Styles That Suit the Younger Girls

Tulle silk is a friend, tried and true, to every daughter of Eve, from the time of her first perky little party frock to that of her last sweetly dignified afternoon gown. It is most kind to the awkward age when sharp angles must be softened. Its crispness and color make it very flattering, especially in beruffled frocks like that one pictured.

Thrift thought: If you can't begin saving today you won't have the chance to begin tomorrow.

The trouble with the average movie is that it is just that.

Where are we going to get our statesmen when there are no more log cabins to be born in?

The Thermoscope

Chelsea—Starr Commonwealth for Girls has taken possession of Starr Cottage on the shore of Cedar lake. The school is intended to provide a home for homeless girls.

Ablion—William Krebs, 40, is dead, and his wife and their four children were seriously injured here as a result of an auto crash at a grade crossing of the New York Central railroad.

Kalamazoo—After his car figured in two automobile accidents within 20 minutes, Grover Goodsell was arrested. In an attempt to save his life, surgeons had amputated his leg above the knee.

St. Charles—Six little children, ranging in age from six months to six years, played with matches and caused the total destruction of a grocery and two homes, while the children themselves had a narrow escape from death in the fire.

Muskegon—Telegrams were received here by relatives announcing the death of John Kelly, former Muskegon manufacturer, at Hollywood, Calif., and his sister, Mrs. Henry Vaughn, of Chicago. The two died within a few hours.

Ablion—Cassius Osgood, driver of a new motor truck for the Michigan Express Co. here, escaped death by jumping from his seat just before a Michigan Central passenger train hit the machine at a local crossing. The truck was demolished.

Mt. Clemens—Norman Geiseler, star pitcher of the high school base ball team, narrowly escaped death while hooking up a radio set. He came in contact with a wire of the Detroit Edison Co., and was badly burned about the hands and chest.

Man Throws Self Beneath Train. Hamilton, Ont.—Despondent because he lost both his hands in an industrial accident some months ago, Walter Clemont Fitton threw himself under the wheels of a locomotive and was instantly killed.

Aim to Cut Railway Crossing Toll. Albany, N. Y.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith has signed a bill which, it is believed, will decrease grade crossing accidents. Under this bill all railroads will have to provide gates or similar safety devices or station a flagman at each grade crossing.

Income Tax Charge Bring $3,500 Fine. Chicago—Mortimer B. Flynn, millionaire head of Pottinger & Flynn, coal dealers, will have to pay $3,500 fine and $250,000 for a settlement, because he withheld $57,000 due on his 1921 income tax. He pleaded guilty before Judge Carpenter.

Stockholm will be the distributing point for these cars, not only for Sweden, but also for Finland, Russia, and the other countries of northeastern Europe.

Mines Found in Eastern Baltic Sea. Lubeck, Germany—Mine fields, covering 280 square miles, have been discovered in the eastern Baltic, off Finland. The mines are from the World War. This is taken here as confirming the finding of the Stettin Marine office that the recent sinking of a German ship in the Baltic was due to the explosion of a mine.

Coughs Up Vicksburg Bullet. Lanett, Ala.—W. V. Meadows was shot in the eye at the Battle of Vicksburg. The doctors immediately probed for the bullet, but couldn't find it. Recently he had a violent coughing spell, and the bullet rolled out on the table. The bullet was in the form of a slug and weighed about an ounce. Meadows is 78 years old.

Bulgarian Pupils Must Do Work

Bulgaria has a new "compulsory labor service law" under which the pupils of the public schools do the work about the buildings. Girls of a Sofia school are here seen washing the windows. The idea is a combination of economy and manual training.

WM. A. SHEPARD BUYS HOLSTEIN BULL OF LOEB FARMS

Wm. A. Shepard, well known East Jordan dairyman, bought a fine young Holstein bull of Loeb Farms last week. This is a straight Ormsby-bred bull on his sire's side and from a dam that is rich in Pontiac blood. The dam has several excellent records and is a nice individual, being very straight on the rump with a good middle and is heavy for his size, a type favored by Mr. Shepard, who is well pleased with his purchase.

Game Goes to Traverse City

East Jordan Loses Out in Ten Inning Contest.

East Jordan was defeated at Traverse City last Sunday in a ten inning game, score 6 to 5. It was an exciting contest at all times, as first one team then the other was ahead.

A hit batsmen, a missed third strike and Sam Kamradt's single put two runs across the plate for East Jordan in the first inning. Traverse City made one score in the first with two hits and another in the second with two hits. Bennett's single, a passed ball and Hank Kamradt's double was responsible for our third tally in the third. Traverse City tied the score in the fourth with a double and a single and took the lead in the fifth scoring two runs on two singles and a wild throw. Thiel took Rewa's place in the box for Traverse City at the start of the sixth and we promptly tied the score on Ward's single, Hank Kamradt's double, a base on balls to Sam Kamradt and DeLoof's sacrifice fly. Traverse City made the winning run in the tenth on a base on balls and two singles.

Traverse City will play a return game here next Sunday. Rewa the speed ball artist from Grand Rapids, who pitched the first five innings for them Sunday will likely pitch for the visitors. DeLoof will be in the box for East Jordan. Game called at 2:30 p. m. We play at Alpena, Sunday, May 25th.

"The Cloverland Special"

Loeb Farms Stock Goes Into The Upper Peninsula

Thursday of last week Loeb Farms received a visit from E. G. Amos, ass't county agent leader connected with the Michigan Agricultural college extension department, and James G. Hayes, Holstein extension expert and secretary of the Michigan Holstein-Friesian association.

After a thorough inspection of the herd of 150 head of purebred Holsteins, they picked out 10 bulls of good individuality whose breeding also met with their approval, 9 of the 10 being from tested dams with good records. These bulls will be kept at the farm and further conditioned for "The Cloverland Special," a dairy demonstration train that next month will visit every agricultural district of the upper peninsula.

This train has been made possible largely through the co-operation of all the railroads operating in the upper peninsula. It will be equipped for demonstration purposes; types of grade purebred and "scrub" stock will be carried as object lessons. Dairy experts and railroad representatives will accompany the train, which will visit 35 stations. The programs in each community will be in charge of local committees. The bulls may be auctioned or sold direct to the farmers.

This brings the total of yearling bulls sold by the farm during the past few weeks to 20, which is regarded by the management as very encouraging. Shipments have been made to Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and to the upper and lower peninsulas. All purchasers have been well pleased with the animals ordered through correspondence.

One of the best bulls ever bred on the farm has been consigned to the Fifth Co-Operative National Sale to be held at Richmond, Virginia, June 5 and 6. His dam is Kolrain Eleanor Pontiac Korndyke, dam of Kolrain Marion Finnerde, whose son sold at the Cleveland National last year for $3,750.00, the present high mark for a bull bred and raised at the farm. Eleanor and Marion hold the world's record for a year's milk production, dam and daughter combined. Eleanor has a record of 1143 lbs. butter from 26,995 lbs. milk made last year, and is completing another year of splendid production. This bull is a good individual and should sell well.

The cheese factory is now buying all milk available and is making cheese daily. A shipment of 3,500 lbs. in 20-lb. Daisies went out over the Pere Marquette Tuesday.

SENATE TAX BILL PASSED 89 TO 15

PROVIDES FOR REDUCTION OF 25 PER CENT ON INCOMES PAYABLE THIS YEAR.

MELLON PLAN IS IGNORED

Conference to Adjust Differences of House and Senate Bills. G. O. P. Leaders Ask Veto.

Washington—Stripped almost of every vestige of the Mellon plan and clothed in the Democratic program, the tax reduction bill was passed by the Senate, 89-15.

As a result, it went to conference for adjustment of differences with the House with its life at stake. Republican organization leaders in the Senate frankly admitted they would recommend veto of the measure by President Coolidge if it was transformed by the conference.

Important provisions on which the House and Senate are in practical agreement are:

A cut of 25 per cent on all income taxes payable this year.

Reduction of 25 per cent on earned incomes. The House set $20,000 as the maximum to which this cut could be applied, and the Senate reduced it to $10,000.

Reductions in many of the miscellaneous and excise taxes and repeal of a number, with the excise rate changes effective 30 days after enactment of the bill.

These excise taxes ordered repealed by both the House and Senate and the amount of revenue involved are:

Telegraph and telephone messages, $34,000,000; beverages, $10,000,000; candy, $13,000,000; knives, dirks and daggers, $30,000; liveries, $14,000; hunting, shooting and riding garments, $180,000; yachts and motor boats (sale) $319,000; carpets, rugs, etc., $1,800,000; theatres, circuses, shows (door tax) $1,000,000; drafts and promissory notes, $2,150,000.

Both the Senate and the House agreed to the following excise tax reductions:

Exempt theater admission of 50 cents and under from 10 per cent tax, loss of revenue, $33,000,000; cut in half five per cent tax on automobile tires and tubes, loss of revenue, $21,000,000; exempted automobile trucks, chassis of which sell for less than $1,000, loss of revenue, $5,000,000; cut in half tax on produce exchange sales, loss of revenue, $4,000,000.

The normal rates in the Senate bill are two per cent on incomes under $4,000; four per cent on incomes between $4,000 and $8,000, and six per cent above $8,000. The House provided similar rates except five per cent on incomes between $4,000 and $8,000.

On surtaxes, the House voted for a flat 25 per cent cut in existing rates, making the maximum 37 1/2 per cent on incomes more than $200,000. The minimum rate would be made 1 1/2 per cent on incomes of $10,000.

BOY SHOT DEAD AT EXPOSITION

Was Inspecting Machine Gun Exhibit At State Industrial Show.

Detroit—Abe Ravitz, 13 years old, was shot in the right hip by a bullet from a machine gun while inspecting the exhibit of Battery F, 182nd Artillery regiment, Michigan National Guard, at the Michigan Industrial Exposition, at Convention hall, and died ten minutes later while being rushed to a hospital.

Sergeant Fred Armstrong, who was in charge of the exhibit, says the gun was not loaded and said he believed one of the boys in the party near the gun might have slipped a bullet into the gun belt, and that this bullet slipped around into the breach when the trigger was pulled several times.

INTERURBAN CAR KILLS TWO

Four Others Seriously Injured When Auto Is Smashed.

Marine City, Mich.—Two persons were killed instantly and four others suffered serious injuries when a D. U. R. limited, crashed into an automobile at Smith's crossing, near here.

The dead are: Henry Osterlind, 40 years old, of Starville; Minnie Osterlind, his wife, 38 years old.

The injured: Lawrence Osterlind, their 12-year-old son, badly crushed; Normal Laboon, 27 years old, neighbor of the Osterlinds, badly crushed; Viola Hill, 16 years old, hurried 20 feet onto the pavement; Evelyn Hill, 12 years old, badly crushed.

State Beet Crop Nets $8,240,000.

Lansing—Michigan growers received $8,240,000 for their 1923 crop of sugar beets, according to reports received by Verne H. Church, agricultural statistician, from the beet sugar manufacturers operating plants within the state. The guaranteed price plus the bonus resulted in an average price of $9.23 per ton for the 883,000 tons of beets delivered to the 16 factories. This crop was produced on 109,000 acres, a yield of approximately eight tons per acre.

NEW WORLD COURT PLAN PROPOSED

RESOLUTION BY SENATOR LODGE OFFERS SUBSTITUTE FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

OLD HAGUE TRIBUNAL IS BASIS

Court Would Have Power to Settle International Disputes—Monroe Doctrine Safeguarded.

Washington—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the Massachusetts Republican leader, to whom more than any one else the late President Wilson ascribed the defeat of the League of Nations in the Senate, has laid before that body his plan for a new World Court. It provides for the reconvening of The Hague Conference, at the call of President Coolidge and creation by it of a permanent court to which the nations could submit their disputes for final settlement.

The resolution of the Foreign Relations Committee chairman made no direct mention of the International Court already set up under the auspices of the League of Nations, and commended to the Senate by Presidents Harding and Coolidge as an institution worthy of American support.

Instead it proposed to build a tribunal about the framework reared at The Hague years ago, with the judges selected much after the manner of those in the court sponsored by the League, except that the League itself would have no part in the procedure while the United States would act with Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan through a "special committee" having a veto power over elections.

The resolution carries its own reservations—designed like the Lodge reservations to the League of Nations to preserve the Monroe Doctrine, to prevent any foreign trespass on American domestic questions, including immigration, and to preserve the traditions and independence of the nation.

It is provided specifically in one of these reservations that no case to which the United States is a party, shall be submitted to the court except under the provisions of a definite agreement setting forth the exact scope of the questions to be decided and the precise extent to which the court may go.

It would be provided, however, that once an international question has been submitted under the express agreement of the nations affected, the decision would be final and subject to review and interpretation only by the court itself.

PARISH SCHOOL VOTE ORDERED

Supreme Court Rules Bill Must Be Put on Ballot.

Lansing—The anti-parochial school amendment requiring children to attend the public schools from the ages of 5 to 16, will go on the election ballot next November, as a result of the supreme court's ruling today.

By a vote of 5 to 3, the court granted James Hamilton a writ of mandamus to compel Secretary of State DeLand to put the proposed amendment on the ballot.

The majority opinion knocks out the Farrier law passed at the last regular session. The Farrier law would require filing of affidavits to show standing of organizations initiating new legislation before the state would accept petitions.

Although the amendment, if passed, will abolish all private and denominational schools, it is particularly aimed to do away with parochial schools of the state. A similar amendment was defeated some few years ago.

PLASTERERS DEMAND $2 RAISE

Union Men Strike for $14 per Day—Double Pay for Overtime.

Detroit—Nearly 400 plasterers, members of a local union and their apprentices have begun on strike in Detroit, according to an announcement by Pierce E. Wright, secretary of the Associated Building Employers of Detroit. The strike was called May 1, Wright said.

The plasterers demand a wage of $14 a day, five days a week and double time for overtime. The wage up to May 1 has been $12 a day.

Construction work involving approximately $10,000,000 has been delayed by the strike.

Wright said there are approximately 400 non-union plasterers in the city whom the strike order has not affected.

Time Big Factor in $500,000 Estate.

New York—Almost at the same hour at which Robert Louis Coleman, San Francisco financier, was killed by bandits in Albania, April 6, his nephew, William T. Coleman, of Monrovia, Cal., died in that city. The disposition of a $500,000 estate depends on which died first, John F. Bowle, an attorney is trying, through American news correspondents and public officials in Albania, to learn the exact hour and minute of the death of Robert Louis Coleman.

Sir Timothy smiled in triumph. "My dear young lady," he begged, "let us now be friends again. I desired to know your trump card. For that reason I fear that I have been a little brutal. No, please don't hurry away. You have shot your bolt. Already Mr. Shopland is turning the thing over in his mind. Was I larking outside that night, Mr. Shopland, to guide that young man's shabby arm? He scarcely seemed man enough for a murderer, did he, when he sat quaking on that stool in Soto's bar while Mr. Ledsam tortured him? I beg you again not to hurry, Miss Hyslop. At any rate wait while my servants fetch you a taxi. It was clouding over when I came in. We may even have a thunderstorm."

"I want to get out of this house," Daisy Hyslop declared. "I think you are all horrible. Mr. Ledsam did behave like a gentleman when he came to see me, and Mr. Shopland asked questions civilly. But you—" she added, turning round to Sir Timothy.

"Hush, my dear," he interrupted, holding out his hand. "Don't abuse me. I am not angry with you—not in the least—and I am going to prove it. I shall oppose any search warrant which you might apply for, Mr. Shopland, and I think I can oppose it with success. But I invite you two, Miss Hyslop and Mr. Ledsam, to my party on Thursday night. Once under my roof you shall have carte blanche. You can wander where you please, knock on the walls for secret hiding places, stamp upon the floor for obliettes, upstairs or down, the cellars and the lofts, the grounds and the park, the whole of my domain is for you from midnight on Thursday until four o'clock. What do you say, Mr. Shopland? Does my offer satisfy you?"

The detective hesitated. "I should prefer an invitation for myself," he declared bluntly. Sir Timothy shook his head.

"Alas, my dear Mr. Shopland," he regretted, "that is impossible! If I had only myself to consider I would not hesitate. Personally I like you. You amuse me more than anyone I have met for a long time. But unfortunately I have my guests to consider! You must be satisfied with Mr. Ledsam's report."

Shopland stroked his stubby mustache. It was obvious that he was not in the least concerned. "There are three days between now and then," he reflected.

"During those three days, of course," Sir Timothy said dryly, "I shall do my best to obliterate all traces of my various crimes. Still, you are a clever detective, and you can give Mr. Ledsam a few hints. Take my advice. You won't get that search warrant, and if you apply for it none of you will be at my party."

"I accept," Shopland decided. Sir Timothy crossed the room, unlocked the drawer of a magnificent writing-table, and from a little packet drew out two cards of invitation. They were of small size but thick, and the color was a brilliant scarlet. On one he wrote the name of Francis, the other he filled in for Miss Hyslop.

"Miss Daisy Hyslop," he said, "shall we drink a glass of wine together on Thursday evening, and will you decide that although, perhaps, I am not a very satisfactory correspondent, I can at least be an amiable host?"

The girl's eyes glistened. She knew very well that the possession of that card meant that for the next few days she would be the envy of every one of her acquaintances.

"Thank you, Sir Timothy," she replied eagerly. "You have quite misunderstood me, but I should like to come to your party."

Sir Timothy handed over the cards. He rang for a servant and bowed the others out. Francis he detained for a moment.

"Our little duel, my friend, marches," he said. "After Thursday night we will speak again of this matter concerning Margaret. You will know then what you have to face."

Margaret herself opened the door and looked in.

"What have those people been doing here?" she asked. "What is happening?"

Her father unlocked his drawer once more and drew out another of the red cards.

"Margaret," he said, "Ledsam here has accepted my invitation for Thursday night. You have never, up till now, honored me, nor have I ever asked you. I suggest that for the first part of the entertainment you give me the pleasure of your company."

"For the first part?"

"For the first part only," he repeated, as he wrote her name upon the card.

"What about Francis?" she asked.

"Is he to stay all the time?"

Sir Timothy smiled. He locked up his drawer and slipped the key into his pocket.

"Ledsam and I," he said, "have promised one another a more complete mutual understanding on Thursday night. I may not be able to part with him quite so soon."

CHAPTER XV

Lady Cynthia ran into Sir Timothy near the end of a dinner dance at Claridge's, just when she had about reached the end of her endurance of boredom.

"What brings you here alone?" she asked him.

"I have an engagement in a few minutes," he explained. "My car is waiting now. I looked in at the club to dine, found my favorite table taken and nearly every man I ever disliked sitting up to tell me that he hears I am giving a wonderful party on Thursday. I decided not to dine there, after all, and Charles found me a corner here. I am going in five minutes."

"Where to?" she asked. "Can't I come with you?"

"I fear not," he answered. "I am going down in the East End."

"Adventuring?"

"More or less," he admitted.

Lady Cynthia became beautiful. She was always beautiful when she was not tired.

"Take me with you, please," she begged. "I'll get my cloak."

They drove along the Embankment cityward. The heat of the city seemed to rise from the pavements. The wall of the Embankment was lined with people, leaning over to catch the languid breeze that crept up with the tide. They crossed the river and threaded their way through a nightmare of squalid streets, where half-dressed men and women hung from the top windows and were even to be seen upon the roof, struggling for air. The car at last pulled up at the corner of a long street.

"I am going down here," Sir Timothy announced. "I shall be gone perhaps an hour. The neighborhood is not a fit one for you to be left alone in. I shall have time to send you home. The car will be back here for me by the time I require it."

"Where are you going?" she asked curiously. "Why can't I come with you?"

"I am going where I cannot take you," was the firm reply. "I told you that before I started."

"I shall sit here and wait for you," she decided. "I rather like the neighborhood. There is a gentleman in a shirt-sleeves, leaning over the rail of the roof there, who has his eye on me. I believe I shall be a success here—which is more than I can say of a little farther westward."

Sir Timothy smiled slightly. He had exchanged his hat for a tweed cap and had put on a long dust-coat.

"There is no gauge by which you may know the measure of your success," he said. "If there were—"

"If there were?" she asked, leaning a little forward and looking at him with a touch of the old brilliancy in her eyes.

"If there were," he said, with a little show of mock gallantry, "a very jealously guarded secret might escape me. I think you will be quite all right here," he continued. "It is an open thoroughfare, and I see two policemen at the corner. Hassell, my chauffeur, too, is a reliable fellow. We will be back within the hour."

"We?" she repeated.

He indicated a man who had silently made his appearance during the conversation and was standing waiting on the sidewalk.

"Just a companion. I do not advise you to wait. If you insist—au revoir!"

Lady Cynthia leaned back in a corner of the car. Through half-closed eyes she watched the two men on their way down the crowded thoroughfare—Sir Timothy, tall, thin as a lath, yet with a certain elegance of bearing; the man at his side shorter, his hands thrust into the pockets of his coat, his manner one of subservience. She wondered languidly as to their errand in this unsavory neighborhood. Then she closed her eyes altogether and wondered about many things.

Sir Timothy and his companion walked along the crowded, squalid street without speech. Presently they turned to the right and stopped in front of a public-house of some pretensions.

"This is the place?" Sir Timothy asked.

"Yes, sir!"

Both men entered. Sir Timothy made his way to the counter; his companion to a table near, where he took a seat and ordered a drink. Sir Timothy did the same. He was wedged in between a heterogeneous crowd of shabby, depressed but apparently hot-ill-natured men and women. A man in a flannel shirt and pair of shabby plaid trousers, which owed their precarious position to a pair of worn-out braces, turned a beery eye upon the newcomer.

"I'll have one with you, guv'nor," he said.

"You shall indeed," Sir Timothy assented.

"Strike me lucky, but I've touched first time!" the man exclaimed. "I'll have a double tot of whisky," he added, addressing the barman. "Will it run to it, guv'nor?"

"Certainly," was the cordial reply, "and the same to your friends, if you will answer a question."

"Troop up, lad," the man shouted. "We've a tot 'ere. He ain't a tot—I know the cut of them. Out with the question."

"Serve everyone who desires it with drinks," Sir Timothy directed the barman. "My question is easily answered.

Is this the place which a man whom I understand they call Billy the Tanner frequents?"

The question appeared to produce an almost uncomfortable sensation. The enthusiasm for the free drinks, however, was only slightly damped, and a small forest of grimy hands were extended across the counter.

"Don't you ask no questions about 'im, guv'nor," Sir Timothy's immediate companion advised earnestly. "He'd kill you as soon as look at you. When Bill the Tanner's in a quarrelsome mood, I've seen 'im empty this place and the whole street, quicker than if a mad dog was loose. 'E's a fair and 'oly terror, 'e is. 'E about killed 'is wife, three nights ago, but there ain't a living soul as 'd dare to stand in the witness-box about it."

"Why don't the police take a hand in the matter if the man is such a nuisance?" Sir Timothy asked.

His new acquaintance, gripping a thick tumbler of spirits and water with a hand deeply incrustated with the stains of his trade, scoffed.

"Police! Why, 'e'd take on any three of the police round these parts!" he declared. "Police! You tell one on 'em that Billy the Tanner's on the rampage, and you'll see 'em 'op it. Cheero, guv'nor, and don't you get curious about Billy. It ain't 'ealthy."

The swing-door was suddenly opened. A tousie-haired urchin shoved his face in.

"Billy the Tanner's coming!" he shouted. "Cave, all! He's been 'avin' a rare to-do in Smith's court."

Then a curious thing happened. The little crowd at the bar seemed somehow to melt away. Half-a-dozen left precipitately by the door. Half-a-dozen more slunk through an inner entrance into some room beyond. Sir Timothy's neighbor set down his tumbler empty. He was the last to leave.

"If you're going to stop 'ere, guv'nor," he begged fervently, "you keep a still tongue in your head. Billy ain't particular who it is. 'E'd kill 'is own mother, if 'e felt like it. 'E'll swing some day, sure as I stand 'ere, but 'e'll do a bit more mischief first. 'Op it with me, guv'nor, or get inside there."

"Jim's right," the man behind the bar agreed. "He's a very nasty customer, Bill the Tanner, sir. If he's coming down, I'd clear out for a moment. You can go in the guv'nor's sitting-room, if you like."

Sir Timothy shook his head.

"Billy the Tanner will not hurt me," he said. "As a matter of fact, I came down to see him."

His new friend hesitated no longer, but made for the door through which most of his companions had already disappeared. The barman leaned across the counter.

"Guv'nor," he whispered hoarsely. "I don't know what the game is, but I've given you the office. Billy won't stand no truck from anyone. He's a holy terror."

Sir Timothy nodded.

"I quite understand," he said.

There was a moment's ominous silence. The barman withdrew to the farther end of his domain and bustled himself cleaning some glasses. Suddenly the door was swung open. A man entered whose appearance alone was calculated to inspire a certain amount of fear. He was tall, but his height escaped notice by reason of the extraordinary breadth of his shoulders. He had a coarse and vicious face, a crop of red hair, and an unshaven growth of the same upon his face. He wore what appeared to be the popular dress in the neighborhood—a pair of trousers suspended by a belt, and a dirty flannel shirt. His hands and even his chest, where the shirt fell away, were discolored by yellow stains. He looked around the room at first with an air of disappointment. Then he caught sight of Sir Timothy standing at the counter, and he brightened up.

"Where's all the crowd, Tom?" he asked the barman.

"Scared of you, I reckon," was the brief reply. "There was plenty here a few minutes ago."

"Scared of me, eh?" the other repeated, staring hard at Sir Timothy. "Did you fear that, guv'nor?"

"I heard it," Sir Timothy acquiesced.

Billy the Tanner began to cheer up. He walked all around this stranger.

"A tot! A big tot! I'll 'ave a drink with you, guv'nor," he declared, with a note of impudent truculence in his tone. The barman had already reached up two glasses, but Sir Timothy shook his head.

"I think not," he said.

There was a moment's silence. The barman made despairing signs at Sir Timothy. Billy the Tanner was leaning his lips with his tongue.

"Why not?" he demanded.

"Because I don't know you and I don't like you," was the blunt reply. Billy the Tanner wanted small time upon preliminaries. He spat upon his hands.

"I dunno you and I don't like you," he retorted. "Dyer know wot I'm going to do?"

"I have no idea," Sir Timothy confessed.

"I'm going to make you look as that your own mother wouldn't know you—then I'm going to pitch you into the street," he added, with an evil grin. "That's wot we does with big toffs who come 'anging around 'ere."

"Do you?" Sir Timothy said calmly. "Perhaps my friend may have something to say about that."

The man of war was beginning to be worked up.

"Where's your big friend?" he shouted. "Come on! I'll take on the two of you."

The man who had met Sir Timothy in the street had risen to his feet. He stroiled up to the two. Billy the Tanner eyed him hungrily.

"The two of you, Dyer 'ear?" he shouted. "And 'ere's just a flick for the toff to be going on with!"

He delivered a sudden blow at Sir Timothy—a full, vicious, jabbing blow which had laid many a man of the neighborhood in the gutter. To his amazement, the chin at which he had aimed seemed to have mysteriously disappeared. Sir Timothy himself was standing about half-a-yard farther away. Billy the Tanner was too used to the game to be off his balance, but he received at that moment the surprise of his life. With the flat of his hand fully open, Sir Timothy struck him across the cheek such a blow that it resounded through the place, a blow that brought both the inner doors ajar, that brought peering eyes from every direction. There was a moment's silence. The man's fists were clenched low, there was murder in his face. Sir Timothy stepped on one side.

"I am not a fighter," he said coolly, leaning back against the marble table. "My friend will deal with you."

Billy the Tanner glared at the newcomer, who had glided in between him and Sir Timothy.

"You can come and join in, too," he shouted to Sir Timothy. "I'll knock your big head into pulp when I've done with this little job!"

The bully knew in precisely thirty seconds what had happened to him. So did the crowds who pressed back into the place through the inner door. So did the barman. So did the landlord, who had made a cautious appearance through a trapdoor. Billy the Tanner, for the first time in his life, was fighting a better man. For two years he had been the terror of the neighborhood, and he showed now that at least he had courage. His smattering of science, however, appeared only ridiculous. Once, through sheer strength and blundering force, he broke down his opponent's guard and struck him in the place that had dispatched many a man before—just over the heart. His present opponent scarcely winced, and Billy the Tanner paid the penalty then for his years of bullying. His antagonist paused for a single second, as though unnerved by the blow. Red fire seemed to stream from his eyes. Then it was all over. With a sickening crash, Billy the Tanner went down upon the sanded floor. It was no matter of a count for him. He lay there like a dead man, and from the two doors the hidden spectators streamed into the room. Sir Timothy laid some money upon the table.

"This fellow insulted me and my friend," he said. "You see, he has paid the penalty. If he misbehaves again, the same thing will happen to him. I am leaving some money here with your barman. I shall be glad for everyone to drink with me. Presently, perhaps, you had better send for an ambulance or a doctor."

A little storm of enthusiastic excitement, evidenced for the most part in exclamations of a lurid note, covered the retreat of Sir Timothy and his companion. Out in the street a small crowd was rushing toward the place. A couple of policemen seemed to be trying to make up their minds whether it was a fine night. An inspector hurried up to them.

"What's doing in 'The Rising Sun'?" he demanded sharply.

"Someone's giving Billy the Tanner a hiding," one of the policemen replied. "Honest?"

"A fair, ripe, knock-out hiding," was the emphatic confirmation. "I looked in at the window."

The inspector grinned.

"I'm glad you had the sense not to interfere," he remarked.

Sir Timothy and his companion reached the car. The latter took a seat by the chauffeur. Sir Timothy stepped in. It struck him that Lady Cynthia was a little breathless. Her eyes, too, were marvelously bright, wrapped around her knees was the chauffeur's coat.

"Wonderful!" she declared. "I haven't had such a wonderful five minutes since I can remember! You are a dear to have brought me, Sir Timothy."

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Mean?" she laughed, as the car swung around and they glided away. "You didn't suppose I was going to sit here and watch you depart upon a mysterious errand? I borrowed your chauffeur's coat and his cap, and slunk down after you. I can assure you I looked the most wonderful female apache you ever saw! And I saw the light. It was better than any of the other things I have ever seen in the real thing is better than the sham, isn't it?"

Sir Timothy looked back in the place and glanced about. Some things passed out of the land of the living of stable, dogged, got with temporary provender, at five o'clock and whereabouts-looking barman. They passed through a street of silent warehouses on to the Embankment. A glimmer of brown came down between the moving one-at-a-time.

"You are not sorry that you brought me?" Lady Cynthia asked, suddenly holding out her hand.

Sir Timothy took it in his. For some reason or other, he made no answer at all.

The car stopped in front of the great house in Grosvenor square. Lady Cynthia turned to her companion.

"You must come in, please," she said. "I insist, if it is only for five minutes."

Sir Timothy followed her across the hall to a curved recess, where the footman who had admitted them touched a bell, and a small automatic lift came down.

"I am taking you to my own quarters," she explained. "They are rather cut off, but I like them—especially on hot nights."

They glided up to the extreme top of the house. She opened the gates and led the way into what was practically an attic sitting room, decorated in black and white. Wide-rung doors opened onto the leads, where comfortable chairs, a small table and an electric standard were arranged. They were far above the tops of the other houses, and looked into the green of the park.

"This is where I bring very few people," she said. "This is where, even after my twenty-eight years of fraudulent life, I am sometimes myself. Wait."

There were feminine drinks and sandwiches arranged on the table. She opened the cupboard of a small sideboard just inside the sitting-room, however, and produced whisky and a siphon of soda. There was a pall of ice in a cool corner. From somewhere in the distance came the music of violins floating through the window of a house where a dance was in progress. They could catch a glimpse of the striped awning and the long line of waiting vehicles with their twin eyes of fire. She curled herself up on a settee, flung a cushion at Sir Timothy, who was already ensconced in a luxurious easy-chair, and with a tumbler of lead sherbet in one hand, and a cigarette in the other, looked across at him.

"I am not sure," she said, "that you have not tonight dispelled an illusion."

"What manner of one?" he asked.

"Above all things," she went on, "I have always looked upon you as wicked. Most people do. I think that is the reason why so many of the women find you attractive. I suppose it is why I have found you attractive."

The smile was back upon his lips. He bowed a little, and leaning forward, dropped a chunk of ice into his whisky and soda.

"Dear Lady Cynthia," he murmured, "don't tell me that I am going to slip back in your estimation into some normal place."

"I am not quite sure," she said deliberately. "I have always looked upon you as a kind of amateur criminal, a man who loved black things and dark ways. You know how weary one gets of the ordinary code of morals in these days. You were such a delightful antidote. And now, I am not sure that you have not shaken my faith in you."

"In what way?"

"You really seem to have been engaged tonight in a very sporting and philanthropic enterprise. I imagined you visiting some den of vice and mixing as an equal with these terrible people who never seem to cross the bridges. I was perfectly thrilled when I put on your chauffeur's coat and hat and followed you."

"The story of my little adventure is a simple one," Sir Timothy said. "I do not think it greatly affects my character. I believe, as a matter of fact, that I am just as wicked as you would have me be, but I have friends in every walk of life, and, as you know, I like to peer into the unexpected places. I had heard of this man Billy the Tanner. He beats women, and has established a perfect reign of terror in the court and neighborhood where he lives. I fear I must agree with you that there were some elements of morality—of conforming at any rate, to the recognized standards of justice—in what I did. You know, of course, that I am a great patron of every form of boxing, fencing and the various arts of self-defense and attack. I just took along one of the men from the gymnasium who I knew was equal to the job, to give this fellow a lesson."

"He did it all right," Lady Cynthia murmured.

"But this is where I think I re-establish myself," Sir Timothy continued, the peculiar nature of his smile reasserting itself. "It did not do this for the sake of the neighborhood. I did not do it from any sense of justice at all. I did it to provide for myself an enjoyable and delectable spectacle."

She smiled lazily.

"That does rather let you out," she admitted. "However, on the whole I am disappointed. I am afraid that you are not so bad as people think."

"People?" he repeated. "Francis Ledsam, for instance—my son-in-law in posse?"

"Francis Ledsam is one of those few rather brilliant persons who have contrived to keep sane without becoming a wit," she remarked.

JOHN W. HAYDEN PIONEER OF PENINSULA PASSES AWAY

The community lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens in the death of John Wesley Hayden which occurred Saturday morning, May 10th. He had been ill some four years, brought on by the shock of the death of his favorite son, John W., Jr.

Mr. Hayden was born in the heart of the wilderness in the Stella Post office which has since been moved to Ithaca, Gratiot Co., Mich., March 7, 1857 where his parents, Joseph A., and Mary Ann Hayden had moved eighteen miles in the fall before having made the road for nine miles as they went along with their ox team, where the father who was a surveyor, had a contract to build State Road. His early life was spent in the wilderness. At the age of fourteen years he came with his parents to Hayden Point into another wilderness, where he has since been a continuous resident, where he purchased a farm at Orchard Hill. He cleared the land, set the trees and always did the work himself until on the death of his son, John W. Jr., commonly known as Jack he was taken ill, caused by shock.

He was united in marriage Sept. 16, 1887 to Esther M. Allen, who survives. To this union were born nine children of whom survive Cash A. Hayden of Bhadravati, India; Mrs. Mary Reich of Bunker Hill south side, Mrs. Ruth Faust of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Allen McNabb of Stamford, Texas, S. Archie of Detroit, Derby and Frank and Robert C., an adopted son at home. Jack and Lydia having passed on, Lydia in 1916 and Jack in 1920.

Funeral services were held at his late home Monday afternoon. Interment at Advance Cemetery.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER BANQUET A PLEASANT AFFAIR

"Springtime blossoms and a rose bud garden of girls" vied with each other in presenting a scene of beauty at the Presbyterian Church Monday evening, when the young people of the Christian Endeavor gave their first Mother and Daughter banquet.

The dining room and tables were prettily decorated in yellow and white, after a short musical program, 175 mothers and daughters, both real and "adopted," were served. A round of conundrums proved a source of much merriment at the beginning of the feast and at its close, the Toastmistress, Miss Saddle Murphy wittily introduced the speakers of the evening. "The Modern Mother" was responded to by Miss Leatha Cox in a clever eulogy, while "The Modern Flapper Daughters" found a warm defender in Mrs. G. W. Kitman.

The guest of honor and final speaker was Miss Maude Aldrich of Winona Lake, Ind. Her address was in the nature of an appeal to our girls to awaken and realize the fact that they are a potential power, "A nation can rise no higher than the ideals of its womanhood." The future of our country lies in the hearts and hands of our girls; to be determined by their ideals of life and conduct.

The young people are to be congratulated on so ably carrying out their plans for the banquet and the furthering of a closer relationship between mother and daughter. As Mrs. Kitman aptly put it, "If you want to keep Mother young, make her your pal and you will always find her ready to come more than half way."

Prohibition may be a failure, but what has become of all the red noses? "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and it says, 'That's too bad; well, I must be going.'"

The only thing sillier than a fixed smile is a fixed frown.

An outsider can't understand why one who works in a bank shouldn't have all the money he wants.

"Go West, Young Man." Horace Greeley did not say, "Go West, young man." first. This expression was first used by John L. Soule in 1851 in the Terre Haute Express. Greeley later used the sentence in an editorial entitled, "Hints Toward Reform." Later Greeley reprinted the article from the Terre Haute Express and explained that he was not the originator of the expression.

The Evangelistic meetings, which were held in the Methodist-Episcopal Church the last two weeks, closed last Sunday evening. Much good was accomplished. Over sixty people sought God, most of them gained a victory in their soul. Thirty-six families promised to start family alters, ten united with the church, three children were Baptised, about forty promised to tithe their income, which means that they intend to place ten per cent of their earnings into Christian work. Prof. C. C. Crammond and his wife are wonderful workers for God, they live and preach a full salvation. God does bless their work.

Announcement has been received here of the Western State Normal summer school at Kalamazoo June 30 to August 8. Last year about 2,000 people attended the Western Normal summer session, including twenty from Charlevoix County. The summer school is conducted by the regular Normal college faculty and has its own athletics and special activities, including a seven-day Redpath Chautauqua. Any information can be secured from Registrar, John C. Hoekje at Kalamazoo Normal.

Charlevoix pupils appear to be more fond of the school head than do members of the board of education. According to reports from that city the high school pupils have been circulating a petition, conducting mass meetings, parades, etc., in an effort to force the board to retain Superintendent of Schools, Charles H. Hamilton. The Superintendent and Board, news from Charlevoix says, have failed to agree on a number of subjects, the former claiming the board has taken away some of the duties of his office. Supt. Hamilton resigned last week and the Board accepted his resignation.

WINTER'S LONG STAY

ONE morning old Mother Nature looked over her spectacles at her son Winter, dressed in white. "Oh!" she exclaimed, and then she looked through her spectacles, thinking she had not seen aright.

Winter Had Stayed Too Long. Spring would soon be peeping out of the ground. Winter began to whimper and fuss and beg for one more clean white robe.

But my old Winter! He had no thought of running home after he got his fresh robe. "I am far too handsome to hide myself now," he reasoned to himself.

Spring under the ground was getting uneasy. It was time for her to be out and the early flowers were all teasing and making things very uncomfortable for Miss Spring.

"Oh, look at old Uncle Winter," called a bright crocus. "What a soiled robe and how untidy he looks!" Then out came another crocus to see what her sister was laughing at.

The committee is a unit in an organization of 5,000 pharmacists in all parts of the country who have set themselves to the task of raising $1,000,000.

Pontiac—Buried under 10 feet of earth when a sewer excavation caved in on him Sam Petrona was smothered to death before workmen could extricate him. The trench in which Petrona was killed had been sheeted up, but jarring of gravel trucks passing the spot caused the support to give way. Arthur Bozko, a cousin of Petrona, was in the ditch but escaped being caught.

Flint—Trying to beat an Interurban car from Saginaw to Flint, cost the lives of two unidentified men here, when their small auto was ground to pieces beneath the street car. The auto was being driven in the same direction of the Interurban and it is said that the driver of the car attempted to make a right hand turn on to a cross road when hit by the street car. The bodies were hurled a short distance away.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO. EMPLOYEES LAUDED FOR HEROIC ACTS

FOUR AWARDED VAIL MEDALS

Unusual Acts in Line of Duty and Public Service Win Praise For Ten Others

Heroes of civil life, those who act without thought of self, for the benefit of others, usually are allowed to go their prosaic way, praises unsung. But four persons, employees of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, are due to receive recognition for unusual services to humanity during 1923. They have been selected as worthy of the Vail Memorial medal in bronze, given for specific acts of unusual service.

Ten other members of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company force have been named by the award committee for meritorious mention. They will receive letters of commendation from the vice president and general manager of the company, George M. Welch.

Four Awarded Vail Medal

The four employees of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company to receive the medals are: Mrs. Anna J. Hatton, operating agent, Niagara, Wis.; Arthur Warriner, exchange repairman, Iron Mountain, Mich.; Mrs. Lottie Cole, night operator, Marshall, Mich.; Winfield S. Dean, repairman, Jackson, Mich.

The ten named for honorable mention are: Miss E. Schram, supervisor, Pontiac; E. A. McMahon, exchange repairman, Pontiac; Don Young, switchboardman, Pontiac; L. R. Stimpson, cableman, Potoskey; O. A. Judd, testman, Potoskey; Claude Pickett, repairman, Potoskey; Charles McEachern, repairman, Bay City; Samuel E. Hayes, supervising foreman, cable trouble department, Detroit; A. E. Lewis, transmission inspector, Lansing; and Joseph Allen, line installer, Jackson.

The date for presentation of the medals has not been announced. Shortly after the death of Theodore N. Vail, former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and known as the "builder of the telephone," Mrs. Vail established the Vail Memorial medal fund to perpetuate the ideals her husband had established of service to the public. Each year a divisional committee selects those, who during the year have emulated the ideals of the late Mr. Vail by unusual acts of devotion to duty, regardless of self.

Town Saved From Fire

Mrs. Hatton is in charge of the exchange operated by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company at Niagara, Wisconsin. One morning, shortly after four o'clock, a flickering reflection on a metal piece on the switchboard attracted her attention. She discovered it came from a flame spreading up the side of a building across the street.

A high wind was blowing and sending flaming sparks rocketing through the air, endangering the entire town. Mrs. Hatton at once realized the danger. Working at highest speed, she warned the members of the fire department, notified proprietors and managers of nearby stores and called all other residents she could reach by telephone, making their aid in fighting the blaze.

While she was giving the alarm, her own home in which the exchange is located caught fire, but she did not stop her work at the switchboard until the entire town had been aroused.

Then she started to save her home, using snow to extinguish the flames. In recognition of her efforts Mrs. Hatton was made a paid member of the Niagara fire department and was accorded other honors.

Quick Thinking Saves Lives

Quick thinking and equally quick acting enabled Arthur Warriner to save two lives during the year. Single-handed, he removed a heavy pole that had fallen on Eliot R. Nelson, near Vulcan, Mich., and through his knowledge of first aid, Rev. Nelson, who was badly injured. Later he saved O. L. Eaton, telephone installer, as the latter was about to be crushed between two freight cars near the Ford body plant at Iron Mountain.

Mrs. Cole, shortly before two o'clock one morning, answered a signal on her switchboard from the office of G. E. Lamb & Son, lumber dealers at Marshall. She obtained no reply, but heard noises that aroused her suspicions. She notified the police, who investigated and found the place had been burglarized. Concussion caused by explosives used in blowing open the safe, had knocked the telephone to the floor, the receiver falling from the hook and causing the signal to flash before Mrs. Cole.

Winfield Dean, like other telephone company employees, had been thoroughly instructed in first-aid work. This knowledge enabled him to save the life of Haugel, the 17-months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cristo, of Jackson. The baby had fallen into a stream and was not recovered for fully five minutes. Ineffortful efforts were being made to revive it when Dean arrived. Assisted by Joseph Allen, line installer he had the child breathing when a physician arrived 30 minutes later. Jackson officials and the press credited Dean with saving the baby's life, while Allen received commendation for his share in the work.

Service in Spite of Danger

In zero weather and working in danger from falling poles and high voltage wires, L. R. Stimpson, O. A. Judd and Claude Pickett fought flames atop telephone poles and saved the telephone plant, while preventing injury from falling equipment to people in the street below, during a disastrous fire in Potoskey. Similar work during a fire in Pontiac earned recognition for V. A. McMahon, Don Young and Miss Schram. Miss Schram gave the alarm and summoned the others to fight the fire, their efforts preventing the interruption of inter-city toll service.

Charles McEachern found a crowd helplessly viewing an automobile that had been crushed under the wheels of a train at a grade crossing in Bay City. No effort had been made to save H. P. Woolworth who was pinned under the wreckage. McEachern hid the mass of steel and wood removed from the victim, without further injuring him, and gave first aid until a physician arrived.

Similar work brought commendation to S. E. Hayes and A. E. Lewis, who rescued three adults and three children who were trapped under a wrecked and burning automobile near Mason, Michigan.

HOW TO RECALL THE OPERATOR

If, after putting in a telephone call, it is necessary to recall the operator, she should be signalled by moving the receiver hook up and down the entire length of the slot, slowly.

A great many people, when anxious to get a quick response, jiggle the hook, not realizing that when they do so, the signal barely flickers, or does not show at all. When the hook is moved up and down slowly, the signal lamp will glow and go out at regular intervals, thus attracting the operator's attention, but unless the signal lamps are given a chance to function properly there can be no response.

Sweet Clover Requires Well-Settled Seed Bed

Sweet clover requires a well-settled and firm seed bed, with just enough loose soil on the surface to permit the seed to be well covered. When sown in the spring on winter grain, the seed bed is as a rule in good condition, and the seed will be covered by alternate freezing and thawing. When sown with spring grain, the seed bed is often not so firm as it should be for rapid germination. In such cases it is a good plan to roll the ground after seeding. When seeded without a winter crop it should never be sown on land which has had no chance to settle. For this reason the land should be plowed some time before seeding and worked down by thorough cultivation. In the West, where spring seeding is always necessary, the best results are secured from fall-plowed land followed by early spring seeding.

Serviceable Floor for New House for Poultry

Here's a way to make a dry and serviceable floor for that new poultry house. Use four inches of good grade sanders covered with two layers of tar paper and three inches of cement on top. The cinders should not give any trouble from disintegration or allow the floor to sag or break, for they are often used in a similar way.

A thoroughly dry floor for the poultry is essential to success, according to the department of agricultural engineering at Iowa State college, which offers this suggestion.

Applying Raw Phosphate

Raw phosphate should be applied in time to be plowed under; and it is a good plan to disc the ground before plowing, so as to get the phosphate mixed well with the earth. Phosphorus does not become dissolved and move about in the soil water like nitrogen, and hence it is important that the phosphate be distributed throughout the soil as much as possible, to give the roots of plants the greatest opportunity to come into contact with it.

THE MORE THE DISHES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MY MOTHER'S mother when she got a dinner up was glad to do it; She liked to entertain a lot, And plenty came, for plenty knew it, A Sunday meal, a Christmas Day, Were right according to her wishes, And yet she always used to say, "The more the meal, the more the dishes."

She didn't say it to complain, But more to stop the rest complaining; When they were tired enough to faint, With still the kitchen things remaining, "This ain't," she nearly always said, "No miracle of loaves and fishes; And, if you want to have a spread, —The more the meal, the more the dishes."

And I have noticed all along, Through life that wealth is like a dinner; You've got to labor good and strong, You've got to work to be a winner; And, after you have got your gold, Man seldom finds the ease he wishes; You've got to work your wealth to hold — The more the meal, the more the dishes. The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRDING KING

THE DEATHWATCH

IN EUROPE and in this country the superstition is universal that the "ticking" of that little beetle known commonly as the deathwatch is an omen of death. "I did not hear the dog howl, mother, or the deathwatch beat," says the dying girl in Tennyson's May Queen. The insect gets into the wood of houses, especially old houses, by boring, and makes its peculiar clicking noise by butting its head against the walls of its self-made cell.

The old, old superstition that the noise it makes is a death omen is a reminiscence of tree worship. The presence of the insect in the wood was formerly unsuspected. All our ancestors of old times knew that, from the dead wood, came a steady and monotonous sound. As some people of today, when they hear, or fancy they hear, a knock upon the headboard of their bed when no one is by, think that some spirit of a departed friend is trying to communicate with them; so the man of old, especially if sick and despondent, hearing from the apparently solid wood the steady sound of the deathwatch conceived it as of supernatural origin. It was the dead body of the tree-god talking—death calling unto death. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Lansing—The Michigan training school at Lansing will have four new buildings to the value of the $200,000 estimated to be on the waiting list. This will bring the population of the Lapeer school up to nearly $200,000. The State administrative board has asked for estimates on cost of construction of the four housing and school units.

Lansing—Fillipps of the north shore of Grand river, just west of Lansing's municipal power plant and dam, by Charles W. Foster, was stopped by an application in district court for a restraining order on behalf of the city. D. G. F. Warner, city attorney, declares Foster, by filling in the river bed at that point, would seriously impair the flowage and reduce the capacity of the power plant.

Ann Arbor—Men sentenced to jail in Washtenaw county will be put to work on the highways of the county under an arrangement between Judge George W. Sample and the county board of supervisors. The men will be returned to jail here each night and sent out to the road work each morning under the control of deputy sheriffs. Prisoners in the past have been sent to the house of correction in Detroit.

It is often said that the Japanese never kiss. This is not quite true. They do kiss occasionally in their own homes, but never outside them. So strong, indeed, is the feeling against kissing in public that when moving pictures were first taken to Japan, the audience there hooted at the tender passages.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains, You or Bladder Bothé

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush out the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

FOLLOWING THE OLD TRACK

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

OCCASIONALLY I take an early morning train north and pass through the country town near which I lived as a boy. Always I see the same figure standing at a corner of the station or sitting stolidly on a pile of freight nearby. He is an old man now, but for forty years, unless he has been ill or out of town, he has never failed to meet the northbound morning train. There is no special reason for his doing so; he is not expecting anything; he isn't meeting anyone; it is one habit. He is following the old track, and he would feel lost or unhappy, no doubt, if he did otherwise.

We all do it more or less. It requires less energy, less thought, less initiative. It is far easier than to blaze a new trail, to hew out a new road.

But sometimes following the old track means stagnation, a lack of progress and effort. Two old ladies, whom I know, living in a suburban village, still insist on trudging to the post office, ten blocks away, twice daily for their mail, though the free delivery was introduced into that community ten years ago. They do not need the exercise, they do not especially enjoy the walk; they simply cannot pull themselves out of the old track.

The choir of the country church which I attended were reasonably familiar with music, but they confined their Sunday morning selections throughout the year to less than a dozen different hymns, though the book contains hundreds. It was as if the minister, tired with preparing his sermon, fell back into the old track when it came to selecting the hymns and shrank back from trying something new.

Thirty years ago Mrs. Tobins had the reputation of being the best cook in the neighborhood, but I know that if I should sit at her table today I should be served with the same omelet, the same pop-overs, the same sponge cake she refreshed me with when a boy. She has learned nothing new; she follows the same old track.

We see the same tendency everywhere. We do things because they have been done, and we do them as they have been done and pride ourselves often that we are following a tradition, when in fact, from lack of initiative, we are simply following the same old track. It takes courage and energy and alertness to change. It requires power to pull ourselves out of the old rut.

Cropping System Helped by Growing Soy Beans

Soy beans as a soil building crop which would also furnish an economical protein feed supplement have been given a thorough trial by Bluffton county (Ind.) farmers on the advice of their agricultural extension agent. The rapid increase in the acreage planted to the crop in the county indicates that they found it a valuable addition to their cropping system. Five years ago, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, only a few farmers in the county grew soy beans, but in 1923 approximately 3,850 acres were grown with corn and 500 acres were grown alone for seed and hay.

FARM NOTES

If you are dissatisfied with your lot, grow a garden on it.

Don't guess at the moisture conditions of your land. Bore into it and be certain.

Marketing eggs by barter is rapidly giving way to the new-fashion method of co-operative selling.

Failure to treat oats for smut the last few years has cost growers at least three and a half bushels an acre.

Song and game birds are friends of the farmer. Protect and encourage them and they will reduce the losses from insects.

If you wish to improve the quality of your flock without serious expense the best thing to do is to cull out a pen of the choicest birds and hatch their eggs.

Seeding alfalfa without a nurse crop in the early spring is often a risky proposition, particularly if the ground has not been worked over as much as it should have been.

One Hundred Per Cent HEALTH TALK NO. 13

Do you feel indisposed fifty percent of the time? You are human like the rest of us, and being human you want to be well. You know the value of Health when you no longer have it.

But perhaps you do not know that Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments are the quickest and sanest means of securing Health. Perhaps you have been going along stimulated by drugs and treatments for the EFFECTS of your disease.

CHIROPRACTIC works on the principal that every known condition or disease has its CAUSE. The cause is an obstruction hindering the flow of mental impulse or nerve energy. The only place where this can occur is at the point where the nerves leave the spine. The Chiropractor finds the point where the nerves are impinged (pinched) and by adjusting this CAUSE, he gives Nature a chance to effect a cure.

As long as you have the CAUSE of that fifty per cent indisposition you cannot hope to accomplish more than fifty per cent of your work, get more than fifty per cent of the joy of living, or be paid more than fifty percent of what you are really worth when you are yourself.

Give Nature a chance to make you one hundred percent well. A consultation and spinal analysis will cost you nothing and will in all probability put you on the right road to permanent Health and one hundred percent efficiency. Consult a competent chiropractor. Consultation and spinal analysis free.
