Next Week Is Fair Week

East Jordan To Entertain Its Thousands of Visitors.

The Thirty-Ninth Annual Exhibit of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society will be given at East Jordan the coming week commencing Monday. Work of preparing for the annual event commenced nearly a year ago, and of late this work has become more intensified. All the officers and directors have been accomplishing things until now the grounds and buildings of the Association are in first-class order.

Excellent Amusements

From all indications, Secretary Bird of the Charlevoix County Fair has made a wise selection in securing the Lippa Amusement Company which will furnish the Midway for the 1923 Fair. Letters of recommendation from a large number of social and fraternal societies under whose auspices the Lippa Amusement Company has shown throughout Michigan this summer as well as many favorable comments from both press and public officials give simple assurance that this year's Fair will offer much that is modern, novel and out of the ordinary in the way of amusement and entertainment.

Of course there will be the big Merry-Go-Round without which no Fair is complete and the fascinating ride carried by the Lippa organization is said to be the most handsome and lavishly constructed on the road. Then, too, there is a brand new monster Eli Ferris Wheel which its passengers skyward with both thrills and safety. For those who enjoy music, singing, dancing and clean, clever comedy there will be the big musical Comedy and Vaudeville Revue presented in a handsome theatre under canvas by a well selected cast of lady and gentlemen artists.

One of the most novel features carried by the Lippa Amusement Company is Bush Bluey, the African Pigmy. This dark skinned gentleman from the jungles has nothing in common with the so-called "wild man" often exhibited but is well educated and extremely intelligent representative of a strange, savage tribe whose home is located in the wilds of Africa. He explains and lectures upon the peculiar customs of his native people. He gives an exhibition of the torture dance as performed by his uncivilized brothers and with bare feet plunges fearlessly into piles of broken glass and with astonishing unconcern dances gaily as he chants his weird religious refrain.

Doss, "The Man Who Grows" is another attraction which will grace this year's midway. Standing six feet, two inches in his stocking feet, this human telescope performs the seemingly impossible physical feat of growing to the height of eight feet before your very eyes. There is a big Circus Slide Show filled from sidewalk to sidewalk with a strange and curious collection of entertainment. Madam Blanche, the famous French Mind Reader is with the Lippa Amusement Company this season and a genuine, old-fashioned English Punch and Judy Show direct from the music halls of London. Trained Monkeys and Dogs, Monster Reptiles and a host of other features all will add to the pleasure of the Fair guests.

Courteous attendants and an assemblage of ladies and gentlemen comprise the Lippa Amusement Company and no questionable games or attractions are carried or tolerated.

Temperament.

On the big curve coming into the Irish way side station, the train stopped longer than usual one morning, and the guard, descending from his van, walked up to the driver. "What are ye stoppin' for?" he inquired. "Sure, and can't ye see the signal is agin me?" retorted the driver. The guard snorted contemptuously. "It's mighty particular you're gettin' all of a sudden," he said.—Tatler (London).

PRESBYTERIAN LADIES WILL HAVE CHARGE OF DINING HALL.

We, the ladies of the Presbyterian Church have secured the Dining Hall at the Fair Ground again this year. And as in years past we are depending on the generosity of our friend, the Farmer, to supply us with vegetables of all kinds, also butter, cream, milk, eggs, etc. This call extends to every farmer interested in the welfare of our Church. Vegetables may be left at the East Jordan Lumber Co. Store or at Chas. Hudson's Shoe Store.

WOMAN'S STUDY CLUB MEETS SEPT. 11TH.

The Woman's Study Club holds its first meeting of the 1923-24 session Tuesday evening, Sept. 11th at the home of Mrs. A. J. Duncanson. Membership may be renewed at this meeting, as no opportunity to do so was offered at the close of last year's program.

THIRTY DAY TRUCE IS PLANNED

Four Proposals Made By Governor Pinchot in Coal War.

Harrisburg—Governor Pinchot's peace proposal to the warring hard coal factions provides first for a 30-day truce. His proposal has four things to suggest, as follows:

1—A 30-day truce, with withdrawal of the union, suspension orders.

2—Consent by operators to abolition of all but eight hour day employment.

3—Consent by operators to allow unions to install agents in company offices on pay days for the purpose of collecting union dues.

4—An agreement by both sides to continue joint negotiations for the purpose of fixing wage scales, with the decision to be retroactive to September 1.

Feeding of Baby Birds.

According to H. W. McCrae, a young farmer-naturalist of Lake Johnson, Saskatchewan, Canada, birds in the nesting season feed their young 270 times daily, involving approximately 400 insects.

Michigan the Maple State.

More maple grows in Michigan than in any other state.

East Jordan Wins N. M. Championship

Defeat Pellston and Become the League Champions.

By defeating Pellston at that place last Sunday, East Jordan clinched the title to the pennant and became 1923 champions in the Northern Michigan Base Ball League.

The game last Sunday was another one of those seen this year when East Jordan's base ball machine was again in fighting trim and Johnson scored another shutout victory. Rain stopped the game in the first half of the seventh with East Jordan to bat and a runner on first.

Lawyers Bare Crime Growth.

Minneapolis—Startling disclosures of the extent and rapid increase of crime in United States were submitted before the American Bar Association by a Special Committee on Law Enforcement which urged that the whole code of criminal practice in the 48 states of the union be rewritten so that the long arm of the law might also become swift, sure, constant. The blame was laid partly on the structure of the law and the manner in which our courts function.

EAST JORDAN BOYS HAVE PICNIC WITH BOYNE CITY.

At the County-wide Picnic at Whiting Park last Thursday, East Jordan's ball team won a one-sided contest from the Boyne City Leaguers, the score being 13 to 1.

Gunderson pitched seven innings and struck out 16 batters. Our boys only made one error to Boyne's four. East Jordan accumulated 13 hits for their 13 runs, which was too much of a hoodo for our neighbors over east.

ITALY GIRDS FOR WAR ON GREECE

REPLY TO ULTIMATUM REJECTS MUSSOLINI'S DEMAND FOR INDEMNITY

ARMED FORCES ARE MOBILIZED

Athens Consents to State Funeral for Five Slain Members of Italy's Mission.

Athens—The Greek government has replied to the Italian ultimatum embodying demands for reparation for the massacre of the five Italian members of the boundary commission at the Graeco-Albanian frontier. Greece accepts four of Italy's demands with modifications and rejects three.

The commandant of the place where the murders were committed it is specified, shall express the Greek government's sorrow to Signor Montagna, the Italian minister to Greece. A memorial service shall be held in the presence of the members of the Greek government. On the same day a detachment of the guard shall salute the Italian flag at the legation, and military forces at Treves shall render honors to the bodies of the victims while they are being transferred to an Italian warship.

The fourth, fifth and sixth demands are rejected on the ground that they infringe the sovereignty and honor of Greece.

The fourth demand provides for the severest inquiry by the Greek authorities at the scene of the massacre, at which the Italian military attaché will be present. The fifth demands capital punishment for all the guilty, while the sixth demand seeks an indemnity of 50 million Italian lire to be paid within five days from the presentation of the note.

The first demand covers apologies of the most sweeping and official nature; the second relates to funeral ceremonies; the third to honors to the Italian flag by Greek warships, and the seventh to military honors to the victims.

Paris—Telephonic advices from Switzerland, in the absence of direct communications with Italy, broken off apparently because of censorship, indicate troop movements in the north, activity in aviation and concentration of naval units at the nearest point north to Corfu, Greece. Reports insist that certain categories of Italian officers have been ordered by telegraph to hold themselves in readiness to join posts immediately. Italian officials stated that if war results it is Greece which is the aggressor, because the Greeks assassinated the Italian officers.

PEACE IN RUHR AGAIN SEEN

Big Business of France and Germany Get Together.

Berlin—Political circles are informed that the reports of alleged efforts to hasten the opening of the reparation debate on the part of the German government originated in the current impression that the big Rhineland and Ruhr industrialists are more concerned in an early settlement than are the army of resistors. The industrialists are said to be growing weary of the expense borne by them in connection with the maintenance of passive resistance and the continued inactivity of their mines and plants.

There have been fresh rumors of "wig-wagging" between the French and German industrialists, who believe that the situation for active contact has measurably improved since Chancellor Stresemann's recent speech.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Detroit—Of 231 applicants for automobile licenses, only 85 or 36 per cent passed the second day of the new revised police examinations.

Lansing—Appointment of Dean R. S. Shaw as head of the Michigan Agricultural college during the next year, was announced by the state board of agriculture.

Corunna—The East Michigan Conference of the Free Methodist Church holding its annual meeting here, elected officers and made assignments of pastors for the ensuing year.

Saginaw—Changes costing about $16,000 are being made in the west side schools here to remove fire dangers pointed out by inspectors of the Michigan Fire Prevention association in a recent inspection.

Grand Rapids—The proposed abolition of general property taxes and the suggestion that the state government be financed by specific taxes has received the approval of the Michigan Real Estate association.

Lansing—State-owned cement and board ordered a reduction of the state tax of $1,300,000. The tax this year will be $16,000,000, as compared with $17,300,000 in 1922. The rate will be approximately $2.32 a $1,000, as compared with $3.08 last year.

Grand Rapids—The largest deal in the history of Grand Rapids will be completed when the Michigan State Telephone company will give its check for $3,851,735 in favor of the Citizens Telephone company, in payment for the properties of the latter concern, which are to be merged with the Bell company's holdings.

Battle Creek—Declaring that the operation of interurban freight trains through the business district of Battle Creek has become a nuisance, Mayor Charles C. Green instructed City Attorney John Wegener to investigate action necessary to eliminate freight trains in city streets during rush hours of the day.

Lansing—State-owned cement and fertilizer plants are feasible, according to the preliminary findings of R. A. Smith, state geologist who recently undertook an investigation at the order of the state administrative board. "There are lime deposits on state-owned land near Wolverine. There are also many deposits in the Charlevoix and Alpena districts.

Port Huron—Unless the city commission appeals to the State Supreme Court from the decision of Judge Harry J. Dingeman, Port Huron electors will have opportunity to vote on the adoption of the new revised city charter, which provides a commissioner-manager form of government to replace the present city commission, composed of a mayor and four commissioners.

Battle Creek—Without food for six days, a former soldier in the German army was found unconscious on the sidewalk. He was taken to police headquarters where he was revived and given nourishment. Through an interpreter he told his experiences. He said he was robbed in Detroit and had been in the United States only three months. Later he accepted a job in a junk yard.

Lansing—"Broke" and unable to borrow from the banks, Arenac county appealed to the state administrative board for funds to keep up the highways in that county. The county owes the state about $25,000 for road construction purposes. The state was indebted to the county to the extent of $6,000 for maintenance. Governor Groesbeck and the other members of the board decided to advance the portion of the county maintenance fund now due.

Marine City—Edmond E. Moss, of Port Huron, D. U. R. Conductor, is dead as the result of a Rapid Railway wreck just north of Marine City. A special north-bound car, running without passengers was waiting at a switch for orders when another north-bound limited crashed into it from the rear. Conductor Moss received a shower of broken glass on the neck and face. Several arteries in his throat were severed and he bled to death within a few seconds.

Muskegon—A. J. Hunter has been in a serious condition as a result of a bite from a strange bug, which has caused suffering to several other people at the fashionable Lake Harbor resort. It was necessary to operate on Mr. Hunter's arm. A reward has been offered by Lake Harbor summer residents for information throwing some light on the nature of the insect. Some have expressed the belief that it is a mosquito from the tropical countries, which at rare intervals is found in this section.

Sault Ste. Marie—300 police are seeking a bold bandit who stole the police patrol from in front of the police station.

Cadillac—"Concrete paving for the Mackinaw Trail, from the State line to the Straits," is the slogan of the Trail Association.

Saginaw—Less than 100 tons of anthracite coal now in the hands of local dealers, according to a survey just completed. "Little more is expected.

Ionia—Contracts were awarded at Ionia for the construction of 11 1-4 miles of road in Ionia and Montcalm counties, for what is known as the Colgrove state highway.

Cadillac—The hardest rain of the summer recently quenched all the forest fires in Wexford County. The rain was general, extending from east of Cadillac to Manistee.

Saginaw—The local office of the United States veterans' bureau will be closed, December 31 and work in this territory thereafter will be handled from the Detroit office.

Camp Custer—Colonel T. J. Powers, of Detroit, chief of staff of the 35th division, has been transferred to Washington, where he becomes assistant director of the budget.

Detroit—A letter signed by the mayor inviting David Lloyd George to visit Detroit during his American tour was sent to the former premier of Great Britain. Lloyd George is expected in this country in October.

Hastings—The new $200,000 Pennock Hospital was formally opened here. Building began last spring. The building will replace the old hospital, which once was the home of Daniel Stryker, former Michigan secretary of state.

Detroit—The $5,000,000 bond issue voted for street railway extensions last spring, approximately $1,000,000 of which already has been expended in anticipation of the sale of the securities, was declared illegal Wednesday by Corporation Counsel Richard I. Lawson.

Buchanan—Pilot Jack Knight was at the bedside of his sick father here, after a 1,000-mile race with death half way across the continent. Knight's flight set a long distance record for night flying. He came from Cheyenne, Wyo., in 10 hours and 15 minutes.

Charlevoix—Thousands of dollars is being spent by the Pennsylvania Railroad company near Elmira to prevent another long transportation tie-up, such as was caused last winter by snow blockades, gangs of men, with plows, scrapers and teams are leveling almost a mile.

Jasper had been absorbed in the shot and had not noticed Joan, but Yarnall for several minutes had been leaning forward, his hands tightened in the arms of his chair. The instant Jasper stopped he held up his hand.

"Quiet, quiet," he said softly as a man might speak to a plunging horse.

"I am not to be left," she was very calm. She ran up her hand and pressed the back of it against her forehead and from under this hand she looked at the two men with eyes of such astonished pain and beauty as they could never forget.

"You," she said presently, "that's someone I could do."

"At once Jasper hastened to relieve her of the chair. "I'm so sorry, I've been so busy," he said. "I don't know what I mean, that you were so beautiful."

This is my real self. It is. I hate beauty. I hate it. I'm not good enough to love it. Beauty and learning and—mistake—"

Her head had been bending lower and lower, her voice rocking under its weight of restrained anguish. On the word "mistake" she dropped her head to her knees and was silent.

"I can't talk no more," she said, after a moment, and she stood up and ran out of the room.

"I'll be a—d!" swore Yarnall. But Jasper stood, his face pale, smiling one hand into the other.

"I feel that I, at least, deserve to be," he said.

CHAPTER XI

Flight

There was a girl named Joan who followed Pierre Landis because he laid his hand upon her wrist, and there was another Joan who fled up the mountain-side at sight of him, as though the fire that had once touched her shoulder had burnt its way into her heart. Then there was a third Joan, a Joan astray. It was this Joan that had come to Lazy-Y Ranch and had looked for and hunted "the outfit"—a Joan of set face and bitter tongue, whose two years' lonely battle with life had twisted her youth out of its first comely straightness. In Joan's brief code of moral law there was one sin—the dealings of a married woman with another man. When Pierre's lying and seeking face looked up toward her where she stood on the mountain-side above Prosper's cabin, she felt for the first time that she had sinned, and so, for the first time, she was a sinner, and the inevitable agony of soul began.

She fled and hid till dark, then prowled about till she knew that Yarnall was alone in the house. She came like a spirit from hell and questioned him.

"What did the men ask? What did you tell them?"

"The men had asked for a lady. I had told them, as Prosper had once instructed him, that no lady was living there, that the man had just gone. They had been satisfied and had left. But Joan was still in terror. Pierre must never find her now. She had accepted the lie of a stranger, had left her husband for dead, had made no effort to ascertain the truth, and had dealings with another man." Joan sat in judgment and condemned herself to loneliness. She turned herself out from all her old life as though she had been Cain, and, following Yarnall's trail over the mountains, had come into strange lands to work for her bread. She called herself "Joan" and her ferocity was the armor for her beauty. Always she worked in fear of Pierre's arrival, and as soon as she had saved money enough for further traveling, she would go. She worked by preference on lonely ranches as cook or harvest-er and it was after two years of such life that she had drifted into Yarnall's kitchen. She was then, greatly changed, as a woman who works to the full stretch of her strength, who suffers loneliness and hardship, who gives no thought to her own youth and beauty, and who, moreover, suffers under a scourge of self-scorn and fear, is bound to change. Of all the people Joan had seen her after months of such living, Jasper Morena was the only one to find her beautiful. But with his sensitive observation he had seen through the shell to the sweetness underneath; for surely Joan was sweet—a Friday's child. It was good that Jasper had torn the skin from her wound, good that he had broken up the hardness of her heart. She left him and Yarnall that afternoon and went away to her cabin in the trees and lay face down on the bare boards of the floor and was young again. Waves of longing for love and beauty and adventure flooded her. For a while she had been very beautiful and had been very passionately loved; for a while she had been surrounded by beauty and taught its meanings. She had fled from it all. She hated it, yes, but she longed for it with every fiber of her being. The last two years were scalded away. She was Joan, who had loved Pierre; Joan, whom Prosper Gael had loved.

Toward morning, dawn feeling with white fingers through the pine boughs into her uncurtained window, Joan stopped her weeping and stood up. She was very tired and felt as though all the hardness and strength had been beaten from her heart. She opened her door and looked at pale stars and a still, slowly brightening world. In a hollow below the pines a stream ran and poured its hoarse, hurrying voice into the silence. Joan bent under the branches, undressed and bathed. The icy water shocked life back into her spirit. She began to tingle and to glow. In spite of her self she felt happier. She had been strong for so long, neither sorrowful nor glad; now, after the night of sharp pain, she was aware of the gladness of morning. She came up from her plunge glowing and beautiful, with loose, wet hair.

In the corral the men were watering their teams; above them on the edge of a mesa, against the rosy sky, the other ponies, out all night on the range, were trooping, driven by a cowboy who darted here and there on his nimble pony, giving shrill cries. In the clear air every syllable was sharp to the ear, every tint and line sharp to the eye. It was beautiful, very beautiful, and it was near and dear to her, native to her—this loveliness of quick action, of articulate calling of dumb beasts, of work of simple, often repeated beginnings. She was glad that she was working with her hands. She twisted up her hair and went over to the ranch-house where she began soberly and thankfully to light her kitchen fire.

It was after breakfast, two or three mornings later, when a stranger on a chestnut pony rode into Yarnall's ranch, tied his pony to a tree, and, striding across the cobbled square, came to knock at the office door. At the moment, Yarnall, on the other side of the house, was saying farewell to his guests, and helping the men pile the baggage into the two-seated wagon, so this other visitor, getting no answer to his knock, turned and looked about the court. He did not, it was evident, mind waiting. It was to be surprised from the look of him that he was used to it; patient and not to be discouraged by delay. He was a very brown young man of quite astounding beauty and his face had been schooled to keenness and restraint. He was well-dressed, very clean, an outdoor man, a rider, but a man who had, in some sense, arrived. He had the inimitable stamp of achievement. He had been hard driven—the look of that, too, was there; he had been driven to more than ordinary effort. One of the men, seeing him, walked over and spoke respectfully.

"You want to see Mr. Yarnall?"

"Yes, sir." The man's eyes were searching the ranch-house wistfully again. "I would like to see him if I can. I have some questions to ask him."

"He's round the house, gettin' rid of a bunch of dudes. Some job. Both hands tied up. Will you go round or wait?"

The stranger dropped to his heels, squatted, and rolled a cigarette.

"I'll wait," he murmured. "You can let him know when the dudes make their get-away. He'll get round to me. My name? It won't mean anything to him—Pierre Landis."

He did not go round the house, and Yarnall, being very busy and perturbed for some time after the departure of his guests, did not get round to him till nearly noon. By that time he was sitting on the step, his back against the wall, still smoking and still wistfully observant of his surroundings.

He stood up when Yarnall came.

"Sorry," said the latter; "that fool boy didn't tell me you were here till ten minutes ago. Come in. You'll stop for dinner—if we get any today."

"Thank you," said Pierre.

He came in and talked and stayed for dinner. Yarnall was used to the western fashion of doing business. He knew that it would be a long time before the young man would come to his point. But the Englishman was in no hurry, for he liked his visitor and found his talk diverting enough. Landis had been in Alaska—a lumber camp. He had risen to be foreman and now he was off for a vacation, but had to go back soon. He had been everywhere. It seemed to Yarnall that the stranger had visited every ranch in the Rocky mountain belt.

After dinner, strolling beside his host toward his horse, Pierre spoke, and before Yarnall had heard a word he knew that the long delay had been caused by suppressed emotion. Pierre, when he did ask his question, was white to the lips.

Diakka an Evil Spirit.

Diakka is a very evil and powerful spirit corresponding in some respects with the Jinn. In Mohammedan mythology the Jinn are good and bad spirits who assume the form of animals, plants, etc. In this same mythology there are also the Jannas, or demons of the lowest order. On old Persian tales they are referred to as the Afrit, but Longfellow, in his "Golden Milestone" (stanza 2), refers to them as belonging to Arabian story.—Literary Digest.

The Studebaker Light-Six Five-Passenger Touring Car

Don't Experiment Buy a 1924 Studebaker

The 1924 Studebaker Light-Six Touring car, with its refinements and improvements, offers the closest approach to mechanical perfection in moderate priced cars yet produced.

It continues to set the pace in the amount of value for the money invested. No radical departure from approved design has been attempted. There's nothing experimental about it—everything of recognized merit. Every vital unit has proved its satisfaction in the public use.

No matter how much money you expect to invest in a car, by all means see this Light-Six Touring car, ride in it—and drive it yourself. It is then that you realize the difference.

Comparison with other cars costing more—or less—will provide convincing proof of its greater dollar-for-dollar value, its dependable performance, ample power, extreme comfort, and many other desirable features.

The Light-Six is practically free from vibration because Studebaker machines the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces. No other manufacturer follows this practice on a car at anywhere near the Light-Six price. This is just one of many superlatives.

After seventy-one years, the name Studebaker enjoys confidence and respect more than ever.

New all-steel body of striking beauty. One-piece, rain-proof windshield with attractive cowl lights set in base. Quick-action cowl-ventilator. Door curtains, bound on three sides by steel rods, open with doors. Removable upholstery in tonneau. Door pocket flaps with weights hold them in shape. Upholstered in genuine leather. Large rectangular window in rear curtain. Thief-proof transmission lock.

In the Low Age. Roger had spent a last summer week in the country, and a few days ago he stopped at this same farm. The dog barked, wagged his tail and jumping upon Roger, tried to lick the lad's face. Delighted with such a welcome, Roger very earnestly said, "Sheep members when I was a little boy."

The Friendly Path

DON'T BE "COPY-CAT"

IMITATING is poor policy. Yet on every hand we find people living, dressing and amusing themselves the way others do for no particular reason other than, perhaps, to satisfy their desire not to permit anyone to get ahead of them.

Probably nothing proves a greater obstruction to the progress of the world than the folly of imitating. Certainly the desire so to do results in a great amount of unhappiness to men and women everywhere.

The only real advancement in any community or for the public at large must come through people doing new things or old things in different ways. Every important advance, with probably a few exceptions, has come to individuals and nations as a result of men or women taking new paths in order to accomplish something worth while for themselves and their fellows.

Because they cannot live in houses as fine as others, cannot wear as fine clothes and jewelry and cannot duplicate their neighbors' motors, a large, unfortunate class find little joy in living. Others work and growl all along their pathways because they spend too much in order to imitate their fellow men.

No individual ever stands out from his fellows unless he does something valuable which others cannot or are too lazy to do. It, therefore, is not difficult to understand why the few who occupy places of real honor are so few. Nor is it beyond understanding that so many seek high places and success in vain, because they either do not try to distinguish themselves by doing one important act which others fail to accomplish, or else aim no higher than others.

When one tries to imitate he is more likely to make a miserable failure than to succeed.

Muskrats imitate the beavers in housebuilding in the wilds along Lake Superior, but they remain muskrats just the same.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish, and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

A GOOD FRIEND

A good friend stands by you when in need. East Jordan people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. H. H. Cummings, prop. feed and grain business of Main St., endorsed Doan's many years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony? "My kidneys were not acting right and I had a dull ache in the small of my back just over my kidneys," says Mr. Cummings. "I used a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they acted promptly in correcting the action of my kidneys and ridding me of the backache and pains. I know Doan's have been beneficial to me." (Statement given Aug. 8, 1909.)

On April 23, 1920, Mr. Cummings added: "I haven't had any further need of a kidney medicine since Doan's rid me of the trouble years ago. I gladly confirm the statement I made before."

THE DOG SANDMAN STORY

FOX AND TURTLE MEET

ONE morning Mr. Fox happened to stop in the woods near some ferns where Mr. Turtle was resting. "Good morning, Grandpa," said Mr. Fox. "I expect you must be pretty tired, you travel so fast."

Mr. Turtle was slow to wretch. In the first place he did not mind being called grandpa, for he was very old, and in the next place he was so-wise that he was sorry for Mr. Fox, he was so young and flippant.

"Good morning, Mr. Fox," replied Mr. Turtle in a dignified manner. "I am not really in need of rest, but I like to take time to enjoy the things I see."

"Did you know, my good friend, that those who travel through the world swiftly miss a great deal that is going on?"

"I think I see about all that happens around these parts," answered Mr. Fox rather crisply, "and if I do say so, I travel at a pretty fast rate of speed."

"Yes, that you do," said Mr. Turtle, "especially when our enemy Mr. Dog is on your track, but, as I said, you miss a great deal."

"I should like to know what I miss," said Mr. Fox. "Away down there on the ground you must miss a great deal of what I can see."

"Perhaps, perhaps," murmured Mr. Turtle. "Did you ever see a spider's web all covered with dew, Mr. Fox, under a bush or a leaf where the sun can just touch it in the early morning?"

"Can't say that I did," replied Mr. Fox.

"Should Like to Know What I Miss." Mr. Fox rather crisply, "and if I do say so, I travel at a pretty fast rate of speed."

"Yes, that you do," said Mr. Turtle, "especially when our enemy Mr. Dog is on your track, but, as I said, you miss a great deal."

"I should like to know what I miss," said Mr. Fox. "Away down there on the ground you must miss a great deal of what I can see."

"Perhaps, perhaps," murmured Mr. Turtle. "Did you ever see a spider's web all covered with dew, Mr. Fox, under a bush or a leaf where the sun can just touch it in the early morning?"

"Can't say that I did," replied Mr. Fox.

"Should Like to Know What I Miss." Mr. Fox rather crisply, "and if I do say so, I travel at a pretty fast rate of speed."

"Yes, that you do," said Mr. Turtle, "especially when our enemy Mr. Dog is on your track, but, as I said, you miss a great deal."

"I should like to know what I miss," said Mr. Fox. "Away down there on the ground you must miss a great deal of what I can see."

"Perhaps, perhaps," murmured Mr. Turtle. "Did you ever see a spider's web all covered with dew, Mr. Fox, under a bush or a leaf where the sun can just touch it in the early morning?"

"Can't say that I did," replied Mr. Fox.

"You have missed a beautiful sight," answered Mr. Turtle. "Have you ever stopped to notice the ants at work, Mr. Fox?"

"Can't say that I have," said Mr. Fox.

"You have missed a wonderful sight," answered Mr. Turtle. "Have you ever watched the birds that nest near the ground feed their young, Mr. Fox?"

"No, I never have," replied Mr. Fox, beginning to feel uneasy. "I travel fast and I have no time for trifles, Mr. Turtle."

"You have missed a great deal, Mr. Fox. I may travel slowly but I have time to see what is going on around me, and that is more than you can say. The trifles, as you call them, are the things that count in life; remember that, my young friend."

"Just because you have four legs that carry you swiftly over the ground, do not think you have seen all there is in the world. Many of the most wonderful and beautiful things in the world are missed by those who run."

"Well, Grandpa, that sort of reasoning may be all well enough for you; but if I went nosing about the ground instead of keeping my head up where it belongs, I should miss being alive very soon and Mr. Dog—"

Off dashed Mr. Fox, for at that moment Mr. Dog came bounding through the bushes with a bark that made Mr. Turtle draw his head inside his shell and Mr. Dog ran over him without knowing he was there.

"Foolish young fellow," thought Mr. Turtle. "If he kept close to the ground as I do, he would keep out of trouble."

"Foolish old fellow," said Mr. Fox later, when he was safe in his den, thinking of Mr. Turtle. "Living down there on the ground as he does is dangerous. Someone might step on him. No, sir, I choose to have my swift feet to use even if I do miss a few cobs."

But, after all, Mr. Turtle was right in a way, for those who travel swiftly through life often miss the little things that go to make up the beautiful big things in life.

Fire Saturday almost totally destroyed the spacious Colonial Club at Charlevoix owned by John H. Koch of Toledo. The Club had been frequented by hundreds of summer residents of Northern Michigan. Early estimates put the loss at $50,000, covered by insurance. The fire originated in the kitchen from an overheated range, and the building, being a frame structure, the flames quickly spread to all parts. The Charlevoix fire department made every effort to save the contents of the building and the surrounding structures, among which is the owner's summer home. The damage caused by fire was increased by water. A new fireproof structure immediately will take the place of the old one, Mr. Koch announced.

Male Water Sheep. A San Francisco hardware firm received a request from the Orient for quotations on "male water sheep." No one in the office could understand what article was meant and the letter was posted on the bulletin board for all to see, with the three words underlined. Finally some outsider scribbled the suggestion, "Maybe he means hydraulic rams," and this interpretation turned out to be correct.

The Term Alter Ego. The first time the words alter ego were used in diplomatic sense, they were applied to the Spanish viceroys, when exercising the power of the king. They mean, "another or second I."

Friendly Philately.

Nature punishes neglect and plays no favorites. The neglected field becomes an unmanageable mass of tangled briars and rank weeds; the undrained swamp a stagnant cesspool—repulsive breeder place of varied flies and poisonous growths; the human brain an unclean generator of falsity and soul-blasting ideals unless directed into channels of realism and truth. Neglect is indeed costly.—J. E. F.

China Uses Ancient Methods.
The only modern-type paper mill known to have been tried in China failed on account of location, small local market and impatience for dividends. Four special papers made by old methods are: Bark paper, from the paper mulberry; so-called rice paper, sliced from a pith; coarse paper, from rice straw or reeds, and bamboo paper from young bamboo trees.

Quality of Horse Stock Improving

Market Prices for Good Big Animals Are Better and Demand Is Strong.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Although the number of horses in the country has been steadily decreasing...

Horses Show Decrease. At the end of 1922, there were 208,000 fewer horses and 50,000 more mules in the United States than at the beginning of that year.

A study of the stallion enrollment figures from 22 horse-producing states shows that the number of stallions has been decreasing at a lower rate than the total number.

THE BRAND-ING IRON

"I've taken a lot of your time," he said slowly. "I came to ask you about some one. I heard that you had a woman on your ranch, a woman who came in and didn't give you any history. I want to see her if I may."

He was actually fighting an unevenness of breath, and Yarnall, unemotional as he was, was gripped with sympathetic suspense. "I want," stammered the young man, "to know her name."

Yarnall swore. "Her name, as she gave it," said he, "is Jane. But, my boy, you can't see her. She left this morning."

Pierre raised a white, tense face. "Left?" He turned as if he would run after her.

"Yes, sir. These people I've had here took her away with them. That is, they've been urging her to go, but she'd refused. Then, suddenly, this morning, just as they were putting the trunks in, up came Jane, white as chalk, asking them to take her with them, said she must go. Well, sir, they rigged her up with some traveling clothes and drove away with her. That was six hours ago. By now they're in the train, bound for New York."

Yarnall's guest looked at him without speaking, and Yarnall nervously went on. "She's been with us about six months, Landis, and I don't know anything about her. She was tall, gray eyes, black hair, slow speaking, and with the kind of voice you'd be apt to notice . . . yes, I see she's the girl you've been looking for. I can give you the New York people's address, but first, for Jane's sake—I'm a pretty good friend of hers, I think a lot of Jane—I'll have to know what you want with her—what she is to you."

Pierre's pupils widened till they all but swallowed the smoke-colored iris. "She is my wife," he said.

Again Yarnall swore. But he lit a cigarette and took his time about answering. "Well, sir," he said, "you must excuse me, but—it was because she saw you, I take it, that Jane cut off this morning. That's clear. Now, I don't know what would make a girl run off from her husband. She might have any number of reasons, bad and good, but it seems to me that it would be a pretty strong one that would make a girl run off, with a look such as she wore, from a man like you. Did you treat her well, Landis?"

It had the effect of a lash taken by a penitent. The man shrank a little, whitened, endured. "I can't tell you how I treated her," he said in a dangerous voice; "it don't bear tellin'."

"That was three years ago; I am more like a man now. You'll give me the people's name, their address?"

Pierre laid his hand on the older man's wrist and gave it a queer urgent and beseeching shake.

After a moment of searching scrutiny, Yarnall bent his head. "Very well," said he shortly; "come in."

CHAPTER IV

Luck's Play.

A young man who had just landed in New York from one of the big, adventurous transatlantic liners hauled a taxicab and was quickly drawn away into the glitter and gaiety of a bright winter morning. He sat forward eagerly, looking at everything with the air of a lad on a holiday. He was a young man, but he was not in his first youth, and under a heavy sunburn he was pale and a trifle worn, but there was about him a look of being hard and very much alive. Under a broad brow there were hawk eyes of greenish gray, a delicate beak, a mouth and chin of cleverness. It was an interesting face and looked as though it had seen interesting things. In fact, Prosper Gael had just returned from his three months of ambulance service in France, and it was the extraordinary success of his play, "The Leopardess," that had chiefly brought him back.

"Dear Luck," his manager had written, using the college title which Prosper's name and unvarying good fortune suggested, "you'd better come back and gather up some of these laurels that are smothering us all. The time is very favorable for the disappearance of your anonymity. I, for one, find it more and more difficult to keep the secret. So far not even your star knows it. She calls you 'Mr. Luck' . . . to that extent I have been indiscreet."

Prosper had another letter in his pocket, a letter that he had re-read many times, always with an uneasy conflict of emotions. He was in a sort of hot-cold humor over it, in a fever-fit that had a way of turning into lassitude. He postponed analysis indefinitely. Meanwhile his eyes searched the bright, cold city, its crowds, its traffic, its windows—most of all, its placards, and not far to seek there were the posters of "The Leopardess."

He leaned out to study one of them; a tall, wild-eyed woman crouched to spring upon a man who stared at her in fear. Prosper dropped back with a gleaming smile of amused excitement. "They've made it look like cheap melodrama," he said to himself; "and yet it's a good thing, the best thing I've ever done. Yet they will vulgarize the whole idea with their infernal notion of 'what the public wants.' Moreis as bad as the rest of them!" He expressed disgust, but underneath he was aglow with pride and interest.

"Of course there's a performance tonight. I'll dine with Jasper. I'll have to see Betty first . . . His thoughts trailed off and he fell into that hot-cold confusion, that uncomfortable scorching fog of mood. The cab turned into Fifth avenue and became a scale in the creeping serpent of vehicles that glided, paused, and gilded again past the thronged pavements. Prosper contrasted everything with the grim courage and high-pitched tragedy of France. He could not but wonder at the detached frivolity of these money-spenders, these spinners in the sun. How soon would the shadow fall upon them, too, and with what change of countenance would they look up! To him the joyousness seemed almost childish and yet he bathed his fagged spirit in it. How high the white clouds sailed, how blue was the midwinter sky! How the buildings towered, how quickly the people stopped! Here were the pretty, painted faces, the absurd silk stockings, the tripping, exquisitely booted feet, the swinging walk, the tall, upspringing bodies of the women he remembered. He regarded them with impersonal delight, untinged by any of his usual cynicism.

It was late afternoon when Prosper, obedient to a telephone call from Betty, presented himself at the door of Morena's house, just east of the Park, off Fifth avenue; a very beautiful house where the wealthy Jew had indulged his passion for exquisite things. Prosper entered its rich dimness with a feeling of oppression—that unanalyzed mood of hot and cold feeling intensified to an almost unbearable degree. In the large carved and curtained drawing-room he waited for Betty. The tea-things were prepared; there would be no further need of service until Betty should ring. Everything was arranged for an uninterrupted tete-a-tete. Prosper stood near an ebony table, his shoulder brushed by tall, red roses, and felt his nerves tighten and his pulses hasten in their beat. "The tall child . . . the tall child . . ." he had called her by that name so often and never without a swift and stinging memory of Joan, and of Joan's laughter which he had silenced.

He took out the letter he had lately received from Betty and re-read it and, as he read, a deep line cut between his eyes. "You say you will not come back unless I can give you more than I have ever given you in the past. You say you intend to cut yourself free; that I have failed you too often; that you are starved on hope. I'm not going to ask much more of you. I failed you that first time because I lost courage; the second time, fate failed us. How could I think that Jasper would get well when the doctors told me that I mustn't allow myself even a shadow of hope! Now, I think that Jasper, himself, is preparing my release. This all sounds like something in a book. That's because you've hurt me. I feel frozen up. I couldn't bear it if now, just when the door is opening, you failed me. Prosper, you are my lover for always, aren't you? I have to believe that to go on living. You are the one thing in my wretched life that hasn't lost its value. Now, read this carefully; I am going to be brutal. Jasper has been unfaithful to me. I know it. I have sufficient evidence to prove it in a law court and I shall not hesitate to get a divorce. Tear this up, please. Now, of all times, we must be extraordinarily careful. There has never been a whisper against us and there mustn't be. Jasper must not suspect. A counter-suit would ruin my life. I must talk it over with you. I'll see you once alone—just once—before I leave Jasper and begin the suit. We must have patience for just this last bit. It will seem very long . . ."

Prosper folded the letter. He was conscious of a faint feeling of sickness, of fear. Then he heard Betty's step across the marble pavement of the hall. She parted the heavy curtains, drew them together behind her, and stood, pale with joy, opening and shutting her big eyes. Then she came to meet him, held him back, listening for any sound that might predict interruption, and gave herself to his face, Prosper, put some soul into it."

He talked and Betty laughed, showing not the slightest evidence of effort, though the soul Jasper had seen in Prosper's face felt shivered for her treachery. Prosper wondered if she could be right in her surmise about Jasper. The Jew was infinitely capable of dissimulation, but there was a clarity of look and smile that filled Prosper with doubts. And the eyes he turned upon his wife were quite as apparently as ever the eyes of a disappointed man.

So absorbed was he in such observations that he found it intolerably difficult to fix his attention on the talk. Jasper's fluency seemed to ripple senselessly about his brain.

"You must consent to one thing, Luck; you must allow me to choose my own time for announcing the authorship." This found its way partially to his intelligence and he gave careless assent.

"Oh, whenever you like, as soon as I've had my fun."

"Of course—" Morena was thoughtful for an instant. "How would it do for me to leave it with Melton, the business manager? Eh? Suppose I phone him and talk it over a little. He'll want to wait till toward the end of the run. He's keen; has just the commercial sense of the horn advertiser. Let him choose the moment. Then we can feel sure of getting the right one. Will you, Luck?"

"If you advise it, you ought to know."

And gave herself to his arms—

arms. She was no longer pale when he let her go. She went a few steps away and stood with her hands before her face, then she went to him by the table. They were both flushed. Betty's eyes were shining under their fluttering lids. Prosper rejoiced in his own emotion. The mental fog had lifted and the feeling of faintness was gone.

"You've decided not to break away altogether then?" she asked, giving him a quick glance.

He shook his head. "Not if what you have written me is true. I've had such letters from you before and I've grown very suspicious. Are you sure this time?" He laid stress upon his bitterness. It was his one weapon against her and he had been sharpening it with a vague purpose.

"Oh," said Betty, speaking low and furtively, "Jasper is fairly caught. I have a reliable witness in the girl's maid. There is no doubt of his guilt, Prosper, none. Everyone is talking of it. He has been perfectly open in his attentions."

Every minute Betty looked younger and prettier, more provoking. Her child-mouth with its clever smile was bright as though his kiss had painted it.

"Who is the girl?" asked Prosper. He was deeply flushed. Being capable of simultaneous points of view, he had been stung by that cool phrase of Betty's concerning "Jasper's guilt."

"I'll tell you in a moment. Did you destroy my letter?"

He shook his head.

"Oh, Prosper, please!"

He took it out, tore it up, and walking over to the open fire, burned the papers. He came back to his tea. "Well, Betty?"

"The girl," said Betty, "is the star in your play, 'The Leopardess,' the girl that Jasper picked up two Septembers ago out west. He has written to you about her. She was a cook, if you please, a hideous creature, but Jasper saw at once what there was in her. She has made the play. You'll have to acknowledge that yourself when you see her. She is wonderful. And, partly owing to the trouble I've taken with her, the girl is beautiful. One wouldn't have thought it possible. She is not charming to me, she's not in the least subtle. It's odd that she should have had such an effect upon Jasper, of all men."

Prosper sipped his tea and listened. He looked at her and was bitterly conscious that the excitement which had pleased and surprised him was dying out. That faintness again assailed his spirit. He was feeling stifled, ashamed, bored. Yes, that was it, bored. That life of service and battle-danger in France had changed him more than he had realized till now. He was more simple, more serious, more moral, in a certain sense. He was like a man who, having denied the existence of Apollon, has come upon him face to face and has been burnt by his breath. Such a man is inevitably moral. All this long, intricate intrigue with the wife of a man who called him friend, seemed to him horribly unworthy. If Betty had been a great lover, if she had not lost courage at the eleventh hour and left him to face that terrible winter in Wyoming, then their passion might have justified itself; but now there was a staleness in their relationship. He hated the thought of the long divorce proceedings, of the decent interval, of the wedding, of the married life. He had never really wanted that. He would have to take her, to spend his days and nights with her, to travel with her. She would want to visit that gay, little forsaken house in a Wyoming canyon. With vividness he saw a girl lying prone on a black rug before a dancing fire, her hair all fallen about her face, her secret eyes lifted impatiently from the book—"You had ought to be writin', Mr. Gael . . ."

"What are you smiling for, Prosper?" Betty asked sharply.

He looked up, startled and confused. "Sorry. I've got into beastly absent-minded habits. Is that Morena?"

Jasper opened the curtains and came in, greeting Prosper in his stately, charming fashion. "Tonight," he said; "we'll show you a leopardess worth looking at, won't we, Betty? But first you must tell us about your own experience. You look wonderfully fit, doesn't he, Betty? And changed. They say the life out there stamps a man, and they're right. It's taken some of that winged-demon look out of your face, Prosper, put some soul into it."

He talked and Betty laughed, showing not the slightest evidence of effort, though the soul Jasper had seen in Prosper's face felt shivered for her treachery. Prosper wondered if she could be right in her surmise about Jasper. The Jew was infinitely capable of dissimulation, but there was a clarity of look and smile that filled Prosper with doubts. And the eyes he turned upon his wife were quite as apparently as ever the eyes of a disappointed man.

So absorbed was he in such observations that he found it intolerably difficult to fix his attention on the talk. Jasper's fluency seemed to ripple senselessly about his brain.

"You must consent to one thing, Luck; you must allow me to choose my own time for announcing the authorship." This found its way partially to his intelligence and he gave careless assent.

"Oh, whenever you like, as soon as I've had my fun."

"Of course—" Morena was thoughtful for an instant. "How would it do for me to leave it with Melton, the business manager? Eh? Suppose I phone him and talk it over a little. He'll want to wait till toward the end of the run. He's keen; has just the commercial sense of the horn advertiser. Let him choose the moment. Then we can feel sure of getting the right one. Will you, Luck?"

"If you advise it, you ought to know."

"You see, I'm so confoundedly busy, so many irons in the fire, I might just miss the psychic moment. I think Melton's the man—I'll call him up tonight before we leave. Then I won't forget it and I'll be sure to catch him, too."

Again Prosper vaguely agreed and promptly forgot that he had given his permission. Later, there came an agonizing moment when he would have given the world to recall his absent, careless words.

With an effort Prosper kept his poise, with an effort, always increasing, he talked to Jasper while Betty dressed, and kept up his end at dinner. The muscles round his mouth felt tight and drawn, his throat was dry. He was glad when they got into the limousine and started theaterward. It had been a long time since he had been put through this particular ordeal and he was out of practice.

They reached the house just as the lights went out. Prosper was amused at his own intense excitement. "I didn't know I was still such a kid," he said, flashing a smile, the first spontaneous one he had given her, upon Betty who sat beside him in the proscenium box.

That Silent Voice.
Scientists can magnify the human voice 12,000 times, but they seem unable to do a darned thing for the voice of conscience.—Brockville (Ont.) Recorder.

Walking Sticks From Hedgerows.
Fifty per cent of our walking sticks come from English hedgerows. Particularly in Herefordshire and Worcestershire there are miles of hedges which are allowed to grow so tall that the magpies build in them. The man who supplies sticks in the rough pays the farmer a mutually agreed-upon sum per hundred for the privilege of cutting them, and these, roughly trimmed and still green, he sells to the manufacturer in the town.—London Daily Mail.

"We Serve Michigan"

Geographical isolation makes the Railroads of Michigan a transportation system like that of no other state. Most of our traffic either originates or ends in Michigan.

Bridge the Great Lakes with car-ferris and tunnel under the mighty connecting rivers, though we may, such accomplishments merely better our service to you; we are Michigan Railroads more than trans-continental traffic lines. Our train schedules are for Michigan, not for New York and San Francisco.

To a degree greater than any other state, Michigan's welfare, and the welfare of her Railroads, are therefore one and inseparable. You cannot fall back on trans-continental lines for emergency help; we must always rely on you for our chief support.

We can prosper only together.

Because of this mutual dependence, the twenty-four Railroads operating in Michigan have formed this Association with the purpose of strengthening the relations of the Railroads with the People of the State, by providing you with a clearing house for the exchange of ideas, relative to the transportation problems so vital to the prosperity of our Peninsular State.

We invite your suggestions toward bringing about a better understanding and closer cooperation between the Public and the Railroads. Communicate with this Association.

UNUSUAL HAPPENINGS AND OTHER BRIEF NEWS

Want To Elect Governor.
Washington—A commission will come to Washington from Porto Rico to urge that the organic law of the island be changed to permit the Porto Ricans to elect their own governor. The governor of Porto Rico is now appointed by the president.

Warship Guards Treasure Ship.
London—The salvage ship which has recovered $30,000,000 in gold bars from the sunken liner Laurentic, off the Irish coast, is under guard of a destroyer. The salvage vessel is a real treasure ship, with the decks literally covered with recovered gold.

Moore Saw to Paris Rule.
Paris—While things are going from bad to worse in the Spanish zone of Morocco, matters are much better in the French zone. The military campaigns on a large scale have virtually come to an end, though a few small subsidiary operations remain to be completed this autumn.

German Spuds Glut Market.
London—Thousands of tons of German potatoes have been dumped on the English markets, causing a serious loss to English growers. The price of potatoes has been forced down to about $27.50 a ton, whereas the growers say they lose money if they sell at less than $30 a ton.

Rebels Gain in Irish Tally.
Dublin—The returns in the Dail Eirean election showed that seats have been won as follows: Government candidates, 41; republicans, 23; independents, 14; farmers, 8; laborites, 9. The republicans appear to be improving their position and assert the belief that they will fulfill their own forecast and win 40 seats.

Harding's Body in Marion Vault.
Marion—The casket containing the body of the late President Warren G. Harding was placed in an asphalt sarcophagus, weighing 3,800 pounds. After the sarcophagus was sealed it was placed in the vault in the Marion Cemetery where the body was entombed several weeks ago. Later it will be placed in a mausoleum, which is to be constructed.

Draws Vice-President's Pay.
Washington—Whoever succeeds Calvin Coolidge as the presiding officer of the senate in the next congress will receive the salary of a vice-president instead of that of a senator, the comptroller general ruled. A vice-president's salary is $12,000 and that of a senator, $7,500. Senator A. B. Cummins, of Iowa, is president of the senate at present.

Chinese Soldiers Loot Town.
Amoy, China—Confirmed reports described a reign of loot and rapine by Cantonese soldiers operating recently in this region. Damage to the town of Unsho is estimated at $5,000,000. The Cantonese captured Hanchang, six miles from Amoy, and their commander, Brig. Gen. Lim Tee-yin allowed them two days of plunder. They left the population in terror.

Carries Sobriety Proof.
Birmingham—W. H. Hurry, possesses a certificate of sobriety from the city commission. Hurry told the city officers in open session that he was afflicted with locomotor ataxia, which made him stagger and waver when walking. He said he had been arrested four times in the last four months by policemen, charged with being drunk. Each time he was acquitted in court.

Chinese Move To Save Rails.
Peking—Chinese government heads partially completed plans to forestall the foreign diplomatic corps' demands for foreign supervision of Chinese railway police when the cabinet laid foundations for Chinese reorganization of railway guards by establishing a special police bureau under ministry control which is to be supreme in all matters affecting the policing of railways and railway zones.

Turks in Constantinople.
Constantinople—Following the ratification of the peace treaty by the national assembly at Angora, the allies are already fulfilling their pledge to evacuate, the first British transport clearing for Egypt carrying 1,500 men and considerable artillery. Other transports are loading, and it is expected that within three weeks the bulk of the allied troops will be away from Constantinople and the Dardanelles.

Gen. Gouraud Lauds U. S.
Verre—General H. J. E. Gouraud returned home on the steamer France, after his tour of the United States convinced him that the friendship America has for France is as deep as it was during the war. His first act upon landing was to cable his thanks and lasting affection to his comrades of the rainbow division. He described the emotion he felt when he greeted his American comrades of the great battle of July, 1918, the turning point of the war.

NOTABLE FEAT OF AVIATORS

Finish Trans-Continental Flights. Almost Between Sunsets.

Chicago—Crossing the continent almost with the hours from setting sun to setting sun, a feat accomplished by the U. S. air mail service, demonstrates the advancement in mail transportation from the day in 1880 when a bronzed rider of the Plains mounted a mustang at St. Joseph Mo., then a straggling frontier settlement, and began the eight-day dash over trackless plains and mountains to the news-hungry gold miners of Nevada and California.

The riders of today, their mustangs changed to giant mechanical birds winging their way across a country, friendly below, but beset in the element they travel by fogs, rain, crosswinds and mechanical troubles.

The first trans-continental air mail plane from San Francisco landed at Hazelhurst Field, L. I., with its letters and papers for New York and the east completing the eastward trip in the 28-hour coast-to-coast mail service being tested by the postoffice department. C. Eugene Johnson drove the machine on the last leg from Cleveland. The plane landed 59 minutes behind the trans-continental schedule.

The westward flight was completed when Air Mail Pilot Vance landed at Orissy field, San Francisco.

PAVEMENT FOR MAIN ROADS

Road Program Planned in Various Counties of State.

Lansing—The state administrative board affirmed the policy recently announced by Governor Groesbeck, of no more gravel surfaces on heavily traveled trunk line highways, by turning down several bids for roads of gravel type.

The highway department was directed to reject all bids for 3,345 miles on M-43 in Ionia county and 5.23 miles on the same route in Montcalm county. The board, after Governor Groesbeck had stated that this trunk line promised to be a heavily traveled route and should be surfaced with concrete, ordered that bids be asked for grading and draining, and that plans be made to pave the two stretches next year.

The board rejected bids for 1.9 miles of gravel on M-21 in Iosco county and asked for new bids on grading, with the idea of paving next year. It took the same action with M-25, between Sault Ste. Marie and Munising. Bids for 4.18 miles of pavement on M-10 north of Monroe, were turned down as too high. This average was about $42,000 a mile.

ENVOY TO BULGARIA IS SLAIN

Youth Held for Assassination in Czech Capital.

Prague—Three shots were fired at M. Daskaloff, the Bulgarian ambassador, and he died a short time later. His assailant, Atanas Nikoloff, a 26-year-old Bulgarian, was arrested. M. Daskaloff was appointed ambassador to Czechoslovakia under the regime of former Premier Stambulsky. When Stambulsky was overthrown in June of this year, the new Sofia government requested the Czech authorities to extradite Daskaloff, but the request never was complied with.

In December last, when M. Daskaloff was minister of interior, a bomb was thrown at his automobile as he was leaving the parliament building. No one was hurt.

Church of Silence for Deaf.

Chicago—Chicago's silent church congregation, composed of many of the 4,000 deaf of the city, will have a permanent church home. The deaf congregation holds services once a week. Every Sunday afternoon they come together from all parts of the city for their worship service of Scripture reading, sermons and hymns in the sign language. There is an illustrated stereopticon lecture, and by watching the signs they enjoy programs of readings, plays and songs.

Guard Little Chickens Against Many Accidents

Never place sacks of feed around the colony houses where they can tip over. Do not stand boards on the chick range where they can blow over. If anything blows over on a chick range it is a safe bet that you will find one or more crushed chicks underneath. Chicks just naturally seem to enjoy committing suicide if they have half a chance.

YOUR HAND How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE FINGER NAILS

FINGER nails that are unusually broad and long, show a disposition that is uncertain and inconsistent, and subject to bodily ailments. It is also held by some authorities that the possessors of such nails are in danger of being influenced too greatly by the opposite sex.

If the nails are long, but not too long, and properly proportioned, they are an indication of a well-balanced nature. Of course, this indication must be read in conjunction with other signs in the hand. But, speaking generally, the possession of such nails means a nature that is affable, agreeable, trustful, BUT NOT too confident. "These people will from youth understand deceitful purposes," says one authority.

Small, crooked nails, or nails that are bent at the point or apex, show ambition, courage and high spirit. Naturally, such natures are apt to be self-willed and impatient of contradiction or opposition.

Rotten Time Promised.
A Japanese invitation to dinner frequently runs as follows: "I beg your pardon for thus insulting you in begging your company at my house to dinner. The house is very small and very dirty. Our habits are rude, and you may not get anything fit to eat, and yet I hope that you will condescend to be present with us at 6 o'clock." You go, and you find everything exactly the opposite.—Boston Transcript.
