERVENTION BY U.S. LOOMS

GOVERNMENT LIKELY TO TAKE ACTION TO AVERT STRIKE SEPTEMBER 1

FUEL COMMISSION TAKES HAND

Failure of Operators and Miners to Agree on Wage Scale House Board.

New York—Government intervention looms in the coal crisis, brought about by breakdown of the wage agreement negotiations between leaders of anthracite operators and miners at Atlantic City.

The United States Coal commission, under the chairmanship of John Hays Hammond, went into conference here to study the serious situation following the collapse of the Atlantic City negotiations.

Operators and miners look to Washington to prevent a strike in the anthracite coal fields September 1. With negotiations completely broken off as result of the failure of the operators to concede full union recognition, it was admitted that the breach between the operators and miners is such that it can be bridged only by the most powerful pressure.

Both sides quote the Federal Coal commission's report to sustain the position they have taken. The operators point to the plain declaration of the report in favor of an open shop.

The miners point to that section of the report, declaring that the wage contract should provide proper penalties on both sides for its violation.

FARMERS ASK ALIEN BAN LIFTED

Minnesota Seeking Russian Help Rape Law Barring Immigrants.

Washington—An attack on present immigration restrictions was launched from a new quarter Sunday. The Minnesota Farm bureau federation petitioned President Harding and Secretaries Davis, Wallace and Hoover to arrange for the immediate immigration to this country of thousands of farm laborers.

Contending that serious labor troubles confront the American farmer because of the attraction of high wages in industry, the petitioner asks that 40,000 Russians, trained farmers and laborers, now in Jugo-Slavia and desirous of emigrating to America, be permitted to come here.

Shifting of the basis of the quota law from 1910 to 1890 to change the trend of immigration from southern Europe to northern countries and encourage immigration from farmer stock, also was urged.

Prevailing restrictions have been vigorously challenged for some time by leading industrialists on the ground that they are causing a grave shortage of common labor in the nation's factories, boosting wages, and through them, the cost of living.

FRANCE TO PAY U. S. MILLIONS

Interest on War Supplies Notes Comes Due Soon.

Washington—Announcement is made by the treasury department that $10,000,000 in interest will be paid to this government by the French government on obligations given the war department in connection with the purchase of war supplies by France. The obligations have no connection with the French war debt growing out of loans made by the United States.

Upon conclusion of the war, the war department sold $400,000,000 worth of surplus war materials to France, which gave notes for the supplies. The notes are held by the treasury department.

Poland has just paid down more than $1,000,000 on 7,554 foreign type freight cars which it purchased last winter, partly on cash and partly on credit. The remainder, totalling over $3,000,000, will be paid at the end of six years.

No payment was made, however, on either the principal or the interest of the nearly $200,000,000 advanced Poland shortly after the armistice.

Items Of Interest in World's News

Student Murders Eleven. Moscow—A student named Sorokin was arrested in a fashionable gambling club charged with committing 11 murders to obtain money for fast living.

May Proclaim Villa National Hero. El Paso, Texas—Francisco Villa, hunted as a thief, bandit, murderer and leader of rebellion after rebellion, scorned of governments, mocker of civilization, may yet achieve the distinction of a national hero, the recipient of homage from a nation.

Cuts Ear Off While Shaving. Bicknell, Ind.—Ode Parker of this city struck a fly which was annoying him while he was shaving. He snatched it off with his right hand, in which he held a razor, and nearly severed his ear from his head. Seven stitches were taken to hold it back in place.

"Daddy" 45 Times. Santa Ana, Calif.—Eighty-eight years old, Romulu Delisi, a Mexican farm hand, is today the proud father of a bouncing eight-pound baby girl. The child is the Mexican's 45th, according to Dr. O. D. Bell, assemblyman from this district, who has known Delisi 35 years and says he has been married four times.

Deaf Mute Tours World. Prague—This city was visited recently by Stela Martin, the first Czechoslovak deaf mute who has undertaken a trip around the world. He began his travels in 1919 and up to now has covered the following countries: Austria, Germany, Serbia, Italy, Switzerland, France, Holland, England and Czechoslovakia. He writes eight languages fluently.

Prohibition Strong in Serbia. Belgrade—The movement for prohibition is strong among the students of Serbia, especially in the higher schools, and a number of demonstrations in favor of abstention from alcoholic liquors are planned for this summer. It is estimated that 80 per cent of Serbian students are total abstainers. The government views the movement favorably.

Chicago "U" Elects President. Chicago—Ernest De Witt Burton, for 30 years connected with the University of Chicago, was elected president at a meeting of the board of trustees. Since the retirement of former President Harry Pratt Judson last February, Dr. Burton has been acting president. He is head of the department of new testament and early Christian literature.

President's Aunt Dies. Columbus, O.—Mrs. Clara Van Kirk Mitchell, aunt of President Harding, died at the home of the president's brother, Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., at Worthington, near here. Mrs. Mitchell was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, 95 years ago and came to Morrow county, Ohio, in 1832. She was stricken with paralysis two years ago.

Rail Workers Refuse Terms. Neuss, Rhenish, Prussia—The German temporary police here acted as distributors for letters sent by the Rhineland high commission to the idle railway workers, offering them 20 per cent higher wages than they received under the German regime if they would work on the lines running to France. According to German information none of the workers accepted the offer.

Turtle is 150 Years Old. Washington—A turtle left in the Tonga Islands by Capt. James Cook, English mariner, in 1773, was found here recently by Capt. E. T. Pollock, governor of American Samoa, says a report to the Navy Department. Despite the established proclivity of the species towards records for longevity, the turtle exhibited signs of extreme age, Capt. Pollock said, adding that it was "blind and when walking creaks like an ox cart."

Britain Yields to U. S. Demand. Washington—Continued delay in forwarding the British reply to Secretary Hughes' ship liquor-running treaty plan, coupled with other recent developments in England, have created renewed hope among officials here that the British attitude may not have in the end to be uncompromising on the 12-mile search and seizure phase of the proposal as Lord Cuzon's recent statement in the house of commons suggested.

Fears European Strife. New York—The tangled European situation bodes evil for this country and for the world generally, Henry T. Allen, former major-general in charge of the American Army of Occupation on the Rhine, said on his arrival yesterday on the White Star liner Baltic from Liverpool. Questioned as to the outlook in Europe, he said that it was black, and asserted that the situation was leading rapidly to profounder misery for the entire world.

GERMAN SMASH SEEN AT HAND

PARTITION OF THE EMPIRE INTO FORMER STATES EXPECTED BY FRANCE

BLOCKADE IN RUHR IS LIFTED

Traffic Suspended Since February First Pours Into Valley From Germany.

Paris—With 600,000 marks to the dollar, riots breaking all over Germany and the resistance in the Ruhr rapidly melting away, the French are despatching troops in reply to the British note, believing the complete smash of Germany to be inevitable.

Since the utter collapse of Germany would render obsolete any decisions the allies may now take regarding the problem of reparations and the whole problem would have to be reopened, the French adopt the attitude that it is better to delay proceedings and thus avoid the menace of a further breach in the entente.

If the federation of German states, proclaimed at Versailles in 1871 and confirmed by the Weimar constitution of 1919, is repudiated, the empire will be replaced by Prussia, East Prussia, Bavaria, Saxony, Hesse, Wurttemberg, Baden and a dozen other small states and principalities. Such action would require almost the entire revision of the treaty of Versailles, especially the economic and financial reparations clauses and the alteration of the schedule of reparations, of May 5, 1921, dividing the total among various states.

Many leading Germans believe the disruption of Germany may lead to the same results as the splitting up of Austria-Hungary as an empire—practical cancellation of the claims for reparations, as the allies generally agree that they were unable to obtain an indemnity from either Austria or Hungary.

The English oppose the dissolution of the German empire since it would leave France the predominant power in Europe, and they are therefore urging the holders of Germany's wealth to pay the reparations which the government is unable to pay, promising to obtain a material reduction of the total sum or to split with France if M. Poincare refuses to agree.

The frontier separating the Ruhr valley from the rest of Germany was opened at midnight, it was announced Thursday.

Thousands of Germans were passing in and out of the occupied region Thursday, making haste to transact urgent business.

The blockade on shipments from the Ruhr into unoccupied Germany became effective February 1, less than a month after the beginning of the Franco-Belgian occupation. It was not until July 1, however, that the frontiers of the Ruhr and the Rhineland were completely closed as one of the penalties imposed because of the Dulsburg bomb explosion which killed 10 Belgian soldiers and injured two score other persons.

YANKS OVERPOWER RUSSIANS

Throw Guards in Irons, Then Sail for United States.

Nome, Alaska—The crew of the American trading schooner Iskum of Tacoma, Wash., which was held in Siberia by Soviet authorities on the charge that Russian commercial laws had been violated, overpowered guards stationed on the vessel, placed them in irons and brought the craft here, arriving last week.

The officers and crew of the Iskum recovered control of her at Anadyr, Siberia, and made a run to St. Lawrence Island, an American possession in the middle of Bering sea for water and other supplies. As soon as these were obtained, the Iskum proceeded with speed to Nome.

According to reports obtained from men aboard the Iskum, the Bay Chimo, a trading vessel of the Hudson's Bay company, was ordered by the Russians to overhaul the Iskum, but went aground while getting under way. Those who gave this information suggested that someone aboard the Bay Chimo had tampered with her steering gear.

The United States coast guard cutter Bear, which left here for a cruise of the Siberian coast, soon after the plight of the Iskum and three other American trading schooners seized by soviet authorities at East Cape, Siberia, was reported in June, on her way back to Nome, according to advices received here.

German Coal Seized.

Dusseldorf—Coal and coke stocks amounting to 100,000 tons were seized by the French last week from the Thyssen's largest plant at Hamborn. The workers struck in protest, but they are expected to go back on the job as soon as an agreement is reached as to the details for the removal of confiscated fuel. The Bochum-Verein—a steel plant owned by Hugo Stinnes, employing 20,000 persons—has ceased production because its fuel supply is exhausted.
