Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE THOROUGH MAN

WHO by habit are inclined to fritter away our time should give close attention to the thorough man and strive to emulate his worthy efforts. Give heed to him as he confronts his task in the morning, whether it be at the anvil, behind the counter, at the desk or at the head of a great industry.

Observe the decisive directness with which he makes his approach, equipped mentally and physically to drive ahead at a gait that is maintained until the close of the day.

He knows what he wants to do and does it without hesitation.

He is every inch a thorough man. He knows it and those about him know it. He untangles obstinate skeins, settles disputes and goes through stone walls without bluster. He permits nothing to annoy or disconcert him. His "yes" and "no" cut to the core, but they never exhibit anger.

About the only emotion he shows is his intensity of purpose, which in some subtle manner stirs the most phlegmatic soul within his presence to renewed activity.

He weighs his acts before he sends them out to do his bidding, having as a result no listless fear of the outcome.

Never disinclined to learn he is ever studying new ideas, getting new slants on old problems, shortening distances between starting points and the goal he visualizes in the distance.

At his first shot he may miss the mark, but he comes back with a larger quiver of arrows, a stronger bow and keeps shooting until he scores a clean hit.

He does not scold wrongdoers when they frankly repent, but rather praises the moral courage that admits the truth. This is the thorough man who knows his duty to himself and others, who achieves and attains white the irresolute look on abashed. If you ask him, he will tell you that his willpower and patience and endurance are given him by "faith in the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen."

OUTDOOR GARDENER

To Supply Table With Vegetables

Goldframe Is Advocated as Means of Providing the Crispy Greens.

Kitchen gardens were a necessary adjunct to the home in the earlier days, but at present a kitchen coldframe is advocated as a means of supplying the family table with fresh lettuce, parsley, radishes, cress, and other vegetables at periods of the year when it is too cold to grow these things in the open ground. While it is true that the coldframe may not give very good results during the winter months, especially in the northern part of the country, yet in the early spring excellent results may be had from its use, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

The construction of a coldframe is comparatively simple, as the side walls may be made of boards, brick, hollow tile or concrete. Where the construction is of boards, cypress lumber should be used, and it is a good plan to have the walls made double and some dry straw or planing mill shavings packed in the space between them. If the walls are of brick, they should be plastered, both inside and out, to make them air-tight. Hollow-tile walls should also be plastered the same as brick.

One of the best types of construction is simply to put in a little foundation, then set up frames and tamp in well-mixed concrete consisting of about three parts clean, broken stone or gravel, two parts sharp sand and one part cement. The ingredients should be placed on a mixing board or in a box and thoroughly mixed while dry, then water added gradually and the mass turned three or four times until it is thoroughly mixed and is of a consistency that can readily be tamped as it is put into the forms.

The size of coldframe to build will depend upon circumstances. Standard coldframe or hotbed sash are 3 by 6 feet in size and the frame may be constructed to accommodate one, two, or even as high as five or six of these sashes. The front or south wall of the coldframe should be about 12 inches in height, while the rear or north wall should be 24 to 30 inches high, and the ends sloping to correspond with the front and rear walls. Wooden plates, preferably of 2 by 6 cypress material, should be bedded on top of the wall and held in place by bolts that extend down into the concrete. Rafters upon which the sash rest are fitted to these plates. At the upper side of the bed a sort of overhanging board should be put on in such manner that the end of the sash will slide up beneath it, making the bed tight. The lower end of the sash should extend slightly over the edge of the bed to carry off the water.

In addition to the sash covering, straw mats, blankets or even old carpet may be used to keep out cold. Where the coldframe can be located on the south side of the garage, this will give it extra protection. A well-constructed bed of this character will provide lettuce and other salad crops without the application of artificial heat. Plants may be started in the living room during February and planted in the bed in March, giving a supply of salad for the table during the spring months or until outdoor lettuce, radishes and spinach can be grown.

ORNAMENTAL BARBERRY

Thunberg's barberry, one of the Japanese barberries, is a handsome ornamental and defensive hedge plant. It will grow four or five feet high and as many broad. It may be left without trimming or be trained into a compact formal hedge. It bears an abundance of bright red berries that hold on the plant all winter, but does not harbor the wheat-rust fungus.

LIKE RICH SOIL

Annual flowers especially responding to rich soil: Castor bean, scarlet sage, cosmos and china bean.

for Every Season

Popular Vegetable Should Be Started Indoors to Get Good Plants.

Lettuce has come to be a staple vegetable on the table. It appears in many families almost as often as potatoes and fills a dietary need quite as important. It supplies in cheap and most palatable form the vitamins A, B and C, which have been discovered to play so large a part in health maintenance.

Next to Swiss chard, lettuce is the most profitable vegetable for the home gardener. It will be found even more useful than chard, for it will be welcomed on the table every day, which can hardly be said of chard. Every well-planned home garden should provide for a succession of lettuce crops which will provide the finest quality for the longest season, and this takes careful planning.

Lettuce is a cool-season crop. When not summer comes it runs to seed so quickly that from the last of July to the first of September it is possible only in shaded beds, carefully tended, which comparatively few will bother with. But during the rest of the garden year some variety of lettuce is possible.

There are four types of lettuce generally grown in this country—leaf, butter-head, crisp-head and cos. All lettuces tend to make heads. In some sections it takes coaxing to make any of them head. It requires to be grown fast, without check, to produce the tender, sweet leaves that we enjoy. The soil, then, must be light, quickly warmed, as rich as possible, especially in nitrogen, and there should be a plentiful supply of water. The richest spot in your garden should be chosen for lettuce and then it should be manured, if possible, and additional feeding with nitrate of soda is advisable.

The first variety to sow is head lettuce, which should always be started indoors. The plants may be set outdoors as soon as the garden soil can be prepared. Keep a reserve in case the first planting should be killed by a hard freeze. In very rich soil, with such an early start, head lettuce of these varieties should be ready in 70 days from date of sowing.

When the head lettuce is set out sow seed of a leaf variety. This may be sown thickly and thinned out to one plant every two inches. Alternate plants may then be harvested half grown, until a spacing of six inches has been reached. All lettuce varieties need at least six inches in the row to reach full growth, and some need more.

Seed of a crisp-heading type, such as New York, the largest of lettuce varieties, or Mignonette, one of the smallest and surest to head, may be sown at the same time as the leaf varieties, and the seedlings transplanted when they make true leaves. New York must have at least a foot between plants in the row. It will mature slowly, stand hot weather well and furnish the last crop of the first season.

Cos lettuce, or romaine, which many esteem as the finest of lettuces, may be started indoors or outdoors to fit into the succession where one pleases. It matures in about 80 days. For the fall season omit the crisp-heads and start the desired varieties in a shaded seed bed in July to be transplanted when the cool weather comes in late August.—National Garden Bureau.

Dandelions, Regarded as Nuisance, Fine Greens

Yellow heads and green leaves of dandelions are among the first things to bob up on lawns in spring. They are so early that they usually come along in the footsteps of the robin, spreading over the entire greensward so rapidly that grass is frequently crowded out.

"General nuisance" is the term dandelions go by wherever lawnkeepers have the experience of trying to kill them, but in many sections cooks find they add another variety to the list of early vegetables—"greens" and salads. Experts' tests have verified the opinion of the practical cook. Tender dandelions can be made use of in various ways, according to home economic specialists.

One way to handle dandelions, according to Miss Katherine Howells of the home economics division, Iowa State college, is to cut off the roots, separate and thoroughly wash the leaves, dry them in a cloth, and they should be marinated a few minutes before serving in French dressing seasoned with a few drops of onion juice. The leaves are also boiled in salted water until tender and served with butter and vinegar. They may be canned by the cold pack method.

Born in Hull, England, in 1903, Dorothy Mackall, "movie" star, now in pictures in this country, appeared in pictures first in her own country. Later she played in France. She was educated in her home town in England. She is a blond, having blue eyes.

BELLA

YEARS ago when Bella's school reports used to come home with spelling always far below grade, Bella's mother used to say, "She takes after me; I never could spell. All geniuses are bad spellers."

Bella, indeed, rather cultivated had spelling after that.

Then came the day when instead of coming out as they had planned, Bella found herself an orphan without a cent in the world. She asked her friends what one did under such circumstances, and they all said, "Become a social secretary." So Bella found herself engaged to write the invitations and choose the costumes and plan the parties of Mrs. Newcomb. Things went smoothly and the Newcombs progressed under Bella's guidance. Then came the great event upon which the success of failure of the winter—from the Newcombs' point of view—depended. The planning of the whole affair as usual was handed over to Bella. And cards went requesting "the presents of" everyone with whom the Newcombs were planning to play during the coming season. Perhaps no one would have noticed anything out of the ordinary had not the papers somehow got hold of an invitation. The Newcombs were serious-minded folk and there had never been any geniuses in their family; so Bella began to revise her opinion of the importance of spelling as she sat in her hall bedroom without a job and wondered what next.

Then came the letter from Mrs. Browne asking her to spend the two weeks of Cornelius' vacation at their place in the country. Bella was cheered. Knowing Mrs. Browne to be a stickler for form, and determined to benefit from experience, she looked up all the words in a dictionary before she mailed her answer. Two days later she set forth in her best gown. She was a little surprised to be met at the station by a servant instead of by some member of the family. She had expected Cornelius. On arriving at the house she was taken to her room by a maid. Then they filed into the dining room. During a lull at the table Mrs. Browne brought up the subject of names.

"Nothing seems to me more inexcusable," said Bella's hostess, "than carelessness in the spelling of proper names. I never forgive a person who leaves off my 'e.'" Then Bella understood.

At this crisis she had a simple inspiration. She would study spelling, and be careful of proper names! Of course Mrs. Browne did forgive the omission of that "e," and Cornelius rescued Bella from the hall bedroom. But she never forgot the mishap due to bad spelling. Years later when her own little daughter brought back a bad spelling report from school she was heard to say:

"Good spelling is just a matter of attention and effort. It is a habit and can be acquired. Only foolish people and slovens neglect the habit of good spelling."

Diversified Farming Is Winning Friends Find Stock Profitable Side Line in the West.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The effective farm trio—the cow, the hog, and the hen—have recently won many friends in a wheat-growing county of the West, Douglas county, Wash. This dry-land section had been planting wheat and buying most of its butter and eggs and using much canned milk and cream. For the last three or four years the county agricultural extension agent, leading farmers, and business men of the county have been endeavoring to bring about the gradual addition of enough live stock on the wheat farms to help feed the family and make a good contribution toward running expenses. Most of the Douglas county men have made the change in their farming systems by degrees, beginning with only a few animals, generally three or four cows, two brood sows, and about 50 chickens. As the growing of feed crops permits and skill in handling live stock develops, the stock and herds usually are built up to the amount of live stock the farm should carry.

How generally this diversified farming plan has been developed in the county is shown by the fact that instead of importing butter, eggs, and cream, as was the case three years ago, there was shipped out of the county during the year ending May 1, 1923, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, a surplus of over 6,000 cases of eggs, 18,000 pounds of butter, and 46,000 gallons of cream. In addition, it is estimated that the amount of poultry and dairy products used in the county has more than doubled in the three years.

Planting Up Barn Lots Is Beneficial to Animals

Hog raisers may accomplish two desirable results by plowing up the barn lots at least once a year. In the first place, hogs need good succulent pasture as much of the time as possible, and in the second place, they need protection against internal parasites, such as round worms, the eggs of which remain in the soil. Turning the soil in the lots helps to get rid of the pests and the crop of forage makes it a profitable operation, writes Jack L. Eaker in the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

In addition to providing cheap protein feed, pasture crops aid as a laxative and require the hogs to take a certain amount of exercise which is necessary to breeding animals and growing pigs.

Rye is probably the best crop to use for winter and spring pasture for hogs. By putting in successive plantings from two to four weeks apart it is possible to have fresh pasture all the time. Seeding for pasture should be much heavier than for grain crop; from three to four bushels per acre on a good soil is best. Pasturing can begin six weeks after seeding, and may be continued if the rye is not covered with snow, until the following April.

Plant Soy Beans About Same Time as Corn

The best time for planting soy beans is about the same as for corn. Drill in 28-inch rows for cultivation using 30 pounds of seed per acre or drill solid using 75 pounds of seed per acre. If the ground is weedy it is best to plant in rows. If not, drill the beans solid. Midwest or Ito San are advised for this purpose. If soy beans have not been grown on the land before inoculation is necessary. Mix with each bushel of seed three or four quarts of soil taken from the roots of beans in a field that has been well inoculated. A 20-bushel crop of soy beans requires about two-thirds as much phosphoric acid and potash as a 60-bushel crop of corn. Use at least 100 pounds of acid phosphate or its equivalent per acre each year for soy beans. If no stable manure is used on the land it is best to apply a mixed fertilizer containing phosphoric acid and potash.

When about half the leaves have fallen and the majority of the pods appear nearly ripe the crop should be harvested. If the beans are left in the field too long the pods may shatter badly, resulting in loss of seed.

Paint Farm Implements With Used Oil and Grease

Old greases and oils from automobiles, trucks and tractors, need not be thrown away. Instead, pour them into a receptacle and put them to entirely different uses. One is to mix with coal dust enough oil to make the mass a little pasty and use the stuff as fuel. Coal dust is often a waste otherwise and is more or less of a nuisance to handle dry, but when mixed with the oil it not only hangs together but also burns well. Still, another use is to paint the bright surfaces of farm implements with the old grease to stave off the formation of rust.

It Is Necessary to Feed Sows Plenty of Protein

The greater the number of pigs raised per sow the less the cost per pig. The unborn pig is built largely of protein, hence the necessity of feeding plenty of protein to the sow from breeding to farrowing time in order that she may produce a large, strong, thrifty, vigorous litter. The brood sow should have either one-half pound of tankage, one pound of linseed oil meal, one pound of soy beans or a gallon of skim milk or buttermilk per day to furnish the needed protein.

Something to Think About
 By F. J. WALKER

SERIOUS FACTS
 WHEN we mortals turn from the beaten track and find that we are at a place where we must pause and meditate upon the serious facts confronting us, we are frequently inclined to become ill-humored and listless.
 A sort of mental strabismus darkens our vision and numbs our bodies, caused in a large measure by our disinclination to touch upon anything of a serious nature. We dislike to go ahead among the dark shadows where the ghosts of the past are lurking.
 The open sunshine is always preferable for the reason that it dissipates doubt and permits us to see clearly without effort.
 Indeed, the great majority of our relatives, and ourselves included, prefer the frivolous to the profound. We incline to touch lightly, to grasping with all our strength.

We fall at once into the state of the school boy when the trees are budding and the air is soft and warm. He tosses a dependable coin to decide whether he shall take his place in the classroom among serious teachers, and still more serious books.
 He returns home at night with a string of fish, a new freckle or two, and goes early to bed, brooding over the seriousness of his plight. He will remember for life when he is told on the morrow that it is the serious men and women who do things. He will tell you that had Sir Isaac Newton not been the serious-minded man he was, the fall of an apple would not have revealed to him the law of gravitation.
 What the thoughtless term "good luck," if you will look into the matter deeply, may be traced to serious thought. You may con your Greek verbs, or play hide and seek with your Latin, but if you are not really serious in your studies you can never master them.

To move forward day by day in your sphere of endeavor requires the quality of seriousness that made Washington so dearly beloved by his armies, and gave to Lincoln an enduring name.
 To the serious-minded, earnest persons, the world is indebted for its greatest inventions and loftiest achievements.
 We want a little more seriousness in our work, and decidedly less dejection, and when we get it, paradoxical though it may seem, we shall be more cheerful and infinitely happier.
