Fine List of Instructors

Roster of East Jordan Public School Teachers 1924-25.

The roster of teachers for East Jordan's Public School system for the coming year—1924-25—is completed. From Kindergarten to Superintendent each and every instructor is more than proficient in their particular branch. Following is the list:—

CENTRAL BUILDING

Bertha M. Clark, East Jordan, Kindergarten.
Ernestine Smith, Suttons Bay, First Grade.
Marian Greenhoe, McBride, Second Grade.
Genevieve Starmer, Mancelona, Third Grade.
Mary Willis, Boyne City, Fourth Grade.
Bernice Doud, Mt. Pleasant, Fifth Grade.
Mrs. C. F. Snellenberger, East Jordan, Sixth Grade.
Gertrude Sanford, Kitchener, Ont., Music and Penmanship.

WEST SIDE

Adeline Wager, Thompson, Kindergarten and First Grade.
Mrs. Jessie Hager, East Jordan, Second and Third Grades.
Mrs. Florence Swoboda, East Jordan Fourth and Fifth Grades.

HIGH SCHOOL

A. J. Duccanson, East Jordan, Superintendent.
Annabelle Filkins, Chesaning, Commercial.
Richard L. Waggoner, Bad Axe, Principal and English.
Mrs. M. C. Blount, East Jordan, Junior High.
Victoria Smythe, East Jordan, Latin.
C. F. Snellenberger, East Jordan, Mathematics.
J. H. Jacklin, East Jordan, Science and Agriculture.
Helen Bardwell, Cass City, Household Arts.
A. E. Wells, East Jordan, Manual Arts.

Detroit—In 10 years Detroit has added 57 square miles to its territory, and the assessed valuation of the city, or the property value, has jumped $1,897,045,010. The city's budget has jumped from $10,267,999 in 1914 to $51,476,676.73 in 1924, all of which is raised by taxation. This year the city added to the assessed valuation $349,000,000, which brings the property value of Detroit up to $2,455,989,000. The new tax rate has not been definitely determined, but will be with a few cents of $21 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Detroit—John W. Reid, commissioner of public works, who recently made a tour of eastern cities in an effort to find a proper solution of Detroit's rubbish and garbage problems, has assigned an engineer to prepare a plan for a more efficient operation of this department. The various methods employed throughout the country will be considered in the report, together with the possibilities of using the street railway department during the night to haul garbage and rubbish, instead of the present motor truck system.

New Record for Women

Miss Nancy Aten of Drake University, a freshman who clipped one-fourth of a second off the former women's national collegiate record for the 60-yard hurdles in the national telegraphic meet recently held at Des Moines, Iowa.

POLICY OF THE NEW COUNTY AGRICULTURAL AGENT

Dear friend:—As you probably know there has been a change in County Agents in your county. Mr. B. O. Hagerman on May 23 officially resigned from the employ of the County to labor in larger fields as Agricultural Agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad System with offices at Grand Rapids.

The writer, as Mr. Hagerman's successor, would like to take up the following program:

1. Not More Dairy Cows, but Better Dairy Cows, which means cheaper production and more profit.
2. More Alfalfa.
3. Fewer and Better Potatoes.
4. Miscellaneous projects such as Club Work, Soil, Horticulture, better seed, and any other work in which I can be of greatest service to you.

The success of putting this program across will be measured in a great degree by the extent of your co-operation.

Very sincerely yours,
B. C. MELLENCAMP,
County Agent

Summer Arrives

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Middleville—Mrs. Harriet Campbell, 81 years old, a resident here for 50 years, was found dead here from heart failure in an easy chair in her home when a son, Charles, forced his way into the home when he found the doors locked.

Saginaw—George W. Baxter, 60 years old, publisher of the Saginaw Press, a weekly newspaper, and previously publisher of a semi-weekly in Boyne City, and daily newspapers in Kendallville, Ind., and Dowagiac, Mich., died here recently. He installed many of the early linotype machines in Michigan newspaper offices.

Iron Mountain—A "syndicate" of Iron Mountain sportsmen will experiment in crossing breeds of rabbits this summer, in an effort to develop a giant wild rabbit. Blooded Belgian hares have been purchased for the experiment. The offspring will be set loose in the woods of the county as soon as they reach a size that will insure ability to shift for themselves.

Lansing—Charles W. Seymour, chief of police at Highland Park, was elected president of the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police organization here for the purpose of working for simplification of laws, thus allowing police officers to more effectively enforce the law without having their prisoners set free through technicalities. The organization is to meet annually at Lansing.

Adrian—The Adrian street railways, one of the oldest street railway lines in the country is to suspend operation on or before July 1. It was announced after a conference between representatives of the company and the city commission. The line began operation in 1889 and is said to be the oldest electrically operated one in Michigan and the fifth oldest in the United States.

FLAG DAY PROGRAM ENJOYED AT KOWALSKIE HOME

School Year At An End

On Flag Day, the Woman's Relief Corps, the Boys of '61, and some invited guests motored out to the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Kowalske.

The house and grounds were properly decorated with flags, bunting and potted plants. A long table set on the shade of beautiful trees was decorated with flags and flowers, and loaded down with good things to eat.

Grandpa Kowalske, who by the way is almost 91 years of age, and a Veteran of the Civil War sat at the head of the table as host. After dinner a flag pole was raised, and a large flag was raised slowly by grandpa as "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung, after which the ladies of the Corps gave the pledge to the Flag in unison. Rev. Hulme then gave a very interesting talk on the Flag and Patriotism in general, which was enjoyed by all.

Several patriotic readings were given and then the exercises were closed by singing "America," and benediction by Rev. Hulme.

Lansing—The school census, just completed, gives Lansing 14,880 children of school age, a gain of 577 over last year.

Saginaw—Elizabeth Silas Hopper, widow of a Civil war veteran, and pioneer resident of Saginaw, is dead here at the age of 109. Born in 1815, she is thought to be the oldest woman in the state.

Iron Mountain—Announcement that the Ford Motor company will build a second sawmill plant here has resulted in a big influx of unemployed despite unofficial statements that operations would be curtailed here.

Iron Mountain—Gifts aggregating $10,000 equipment and cash to an Iron Mountain hospital, have been announced by a group of doctors, whose services have been contracted for by the Ford Motor company. The hospital is a public-owned institution.

Ishpeming—Surrounded by a forest fire which was sweeping swiftly through the Yellow Dog river valley, Frank Krieg, of Birch, state deputy fire warden, and 12 men were trapped near Antlers and forced to run into the river for protection from the flames.

Crosswell—The safe of the Farmers' Elevator was blown open by yeg-men and $200 in cash stolen. The safe was banked with bags of corn to deaden the noise of the explosion. The safe of the Farmers' Elevator at Minden City was blown open April 8 in a similar manner.

Menominee—Evelyn Larson, 3 years old, was drowned, and Kermit Dean, 15, was seriously injured when the car in which they were riding turned over when it a heap of sand on the county highway five miles north of Menominee and landed in a deep ditch partly filled with water.

Detroit—The date of the general primary, September 9, has been decided upon by the common council as the date for the holding of the primary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Frank E. Doremus as mayor. The election will take place at the general election in October.

Benton Harbor—The House of David, confident of its ability to withstand the latest storm breaking against its wall, is ready with popcorn wagnons, miniature railroad, vegetable restaurant, ball teams and band for what they believe will be the most prosperous summer season in history.

Adrian—Virgil Bordner, 15, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bordner, living three miles west of Metamora, Ohio, is in a critical condition, the result of one leg being torn off at the knee when the boy became caught in the belt of a gasoline engine which he was helping to operate while grinding feed.

Potoskey—Members of the Michigan State Hotelmen's association will be guests in Potoskey, July 4, 5 and 6, at a regional meeting. Important questions on the program are affiliation with the American Hotel association and a plan for consolidation of the advertising of Michigan in general into one organization backed by state aid.

Ypsilanti—Reed Pierce and Paul Cook, of this city, escaped probable death by jumping from their automobile as it plunged over a 60-foot embankment and fell bottom up in the Huron River north of here. Pierce, who was driving, lost control of the car when a front spindle broke. The car has been raised from the river.

Many a man would go through life without whistling if he didn't whistle until he was out of the woods.

Twenty-seven Students Receive Diplomas Last Friday.

East Jordan High School activities came to a close last Friday night when Pres. Dwight B. Waldo of the Western State Normal delivered the Commencement address, and the twenty-seven members of the Class of 1924 received their diplomas.

Mr. Waldo gave a strong talk, interspersed with a good deal of humor, on the subject, "Some Factors of Growth." He made a strong plea for broad-mindedness and a fair judgment for one's peers. He says too many towns and people are overflowing with petty jealousy and narrow minded views, especially characteristic of the small town. He urged upon a large audience the necessity of good health, and an appreciation of humor, plenty of work, a good education, and, finally, a knowledge and practice of the teaching of the greatest of our teachers, the man of Gallies.

Members of the Kindergarten department presented the diplomas to the members of the Class of 1924. This was one of the most original and pleasing incidents of the whole program. Led by a sedate, dignified gentleman, in the person of David Pray, they did their work in a most satisfactory manner.

Many remarks were made about the pleasing arrangement of the decorations, and the color scheme of the lights only adds credit to the committee of the Juniors who did the work, the most active members being Sadie Murphy and Carlton Bowen. The Juniors are to be congratulated on the fine decorations throughout the Commencement week.

Honor Students of the Class of 1924 are Aura McBride, valedictorian; Annie Colden, salutatorian; and Jasper Stallard. Scholarships were awarded to Miss Aura McBride, of one hundred dollars, and fifty dollars to Jasper Stallard, as second highest percent student for 4 years, winning out in the last semester. The work of Miss Annie Colden was very unusual in that she had to miss a month or two schooling on account of illness. There are so many surprisingly good students in this class that it is difficult to mention them all individually.

MEDALS AWARDED

Those who received medals for meritorious work are as follows:—Briders—Jasper Stallard, Aura McBride, R. B. Baldwin, Josephine Ekstrom.

Juniors—Marie McDonald, Rose McCarty, Sadie Murphy.
Sophomores—Eva McBride, Elizabeth Sidebotham, Lucile Bartlett, Fern Gidley.

Freshmen—Dorothy Walton, Norman Bartlett.

The Superintendent called our attention to the fact that, although it was Friday, the 13th, and his 13th year in the teaching game, twice 13 in the Class on the platform, President Waldo's Birthday, 13 medals were given out. Who can say that Friday, the 13th is an unlucky number.

MORAL INSANITY DEFENSE PLEA

Defense Wants Boys Confined in Corrective State Institution.

Chicago—Preliminary court proceedings out of the way, attorneys for Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, millionaires' sons and confessed slayers of 13-year-old Robert Franks, retained alienists with a view, it is said, to building up a defense of "moral insanity."

The state likewise is devoting its time to the gathering of evidence to combat such a defense. It is planned, defense attorneys have said, to have both boys examined by Dr. Carl M. Bowman, distinguished alienist of Boston. The defense has indicated that its sole fight will be to have the youths confined in a corrective state institution.

A group of physicians attending the sessions of the American Medical Association visited the boys while inspecting the jail and attached hospital. Loeb talked a few minutes with the doctors and was pleasant and affable.

Indictment and arraignment on charges of murder and kidnaping for ransom have not affected the spirits of the boys. Loeb particularly appeared happy singing and laughing in his cell and about the jail.

Witnesses have been taken before the grand jury to tell what they know of the slaying. Several university professors have been examined.

Arthur Secord

Arthur Secord, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Secord, and Paul Franseth, son of Andrew Franseth, graduates of East Jordan High School and now students at Western State Normal at Kalamazoo, have won honors this year as two of the best college debaters in Michigan.

Though only Freshmen both made the Kalamazoo Normal, debating team and during the debating season recently closed both were largely responsible for Kalamazoo Normal's string of successes. Secord is President of the Northern Michigan Club at the Normal.

Paul Franseth has been elected President of the Delta Rho, honorary debating society at Western State Normal. The Delta Rho is composed of students, men and women, who have served on varsity debating teams of the Normal. Election to membership in the Delta Rho is a distinct honor; election to the presidency of the Delta Rho is one of the prize honors of the campus.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Cleveland, Ohio.—Calvin Coolidge's national convention has been held, and up to the final session it was the quietest, smoothest, most peaceful affair ever held in this country, unless one excepts Woodrow Wilson's convention in St. Louis eight years ago. It was really Mr. Coolidge's convention, gathered to do just what he wanted done and to leave undone the things he did not want done.

Mr. Coolidge wished to be nominated to succeed himself in the Presidential office. He was nominated. For his running mate he naturally wished a man who could hold the support of certain elements in the party that were wavering in their allegiance, but he refused to name the man. It was an open race with a dozen entries, and it resulted in an incident that had but one precedent in American political history.

Despite repeated refusals to be a candidate, Frank O. Lowden of Illinois was made the favorite, received the largest vote on the first ballot, was nominated on the second ballot, and the nomination was made unanimous. Apparently it was all over, but there came over the wires a message from Lowden, positively declining the honor. In some confusion the directors of the convention obtained a recess until evening, and William M. Butler, manager for Coolidge and now the new chairman of the national committee, after much consultation, passed around the word that Secretary Hoover would be most acceptable to him. General Dawes, he said, would do, but Hoover was preferred. Rensselaer, the delegations on the third ballot began shifting to Hoover so fast that his selection seemed certain. Then came a change. With loud whoops, big blocks of votes were thrown into the Dawes column. The enthusiasm of the middle westerners carried along the delegates of other states and long before the end of the ballot was reached "Helen Maria" had won. Mr. Butler, beaten in one thing, had nothing to say, and on motion of Senator James Watson of Indiana, who had himself been a contender for the place, the nomination of Dawes was made unanimous.

For the second time a man had declined a vice presidential nomination after it was given him and a national convention had twice made selection of a candidate for second place on its ticket. The first time this occurred in 1844. The Democratic convention that nominated James K. Polk for President gave second place on the ticket to Senator Silas Wright of New York, he receiving 236 votes out of 266. Senator Wright declined and next day George M. Dallas of Pennsylvania was nominated to be Polk's running mate.

Coolidge's Convention

Mr. Coolidge selected for temporary chairman of the convention Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio and told that gentleman what his views were on all the mooted public questions of the day—if he did not already know them—and Mr. Burton in his keynote speech faithfully reproduced all those views. Mr. Coolidge chose for permanent chairman Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, because as vice chairman of the War Finance corporation which has loaned much money to agricultural interests Mr. Mondell might be considered acceptable to the rather disgruntled farmers. So Mr. Mondell presided over the convention after the opening of the second session.

Mr. Coolidge had positive opinions concerning the platform on which he would have to stand during the campaign, so out of all the planks fashioned by the numerous interests that sought to have a hand in the building of that platform, were carefully picked the ones that conformed strictly with these opinions, and all the rest were thrown into the discard by the resolutions committee headed by Ambassador Warren—who was Mr. Coolidge's selection for the place of chairman.

No reflection on President Coolidge nor on the Republican party is intended in recording this seeming dictation by the Chief Executive. The conditions not only justified it but made it inevitable. The rank and file of the party had in the selection of instructed delegates, made known its firm intention to nominate Mr. Coolidge, and the political and legislative events of recent months made it evident that his preferences and opinions must be put above all else.

Significant Changes

Outside the convention hall, in the rooms where the various state delegations met to organize and name their representatives on the committee, another mandate of the mass of the party was carried out. The old line leaders were relegated to the rear and the management put into new hands. Thus the Massachusetts delegation took its chairmanship away from Senator Lodge and gave it to Governor Cox, and the man who had for so long dictated to the Bay state Republicans was not even put on the platform committee. The efforts of Harry Daugherty's friends in the Ohio delegation to rehabilitate him came to naught when Maurice Maschke was chosen as national committeeman, Senator Willis as chairman of the delegation and Simeon D. Fess was put on the committee on resolutions. So it went, not in all the delegations, but in enough to show that a revolution in party management was under way. Senator Lodge was as suave and smiling as ever, and as tired looking, but his smile had a touch of bitterness, and many another former leader was in the dumps as he saw his power fading away.

There was but one discordant element in the convention—the LaFollette delegation from Wisconsin. All but one of its members were selected to vote for the Badger senator and to present to the platform committee the planks representing his views. Their action of course was known far in advance and so was discounted, but to some of the members of the party it was no less ominous. They got into action early with a set of resolutions of which the following is a synopsis:
Housecleaning pledged.
Monopoly—crush, not foster.
Recover oil preserves.
Vigorous prosecution of grafters.
Revise public domain legislation.
Public ownership of water power.
Super water power systems.
Public control and conservation of natural resources.
Repeal Esch-Cummins law.
Make rates on prudent investment and cost of service.
Railroads—public ownership, final solution.
Reduce federal taxes.
Curtailed the 800 millions now spent annually for the army and navy.
Recover war stealings.
Collect foreign loan interest.
Oppose Mellon tax plan.
Amend Constitution to permit a re-enactment to supersede a judicial veto.
Reduce tariff.
Promote co-operation between producers and consumers.
Reduce freight rates for farmers.
Abolish injunctions in labor disputes.
Grant cash bonus to ex-soldiers.
Provide Great Lakes waterway.

Amend Constitution to provide for direct nomination and election of President, federal initiative and referendum and referendum on war.

Repeal Versailles treaty, to comply with terms of armistice, promote treaties to outlaw war, abolish conscription, reduce armaments and guarantee referendums on peace and war.
There were some other planks, but these are enough to indicate the kind of a platform Senator LaFollette demanded. He and everyone else knew they would be turned down by the committee and rejected by the convention, so no one was surprised or shocked when that was done. But upon such a platform, it was assumed, LaFollette would stand as an independent candidate for the Presidency. What would be the effect of his candidacy was naturally a fruitful topic of discussion among the delegates and other visitors.

Many Women Delegates

Women were prepared to play a conspicuous part in the convention. There were more than 600 delegates and alternates of the gentler sex, nearly every state giving them place in its delegation. Even far away Hawaii sent one—Princess David Kawannakoa—and she was made an associate member of the national committee. In social usage she retains her title, but she is said to be thoroughly one of the people and a power among the Republican voters of the islands.

Temporary Chairman Burton overlooked the women when he wrote his address and had the advance copies printed, but he noticed the omission and interpolated a graceful paragraph warmly welcoming them to the party's councils. They were ready to do their share of the work, but really there was nothing much for them to do. It had all been arranged beforehand, and some of them were a bit peeved. They had a lot of pet ideas, but only a few of them, notably Mrs. A. T. Hert of Kentucky, were seriously consulted by the men who formulated the program. Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of the senator from Chicago, said: "They have steam rolled the whole thing nicely. Those who are going to be elected have everything to say about the convention and the appointments and activities, and those who are elected and hold party office have nothing to say and can only go back home and work for the campaign."

This was largely true at the time it was said, but a few hours later the men gave their sense of fair play a chance and accorded to the women equal participation in party management by giving them full membership on the national committee. Five of the most prominent of the ladies went before the committee on rules and order of business and pleaded that the example set by the Democrats four years ago should be followed. Two or three of the men were obstinate, but the majority of the committee yielded and their report on this matter was adopted by the convention with nearly every woman in the hall standing and shouting as loud as she could.
Another thing this committee did, which also was approved by the convention, was to reduce the delegate representation of the southern states which always go Democratic. The convention of 1920 directed the national committee to work this reform, but it had refused to obey. In this convention there was no outspoken opposition to the change. To make it more binding, an additional member of the national committee was given to each state that exceeds a given Republican vote in the last preceding national election.

Genuine Enthusiasm

To tell in detail the story of the convention would be superfluous; to read it would be tedious. But it had its high lights and interesting phases. Regular attendants on such gatherings always are on the lookout for "ovations" and outbursts of enthusiasm frequently are suspicious of the genuineness of such demonstrations. The first session, however, witnessed several that were undoubtedly genuine. The first came toward the close of Temporary Chairman Burton's speech when he first mentioned President Coolidge by name. And it really wasn't so much the mention of the name that evoked loud and long cheering as what Mr. Burton said. This was it:

"With some disappointment, as one whose public service has been in a legislative position, truth compels me to say that by far the greater share of our citizenship looks to President Coolidge rather than to congress for leadership."

All over the great public hall delegates and spectators rose to their feet to applaud this statement, and even many of the senators and representatives who have set themselves in opposition to the President over and over again joined in the hand-clapping.

Another demonstration that seemed real was the ovation given Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon. During the formalities of completing the temporary organization he rose from the midst of the Pennsylvania delegation to make a trifling motion. At once the convention burst into almost wild cheering and the secretary was compelled to mount to the platform and acknowledge it. The man who runs the country's finances might well feel flattered by the reception given him.

Just after this incident a bit of real sentiment was injected into the proceedings. The chair announced that there was present the sole surviving member of the Republican convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency—Anderson G. Proctor of

CHARLES G. DAWES

St. Joseph, Mich. The venerable gentleman was led to the front and the cheering host arose to greet him, and listened with respect to his brief response.

That Congressman Burton in his keynote speech accomplished with great skill a difficult task was admitted by all. He could not entirely overlook the breach that has existed between the administration and congress, nor could he be too emphatic in placing the blame for it. But he recognized the change that was coming over the party management and gave the President full measure of praise. At the same time he said little that could offend the most sensitive of those Republican members of congress who have been in opposition to the administration's policies.

Nominating Coolidge

An easier task and no less admirably performed was that which fell to the lot of the other Burton—Marion Leroy, president of the University of Michigan. As his friend of many years' standing he was chosen by Mr. Coolidge to make the nominating speech on Thursday, and no more eloquent and sincere speech has been heard in a national convention. It was not flowery nor was it political. It was a sympathetic setting forth of the qualities of Mr. Coolidge as the speaker conceived them, a heartfelt tribute to his character, his stern uprightness and honesty, his unflinching courage and his capacity for the leadership of his party and his country. "My function is to present the man," said Dr. Burton. "The emphasis must be just there. My primary task does not concern politics nor platforms as such. Anyone will tell you he is 'one of us' and he is. In keeping with his real qualities I shall make no effort to exalt him for he does not need it. He is not a superhero and would be the last to think so. There is not a trace of show or ostentation about him; for he does nothing merely for appearance. He may be an example but he would never set one."

A little later Dr. Burton said: "He has moral fibre. To me it is his distinguishing characteristic. There is a moral grandeur about him which does credit to American life. You simply cannot think of him as soft or flabby. He aims actually to do what he knows he ought to do." And again: "In the largest sense of the term he is a patient man. He knows that time will do its perfect work. He instinctively takes the long look. He makes a calm, unhurried, steady approach to the tasks of life. No one can throw him into a panic, for he sees steadily and sees it as a whole. He cannot please every one. Therefore some, for the time, become hostile and critical. This man, in a very remarkable way, takes his punishment quietly and silently."

Guards the Future

Continuing, Doctor Burton said, in part: "At times he must oppose what appears to some as an unqualified good, because he recognizes its temporary benefits and sees in the distant future that it must work an evil to society. Through all such experiences he walks with the spirit of human understanding. He knows that time will heal the hurt. His sense of time explains the thoroughness of his work and his intolerance for superficiality. He must have the facts as first hand and will not base decisions on a partial knowledge of the situation. He will not be hurried. He avoids extremes and loves proportion. Life does not consist of detached unrelated events. It is a unity welded together by the alchemy of time. He knows how to wait and not be tired by waiting. When he acts you know he will not be impetuous, because he takes time to think to the soul of things. Democracy, in her careless blundering confidence, is in dire need of such leadership. "Here, then, is the man. He follows 'right and truth to their logical conclusions.' He gathered it all up in an address he delivered a year ago at a college commencement. He said, 'We do not need more national development, we need more spiritual development. We do not need more intellectual power, we need more moral power. We do not need more knowledge, we need more character. We do not need more government, we need more culture. We do not need more law, we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen."

Rated as "Conservative"

"In America we have the curious practice of classifying men. We attempt to put labels on them and imagine that thereby we have settled something. We have unusual facility in this method because we rarely pause to agree on any definition of the terms. "As a matter of fact it is not the meaning of the term that gives us concern. It is the implication it carries, its flavor or its color. We say a man is a conservative, a liberal or a radical and for the term carries praise or approbrium, depending entirely upon our own point of view. Now, this man's Americanism comes to lofty expression in what some have praised and others have criticized as his 'conservatism.' Let us examine the actual facts. "He uses the past for the future. He is no mere worshiper of the past as the past. It has meaning chiefly as a guide for the future. He recognizes clearly the evils of dead, congealed, conservatism. His emphasis is on the days to come. He is concerned chiefly about our tendencies. Therefore, he says, 'We review the past, not in order that we may return to it, but that we may find in what direction, straight and clear, it points in the future. His is a sane forward-looking conservatism. "He does not concede that the present clamor for change proves that our national principles are false or that our governmental organization is weak. Changes must come. Every sane person recognizes that. The real question concerns the causes of our discontent and the sources of our evil. Immediately to destroy existing institutions, because human frailties continue to exist and human nature is not speedily reformed, is scarcely to be called wise leadership. To destroy is easy, but to achieve freedom is hard.

"In fact, he holds that there are genuine grounds for optimism. It is easy to complain and to overlook the great blessings of life. After all is said and done, America, more than any other country in the world today, offers real privileges and opportunities. "He knows that progress will require hard unremitting toil. To him a better future means continuous struggle and presents a constant challenge. He is no day dreamer, for he knows the stern realities of a work-a-day world. "We cannot legislate mankind into a state of perfection."

Here is Dr. Burton's closing paragraph, which was the signal for a mighty outburst of cheering that lasted for many minutes: "As self-respecting individuals, we can trust this man. As lovers of America—we can follow one who is supremely American. As citizens with interests as broad as humanity we can accept his guidance into a new and larger world leadership because he is at heart a human being. To the national convention of the greatest party in American history, I have the disinction to present as candidate to succeed himself as President of the United States of America, the virile man—the staunch American—the real human being—Calvin Coolidge."

There was, of course, but one ballot for the Presidential nomination. Mr. Coolidge received 1,085 votes. LaFollette got 28 Wisconsin votes and 6 from North Dakota. Hiram Johnson was given 10 votes by South Dakota. The chairman of the South Dakota delegation moved that the nomination be made unanimous; and everyone voted for this except the 28 LaFollette men from Wisconsin.

Second-Place Fight

Before the convention started on the job of naming the vice presidential candidate the rumors of "instructions" from Washington were flying about the hall and the hotel lobbies, one of them being that the edict had gone forth that no senator was to be nominated. Secretary Hoover was believed by many to be the administration's first choice. Others said Mr. Coolidge wanted Mr. Lowden. Probably the President did not seek to dictate, but Mr. Butler, his manager, probably did, a little later, and was frustrated. Hoover was not even mentioned on the two first ballots. There was a definite plan concocted by certain leaders to nominate Congressman Burton of Ohio on the second ballot, but the Lowdenites broke that up. The Burton effort was in reality made by those who were afraid the choice of the convention would be Judge Kenyon of Iowa, who had received a large enough vote to worry the conservatives.

Mr. Lowden had repeatedly said he would not accept the nomination, but his admirers kept on voting for him and, as it is told above, they won out on the second ballot. Being informed by wise that the convention had insisted on thrusting the honor upon him, he promptly replied to Chairman Mondell as follows: "Telegram just received. I am deeply grateful for the action of the convention. However, I have said a thousand times, I think, that I would decline if nominated, and I must keep my word. To yield now would mean the loss of my self-respect. I shall do what I can for Republican success as a private citizen, but I cannot accept a place on the ticket."

Then came the recess, the urgent consultations, the attempt to put over Hoover and the final victory of Gen. Charles M. Dawes, as related in the early part of this narrative. President Coolidge, following the events in Cleveland by radio, was pleased when Lowden was nominated, disappointed when he declined, and satisfied when Dawes was chosen. He telegraphed at once to the general: "It will be a pleasure to be associated with you in the public service. Best wishes to you and Mrs. Dawes in which Mrs. Coolidge joins."

Then he turned off the radio and retired.

The Convention City

Too much cannot be said in praise of the way in which the city of Cleveland did its part in making the convention pleasant and successful. Elms and most important, it provided Public hall, the finest place in which a national convention has ever been privileged to meet excepting that in which the Democrats gathered in San Francisco in 1910. Public hall cost the people of Cleveland $6,800,000 and is located in the heart of the downtown district, convenient to the hotels. Its architecture is beautiful and it seats 18,000 persons. Within its walls are all the conveniences that the builders could think of, and its stage is the largest in the country.

Then there are the hotels, ample in number and well conducted. Their managers looked after the comfort of the city's guests in every possible way and, what is more to the point, rates were kept well within reason. Cleveland seems to have more automobiles than any other city in the world in comparison with the population, but the able and well-trained traffic police protected the life and limb of the convention visitor in a way that elicited the admiration of all. No one was permitted to get himself run over, whether or not he wished to do so.

Local committees, social organizations and individuals arranged programs of entertainment to fill up the hours when the convention was not in session, and many of the men and women visitors were accommodated by the various golf clubs. There were theater parties, boat rides, band concerts, fireworks and other things galore. Special teas and receptions were given for the women, and a program for colored visitors was provided.

Migration of Rats

The date of introduction of the rat into America is very doubtful, but the black or Alexandrine rat seems to have come first and was gradually driven westward by the larger rodents. The black rat found its way to Europe about the beginning of the sixteenth century, but the brown rat did not reach England until about 1728.

Apparatus Separates Parasites From Soil
Ingenious Flotation Device of Dr. Cobb Is Valuable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In studying the nemas which exist in the soil and which, in many cases, cause diseases of plants such as root-knot and certain rots, there has been much difficulty in separating the organisms from the soil. Most of these threadlike parasites are extremely small and cannot be picked out by ordinary methods; neither can they be washed out readily. However, Dr. N. A. Cobb of the United States Department of Agriculture has devised an ingenious flotation apparatus which affords valuable aid in removing nemas from a sample of soil.
The apparatus consists essentially of a hollow cylinder several inches in diameter and three or four feet high, tapering for about a foot to a small opening at the bottom and provided with a spout near the top. This cylinder is fastened to a circular rotating table or frame which is turned at a moderate speed by a motor while neme-free water is run in from the bottom by turning a graduated tap. The soil sample is mixed with a small quantity of water and then poured quickly into the rotating cylinder when it is about a quarter full of water. The rotation destroys any disturbing up-and-down currents which might interfere with the separation, as in some ore separating machines.
Nemas sink very slowly and the rise of the water is so regulated by the tap that it will a little more than counteract their fall. As a result the soil particles which are heavier sink to the bottom and the nemas are lifted to the top. When the rising column of muddy water reaches the upper opening it is spouted with the contained nemas into a vessel set on the rotating table to catch the overflow. When all the nemas are collected in this vessel they are allowed to settle to the bottom. The water is drawn off and a slimy mass containing the nemas in much greater concentration is found in the bottom. They may then be removed and examined under the microscope. By this method also the number of nemas in a given quantity of soil may be estimated.

Detroit—Nearly 5,000 boys and girls from public and parochial schools of the city were guests of the Detroit Community Fund, recently, at its fifth annual picnic on Belle Isle. As in former years, the teachers in selecting the children, gave preference to those who had never visited Belle Isle. Last year over 500 such children were found, and for them the trip was a succession of delights.
Lansing—The allotment of $2,226, 824 by the federal government to Michigan for road building for 1924 is an increase of more than a quarter of a million dollars over the 1923 allotment, which was a few dollars less than $2,000,000. It is only exceeded by the allotment of 1921, which was $2,249,000. This money will be used principally on the construction of concrete roads on the cross state lines of M-16 and M-17 and the trunk lines running upstate.

Soy Bean Proves as Best Legume

Hay From Plant Is Almost Equal to Alfalfa or Clover in Feed Value.

The soy bean has proved itself the best annual legume for hay, pasture and grain, according to J. W. Zahnley, associate professor of crops at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Good soy bean hay is almost equal in feeding value to alfalfa or red clover, fitting well into crop rotation and increasing the nitrogen content of the soil, according to the forage authority. The seed is a satisfactory substitute for cottonseed meal, linseed meal and tankage. It also has the highest seed yield of the legume family.

Gathers Nitrogen From Air.
"A crop of soy beans can be plowed under for green manure or harvested for hay in approximately 100 days after planting," stated Professor Zahnley when asked about the legume. "Their value for soil improvement is due to the high nitrogen content of the plant and the ability to gather nitrogen from the air and store it in the soil by aid of bacteria which lives in their roots."

"The seed after the oil is extracted is equal to cottonseed or linseed meal as a feed for live stock. No other legume will produce such high yields of seed per acre."

"Soy beans furnish a large quantity of a very nutritious pasture from late summer until after frost. Such pasture can be used to good advantage for growing and fattening hogs, sheep, and other live stock if supplemented by a non-legume such as corn. Soy beans are top rich in protein to feed alone."

"Soy beans, like other legumes, must be supplied with the proper bacteria in order to enable them to make a normal growth on poor soils. The particular kind of bacteria necessary for soy beans is seldom if ever present in Kansas soils except where soy beans have grown. For this reason it is usually necessary to place the bacteria in the fields where soy beans are to be planted. This can be done by treating the seed with inoculating material which contains large numbers of soy bean bacteria."

"A popular method of utilizing soy beans is by planting in corn for hogging down. They may be planted in the row at the time the corn is planted by using a bean and pea attachment on the planter, planting four to eight pounds per acre in corn planted at the usual rate."

Best Varieties Determined.
There are hundreds of varieties of soy beans, a few of which have proved their value according to tests conducted by the Kansas agricultural experiment station at Manhattan by co-operative experiments with farmers in the eastern part of the state.

The best varieties are as follows: Manchu, an excellent variety for grain or pasture; Haberlandt, heavy seed producer and suitable for grain or pasture; Midwest, a good seed and pasture variety; Morse, a good variety for hay and seed; Wilson, an excellent variety for hay; Virginia, distinctly a hay variety producing high yields; Sable, produces a good quantity of hay.
Among the varieties described here the Manchu, Haberlandt, Midwest and Morse have given good results for seed and pasture purposes.

Large Thrifty Litters Basis of Swine Success

The litter and not a few outstanding individuals should be considered the basis of satisfactory pork production, according to C. G. Eling, swine specialist at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

"The cost of raising three or four scrawny pigs to the litter is nearly as great as the cost of raising large thrifty litters up to weaning time," Mr. Eling added. "The overhead expense of maintaining the boar and a number of brood sows is best met if the litters are large and thrifty."

"The thrifty litters farrowed down in the timber or the successful litters farrowed the first year that one has hogs in new pens and sheds embody a practical suggestion regarding healthful conditions for small pigs."

"Old hogs closely confined in yards and sheds make very unsatisfactory and unhealthy conditions for the tender newly born litters. Small pigs nursing, sleeping and living in such quarters are attacked by lice, mange, scours, worms, thumps and other forms of small pig ailments which reduce their vitality."

Better Baby Chicks Is Slogan of Poultryman

Strong, healthy, vigorous chicks, given the proper kind of feed in sanitary quarters, free from dampness, comfortably warm and with ample ventilation, will develop properly and grow into profitable mature birds, according to J. H. McAdams, poultry specialist for the Kansas State Agricultural college. Chicks that are stunted through lack of vitality used in the breeding stock, or chicks that are stunted by crowding or from scanty feeding, will not develop into vigorous breeding stock and good layers, Mr. McAdams says.

A chick ration to bring about the best results should contain those elements that furnish body heat and energy and build up bone and muscle, McAdams points out. "These feeds must at the same time be provided with respect to the ease with which they can be handled by the chick."

Cream and Milk Must Be of Good Quality

Federal Standard Is Placed at 18 Per Cent Butterfat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Because cream is sold in smaller quantities than milk is no reason why less care should be given by inspectors in insuring a safe supply of good quality, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It is just as desirable for cream to come from tuberculin-tested cows or be properly pasteurized, or both, as that milk should. Heavy cream for whipping purposes is often sold raw and its quality should be above suspicion. Cream from old or returned milk of poor quality is not desirable.

All cities need carefully defined grades for cream, according to the department, with a fixed minimum for light, table, or coffee cream, which is the usual cream of commerce. The federal standard for cream which goes into interstate or foreign commerce is 18 per cent butterfat, and in different cities it varies usually from 18 to 20 per cent. Sometimes what is known as "double cream" is sold, and when that term is used the cream should contain twice as much fat as is required in ordinary cream, usually from 36 to 40 per cent of butterfat. "Whipping cream" may contain less butterfat than "double cream," but according to a ruling by the bureau of chemistry, cream thus labeled, if shipped interstate, must contain at least 30 per cent butterfat.

Moonblindness Is Most Peculiar Eye Disease

Horsemen have long recognized in certain parts of the world a disease of the eye of the horse that comes and goes several times before finally producing complete blindness. They have many theories, but no real facts about this disease. It is safe to say, however, that there is more superstition than good logic in connecting wolf teeth with this trouble. Many mares have no wolf teeth at all, but suffer from moonblindness just the same, and many have had the wolf teeth extracted with no noticeable benefits. The wolf teeth do the horse no good, however, and may be removed if one desires. It is easily done with good instruments. There is a good deal of reason for suspecting that this disease is infectious, but it has not been proved to be so. Affected animals should be protected from bright light by cloths over the eyes and the discharge should be cleaned up with a two per cent boric acid solution in water. A solution of one part pyocyanin blue to one thousand parts of distilled water and a few drops put into the eyes twice daily seems to long delay the final effects of the disease in some cases.

Treat Small Grain for Smut With Formaldehyde

Small grain may be treated for smut with formaldehyde or copper carbonate. The smut of corn, however, is an altogether different kind of proposition, and no method of treating the seed corn is of any value whatsoever. It seems that corn smut is carried over in the soil more than it is on the seed. Of course, we would avoid picking for seed ears which are affected with smut or which come from plants which are infected. In this way it may be possible eventually to build up a smut resistant strain. It will take a good many years to do this.

Best Depth for Plowing Depends Much on Soil

The proper depth for plowing for corn and wheat depends on the character of the soil, the time it is done and a number of other factors. Generally plowing less than five inches deep is called shallow plowing and deeper than six inches is called deep plowing. Under ordinary conditions it does not pay to plow more than six inches deep nor shallower than six inches. The deeper plowing is usually best when done in the fall for corn the next year, and the shallow plowing for wheat or oats. It does not pay to plow extra deep or extra shallow.

Farm Hints

Have one nest to every four or five hens.

Clover seed of doubtful origin probably will prove of doubtful value.

Too early pasturing may mean short pasturing. Give the grass a chance to become firm.

Grapelines need a severe annual pruning to keep on producing a large crop of first-class fruit.

Be sure you are right about food crops and feed crops, then go ahead with cash crops.

Most of the losses in farm animals are due to carelessness and neglect on the part of their owners.

Provide shade for summer. Hens need protection from extreme heat. Panting is the only method they have for cooling off.

The first few days of a chick's life is the most important time. Watch the temperature of the brooder and also your feeding methods.

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys

Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Jad Salts in inexpensive; can not irritate; makes a delightful effervescent "tea" water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active.

For a single moment she crept into his arms. Their lips met, her eyes shone into his. He held her away from him a moment later. The change was amazing.

"Margaret," she cried, "do you know that the hall is filled with your father's luggage, and that the car is ordered to take him to Southampton directly after lunch?"

Margaret and Francis exchanged glances.

"Sir Timothy may change his mind," the latter observed. "I have news for him directly he arrives."

On the other side of the wall they heard the whinnying of the old mare, the sound of galloping feet from all directions.

"Here he comes!" Lady Cynthia exclaimed. "I shall go and meet him."

Francis laid his hand upon her arm. "Let me have a word with him first," he begged.

She hesitated.

"You are not going to say anything—that will make him want to go away!"

"I am going to tell him something which I think will keep him at home."

Sir Timothy came through the postern-gate, a moment or two later. He waved his hat and crossed the lawn in their direction.

He went alone to meet him and, as he drew near, was conscious of a little shock. His host, although he held himself bravely, seemed to have aged in the night.

"I want one word with you, sir, in your study, please," Francis said.

Sir Timothy shrugged his shoulders and led the way. He turned to wave his hand once more to Margaret and Lady Cynthia, however, and he looked with approval at the luncheon table which a couple of servants were laying under the cedar tree.

"Wonderful thing, those alfresco meals," he declared. "I hope Hedges won't forget the maraschino with the melons. Come into my den, Ledsam."

He led the way in courtly fashion. He was the ideal host leading a valued guest to his sanctum for a few moments' pleasant conversation. But when they arrived in the little beamed room and the door was closed, his manner changed.

He looked searchingly, almost challengingly at Francis. "You have news for me?" he asked.

"Yes," Francis answered.

Sir Timothy shrugged his shoulders. He threw himself a little wearily into an easy-chair. His hands strayed out toward a cigarette box. He selected one and lit it.

"I expected your friend, Mr. Shopland," he murmured. "I hope he is none the worse for his ducking."

"Shopland is a fool," Francis replied. "He has nothing to do with this affair, anyway. I have something to give you, Sir Timothy."

He took the two papers from his pocket and handed them over.

"I bought them from John Walter the day before yesterday," he continued. "I gave him two hundred pounds for them. The money was just in time. He caught a steamer for Australia late in the afternoon. I had this wireless from him this morning."

"You Know That I Killed Oliver Hilditch?" Sir Timothy Said, His Eyes Fixed Upon the Other's.

"You know that I killed Oliver Hilditch?" Sir Timothy said, his eyes fixed upon the other's.

"I know that you killed Oliver Hilditch," Francis repeated. "If I had been Margaret's father, I think that I should have done the same."

Sir Timothy seemed suddenly very much younger. The droop of his lips was no longer pathetic. There was a little humorous twitch there.

"You, the great upholder of the law?" he murmured.

"I have heard the story of Oliver Hilditch's life," Francis replied. "I was partially responsible for saving him from the gallows. I repeat what I have said. And if you will—"

He held out his hand. Sir Timothy hesitated for one moment. Instead of taking it, he laid his hand upon Francis' shoulder.

"Ledsam," he said, "we have thought wrong things of one another. I thought you a prig, moral to your finger-tips with the morality of the law and the small places. Perhaps I was tempted for that reason to give you a wrong impression of myself. But you must understand this: Though I have had my standard and lived up to it all my life, I am something of a black sheep. A man stole my wife. I did not trouble the law courts. I killed him."

"I have the blood of generations of lawyers in my veins," Francis declared, "but I have read many a divorce case in which I think it would have been better and finer if the two men had met as you and that man met."

"I was born with the love of fighting in my bones," Sir Timothy went on. "In my younger days, I fought in every small war in the southern hemisphere. I fought, as you know, in our own war. I have loved to see men fight honestly and fairly."

"It is a man's hobby," Francis pronounced.

"I encouraged you deliberately to think," Sir Timothy went on, "that half the world thinks—that my parties at the Walled House were mysterious orgies of vice. They have, as a matter of fact, never been anything of the sort. The tragedies which are supposed to have taken place on my launch have been just as much mock tragedies as last night's, only I have not previously chosen to take the audiences into my confidence. The greatest pugilists in the world have fought in my gymnasium, often, if you will, under illegal conditions, but there has never been a fight that was not fair."

"I believe that," Francis said.

"And there is another matter for which I take some blame," Sir Timothy went on. "The matter of Fairfax and Victor Bidiak. They were neither of them young men for whose loss the world is any the worse. Fairfax to some extent imposed upon me. He was brought to the Walled House by a friend who should have known better. He sought my confidence. The story he told was exactly that of the mock drama upon the launch. Bidiak had taken his wife. He had no wish to appeal to the courts. He wished to fight, a point of view with which I entirely sympathized. I arranged a fight between the two. Bidiak faked it and never turned up. My advice to Fairfax was, whenever he met Bidiak, to give him the soundest thrashing he could. That night at Soto's I caught sight of Fairfax some time before dinner. He was talking to the woman who had been his wife, and he had evidently been drinking. He drew me on one side. 'Tonight,' he told me, 'I am going to settle accounts with Bidiak.' 'Where?' I asked. 'Here,' he answered. He went out to the theater, upstairs to dine. That was the extent of the knowledge I possessed which enabled me to predict some unwanted happening that night. Fairfax was a bedrugged and bedrunken decadent who had not the courage afterward to face what he had done. That is all."

The hand slipped from Francis' shoulder. Francis, with a smile, held out his own. They stood there for a moment with clasped hands—a queer, detached moment, as it seemed to Francis, in a life which during the last few months had been full of vivid sensations. From outside came the lazy sounds of the drowsy summer morning—the distant humming of a mowing machine, the drone of a reaper in the field beyond, the twittering of birds in the trees, even the soft lapping of the stream against the stone steps. The man whose hand he was holding seemed to Francis to have become somehow transformed. It was as though he had dropped a mask and were showing a more human, a more kindly self. Francis wondered no longer at the halting gallop of the horses in the field.

"You'll be good to Margaret?" Sir Timothy begged. "She's had a wretched time."

Francis smiled confidently. "I'm going to make up for it, sir," he promised. "And this South American trip," he continued, as they turned toward the French windows, "you'll call that off?"

Sir Timothy hesitated. "I am not quite sure."

When they reached the garden, Lady Cynthia was alone. She scarcely glanced at Francis. Her eyes were anxiously fixed upon his companion.

"Margaret has gone in to make the cocktails herself," she explained. "We have both sworn off absinthe for the rest of our lives, and we know Hedges can't be trusted to make one without."

"I'll go and help her," Francis declared.

Lady Cynthia passed her arm through Sir Timothy's.

"I want to know about South America," she begged. "The sight of those trunks worries me."

Sir Timothy's casual reply was obviously a subterfuge. They crossed the lawn and the rustic bridge, almost in silence, passing underneath the pergola of roses to the sheltered garden at the further end. Then Lady Cynthia paused.

"You are not going to South America," she pleaded, "alone?"

Sir Timothy took her hands. "My dear," he said, "listen, please, to my confession. I am a fraud. I am not a purveyor of new sensations for a decadent troop of weary, fashionable people. I am a fraud sometimes even to myself. I have had good luck in material things. I have had bad luck in the precious, the sentimental side of life. It has made something of an artificial character of me, on the surface at any rate. I am really a simple, elderly man who loves fresh air, clean, honest things, games, and a healthy life. I have no ambitions except those connected with sport. I don't even want to climb to the topmost niches in the world of finance. I think you have looked at me through the wrong-colored spectacles. You have had a whimsical fancy for a character which does not exist."

"What I have seen," Lady Cynthia answered, "I have seen through no spectacles at all—with my own eyes. But what I have seen, even, does not count. There is something else."

"I am within a few weeks of my fiftieth birthday," Sir Timothy reminded her, "and you, I believe, are twenty-nine."

"My dear man," Lady Cynthia assured him fervently, "you are the only person in the world who can keep me from feeling forty-nine."

"And your people—"

"Heavens! My people, for the first time in their lives, will count me a brilliant success," Lady Cynthia declared. "You'll probably have to lend dad money, and I shall be looked upon as the fairly child who has restored the family fortunes."

Sir Timothy leaned a little toward her.

"Last of all," he said, "and this time his voice was not quite so steady, 'are you really sure that you care for me, dear, because I have loved you so long, and I have wanted love so badly, and it is so hard to believe—'"

It was the moment, it seemed to her, for which she had prayed. She was in his arms, tired no longer, with all the splendid fire of life in her loving eyes and throbbing pulses. Around them the bees were humming, and a soft summer breeze shook the roses and brought little wafts of perfume from the carnation bed.

"There is nothing in life," Lady Cynthia murmured brokenly, "so wonderful as this."

Francis and Margaret came out from the house, the former carrying a silver tray. They had spent a considerable time over their task, but Lady Cynthia and Sir Timothy were still absent. Hedges followed them, a little worried.

"Shall I ring the song, madam?" he asked Margaret. "Cook has taken such pains with her omelette."

"I think you had better, Hedges," Margaret assented.

The song rang out—and rang again. Presently Lady Cynthia and Sir Timothy appeared upon the bridge and crossed the lawn. They were walking a little apart. Lady Cynthia was looking down at some roses which she had gathered. Sir Timothy's unconcern seemed a trifle overdone. Margaret laughed very softly.

"A stepmother, Francis!" she whispered. "Just fancy Cynthia as a stepmother!" (THE END)

Lustrous Floors Add Beauty to Your Home

SMOOTH, lustrous, gleaming floors add beauty and refinement to any home. They bring out the beauty and richness of rugs and furniture. They suggest cleanliness—good housekeeping.

And they are clean, too. If they are varnished with Neptunite Floor Varnish their surfaces will be unusually hard and smooth. You will be surprised at the ease with which they can be kept free from dirt. Long wearing, too. They will retain their original beauty for years.

And—best of all—neither hot nor cold water, not even steam, can ever turn them white.

Low Brothers Neptunite Never Turns White

We have some very interesting things to tell you about other Low Brothers products and about our service to you. Our long experience enables us to give you good advice about their use. Come in and see us.

STANDING BY PRINCIPLES

By THOMAS A. CLARK Death of Men, University of Illinois.

It's a test of character for a young fellow to stand by his principles, especially if they are of that old-fashioned kind that have respect for self-control and religion. Worthington found it so when he went to work in the first time in the city. He had come from the country and he was still old-fashioned in some ways. It took nerve to say his prayers while some unregenerate sinner giggled, or to start off for church on Sunday school while the other fellows were either in bed or sitting around in their pajamas reading the Sunday paper. It wasn't easy always to admit that he didn't smoke or to refuse approval when a smart young clerk cracked a vulgar joke, and, as I said, it was a test of character and a test which too many flunk.

Every one admires the man who stands by his principles even when he is liable to adult it. If he laughs or makes light of your respect for religion or your regard for a clean tongue and a clean life, it is merely to bolster his own weakness or to test your sincerity. He respects you if you stand and despise your weakness if you lack the courage of your convictions.

When Jimmy Hunter "got religion" during one of the evangelistic campaigns conducted at his college years ago, he knew perfectly well that he'd have to say his prayers openly. When he thought of what "Butch" Wheeler, big, blasphemous and agnostic, would say and do, his heart sank, but he stood by his principles and knelt down by the bed in the dormitory, his body trembling and his lips dumb. Somebody laughed. But it was "Butch" who thundered out, "Be quiet. Jimmy's doing what he thinks is right, and what some of us, perhaps would be better off if we did. If any man interferes, he'll wish he hadn't." And quiet reigned.

If there were 50 men or women with force and with moral and religious backbone, they could revolutionize almost any community. It isn't necessary to talk or preach much. All that is needed is to go ahead and lead your life quietly, cleanly, conservatively, without shame and in accordance with the principles you know are right. It's example that counts most.

Cloche Continues to Be Fashion's Favorite

That Madame Fashion is not fickle, is evidenced in this little cloche, for this bonnet-like type continues to be her favorite. The advent, this season of gray silk print into the millinery field, such as covers the brim and guards the crown—of this model adds to the charm of many a chapane. Note also the hand-dyed and hemstitched silken scarf about the neck. Every-body's wearing them!

Luck That Changed

An insurance agent found a quarter on his doorstep, his wife picked up half a dollar and his daughter rushed in announcing the discovery of a dime. At supper their toast was "May our good luck continue," and then the father found that, owing to a hole in his pocket, he had lost about a dollar.—London Tit-Bits.

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED BY THIS SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or discomfort. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Rowley Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Keep Physically Fit.

There are only a few propositions for human conduct that nobody disputes. Here, I think, is one of them: Regardless of sex, age or vocation, every person is better off, mentally, morally, socially and financially, for devoting part of his leisure time to the task of keeping physically fit.

TOWNS ARE SWEEP AWAY BY FLOODS

REPORT 22 DEAD; LOWLANDS ARE INUNDATED AS CLOUD-BURST SWEEPS VALLEYS.

DESTROY LAUREL FORK, BRAMER

Little Girl Swept into Raging Torrent As Parents Leave Her Outside a Moment.

Atlanta, Ga.—Twenty-two persons were drowned and many are missing as the result of a terrific cloudburst which inundated the lowlands of northeastern Tennessee, according to word received by the southern headquarters of the Red Cross here. The villages of Laurel Fork and Bramers were completely washed away, according to the meager dispatches. Special relief workers were rushed to the scene.

At Carders Bluff, Tenn., near Elizabethton, the body of a six-year-old girl was recovered washed against a wire fence where it had lodged. The force of the cloudburst was so severe near the neighborhood of Carders Bluffs and Hunter it carried away a heavy concrete bridge.

These creeks were suddenly transformed into great walls of water following the cloudburst, according to reports, spelling death and destruction to everything within their paths. In several places the narrow valleys were almost filled with the raging torrents.

A large number were reported missing.

The eight-year-old daughter of Nail Lewis, living north of Carders Bluff, was carried out of the house, the father fearing the whirling waters would rise and carry the house away, and while the father and other members of the family had gone inside to bring out some belongings, the water bore the child to destruction.

KIDNAPING REMAINS MYSTERY

Little Gina Corsi's Father Willing to Pay Ransom.

Detroit—Mystery still shrouds the kidnaping of seven-year-old Gina Corsi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Corsi, after a week of painstaking investigation and search.

Two full days after the father received two telephone calls advising him that his daughter was safe and that he would receive a letter with full information, no communication had been received by the anxious parents.

A week-ago the child, playing in a sand pile near her father's confectionery store, was seized and carried away by a stranger described by the girl's little playmates as "awful looking." The other children, Iolane Biclo, 10 years old, and Mary Zola, 7 years old, both shrunk from the stranger's searching gaze and ran away, but Gina did not see him before he picked her up and carried her to his brown automobile, the children have told Gina's father.

Gina's father has said that he would be willing to pay a ransom or give up anything he has in order to get his little daughter back safely.

MOTOR SMASH IN U. P. KILLS 2

Two Others Seriously Injured As Car Skids Against Viaduct.

Marquette, Mich.—Two dead and two seriously injured was the toll of an automobile crash on the Marquette county road, when a roadster skidded, sideways swiped a concrete viaduct and turned over on its side.

The viaduct curve is regarded as the second most dangerous between Marquette and Negaunee. The road is of macadam construction, which, with a heavy downpour of rain, is believed to have caused the car to skid when the driver of the car applied the brakes.

HERRIOT TAKES PREMIER POST

New French Cabinet Will Be Formed By Socialist Radical.

Paris—Edouard Herriot, radical socialist, and one of the commanding leaders of the dominant left bloc, which forced ex-President Alexandre Millerand from office, has accepted the premiership of France, and agreed to form a cabinet.

The new cabinet will be composed of members of the Herriot wing of the Left bloc parties. This will give the Left bloc political group complete control of the government, from the national executive to the chamber of deputies.

MARKET REPORT

FURNISHED BY U. S. BUREAU OF MARKET RESEARCH, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Fruits and Vegetables

New potatoes showed generally lower. North and South Carolina cobbler sold mostly at $3.50@4.25 per bbl. $3 to $3.25 f. o. b. shipping points. Virginia $3 to $3.50 f. o. b. New York and Baltimore. Alabama and Louisiana Triumphs $2.25@2.50 sacked per 100-lb. in mid-western markets. $1.50@1.75 f. o. b. California cantaloupes, declined sharply. $1.25@1.50 per bushel. $1.25@1.50 f. o. b. Florida Tom Watson watermelons, 22 to 25 lb. average, $1.50@2.00 per crate. New York, best mostly $1.50 f. o. b. Maryland strawberries various varieties slightly weaker at $2 to $2.50 per bushel. Michigan strawberries $1.50@2.00 per bushel. 13c quart basis in New York. Premiers $2.00@2.30 per 32 quart crate to growers.

Live Stock and Meats

Chicago hog prices ranged from 5 to 20c lower than a week ago, closing at $13.50@14.00 for top and $13.00@13.50 for bulk, medium and good beef steers steady to 15c lower at $17.75@18.75; butcher cows and heifers steady to 25c higher at $5.25@5.50; light and medium wt. veal calves 50c to $1 higher at $4.25@4.75; fat lambs steady to 25c lower at $12@14.50; spring lambs steady to 15c lower at $11 to $17.10; yearlings 50c lower at $9.25@12.25; fat ewes steady to 25c higher at $4.50@5.25.

Dairy Products

Butter markets unsettled and nervous during the week and no more than steady at the close. Stocks cleared fairly well despite fact that many of the items that are in demand were still too high to make storing a safe investment.

Wheat Market

Wheat market continues very firm but further price gains of importance not expected at present as crop damage is thought to be discounted in recent advance. Harvesting began in Oklahoma. Weather continues unfavorable for corn and market firm. Oats slightly lower.

Markets continue generally firm

Markets continue generally firm for timothy because of light receipts. Arrivals increasing at Philadelphia, Alameda and these markets slightly easier. Alfalfa markets inactive. Considerable hay moving direct by growers in southern to western trade. Quality improving at markets mostly poor. Prairie market fairly steady.

"Churchyard" is Older

Both the word cemetery and the word churchyard have been used for many centuries in England. The word cemetery was originally applied to the catacombs in Rome. It is found as early as 1867 in England. The word churchyard, on the other hand, appears in the old English chronicles at about the year 1154.

THE YOUNG ROBINS

Mrs. Robin was raising her first family, and she was so worried for fear they would not all be plump and well that she worked her poor little self all but to death.

"Better take it easy," warned Grandma Robin from a twig above. "You will have plenty more to care for, you know, so why work so hard over this family, when there is no need for it?"

"But don't you see how dependent they are?" asked Mrs. Robin, with a worried look as she fluttered and bobbed about the nest full of wide-open mouths. "They have never eaten anything but the nicest worms and if

"Oh, Look at Brother Robin."

I do not hunt and get the very best they won't eat them. These children are different from most birdlings, you must see that."

"No, I do not," replied Grandma Robin. "They are like all others. They will let you take care of them and demand the very best of everything as long as you are silly enough to do it. It is time they were leaving the nest and hunting worms and bugs for themselves. Take my advice and push them out," and off flew Grandma Robin over the road to the woods.

"Oh, how can she be so heartless," chirped poor tired Mrs. Robin. "Push my darlings out of the nest! Indeed I shall do no such thing. These children are so different from most birds! They must be given especial care, but I must admit I am so tired I cannot look for another worm."

"Mrs. Robin tucked her sleepy little head under her wing and went to sleep, and her wide-mouthed children looked at her in astonishment.

"We are hungry," they piped. "We want more fat worms." But their mother was too soundly sleeping to hear them.

One bold birdling stretched his neck and squirmed himself to the top of the nest. Then he stood on the side of it and lifted his wings a little.

"Oh, look at Brother Robin!" chirped one. "He is going to fly."

All the little ones began to stretch and squirm now and the next thing Robin knew he was sitting on a lower limb of the tree, feeling a bit shaky. He had been pushed off the nest.

Pretty soon the others tried their wings and when Mrs. Robin opened her eyes a little later there was not a birdling in the nest.

"Oh, my babies!" she began to cry. "Something has carried them off."

"Hush!" chirped Grandma Robin, who had returned and was watching the birdlings. "Don't you see them down on the ground? They are finding worms for themselves. They have just been fooling you, my dear."

"Oh, you clever little things," chirped Mrs. Robin, flying down to her children. "You are the smartest birdlings in the world. How did you learn to fly?"

"We were hungry," piped the children. "Besides, we want to see the world." And up they flew and into the woods.

Mrs. Robin began to cry and down flew Grandma to console her. "Go back to your nest and lay some more eggs," she said. "Didn't you fly away from your mother and her nest and build one for yourself and Mr. Robin?"

"Yes, of course," replied Mrs. Robin through her tears. "But my children were so different from other birdlings. I didn't think they would leave me."

"No mother does," said Grandma Robin. "This was your first family. After you have raised a few more you will get used to it and find out, too, that all children are just as you were. You let your mother feed you and the first chance you had to try your wings away you flew."

"I never thought of that before," replied Mrs. Robin.

"No one ever does until their first brood leaves the nest," answered wise Grandma. "That is the way we understand some things: Experience is a hard teacher, but a clever one."

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRDING KING

A VISITOR'S FIRST CALL

IN SOME parts of the country it is a superstition that if you do not offer a visitor when he first calls upon you some refreshment, even if it is only a drink of water, you will soon be enemies; whereas if you do and your visitor will, thereafter, be friends.

This is an inheritance from our ancestors of the long-vanished ages with whom—as with the nomadic Arabs of today—it was the custom to give refreshment to the wandering stranger who came in peace to the tent if the tent-dweller was disposed to be friendly. And the breaking of bread together was the sign of a bond of friendship. But if the refreshment was refused, the traveler naturally became the enemy of the churchly tent-dweller, and the tent-dweller was his. And so, down through the centuries there grew up in different phases of civilization the custom of eating bread and salt together as a bond of amity. "It have eaten your bread and your salt; I have drunk of your water and wine," sings Kipling. Afternoon tea-tables are not, as a rule haunted by this superstition—but you will find it in existence in many rural districts.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: Looks well fed, he's sleek, round and deliberate—a little over-fat, puffs a little even without his stogie. He's been told he must diet—but you never notice it. He says: "Of course I can't diet in company; it's too immodest." He likes his own sense of wit and food—it off goes together when the food is good! Says probably when he gets married he'll diet.

IN FACT

Diet will be his king of indoor sports.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

ALMA

THE fortunate possessor of the name of Alma may practically choose her own derivation, unlike her sisters who have the source of their appellatives thrust upon them. For Alma has three distinct meanings, and her origins are likewise threefold. The first significance which etymology gives her is "fair," from the Latin alim employed in the term "alma mater."

Alma's second source of existence is in old Erse poetry, where the name meant "all good" and was bestowed by those fond parents who favored fanciful appellatives. But that was before September, 1854, when the Crimean river named the Russian babes. Thus Alma came to signify "from the river," and has since been attributed to Russia, though much used in England, and finding even greater vogue in Germany. Indeed, it is generally regarded as a purely Teutonic name, so common is its usage in that country.

The topaz, or "chrysolite of sunrise," as Shelley called it, is Alma's talismanic stone. Because it shines in the mines at night, lighting the miners, it is said to dispel gloom, foreboding and pessimism, and to drive away all evil if set in gold and worn on the left arm. Tuesday is Alma's lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

White Pine Blister Rust Is Injurious

Disease Is Attacking Trees in All Growing Sections.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

White pine was once our most important timber crop, holding top place in lumber production from 1820 to 1860. It is now down to fifth place, and unless owners of this timber take precautions the ravages of the white pine blister rust will drag it down to a position of still less importance. This disease is now attacking white pines in all the important regions where it grows in this country—New England, the Lake states and the Pacific Northwest. There are eight native white pines in the United States, including the eastern white pine, western white pine, sugar pine, limber pine, whitebark pine, Mexican white pine, fox-tail pine, and the bristle-cone pine. The Himalayan white pine and the stone or cembrian pine have been introduced from Europe and are to be found to some extent in parks and cemeteries. All of these pines, the native and introduced varieties, are susceptible to the blister rust.

Since currant and gooseberry bushes are the intermediate hosts of this disease of the white pine, the way to protect the pines is to destroy all of the bushes in the pine timber or near it. This is the only practical method. The spores of the rust cannot be transferred directly from one pine tree to another and produce the disease. They must first and a live gooseberry or currant leaf to grow on, and the spores formed there will infect the pines. The United States Department of Agriculture is carrying on campaigns for the uprooting of the currant and gooseberry bushes in white pine regions. Last year the cost of this work averaged 18 cents an acre, but the department says that it would pay even if the cost should mount up to $2 an acre.

Pasture for Swine Will Lessen Cost of Feeding

Numerous experiments have proven that pasture will greatly lessen the cost per hundred pounds of raising hogs over dry-lot feeding. Not only will they grow faster and make cheaper gains, but they will be healthier and will not so easily fall victim to many diseases to which hog flesh is heir.

The hog is a natural grazing animal, as is the cow, and it should be treated as such. Alfalfa, clover and blue grass make the best permanent pastures. About 20 hogs can be allowed per acre though they must be ringed so they will not destroy it by rooting. Temporary forage crops which will give fine results are rape, sudan grass, soy beans, even growing oats, if nothing better can be had. White hogs are sometimes liable to sunburn in rape pasture.

While they are on pasture they must be given other feed, however, for the pasture only serves to supplement this feed. Hogs should be fed corn and tankage in self-feeders at all times with plenty of fresh water. They will not eat nearly as much tankage, though, when on pasture as in the dry lot.

Operation of Incubator Is Outlined by Purdue

Purdue university gives the following suggestions for the operation of an incubator.

For successful incubation, eggs should not be held more than 10 days before setting.

During incubation eggs require a uniform temperature, moisture supply and fresh air.

Temperatures between 100 and 103 degrees give the best results.

Moisture and ventilation are determined by the size of air cells in the egg or the pounds loss in weight of eggs during incubation. This loss should be from 10 to 12 per cent of the original weight of eggs by the end of the eighteenth day.

Cooling of eggs is not necessary if the ventilation of the egg chamber is satisfactory.

The eggs should be turned twice each day after the second day until after the eighteenth.

FARM FACTS

Rape is one of the most valuable forage crops for sheep grazing purposes.

"Do you own a good farm," is less important than "Does your farm own a good farmer?"

Nothing is better for poultry than skim milk, and it takes the place of meat, to a great extent.

A cement walk leading to the poultry house wins a smile of appreciation from the lady-of-the-house.

A couple of large bins in the poultry house to hold a supply of grain and ground feed save many steps.

Do not spade in sawdust or shavings. They form breeding nests for insects and fungus pests and are of little fertilizing value.

Wise farmers are agreed that profitable, permanent farming requires the use of some legume crop—alfalfa, sweet clover, and soy beans being among the most prominent.

SUCH IS LIFE

THE E-TERMAL ?
NO. BODY

An Evening Prayer

The service of the day is over and the hour come to rest. We resign into Thy hands our sleeping bodies, our cold hearths and open doors. Give us to wake with smiles, give us to labor smiling. As the sun returns in the East, so let our patience be renewed with dawn; as the sun lightens the world, so let our loving kindness make bright this house of our habitation.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

He Got His Hat

A young man who has lost his hat states that unless it is returned he will forward to the wife of the person who took it the note found concealed in the lining of the old one left in its place.

To the Swine

When nobody cares for our bright remarks, of course, we think of that old Bible saying about casting pearls.

Father Sage Says:

"Only too often the peepul who expect the most from others are least apt to be obligin' themselves."

Father Sage Says:

"It seems that every man engaged in a trade or profession a mite different from the common run looks on folks not familiar with his particular line as 'aymen,' an' speaks of them as sech. 'Waal, when ye come to figger it all put, everybody must be a layman to somebody else; so it ill behooves any man, no matter how skilled he may be in his own particular line, to hold too exalted an opinion of himself."

MAUDLIN

The rather distasteful word "maudlin," which means either drunken stupidity or tearful sentimentality, has an origin quite above its station. In reality, it is a contraction of "Mary Magdalen," whom artists depict as weeping continually. Although generally used as an adjective, maudlin is also a noun, which denotes a variety of yarrow of herb which grows in Europe. The pronunciation is "maud'lin."

A Verse Often Followed

Asked by her Sunday school teacher to give the Bible verse for that day's lesson, a little western girl replied: "Go ye into all the world and spread the gospel to all the people."—Boston Transcript.
