Commencement This Friday

Pres. Waldo To Give Address on "Factors of Growth."

The annual school year for East Jordan Public Schools comes to a close this Friday night when Commencement Exercises for the Class of 1924 will be given.

President Dwight B. Waldo of the Western State Normal will present the address, his subject being "Factors of Growth."

President Waldo is recognized among the leading educators of the country and is one of the first four or five Normal College presidents in the United States.

President Waldo was sent to Kalamazoo to found Western Normal 20 years ago and has been its only President. Previously he was president of Marquette Normal and had been professor of political economy at Albion College.

Pres. Dwight B. Waldo.

He has been very active in the National Education Association and is considered to be responsible more than any other one man for the increased standards for teachers salaries. He was a pioneer in the movement to raise standards of the teaching profession and is one of the leaders in the campaign for "an adequately trained teacher for every child."

He spent last year at Bellingham, Wash., where he reorganized Washington State Normal College. A new athletic field at Bellingham was dedicated in his honor last fall.

Under President Waldo Western Normal has become the fastest growing teaching training institution in the United States and one of the country's foremost Normal colleges. President Waldo is a very forceful speaker, has addressed numerous national conventions, has spoken in all parts of the country, and is in demand throughout the State as a Commencement speaker.

FORMAL OPENING DINNER AT FISHERMAN'S PARADISE SUNDAY, JUNE 15TH.

The Eighth Annual Fish and Chicken Dinner at Fisherman's Paradise, Belaire, is announced for Sunday, June 15th, at 1:00 o'clock sharp.

Prop'r H. B. Smith has made elaborate preparations for the event as evidenced in the Menu and Program published elsewhere in this issue.

Jep Bisbee of Paris, Mich., the old-time violinist whom Ford put on the map, will be there with his orchestra.

Agnos Kountz Dederich, celebrated Soprano of Toledo, Ohio, will favor with a number of vocal selections. Following are a couple of newspaper comments relative to recitals given by Madame Dederich.

Indianapolis Star:—In these decadent days of jazz it is heartening to find an artist who clings to the highest American Ideals of Good Taste and Refinement. To hear Madame Dederich is to experience a profound feeling of Spiritual Exaltation. Her recital was not only the finest we have ever attended; it was also the greatest sermon we have ever heard.

St. Louis Globe-Dispatch:—Rare beauty of person in combination with a soprano voice of surpassing richness enthralled the great audience which greeted Madame Dederich at her first recital in this city. One group in particular, programed as "Songs of Childhood" won special approval because they fitted so perfectly the dainty size of the artist and showed her extraordinary ability to use her delicately chiseled features to suggest merriment and pain, longing and affection.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON DELIVERED BY REV. C. W. SIDEBOTHAM

A large audience greeted the Class of 1924 in their first appearance. Carrying themselves with a dignity that becomes Seniors, they made a fine impression on one of the largest audiences attending such an affair in years.

The sermon by Rev. Sidebotham on "The Lotus Eaters" was a scholarly address and was filled with solid intellectual meat that naturally provoked serious thought in the minds of the Class and others.

The stage was very prettily decorated by the Juniors and gave a fine background for a good program, which included a solo delightfully rendered by Mrs. Sidebotham. The young peoples' Choir of the Presbyterian Church did well.

The basis for Rev. Sidebotham's talk was taken from a Grecian myth, "The Lotus Eaters." Ulysses, upon his return from the wars of Troy, stopped at the Lotus Island where his men ate the Lotus plant, which made them forget the future and live only in the present. One of the greatest joys, the speaker said, was to be young and able to look forward, not to be lotus eaters, for to the degree that a person looks forward and not backward, they show their youth, not necessarily affected by the passing years.

To be a student, looking forward, makes many of us wish that we were back at the Commencement again. Therefore, look forward and be ready to accept opportunities as they come to you. Do not be lotus eaters and live only in the present, for "to be young, as you are, is very heavenly."

Flag Day Proclamation

Saturday, June 14, Day Set Apart By The Governor.

Another milestone in its progress through the ages has been reached by Old Glory—for soon we are to observe another Flag Day. As time sweeps by and as one generation is quickly followed by another, we realize that our nation has advanced to the most commanding place ever occupied by any country in all the world history. Just as long as we hold to justice as our ideal, this exalted position will remain America's. And as our flag is the emblem of our nation and our ideal, it is proper and most fitting that a day should be set aside so that we may place unusual emphasis upon the symbol of our ideal.

By virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I hereby proclaim Saturday, June 14, 1924, as Flag Day, and urge that the flag not only be displayed wherever possible but communities, schools and other organizations conduct appropriate exercises. It would be good Americanism, too, if each motion picture theatre on Flag Day would flash on the screen a picture of our Nation's emblem.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this fourth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-eighth.

ALEX. J. GROESBECK
Governor.

Manistee—A Rotary club has been organized here. Two previous attempts to organize a branch of the National club had failed. But with Mayor John H. Rademaker as president of the newly formed body, its success is assured.

Lansing—The Hamtramck ordinance limiting hawkers and peddlers' licenses to residents, has been held invalid by the state supreme court. Suit to compel the city to issue him a license was strated by Charles Goldstein, a resident of Detroit.

Monroe—An unidentified man about 40 years old was killed instantly at Dean's Crossing, 12 miles south of here, when he was struck by a limited interurban train on the Detroit, Monroe & Toledo line. The motorman of the interurban said the man deliberately stepped in front of the train.

If nose were a sign of wisdom, the jackass would be the king of beasts. A rich man can afford to dress poorly and a poor man can't afford to dress richly.

It probably would be fine to be your own boss, but do you know anybody that is?

State Dep't Congratulates East Jordan Public Schools

And Re-accredits High School for Three Years on North Central Association of Colleges.

One of the strongest endorsements ever given a High School in Michigan, is contained in a letter from the Michigan Department of Public Instruction to the East Jordan Public Schools, and received here this week.

This letter confirms the fact that our local schools have made rapid advancement in the past few years, and that there is a fine spirit of co-operation between instructor and pupils.

The re-accrediting for three years means that the graduates of East Jordan High may enter any of the North Central Association of Colleges—including the University of Michigan. This Association embraces all the colleges of the twenty middle-west states.

Following is the booster letter:—

State of Michigan
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION
Thomas E. Johnson, Superintendent.

Lansing, June 9, 1924

Supt. A. J. Duncanson
East Jordan, Michigan
Dear Mr. Duncanson:—

Your letter of June 3, together with the statement of improvements made at the East Jordan High School, has just come to my attention this morning.

I am glad to report to you that at the meeting of the University Committee on Diploma Schools held Friday afternoon, June 6, the East Jordan High School was re-accredited for a term of three years. This was done upon my recommendation and by a unanimous vote of the members of the Committee.

I wish to assure you that I enjoyed my visit to your school very much. I was pleased with the spirit of work which seemed to pervade the entire school atmosphere. I feel that the East Jordan School District is to be congratulated upon the improvements that they have made in the last few years and the high standing of the East Jordan school system.

Very sincerely yours,
C. L. GOODRICH
Department of High Schools.

May Festival West Side School

Fine Entertainment Staged on the Lawn Tuesday Evening.

Sometimes we almost forget that we have a West Side School, but it was thoroughly impressed on the minds of a large audience by the splendid way the pupils conducted themselves in "Robin Hood."

The teachers are to be congratulated on the way they trained their pupils in this little affair, taking an entirely inexperienced crowd of youngsters and training them to go through a number of rather intricate drills and dances. The costuming was appropriate as well as very pretty. The forest, the throne of the king and queen, the Maypole, etc., were all looked after entirely by the West Side teachers and they are to be congratulated, as well as all the pupils who took part in such a pleasing and delightful manner. Many of them showed a good deal of ability.

"The Maiden's Dance," with wreaths by about twenty girls of the fourth and fifth grades, costumed in beautiful pink dresses, was well done. Following the dance, the Heralds entered, in the persons of Harold Bigelow and Raymond Flannery, and royal Herald they were.

"The Dance of Greeting," was given by the Kindergarten, first and second grades, by about thirty little girls dressed in white.

The interest increased with the appearance of Robin Hood himself, in the person of Roy Busseler, and his merry men of the forest, impersonated by boys of the fourth and fifth grades. With their bows and arrows, their helmets of green, they brought back the stories of the brave and bold knights of the middle ages. At this time the whole company sang "Brave Robin Hood." Assisting Robin Hood was "Friar Tuck" taken by Russell Ranney "Little John" by Harvey Pangborn, "Allan A. Dale," by Elmer McKinnon. At this point the procession to the throne took place, led in a dignified manner by the king and queen, in the persons of Howard Sommerville and Helen McKinnon. Miss McKinnon, by her bearing and step more than upheld the dignity of the queen, although Howard Sommerville walked with short and quick steps, possibly characteristic of the warrior kings of old, yet carried his part admirably.

The queen asked Robin Hood to display his virtue as a warrior, upon which he called on one of his staunchest knights, when a battle fierce took place. Of course, Robin Hood demonstrated his ability to completely out do one of the famous knights, by strewing him on the green sword. "I See You" was played by the Kindergarten, First and Second grade girls, followed by "The Shoemakers Dance," by the boys of the first and second grade. Then came "The Clap Dance" and winding of the Maypole, followed by the Maypole song, by the girls of third, fourth, and fifth grades, the whole affair closing with a big procession lead again by the king and queen, followed by Robin Hood, the beautiful maidens, and his warriors bold.

Defolt—Employees to the number of 5,000 serve the telephone in Detroit, possibly 3,000 of them being operators in the 18 central offices. A large proportion of the remainder are plant employees, engaged in the construction of plant, extension work and maintenance. The company employs 10,000 people in the State.

Monroe—The work of repairing the Dixie Highway, northern limits of Monroe to South Rockwood, has been finished. The distance is 14 miles between the two points. Some 175 holes were repaired, the last ones near South Rockwood. Six carloads sand, 780 tons of stone and five carloads of cement were used for the patch work.

Mahtestee—According to the recent annual report of the city clerk, Mahtestee's total bonded indebtedness is now only $168,700. The bonds were all issued previous to the year 1910, while the city still was under the old form of government, but are now being retired at the rate of $10,000 a year. The city's school bonds all have been retired.

Port Huron—Frank C. Wood, 50 years old, is dead from injuries suffered in the tunnel yards, when he was run down by a passenger train and both legs severed below the knees. Wood had accompanied his mother to the train which was to take her to Pearl Creek, N. Y., where her sister was dying. In jumping off the train he stumbled and fell under the wheels.

Parma—Albert Gunderman, was killed and Orman Lamb, seriously injured when the automobile in which they were traveling, was hit by two Michigan Central trains on a grade crossing about a mile west of here. Both men are residents of Albion. The automobile was hit by a west-bound freight train and thrown directly in front of an eastbound fast passenger train.

Lansing—The State Supreme Court has authorized the House of David colony to proceed with its court action charging Walter M. Neilson, the Bamford sisters, the Hansels and others who have attacked the organization, with conspiracy. The colony, when it originally started the action, claimed that the defendants, conspired to slander, defame and blackmail the cult leaders.

East Jordan went into the winning column again last Sunday at the Fair Grounds, scoring 7 runs while Rogers City was making 3. DeLoof held the visitors to 4 hits.

Rogers City made a good start in the first inning, crossing the plate twice on a base on balls, an error and a single. Their third run came in the eighth on an error, a fielders choice and a single.

East Jordan hit the ball hard in the first four innings but always straight at some one. In the fifth the score was tied by singles by Covey, Morgan and LaLonde. Sam Kamradt doubled in the sixth and scored on DeLoof's single. Covey and Tolles singled filling the bases and on Morgan's double to left three more were added to East Jordan's total. Ward's single, and infield out and a one base hit by Sam Kamradt put across East Jordan's final tally in the seventh.

All of East Jordan's runs were made by clean hits, no bases on balls or errors being responsible. DeLoof had a busy day in the pitchers box, with 10 grounders and 1 fly. DeLoof and Morgan had all of the assets for East Jordan.

Bonus Blanks Ready Soon

Distribution To Be By Local Post American Legion.

There are 175,000 Michigan veterans and dependents of veterans eligible for adjusted compensation, according to an estimate by Theodore W. Kolbe, state adjutant of the American Legion, received by Leslie Miles commander of Rebec-Sweet Post.

The state adjutant said that the application blanks for the bonus would be ready for distribution very soon, and he requested the officers of the local post to get ready for the work of distributing them.

According to present plans, application blanks will be mailed, in bulk, from a national center, to all posts of the Legion, for distribution in their communities. It will then be the work of the Legion posts to see that these blanks are supplied to eligible veterans. "I believe," said Commander Miles, that we have about 100 veterans eligible to receive the paid-up insurance policies which this bill allows. We shall ask for sufficient application blanks for all veterans in this community.

"It looks as if this would involve us in considerable labor and expense. From the interviews which I can obtain with our members, it is their wish that we should give assistance first to the disabled men of this vicinity and their dependents, regardless of whether they are members of the Legion. Next in order of preference will come our active members of 1924, next our members of former years, and, finally, all others.

"This we feel is only fair to those men who have borne the expense of maintaining the Legion organization which is said by all to have been the vital force in bringing about this just legislation. Blanks will be here probably within 30 days."

Commander Miles said that the Post's next meeting would be held Monday evening, June 16th at 7:00 p. m. standard. He said that action would be taken on a suggestion to increase dues, because of the coming extra expense, the increase to take effect on Sept. 1, 1924.

Hart—Hart not only operates on the daylight saving time during the summer months, but it also provides special traffic regulations during the summer season. The village recently provided vehicles entering trunk line roads must come to a full stop. However, the through street regulation applies only during the summer months. From October until May vehicles do not need to stop.

Grand Rapids—A State apple show, under the direction of the Michigan State Horticultural Society, will be held here the first week in December, the executive committee of this society have decided. A potato show will be conducted at Detroit by other interests. The two shows were combined last winter by a group of growers' organizations and other associations interested in the promotion of Michigan fruit and potatoes.

Kalamazoo—In recognition of the students' part in bringing the recent $800,000 endowment campaign to a successful conclusion, Kalamazoo College proclaimed an institutional holiday. No classes were held. In making the announcement, President Allan A. Hoben predicted that many new buildings would be erected and the English educational system would be adopted at the college before it reaches its centennial anniversary in 1933.

Grand Rapids—Fred Garber, 39 years old, manager of the Weddell Manufacturing Co., and his wife, 38, were killed and their two children, Lois, 6, and Frederick Jr., 2, were hurt seriously when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a New York Central passenger train. Mrs. Garber died instantly and Garber died a short time later at Butterworth Hospital. The daughter suffered a fracture of the leg and the boy was severely cut by broken glass.

Choboygan—Sitting in the center of the G. R. and I. railroad tracks at Wheeling, a grade crossing just south of Mackinaw City, an unidentified Indian was instantly killed by a south-bound train recently. When first discovered, the Indian was wildly waving his hands in the face of the oncoming locomotive and refused to get off the track despite the engineer's insistent warning signals. When it was discovered the Indian would not move the train was too close to stop and passed over the body which was taken to Carr Lake.

CONGRESS ENDS HECTIC SESSION

MANY IMPORTANT MEASURES
JOURN TILL NEXT DECEMBER

PRESIDENT VETOES POSTAL BILL

No Money is Provided to Pay Bonus,
Leaders Say Only Special Session
Can Provide Funds

Washington—Congress ended its six months' session in an atmosphere of controversy and turmoil characteristic of the bitter dissension which has marked its proceedings from the start.

Unless a special session is called by the President, congress will not convene again until next December.

Senators and representatives in the final hours of the session fought and lost a desperate fight for legislation to relieve the farmer and to reform the reclamation policy of the government.

Many other measures, including the bill authorizing the construction of eight new cruisers and modernization of battleships and the deficiency appropriation bill carrying funds to begin operation of the bonus law and for many other purposes, failed in the final crush of legislation.

Not only did the deficiency bill go down in defeat in the race against time, but a special resolution passed in the last five minutes by the house to make the bonus appropriation available regardless, was lost in the senate.

Republican leaders declared that only a special session of congress could provide the necessary funds for the initial costs of the compensation measure.

The deficiency bill itself was blocked at the last minute by Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, because of the omission of a reclamation appropriation proposed by him, and action on the emergency bonus resolution was prevented by objections by Senators Borah, Republican, Idaho, and King, Democrat, Utah.

The postal salaries increase bill, passed by both senate and house by almost unanimous votes, also went by the board when President Coolidge vetoed it on the ground that it was "extravagant." No effort to call it up for repassage was made in the short time remaining, as had been proposed.

G.O.P. CONVENTION AT LEVELAND

Dr. Burton, U. of M. President, Places
Coolidge's Name in Nomination.

Cleveland—Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, college friend of President Coolidge, placed the president's name before the Republican Convention on June 10th as nominee for his party.

Dr. Burton's name was prominently mentioned for the vice-presidency.

The convention lacked the customary excitement of other conventions as Coolidge had sufficient pledged delegates to insure his nomination on the first ballot.

Every proceeding of the convention was broadcast by radio. From a glass cage on the speaker's platform, every speech, motion, resolution and event was sent.

Even applause was heard, the announcer explaining reason for every occurrence.

An announcer was on duty every minute during the convention, from the time it convened at 11 a. m. Tuesday until the last detail had been completed.

Fourteen powerful stations in 11 cities flashed proceedings and smaller stations re-broadcast in isolated territories.

NEW SERUM CONQUERS CANCER

Germ is Isolated By Philadelphia
Medic, Produces Results.

Philadelphia—The North American in an article withheld from publication for 15 months says that the cause of cancer has been discovered; also a treatment for it, which "is producing remarkable results." The discoverer is Dr. T. J. Glover, formerly of Toronto, Canada.

The anti toxic serum developed by Dr. Glover, the article says apparently is effective only in the treatment of carcinoma, the commonest and most destructive form of cancer.

The conclusion that this serum is an effective remedy for the dread disease was arrived at only after extensive and complete experimentation with it on a large number of cancer cases in a Philadelphia hospital where in a majority of the cases treated favorable results were secured.

Road Builders Intend to Visit State
Washington—The Pan-American Highway Commission, composed of highway engineers from 20 Central and South American countries, will be in Michigan from June 20 to 23 according to information issued by the Highway Education Board, that is arranging the tour. The four days will be divided between Ann Arbor and Detroit. The engineers are interested in the Highway Research Laboratory at Ann Arbor and in the automobile factories in Detroit.

The two men suddenly stepped forward. Shopland made no protest, attempted no struggle. They lifted him off his feet as though he were a baby, and a moment later there was a splash in the water. They threw a life-belt after him.

"Always humane, you see," Sir Timothy remarked, as he leaned over the side. "Ah! I see that even in his overcoat our friend is swimmer enough to reach the bank. You find our methods harsh, Ledsam?" he asked, turning a challenging gaze towards the latter. Francis, who had been watching Shopland come to the surface, shrugged his shoulders. He delayed answering for a moment while he watched the detective, disdaining the life-belt, swim to the opposite shore.

"I suppose that under the circumstances," Francis said, "he was prepared to take his risk."

"You should know best about that," Sir Timothy rejoined. "I wonder whether you would mind looking after Lady Cynthia?" "I shall be busy for a few moments."

Francis stepped across the deck towards where Lady Cynthia had been sitting by her host's side. They had passed into the mouth of a tree-hung strip of the river. The engine was suddenly shut off. A gong was sounded. There was a murmur, almost a sob of relief, as the little sprinkling of men and women rose hastily to their feet and made their way towards the companion-way.

Downstairs, in the saloon, with its white satinwood panels and rows of swing chairs, heavy curtains were drawn across the portholes, all outside light was shut out from the place. At the further end, raised slightly from the floor, was a sanded circle. Sir Timothy made his way to one of the pillars by its side and turned around to face the little company of guests. His voice, though it seemed scarcely raised above a whisper, was extraordinarily clear and distinct. Even Francis, who, with Lady Cynthia, had found seats only just inside the door, could hear every word he said.

"My friends," he began, "you have often before been my guests at such small affairs as we have been able to arrange in as unorthodox a manner as possible between professional boxers. There has been some novelty about them, but on the last occasion I think it was generally observed that they had become a little too professional, a little ultra-scientific. There was something which they lacked. With that something I am hoping to provide you tonight. Thank you, Sir Edgar," he murmured, leaning down towards his neighbor.

He held his cigarette in the flame of a match which the other had kindled. Francis, who was watching intently, was puzzled at the expression with which for a moment, as he straightened himself, Sir Timothy glanced down the room, seeking for Lady Cynthia's eyes. In a sense it was as though he were seeking for something he needed—approbation, sympathy, understanding.

"Our hobby, as you know, has been reality," he continued. "That is what we have not always been able to achieve. Tonight I offer you reality. There are two men here, one an East end coster, the other an Italian until lately associated with an itinerant vehicle of musical production. These two men have not outlived sensation as I fancy so many of us have. They hate one another to the death. I forget their surnames, but Giuseppe has stolen Jim's girl, is living with her at the present moment, and proposes to keep her. Jim has sworn to have the lives of both of them. Jim's career, in its way, is interesting to us. He has spent already six years in prison for manslaughter, and a year for a brutal assault upon a constable. Giuseppe was tried in his native country for a particularly fiendish murder, and escaped, owing, I believe, to some legal technicality. That, however, has nothing to do with the matter. These men have sworn to fight to the death, and the girl, I understand, is willing to return to Jim if he should be successful, or to remain with Giuseppe if he should show himself able to retain her. The fight between these men, my friends, has been transferred from Seven Dials for your entertainment. It will take place before you here and now."

There was a little shiver amongst the audience. Francis, almost to his horror, was unable to resist the feeling of queer excitement which stole through his veins. A few yards away, Lady Isabel seemed to have become transformed. She was leaning forward in her chair, her eyes glowing, her lips parted, rejuvenated, dehumanized. Francis' immediate companion, however, surprised him. Her eyes were fixed intently upon Sir Timothy's. She seemed to have been weighing every word he had spoken. There was none of that hungry pleasure in her face, which shone from the other woman's and was reflected in the faces of many of the others. She seemed to be bracing herself for a shock. Sir Timothy looked toward the door which opened upon the sanded space.

"You can bring your men along," he directed.

One of the attendants promptly made his appearance. He was holding tightly by the arm a man of apparently thirty years of age, shabbily dressed, barefooted, without collar or necktie, with a mass of black hair which looked as though it had escaped the care of any barber for many weeks. His complexion was sallow; he had high cheekbones and a receding chin, which gave him rather the appearance of a fox. He shrank a little from the lights as though they hurt his eyes, and all the time he looked furtively back to the door, through which in a moment or two his rival was presently escorted. The latter was a young man of stockier build, ill-conditioned, and with the brutal face of the lowest of his class. Two of his front teeth were missing, and there was a livid mark on the side of his cheek. He looked neither to the right nor to the left. His eyes were fixed upon the other man, and they looked death.

"The gentleman who first appeared," Sir Timothy observed, stepping up into the sanded space but still half facing the audience, "is Giuseppe, the Lothario of this little act. The other is Jim, the wronged husband. You know their story. Now, Jim," he added, turning toward the Englishman, "I put in your trousers pocket those notes, two hundred pounds, you will perceive. I place in the trousers pocket of Giuseppe here notes to the same amount. I understand you have a little quarrel to fight out. The one who wins will naturally help himself to the other's money, together with that other little reward which I imagine was the first cause of your quarrel. Now let them go."

Sir Timothy resumed his seat and leaned back in leisurely fashion. The two attendants solemnly released their captives. There was a moment's intense silence. The two men seemed fencing for position. There was something stealthy and horrible about their movements as they crept around one another. Francis realized what it was almost as the little sobbing breath from those of the audience who still retained any emotion, showed him that they, too, foresaw what was going to happen. Both men had drawn knives from their belts. It was murder which had been let loose.

Francis found himself almost immediately upon his feet. His whole being seemed crying out for interference. Lady Cynthia's death-white face and pleading eyes seemed like the echo of his own passionate aversion to what was taking place. Then he met Sir Timothy's gaze across the room and he remembered his promise. Under no conditions was he to protest or interfere. He set his teeth and resumed his seat. The fight went on. There were little sobs and tremors of excitement, strange banks of silence. Both men seemed out of condition. The sound of their hoarse breathing was easily heard against the curtain of spellbound silence. For a time their knives stabbed the empty air, but from the first the end seemed certain. The Englishman attacked wildly. His adversary waited his time, content with avoiding the murderous blows struck at him, striving all the time to steal underneath the other's guard. And then, almost without warning, it was all over. Jim was on his back in a crumpled heap. There was a horrid gasp upon his coat. The other man was kneeling by his side, hate, glaring out of his eyes, guiding all the time the rising and falling of his knife. There was one more shriek—then silence—only the sound of the victor's breathing as he rose slowly from his ghastly task. Sir Timothy rose to his feet and waved his hand. The curtain went down.

"On deck, if you please, ladies and gentlemen," he said calmly.

No one stirred. A woman began to sob. A fat, unhealthy-looking man in front of Francis reeled over in a dead faint. Two other of the guests near had risen from their seats and were shouting aimlessly like lunatics. Even Francis was conscious of that temporary imprisonment of the body due to his lacerated nerves. Only the clinging of Lady Cynthia to his arm kept him from rushing from the spot.

"You are faint?" he whispered hoarsely.

"Upstairs—air," she faltered. They rose to their feet. The sound of Sir Timothy's voice reached them as they ascended the stairs.

"On deck, everyone, if you please," he insisted. "Refreshments are being served there. There are inquisitive people who watch my launch, and it is inadvisable to remain here long."

People hurried out then as though their one desire was to escape from the scene of the tragedy. Lady Cynthia, still clinging to Francis' arm, led him to the furthest corner of the launch. There were real tears in her eyes, her breath was coming in little sobs.

"Oh, it was horrible!" she cried. "Horrible! Mr. Ledsam—I can't help it—I never want to speak to Sir Timothy again!"

One final horror arrested for a moment the sound of voices. There was a dull splash in the river. Something had been thrown overboard. The orchestra began to play dance music. Conversation suddenly burst out. Everyone was hysterical. A peer of the realm, red-eyed and shaking like an aspen leaf, was drinking champagne out of the bottle. Everyone seemed to be trying to outvie the other in loud conversation, in outrageous mirth. Lady Isabel, with a glass of champagne in her hand, leaned back toward Francis.

"Well," she asked, "how are you feeling, Mr. Ledsam?"

"As though I had spent half an hour in hell," he answered.

She screamed with laughter.

"Hear this man," she called out, "who will send any poor ragamuffin to the gallows if his fee is large enough! Of course," she added, turning back to him, "I ought to remember you are a normal person, and tonight's entertainment was not for normal persons. For myself I am grateful to Sir Timothy. For a few moments of this aching aftermath of life, I forgot."

Suddenly all the lights around the launch flamed out, the music stopped. Sir Timothy came up on deck. On either side of him was a man in ordinary dinner clothes. The babel of voices ceased. Everyone was oppressed by some vague likeness—a breathless silence ensued.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Sir Timothy said, and once more the smile upon his lips assumed its most mocking curve, "let me introduce you to the two artists who have given us tonight such a realistic performance, Signor Giuseppe Elito and Signor Carlos Marini. I had the good fortune," he went on, "to witness this very marvelous performance in a small music hall at Palermo, and I was able to induce the two actors to pay us a visit over here. Steward, these gentlemen will take a glass of champagne."

The two Sicilians raised their glasses and bowed expectantly to the little company. They received, however, a much greater tribute to their performance than the applause which they had been expecting. There reigned everywhere a deadly, stupefied silence. Only a half-stifled sob broke from Lady Cynthia's lips as she leaned over the rail, her face buried in her hands, her whole frame shaking.

CHAPTER XX

Francis and Margaret sat in the rose garden on the following morning. Their conversation was a little disjointed, as the conversation of lovers in a secluded and beautiful spot should be, but they came back often to the subject of Sir Timothy.

"If I have misunderstood your father," Francis declared, "and I admit that I have, it has been to some extent his own fault. To me he was always the deliberate scolder against any code of morals, a rebel against the law even if not a criminal in actual deeds. I honestly believed that the Walled House was the scene of disreputable orgies, that your father was behind Fairfax in that cold-blooded murder, and that he was responsible in some sinister way for the disappearance of Reggie Wilmore. Most of these things seem to have been shams, like the fight last night."

She moved uneasily in her place. "I am glad I did not see that," she said, with a shiver.

"I think," he went on, "that the reason why your father insisted upon Lady Cynthia's and my presence there was that he meant it as a sort of allegory. Half the vices in life he claims are unreal."

Margaret passed her arm through his and leaned a little toward him. "If you knew just one thing I have never told you," she confided, "I think that you would feel sorry for him. I do, more and more every day, because in a way that one thing is my fault."

Notwithstanding the warm sunshine, she suddenly shivered. Francis took her hands in his. They were cold and lifeless.

"I know that one thing, dear," he told her quietly.

She looked at him stonily. There was a questioning fear in her eyes.

"You know—"

"I know that your father killed Oliver Hilditch."

She suddenly broke out into a stream of words. There was passion in her tone and in her eyes. She was almost the accuser.

"My father was right, then!" she exclaimed. "He told me this morning that he believed that it was to you or to your friend at Scotland Yard that Walter had told his story. But you don't know—you don't know how terrible the temptation was—how—" you see I say it quite coolly—how Oliver Hilditch deserved to die. He was trusted by my father in South America and he deceived him, he forged the letters which induced me to marry him. It was part of his scheme of revenge. This was the first time we had any of us met since. I told my father the truth that afternoon. He knew for the first time how my marriage came about. My husband had prayed me to keep silent. I refused. Then he became like a devil. We were there, he three, that night after you left, and Francis, as I live, if my father had not killed him, I should have!"

"There was a time when I believed that you had," he reminded her. "I didn't behave like a pedagogic upholder of the letter of the law then, did I?"

She drew closer to him.

"You were wonderful," she whispered.

"Dearest, your father has nothing to fear from me," he assured her tenderly. "On the contrary, I think that I can show him the way to safety."

She rose impulsively to her feet.

"He will be here directly," she said. "He promised to come across at half-past twelve. Let us go and meet him. But, Francis—"

"TANTALIZE"

Tantalus was a Greek king, the son of Zeus, who was accused of betraying certain valuable secrets. The gods punished him by giving him an undying hunger and an eternal thirst. They placed him in a lake whose waters reached just to his chin. Over his head grew fruit which constantly receded from his grasp. To the unfortunate Tantalus we owe our word "tantalize," a verb meaning to tease or torment.

Respect the Truth

Respect the truth. Be true. There is no conscience, there is no noble life, there is no capacity for sacrifice where there is not a religious, a rigid, and a rigorous respect for truth. Strive, then, to fulfill this difficult duty. Untruth corrupts whoever makes use of it before it overcomes him against whom it is used.

SODOM
By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"And Lot pitched his tent toward Sodom," the historian wrote when narrating events connected with the early settlers in the Orient. Lot was a good boy who had been well brought up and Sodom was beautifully situated in a green, fertile valley with a view of the mountains in the distance. The town had its attractions, and Lot was human. It was, however, what in these modern days we should call a wide-open town. There was no attempt to enforce the Volstead act, traffic laws were loose and the dances were unchaperoned. The young people were friendly and unconventional, the sort that takes pride in the fact that they know how to take care of themselves. The vaudeville shows were snappy; all of the pool halls allowed gambling devices; and it was easy to pick up a female acquaintance on the street. When anything happened the policemen and the mayor were always safely out of the way and employed themselves harmlessly the day following in looking for a clue. There was something doing in Sodom most of the time, and it was, in fact, a very interesting place. Lot found it so.

But he found also, as every man before or since has ultimately found, that you can't play with evil without getting soured by it. You can't even look on and keep absolutely aloof from it. Finally it touches you. You begin at first to justify it and then to take part in it. Sodom went up in flames consumed by the fire of its own lust for evil pleasure, and though Lot escaped, he was scorched; he carried with him the marks of contact with the low and vulgar and profane. He was not the same man that he was before he had gazed upon the corrupsions of Sodom.

That was six thousand years ago, of course, and in a heathen land; but there are still Sodoms—modern, alluring and so cleverly camouflaged as to seem quite harmless—toward which the well-intentioned young fellow, or his sister even, may look with interest or desire, or may pitch his tent. It is easy and often interesting to treat lightly the religious principles which we once followed, to drop into the unconventional, to play a few hands of poker, or to bet on the game, to go gradually from the risique to the vulgar and finally to the immoral. Lot had no intention of taking up the habits of the Sodomites. He was curious. He simply wanted to see what it was all like. I'm sure he felt that he was quite able to take care of himself, but he was mistaken, and so is everyone who plays with evil or temporizes with sin.

Have You This Habit?
By Margaret Morison

JUST A MACHINE

LILA DUNN in her late twenties was a filing clerk on the thirtieth floor of one of the business temples on New York's Broadway. For ten years she had conscientiously filled her eight-hour days and her forty-four hour weeks with the same routine. At precisely 7:30 the Big Ben beside her iron cot went off, and as those same hands pointed out eight she was always putting the second hat pin into her hat, the duplicate of the one with which she had first entered the New York office of the hardware company. Next came the coffee pot filled the night before, and at 8:30 she was leaving the door of the house where she roomed. Then it was that Lila counted the day as really beginning. One-half block to the left, one block to the right, two blocks to the left, and a wide avenue to cross; a short flight of steps down, and then that automatic motion for the nickel that was always in her inner pocket.

One day Lila found that her special subway station was blocked up for repairs. It was necessary for her to take a route different from her usual one. This troubled her desperately—she had become so used to following the black line down her own special rabbit hole! Subconsciously the experience bothered her all day. Long after she had forgotten the actual incident, she had a resulting sense of discomfort and maladjustment. On her way home the shadow was still upon her. The interrupted black line—it haunted Lila. Then suddenly her mind began to work, her perfectly good mind. She asked herself an epoch-making question: Why should she spend her life following a—no the black line?

Next day Lila got up fifteen minutes earlier than usual; she had tea instead of coffee for breakfast, she prepared for herself, and a bit of marmalade on her toast. Then she walked through the park near her door to a different car line that also took her to the office. The resulting sense of emancipation she experienced made her sit down at her desk with a toss of her head that caused the office manager to readjust his tie as he realized for the first time that Lila was young and pretty. That evening she did not go directly back to her room; instead she invited the girl at the next desk to accompany her to the movies. So the days passed, and as she acquired the habit of making each one different, she found she could put more energy as well as more pleasure into her work. That winter she was made chief filing clerk. She had succeeded in breaking through that hardened habit of following the black line that had been strangling her sense of proportion—that had almost succeeded in making of her a mere machine!

THE SEARCH

WHEN things are dark, and skies are gray,
I deem 't man's first duty
To hie him forth upon the way
And look about for beauty.
Lest 'mid the yellow and the sere,
And trials that pursue us,
We overlook the gifts of cheer
This life has given to us.

Some residents and officials believed that it was up to the county highway department or the state highway department to take care of snow removal.

Smart Blouse Vogue Approves Inset Vest

The latest blouse mode calls for the inset gilet or vest. In tailored models this "tuck-in vestee" almost resembles a man's shirt bosom, as far as the length and general cut is concerned. The picture illustrates also the clever use of novelty tucks for collar, cuffs and pocket.

The Poor Cockroach

A naturalist declares that a cockroach has 2,987 teeth. As the odd one has no corresponding tooth to meet it, it is not surprising that these poor little creatures suffer so much from indigestion.—Boy's Life.

"Well-of-English Undefined"

The expression first occurs in Edmund Spenser's "Faerie Queen." It there refers to the works of Geoffrey Chaucer and was intended as a compliment to the purity of that poet's English.

Spring Attention to Bee Colonies

Carefully Examine and Clean All Hives, Removing Remaining Honey Combs.

All the colonies should be carefully examined. If any colonies have died during the winter remove the combs of honey that remain and place them under some other strong colony before robbing begins. If any colonies have become queenless others can be procured from the South and substituted.

Do not let the colony dwindle away for want of a queen, for it may yield you fifty or even a hundred pounds of honey the coming season.

The bottom boards should also be scraped and cleaned from the accumulated cappings which always gather there during the winter.

Clean Out Ants.
On top of the hive you will probably find ants gathered in the packing, with thousands of eggs ready to hatch. Clean them out and sweeten up the hives in general. It may be that some need a coat of paint. Get ready for the honey flow and give the bees every chance to build up. Section boxes and brood frames should also be gotten in readiness. It is easy to manage bees when the preparatory work is done.

It will do no harm to let the bees get a little corn meal from the bin. Some beekeepers make a regular practice in early spring of setting meal in sunny spots protected from the wind for the bees to gather as a substitute for pollen to stimulate brood rearing. This is not necessary in locations where natural pollen is abundant.

Water is Necessary.
When brooding is heaviest bees require most water. In spring they may be seen about the well in search of this necessary article, which goes to make up their daily bill of fare. They will fly a great distance for it, if not obtainable nearby. Many bees are lost and chilled when thus carrying water for their brood. If there is no water accessible near at hand it will pay you to supply some.

Take a barrel and set it a few feet from the ground, fill it with water and cover the top so no bees will drown. Then bore a very small hole near the bottom of the barrel and let the water drip on a board. The board should be slanted slightly to cause the water to flow slowly along. From this source the bees will be able to help themselves. The nearer the water is to the apiary the fewer bees it will require as water carriers, a very important feature at this season when the warmth and energy of every bee is needed in the hive to help build up the colony.

When honey begins to come in from the fields, it is no longer necessary to supply them with water, for they will get enough of it from the thin nectar which is daily brought into the hive.

Direct Sunlight Useful to Keep Chicks Healthy
"Direct sunshine is necessary to keep chicks healthy," declares J. G. Halpin of the poultry department, University of Wisconsin.
"Many a farmer's wife has found her early spring chicks meet with disaster, because they had to be confined to the basement or away from the direct sunlight."
"Recent experiments show that the direct sunshine contains certain rays which do not pass through ordinary window glass, but which are necessary to the chick in order to prevent leg weakness."
"Green foods, cod liver oil, yolks of eggs have been found to take the place of direct sunshine and should be used especially during cloudy cold weather in the spring. When chicks are out in the sunshine they are safe," he declares. "The yolks of eggs have given the best results and sterile eggs taken out of the incubator should be used for this purpose," says Halpin.

Government Whitewash Formula Is Very Useful
For making what is known as government whitewash, slake a half bushel of lime with boiling water. Cover during the operation to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid lime through a fine sieve or cloth strainer and add to it a peck of salt, which has previously been dissolved with warm water. Then dissolve one pound of glue by soaking well or heating in a double kettle and add to the whitewash, together with three pounds of rice, pounded fine and boiled to a paste, and a half pound of Spanish whiting. Then place the compound in a small kettle, place this kettle in a large one containing water and bring to a boil. When the substance once begins to bubble, remove from the fire and add five gallons of boiling water. Cover it up and let stand for a few days. When wished for use reheat and apply while hot.

Bugs Little Birds Kill Many Injurious Insects
Birds add much to the home surroundings and are easily made neighbors if nesting places are available. Bird houses will attract wrens, bluebirds, martins and nuthatches; and the windbreak, apple orchard, or lawn trees good homes for orioles, phoebe, robins and thrushes. They will pay for any attention by the destruction of many injurious insects. Some fruiting shrubs, such as the Juneberry, black haw, sheepperry, and cherry should be planted in thickets, not alone for the birds, but because they add much to the surroundings.

SCHOOL DAYS

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl
By HELEN ROWLAND

JUDGING from the infant mortality amongst them, the gods must love these early-blooming spring romances.

There appear to be two kinds of preachers: those who teach you how to live so that you will not fear death—and those who want you to live so that you will cheerfully welcome death.

Oh, miraculous youth! To be able to live on the memory of a kiss for 24 hours—and to warm the memory over again the next day!

The first kiss always brings a lump in a man's throat—but it's the last kiss that leaves a lump in a woman's throat.

No matter for what unconscious or unconscionable reason a woman may glance at a man, he always interprets her look as a glance of admiration.

Somewhat, the smaller a man's heart, the more trivial and foolish little love affairs he seems to be able to pack into it.

There are three kinds of men in the world: the kind a girl dreams of marrying; the kind her mother expects her to marry; and the kind that she finally succeeds in marrying.

A man's idea of "diplomacy" is to do as he pleases, and then stay away, until, in her anxiety to know whether he is dead or alive, a woman has completely forgotten her indignation.

The hardest words for a man to utter and the easiest for a woman to believe are—"I love you!"

The Romance of Words
"MAYOR"

ONE of the most interesting and best-phrased explanations of this title occurs in a book written, strange as it may seem, in 1655—Vorsteegan's "Restitution of Decayed Intelligence."
"This honorable name of office," says the author, "in the chief and most famous city in our realm is written in divers wales. Some writ it 'major,' some 'mayor' and some 'Maire.' And because major in Latin signifieth greater or bigger, some, not looking any further, will needs from thence make it major. But, seeing the names of sheriff and alderman cannot be drawn from the Latin, why should it be thought that mayor cometh from major? Certain it is that as the other names of office are not derived from the Latin, no more is this. For the etymology thereof we are to note that in our own English to 'may' is as much as to say a 'haver' or possessor of might—one; that hath and may use authority."

THE THINGS OF EVERY DAY
By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE little things of every day Make up the sum of living; The father's toll, the children's play, The loving and the giving, We play so many mighty things, But plans go wrong and wealth takes wings; Yet time can never take away The little things of every day.

The little things of every day Are what we most remember; The April grass, the rose of May, We cherish in December. Some word, the first the baby said, Some lullaby, some path we tread, The only things that ever stay Are little things of every day.

The little things of every day Make life a joy or sorrow, The things we do, the things we say, Are memories of tomorrow, Whatever pinnacle we choose, What wealth we win, what wealth we lose, The things that never pass away Are little things of every day.

Something to Think About
By F. A. WALKER

THE HUMAN SPIDER
A LONG the devious highways where the lights are blazing, in the byways where mystic shadows are, and the witchery of semi-darkness exerts its seductive spell, in the saloons of precious woods and gildings, in the dingy hovels, the human spider is ever watching and waiting for victims.

His sole purpose in life is to gorge himself and fatten upon the unsuspecting or adventurous who by their own folly become entangled in his web, an exquisite, airy abode of silver threads when viewed from the outside, but a carnal house filled with horrors to those imprisoned within.

Before the dupe has penetrated very deeply into the web, a nauseous sense of fear oppresses him, but he laughs it away and ventures forth gay-hearted, confident of his craftiness to break the bonds and go free whenever he may be so inclined.

But his quest of riches and pleasures must be continued. The spider has assured himself that his fondest desires shall be realized. Even now the sticky web is clinging to the victim's feet, shutting out the light from his eyes and smothering his breath.

When at last he comprehends he is imprisoned, it is not without dismay that he finds himself in a hopeless condition, terrified to the core of his fluttering heart as he tugs and pulls with desperation to break the silken threads being spun around him and slowly strangling him to death.

At the spider's behest the fool has played fast and loose in the sunniest days of his existence. Having been so bound up with the one master-thought that he could falsify and pilfer without being suspected, gamble with money that was not his own, delude his trustful wife and his employer, he awakens with a start to find himself in a house of many winding stairways from which he cannot possibly escape.

The changelings who would have you believe they are men of rare cunning, fall with frequency under the spell of the spider, though even the wise now and then are fooled and humbled.

Nothing but evil is to be had from the scheming spider who invites you to "walk in" in Simple Simon fashion and "make yourself at home." Every day the spider is planning mischief. His voice is music, his sting is poison, his web a grave. Beware, lest he deceive you!

Treating Cabbage Seed Is Favored

Two Methods for Preventing Prevalent Diseases—Black Leg and Rot.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Two methods for treatment of cabbage seed for the prevention of the very prevalent diseases—black leg and black rot—are recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture as very essential and low-priced insurance. Mercuric chlorid seed treatment is by far the simpler method and has practically no ill effects on the seed. Its only limitation—and this is often a serious one—is that blackleg fungus, though greatly reduced, is not entirely killed, although black rot is almost completely controlled. When seed is known to be entirely free from blackleg this method is adequate, but when the seed is known to be infected with blackleg, the hot-water treatment must be used. It will completely control the blackleg, but will reduce somewhat the percentage of germination.

Using Mercuric Chlorid.
Mercuric chlorid (corrosive sublimate) may be procured from any drug store in readily soluble tablet form. Following directions on the package, make up a 1 to 1,000 solution, avoiding metal containers. Place the seed on the center of a square piece of coarse cheesecloth of such size that when the edges are drawn together and tied the improvised sack is not more than one-third full. Immerse in the disinfectant, agitating the seed vigorously so as to remove the air, and thoroughly wet the seed coats. Soak for 80 minutes. Remove, rinse in clean water, and allow to drain several minutes. Open the sack on a table top, spreading the cloth out flat. Spread the seed over the cloth in a shallow layer to facilitate drying.

Hot Water Treatment.
For the hot-water treatment prepare the seed in a cheesecloth sack as described in the above method. Provide a large vessel containing water adjusted to exactly 122 degrees Fahrenheit, a reliable thermometer, and a stirring rod. Immerse the seed bag, agitating the seed thoroughly, and stirring the water slowly. Keep the water temperature approximately constant by adding steam or boiling water whenever the thermometer registers below 122 degrees Fahrenheit. Remove the seed bag for an instant as the water or steam is added. Soak for 80 minutes. Remove to cold water, drain, and spread out to dry as before.

Try the hot-water treatment on a small sample of the seed and run a germination test to determine the percentage of injury before treating the entire lot.

Increase Egg Production by Feeding Fowls Milk

Many years of work at the Purdue university experiment station with skim milk and dried buttermilk, demonstrate that the feeding of either one of them with bran or middlings increased egg production about 100 eggs per hen as compared with rations containing no milk or animal protein. Any form of skim milk or buttermilk produces results similar to meat scrap, fish scrap or tankage. In the Purdue experiment the feeding of milk to laying hens brought a return from $1.82 to $5 per 100 pounds of milk fed.

Milk cannot be compared with other animal proteins simply on the basis of the protein content, because of its greater digestibility and palatability.

The experiments likewise demonstrated that chicks could be raised better with milk than with any other protein feed. Milk was necessary the first two weeks and a worthwhile investment thereafter.

Abundance of Moisture Required for Incubator

A great deal of attention should be given to the place where an incubator is going to be located. An ideal place is a cellar or basement that is two-thirds underground. Such a cellar normally has sufficient moisture and is less susceptible to changes in temperature than places above the ground. The handicap may be a lack of sufficient ventilation. Any room, such as a kitchen, that is hot in the day time and cold at night is usually undesirable. To operate an incubator under such conditions is asking too much of it. Attics of houses are very often poor locations because of insufficient moisture. A cellar or spare room that can be kept around 65 degrees F., ventilated without direct drafts over the machine, and having an abundance of moisture, is usually satisfactory.

Hot Formaldehyde Good for Treating Potatoes

The hot formaldehyde treatment for seed potatoes, to prevent scab, is as follows:
Take two parts of 40 per cent formaldehyde and dilute in 80 gallons of water heated to a temperature of 118 to 122 degrees Fahrenheit. Dip the potatoes for two minutes, cover for one hour, and dry. Wooden crates or wire baskets can be used for dipping. An ordinary tank heater can be used to heat the solution. A floating dairy thermometer is a great help in regulating the temperature of the solution.
More than 500 bushels were treated by the hot formaldehyde method in less than six hours on a farm in Iowa, where 15 potato growers worked together.

Determination
This is an age of competition. If you want anything you must go after it, not in a half-hearted way, but with a determination that will brook no interference. The one thing that you may as well understand right in the beginning is that you will get no more than you are willing to pay for, but you can have almost anything you want, when you want it bad enough.

Work Wearing You Out?

East Jordan Folks Find a Bad Back a Heavy Handicap.

Is your work wearing you out? Are you tortured with throbbing backache—feet tired, weak and discouraged? Then look to your kidneys! Many occupations tend to weaken the kidneys. Constant backache, headaches, dizziness and rheumatic pains are the result. You suffer annoying bladder irregularities; feel nervous, irritable and worn out. Don't wait! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Workers everywhere recommend Doan's. Here's an East Jordan case.

Robert Grant, says: "My back played out while at work. I couldn't lie still in bed as my back hurt so. After a hard day's work I couldn't get any rest. Night after night I had to get up and sit in a chair. My hands and feet often swelled, too. My kidneys were disordered and I had to get up many times at night. Doan's Pills, from the Hite Drug Co., cured me." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

BEN BLOWER

"WHAT Ben Blower has is always a little bit better than every one else has." When people said that they smiled.

Mr. Blower was spending the weekend in the country with a club acquaintance whose wife had heard of Mr. Blower but had not met him. Her husband introduced, that Saturday night at dinner, a brisk little man in a black coat that somehow suggested the cut of a robin's tail feathers.

"My husband says that you made a very quick run up from town," Mr. Blower's hostess began.

"Ah, well—my mofah, you see," he exploded with his own special pronunciation of words ending in the letter "r."

"You have a fast car?"

"New York to Boston in five houahs," said he.

"Goodness!" she cried, "that's faster than the express trains, Mr. Blower!"

From that the conversation turned to the Pilgrim tercentenary.

"Pilgrims—ah, yes," started off Mr. Blower again. "Can tell you all about the Pilgrims—direct descendant of Miles Standish and Priscilla!"

"But Priscilla married John Alden, history tells us," she questioned, hurrying to the rescue of the Puritan maiden.

"History doesn't know everything," said Mr. Blower haughtily. So it went. He told his hostess that he had made and spent sums equal to any fortune. "You never hear of my income," he explained, "because I spend it on purpose to avoid the income tax." His children were all of the "genius type," his clothes were made in England; his friends were only of the best; and she was made to feel that he refrained from telling her his brand of cigarettes and politics only because such a declaration on his part would be used as advertising and campaign material.

As they parted for the night she said wearily, "I hope you rest well."

"I always rest well," said he.

And she dragged herself up to bed thinking that the blower habit might be harmless and amusing for half an hour in one's club; for a longer period it became quite a different matter.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You give up your seat continually in a trolley?

Hasn't your best girl often said: "Do, Bill, for goodness' sake, sit down in this car—I break my neck talking to you when you stand up!" Also haven't the boys often said: "Gee, Bill! You sure are the little Lord Fauntleroy, the way you always give up your seat SITTIT down!" But up you get! You can't help it. It's bred in the bone or it isn't. You err on the right side. Anyhow, the fact is, isn't it that your seat would seem uncomfortable to you if you kept it? Then why should you worry if they laugh or gibe at you? You easily show them it's not showing off. Sincerity gets you over every time. If it were showing off, however, it would be a good sort of showmanship.

No accurate method of "assaying" asbestos ore has ever been discovered, due to the fact that no matter how carefully a piece of rock is broken in order to release the ore, some of the fibers are broken.

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick: Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys may be fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustré At Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients in a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

White gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

SULPHUR SOOTHES UGLY, ITCHING SKIN

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarrassing skin trouble you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, because of its germ destroying properties, seldom fails to quickly subdue itching, even of fiery eczema. The first application makes the skin cool and comfortable. Rash and blotches are healed right up. Rowley Mentho-Sulphur is applied like any pleasant cold cream and is perfectly harmless. You can obtain a small jar from any good druggist.

LEOPOLD AND LOEB GET INDICTMENTS

SEVENTY-ONE WITNESSES GIVE TESTIMONY BEFORE COOK COUNTY GRAND JURY.

DEFENSE TO PLEAD INSANITY

State's Attorney Asks Early Trial—Slayers Charged in 26 Counts of Murder and Kidnaping.

Chicago—The Cook county grand jury has voted indictments against Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb for kidnaping for ransom, and murder. The pair were charged in 10 counts in the murder indictment and 16 in the kidnaping for ransom in the true bill.

The indictments have been returned to the court automatically dismissing habeas corpus proceedings pending since the youths were taken from the state's attorney and turned over to the sheriff.

State's Attorney Crowe asked that July 15 be fixed as the date for the trial.

Seventy-one witnesses submitted testimony to the grand jury. The last act of the state was the reading of the vital parts of the confessions. How the pair seized young Franks, killed him, stripped him, and carried his body around for hours in the death car, was told in a series of questions and answers.

The supper in the Sixty-third street restaurant, while the corpse was hidden under a robe in the back of the car, and the purchase of a bottle of gin in the place, are said to have brought comments from the jurors.

A craving for "thrills," "adventure" and "experience" was stated in the confessions to be the impelling motive for the dreadful crime.

The decks are now clear for the court battle.

The object of the defense will be to have Leopold and Loeb declared insane. There will be an attempt to obtain freedom for them. Attorneys for the youthful slayers, supported by an array of alienists and psychiatrists, will center their hopes in cheating the noose on an insanity plea.

The Leopold and Loeb families are said to be convinced the boys' brains have become added by their studies. They are said to realize the futility of any effort to free them. The wealth of the boys' parents may be utilized in the court battle, with the view of having them snatched from the gallows at the expense of having them declared insane.

The efforts of State's Attorney Crowe to have the trial start July 15, will be vigorously opposed. Attorney Clarence S. Darrow, of the defense counsel, indicated.

Primarily, Attorney Darrow holds, it will be impossible because of the public indignation to obtain a fair and impartial jury at such an early date. Then, too, the defense will seek to delay the trial for several months on the ground that the alienists and psychiatrists will need more time to study the case.

THUGS ROB STREET CAR CREW

Motorman Cut On Head As He Resists Four Armed Bandits.

Detroit—An owl street car was held up by four armed men, two of whom are believed by the police to have robbed a citizen in an automobile as they stepped from the street car after holding up its occupants.

Richard Hollingsworth, 60 years old, motorman of the car, was slashed on the neck and face when he resisted the attempt of the bandits to search him. He had been unaware that a hold up was taking place until the thugs ordered him to stop the car and put up his hands. Thomas Nevinson, 65 years old, the conductor, was robbed of $15.

BELIEVES BONUS LAW IS LEGAL

Mellon Makes Reply to Suit, Asking for Injunction.

Washington—Although he is opposed to the soldiers' bonus as a matter of principle, Secretary Mellon has declared that he believed congress had a legal right to enact the bonus law.

His statement was made in connection with a suit filed here for an injunction to stop the bonus. Mellon was named one of the defendants in the suit, which was brought by Benjamin Catchings, a New York lawyer. The legality of the act was challenged on the ground that it exempted commissioned officers above the grade of captain from its provisions.

Lansing Grocers Fight Blue Laws.

Lansing—The fight of 30 grocers against Lansing's "Blue Laws" which prohibit the selling of meats and groceries on Sunday, will be carried to the supreme court before the business men will consent to obey the ordinance, counsel for the defendants arraigned in municipal court stated. Dwight Wilson, representing the men, says that his clients have agreed to stick together until the constitutionality of the ordinance has been determined.

Just an Empty

Six-year-old Freddy, bred in the city, was on his first visit to his uncle's farm. At breakfast he heard that his uncle's Jersey cow had been stolen during the night. "That's a good joke on the man who stole her," was Freddy's comment. "Why?" asked his uncle. "Why, just before supper last night the hired man took all the milk out of her."—Everybody's Magazine.

All Were Rotten

The foreman of a Lancashire mill instructed one of the hands to test the incandescent gas mantles in the weaving sheds and find out how many required renewing. Eventually he returned to report that 97 new mantles were required. "What?" exclaimed the foreman. "Why, we've only got 97 lights altogether." "Well, I tried 'em all," said the lad; "and every one I squeezed was rotten and fell to bits."

WAKE UP!

HEALTH TALK NO. 16

Are you sick? Are you discouraged? Have you tried almost everything and found no relief from your sufferings?

If you have, it is time you were awake to the fact that there is a science which corrects the CAUSE of disease, does not employ medicine, or surgery, or osteopathy, to secure results, but gets the results in ninety per cent of cases through the method of spinal adjustments.

Chiropractors do not treat, heal or cure disease. They locate and adjust the CAUSE of disease; Nature does the healing, curing and repairing.

The CAUSE is a vertebral subluxation (displacement of the small bones of the spine) producing pressure on some of the spinal nerves, thereby shutting off the vital force or mental impulses, passing from the brain through the nerves to the parts of the body affected or diseased.

By Chiropractic adjustment the pressure produced on the nerves by the subluxated vertebra is relieved, and Innate Intelligence (Nature) is enabled to restore normal function. The result is Health. Disease to a chiropractor is incoordination between the mental and the physical.

Innate Intelligence (Nature) will afford Health if allowed uninterrupted transmission; uninterrupted transmission insures perfect expression; perfect expression insures perfect health.

Have the CAUSE of your trouble adjusted, and you will find that you are no longer sick and discouraged. Come to this office for a consultation and spinal analysis. It will cost you nothing, and it will convince you that whether you enjoy Health or not is a proposition that is up to you, and you only.
