WHAT'S A TOURIST WORTH TO WEST MICHIGAN?

Few tourists come to West Michigan and leave again, without the feeling that they have received one of the most wholehearted receptions they ever found in any territory they visited. The spirit of our hospitality shown our visitors makes a West Michigan vacation the best the country offers. For West Michigan residents have learned how to welcome the tourist.

They have learned, too, that hospitality, unlike virtue, is not alone its town reward; there is a definite amount of money that each tourist spends in the section he visits that makes him a profitable addition, to it. When he comes to West Michigan he buys food and lodging and many incidentals; if he comes by automobile he must have gas and oil, and often other accessories. A man on a vacation is apt to spend liberally—what he spends does much towards the prosperity of the places he passes through.

At a meeting of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association some time ago an investigation was made to determine exactly how much a tourist was worth to West Michigan. It was estimated that the average tourist was worth $7.00 per day. On this basis the sum of $40,000,000 was said to be directly traceable to people who responded to last year's West Michigan publicity.

Now, apparently, this figure was too conservative, for the state of Wisconsin reports an average of $11.50 per day per tourist, and other states find Michigan's estimate too conservative, so the market price of a tourist has gone up. This year, with a larger influx of visitors than ever before in the history of West Michigan, hospitality is going to pay bigger dividends than ever. It is our business as well as our pleasure to treat the visitor with the utmost courtesy and friendliness.

Keys That Wander Off

REGISTERED KEY RING FREE!

Nothing more annoying than to reach the shop, or the office, or home and discover your keys are missing. Nowhere around—"gone for good," you say.

But they're not—if they carry your registration plate. Most keys are found, but few owners have any identification marks to make possible their return. The key-rings we have had made for the people of East Jordan and vicinity bear our name on a tag and a registration number. The number we enter in our records, with the name and address of the owner. When keys come in—and they do many times a month—it's a few moments job to establish the identity of the loser.

There's a Key Ring and number here for you—with our compliments. Stop in Saturday, May 17th and have it registered.

KEEPING COOL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

DURING the days when the sun pours down upon us and the thermometer climbs up to the one-hundred mark, no one seems willing to let his neighbor forget the weather.

"Is it hot enough for you?" the grocer's boy queries as he runs in with the day's provisions. "Pretty hot day," a professor ventures, mopping his dripping dome as he speaks. "Some weather," the elevator boy says as I make my exit.

Keeping cool is quite as much a matter of temperament as of temperature; it is a state of mind as well as condition of the weather. The people who stand the heat the worst are those who never allow themselves to forget it, who talk about it continually, who are never still, who rush from one place to another in a frenzy of desire to find a cool spot; who fuss and fume and fan until they are red in the face and running perspiration. The best way to keep cool is to go about your work methodically, be as quiet as you can, and forget the weather.

It is much the same way with the other worries of life. We grow hot over the slights and insults, we are agitated over our misfortunes as we talk of them, and let our minds dwell upon them, and exaggerate them. We are constantly tending the fires of anger or resentment or they would shortly burn themselves out.

The man who under stress and irritation and misrepresentation can keep his balance, can control his temper and his tongue, can subdue the rising emotions, has conserved his own strength, has made it possible for himself to do more and better work, and has more than half defeated the purposes of his opponent.

"How can you sit so calmly and say nothing?" I asked a friend of mine some time ago, who was the subject of a bitter, untruthful personal attack. "Because the cooler I keep the hotter and the weaker his words become," was the answer.

So far as we can, we may better take the hot words and hot days quietly, without comment, without physical agitation. There is a force and a strength in keeping cool.
