Here Comes the Bride

MISS MYRTLE JOYNT UNITED IN MARRIAGE AT MELBOURNE, FLA.

Miss Myrtle Joynt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Joynt of East Jordan, was united in marriage to Gunner Nelson at Melbourne, Fla., recently.

Following is an account of the wedding taken from the Times of that city:

One of the prettiest home weddings that has been our good fortune to witness occurred Wednesday evening, May 21st, when Miss Myrtle Joynt and Mr. Gunner Nelson were united in marriage at the beautiful new home of the bride's cousin, Mrs. Fred Kowalski, in the presence of about twenty-five guests, Rev. McCormick, of the Baptist church officiating.

The living room was beautifully decorated with pink and white Oleanders, white Lillies and ferns. The wedding party was ushered in to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march with Miss Marian Valentine as bridesmaid and Mr. Claus Franssen, groomsmen, Junior Kowalski bearing the ring in a beautiful Calla Lily.

The bride wore a beautiful dress of white silver cloth and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses and ferns. The bridesmaid wore pale green canton crepe, the groom and attendant wore dark blue.

After congratulations the guests were ushered into the dining room where the same color scheme of pink, white and green was carried out. All were seated at tables and served with delicious chicken salad, rolls, saltines, pickles, coffee, pink and white ice cream and cake, the bride cutting the bride's cake. And later, when the guests were preparing to shower the happy couple with rice, they vanished via the back door where a car was waiting to take them away, and they were seen no more. When last heard from they were in Daytona on their way to Tampa.

Ironwood—Heavy rains have so swollen the streams in this part of the Upper Peninsula that fishermen declare good trout fishing will be delayed.

Grand Rapids—John Williams, 35 years old, was shot through the knee when a rifle with which he was hunting gophers was accidentally discharged.

Shelby—Oceana County is planning a cherry carnival. It is to be staged during the cherry season and is to advertise the cherries of this section. Oceana is one of the largest cherry growing sections in the State.

Lake Odessa—Stepping from behind a parked automobile in front of another car driven by Galen Beaver, of Lake Odessa, Mrs. Manuel Kussmaul, 50 years old, living near Woodland, received injuries that resulted in her death.

Escanaba—Ralph Barnes, 28 years old, was injured fatally at the plant of the Northwestern Coöperage Co., at Gladstone, when he was crushed beneath a falling log. Barnes had been employed at the plant for only a short time.

Longest Span Nearing Completion

Work is rapidly progressing on the longest suspended bridge span in the world, between Bear Mountain and Anthony's Nose, north of Peekskill, to carry a 38-foot roadway with a capacity of 5,000 motor cars an hour, over the Hudson river. The span will be 1,632 feet long, which is 32 feet longer than that of the Williamsburg bridge, at present the longest suspended span in the world. The total length between the abutments will be 2,258 feet. The bridge towers will be 350 feet high, and the span will have a clearance over the river of 157 feet.

Junior Hop A Success

Social Event of the Season for High School Pupils.

The High School Junior Hop is always an important social event for the High School Students. It was equally true this year. In addition, a bountiful banquet was served, at which 120 guests were seated. This part of the program has been added within the past 2 years in order to have the class enjoy themselves together as hosts to the Seniors. Formerly, the dues for the whole class were spent on a Hop when perhaps half the class did not dance.

The whole affair of last Thursday evening was handled admirably. Too much praise cannot be given to the efficiency of the Chairman of the event, Miss Frances Rogers. The arrangement and success of the banquet reflects a great deal of credit on the Chairman, Miss Marie MacDonald, and her committee, and finally but certainly not least, Mrs. Henry Clark and her committee of mothers, for the eats for seldom does anyone sit down to a more tasty and delightful feast than the one set before the Thursday evening banquets. A word about the decoration committee was purposely left until now for the reason that it's doubtful indeed if there ever were a more elaborate and prettier decorations than those used at the Junior Hop Thursday evening.

Miss Sadie Murphy was chairman of the decoration committee and to be congratulated on the effective setting given the whole affair by the delightful arrangement of the gym. The sort of trellis work baskets to hide the otherwise ugly lights of the gym, in addition a number of floor lamps and a great many beautiful chairs and rockers gathered from a number of the homes in the city surely made the gym an inviting place to spend an evening with your best girl or your best fellow. The class of 1925 as a whole can be proud of the royal way in which they entertained the Seniors.

There was more than just eats at the banquet for a number of original toasts were given, led by the toast master, Principal Waggoner, who in a most delightful manner put everyone at ease immediately after the bountiful meal and in an original way introduced the speakers of the evening. The Misses Kitzman and MacDonald's toasts would do justice to an experienced toaster. The toast master was almost forced to hide behind his chair, a slam given him by C. Henning of union men. Miss Azalia Liskum, as president of the Senior class, bespoke the Seniors' appreciation of the Juniors' entertainment. Many guests remarked that perhaps it was the most delightful Junior Hop that the High School has experienced thus far.

The Cole's Orchestra of Petoskey furnished music of a high order and the dancing itself, carefully chaperoned was above reproach and on this point the boys and girls of the East Jordan Public Schools are to be congratulated. Hurrah for the Class of 1925!

LITTLE DAUGHTER OF RUSSELL THOMAS PASSES AWAY

Pansy Marie Thomas, little daughter of Russel and Carrie Thomas of East Jordan, was born January 5, 1918, and passed from this life at Charlevoix Hospital, Monday, May 26, at 7:30 a. m. Pansy was an unusually bright, attractive little girl, a favorite with all who knew her; an apt pupil in school having completed her first year's work on the day she was taken sick. She participated in all school and Sunday School entertainments in a very delightful manner; was the joy of her home and the pride of the neighborhood. Her last sickness was full of intense suffering borne with the utmost patience.

Sunday, a few short hours before her going, she said, "I feel all right, Let's go home." And Monday morning early, she said "Mamma, if you go home, you'll take me, won't you?" A little later, "Mamma which way shall I go?" To which the mother replied, "Go with the angels, darling." She then rested peacefully for ten minutes before her going, she kissed her loved "Goodby." Surely she is at home for "of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Besides the bereaved parents, three brothers, Harold, Gabriel, and Sherman, and a host of relatives and friends are left to mourn her loss.

Funeral services were held at the home at Eveline Orchards Wednesday at noon, and the beautiful little body covered with flowers was laid to rest in the Bellaire cemetery to wait till her loved ones meet her in the heavenly home.—Contributed.

SENATE PASSES POSTAL RAISE

BILL WOULD GIVE INCREASED PAY TO 300,000 IN MAIL SERVICE.

PROPOSITION FAVORED 73 TO 3

Would Cause Estimated Increase of $90,000,000 Per Year in Postal Expenses.

Washington—Carrying the Borah amendment for full publicity of political contributions during the progress of campaigns, the postal salary increase bill passed the senate.

The vote was 73 to 3, those opposing being Senators William B. Borah, Idaho, and Simeon Pess and Frank B. Willis, Ohio, all Republicans.

Salaries of 300,000 postal employees would be increased by an average of $200 each annually under the measure, which now goes to the house, where a similar bill is pending.

An estimated increase of $90,000,000 in postal expenses, which would be met by the "normal increase in business," the senate was told by Senator Walter E. Edge (Rep.), New Jersey, who had charge of it.

The following schedule of salaries would be adopted under the measure: Clerks and carriers, $1,700 to $2,100; special clerks at first and second class offices, $2,200 to $2,300; substitutes and temporary clerks, 65 cents per hour; watchmen, laborers and messengers, $1,450 to $1,550; marine carriers, $2,400.

AIR PULLMAN PROVES SUCCESS

All Metal Monoplane Makes Trip From Detroit to Dayton and Return.

Detroit—The "Maiden Detroit," an all-metal single-engine monoplane, designed and built here by William B. Stout, carried eight passengers from Selfridge Field to Dayton, O., and back in its first cross-country flight.

The "Maiden Detroit" is constructed throughout of duraluminum, a metal as strong as steel but not half so heavy, and weighs 1,000 pounds less than previous planes of its type.

Its economy of operation in cross-country flight was revealed when calculation showed that the cost of gasoline and oil for the 450-mile journey was 7.1 cents a mile, or approximately one cent a mile for each of the passengers and a free ride for the pilot. The average speed was approximately 100 miles an hour.

JAPAN PROTESTS EXCLUSION

Formal Note Asks That U. S. Reconsider Action Against Nipponese.

Washington—Japan's "solemn protest" against the exclusion section of the new immigration law has been formally presented to Secretary Hughes by Ambassador Hanihara, and made public at the state department without comment.

Coupled with the protest is the request of the Japanese government that the American government "take all possible and suitable measure" for the removal of "discrimination."

The communication declares international discriminations are particularly "unwelcome" when "based on race," and adds that discrimination of that character is expressed in the exclusion statute.

STONE CANCELS BIG TAX REFUND

Move Will Cost California Taxpayers $130 Millions.

Washington—Attorney General Stone has recalled the decision of former Attorney General Daugherty, which gave refunds of income taxes to the amount of approximately $130,000,000 to the people of California under the community property tax law.

The bureau of internal revenue has made important changes in its personnel, in order to administer the decision of former Attorney General Daugherty, and has sent refund checks to thousands of California income taxpayers, all of which is nullified by Stone's decision to override Daugherty's decision.

Huge Light to Guide Almen, Pilots. Cleveland—A beacon light of 300,000,000 candle-power has been placed on the roof of the new Union Trust building to serve as a guide for aviators and lake pilots. Twenty floors above the street, the light is six feet high and weighs 1,200 pounds. With favorable conditions the rays can be seen 125 miles away from Cleveland. It night United States mail service by airplane from Chicago to New York is instituted, the light will guide them to the Cleveland landing field.

Gurren followed his tracks Friday evening from Howe's dock along the beach until it turned into the Thomas Crosby swamp, but it was too dark to go farther, after calling everywhere they could think of and going with a car to several places they gave up the search until morning when about 30 turned out to search the swamp, but could follow the tracks on the beach nearly to East Jordan where it turned away from the shore but could not find the boy, but was told a boy answering that description was seen walking north on the railroad track sometime earlier that started back expecting to over take him, but did not, but had not been at the Jarman home but a little while when a telephone call came from East Jordan saying the boy was on his way home, a car went and met him and brought him home about 10:00 a. m. Saturday morning. He had slept in the woods and had nothing to eat since breakfast Friday. The cause of the trick was he had taken a revolver, belonging to Ed, his step-brother, out of the cupboard in the morning and in handling it, it was discharged, and the charge went through a window, as he was never punished in his life, it looked foolish to be so scared, although he had been told many times not to touch the article.

Quite a posse started out Saturday morning to hunt for Bob Jarman, 14 years old, who went hunting Friday morning and failed to return, his father Geo. Jarman of Knoll Krest and Ed. Gurren followed his tracks Friday evening from Howe's dock along the beach until it turned into the Thomas Crosby swamp, but it was too dark to go farther, after calling everywhere they could think of and going with a car to several places they gave up the search until morning when about 30 turned out to search the swamp, but could follow the tracks on the beach nearly to East Jordan where it turned away from the shore but could not find the boy, but was told a boy answering that description was seen walking north on the railroad track sometime earlier that started back expecting to over take him, but did not, but had not been at the Jarman home but a little while when a telephone call came from East Jordan saying the boy was on his way home, a car went and met him and brought him home about 10:00 a. m. Saturday morning. He had slept in the woods and had nothing to eat since breakfast Friday. The cause of the trick was he had taken a revolver, belonging to Ed, his step-brother, out of the cupboard in the morning and in handling it, it was discharged, and the charge went through a window, as he was never punished in his life, it looked foolish to be so scared, although he had been told many times not to touch the article.

Odd Flag of Tibet

The national flag of Tibet takes a bit of memorizing. The middle of the flag contains a gold sun rising above a white mountain; on the mountain there are two lions in white, green and red, and between the lions a jewel and a flaming gem. Any space left over in the flag is filled with alternate triangles of red and blue.

Helpless on Land

Due to the remarkable dexterity of the hell-diver in the water, it is usually impossible to approach it to within camera range, says Nature Magazine. Only when the photographer is so very fortunate as to come upon this queer bird on land, where it is helpless, may intimate portraiture be successfully indulged in.

To Be Successful

To be successful in anything, one must cultivate the habit of thinking completely around his problem, little or big. To be satisfied with thinking two-thirds or three-fourths of the way around is to stand back deliberately while some one else gains greater efficiency, prestige and leadership. Many people fail because they do not think their problems through and take time enough to do it properly.—Selected.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold. Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wylet's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Cost Facts Help in Making Plans

Different Ways Pointed Out for Measuring Efficiency and Net Returns.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How farmers can use detailed cost of production figures to improve their practices and methods and make the most profitable combinations of crops and live stock on their farms, is shown by the United States Department of Agriculture and the University of Minnesota in a study recently completed of operations during 1920, 1921 and 1922 on 24 farms in Cottonwood and Jackson counties, Minnesota.

Representatives of the department visited these farms regularly, obtaining day-to-day records on labor used, crops grown, live stock raised, and other phases of the farm work. With this information at hand, different ways were pointed out in which organization of crops and live stock on these farms could be measured for the greatest efficiency and the largest net returns.

While the results obtained apply fully only to the particular farms studied, they can be used by other farmers operating elsewhere under similar conditions. Similar material gathered in previous studies is on file in the department, and 17 like projects are under way in different parts of the country. They are expected to be helpful not only in enabling individual farmers to plan their operations efficiently, but in facilitating a more rapid adjustment between agricultural production as a whole and production in other lines.

Advance Plans Great Help.

Detailed information on farm production factors, says the department, makes it possible to project operations at least a year in advance with fair accuracy. It gives a basis for estimating probable returns from the various organization plans of which the farmer has a choice. Working out farm policies before definite steps are taken serves as a check on what has been accomplished, and helps farmers to make a wise selection of enterprises.

Farmers are accordingly advised to make diligent use of all available data in choosing between different farm production plans. Study of "unit requirement" data can be of special benefit, it is declared, in speeding the readjustment of production to changing market conditions. Changes from one enterprise to another are often not made until the relative advantages of the enterprises are beginning to be reversed, so that the farmer is hardly launched on the new path before the need arises of changing back. Study of production costs and price trends would make this error less common.

In their studies in Cottonwood and Jackson counties, Minnesota, the investigators found that there are considerable quantities of feeds of a non-salable character produced in the area. These together with nonutilizable pasture can be marketed only through live stock. There are also times when man and horse labor are idle. How to utilize these resources to the best advantage was a part of the problem. On some farms the solution was apparently greater attention to live stock enterprises. On others a more complete utilization of the available labor and material resources seemed obtainable by a readjustment of crops. In general the farmers were urged to work toward a well-rounded organization that would give the greatest net return from all the factors of production by providing for a more uniform seasonal distribution of labor and a more complete utilization of all of the farm resources.

Lack of Live Stock Noted.

Labor, horses, and machinery, it is pointed out, are usually employed more economically in a system of diversified farming than in a single crop system, even if the crop needing attention at one time in a diversified system gives a lower return than that needing attention at another time. Farms consisting of corn, small grain, and cattle enterprises are numerous in Cottonwood and Jackson counties. But the department's investigators found that some farms well organized for crop production were not marketing their crops efficiently through live stock. On one farm only 125 pounds of butterfat were being produced per cow, and beef production was low in proportion to the feed consumed.

One of the better organized farms in the area picked out for illustrative purposes had no definite rotation of crops including legumes for hay and maintenance of soil fertility. Its small-grain acreage was considered out of proportion to its corn acreage, and opportunities were pointed out for increasing the acreage of corn and tame hay without hiring additional labor or decreasing the number of work stock. The amount of pork produced was low in proportion to the amount of skim milk and other feeds available.

The material coming out of this study shows the wide variations in the quantities of labor and feed used in production from farm to farm. From the figures shown on the standard amounts of feed and labor used in production it is possible for other producers to determine the relative efficiency of what they are doing on their own farm. There are set forth by the department the principles underlying the proper combination of farm enterprise as well as methods of securing increased efficiency in production and by examples and illustrations there is shown the possibility of measuring improved farm organization through increased farm returns.

Lime Makes Clover and Aids Fertility

This Legume With Clover Is Best Source of Protein.

Lime makes clover and clover makes for soil fertility.

This is what A. F. Gustafson of the New York state college of agriculture, at Ithaca says in pointing out that clover is a most important crop in rotations. Without clover, he says, it is difficult and costly to keep the soil well supplied with nitrogen.

"Clover and alfalfa," he adds, "are the cheapest and probably the best source of protein for dairy cows. These legume saps, cut early and cared properly, supply absolutely essential vitamins for cows. Legumes also provide lime and phosphorus necessary for milk production and for the normal development of a healthy calf. Abortion is less likely to be prevalent among cows fed plenty of alfalfa and good clover hay."

"Both of these crops need plenty of lime in the soil for fair growth. Much of the southern and eastern parts of the state need from one to one and a half, and on exceptionally sour soils, two tons of limestone, or its equivalent, for red clover. Alfalfa and sweet clover require even more.

"Limestone may be applied on fall-plowed land as soon as the fields are dry enough to get on them; it may be worked in while making the seedbed preparatory to drilling the spring grain and clover seed. Burned or hydrated lime may be applied after the soil is dry enough to stir, and should be mixed with the soil very soon after spreading. Any form of lime should be mixed very thoroughly with the soil for best results with either clover or alfalfa.

"Good acclimated, domestic northern-grown clover seed is also necessary to obtain a good red clover hay crop."

Keeping Broody Hens on Feed Is Now Advocated

Thousands of dollars are lost each year because broody hens are allowed to remain on the nests instead of being made to produce. Some poultry owners resort to starving or ducking their broody hens or withholding water from them, but such treatment is injurious to the hens and often throws them into an early molt. Better results will be gained if the "broodies" are given plenty to drink, and if a wash is kept before them all of the time. Besides, they should have a light feeding of scratch feed twice a day.

A broody coop which will help in breaking the birds of their desire to nest is also recommended. It should be built of wire or slats, with the bottom of the same material as the sides and top, and should be placed in the hen house, preferably on the roosts. About twice a week the broody coop can be opened and all the birds allowed to escape. Any that still seek the nest should be put back in the broody coop.

Prepare for Oats With Disk on Corn Stubble

That it is profitable to plow or disk corn stubble ground for oats is proven by tests made at the Ohio experiment station.

The average yield of the disked land for the 15 years of the experiment was 52.83 bushels per acre and that of the plowed land 52.02 bushels, or almost the same; while the stubble land which was disk-drilled as early as the land could be worked, but without any previous preparation of seedbed gave only 47.43 bushels per acre.

In two very exceptional seasons the no-preparation seed beds gave the largest yield, although in especially unfavorable seasons the yields of the unprepared land were less than half that on either the plowed or the disked land.

The plowed land was much freer from white-top weeds in seasons when that winter annual was particularly bad. Unless the land is in good condition for drilling and free from weeds plowing or thorough disking is the safest practice.

Farm Hints

Head lettuce requires about 90 days from seeding to maturity.

The best practice in planting sweet clover is to seed it with barley as a nurse crop early in the spring.

The prices for early lettuce are sometimes better than for the last crop, though often the reverse is true.

A grain drill set to show about two pecks of wheat will sow about the right amount of sudan grass seed.

The statement is often made that lettuce maturing late in the season, when the weather is cool, is more likely to be a success than the earlier crop.

If, instead of cutting a good, vigorous stand of alfalfa on June 1, it is allowed to grow three weeks longer, the yield will often be doubled—one reason why two crops may yield more than three.

It is usually a matter of efficiency and economy to use mechanical instead of human energy wherever possible to do work. Human energy had better be used in brain work which a machine lacks.

GRADE CHILDREN DO WELL IN "THE WHOLE YEAR ROUND"

Miss Sanford already showed what she could do when she staged "The Windmills of Holland" a few weeks ago. She certainly lost no prestige in the operetta "The Whole Year Round" given by the grade children of the Central School.

The plot of the little story was based on a dispute between the seasons. A "Stranger" finally agreed to judge which season should last the whole year round, after displaying their qualifications and merits. A contest then took place but he finally saw that each season had its place and that none were qualified to last the whole year round.

The decorations were simple yet very appropriate and showed a good deal of taste and gave a fine background to the little operetta.

The "Stranger" and perhaps the leading part in the play was very well handled by Raymond Green who made a hit with the audience from the beginning by his manly businesslike appearance. He knew his lines perfectly and also sang and spoke well.

Winter was represented by Gilbert Joynt, assisted by Sammy Kling and Billie Kitsman. Gilbert has been in one or two other little school affairs of one kind or another and always does well. He was ably assisted by Sammy Kling and Billie Kitsman.

Jingle Bells were well taken by Junior Sherman, Rex Crawford, Carl Bogart and Orlando Blain.

Summer was represented by Marian Maddock, assisted by Reta LaValley, Ellegene Reitzel and Vera Montroy. Miss Maddock sang very well and surely was strongly supported in her effort to win the prize for summer by Reta LaValley Ellegene Reitzel and Vera Montroy. "It is not taking anything from the others to say that Reta LaValley displayed one of the sweetest little girl voices it may be your pleasure to hear, followed very closely by Ellegene Reitzel. Vera Montroy also did very well.

Spring was represented by Hope Fuller, who assumed the responsibility of proving that Spring was the season. She made a very pleasing appearance and took her part ably, as well as her assistants, Hildegard Ellison, Eloise Davis and Martha Zitzka. Representing spring was a May Pole dance by the Kindergarten. This was greatly enjoyed for they surely made a real addition to the whole affair. Also supporting spring were five little elves or brownies, in the persons of Edgar Alexander, Martha Gay, Lorraine Voice Ruth Duncanson and Ernest Rude.

Blanche Boswell and her assistants made a strong bid for the crown of the seasons, assisted by Beatrice McCollman and Helen Voice. All of these girls sang surprisingly well.

The Nut Dancers lent their influence and presence to Fall. Dressed as little red acorns, they gave a very beautiful little dance. Every one of these girls showed ability of a high order. The Nut dancers were Cathola Lorraine, Ethel Staley, Moreen Bulow and Helen Severance.

Miss Sanford starting as she did in the grades this year, after an absence of five or six years of a music teacher, deserves a good deal of credit for the very successful debut of the grade children in musical affair. Needless to say, another year will make it far less difficult to put on things of a similar nature.

By the way, it is hoped that the East Jordan Schools will be well represented in the State Musical contest. It will be well for the parents to remember this to give their children that show promise along these lines, every advantage possible.

The Musical department is in a good financial condition and we are looking forward to some very fine things in music the coming year.

Monroe—Monroe's Masonic bodies realized a dream when the formal opening of the Masonic Temple took place recently. Several years ago the Masons purchased the National Guard armory and since last September the work of remodeling has been under way. The building has been remodeled to suit their needs. The value of the building, grounds and equipment is estimated at $150,000.

Battle Creek—The whining of a dog probably saved the lives of six persons when the farm home of J. W. Partridge, south of Battle Creek, was totally destroyed by flames. Mrs. Partridge was awakened by the dog and upon opening the bedroom door found the fire raging. While helping her husband and four children out of the house, she was thrown into the basement when the floor of the living room gave way. She escaped with slight injuries.

Approved of Scriptures

Nestorian Christian missionaries were received by the Emperor Taisung in 631. He listened to an exposition of their creed, and ordered the Christian Scriptures translated into Chinese for his perusal. In 628 he announced that he found the new religion satisfactory, and that it might be preached within the empire.

LEARN WHAT CHIROPRACTIC IS HEALTH TALK NO. 15

Chiropractic is a drugless health science of the cause of so-called disease and the art of adjusting the human spine when its segments are out of natural alignment, so that mental impulse can transmit naturally through the nerves to provide normal health function to every organ and part of the body.

It is a system that includes the use of nothing but the bare hands to locate a subluxated vertebra (small bone of the spine) and effects its replacement to normal position by a peculiar move, made in a particular direction, with a technical degree of speed and force.

The Brain is the power plant of the body. The nerves are the electric cables distributing the power by way of the spine to the different parts of the body to produce life. The stomach, liver, kidneys and other organs are motors which are run by power delivered through the nerves.

If the power is severed, or interfered with, the motor quits running. Connect up the power and the motor starts running. The same is the case with our bodies. We are simply a complicated piece of machinery and each part must work in harmony to make HEALTH which is LIFE. The Chiropractor connects up the power that has been interfered with by releasing the pressure and allowing the power (Vital Force) to flow uninterrupted to the various organs, which then function normally. If there was no good in Chiropractic it would have died of its own accord years ago; but it still lives and is progressing very rapidly.

TWO YOUTHS ADMIT FRANKS SLAYING

NATHAN LEOPOLD AND RICHARD LOEB, 19 YEAR OLD COLLEGE YOUTHS ADMIT MURDER.

BOTH SONS OF MILLIONAIRES

Said They Wanted to Study Reaction On Human Being Dying Under Certain Circumstances.

Chicago—Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., 19-year-old student at the University of Chicago, former student at the University of Michigan, son of the millionaire owner of the Mantou Steamship company and a big box factory, and Richard Loeb, also 19, son of the millionaire, vice-president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and nephew of Jacob Loeb, former president of the Chicago school board, have confessed they deliberately planned the murder of Robert Franks, the 14-year-old son of Jacob Franks, a retired millionaire.

The youthful murderers admit they planned the deed last November, working out every detail until they thought they had established an "air-tight alibi" and that there would be no slip in their scheme.

The murderers desired to note the reactions, sexual, mental, and physical, of a human dying under certain conditions. In addition they wanted the $10,000 ransom, although both have always been liberally supplied with funds.

Going into details of the crime, they said they picked up the Franks boy on his way home from the Harvard school, dragged him into an automobile and struck him over the head with a chisel, wrapped in tape. This chisel was found by a janitor and proved an important clue in the investigation. The blows on the head silenced him, but they stuffed a rag into his mouth and wrapped him in a robe.

Gag Causes Death

They admit they set out deliberately to kill the boy—and they did. The gag in his mouth choked him to death. They knew he was dead five minutes after they had him in the car, but this did not worry them. They intended to kill him in all events, but not until they had subjected him to some weird experiments. Later, if the gag had not killed him, they intended to finish him with ether.

After stripping the victim and thrusting his nude body into the culvert, they burned the blanket in which he had been wrapped.

At this point fate stepped into the gruesome picture. In his haste to dispose of the body and get back to the city to complete his alibi, Leopold dropped his glasses. These were of peculiar construction and were readily traced, and this was the first tangible clue detectives had to work upon.

The final breakdown came when their alibi, bomb proof up to that point, was suddenly punctured.

Both boys insisted they were using Leopold's Willys-Knight car. The car, like the peculiar glasses proved the downfall of the murderers. After they had insisted they had been out in it all afternoon and night, Sven Englund, chauffeur for the Leopold family, was called in. Englund is responsible for the seven cars belonging to the Leopold family and he said the Willys-Knight owned by Nathan Leopold was in the garage all day from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock that night. This testimony led to the boys' confession.

SCHOOL RUINS GIVE UP 23 DEAD

Fire Sweeps California Institution; Matron Among Dead.

Los Angeles—Twenty-three bodies, including two adults, have been recovered from the ruins of the Hope development school for subnormal girls at Playa Del Rey, on the beach 18 miles from here, which was destroyed by fire. Nineteen girls and two women were severely injured.

The fire is believed to have originated on the top floor of a three-story wooden dormitory, where 15 girls were housed. Playing with matches is thought responsible.

The structure was razed to the ground and Matron J. C. Thomas was among those who perished. The dead children ranged in age from 4 to 16 years.

The 19 children were injured when they were either thrown from the building by rescuers or jumped. The women were severely burned when struck by a high tension electric wire.

First Trip to Australia
The first authenticated voyage to Australia was made by the Dutch in 1602. It is believed, however, that the country was visited by the French prior to this date, though there are no actual records. The first important explorations were made by Captain Cook, who visited the country in 1770.

Sir Timothy, later, in a moment's respite from the inflowing stream of guests, came once more across to them.

"I am going to leave you, my honored guests from the Sanctuary," he said, with a faint smile, "to yourselves for a short time. In the room to your left, supper is being served. I want you to meet me in a room which I will show you, at a quarter to twelve."

He led them down one of the corridors which opened from the hall. Before the first door on the right a manservant was standing as though on sentry duty. Sir Timothy tapped the panel of the door with his forefinger.

"This is my sanctum," he announced. "I allow no one in here without special permission. I find it useful to have a place to which one can come and rest quite quietly sometimes. Williams here has no other duty except to guard the entrance. Williams, you will allow this gentleman and these two ladies to pass in at a quarter to twelve."

The man looked at them searchingly. "Certainly, sir," he said. "No one else?"

"No one, under any pretext," Sir Timothy hurried back to the hall, and the others followed him in more leisurely fashion. They were all three full of curiosity.

"I never dreamed," Margaret declared, as she looked around her, "that I should ever find myself inside this house. It has always seemed to me like one great bluebeard's chamber. If ever my father spoke of it at all, it was as of a place which he intended to convert into a sort of miniature Hell."

Sir Timothy leaned back to speak to them as they passed.

"You will find a friend over there, Ledsam," he said.

Willmore turned around and faced them. The two men exchanged somewhat surprised greetings.

"No idea that I was coming until this afternoon," Willmore explained. "I got my card at five o'clock, with a note from Sir Timothy's secretary. I am racking my brains to imagine what it can mean."

"We're all a little added," Francis confessed. "Come and join our tour of exploration. You know Lady Cynthia. Let me present you to Mrs. Hilditch."

The introduction was effected and they all strolled on together. Margaret and Lady Cynthia led the way into the winter-garden, a palace of glass, tall palms, banks of exotics, flowering shrubs of every description, and a fountain, with wonderfully carved water nymphs, brought with its basin from Italy. Hidden in the foliage, a small orchestra was playing very softly. The atmosphere of the place was languorous and delicious.

"Leave us here," Margaret insisted, with a little exclamation of content. "Neither Cynthia nor I want to go any further. Come back and fetch us in time for our appointment."

After a time the men rejoined Margaret and Cynthia and then came suddenly face to face with Sir Timothy, who had escorted a little party of his guests to see the fountain, and was now returning alone.

"You have been visiting, I am glad to see," the latter observed. "I trust that you are amusing yourselves?"

"Excellently, thank you," Francis replied.

"And so far," Sir Timothy went on, with a faint smile, "you find my entertainment normal? You have no question yet which you would like to ask?"

"Only one—what do you do with your launch up the river on moonless nights, Sir Timothy?"

Sir Timothy's momentary silence was full of ominous significance.

"Mr. Ledsam," he said, after a brief pause, "I have given you almost carte blanche to explore my domains here. Concerning the launch, however, I think that you had better ask no questions at present."

"You are using it tonight?" Francis persisted.

"Will you come and see, my venture some guest?"

"With great pleasure," was the prompt reply.

Sir Timothy glanced at his watch.

"That," he said, "is one of the matters of which we will speak at a quarter to twelve."

The Atmosphere of the Place Was Languorous and Delicous.

ter to twelve. Meanwhile, let me show you something. It may amuse you as it has done me."

The three moved back towards one of the arched openings which led into the ballroom.

"Observe, if you please," their host continued, "the third couple who pass us. The girl is wearing green—the very little that she does wear. Watch the man, and see if he reminds you of any one."

Francis did as he was bidden. The girl was a well-known member of the chorus of one of the principal musical comedies, and she seemed to be thoroughly enjoying both the dance and her partner. The latter appeared to be of a somewhat ordinary type, tall, with rather puffy cheeks, and eyes almost unnaturally dark. He danced vigorously and he talked all the time. Something about him was vaguely familiar to Francis, but he failed to place him.

"Notwithstanding all my precautions," Sir Timothy continued, "there, fondly believing himself to be unnoticed, is an emissary of Scotland Yard. Really, of all the obvious, the dry-as-dust, hunt-your-criminal-by-rule-of-three kind of people I ever met, the class of detective to which this man belongs can produce the most blatant examples."

"What are you going to do about him?" Francis asked.

Sir Timothy shrugged his shoulders. "I have not yet made up my mind," he said. "I happen to know that he has been laying his plans for weeks to get here, frequenting Soto's and other restaurants, and scraping acquaintances with some of my friends. The duke of Tadchester brought him—won a few hundreds from him at baccarat. I suppose, his grace will never again find these doors open to him."

Francis' attention had wandered. He was gazing fixedly at the man whom Sir Timothy had pointed out.

"You still do not fully recognize our friend," the latter observed carelessly. "He calls himself Manuel Lotto, and he professes to be a Cuban. His real name I understood, when you introduced us, to be Shopland."

"Great heavens, so it is!" Francis exclaimed.

"Let us leave him to his precarious pleasures," Sir Timothy suggested. "I am free for a few moments. We will wander round together."

They found Lady Cynthia and Willmore, and looked in at the supper-room, where people were waiting now for tables, a babel of sound and gaiety. The grounds and winter-gardens were crowded. Their guide led the way to a large apartment on the other side of the hall, from which the sound of music was proceeding.

"My theater," he said. "I wonder what is going on."

They passed inside. There was a small stage with steps leading down to the floor, easy-chairs and round tables everywhere, and waiters serving refreshments. A girl was dancing.

Sir Timothy watched her approvingly. "Nadia Ellistoff," he told them. "She was in the last Russian ballet, and she is waiting, now for the rest of the company to start in at Covent Garden. You see, it is Metzger who plays the... They improvise. Rather a wonderful performance, I think."

They watched her breathlessly, a spirit in gray tulle, with great black eyes now and then half-closed.

"It is 'Wind Before Dawn,'" Lady Cynthia whispered. "I heard him play it two days after he composed it. Only there are variations, now. She is the soul of the south wind."

The curtain went down amidst rapturous applause. The dancer had left the stage, floating away into some sort of wonderfully contrived nebulous background. Within a few moments, the principal comedians of the day was telling stories. Sir Timothy had them away.

"But how on earth do you get all these people?" Lady Cynthia asked.

"It is arranged for me," Sir Timothy replied. "I have an agent who sees to it all. Every man or woman who is asked to perform, has a credit at Cartier's for a hundred guineas. I pay no fees. They select some little keepsake."

Margaret laughed softly.

"No wonder they call this place a sort of Arabian Nights!" she declared.

"Well, there isn't much else for you to see," Sir Timothy said thoughtfully.

"My gymnastium, which is one of the principal features here, is closed just now for a special performance, of which I will speak in a moment. The concert hall I see they are using for an overflow dance-room. What you have seen, with the grounds and the winter-garden, comprises almost everything."

They moved back through the hall with difficulty. People were now crowding in. Lady Cynthia laughed softly.

"Why, it is like a gala night at the opera, Sir Timothy!" she exclaimed.

"How dare you pretend that this is Bohemia!"

"It has never been I who have described my entertainments," he reminded her. "They have been called everything—orgies, debauches—everything you can think of. I have never ventured myself to describe them."

Their passage was difficult. Every now and then Sir Timothy was compelled to shake hands with some of his newly-arriving guests. At last, however, they reached the little sitting-room. Sir Timothy turned back to Willmore, who hesitated.

"You had better come in, too, Mr. Willmore, if you will," he invited. "You were with Ledsam, the first day we met, and something which I have to say now may interest you."

"If I am not intruding," Willmore murmured.

They entered the room, still jealously guarded. Sir Timothy closed the door behind them.

CHAPTER XIX

The apartment was one belonging to the older portion of the house, and had been, in fact, an annex to the great library. The walls were paneled, and hung with a collection of old prints. There were some easy-chairs, a writing-table, and some wicker bookcases. There were one or two bronze statues of gladiators, a wonderful study of two wrestlers, no minor ornaments. Sir Timothy plunged at once into what he had to say.

"I promised you, Lady Cynthia, and you, Ledsam," he said, "to divulge exactly the truth as regards these much-talked-of entertainments here. You, Margaret, under present circumstances, are equally interested. You, Willmore, are Ledsam's friend, and you happen to have an interest in this particular party. Therefore, I am glad to have you all here together. The superficial part of my entertainment you have seen. The part which renders it necessary for me to keep closed doors, I shall now explain. I give prizes here of considerable value for boxing tests which are conducted under rules of our own. One is due to take place in a very few minutes. The contests vary in character, but I may say that the chief officials of the National Sporting club are usually to be found here, only, of course, in an unofficial capacity. The difference between the contests arranged by me, and others, is that my men are here to fight. They use sometimes an illegal weight of glove and they sometimes hurt one another. If any two of the boxing fraternity have a grudge against one another, and that often happens, they are permitted here to fight it out, under the strictest control as regards fairness, but practically without gloves at all. You heard of the accident, for instance, to Norris? That happened in my gymnastium. He was knocked out by Burgin. It was a wonderful fight."

"However, I pass on. There is another class of contest which frequently takes place here. Two boxers place themselves unreservedly in my hands. The details of the match are arranged without their knowledge. They come into the ring without knowing whom they are going to fight. Sometimes they never know, for my men wear masks. Then we have private matches. There is one tonight. Lord Meadowson and I have a wager of a thousand guineas. He has brought tonight from the East end a boxer who, according to the terms of our bet, has never before engaged in a professional contest. I have brought an amateur under the same conditions. The weight is within a few pounds the same, neither has ever seen the other, only in this case the fight is with regulation gloves and under Queensberry rules."

"Who is your amateur, Sir Timothy?" Willmore asked harshly.

"Your brother, Mr. Willmore," was the prompt reply. "You shall see the fight if I have your promise not to attend in any way to interfere."

Willmore rose to his feet.

"Do you mean to tell me," he demanded, "that my brother has been decoyed here, kept here against his will, to provide amusement for your guests?"

"Mr. Willmore, I beg that you will be reasonable," Sir Timothy expostulated. "I saw your brother box at his gymnastium in Holborn. My agent made him the offer of this fight. One of my conditions had to be that he came here to train and that whilst he was here he held no communication whatever with the outside world. My trainer has ideas of his own and this he insists upon. Your brother in the end acquiesced. He was at first difficult to deal with as regards this condition, and he did, in fact, I believe, Mr. Ledsam, pay a visit to your office, with the object of asking you to become an intermediary between him and his relatives."

"He began a letter to me," Francis interposed, "and then mysteriously disappeared."

"The mystery is easily explained," Sir Timothy continued. "My trainer, Roger Hagon, a Varsity blue, and the best heavyweight of his year, occupies the chambers above yours. He saw from the window the arrival of Reginald Willmore—which was according to instructions, as they were to come down to Hatch End together—went down the stairs to meet him, and to cut a long story short, fetched him out of your office, Ledsam, without allowing him to finish his letter. This absolute isolation seems a curious condition, perhaps, but Hagon insists upon it, and I can assure you that he knows his business. The mystery, as you have termed it, of his disappearance that morning, is that he went upstairs with Hagon for several hours to undergo a medical examination, instead of leaving the building forthwith."

"Queer thing I never thought of Hagon," Francis remarked. "As a matter of fact, I never see him in the Temple, and I thought that he had left."

"May I ask," Willmore interposed, "when my brother will be free to return to his home?"

"Tonight, directly the fight is over," Sir Timothy replied. "Should he be successful, he will take with him a sum of money sufficient to start him in any business he chooses to enter."

Willmore frowned slightly.

"But surely," he protested, "that would make him a professional pugilist?"

"Not at all," Sir Timothy replied. "For one thing, the match is a private one in a private house, and for another the money is a gift. There is no purse. If your brother loses, he gets nothing. Will you see the fight, Mr. Willmore?"

"Yes, I will see it," was the somewhat reluctant assent.

"You will give me your word not to interfere in any way?"

"I shall not interfere," Willmore promised. "If they are wearing regulation gloves, and the weights are about equal, and the conditions are what you say, it is the last thing I should wish to do."

"Capital!" Sir Timothy exclaimed. "Now to pass on. There is one other feature of my entertainments concerning which I have something to say—a series of performances which takes place on my launch at odd times. There is one fixed for tonight. I can say little about it except that it is unusual. I am going to ask you, Lady Cynthia, and you, Ledsam, to witness it. When you have seen that, you know everything. Then you and I, Ledsam, can call one another's hands. I shall have something else to say to you, but that is outside the doings here."

"Are we to see the fight in the gymnastium?" Lady Cynthia inquired.

Sir Timothy shook his head.

"I do not allow women there under any conditions," he said. "You and Margaret had better stay here whilst that takes place. It will probably be over in twenty minutes. It will be time then for us to find our way to the launch. After that, if you have any appetite, supper. I will order some caviare sandwiches for you," Sir Timothy went on, ringing the bell, "and some wine."

Lady Cynthia smiled.

"It is really a very wonderful party," she murmured.

Their host ushered the two men across the hall, now comparatively deserted, for every one had settled down to his or her chosen amusement—down a long passage, through a private door which he unlocked with a Yale key, and into the gymnastium. There were less than fifty spectators seated around the ring, and Francis, glancing at them hastily, fancied that he recognized nearly every one of them. There was Baker, a judge, a couple of actors, Lord Meadowson, the most renowned of sporting peers, and a dozen who followed in his footsteps; a little man who had once been amateur champion in the bantam class, and who was now considered the finest judge of boxing in the world; a theatrical manager, the present amateur boxing champion, and a sprinkling of others. Sir Timothy and his companions took their chairs amidst a buzz of welcome. Almost immediately, the man who was in charge of the proceedings, and whose name was Harrison, rose from his place.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this is a sporting contest, but one under usual rules and usual conditions. An amateur, who tips the scales at twelve stone seven, who has never engaged in a boxing contest in his life, is matched against a young man from a different sphere of life, who intends to adopt the ring as his profession, but who has never as yet fought in public. Names, gentlemen, as you know, are seldom mentioned here. I will only say that the first in the ring is the nominee of our friend and host, Sir Timothy. Brant, second comes the nominee of Lord Meadowson."

Willmore, notwithstanding his pre-knowledge, gave a little gasp. The young man who stood now within a few yards of him, carelessly swinging his gloves in his hand, was without a doubt his missing brother. He looked well and in the pink of condition; not only well but entirely confident and at his ease. His opponent, on the other hand, a sturdier man, a few inches shorter, was nervous and awkward, though none the less determined-looking. Sir Timothy rose and whispered to Harrison's ear. The latter nodded. It is a very few moments the preliminaries were concluded, the fight began.

Francis, glad of a moment or two of solitude in which to rearrange his somewhat distorted sensations, found an empty space in the stern of the launch and stood leaning over the rail. His pulses were still tingling with the indubitable excitement of the last half hour. It was all there, even now, before his eyes like a cinematograph picture—the duel between those two men, a duel of knowledge, of strength, of science, of courage. From beginning to end, there had been no moment when Francis had felt that he was looking on at what was in any way a degrading or immoral spectacle. Each man had fought in his way to win. Young Willmore, graceful as a panther, with a keen, joyous desire of youth for supremacy written in his face and in the dogged lines of his mouth; the budding champion from the East end less graceful, perhaps, but with even more strength and at least as much determination, had certainly done his best to justify his selection. There were no points to be scored. There had been no undue fainting, no holding, few of the tricks of the professional ring. It was a fight to a finish, or until Harrison gave the word. And the better man had won. But even that knock-out blow which Reggie Willmore had delivered after a wonderful feat, had had little that was cruel in it. There was something beautiful almost in the strength and grace with which it had been delivered—the breathless eagerness, the waiting, the end.

He heard Sir Timothy's voice a few yards away, and turned to look at him. He had just come from behind a man who had been standing a little apart from the others, one of the few who was wearing an overcoat, as though he felt the cold. In the background were the two servants who had guarded the gangway.

"Mr. Manuel Lotto," Sir Timothy said—"or shall I say Mr. Shopland?—my invited guests are welcome. I have only one method of dealing with uninvited ones."

"Gentlemen," said the judge, "in the interest of economizing time I would suggest that no witness be asked the same question more than three times."

HONOR

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

There is apparently in the minds of many people a peculiar significance in being put upon one's honor, whatever that may mean, and a peculiar freedom from responsibility when not upon honor. An act may be recognized as objectionable or even as actually evil, but many people feel no compunctions of conscience in committing it, unless they are upon their honor. Then they would lose a leg rather than offend.

Remember not long ago having a conversation with a young fellow with reference to certain immoral things of which he had been guilty. He agreed with me ultimately that if the past could be forgotten he would not in the future again offend. It was not long, however, until I discovered that he had broken his agreement.

"Did you not promise me," I asked, "that you would not do this thing again?"

"Why, I believe I did," was his reply, "but I did not promise upon my honor."

A few years ago a boy came to my office and asked me to lend him thirty-five dollars. He was playing in hard luck, he was out of work, and if he could borrow the sum of money for which he asked, he could get to a distant city and find a job. He would pay the money back in three months, he said. I let him have it, and not hearing from him for a year or two, I wrote him.

"I was not of age when I borrowed the money of you," he finally replied to my letter, "and so I am under no legal obligation to pay it." And he has never done so. He was not on his honor, you see.

It is a curious thing this honor. Under certain conditions a man feels bound by it. He must be honest and truthful and upright. He must insist upon honesty and uprightness in others. Then he leaves a room or turns a corner, and the whole situation changes. He may lie or practice deceit or steal even, and few think the worse of him and he not anything the worse of himself.

It is a false honor, this I have been describing. Real honor is based upon principle, it is the outgrowth of character. It is not influenced by time or situation or circumstance. It is a part of a man's everyday life; it controls and directs his action wherever he is, and it needs no oral or written expression to make it binding.

"IDIOT"

"Idiot" is an interesting word which is derived from the Greek Idiotas. The idiotas were a class of persons whose time was devoted entirely to their own affairs. They did not even exercise their right to vote. Idiot today means someone who is mentally affected. Failure to vote is perhaps a part of the old and new definitions.

Father Sage Says:

"They say that of a dog bites a man, that's nothin'; but that of the man bites the dog, that's news." Well, suppose now that the man bites the dog and the dog bites back. What's that?"

YOU NEVER KNOW

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A LONG the journey here and there You often find a flower, Just anytime or anywhere, No special place or hour. They aren't planted in a row; You never guess, you never know; Around a bend a fellow goes, And right ahead he sees a rose.

You never know: Within a ditch A hly may unfold, Or cowslips make a meadow rich With all their yellow gold. The road is rough, but oftentimes Around a rock an ivy climbs, And many a weary eye has met Beside a stone, a violet.

God sows His blessings like His seeds. No special hour or place; The moment of our saddest needs We often see His face. In hours of joy and hours of care, Just any time and anywhere, His fairest flowers He seems to sow Along life's road—you never know (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

YOUTH

UPON the erect shoulders of the boys and the girls of the present must later fall the mantle of responsibility worn now by their parents. The old folk have long played the leading role. They are gradually being incapacitated by the burden of years, weighing heavier upon them as the clock ticks off the weeks and months.

In a little while father and mother will give way to the younger generation, sit passively in their easy chairs and dream of the days that have gone, as did those who blazed the way before them.

The sun shines as brightly as it did a generation ago; the larks sing as blithely; the flowers bloom as gayly and Dan Cupid is just as alluring with his chuckling laughter and seductive love.

And certainly the seasons come and go with their punctilious regularity, but each day there push to the front new groups of men and women anxious to take their part in the world drama. The strange emotions that accompany the birth of power are much alike the world over. Ideas and ideals have but slight variations.

Men think of pursuits and professions; women of homes and wifely duties. Some go forth like children venturing into the dark; others strike out boldly and are caught by the whirlpool and hurled upon the rocks.

It often happens that those selected by the fates to become leaders are in the beginning the most timorous, yet a consciousness of importance does not overwhelm them.

They are great-hearted and have within them the capabilities of accomplishing great things.

And this is the usual mental attitude of those who are qualified to take up the heavier burdens and march on till the end of their days without complaint. Having been well brought up, they are strong in body, and sunny in nature.

They fall at once into their rightful place and take up their duties with the precision of soldiers who have just come from an exacting drillmaster.

What their parents did only 20 or 25 years ago, they have resolved shall be continued and, if possible, be done better, so that the men and women of the future may go to loftier heights in thought, and in all manner of progressive achievement.

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

By all means, drink lots of good water every day. Have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Lansing—Current reports to the effect that Michigan dealers are not selling as many cars as they did a year ago, were put to flight by the compilation of Department of State records which show that during April of this year titles were issued for 10,821 new passenger cars and 1,708 new trucks. The records for April, 1923, show that during that month the same dealers sold only 15,347 passenger cars and 1,322 trucks.

Lansing—Archle J. Robinson, 55 years old, an employe of the New York Central railroad, was fatally injured when caught under the trucks of a car he was repairing at the roundhouse. He died while being taken to the hospital. Robinson was standing beneath the car which had been raised by a crane. The car started to tip and Robinson attempted to jump but was pinned before he could escape. He leaves his widow and one son.

Detroit—The Supreme Court has recognized the right of the D. & C. to discontinue its Mackinac line of steamers furnishing transportation between Detroit and Mackinac Island and intermediate Lake Huron ports. Service on the Mackinac line was discontinued after the close of navigation in 1920 after restrictions arising from the United States Seamen's Act on the Great Lakes made further operation unprofitable. Cities and persons brought suit to compel the company to resume service on the grounds it was a common carrier.

Early Use of Penknives

The penknife is a hold-over from the days before steel pens were known. Originally a penknife was a small knife used to make and mend quill pens. It was then customary for each man to cut his own pens as he needed them. Nowadays almost any kind of small pocket knife is called a penknife.

Happiness

Happiness is the reflection of our blissful or divine nature on the mind undisturbed by desires, passions or anxieties. Happiness comes in freedom, never in slavery. True freedom means the emancipation of the soul from the bondage of ignorance, delusion, selfishness and all other imperfections.—Abhedananda.

EXTRAORDINARY PAINT DEMONSTRATION TUESDAY, JUNE 10th COME! SEE! LEARN!

Ask The Paint Expert

We have a paint expert with us from The Lowe Brothers Company. He's here to answer your questions. He'll tell you about the four Neptunite Varnishes—why there are four Neptunite Varnishes, where to use them and how they beautify and protect. He'll tell you about Mello-Gloss and Mello-tone, the modern wall finishes—how their first day newness can be perpetuated with soap and water. He'll explain the economy that comes from using High Standard House Paint. And he'll make some jests with these products that will open your eyes in wonderment.
