CONTEST FOR MAYOR POLLS LARGE VOTE

Nearly Seven Hundred Electors Register Their Choice.

H. P. Porter Wins Women Electors A Strong Factor in the Decision.

Howard P. Porter won the election for Mayor of the City of East Jordan for the coming year at the polls last Monday. His majority over Mayor Dicken being 188.

Without question, the number of citizens who availed themselves of the franchise was the largest in the history of our municipality.

The women electors were the deciding factor in the contest, they casting nearly 50 per cent of the total number of ballots.

The total number of ballots cast for Mayor was 692, and was divided as follows:

| | Dicken | Porter |
|-------------|--------|--------|
| First Ward | 51 | 89 |
| Second Ward | 77 | 117 |
| Third Ward | 133 | 234 |
| Totals | 261 | 440 |
| Majority | | 179 |

Circular letters issued by both contestants at the eleventh hour proved rather interesting, as it shed a little light on the City's finances. To The Herald publisher this was absolutely unnecessary, had the City's officials complied with the charter provision for an annual statement.

The Charter of the City of East Jordan, chapter six, and part of Sec. 18, reads as follows:

"At the end of the fiscal year, the commission shall cause a full and complete audit of all books and accounts of the city to be made by competent accountants, and shall publish the result of such audit, showing a complete detailed statement of each of the departments preceding year's business together with a summary thereof in the same manner as shall be employed for the publication of the statement of monthly expenditures. Such statement of audit shall also contain a statement of all outstanding bonds, including the date of issue, rate of interest, amount of principal and interest having been paid, amount unpaid, when due and for what purpose issued."

For many years this yearly statement has not been published, the existing city administration holding that it was unnecessary.

The Herald holds that the tax-payers of our City are entitled to this yearly statement, and had it been made each year, the sworn statements appearing in the circulars issued would have been unnecessary.

Intolerance Is Deadly.

If you want your conscience to be the world's guide, in it because you love the world or merely want to boss it? Intolerance is one of the seven deadly sins—and the meanest.

"The Toys" Are Coming

At High School Auditorium
Next Wednesday.

On account of the serious illness of the Skibinsky-Reed Duo, we are to hear the famous Australian violinist, assisted by Eva Leslie Toy, pianist and contralto, Wednesday, April 16th.

If advanced notices from the Lyceum Bureau on "The Toys" are to be taken seriously, we are indeed to be congratulated on the coming concert.

At a school board meeting some time ago it was decided to drop the Lyceum Course for the coming year, largely on account of lack of patronage, notwithstanding the fact that the past year we have had one of the strongest Courses in all northern Michigan. In fact, the comment from a great number of people has indicated that those who attended our Course this year have been highly pleased.

Is it a fact that East Jordan cannot retain such a valuable institution as the Lyceum Course? I hope that enough of our citizens will recognize the value of this institution to show it by their attendance Wednesday. At least some institution may become interested enough to back us in a Course next year but the school will no longer try to give East Jordan something they do not want.

Something about "The Toys." Ernest Toy handled his first violin at the age of six years, and at ten he began his public performances in London, where he attracted the attention of musicians. At the age of eleven, Mr. Toy won the open Eisteddfod music competition at Newcastle, New South Wales, and later this was repeated at the Royal Welsh Eisteddfod, at Caernarvon, North Wales. Soon after this at the age of fifteen, he won the Society of Arts Medal, London, and at this time, the Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII, was president of this society. At sixteen, he won coveted honors at the Royal Academy in London, after which he made an extended tour of Australia and New Zealand, since three times repeated. Later he made successful tours through France and was soloist with many of the orchestras throughout the English provinces. Mr. Toy has had the distinction of touring with Melba and John McCormack, and has been concert master with the leading orchestras in Australia.

Eva Leslie Toy is an honor graduate of the leading piano school of Boston, has studied with the eminent master, Carl Faeltenk and coached with some of the leading teachers of Chicago. She has shown marked ability in her chosen profession and is able and earnest in all her efforts. Mrs. Toy has been called one of the best accompanists on the road, and added to this, she possesses a rich contralto voice which she uses with simplicity and rare charm. Mrs. Toy has proven herself a capable and inspiring support to her husband.

The usual prices will prevail, which are 50c and 75c.

New Plaids Featured in Children's Clothes

Plaids may come and plaids may go in other fabrics, but in gingham they go on forever. Manufacturers have made dainty interpretations of them in silk and wool, and the new gingham follow this lead—therefore little plaids are in for a summer of pretty frocks.

White pique collar and bands, piped with a plain color, finish off the model of fine designing shown above.

At six o'clock that evening Francis turned his two-seater into a winding drive bordered with rhododendrons, and pulled up before the porch of a charming two-story bungalow, covered with creepers, and with French windows opening from every room on to the lawn. A man-servant who had heard the approach of the car was already standing in the porch. Sir Timothy, in white flannels and a Panama hat, strolled across the lawn to greet his approaching guest.

"Excellent! my young friend," he said. "You will have time for your first cocktail before you change. My laughter you know, of course. Lady Cynthia Milton I think you also know."

Francis shook hands with the two girls who were lying under the cedar tree. Margaret Hilditch seemed to him more wonderful than ever in her white serge boating clothes. Lady Cynthia, who had apparently just arrived from some function in town, was still wearing muslin and a large hat.

"I am always afraid that Mr. Led- sam will have forgotten me," she observed, as she gave him her hand. "The last time I met you was at the Old Bailey, when you had been cheating the galleys of a very respectable wife murderer. Poynings, I think his name was."

"I remember it perfectly," Francis assented. "We danced together that night, I remember, at your aunt's, Mrs. Malcolm's, and you were intensely curious to know how Poynings had spent his evening."

"Lady Cynthia's reminder is perhaps a little unfortunate," Sir Timothy observed. "Mr. Ledsam is no longer the last hope of the enterprising criminal. He has turned over a new leaf. To secure the services of his silver tongue, you have to lay at his feet no longer the bags of gold from your ill-gotten gains but the white flower of the blameless life."

"This is all in the worst possible taste," Margaret Hilditch declared, in a cold, expressionless tone. "You might consider my feelings."

Lady Cynthia only laughed.

"My dear Margaret," she said, "if I thought that you had any, I should never believe that you were your father's daughter. Here's to them, anyway," she added, accepting the cocktail from the tray which the butler had just brought out. "Mr. Ledsam, are you going to attach yourself to me, or has Margaret annexed you?"

"I have offered myself to Mrs. Hilditch," Francis rejoined promptly, "but so far I have made no impression."

"Try her with a punt and a concertina after dinner," Lady Cynthia suggested. "After all, I came down here to better my acquaintance with my host. You flirted with me disgracefully when I was a debutante, and have never taken any notice of me since. I hate infidelity in a man. Sir Timothy, I shall devote myself to you. Can you play a concertina?"

"Where the higher forms of music are concerned," he replied, "I have no technical ability. I should prefer to sit at your feet."

"While I punt, I suppose?"

"There are backwaters," he suggested.

Lady Cynthia sipped her cocktail appreciatively.

"I wonder how it is," she observed, "that in these days, although we have become callous to everything else in life, cocktails and flirtations still attract us. You shall take me to a backwater after dinner, Sir Timothy. I shall wear my silver-gray and take an armful of those black cushions from the drawing room. In that half light there is no telling what success I may not achieve."

Sir Timothy sighed.

"Alas!" he said, "before dinner is over you will probably have changed your mind."

"Perhaps so," she admitted, "but you must remember that Mr. Ledsam is my only alternative, and I am not at all sure that he likes me. I am not sufficiently Victorian for his taste."

The dressing-bell rang. Sir Timothy passed his arm through Francis'.

"The sentimental side of my domain," he said, "the others may show you. My rose garden across the stream has been very much admired. I am now going to give you a glimpse of the Walled House, an edifice the possession of which has made me more or less famous."

He led the way through a little shrubbery, across a further strip of garden and through a door in a high wall, which he opened with a key attached to his watch-chain. They were in an open park now, studded with magnificent trees, in the further corner of which stood an imposing mansion, with a great domed room in the center, and broad stone terraces, one of which led down to the river. The house itself was an amazingly blended mixture of old and new, with great wings supported by pillars thrown out on either side. It seemed to have been built without regard to any definite period of architecture, and yet to have attained a certain coherency—a far-reaching structure, with long lines of outbuildings. In the park itself were a score or more of houses, and in the distance beyond a long line of loose boxes with open doors. Even as they stood there, a gray sorrel mare had trotted up to their side and laid her head against Sir Timothy's shoulder. He caressed her surreptitiously, affecting not to notice the approach of other animals from all quarters.

"Let me introduce you to the Walled House," its owner observed, "so called, I imagine, because this wall, which is a great deal older than you or I, completely encloses the estate. Of course, you remember the old house, the Walled Palace, they called it? It belonged for many years to the Lynton family, and afterwards to the Crown."

"I remember reading of your purchase," Francis said, "and, of course, I remember the old mansion. You seem to have wiped it out pretty effectively."

"I was obliged to play the vandal," his host confessed. "In its previous state, the house was picturesque, but uninhabitable. As you see it now, it is an exact reproduction of the country home of one of the lesser known of the Borgias—Sodina, I believe the lady's name was. You will find inside some beautiful arches, and a sense of space which all modern houses lack. It cost me a great deal of money, and it is inhabited, when I am in Europe, about once a fortnight. You know the river name for it? Timothy's Folly!"

"But what on earth made you build it, so long as you don't care to live there?" Francis inquired.

Sir Timothy smiled reflectively.

"Well," he explained, "I like sometimes to entertain, and I like to entertain, when I do, on a grand scale. In London, if I give a party, the invitations are almost automatic. I become there a very insignificant link in the chain of what is known as Society, and Society practically helps itself to my entertainment, and sees that everything is done according to rule. Down here things are entirely different. An invitation to the Walled House is a personal matter. Society has nothing whatever to do with any functions here. The reception rooms, too, are arranged according to my own ideas. I have, as you may have heard, the finest private gymnasium in England. The ballroom and music room and private theater, too, are famous."

"And do you mean to say that you keep that huge place empty?" Francis asked curiously.

"I have a suite there which I occasionally occupy," Sir Timothy replied, "and there are always thirty or forty servants and attendants of different sorts who have their quarters there. I suppose that my daughter and I would be there at the present moment but for the fact that we own this cottage. Both she and I, for residential purposes, prefer the atmosphere there."

"I scarcely wonder at it," Francis agreed.

They were surrounded now by various quadrupeds. As well as the horses, half a dozen of which were standing patiently by Sir Timothy's side, several dogs had made their appearance and after a little preliminary enthusiasm had settled down at his feet. He leaned over and whispered something in the ear of the mare who had come first. She trotted off, and the others followed suit in a curious little procession. Sir Timothy watched them, keeping his head turned away from Francis.

"You recognize the mare the third from the end?" he pointed out. "That is the animal I bought in Covent Garden. You see, how she has filled out?"

"I should never have recognized her," the other confessed.

"Even Nexo had his weakness," Sir Timothy remarked, waving the dogs away. "My animals' quarters are well worth a visit, if you have time. There is a small hospital, too, which is quite up to date."

"Do any of the horses work at all?" Francis asked.

Sir Timothy smiled.

"I will tell you a very human thing about my favorites," he said. "In the gardens on the other side of the house we have very extensive lawns, and my head groom thought he would make use of one of my horses which had recovered from a serious accident and was really quite a strong beast, for one of the machines. He found the idea quite a success, and now he no sooner appears in the park with a halter than, instead of stampeding, practically every one of those horses comes cantering up with the true volunteering spirit. The one which he selects, arches his neck and goes off to work with a whole string of the others following. Dodsley—that is my groom's name—tells me that he does a great deal more mowing now than he need, simply because they worry him for work. Gratitude, you see, Mr. Ledsam, sheer gratitude. If you were to provide a dozen almshouses for your poor dependents, I wonder how many of them would be anxious to mow your lawn. Come, let me show you your room now."

They passed back through the postern-gate into the gardens of the Sanctuary. Sir Timothy led the way toward the house.

"I am glad that you decided to spend the night, Mr. Ledsam," he said. "The river sounds a terribly hackneyed place to the Londoner, but it has beauties which only those who live with it can discover. Mind your head. My ceilings are low."

Francis followed his host along many passages, up and down stairs, until he reached a little suite of rooms at the extreme end of the building. The man-servant who had unpacked his bag stood waiting. Sir Timothy glanced around critically.

"Small but compact," he remarked. "There is a little sitting room down that stair, and a bathroom beyond. If the flowers annoy you, throw them out of the window. And if you prefer to bathe in the river tomorrow morning, Brooks here will show you the diving pool. I am wearing a short coat myself tonight, but do as you please. We dine at half-past eight."

Sir Timothy disappeared with a courteous little inclination of the head. Francis dismissed the man-servant at once as being out of keeping with his quaint and fascinating surroundings. The tiny room with its flowers, its perfume of lavender, its old-fashioned chintzes, and its fragrant linen, might still have been a room in a cottage. The sitting room, with its veranda looking down upon the river, was provided with cigars, whisky and soda and cigarettes; a bookcase, with a rare copy of Rabelais, an original Surtees, a large paper Decameron, and a few other classics. Down another couple of steps was a perfectly white bathroom, with shower and plunge. Francis wandered from room to room, and finally threw himself into a chair on the veranda to smoke a cigarette. From the river below him came now and then the sound of voices. Through the trees on his right he could catch a glimpse, here and there, of the strange pillars and green-domed roof of the Borgias villa.

CHAPTER XI

The little party at the Sanctuary sat over their coffee and liqueurs long after the fall of the first twilight, till the points of their cigarettes glowed like little specks of fire through the enveloping darkness.

At last Lady Cynthia rose to her feet and shook out the folds of her diaphanous gown, daring alike in its shapelessness and scantiness. She lit a cigarette and laid her hand upon Sir Timothy's arm.

"Come," she said, "must I remind you of your promise? You are to show me the stables at the Walled House before it is dark."

"You would see them better in the morning," he reminded her, rising with some reluctance to his feet.

"Perhaps," she answered, "but I have a fancy to see them now."

Sir Timothy looked back at the table.

"Margaret," he said, "will you look after Mr. Ledsam for a little time? You will excuse us, Ledsam? We shall not be gone long."

They moved away together towards the shrubbery and the door in the wall behind. Francis resumed his seat.

"Are you not also curious to penetrate the mysteries behind the wall, Mr. Ledsam?" Margaret asked.

"Not so curious but that I would much prefer to remain here," he answered.

"With me?"

"With you."

She knocked the ash from her cigarette. She was looking directly at him, and he fancied that there was a gleam of curiosity in her beautiful eyes. There was certainly a little more abandon about her attitude. She was leaning back in a corner of her high-backed chair, and her gown, although it lacked the daring of Lady Cynthia's, seemed to rest about her like a cloud of blue-gray smoke.

"What a curious meal!" she murmured. "Can you solve a puzzle for me, Mr. Ledsam?"

"I would do anything for you that I could," he answered.

"Tell me, then, why my father asked you here tonight? I can understand his bringing you to the opera, that was just a whim of the moment, but an invitation down here savors of deliberation. Studiously polite though you are to one another, one is conscious all the time of the hostility beneath the surface."

"I think that so far as your father is concerned, it is part of his peculiar disposition," Francis replied. "You remember he once said that he was tired of entertaining his friends—that there was more pleasure in having an enemy at the board."

"Are you an enemy, Mr. Ledsam?" she asked, curiously.

He rose a little abruptly to his feet, ignoring her question. There were servants hovering in the background. "Will you walk with me in the gardens?" he begged. "Or may I take you upon the river?"

She rose to her feet. For a moment she seemed to hesitate.

"The river, I think," she decided. "Will you wait for three minutes while I get a wrap. You will find some punts moored to the landing-stage there in the stream. I like the very largest and most comfortable."

Francis strolled to the edge of the stream, and made his choice of punts. Soon a servant appeared with his arms full of cushions, and a moment or two later, Margaret herself, wrapped in an ermine cloak. She smiled a little deprecatingly as she picked her way across the lawn.

"Don't laugh at me for being such a chilly mortal, please," she enjoined. "And don't be afraid that I am going to propose a long expedition. I want to go to a little backwater in the next stream."

THE COTTAGE GARDENER

Need Only Simple Tools for Garden Spade, Rake and Hoe Will Be Sufficient for Your Small Space.

Nearly every hardware store and practically all of the seed houses keep a supply of garden tools for sale. The amateur gardener is often tempted to purchase a larger number of tools than is justified by the results obtained in a small garden. The three most essential tools recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture are a spade or spading fork, a hoe, and a rake. The question as to whether a spade or spading fork should be purchased will depend upon the character of the soil. If the soil is heavy and of a clay nature a spade will be best for turning it up, but if it is gravelly, sandy or loamy, the spading fork will put it in better condition than will the spade. When it comes to the selection of a hoe, just a plain, thin-bladed hoe about 6 or 7 inches in width is best. A pointed or marking hoe may be rather desirable, but the marks in which to plant seeds can practically all be made with the corner of the regular hoe. A rake is needed for pulverizing the soil, and here again the plainest and simplest type of steel rake is best.

In selecting any of these tools the quality of the material in the blade or metal part and a good, straight-grained, smooth handle are the essentials. To these tools the gardener can easily add a few simple implements of his own manufacture. These may consist of a couple of wooden stakes and a line of any strong cord, a paddle made from a shingle or thin piece of board and a little scratcher made by driving three wire brads through the end of a piece of lath. The line should be used for all planting in order to have the rows straight, the paddle is suitable for setting the plants, and the scratcher is useful for working between small plants.

When the tools such as spade or spading fork, hoe and rake are purchased from the store, the metal parts will be bright and new, and, as a rule, the handles have no paint or other dressing upon them. It is a good plan to give the handles a thorough coating with shellac, as this will help keep the moisture from penetrating them. The blades should be kept bright and clean and oiled with any good grease, to which is added about one part lime to three parts oil in order to counteract any free acids that may be present in the oil. Just oil alone does not make a good coating for bright surfaces, as the free acid contained in the oil may cause the implements to rust even while thoroughly coated with the grease and lime will correct this acid condition of the oil. Keeping the tools housed in a dry place is most important in connection with their preservation. Never, under any circumstances, should a spade or spading fork be left standing in the soil, as the chemical elements of the soil will immediately attack the steel and a good spade may be completely ruined by standing in the soil overnight.

HARDY PERENNIALS

In planting hardy perennials on the home grounds they should be planted in irregular clumps at appropriate openings in the shrubby groups but not in bands or ribbons either along the shrubbery, the foundation of the house, or the borders of the lawn.

YUCCAS

The yuccas, including Adam's needle and beargrass, are excellent evergreen summer flowering plants for dry situations.

Mother's Cook Book

What a great thing common sense is—when we practice it. I'll bind myself to that which, once being right, will not be less right when I shrink from it.—Kingsley.

THE SPRINGTIME GREENS

IT IS well to be forehanded in planning for the early spring vegetables and greens. Too often the season is past before we realize how much we have missed by not serving often the common weeds and greens of the wayside. The piquant appetizing water-cress may be found all winter on the banks of running brooks. One should eat freely of this splendid green; its peppery flavor makes it very tasty served with lamb chops and eaten with just a dash of salt. As a salad with a sliced radish and onion and a highly-seasoned French dressing it is especially well liked.

Dandelion greens are well known. Those who have tried them have found such tender morsels under protecting boards or hidden from the light—the white bleached dandelions—which, served with chopped onion and any kind of salad dressing are truly worth while.

Another dressing to be used over the fresh uncooked greens is:

Dutch Dressing.

Wash and drain one pint of tender greens, cut into two-inch pieces. Cut two ounces of bacon into small cubes and fry until crisp and brown. Beat one egg until light; add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-quarter of a cupful of water, one-quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Pour this mixture into a frying pan with the bacon; mix well, stirring constantly until thickened. It should be about of the consistency of cream. Pour hot over the greens and serve at once.

The tender onions, the multipliers, are early, full of mineral salts and vitamins which are needed to keep the body in good health.

The poke in the South, the milkweed stalks in the North, cooked just as they first come up, are tender, nicely flavored and as tasty a dish as much of the early asparagus.

Dock and wild mustard make very good cooked greens, as well as the sheep sorrel and ragweed so common in the field. Lamb's quarters cooked with dandelion greens have flavor as well as variety.

Asparagus With Buttered Crumbs.
Boil a bunch of asparagus. Place on a platter. In a saucepan put four tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of fresh bread crumbs; fry a deep brown. Sprinkle over the asparagus with salt, pepper and minced parsley. Garnish with sliced, hard-cooked eggs. Serve with melted butter.

Two or Three Plantings Will Assure the Industrious Cottage Gardener a Continuous Supply of Beans, One of the Most Welcome Treats That Come From the Home Garden.

Should Profit by His Own Mistakes

Careful Gardener Can Easily Obviate Errors of Past Season.

There is small hope for those who do not profit by their mistakes. Recently in a meeting of about 150 home gardeners, those present were asked to recount some of the mistakes that they made in the conduct of their gardens last season. Here are some of them, gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture for the benefit of the readers of the Cottage Gardener column. The first of these gardeners to confess stated that the greatest mistake he made was in planting most of his crops too early and before the ground had become sufficiently warm. As a result many of the seeds failed to grow and the garden had to be planted over again and was late in maturing. Another of the gardeners said that his greatest mistake was in not making several plantings of certain crops such as beans, corn, beets, lettuce, spinach, etc. His mistake was in making but one planting of each, then when the crops were gathered he had nothing more coming on. Successive plantings of many of the garden crops pay well.

Poor preparation of the soil was the mistake made last year by a large number of the gardeners who attended the experience meeting. Persons who have not had a farm or market garden training seldom appreciate the need of thoroughly preparing the soil before planting. Letting the weeds get a start was the major mistake of another group of the gardeners. The time to kill weeds is when the seeds first sprout in the soil and before they become established. One gardener said that his greatest mistake was in allowing the bugs to get ahead of him and that his crops were reduced in yield as a result. Another gardener stated that he did not arrange his garden properly and that the taller crops shaded the low ones. One planting of beans in the home garden gives the family a taste—two plantings gives them a fair supply—and three plantings will provide plenty for the greater part of the summer.

Several hundred varieties of lettuce are included in our American seed trade catalogues, but two or three varieties will give sufficient range for family use, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Head lettuce, such as Iceberg, New York, May King and Big Boston, can be grown in the early spring and late fall while the weather is reasonably cool. Loose-leaf lettuce, such as Black Seeded Simpson, Grand Rapids and Cos, or Romaine, are more heat resistant than the heading sorts. Radishes have been grown ready for the table in 14 days after planting, and three small plantings will give an abundance of crisp radishes for the family table from the middle of May until the 1st of July in the latitude of Washington, D. C. Golden Bantam sweet corn, out of the garden and over the fire and on the table in less than an hour after it is pulled, is food for kings.

Planting Time at Hand.

Back Yard Garden and Its Problems

Soil, Seeds, Sunshine, Moisture and Brains Among Essentials.

Records kept through a period of several years by about 300 cottage gardeners indicated, or proved rather, that a well-cultivated vegetable garden paid them at the rate of about 85 cents an hour for their labor and on an acreage basis the returns at market prices were about $850 an acre. Not all the gardens yielded at this rate, many of them not half that amount, but a considerable number gave higher results so that the average for those recorded was about $85 from a tenth-acre garden.

Results like the above are seldom obtained in general farming or truck growing and come only from intensive cultivation. Of all the land under cultivation, however, the cottage or home garden should be handled the most intensively and large yields secured. According to the garden experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, there are a few very important points in the management of a dividend-paying home garden.

Five ingredients, soil, seeds, sunshine, moisture and brains, must be carefully and painstakingly blended in order to make the garden pay the highest dividends. Without each one of the ingredients the mixture will fall flat and be recorded among the list of failures, but with all five harmoniously blended and backed by a reasonable amount of work, the results are in nine cases out of ten most satisfactory. The soil may be anything from rocks to fine sandy or silt loam or a mixture of all of them. Any soil that is not too hopeless may be made to produce, if enough manure, fertilizer, lime, wood ashes and labor are expended upon it. Usually it is the lot of the cottage gardener to take whatever in the way of soil and location fate has allotted to him and then make the best of it. Manure and wood ashes are hard to obtain, but commercial fertilizers and lime can be had in abundance. The labor he can supply himself and credit it to much-needed exercise if he feels so inclined. Dead weeds, leaves, street sweepings, where they do not contain oil, also refuse from the kitchen may be worked into the soil to add organic matter.

Good seeds are just as essential as good soil. Why go to all the trouble of getting the soil in condition if something worth while is not planted upon it? Where can good seeds be procured? Almost anywhere, of well-established seed dealers, but there is a great difference in seeds and it pays to get the best even though the cost is a little higher. If the garden is to pay dividends the crops must be planted at the proper time and seeds should be ordered early and be on hand when wanted for planting.

Vivacious Sports Coat in Large, Soft Plaid

Always heretofore, in each season's procession of new fabrics, we have looked for a little band of plaids, but this spring they appeared all along the line in every sort of material. They are lending much vivacity to the semi-sports coats which answered for all-round wear. Ample sleeves and collars, large patch pockets and swag-gar style make these coats popular.

Year Conversation
MEANDER
The "Meander" was a river in Asia Minor which was proverbial in ancient geography for its twisting, turning course which it followed to the sea. It has given its name to the noun "meander," which means a winding course, and to the verb "meander," which means to wander about with frequent turnings.

Simple Rule to Follow in Feeding Dairy Cows

Perhaps one of the easiest rules to follow in feeding the dairy herd is to give each animal all the good roughage, such as legume hay and silage, that she will consume, and feed one pound of grain per day for each three or four pounds of milk, depending upon its richness, which the cow gives. In figuring silage, the rule is to feed about three pounds per each 100 pounds of live weight. With some animals these rules can be varied, but the average cow will usually produce a satisfactory return when they are followed.

On This Light-Six Touring Car

By our matchless facilities—our enormous production

HERE is a car priced at $1,045. Built by ordinary methods it would cost you from $200 to $400 more.

It is in scores of ways the leader of its class. No rival car compares in the value that it offers.

Let us tell you how we give that value, then urge you to see this car.

A sensation Studebaker is today the world's largest builder of quality cars. Studebaker success is the sensation of Motordom.

Sales have almost trebled in three years. Last year, 145,167 people paid $201,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

There are tremendous reasons for this rush to Studebaker cars. And every man who buys a car should know them.

72-year traditions

The Studebaker name has for 72 years stood for quality and class. To build an ordinary car under that name is unthinkable.

Our assets are $90,000,000—all at stake on serving you better than all others.

We have $50,000,000 in model plants, equipped with 12,500 up-to-date machines. We have 23,000 workers, under profit-sharing plans which lead them to stay and develop.

We spend on engineering $500,000 yearly. We employ 1,200 men to give 32,000 inspections to each Studebaker car in the making.

We are lavish We are lavish in things that count.

We pay 15% bonus on some steels to get them exactly right. We use genuine leather in our cushions. We use curled hair.

We use more Timken bearings in this Light-Six than any competitive car within $1,500 of its price.

Our bodies are beautiful creations. The finish and coach work show the final touch. But we build them in $10,000,000 body plants of our own, and pay for these extras in savings.

Where we save

We save by enormous production—150,000 cars per year. Our major costs are all divided by that enormous output. It is utterly impossible for smaller makers to compete.

We save by modern plants, mostly built in the past five years. We save by up-to-date machines. By building our own parts and bodies.

See what this car offers

Come see what this Light-Six offers. How it excels in scores of ways any rival car.

Built with the same steels, the same care and skill, as the costliest of our cars. We have only one grade of chassis.

See its beauty, its comfort, its luxury. See how we have studied your every desire.

Do that and you will choose this car, if you have in mind a price anywhere near this.

Mail us the coupon below. We will send you free our new book that will inform you on five simple things which reveal the value of a car. For instance—

It will enable you to look at any car and tell whether it's been cheapened to meet a price or offers true quality.

It will tell you why some cars rattle at 20,000 miles and others don't. It shows one single point in a closed car which measures whether you're getting top or medium quality. The book is free. Clip the coupon below.

Woman's Statement Will Help East Jordan.

"I hated cooking because all I ate turned sour and formed gas. I drank hot water and olive oil by the gallon. Nothing helped until I used Adierika." Most medicines act only on lower bowel but Adierika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes all gas and poisons. Excellent for obstinate constipation. Helps any case gas on the stomach in TEN minutes.—GIDLEY & MAC, Druggists.

TWOKILLED, 15 HURT IN KU KLUX RIOT

SERIOUS OUTBREAK AGAINST HOODED BAND ENDS IN FATAL SHOOTING.

50 KLAN MEMBERS ARRESTED

Stream of Water From Fire Hose Played On Marchers—Third Outbreak in Month.

Lilly, Pa.—Two men and a boy were shot dead and 15 wounded, three of them so critically their chances of recovery is slight, and 50 klansmen were arrested following a battle here that made the most serious outbreak of the animosity between klansmen and their opponents in this part of the state.

About 500 klansmen came here by special train. They proceeded to Piper's Hill, on the outskirts of the town, performed their ceremonies and were on their return to the Pennsylvania railroad station when the rioting started. Hissees and jeers were directed at the robed visitors and threats of violence were heard.

Then a score of young men dragged a hose from the fire house to the railroad station, a distance of about 400 yards, and directed a stream of water upon the departing tribe. Almost immediately a shower of bullets came from the ranks of the clan.

Five or six of the apparent leaders of the clan who were in the front, according to witnesses, fired into the crowd which numbered about 600, but those in the rear discharged their weapons in the air.

With the first sounds of shots the crowd fled, leaving the wounded on the street.

The klansmen began a retreat into their waiting train, in which they departed from Lilly a few minutes after the fatal shooting.

Most of the members of the Klan in custody were arrested when their special train arrived in Johnstown.

The klansmen came from a wide district, as addresses given by 50 members of the order under arrest show. Many are from Johnstown and the southern part of Cambria county, several from Blair county and a few from Indiana county. Forty-five revolvers were confiscated by the police.

The trouble was not entirely unexpected. Klansmen had visited here twice during the last month and in each instance erected fiery crosses which residents promptly tore down upon the departure of the hooded order.

NEW DRY FLEET READY SOON

Fleet of 300 Boats Will Attempt to Stop Rum Running.

Washington—The first units of the coast guard's new prohibition navy probably will be ready to put to sea within a few weeks. With an additional $18,000,000 available under a recent congressional appropriation, coast guard officials have drawn up detailed plans for the acquisition of some 300 large and small vessels equipped to chase rum runners away from American shores and for an enlarged personnel to man them.

The nucleus of the force will be 20 destroyers, which congress authorized the coast guard to purchase from the navy.

The plan to provide a sufficient personnel contemplates an active recruiting campaign and graduation this fall of next year's class of officers at the coast guard academy at New London.

In all nearly 5,000 additional officers and men will be required to man the fleet.

Hale, commanding officer of the Sixth Corps area, with headquarters in Chicago. The regular army troops from the various stations throughout the Corps area have been ordered to proceed to Camp Custer to arrive there on May 1.

The first body of troops to arrive for training will be the R. O. T. C. These students will go direct to camp as soon as their schools and colleges close.

The other troops to receive training this year will be the National Guard units from he Illinois and Wisconsin National Guards, the Organized reserves from Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois and the Citizens Military Training Camps' association.

Woman's Ashes Scattered in Lake

Syracuse, N. Y.—In fulfillment of a request that her body should find its last resting place in the waters of Onondaga Lake, on the shores of which she played as a child, the ashes of Mrs. Frances Freer Wingland, who died at 77 in Sioux City, Ia., were scattered through a hole in the ice by George Keith, aged resident of Liverpool who is her cousin. The ice was quite thick and it was a difficult task for the old man, but he cut the hole unaided.

Turn On The Current

HEALTH TALK NO. 11

DO YOU believe in electricity? Do you believe in its power to make the street car run? If you do, I can in a few moments' talk convince you of the Vital Force, or human electricity, in the body. Man does not run the street car, he simply turns on the current. Man cannot run your physical being, but he can turn on the human electrical current—that's what the competent Chiropractor does.

IF YOU don't believe in this human electrical current of nervous energy, then how do you account for the fact that the paralytic cannot raise the paralyzed arm? Why is he paralyzed? What is lacking except the human electrical current or mental impulse. The proof of this lies in the fact that these patients come to us and, without the use of drugs or instruments, massage or vibrator, but with only the two hands, we adjust the vertebrae of the spine, removing the pressure from the nerves, thus releasing this current so that it can flow freely to the paralyzed arm and the patient gets well. This is equally true of every organ in the body.

HEALTH FOLLOWS Chiropractic Vertibral Adjustments. All I ask is a chance to prove my claim that my adjustments will restore health in most cases where other methods have offered no relief.

The Dipper's Pointers.
The two stars in the side of the dipper, opposite to the handle, are called the "pointers," because they point to the pole star, or North star.

Automatic Egg Boilers.
Kitchens of the large hotels are equipped with automatic egg boilers which, besides registering the number of minutes the eggs are to be boiled, will turn out of the hot water when the time is up.

A Dry Lubricant.
When a window shade roller refuses to hold, dust some talcum powder on the "live" end roller and work it under and around the latches. Talcum powder is made from soapstone and is a dry lubricant.

For English Singing Bees.
London gives little encouragement to writers of cantatas, but the provincial centers offer inducements to produce music of such dimensions.
