High Herd to Frank Behling

Charlevoix Co. Cow Testing for Month Ending April 3rd.

Danish DeKol Korndyke, a pure-bred Holstein, owned by Frank A. W. Behling of Boyne City, leads the list of high producers for the month of April. Her total production of butter fat is 67.87 lbs. and 1,773 lbs. of milk.

The highest producing herd in the association is also found at Frank A. W. Behling's farm, his seven purebred Holsteins averaged 47.5 lbs. of butter fat and 1,269 lbs. of milk on three milking a day. This is the first 100 per cent purebred herd to become high herd in butterfat production.

The second high herd in butterfat production belongs to Art Shepard of East Jordan, his grade Holsteins averaged 42 lbs. of butterfat for the 30 days. The average production of the 272 cows in the cow testing association was 25.3 lbs. of butterfat and 613 lbs. milk for the month.

Five herds did not pay for their feed this month, failure to do so being due to the number of dry cows in these herds and high prices paid for feed.

Four cows were sold as culls this month.

The following table gives the names and records of the cows in the Charlevoix County Co-operative Cow Testing Association which have produced more than 53.00 pounds butterfat during the period of 30 days ending April 30.

POPULAR NOVEL FILMED

Harold Bell Wright, whose popular novel "When a Man's a Man" has been filmed by Principal Pictures Corporation, is highly gratified with the screen version of his work. He is especially pleased with the casting of John Bowers in the role of "Honorable Patches," the man who was cheated out of his birthright of manhood by inherited wealth and luxury, and who came west to find himself. See it Sunday and Monday at The Temple.

Owosso—The cornerstone of Owosso's new $25,000 city hall will be laid June 15. The city commissioner has invited the Owosso Lodge of Masons to take charge of the ceremonies.

Manistee—John Junge, cashier of the First National Bank here, discovered a dead woodpecker on a tree in front of his home. The bird had gotten his bill so far into the tree that he was unable to get it out, which caused his death.

Muskegon—Nixon A. Ryan, 65 years old, was found dead in a bath tub by his grandson. Mr. Ryan had complained of being exhausted at noon when other members of the family left for the day. He was apparently stricken while bathing.

"Silence is golden," which is why a noisy man is said to have "brass."

Memorial Day Proclamation

Governor Urges Proper Observance of Friday, May 30th.

Our Country, the proudest, the most mighty of nations, sovereignty of righteousness, is again called upon to manifest its gratitude to the few members of the Grand Army of the Republic and to pay tribute to the memory of the fallen. Memorial Day was created in order that the deeds of sacrifice and devotion to freedom in the Civil War might forever live. But time has brought a new and vast army of living and fallen heroes for us to honor. In deepest reverence we pay tribute to the few veterans of the Civil War still living. Soon the Grand Commander of all will issue His final order to these proud but faltering comrades of '61 and there will be no living Grand Army veteran to honor. May his memory always be sacred to us. The boys of yesterday who freed from tyranny a suppressed people who extended righteous American rule to the other side of the world, are too fast passing into another realm. Soon the ranks of Spanish War veterans will be as thin as those of the Civil War. Let America never forget the glorious deeds and sacrifices of these fighting lads of yesterday. With flowers by land and sea, with every human token, let us give honor not only to the veterans of Civil and Spanish wars but to the young men of today who gave freedom to the world through battle on foreign soil. To the living veterans of all our wars, may our homage be in keeping with our gratitude. May our tribute to the memory of those who have passed into the beyond be worthy of a grateful people.

Therefore, I, Alex. J. Groesbeck, as Governor of Michigan, proclaim and urge a proper observance of Friday, May 30, 1924, as Memorial Day.

Give under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this thirteenth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-eighth.

Alex. J. Groesbeck
Governor.

A suspicious character is one who doesn't agree with me.

It doesn't matter so much where you are as where you are going from here.

Lansing—Twenty Latin American countries with delegates inspecting North American highways have included Michigan in their tour. The delegation ends its tour here, the guests of Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck and other state officials, who will show them the state's highways. Thirty-eight delegates are in the party.

Lansing—Two Lansing boys, Edward York and Virgil Jones, left here on horseback with the Pacific coast as their destination. They took enough money to pay their expenses to Iowa, and expect to work their way the remainder of the trip. The boys plan to make the trip by easy stages so as to allow their horses plenty of time to rest.

Saginaw—Another death was added to the grade crossing toll near Midland, in an accident in which George Yeakle, 21 years old, Midland, was killed instantly and five others injured. Yeakle's sister, Coy, 14 years old, died later and Hester Wolfley, 15 years old, and Carl Stickley, 21 years old, two other members of the automobile party hit by a Pere Marquette freight train were fatally injured.

Our Ball Team Has Comeback

Defeats Traverse City Last Sunday By a 6 to 2 Score.

East Jordan defeated Traverse City 6 to 2 at the fair grounds here last Sunday making the 1924 series with Traverse City an even break to date.

DeLoof struck out eight men, kept Traverse City's eight hits well scattered, and helped win his own game with two doubles and a single.

Diedrich, East Jordan's new shortstop, made one hit, waddled out two bases on balls, and handled the two chances he had in the field. He is a valuable addition to the team.

Saffron of Boyne City played third base and put up a fine fielding game.

East Jordan put two runs across the plate in the first inning on singles by Ward and DeLoof, H. Kamradt's sacrifice, and two errors by the visitor's catcher. DeLoof's double and Covey's single scored one in the third. Two more were added in the sixth by Ward's triple, Tolles' double, LaLonde's single, Diedrich's sacrifice and an error by Traverse City. The sixth tally came in the eighth on an error, a base on balls, and a passed ball.

Traverse City made their first score in the second on a single, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly. In the ninth, a double and a single gave them their second run.

Rewa pitched the first four innings for Traverse City but was hit by a liner from Hank Kamradt's bat and retired in favor of Thiel.

East Jordan plays at Alpena next Sunday.

East Jordan is assured of some fast baseball games May 30 and 31 and June 1st as Manager Parke has booked the fast Polish Daily News team of Detroit (formerly known as the Detroit Stags) to play here on these dates.

The Polish Daily News lineup includes Eddie Clotte, pitcher, formerly with Chicago White Sox; Dugray, catcher (who also is a pitcher) with

Hamilton team in Mint league in 1922; Mullighan, with Tacoma, Wash., club in 1922; Gurney, who played with Muskegon part of last year, and at one time with Boston Americans; Todd, formerly with Lansing Southern Michigan league team; Burnett, who played with Portsmouth in Virginia league in 1922; Dunne, last year with Kellogg's of Battle Creek; Dodge, formerly of

Why it's easy to keep Barreled Sunlight clean

BARRELED Sunlight is a white paint which produces a surface so smooth that dust or dirt—smudges or finger-marks—cannot "sink in." It can be kept clean as easily as white tile. A damp cloth will always wash it spotless.

Ideal for bathroom and kitchen walls—and for woodwork everywhere. Costs less than enamel, requires fewer coats and is guaranteed to remain white longer.

Barreled Sunlight is easy to apply. It flows freely without a brushmark. Is readily tinted. Sold in cans from half-pint to five gallon size.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Rub Rheumatic Pain From Aching Joints

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism. It's pain only, not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappears and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment, you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

CONGRESS DEFEATS EXCLUSION DELAY

OVERWHELMING VOTE IN BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE UPHOLDS IMMIGRATION ACT.

WILL BAR JAPS AFTER JULY 1

President's Request for More Time to Adjust Problem Through Diplomacy is Ignored.

Washington—Congress stands unalterably opposed to President Coolidge's request for a delay in the inauguration of the Japanese exclusion provision of the new immigration bill. Disregarding the President's request for time in which to adjust this problem through the Washington-Tokyo diplomatic channels, both senate and house by overwhelming votes have adopted the conference report on the immigration bill which provides for Asiatic exclusion after July 1.

On the basis of the balloting in House and Senate there would be votes to spare to repass the bill over a presidential veto. The vote in the house was 308 to 53, or 64 in excess of the required two-thirds majority to override a veto, and in the Senate it was 69 to 9, or 17 more than two-thirds.

Administration leaders in both the House and Senate voted for adoption of the report. They had contended from the first that the immigration problem was a purely domestic one and thus within the control of Congress and not the executive department of the Government under the constitution.

Reports of the unusual homeward movement of Japanese from Pacific ports since approval last month by the house of the new exclusion policy, with a view to hasty marriage and return, have resulted in many queries as to the eligibility of non-immigrants to admission after temporary absence.

Recently acquired brides of returning Japanese will be admitted until July 1, but after that date they are specifically barred under provisions of the new law.

CONGRESS TO ADJOURN BY JUNE 7

House and Senate Leaders Aim to End Session Before Conventions.

Washington—The Democratic and Republican organization in the House and Senate are endeavoring to effect the adjournment of Congress by June 7. This was information given President Coolidge by a group of House leaders who expressed confidence the legislative program would be in shape to permit a getaway by that date, despite increasing talk particularly in the Senate, that this is a remote possibility.

In a White House conference, Rep. Philis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, the Democratic leader, and Rep. John N. Garner, of Texas, ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, agreed to do their utmost to bring about adjournment before the June political conventions.

Detroit—The expression "he drank himself to death," should include "he drank his sons and daughters to death," according to the new educational campaign through Michigan by Michigan Anti-Saloon league, under the direction of R. N. Heespie, state superintendent.

Wayne county is being thoroughly covered by a traveling force of special speakers urging that the Volstead law be observed and enforced.

The services are part of the regular year-round work of the league, which maintains a regular force of speakers who travel about the state staging intensive "drives" in individual counties.

SENATOR WHEELER EXONERATED

Senate Committee Absolves Him From Guilt in "Oil Indictment."

Washington—A report exonerating Senator Burton K. Wheeler, (Dem.), Montana, "from any and all violation" of the statutes under which he was indicted at Great Falls, Mont., has been submitted to the Senate by Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the special committee which investigated the charges against him.

The report, signed by four of the five committee members, was confined to the question of Mr. Wheeler's guilt or innocence.

Mt. Clemens To Vote Paving Bond

Mt. Clemens—The city will vote June 2, at a special election, on the proposition to bond the city for $100,000 for street paving. Under the limited tax levy of three-fourths of one per cent, the city has been unable to keep pace with the paving, as brought to its doors by the county road commission. Of the total issue, $40,000 is specified for resurfacing several old brick roads downtown which have been in service for nearly 30 years and North Gratiot avenue.

FEDERAL SURVEY SHOWS LABOR CONDITIONS IN MICHIGAN ARE GOOD

Washington—Labor conditions in Michigan continue good, according to a report of the Department of Labor.

A general survey just completed shows there are plenty of workers available in all lines throughout the state, with the exception of the farming industry. A serious shortage of this class of help is developing, especially in Upper-Michigan, on the east-side of the lake. The automobile industry is running on a somewhat curtailed production basis.

Several lumber camps have closed down for the season, but the workers released have all been absorbed in other industries. Building and road work is active throughout the state and the large surplus of common labor previously reported is rapidly being absorbed.

HOUSE REPASSES BONUS BILL

Overrides President's Veto By Vote of 313 to 78.

Washington—The House easily overrode President Coolidge's veto of the Soldier Bonus Bill and put up to the Senate the final word on the legislation. The vote was 313 to 78 for re-passage, or 52 more than the required two-thirds.

The president in his veto message estimated the payment of the bonus would commit the nation to an average annual expenditure of $114,000,000 for the next 20 years.

At the end of the 20-year period, he said, the government would be faced with the necessity of selling $2,500,000,000 in bonds, a major financial undertaking which he argued might jeopardize the value of Federal securities then outstanding.

He added that regardless of party affiliations, the public is clamoring for tax relief, and that the government has no money to bestow on any particular class.

Veterans would be better off, he said, if relieved of the high taxes, which the bonus legislation would make necessary. Tax reduction, he mentioned in particular, would be a great help to agricultural interests.

The bonus insurance bill, which has the approval of the American Legion, provides for insurance based on a fixed multiple of each veteran's "adjusted compensation"—a term accepted in Congress as representing the amount of pay which would be due on the basis of $1 a day for domestic and $1.25 a day for foreign service.

Those whose "adjusted compensation" amounts to $50 or less would be paid in cash in lieu of insurance. The bill was drafted as a compromise in the House, and was approved by the Senate with only minor changes.

DEMOCRATS DITCH "UNIT RULE"

State Convention Leaves Delegates Free to Vote As Individuals.

Flint—At the Democratic State Convention here Woodbridge N. Ferris was endorsed for the presidency. The delegates who attend the national convention next month however, will not be bound by the "unit rule" and will not be obligated to vote as a body for any one candidate.

The convention took a stand against the Ku Klux Klan. The St. Lawrence waterways project was endorsed. Republican administration was described as having enthroned greed, big business and chicanery.

Daugherty, Fall and Forbes were condemned, but Edwin Denby, former secretary of the navy, was unscathed in the resolutions.

The League of Nations was endorsed. Child-labor, soldier bonus and agricultural relief, were other planks touched upon.

STATE GETS COMMERCE BRANCH

Detroit Office Will Furnish Date On Export Trade.

Washington—Detroit is assured of a branch office of the Department of Commerce, the House and Senate Conference Committee having ratified a $15,000 appropriation for a Detroit office. It will be opened as soon as the money becomes available.

What the office will mean to Detroit's export trade only the future can tell. Its purpose will be to stimulate the sale of Michigan products abroad by disseminating information that Government agents collect in all parts of the world concerning markets, and to inform manufacturers how to meet the markets. It will specialize on goods manufactured in Michigan.

Cut U. P. Mine Valuations $13,700,634

Houghton, Mich.—The State Tax Commission, at a hearing in Houghton fixed valuations of copper mine properties in Houghton and Keweenaw Counties, for taxation purposes, at $25,485,750, for Houghton County; and $13,218,921 for Keweenaw County. This is a reduction of $10,485,213 for Houghton County and $3,215,421 for Keweenaw. The new valuations are based on actual physical valuation, the commission abandoning average stock value methods used before.

Reverse the present law that requires the Chiropractor to come under the medical board. Require the medical Doctor to take an examination before a Board of Chiropractors to determine his fitness to practice. The medical Doctor would protest and be justified in such a protest. The Chiropractor is justified in his protest for the same reason. There may be many pseudo Chiropractors in Michigan who could qualify under the existing law. We believe in regulation and a just law.

Most Fat Steers From Corn Belt

One of the Most Practical Ways of Disposing of Corn Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers in the corn belt are gradually modifying their cattle-feeding, cattle-fattening and beef-making operations because of the changing conditions of high-priced land, intensive farming and market demands. Where once the whole operation of breeding the cows and raising the calves, growing them on pasture and roughage to the feeder age and then fattening them for the market, was carried on at the corn belt farm, it has been gradually becoming more and more impractical to keep herds of cows to raise calves and to thus grow their own supply of feeders. Not more than a score of years ago there was an abundance of pasture and land was comparatively cheap. Today practically all land capable of being tilled is used for crop production. The raising of cattle primarily for fattening as beef has been giving way to the production of pure breeds for breeding stock.

Disposes of Corn Crop.

The fattening of steers, however, affords one of the most practical ways of disposing of the corn crop, and of the many roughages produced on the average corn belt farm, and most of the fat cattle are still supplied by the corn belt. Instead of growing the feeders on the farm where they are to be fattened, however, there is an increasing tendency on the part of cattle feeders to purchase their feeder supply direct from the range which is more adapted to raising and growing calves to the feeder age than to fattening them. The range cattlemen are realizing the situation and are attempting to produce a high grade of feeder cattle. The corn belt cattle feeders, with an abundance of fattening feeds and limited pasture areas, see where they can better afford to purchase feeders from the range area than to raise them on land which is suitable for crop production.

Organizations of breeders are being formed in many sections of the country for the purpose of assembling several droves of feeder cattle and selling them at auction. Sales of this kind are usually extensively advertised in order to get a large number of buyers to attend. Buying direct eliminates marketing expenses at the live stock markets and insures against "stale" cattle, that is, cattle held at the markets for several days. Buying at the large live stock markets is preferred by many feeders, because there may be a saving of time, and there is the possibility of buying on a "glutted" market, which usually results in much lower prices. When the receipts are normal, however, there is usually considerable competition, resulting in a price considerably higher than the range price.

Buying and selling ability plays an important part as skillful feeding in the successful handling of feeder cattle. Successful feeders study market conditions. In some seasons certain weights and classes of cattle may be purchased more economically than others. The cattle feeder should study the demands of the market for certain seasons and feed the kind of cattle that will be in demand when they are ready for market.

Objects in Fattening.

The primary objects in fattening steers are to utilize roughages for which there is little demand, to keep the soil in a high state of productivity by feeding the crops on the farm and returning the manure to the land, and to increase the income from farm operations. The fattening of cattle throughout the corn belt area is of two types—dry-lot fattening and fattening on grass. Most cattle fattened in the corn belt are dry-lot fed and are marketed before July 1. Very few cattle fed heavily on grain during the winter and spring months are ever put on grass the following summer. In some sections of Missouri feeders purchased in the fall are "roughed" through the winter largely on cornstalk fields, straws, hays, stover and silage. In the spring the cattle are turned on grass and fed a half-grain ration. Cattle handled in this way usually are marketed before September 1.

There are various rations used in dry-lot feeding, but two combinations of feeds stand out rather prominently. In those areas where legume hay, such as clover and alfalfa, is produced abundantly, the standard ration is corn and hay. In other areas, where legumes are less thrifty, allage and protein meal, such as cottonseed or linseed, are fed in combination with corn and a mixed hay.

Available Rough Land.

High-priced land suitable for grain production in the corn belt area can hardly be profitably kept for pasture for the production of beef for the market. However, there are many farms having rough land that can be utilized best as a permanent pasture. Gains made by cattle on pasture are usually the most economical. When cattle are "roughed" through the winter, largely on cheap roughages, they can be marketed early the following fall at a cost materially lower than would result from dry-lot feeding. Cattle to be finished in the summer on grass, with possibly the addition of a little corn or other supplement in the fall, should not be fed heavily during the winter, but they should receive enough to maintain their weight. If they can be kept in a healthy, thrifty condition during the winter months they will do better on grass the following summer than if heavily grain fed during the winter.

Where pasture is available there are three practical methods of fattening cattle on grass, namely, grass alone, grass and additional feed throughout the entire feeding period, and grass with additional feed, the last few months of the feeding period. The grass season is usually from May to November, inclusive, which is approximately 210 days. Two acres of good pasture are usually allowed per animal. After September the average pasture begins to decrease in value very rapidly, and cattle should be marketed at this time or given additional feed. Prevailing prices of corn and concentrates, the type of pasture, and the quality of cattle should largely determine the supplement to pasture, which, might be corn alone, corn with protein supplement, or the protein supplement by itself. Where grass alone is depended upon, from four to five months of grazing will usually give best results, because pastures are at their best from June to October.

Favorable Results in Spraying Tests

Reduction in Losses From Leaf-Spot Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Spraying strawberries for the control of leaf-spot diseases has frequently been recommended, and a few growers in widely separated localities have sprayed regularly for fruit rots and have reported an apparent reduction in losses. The first systematic experiments, however, for the control of fruit rots by spraying were made by the United States Department of Agriculture last year, and although the results of this one season's work must be regarded as inconclusive, some favorable results seem to be indicated. Various sprays were used, and no one seemed to show a marked superiority over another, indicating that no really satisfactory spray schedule has yet been worked out. The investigators feel, however, that the results justify the conclusion that spraying with bordeaux mixture, and in some cases dusting, reduced the losses from rot which developed after the fruit was picked sufficiently to more than justify the expense of the treatment.

Strawberries are grown in this country under a great variety of conditions, and spray schedules must necessarily be varied accordingly. The result of the first season's work seems, however, to indicate that in the region of Beabe, Ark., where this work was done, strawberry rots may be reduced by spraying. It is accordingly planned to extend these spraying tests.

Plenty of Oyster Shell Helpful to Egg Layers

Several flock owners have, at various times, asked my opinion as to the cause of soft-shelled eggs, says a writer in the Successful Farming. Hens may occasionally lay a soft-shelled egg even when supplied with plenty of oyster shells. Sometimes this is caused by an overfat condition or a poorly balanced ration.

If any of your hens lay an occasional soft-shelled egg, make sure that they are getting plenty of green food and that they are made to exercise in the straw litter. If this is done, and the balanced ration and oyster shell do not put a stop to the soft-shelled eggs, you may be sure that the trouble is due to some abnormal condition that prevents the fowls from manufacturing the lime as fast as it is needed. When this is the case the only cure seems to be to cull out any hens that are known to lay soft-shelled eggs frequently.

Such eggs are not only a frequent loss, but the breaking and eating of them by the other fowls encourage the habit of egg-eating.

FARM FACTS

Farm machinery outside to stay, won't run so well another day.

Eat what you can and can what you can't and sell what you can't eat or can.

The farmer who does not recognize the efficiency of publicity in his business, is not realizing the fullest measure of success.

More than 85 per cent of this country's corn crop is fed to live stock, and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food.

Alfalfa may be sown in the spring with oats at the regular oats sowing time. The stand will depend upon the spring and early summer weather.

Except on the very smallest farms, the manure spreader soon will save its cost in time saved and greater efficiency in spreading.

Sweet clover may be sown with oats. Some growers claim that they can get a better stand of sweet clover by sowing it alone on a well-prepared seed bed but many others always use a nurse crop such as oats.

Successful swine men recommend the use of guard rails and light bedding as protective measures for the very young pigs. These two things make it possible for the pigs to avoid being overlaid by the sow.

The Song of the Builders

ON every hand is heard the rattle of the builder's hammer and the rasp of his saw. Overnight, it seems, buildings rise—new streets appear.

And the thousands of new homes and great buildings increase the problems of the public service companies.

This Company attempts to foresee the great growth of service demand and extends its plant into new districts as rapidly as possible, in an effort to most efficiently serve the people of Michigan.

However, sudden unforeseen population and industrial growth frequently make it impossible to furnish utility service at all points immediately upon demand. Hundreds of new telephones are wanted. The Telephone Company's problem is the same as that of the water, sewer, gas, electric, street, and school services.

But Telephone Plant expansion is breaking all records. Thousands of new instruments are being installed, miles of new circuits are being built and additional exchange facilities are being provided, to meet the call for service.

Everything possible is being done to provide service for all who desire it.

Why Are Chiropractors Being Sent To Jail In Charlevoix County?

Because they have no license:—to secure a license they must take an examination in medical subjects only, given by medical men who are the avowed enemies of Chiropractic.

This examination contains nothing of Chiropractic philosophy or practice, nor do the members of the examining board know anything about Chiropractic,—however they presume to say who are, and who are not competent Chiropractors.

They make no distinction between graduates of standard three-year Chiropractic schools, and graduates of correspondence, fly-by-night, pseudo-Chiropractic schools.

In ten years the medical board granted only two licenses to Chiropractors. Suddenly, within the last year, the bars were down, more than twenty were licensed, and others are urged to take the examination. Some of those recently licensed have as their only qualification to practice, THREE WEEKS attendance at a so-called Chiropractic school.

Is It Their Plan To License A Horde Of Incompetents, That Chiropractic May Be Discredited In Michigan ???

For ten years Chiropractors in Michigan have fought to obtain a Chiropractic law and examining board. For ten years they have been defeated by the powerful medical politicians. In writing of the defeat of the Chiropractic bill by the medical men in 1921, F. C. Warnshuis M. D., Secretary of the State Medical Board says: "A telegram was sent each of the secretaries of the county societies...urging them to bring every influence and force to bear on their senators from their counties.....The result was that 2100 telegrams poured into Lansing Monday morning and were delivered to the Senate." In the same letter, referring to a conference between Drs. McLean and J. B. Kennedy of Detroit and Governor Groesbeck, Dr. Warnshuis states that "when the Governor proposed that the Chiropractic bill be brought before the Senate for reconsideration, he was told by Messrs Kennedy and McLean that if he did so there were 4000 PHYSICIANS IN MICHIGAN READY TO MAKE SUCH AN ATTEMPT A MOST COSTLY ONE TO ANY ONE PARTICIPATING IN IT." In other words these 4000 medical doctors THREATENED the Senate of Michigan if it dared to pass a Chiropractic bill.

"You know why?" he reminded her. "Francis Ledsam has been a tremendous worker. It is work which keeps a man sane. Brilliance without the capacity for work drives people to the madhouse."

"Where we are all going, I suppose," she sighed.

"Not you," he answered. "You have just enough—I don't know what we moderns call it—soul, shall I say—to keep you from the muddy ways."

She rose to her feet and leaned over the rails. Sir Timothy watched her thoughtfully. Her figure, notwithstanding its suggestions of delicate maturity, was still as slim as a young girl's. She was looking across the tree-tops towards an angry bank of clouds—long, pencil-like streaks of black on a purple background. Below, in the street, a taxi passed with grinding of brakes and noisy horn. The rail against which she leaned looked very flimsy. Sir Timothy stretched out his hand and held her arm.

"My nerves are going with my old age," he apologized. "That support seems too fragile."

She did not move. The touch of his fingers grew firmer.

"We have entered upon an allegory," she murmured. "You are preserving me from the depths."

He laughed harshly.

"I!" he exclaimed, with a sudden touch of real and fierce bitterness which brought the light dancing into her eyes and a spot of color to her cheeks. "I preserve you! Why, you can never hear my name without thinking of sin, of crime of some sort! Do you seriously expect me to ever preserve anyone from anything?"

"You haven't made any very violent attempts to corrupt me," she reminded him.

"Women don't enter much into my scheme of life," he declared. "They played a great part once. It was a woman, I think, who first headed me off from the pastures of virtue."

"I know," she said softly. "It was Margaret's mother."

His voice rang out like a pistol-shot.

She turned away from the rail and threw herself back in her chair. His hand, however, she still kept in hers. "Uncle Joe was minister at Rio, you know, the year it all happened," she explained. "He told us the story years ago—how you came back from Europe and found things were not just as they should be between Margaret's mother and your partner, and how you killed your partner."

His nostrils quivered a little. One felt that the fire of suffering had touched him again for a moment.

"Yes, I killed him," he admitted. "That is part of my creed. The men who defend their honor in the law courts are men I know nothing of."

"My Nerves Are Going With My Old Age," He Apologized. "That Support Seems Too Fragile."

This man would have wronged me and robbed me of my honor. I bade him defend himself in any way he thought well. It was his life or mine. He was a poor fighter and I killed him."

"And Margaret's mother died from the shock."

"She died soon afterward."

The stars grew paler. The passing vehicles, with their brilliant lights, grew fewer and fewer. The breeze which had been so welcome at first turned into a cold night wind. She led the way back into the room.

"I must go," he announced.

"You must go," she echoed, looking up at him. "Good-by!"

She was so close to him that his embrace, sudden and passionate though it was, came about almost naturally. She lay in his arms with perfect content and raised her lips to his.

He broke away. He was himself again, self-furious.

"Lady Cynthia," he said, "I owe you my most humble apologies. The evil that is in me does not as a rule break out in this direction."

"Your dear, foolish person," she laughed, "that was good, not evil. You like me, don't you? But I know you do. There is one crime you have always forgotten to develop—you haven't the simplest idea in the world how to lie."

"Yes, I like you," he admitted. "I have the most absurd feeling for you that any man ever found it impossible to put into words. We have indeed strayed outside the world of natural things," he added.

"Why?" she murmured. "I never felt more natural or normal in my life. I can assure you that I am loving it. I feel like muslin gowns and primroses and the scene of those first March violets underneath a warm hedge where the sun comes sometimes. I feel very natural indeed, Sir Timothy."

"What about me?" he asked harshly. "In three weeks' time I shall be fifty years old."

"And in no time at all I shall be thirty—and entering upon a terrible period of spinsterhood!"

"Spinsterhood!" he scoffed. "Why, whenever the society papers are at a loss for a paragraph, they report a few more offers of marriage to the ever-beautiful Lady Cynthia."

"Don't be sarcastic," she begged. "I haven't yet had the offer of marriage I want, anyhow."

"You'll get one you don't want in a moment," he warned her.

She made a little grimace.

"Don't!" she laughed nervously. "How am I to preserve my romantic notions of you as the emperor of the criminal world, if you kiss me as you did just now—you kissed me rather well—and then ask me to marry you? It isn't your role. You must light a cigarette now, pat the back of my hand, and swagger off to another of your haunts of vice."

"In other words, I am not to propose?" Sir Timothy said slowly.

"You see how decadent I am," she sighed. "I want to toy with my pleasures. Besides, there's that scamp of a brother of mine coming up to have a drink—I saw him get out of a taxi—and you couldn't get it through in time, not with dignity."

The rattle of the lift as it stopped was plainly audible. He stopped and kissed her fingers.

"I fear some day," he murmured, "I shall be a great disappointment to you."

CHAPTER XVI

Ledsam and Margaret were agreeably surprised the next day at noon, when they had arranged a luncheon for two at the Ritz, to have Lady Cynthia and Sir Timothy show up and join them.

As Francis hurried off to give the necessary orders to enlarge his table, a page-boy touched him on the arm.

"If you please, sir," he announced, "you are wanted on the telephone."

"I?" Francis exclaimed. "Some mistake, I should think. Nobody knows that I am here."

"Mr. Ledsam," the boy said. "This way, sir."

Francis walked down the vestibule to the row of telephone boxes at the further end. The attendant who was standing outside indicated one of them and motioned the boy to go away. Francis stepped inside. The man followed, closing the door behind him.

"I am asking your pardon, sir, for taking a great liberty," he confessed. "No one wants you on the telephone. I wished to speak to you."

Francis looked at him in surprise. The man was evidently agitated. Somehow or other, his face was vaguely familiar.

"Who are you and what do you want with me?" Francis asked.

"I was butler to Mr. Hilditch, sir," the man replied. "I waited upon you the night you dined there, sir—the night of Mr. Hilditch's death."

"I have a revelation to make with regard to that night, sir," the man went on, "which I should like to place in your hands. It is a very serious matter, and there are reasons why something must be done about it at once. Can I come and see you at your rooms, sir?"

Francis studied the man for a moment intently. He was evidently agitated—evidently, too, in very bad health. His furtive manner was against him. On the other hand, that might have arisen from nervousness.

"I shall be in at half-past three, No. 13-b, Clarges street," Francis told him.

"I can get off for half-an-hour then, sir," the man replied. "I shall be very glad to come. I must apologize for having troubled you, sir."

Francis went slowly back to his trio of guests. All the way down the carpeted vestibule he was haunted by the grim shadow of a spectral fear. The frozen horror of that ghastly evening was before him like a hateful tableau. Hilditch's mocking words rang in his ears: "My death is the one thing in the world which would make my wife happy." The court scene, with all its gloomy tragedy, rose before his eyes—only in the dock, instead of Hilditch, he saw another!

Francis found them talking about the fight the night before, when he returned to the table, and caught Lady Cynthia saying to Sir Timothy, "I suppose that you are very disappointed in my stealing over to see the battle?"

"On the contrary," he answered, "I am delighted."

"You mean that?" she asked incredulously.

"I do," he declared. "Companionship between our sexes is very delightful so far as it goes, but the fundamental differences between a man's outlook and tastes and a woman's should never be bridged over. I myself do not wish to learn to knit. I do not care for the womankind in whom I am interested to appreciate and understand fighting."

Lady Cynthia took a cigarette from her case and leaned over to Francis for a light.

"The world is changing," she declared. "I cannot bear many more shocks. I fancied that I had written myself forever out of Sir Timothy's good books because of my confession just now."

He smiled across at her. His words were words of courteous badinage, but Lady Cynthia was conscious of a strange little sense of pleasure.

"On the contrary," he assured her, "you found your way a little further into my heart."

"It seems to me, in a general sort of way," Margaret observed, leaning back in her chair, "that you and my father are becoming extraordinarily friendly, Cynthia."

"I am hopefully in love with your father," Lady Cynthia confessed. "It has been coming on for a long time. I suspected it the first time I ever met him. Now I am absolutely certain."

"It's quite a new idea," Margaret remarked. "Shall we like her in the family, Francis?"

"No, sir!" Lady Cynthia warned her. "You two are not properly engaged yet. It may devolve upon me to give my consent."

"In that case," Francis replied, "I hope that we may at least count upon your influence with Sir Timothy?"

"If you'll return the compliment and urge my suit with him," Lady Cynthia laughed. "I am afraid he can't quite make up his mind about me, and I am so nice. I haven't flirted nearly so much as people think, and my instincts are really quite domestic."

"My position," Sir Timothy remarked, as he made an unsuccessful attempt to possess himself of the bill which Francis had called for, "is becoming a little difficult."

"Not really difficult," Lady Cynthia objected, "because the real decision rests in your hands."

"Just listen to the woman!" Margaret exclaimed. "Do you realize, father, that Cynthia is making the most brazen advances to you? And I was going to ask her if she'd like to come back to the Sanctuary with us this evening!"

Lady Cynthia was suddenly eager. Margaret glanced across at her father. Sir Timothy seemed almost imperceptibly to stiffen a little.

"Margaret has quite blanché at the Sanctuary as regards her visitors," he said. "I am afraid that I shall be busy over at the Walled House."

"But you'd come and dine with us?" Sir Timothy hesitated. An issue which had been looming in his mind for many hours seemed to be suddenly joined.

"Please!" Lady Cynthia begged. Sir Timothy followed the example of the others and rose to his feet. He avoided Lady Cynthia's eyes. He seemed suddenly a little tired.

"I will come and dine," he assented quietly. "I am afraid that I cannot promise more than that. Lady Cynthia, as she knows, is always welcome at the Sanctuary."

CHAPTER XVII

Punctual to his appointment that afternoon, the man who had sought an interview with Francis was shown into the latter's study in Clarges street.

He wore an overcoat over his livery, and directly he entered the room Francis was struck by his intense pallor. He had been trying feverishly to assure himself that all that the man required was the usual sort of help or assistance into a hospital. Yet there was something furtive in his visitor's manner, something which suggested the bearer of a guilty secret.

"Please tell me what you want as quickly as you can," Francis begged. "I am due to start down into the country in a few minutes."

"I won't keep you long, sir," the man replied. "The matter is rather a serious one."

"Are you ill?"

"Yes, sir."

"You had better sit down."

The man relapsed gratefully into a chair.

"I'll leave out everything that doesn't count, sir," he said. "I'll be as brief as I can. I want you to go back to the night I waited upon you at dinner—the night Mr. Oliver Hilditch was found dead. You gave evidence. The jury brought in 'suicide.' It wasn't suicide at all, sir. Mr. Hilditch was murdered."

The sense of horror against which he had been struggling during the last few hours, crept once more through the whole being of the man who listened. He was face to face once more with that terrible issue. Had he perjured himself in vain? Was the whole structure of his dreams about to collapse, to fall about his ears?

"By whom?" he faltered.

"By Sir Timothy Brast, sir."

Francis, who had been standing with his hand upon the table, felt suddenly inclined to laugh. Facile though his brain was, the change of issues was too tremendous for him to readily assimilate it. He picked up a cigarette from an open box, with shaking fingers, lit it, and threw himself into an easy-chair. He was all the time quite unconscious of what he was doing.

"Sir Timothy Brast" he repeated.

"Yes, sir," the man reiterated. "I wish to tell you the whole story."

"I am listening," Francis assured him.

That evening before dinner, Sir Timothy Brast called to see Mr. Hilditch, and a very stormy interview took place. I do not know the rights of that, sir. I only know that there was a fierce quarrel. Mrs. Hilditch came in and Sir Timothy left the house. His last words to Mr. Hilditch were, 'You will hear from me again.' As you know, sir—I mean as you remember, if you followed the evidence—all the servants slept at the back of the house. I slept in the butler's room downstairs, next to the plate pantry. I was awake when you left, sitting in my easy-chair, reading. Ten minutes after you had left, there was a sound at the front door as though someone had knocked with their knuckles. I got up to open it, but Mr. Hilditch was before me. He admitted Sir Timothy. They went back into the library together. It struck me that Mr. Hilditch had had a great deal to drink, and there was a queer look on Sir Timothy's face that I didn't understand. I stepped into the little room which communicates with the library by folding doors. There was a chink already between the two. I got a knife from the pantry and widened it until I could see through. I heard very little of the conversation, but there was no quarrel. Mr. Hilditch took up the weapon which you know about, sat in a chair and held it to his heart. I heard him say something like this: 'This ought to appeal to you, Sir Timothy. You're a specialist in this sort of thing. One little touch, and there you are.' Mr. Hilditch said something about putting it away. My master turned to Sir Timothy and said something in a low tone. Suddenly Sir Timothy leaned over. He caught hold of Mr. Hilditch's hand which held the hilt of the dagger, and—and—well, he just drove it in, sir. Then he stood away. Mrs. Hilditch sprang up and would have screamed, but Sir Timothy placed his hand over her mouth. In a moment I heard her say, 'What have you done?' Sir Timothy looked at Mr. Hilditch quite calmly. 'I have ridged the world of a verminous creature,' he said. My knees began to shake. My nerves were always bad. I crept back into my room, took off my clothes and got into bed. I had just put the light out when they called for me."

Francis was himself again. There was an immense relief, a joy in his heart. He had never for a single moment blamed Margaret, but he had never for a single moment forgotten. It was a closed chapter, but the stain was on its pages. It was wonderful to tear it out and scatter the fragments.

"I remember you at the inquest," he said. "Your name is John Walter."

"Yes, sir."

"Your evidence was very different."

"Yes, sir."

"You kept all this to yourself."

"I did, sir. I thought it best."

"Tell me what has happened since?"

The man looked down at the table.

"I have always been a poor man, sir," he said. "I have had bad luck whenever I made a try to start anything. I thought there seemed a chance for me here. I went to Sir Timothy and I told him everything."

"Well?"

"Sir Timothy never turned a hair, sir. When I had finished he was very short with me, almost curt. 'You have behaved like a man of sense, Walter,' he said. 'How much?' I hesitated for some time. Then I could see he was getting impatient. I doubled what I had thought of first. 'A thousand pounds, sir,' I said. Sir Timothy he went to a safe in the wall and he counted out a thousand pounds in notes, there and then. He brought them over to me. 'Walter,' he said, 'there is your thousand pounds. For that sum I understand you promise to keep what you saw to yourself?'

"Yes, sir," I agreed. "Take it, then," he said, "but I want you to understand this: There have been many attempts, but no one yet has ever succeeded in blackmailing me. No one ever will. I give you this thousand pounds willingly. It is what you have asked for. Never let me see your face again. If you come to me starving, it will be useless. I shall not part with another penny."

The man's simple way of telling his story, his speech, seemed all to add to the dramatic nature of his disclosure. Francis found himself sitting like a child who listens to a fairy story.

"And then?" he asked simply.

"I went off with the money," Walter continued, "and I had cruel bad luck. I put it into a pub. I was robbed a little, I drank a little, my wife wasn't any good. I lost it all, sir. I found myself destitute. I went back to Sir Timothy."

"Well?"

The man shifted his feet nervously. He seemed to have come to the difficult part of his story.

"Sir Timothy was as hard as nails," he said slowly. "He saw me. The moment I had finished, he rang the bell. 'Hedges,' he said to the manservant who came in, 'this man has come here to try and blackmail me. Throw him out. If he gives any trouble, send for the police. If he shows himself here again, send for the police.'"

"What happened then?"

U. S. AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN RESIGNS
CYRUS E. WOODS QUILTS POST ON ACCOUNT OF ILLNESS OF WIFE'S MOTHER.
MOVE REPORTED NOT POLITICAL
News of Retirement Withheld Several Weeks Because of Immigration Bill Before Congress.

Washington—Ambassador Cyrus E. Woods has resigned his post at Tokio and will return to the United States from Japan as soon as the President and Secretary Hughes find it convenient to release him.

The ambassador tendered his resignation to the president about May 1. The health of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Marchand, who has been with him in Tokio, and who went through the ordeal of the earthquake disaster, prompted his decision to terminate a brilliant diplomatic career.

As Ambassador Wood's resignation was submitted prior to the Japanese exclusion issue being raised in congress with the resultant delicate situation between Washington and Tokio, it was declared in the most emphatic terms that the immigration bill now before President Coolidge had nothing whatever to do with his retirement.

In confirming the fact that Ambassador Woods had resigned his post, White House officials were careful to insist that the circumstances had no political significance whatever. There would be very sincere regret, it was said, in the highest administration quarters if any such interpretation were placed on Mr. Wood's resignation, as all of the facts in the case are in conflict with any such view.

No formal announcement was made of Mr. Wood's resignation because of the delicacy of the situation arising from congressional determination to disregard the wishes of the president and Secretary Hughes in the matter of Japanese exclusion by legislative action instead of through international agreement.

BANK ROBBERS GET $30,000
Detroit Bank is Scene of Daring and Profitable Holdup.

Detroit—Two bank robbers, whose identities police say they know, were being sought by every available detective in Detroit following the $30,000 robbery of the West End branch of the Bank of Detroit, 7960 West Fort street. One of the robbers was a physical giant, the other was described as being about 5 feet tall.

The holdup took place just as the bank was being opened for business at 9 o'clock. H. R. Taggart, a bookkeeper was withdrawing a key from the front door when the two gunmen leaped on him and shoved him with such violence that he was hurled into the lobby of the bank, flat on his face.

Taggart was dragged behind a counter and hidden there. The gunmen hid themselves behind another counter. In a few minutes Joseph L. Kanla, a teller, entered. Apparently unaware of the presence of the thugs or the absence of Taggart, Kanla started to open a safe, the time lock of which had been set for 8:30 o'clock.

The gunmen permitted Kanla to proceed until August Kukkahn and Verna Moore appeared. Both are employed in the bank.

Cursing and flourishing his revolver threateningly, the big man held the clerks at bay while the small man forced Kanla to open the compartments of the safe. An unusually large amount of currency was on hand, because nearby factory employees are accustomed to cash their pay checks in the bank Saturday.

The robbers escaped in an automobile.

DETROIT GAS RATE TIED UP
Court Order Halts Award Made by Arbitration Board.

Detroit—The Detroit City Gas company has been restrained from charging restaurants the increased rate awarded by the board of arbitration several weeks ago, by a temporary injunction granted by Judge Clyde I. Webster in circuit court. The restaurant association sought the injunction, claiming that the city council acted illegally when it overrode the veto of Acting Mayor Joseph A. Martin and approved the board's award.

Under the ruling of Judge Webster the contract entered into between the gas company and the city, through the action of the council, constitutes a franchise.

THIS FREEDOM

By THOMAS A. CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The room in which Aunt Sarah was born was heated with an open fireplace, dirty, cavernous and inadequate, requiring constant feeding and hourly attention.

When she was married the family had progressed through the "cannon" stove stage to the base-burner which promised almost perfect freedom from the annoyances incident to the other means of heating the little house in which Aunt Sarah was living. But even the base-burner had to be filled twice a day, and the male members of the household were often busy and more often thoughtless, and the trip to the coal house was long and the coal scuttle heavy when Aunt Sarah was the purveyor. The ashes, which had to be taken out twice a day were light and messy, and if one damped the stove too heavily in an attempt to regulate the heat, it gassed. It was a relief when she moved into a new house and the furnace came into vogue.

But even the furnace had its drawbacks. It ate up coal like a ravenous flapper eating chocolate candy—soft coal, too, that clogged the chimney with soot. Sometimes the chimney burned out, scattering flames and hot ashes over the roof to the imminent danger of the house, and to the utter terror of poor Aunt Sarah who hourly expected to be burned out of house and home, and who woke at night smelling fire. The soot penetrating soot found its way everywhere, laid a dark hand upon all of Aunt Sarah's household treasures, and held her like a slave to her household duties.

And then came the "Nocol" innovation promising relief from shoveling coal, from ashes, from soot, from responsibility of all sorts, and Aunt Sarah willingly paid her money for the invention and had one installed. But she still found difficulties. The workman filling the oil tank went to sleep at the switch and wasted a barrel or two of oil; the critter needed intelligent regulating at least three times a day, and once Aunt Sarah failed carefully to read the directions for managing the pilot light, and while she was investigating with a lighted match the infernal machine exploded and nearly killed her.

"There ain't no such thing as freedom anywhere," Aunt Sarah averred feelingly, and she was right. We struggle to evade responsibility, to find the short cut or the easy job, but there aren't any. We might better face the task that is before us bravely and make the best of it. Whatever freedom from work or responsibility or effort we seem to attain we pay for usually more than it is worth.

SULPHUR CLEARS
A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking-out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickly by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist. Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.
