Girl Saves Boy Swimmer

Miss Esther Allen Swims Out Into Bay To Aid Friend.

[From Petoskey News]

Miss Esther Allen, of Galesburg, Ill., is a heroine. She has proven to the world that she has great presence of mind, steady nerve, and willingness to give her life if necessary to save a friend.

Sunday afternoon at the bathing beach in Bay View, Miss Allen swam about 40 rods out into Little Traverse Bay and saved from drowning Robert Munroe, of Detroit, as the young man was sinking for the third time.

A company of young people—employees of Bay View House were enjoying fine bathing Sunday afternoon at about 3:30 o'clock. Munroe had gone out some distance from shore when seized by cramps. His limbs were powerless and his arms nearly so. His cry for help, as he sank beneath the waves, startled the other members of the party into action. Rushing to the end of the wharf Miss Allen seized the life buoy and swam out into the lake. She headed straight for the spot where she had seen Munroe go down and reached it just as the young man was sinking for the third time deep into the lake. Friends joined her in reviving Munroe when they reached shore.

Miss Allen, modestly admitted to friends in Bay View Monday that she is a member of the Red Cross Life Guards. She is an able swimmer and very much at home in the water. Slight of build she swims with ease and develops a powerful stroke. Her feat of Sunday afternoon, Red Cross members say, proves the worth of that organization's efforts to teach swimming and life saving methods to as large a number of persons as possible throughout the country.

Left Behind

Money Orders Are Stolen

Postmaster Stroebel Receives Warning from P. O. Inspector

Postmaster Stroebel is in receipt of the following letter from the Postoffice Inspector of Chicago, warning against acceptance of stolen P. O. money orders.

Attention is directed to report of the theft of money order forms Nos. 32801 to 33300 inclusive, stolen from post office at Valier, Illinois, July 11th, 1924. Since the robbery a number of these forms have been filled out for from $10 to $25 each, and passed on merchants in northern Illinois cities, and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The party presenting same has used various names as payee and remitter. In only one instance has the order been presented at a post office.

The orders have all been presented by a man or woman, described as follows: The man is 30 to 35 years of age 5ft. 10 in. tall and weighs about 160 to 175 lbs., dark hair and eyes, the hair being thin on top. He is a smooth and pleasant talker, dresses neatly in a dark suit, and nearly everyone takes him for a traveling salesman. The woman is about 25 or 30 years of age, 5 ft. 6 or 7 in. in height, and weighs about 125 to 130 lbs. Black or dark blue gown. She has long dark hair and dark eyes.

This man and woman were last heard of at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and it is reasonable to believe they may continue in that State or in Michigan. Therefore you are requested to call the attention of merchants and banks in your city to their operations and, if possible, have the matter published in your local paper as a news item.

If anyone attempts to cash any of the above described money orders they should be turned over to the police, and the undersigned notified. Telegraph any information Government rate-collect.

Petoskey—While his wife and four children and other relatives and friends watched him in bathing, Charles Burnett, of Bay Shore, stepped off a ledge of limestone rock in Little Traverse bay, six miles west of here, and sank in deep water. His body was recovered by other bathers who succeeded in reaching shore after following Burnett over the ledge. Adrian—Immediate work on permanent improvement of the Chicago turnpike in northwestern Lenawee, a federal aid trunk line, has been promised, according to word received from State Highway Commissioner Frank R. Rogers. The highway commissioner and Governor Grosbeck recently inspected the road after a delegation of Lenawee county farmers had visited Lansing in protest against delay in improving the road, which has been graded since last fall, and at all times is in practically an impassable condition.

Sharks as Food

Sharks are an important article of food to the natives of Java. The dried and smoked flesh of the shark is eaten by the Chinese, while the shark fin which has been dried in the sun is also regarded as a delicacy, the fin containing a great amount of gelatin.

CIRCUS DAY AT PETOSKEY NEXT MONDAY

The day when persons living a few miles from a city in which a notable event was to take place, could not attend without enduring hardships and inconveniences in past and with the advent of the automobile, good roads and efficient train service, it is only a matter of an hour's pleasant ride to the city where one may take part in the pleasures which are offered.

The Haggenbeck-Wallace circus will attest to the statement that more persons in outlying districts attend its performances each season and a careful tab is kept on all out-of-town visitors because this circus takes pains to cater to the person who travels miles to witness its performances.

Circuses, it must be understood, can not make every city in the state in one season and sometimes it is a few years before the circus returns to a particular city, as other towns are anxiously awaiting its coming. Therefore, with this in mind the Haggenbeck-Wallace circus each year selects its route so as to make it convenient for the most people to travel to see it.

The idea of persons in nearby cities making up what they call "circus parties" and attending the show in a body is rapidly gaining favor each year, it has been found, and in many cases those who do not own automobiles form a small party and charter a car for the day.

The Haggenbeck Wallace circus, with its two menageries of trained wild animals, augmented by several scores of domestic animals, and its 450 performers, is scheduled to present an afternoon and evening performance in Petoskey on Monday, August 4th, in addition to a free street parade, more than one mile in length at 10:30 a. m. The wild animal act, as usual are featured on the 1924 tour, but the acts have been enlarged to include almost every species of jungle beasts who can be taught to perform.

Wild animal acts will take up one hour of the performance and the aerial, equestrian and hippodrome exhibitions will consume the other half, making a well balanced program.

The clown numbers have been greatly enlarged this year and fifty rollicking jockeys will be seen in action when the circus pitches its tent.

Many an old dog is willing to learn new tricks, but Mrs. Dog won't let him.

Detroit—Clubbed unconscious by an unknown assailant Wayne Turne, a United States parcel post distributor, suffered deep lacerations on his scalp and was robbed of between $300 and $400 in cash. Struck on the back of the head by a heavy object, just as he reached down to crank his machine, Turne remembered nothing, until he recovered in the hospital. A passing motorist noticed him lying by the road-side and notified the Highland Park authorities. His pockets were left turned inside out.

Grand Rapids—"Noiseless street cars" will be tried out by the Grand Rapids Railways Co. which is preparing to replace the 58 cars destroyed in a fire which razed one of its car barns. The new cars are equipped with a brake band like an automobile and with roller bearings and are designed to move over the rails and to be brought to stops with a minimum of noise. To maintain normal service, a number of cars have been borrowed from Saginaw for use until new cars are delivered.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

TRAVELING AND SEEING

A THIRTY Priscilla knew that in the little town where she had grown up flourished the fine flower of civilization. Her town happened to be "located," as her geography said, in the northeastern corner of the United States, and Priscilla went each winter to New York, or to Boston or to Philadelphia for two weeks. Once she had even been as far as Washington. But "travel," in the true sense of the word, was too expensive. Priscilla had been brought up not to spend her income. Moreover, Miss Elizabeth, who lived with her mother down the street and was Priscilla's model in all matters—Miss Elizabeth said that if one had "the seeing eye" one found at one's doorstep what many went across the world for and missed.

Then came Priscilla's invitation from her cousins in Florida to spend a month with them. So she rented her house and went. At Richmond, there boarded the train a family of returned missionaries from China, a mother and father and seven children; and Priscilla, whose section was next theirs, fell into conversation. She had, of course, read of armed guards and revolutions; but never before had she talked as an equal with anyone who had been under arrest. It made her feel excited. Then someone told her that the little brown bushes stuck over with white that she had been watching for a half day were cotton, and a kind of scared sense of great experience crept upon her. The negro cabins of the Carolinas, and the mules, and later the hanging moss and sugar cane of Georgia, made her feel positively Don Juanish. And then came Florida.

To Priscilla, who had never seen anything older than Plymouth Rock, the Sixteenth century town was a revelation of another world. The white coquina walls with the crimson splashes of the poinsettia blossoms, the orange trees and the fragrant yellow roses, the mocking birds, and the blue water and skies, gave her an actual sensation of growing—the top of her head seemed to have expanded—it was as if windows had been opened in a close room.

Then one day came a letter from Miss Elizabeth. Priscilla seemed to see Miss Elizabeth out there on the plaza under the palm-trees among the sisters on their way to mass in the red-roofed cathedral. Miss Elizabeth was fifty, but Priscilla suddenly felt twenty years her elder. Next year Priscilla would go to China. She would save and sell and spend and see the world. She felt as if she had to make up for Miss Elizabeth and for all others who had deliberately and permanently dug themselves in. She would acquire the habit of travel.

Cow Raised on Roof

Animals are kept on the roofs of the houses in Lima, Peru, and it frequently happens that a cow passes her whole life on a roof, being taken there as a calf and brought down finally as fresh beef.

Ah, Yes!

What a fine world this would be if those who have money would use it as those who haven't money think they would use it if they had it, which they wouldn't.

Music Lures Fishes

Additional evidence that fishes are able to hear has been produced by a German scientist. He fed blind fishes to a musical accompaniment. After the sixth day of this treatment the fishes always came up to the surface when the whistle blew. Once learned, the trick was never forgotten, the fishes always appearing on time during a thirty-day test.

STEEL CHIMNEY CRASHES TO STREET

DETROIT PICNICKERS CRUSHED UNDER 10 TON SECTION AS IT TOPPLES OFF BUILDING.

FOUR KILLED, ONE DIES LATER

Boy 12 Miraculously Escapes Death While Others in the Same Car Are Ground Lifeless.

Detroit—Four members of a gay picnic party were killed and one was so seriously injured that she died later, when a 10-ton steel smoke stack, toppling from the roof of the Charlevoix Building, fell 12 stories and crushed the automobile in which they were riding, in Elizabeth street near Park avenue, last Wednesday evening. One escaped unhurt. An unoccupied coupe, standing at the curb, also was crushed.

The chimney, of quarter inch steel, filled with soot and rotted by rust, was worked loose from its base by the wind, snapped the supporting guy wires and fell in two sections to the street below. The portion of the stack which hit the automobiles was 10 feet in diameter, 20 feet long, and bell-shaped. The lower half fell immediately after the upper, and narrowly missed persons who rushed to the aid of the victims in the automobile.

Those killed were: Mrs. Minnie Leigh, George Leigh, Ernest Morey, Mrs. Ernest Morey.

Mrs. Genevieve Leigh, 19 years old, wife of George Leigh, was taken to Receiving Hospital, severely crushed and bruised. She died later.

Wesley, 12-year-old son of Mrs. Morey, and brother of Ernest, who was sitting in the front seat of the car with Leigh, the driver, escaped unhurt, although the top of the machine was smashed around his head and shoulders.

George Leigh purchased his car, a five passenger touring model, a few weeks ago, and it was he who proposed the picnic Wednesday night at Belle Isle. It was to be a family affair. Leona Morey, 17 years old, and Mildred McChesney, of Buffalo, a cousin, preceded Leigh to the island in the car of Arol Greene.

Leigh started through town to make some purchases at a store, and driving east in Elizabeth street, stopped at Park avenue on account of the traffic. As he pulled up even with a small coupe parked at the curb, there was a terrific crash and persons nearby saw the great steel stack strike the coupe and then fall sideways on top of the Leigh car, crushing it to the pavement.

The owner of the coupe, Dr. B. J. Connelly, had just left his car, and on hearing the noise ran back and started to pull one of the bodies from the car. A cry from a man across the street caused him to run close to the side of the building just as the second section of the stack fell, nearly hitting the automobile again, and narrowly missing a large passenger bus parked across the street.

MURDER WAVE HITS CHICAGO

Crime Commission Warns of New High Record; 6 Slain in 12 Hour Period.

Chicago—With six persons killed in a 12-hour period and a 3-year-old girl shot to death by her brother, the Chicago crime commission issued a warning recently that this city is well on the way towards establishing a new high record for murder this year.

Characterizing the situation as "appalling," the commission called upon the police department, the sheriff's office, the coroner, the state's attorney and the judges of the criminal court to co-operate at once in an effective campaign to stem the rising tide of homicide.

The report points out the fact that there was a murder a day last month. Of 177 persons slain during the half year ending June 30, the cases of 41 were still unsolved.

"The trend in murder is upward," the commission states. "There were more murders in January (35) than in any January for five years preceding. The February record (26) was proportionately the same. March (24) was surpassed only by the record of 1919. April (33) again saw all recent previous records for that month exceeded.

"In May the murder rate (27) was higher than for the same month in four years. Chicago's murder rate in June (30) was the highest for any June in six years—not excepting 1919, when conditions were so bad that necessity compelled the organization of the crime commission."

Armed Quarantine on Anthrax.

The outbreak has been traced to Arkansas, where the mules which had died of anthrax were thrown into the river.

LAPEER TEACHER BRUTALLY KILLED

LEFT SCHOOL TO GO VISIT CHILDREN, DOES NOT APPEAR, SEARCH REVEALS DEATH.

UNCLAD BODY IS MUTILATED

Took Short Cut to Save Time, But Life Is Cut Short By Mysterious Person Who Has Not Been Found.

Lapeer, Mich.—A pair of cheap cuff links found near the bound, unclad and mutilated body of Mrs. Blanche Burke, attractive 29-year-old widow found dead in a woods a mile and a half south of here, recently, gave Lapeer county authorities their sole clue in their hunt for the slayer.

The cuff links were of a make sold in a shop largely patronized by inmates of the Michigan Homes and Training school, a state institution for the feeble-minded located near here. Mrs. Burke was an employe of the school for three years following the death of her husband.

Mrs. Burke left her rooms at the school Saturday noon to go to the home of Mrs. Albert Pierce, on the DeMille road. She was accustomed to spending the week-end with her two children, whom she had placed under Mrs. Pierce's care after the death of her husband.

As the hour grew late and Mrs. Burke did not appear, Mrs. Pierce became worried. She learned that Mrs. Burke had left the school and became more apprehensive. Calling E. J. Walker, superintendent of the state school farm, to aid her, she started a search.

The two patrolled the DeMille road several hours in vain. Finally they noticed that the deep grass leading into a woods had been tramped down as if a bag of meal or a body had been dragged over it.

Following the trodden grass trail, the two came upon the body in a little glade. Mrs. Burke's arms and legs had been bound with her clothing. Other articles of dress had been stuffed into her mouth. The remainder of her clothing was nearby. Her pocketbook, intact, was found under a clump of bushes.

She was not held up, and beaten into submission at her refusal to give up her money, officers argue, for her money and pensions vouchers were found still carefully folded in her purse.

Tom Burke, brother of her husband, said he had warned her against coming down that road. The trail, officers openly hinted, was leading across the low-lying fields and rail fences to the great rambling brick colony of the hill, where Michigan cares for its mentally deficient.

Mrs. Burke during the years she had worked at the home, never permitted her children to come there, it is said. Joy and James, two sturdy young chaps lived at the home of Mrs. Albert Pierce, two miles from the school—by the road. Mrs. Burke didn't take the road. She had become too well accustomed to the short cut across the fields and on the lane, bordered on either side by heavy bushes.

It was that lonely path that meant a half-mile and 15 minutes—perhaps that she should spend with her children—which she traveled once too often. Crushed bushes, sploshed here and there with blood, trampled grass, and her mutilated body tell her story. She laughed at her brother-in-law's warnings, she trusted as she was trusted.

RUSSIAN DIVORCES $1.50 EACH

Can Be Obtained in 5 Minutes; Remarriages Limited to 3 Per Year.

Moscow—Soviet Russia offers far more advantages to persons seeking easy and quick divorces than perhaps any place in the world. Under a new decree a divorce can be had within five minutes at a cost of $1.50, provided both parties agree to the dissolution of the marriage ties. If, however, one party objects to dissolution, the case must be referred to the courts, which will decide the question on its merits.

Misconduct does not constitute a valid reason for the annulment of marital ties, but desertion, religious superstition, excessive religious piety, incompatibility of temperament and divergence in political views are held to be sufficient causes. No Russians may obtain a divorce and remarry more than three times within one year.

In consequence of the flexibility of the soviet civil code covering domestic relations, divorces in the Moscow district increased by 45 per cent during the first six months of 1924 as compared with 1923.

Each One's Quota 21 Pounds Oranges.

Washington—The citrus fruit supply after deduction of exports, was enough to allow 21.9 pounds of oranges, 6.5 pounds of grapefruit and 3.7 pounds of lemons for the consumption of each person in the United States last year. According to estimates there was a total supply of 34,893,000 boxes of oranges, 8,168,000 boxes of grapefruit and 6,199,000 boxes of lemons, but exports amounted to 2,294,000 boxes of oranges, 281,000 boxes of grapefruit, 182,000 of lemons.

Millinery Mode Approves White Silk Bengaline

The vogue for heavy corded silk finds charming expression in the cheapeau made of heavy white bengaline. The sectional crown as shown in the picture is a favorite for this little hat of corded white silk. There are some outstanding points of especially smart significance in this model. One is, that the bengaline covers a firm foundation, rather than being a soft sports type. The narrow side band is an unusual feature. Silver ribbon is a very important factor in millinery this season. It lends its charm to this model and an added touch of attractiveness is the white feather brush darting out from beneath the wee brim. In some instances white bengaline silk is combined with silvery white artificial satin, the fabric alternating in the sectional crown.

Keep a Lookout

It is too late to be on our guard when we are in the midst of evils.—Seneca.

The Poet

For poetry was all written before time was, and whenever we are so finely organized that we can penetrate into that region where the air is music, we can hear those primal warblings and attempt to write them down, but we lose, ever and anon, a word or a verse and substitute something of our own, and thus miswrite the poem.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Insects Dire Pest

In the Canary Islands insects, ants and similar pests are more than an ordinary nuisance, as residents of the northern countries understand such things. In the islands ants are so prevalent in places as to destroy furniture, clothing and foodstuffs. They are an eighth of an inch long. Likewise roaches are very numerous. The result is that the islands offer a great market for insecticides.

Braying Birds

Birds that bray were recently discovered in South America on an expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History. The birds' note sounds like that of a jack-ass, and the "bass songsters" live in the dense jungles with parrots, humming birds and woodpeckers. The fact that they are of the penguin type is mystifying, as penguins were thought to inhabit mostly the antarctic wastes.

The average deliberate person will talk at the rate of 75 words a minute.

Here is an East Jordan case that the years haven't changed. Why not profit by it?

Mrs. Wm. Harrington, says: "I was troubled with dull, nagging backaches and distressing pain through my kidneys. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Doan's Pills relieved the backache and corrected my kidneys." OVER TEN YEARS LATER, Mrs. Harrington added: "I haven't needed a kidney medicine since Doan's Pills cured me years ago." Parrots Don't Talk

Parrots, in a true sense of the word, do not talk, but have a great facility for imitating sounds of the human speech, and some species learn to say words and even phrases.

The Moving Mystery

No one has ever discovered the secret of perpetual motion, although, scientifically, nothing in existence is ever still. In other words, nature alone knows the way to keep things moving.

BEECH-NUT CHEWING TOBACCO

BEECH-NUT Chewing Tobacco is the perfect form in which tobacco should be used.

Cultivation Is Very Important

Feeding Roots of Plants Must Be Given Chance to Penetrate Soil.

All the fertilizer in the world without proper cultivation won't make a good garden. If a gardener expects to have a garden without cultivating early and often, he will be disappointed. He might as well give up at the start. Cultivation not only acts as a fertilizer, but saves fertilizer. It also saves water bills in dry weather.

The first object of cultivation is to secure tilth—that is a fine powdery condition of the soil so that when turned over it will fall apart easily and not separate into big, soggy lumps that need to be hammered to be broken. It is apparent that the small feeding roots of plants can penetrate and secure their food much more readily in a well-tilled, friable soil than in a heavy, lumpy, soggy one.

Cultivate Every Week. The garden should be gone over and cultivated once a week. By this is meant not only the destruction of weeds but the stirring of the soil about the plants. Cultivation should be done after a rain, as soon as the soil has dried out enough so as not to be lumpy and stick to the tools. This would result only in a lumpy condition. Cultivation just before watering in dry times will also tend to make the soil lumpy. Cultivate after watering to keep the moisture in the ground. There is a right time to cultivate and it will pay a gardener to study the soil until he recognizes the condition which will permit fine cultivation as soon after a rain or after watering as possible.

Cultivation helps to retain moisture in the soil by establishing a thin covering of finely divided soil often called a dust mulch. This does not evaporate moisture as rapidly as a closely packed surface nor does it act as a sponge to draw up moisture from below as rapidly as does firm and unstrutted soil. Drawn to the surface by capillary attraction the sun and winds soon take moisture away. Cultivate more frequently in dry than wet weather. An inch or two in depth is sufficient. It will let air into the soil to keep it sweet and keep the moisture from escaping.

Morning Best Time. The best time for cultivating is early in the morning to conserve such moisture as has descended during the night and prepare for the sun and winds during the day. The common hoe and the rake are excellent tools for this purpose in small gardens, but to make a good job of it in gardens of any size, a wheel hoe should be brought into action. You can go over the garden in a hurry and it can be cultivated twice or more times in the time it would take to go over it once with a hoe besides saving the weariness and backache that follow swinging a hoe for any length of time.

Bees Quite Valuable to Many Growers of Fruit

Commercial beekeepers of today move their bees many times each year to keep them busy making honey after the honey flow slows down in one location. To move a colony of bees care must be taken to give them plenty of air, as the jarring and excitement cause them to create a great amount of heat. This excess heat will melt the combs and honey. By removing the lid of the beehive and nailing a screen on top of the hive in place of the lid the bee man will give this heat a chance to escape. The bees should be moved on a cool night if possible. In some fruit districts the fruit growers pay the beekeepers 50 cents a colony and move them besides to their orchards, to pollinate the fruit bloom. There are many fruit and berry yields that would be raised at a loss if it were not for the bees pollinating the flowers.

Mow Pastures Regularly to Prevent Weed Growth

The pasture should be mowed regularly to prevent any weeds from going to seed. If a pasture is mowed regularly for two seasons, the majority of weeds will be eradicated. Mowing will not only prevent many weeds from going to seed, but it will reduce the low shade in the pasture and thus give the native grasses and legumes plenty of sunlight and a chance to grow, says S. L. Jeffords, forage crops specialist at Clemson college, who insists that one mowing will not do and that to get thicker and better stands of the desirable grasses and legumes the mowing must be regular.

Spray Best for Tubers

In comparative experiments with Bordeaux mixture applied as a dust and as a spray for the control of late potato blight at the Rhode Island experiment station, the yield from the dusted plants was only 70 per cent as much as from the plants which were sprayed.

Other Good Silo Crops

Corn is used more extensively for filling silos than any other crop and gives the best results where it can be grown most successfully, but other crops, as kafir, alfalfa, clover, peas, sweet sorghum and Russian sunflower can be used for this purpose.

CROSSING ACCIDENT KILLS 10

New York Central Train Crashes Into Truckload of Plenickers. Oak Harbor, O.—Ten persons were killed and 10 others were injured, some seriously, when a New York Central passenger train crashed into an automobile truck at a grade crossing outside this village, which is 20 miles east of Toledo. There were 28 persons in the truck. They had been on a day's outing at Sand Beach, on Lake Erie, and were returning to their homes when the accident happened. It was 6:45 o'clock when the crash occurred. Eye witnesses of the accident declared the driver of the car had stopped the machine at the railroad crossing, gone ahead to scan the tracks and apparently had failed to see the approaching train. He is said to have gotten back into the truck and driven onto the tracks directly ahead of the train, which was bound for Toledo from Cleveland. The train struck the truck squarely in the middle and hurled the occupants more than 100 feet, it was said. Some of the bodies are said to have been mangled almost beyond recognition.

NECESSITY OF RADIO ARGUED

Wisconsin Farmers Bring Suit Against Power Company. Milwaukee—How essential to the farmer is the radio? How much is he entitled to if the high powered transmission lines of an electric company interfere with his receiving crop and market reports, concerts, speeches and other entertainments on the radio? These are the unusual questions Judge E. T. Fairchild will attempt to answer, as the result of a suit filed against an electric company here by farmers living between Milwaukee and Whitewater. The company is conducting condemnation proceedings for the purpose of erecting transmission lines. The farmers claim the lines will "cripple" their radios and ask that damages be assessed. Soy Beans Superior for Fattening Pigs

Crop Makes Good Hogging Combination With Corn.

High-yielding soy beans of such seed varieties as Manchu have an assured place in fall finishing of fattening pigs, in the light of recent tests at Iowa State college. The leafy varieties, such as are used for hay or silage, are not as well adapted to hog forage as such crops as alfalfa, clover or rape. These tests indicate. Common farm practice, particularly in hogging down corn, would support this view. Soy beans make a strong combination with corn for hogging down if a mineral mixture, such as wood ashes (or limestone), acid phosphate (or bone-meal) and salt, is used. In the Iowa tests the pigs, weighing about 120 pounds at the start, averaged in gain 1.45 pounds daily till they went to market, when fed corn, tankage and minerals (all self-fed) on pasture of Manchu soy beans; and they ate only 845 pounds for each 100 pounds gain in weight. The mineral mixture was made from 40 pounds spent bone black, 40 pounds limestone and 20 pounds salt.

Soy beans for forage did not prove as efficient as rape for pigs in these Iowa tests. Soy bean hay varieties made a poor economical showing. Soy beans do not have as long a growing season, are not as palatable and are more easily killed by frost as compared with clover, alfalfa or Dwarf Essex rape. These last-named forages fit in best for spring and mid-summer hog pasture, while a good seed variety of soy beans fills the need for fall finishing, balancing up the corn economically when minerals are fed in addition.

Silo Is Cheap and Best Means of Providing Feed

The silo is the best and cheapest means of providing succulent feed not only for winter, but as a supplement to short pastures during the long, dry summer months, according to the Missouri College of Agriculture, which states in a recent bulletin: It is the cheapest farm building that can be erected. It will house feed at lower cost per pound than hay or roughage can be protected from the weather by barn or hay mow. It increases the producing capacity of the farm at least 10 per cent and will often increase its stock-carrying capacity 25 per cent. It is the cheapest and most effective method of storing. It is the cheapest place to store the corn crop, and, in fact, one of the silo's greatest advantages is the possibility it affords of utilizing all of the corn crop. An acre of corn can be placed in the silo at a cost not exceeding that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding and will preserve more nutrients and will produce more milk per acre than any other system of handling the crop. It saves a third of the value of the corn crop that is otherwise largely wasted. It supplies feed at less labor and there is less waste of fodder by cows.

Cutworms Destroyed by Poisoning With Mixture

Cutworms in gardens can be destroyed by poisoning them with poisoned bran mash. This material is prepared in small quantities for garden use by thoroughly mixing one ounce of paris green or white arsenic with one pound of bran. To this is added three ounces of syrup, one and one-half pints of water, and one-fourth of an ounce which is chopped up into small bits. As soon as the cutworms appear, sow or scatter this poison bran mash thinly along the rows or around the plants to be protected. Since cutworms generally feed at night, the best results will be had by putting this material out in the evening. Trouble travels in a circle and may hit you if you start it. Plant lice are poor snuff-takers. Three per cent nicotine dust is death to them. Time ever speeds onward. The minute you waste today is the minute you lose tomorrow. Which coat do you prefer on your exposed farm machinery? One of rust or one of grease? Often a little shrubbery and some flower seeds make a homely place into a homelike place—and there's a big difference. The planting of sweet clover in the cornfield at the time of last cultivation is likely, during a normal season, to give a successful pasture the following year. Cull the poultry flock early and get a money return from the culls before they run up expense for their feed. Profits in poultry now depend mainly on low cost of production. Only plants of the grass family are injured by chinch bugs. There is no variety of corn but what is attacked. Such crops as clovers, alfalfa, soy beans, cowpeas, beans, peas, potatoes, rape, and so on, are either entirely or practically immune from this pest.

PERSISTENCE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I FOUND the old man sitting by the roadside of an English country by-way breaking stones to be used in keeping the road in condition. I had seen him frequently as I passed to and fro to the village, but today I stopped a while to rest after my long walk and to talk to him. He had been a stone-breaker all his life, and he took not a little pride in the fact that the smooth level road over which I had traveled owed much to his labors. Great piles of rough stone lay along the highway—piles that suggested unending toil to me, but he seemed to regard them only as an opportunity. I took up one of the hammers that lay on the ground and tried my hand at the work with rather ill success. A few fragments were splintered from the rock, but it did not break. I was hitting too vigorously, he said; I was expecting to accomplish with one hard blow what it would take a half dozen or more to do; I wanted results immediately. "Time and patience," he said, "time and patience, and the stones finally yield, and the piles of broken stone grow."

I have thought of his philosophy often since. Impulsive youth finds it hard to wait; if results do not come in response to our first efforts, we grow irritated and discouraged and give up the task. If the construction in the translation seems involved, if the experiment fails in our first attempt, if we do not solve the problem or make the sale, or accomplish the task, the first time we hit it an intellectual blow, we have a tendency to throw down the hammer and say that the thing is too much for us. Most of us need a little more persistence. When I have worked with a man or a task or a problem for a long time and have got nowhere, when discouragement is about to overwhelm me, I often think of the old Englishman sitting by the roadside quietly and persistently hammering at the heavy stones. "Time and patience, time and patience, and the stones finally yield," he said, and I take courage as I recall him. If I work long enough at a thing, if we refuse to give up, we are likely to win. The real honest-to-goodness "timber wolf" which was shot and killed last week, by Solomon Francis, Indian youth of Middle Village, proved to be a German police dog, which was captured by the French during the World War and had been decorated with military honors, it is reported. This dog was owned by Mrs. R. T. Houk, Thurston Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, and was valued at $10,000. The dog had been trained from a pup and was considered one of the most valuable dogs in the world. Upon missing the dog, and hearing of the shooting of a supposed timber wolf, or coyote, the owners investigated, digging up the carcass and identified the hide. It is to be regretted that such a mistake was made, which resulted in the loss of so valuable and highly prized animal.

MONEY TALKS! IT SEL-RENEW MY PAPER!

SCHOOL DAYS

THE AFTERWHILES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MY DAD was queer about some things; I never heard him worry much. That other people lived like kings. While we had little such and such. I used to think our lot was hard. Because there wasn't much in sight; He said I wouldn't afterward— And he was right.

For, looking backward down the years, I seldom think of what we had. I just remember smiles and tears. And things like that—and mostly dad.

I don't remember who were poor, I don't remember who were rich; I can't remember now for sure— Just which was which.

You just remember joys and pains. You had together, that is all; Some simple memory remains. That makes mere money mighty small.

I just remember tears and smiles. The rest is lost to sense and sight. Dad said these made the afterwhiles— And dad was right.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

HEAPING MEASURES

IN OUR dealings with others, in our social contacts and communication, if we give heaping measure, whether it be good or evil, it will return some day before 'the' ending of our career, to cheer or depress us.

A kindly word spoken to a boy or girl, as he or she steps upon the threshold of life to do battle, is never forgotten, nor is the frown or the expletive that condemns and finds fault without reason.

The human heart keeps an accurate diary. It records events which in later life, as the yellowed pages are fingered, startle men and women out of their senses. The blots and tear-stains, the underscored sentences written so hastily, and sometimes boldly and defiantly, tell the tale of the years that are gone.

Mother and father, who chided us for our waywardness, never discontinued giving us heaping measures of love, which often in our irresponsible moments we rejected. Now that they are not with us, we understand their kindness and comprehend our own frailties.

Thinking of them in the morning when we shave our stubby beard, or apply the lip-stick and powder puff, we resolve to do good; and make everybody we meet brighter and happier. And usually we make a pitiful job of it.

We may become accustomed to the vagaries of our friends and acquaintances, and overlook their follies, but we can never accustom ourselves to the niggardly and those who give scant measure, even if we happen to be miserly ourselves.

In spite of his contemptible practices, the skinflint likes liberality from others.

He may sometimes look forward to the day when he shall be open-handed and smiling, but the day never arrives, as there are in his nature too many contrarities blocking the way.

All that is good, noble and beautiful comes from the beneficent hand that heaps the measure, and, in the future, the soul that prompts the hand shall reap a bountiful reward which no earth-made coin can buy. Heap your measure with love and kindness, top it off with smiles of cheer, then in the hour when the mean shall grovel in the darkness, you shall be glorified, at peace with yourself and with all the sons of men.
