

ZR-3 ARRIVES AT AMERICAN HOME

COMPLETES 5,086 MILE FLIGHT IN 81 HOURS AND 17 MINUTES.

ZEPPELIN WORKS MAY BE SAVED

Under Terms of Versailles Treaty Big Airship Factory Is Now to Be Dismantled.

Lakehurst, N. J.—The dirigible ZR-3, which will be rechristened "Los Angeles," built in Germany for the United States, under the terms of the Versailles treaty, arrived at the Lakehurst airdrome last week after a memorable flight across the ocean.

The ship's log recorded that she left Friedrichshafen, Germany, at 6:30 a. m., on Sunday, October 12, and arrived at Lakehurst Field 81 hours and 17 minutes later. She traveled in her single continuous flight a distance of 5,086 miles.

Thus the average speed of the ZR-3 for the whole distance was approximately 62.35 miles per hour.

With world acclaim over the achievement of the ZR-3 encouraging her, Germany is engaged in lively diplomatic action sounding the various capitals for possible intervention against the clauses of the Versailles treaty shackling Germany's aerial building and transportation and ordering in particular the destruction of a large part of the Zeppelin works, where the ZR-3 was built.

Air experts agree that as long as the Versailles treaty restrictions persist, the development of general European air service is impossible, because Germany, through her central position, is a key nation, and the small airships and airplanes permitted her are unprofitable to operate.

MICHIGAN RACE PILOT KILLED

Ansterberg Loses Control of Machine Speeding 106 Miles an Hour

Charlotte, N. C.—Speeding at a rate of 106 miles an hour on the new speedway which is to be inaugurated with a race meeting this week, Ernie Ansterberg, 31 years old, of Concord, Michigan, holder of the world's record for the fastest lap on a mile and a quarter board track, plunged to his death, the fifteenth automobile racer to die on the track this year.

In his first trial spin Ansterberg was seen to lose control suddenly. The wheels of his car locked and it slid for 200 feet to the fence, leaped the upper rail and fell, a mass of twisted steel.

Prominent among the pilots whose careers were suddenly ended in wrecks and smashups within the past few months were Jimmy Murphy, fatally injured Sept. 15 at the State Fair track, Syracuse, N. Y.; Dario Resta, killed Sept. 3, at Brooklands, England; Joe Boyer, of Detroit, fatally hurt in the Labor Day race at Alloua, Pa.; and A. L. Mulford, of Hollywood, Calif., killed at San Jose, Calif.

BORAH GETS CAMPAIGN FIGURES

G. O. P. Fund $1,747,317; La Follette's $190,535; Democrats Unknown

Chicago—The campaign fund of the Republican party on October 10 totaled $1,714,317, the largest fund collected by any party for this campaign, so far as the senate campaign fund investigation committee, headed by Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, could ascertain at its hearing here.

The LaFollette-Wheeler campaign fund on October 10 totaled $190,535. No complete information was available on the national fund of the Democratic party.

Lincoln Dixon, western manager for the Democrats, testified that he had received a total of $32,500 from New York and Washington headquarters of the party.

SHERIFF FIRES 1,400 DEPUTIES

Says Irresponsible Men Wearing Badges Necessitates Act

Detroit, Mich.—Letters signed by George A. Walters, sheriff of Wayne County, have been sent to the 1,400 special deputy sheriffs, instructing them to appear immediately at the sheriff's office in the county building and turn in their badges and special deputy sheriff papers. Sheriff Walters, in a statement said the presence of irresponsible men wearing badges made this step necessary.

Minnesota Potato Growers Organize

Minneapolis, Minn.—Organization of the Minnesota Potato Growers' Exchange, which has organized 32 county associations, has been completed and they have $5,000,000 in contracts covering this year's crop of potatoes. The contracts held by the exchange represent 18,000,000 bushels of potatoes, one of the largest crops in the history of the state. The fight to attract members, which began May 1, 1923, was completed March 1, 1924, with 12,000 members enrolled.

The Spirit of Protestantism

THE spirit of Protestantism exhibits itself in Love and Tolerance.

A true Protestant grants his fellow-citizen the right to differ as he himself claims that right.

Protestantism stands for certain definite principles, but it does not display intolerance towards those of opposite views.

A Protestant hopes that others may see as he does, but if they do not he still remains neighborly and fair. He does not resort to legislation to force his convictions upon others.

Protestantism is opposed to every type of tyranny over the minds and souls of men. It stands for freedom of conscience and religion. It stands for freedom of thought and speech. It stands for freedom to learn and teach.

It cannot agree to a dictatorship of religion or education without violating its traditional spirit.

It does not believe that the state should establish a monopoly in education.

All who believe in the true spirit of Protestantism will work and vote against the School Amendment, which seeks to give the state a monopoly in education.

Passion must not be permitted to destroy educational liberty, which is one of the best fruits of the Protestant Reformation.

NAMED ARMY LEGAL CHIEFTAIN

COLONEL JOHN A. HULL

Washington—Secretary of War Weeks has announced the appointment of Colonel John A. Hull as judge advocate general of the army, succeeding Major General Walter A. Bethel, who requested retirement on account of failing eye sight. The new appointment will become effective Nov. 15.

JAPAN WARNS CHINESE LEADERS

Reasserts Non-Interference Policy, Will Protect Interests.

Canton, China—Japan has sent a note of warning to headquarters of the warring Chinese factions in Peking and Mukden, which reasserted Japan's policy of non-interference in Chinese domestic affairs, but let it be known that Nippon was prepared to protect Japanese rights, lives and interests in Manchuria.

The entire city of Canton is being terrorized by mercenary troops attached to Sun Yat Sen's south China army, who have gotten out of control and are on a looting rampage. The greatest chaos prevails. Many portions of Canton were destroyed by fire, started in the fighting between troops of Sun and the Canton merchants' association's troops. Resisting Sun's efforts to end the merchants' strike. No Americans have been harmed.

Naval guards around the foreign settlements in Shanghai have been strengthened as an additional precaution to balance the influx of soldiers from the defeated Chekiang tribes into Shanghai and environs. Such soldiers are estimated to number 10,000.

AMERICANS WILL AID GERMANS

Paul M. Warburg Heads Corporation With $10,000,000 Capital.

New York—Announcement has been made of the formation of the American and Continental corporation, headed by Paul M. Warburg, chairman of the International Acceptance Bank, with an initial subscribed capital of $10,000,000, to provide capital to finance industrial enterprises in Europe, with particular reference, at present, to Germany.

One of the purposes of the corporation, it is announced, is to supply necessary interim financing for German industry until its loans can be replaced either through the accumulated savings in Germany, or through the sale of securities here or abroad.

A contemplated feature is an advisory body of banks and bankers in the countries whose industries are to be financed, and to have these bankers as partners. A group of German banks and bankers already has been formed to act in Germany.

TEACHER MURDERED WITH AXE

Rejected Suitor Confesses Slaying of Former Sweetheart

Grand Haven, Mich.—Egbert "Happy" Dyke, 34 years old, Grand Rapids automobile mechanic, has confessed, according to officers, that he killed his former sweetheart, Molly Fleming, 23 years old, Conklin school teacher, who was found lying in a woodshed at the rear of her school last week.

Miss Fleming, whose head was cut open with an axe, died without regaining consciousness sufficient to permit her to give an inkling of the circumstances of the assault.

Discovery of the crime was made by a group of children who had returned to the school ground to play.

May Reclaim 400,000 Acres in West

Washington—Six new western reclamation projects embracing more than 400,000 acres have been approved as feasible from an engineering, economic, agricultural and land development standpoint, by investigating committees whose reports have been made public by the Interior Department. The projects are in the Vale and Baker in Oregon, Kittitas in Washington, Owyhee in Oregon and Idaho, Salt Lake Basin in Utah, and the Spanish Springs in Nevada.

Give Credit where Credit is Due!

THREE per cent of Michigan's population of ten years and over cannot read or write. The nation's average is twice as high—six per cent.

Thirty states have more illiterates than Michigan.

There are 2,203 negro and 14,172 native white illiterates in Michigan.

These are United States Census Bureau figures. They disprove the claims of propagandists that there are more than one-half million people in Michigan who cannot read or write.

Michigan people are broadminded, tolerant, and educated. They are products of schools that are second to none in America.

Public, Private, and Church Schools have worked together in a program of state-wide education. Each deserves credit for the part it has played.

If Michigan were to adopt the School Amendment, private and church schools would have to be closed in less than nine months! Nearly 125,000 pupils would be thrown into an already overcrowded public school system. Chaos would prevail. Work would be disorganized. System would be destroyed. Taxes would go up.

Many children would be put on a part time basis.

Michigan's splendid record for literacy would be threatened.

Preserve our high standard of education by voting "NO!"

patient heart, the beautiful idle fingers and the whole drooping figure a look of infinite compassion.

"Gibbs, dear," she said, her tone quivering treacherously. "The reason was that George thinks he has new evidence."

"I knew he was trying to find some," Gibbs said wearily.

"You know, I'm so afraid of going into hysterics, or fainting, or something," Ellen said childishly. "That I want you not to say you don't believe me when I tell you something. Look at me dear," taking both his hands. "Look at me. Try to understand what I am saying. We think—we think—that—the murderer has confessed."

"You think!" he echoed, his tone suddenly harsh. "What do you mean? Don't you know?"

"We will know," she said, trembling. "We will know in a little while now. Gibbs, I'll tell you just how it all came about. Lizzie and Joe and Tommy came down from Bridgeport this morning, and it was while I was keeping Tommy quiet—for it's a long trip for a child—that he suddenly said something about grandpa. Lizzie and I were not listening exactly, but the words seemed to come back to me—as words do, you know, and I said, as quietly as I could, 'What did you say grandpa let you do?'

"He said, 'Fire his revolver.'" Ellen's words fell in a tense silence. Gibbs looked at her with awakening eyes.

"My God—my God!" he whispered. "Well, we looked at him, and I was so afraid I'd frighten him, or make him self-conscious, that I could hardly get any voice. But Lizzie asked him when this was, and he told us the whole thing. That he had wandered to the top of the stairs in his night-gown, and grandpa was walking across the lower hall; he had just put a telegram on the hall table, for Tom to take in the morning, and he called Tom down. Tommy said that he wanted to play with the chessmen, and he opened the table drawer—Gibbs, you would be amazed how clearly he told it! He said grandpa was sitting in that very chair, and Gibbs, he even took the attitude—! He said that he saw the pistol, and grandpa said, 'Take it out, Tommy, it's not loaded.'"

"He couldn't possibly have loaded it, dear, with dad looking on. And my father surely wouldn't have had it loaded—!"

"But, Gibbs, Lizzie had loaded it that morning!"

"G—d!" Gibbs said again, under his breath.

"And this part, Gibbs, is so strange! He fired it twice, your father di-to George, and to Tommy. Oh, Gibbs—Gibbs!" she broke off feverishly. "It's made me—I can't tell you—so nervous—I can't tell you—"

"I know!" he interrupted nervously. "We mustn't allow ourselves to think about it—!"

"Could a child Tommy's age testify, Gibbs?"

"I don't know, dear."

"And—if they believe this, does it mean a new trial?"

"It might, I don't know."

"We can only wait," Ellen tightened her fingers on his, and they sat silent.

A messenger came to the officer at the cell's door who spoke a moment later to Ellen. Would Mrs. Josselyn step into the warden's office a minute, to speak to Mr. Lathrop? Ellen, with one quick flutter of breath, smiled a goodbye to Gibbs and was gone.

In the warden's office she found George and the district attorney.

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Josselyn," Ryan said. Ellen, smiling faintly, tried to read his rosy, complacent face. "This is a most extraordinary turn of events," he said. "This little fellow had the secret up his sleeve all the time, eh?"

Ellen felt almost faint with the revelation this change in his manner gave her. Ryan had always been sharp, suspicious, menacing, before. She wanted to ask: "You believe it, then?" but quick intuition told her that that must wait. So she asked instead:

"Tommy talked, did he? He answered your questions?"

"He is an extremely intelligent child," Ryan remarked. "Gave his testimony like a little man. Nothing that we could say could shake him. We put him, through a pretty sharp half-hour. He stuck to it. I—won't deny that I think this changes the entire aspect of affairs, Mrs. Josselyn. I've already advised the sheriff to delay the transfer of Mr. Josselyn."

"There may be a new trial!" Ellen asked, trembling. For answer Daniel Ryan smiled at her, and there was something so kindly, so reassuring, in his eyes, that she felt as if a great weight had been lifted from her heart. Fate changed suddenly to love, and fear changed to confidence. Ellen experienced the most poignant of all human emotions.

"We may not even have it go to trial," George supplied.

"May not?" she echoed, choking.

"No," Ryan confirmed it. "There is no question for a jury. I don't know of a parallel case," he said thoughtfully. "But I should suppose that it would only be necessary to put this evidence before the court, with suitable testimony to its genuineness, to have the whole case dismissed!" He turned to the warden. "May we see Mr. Josselyn?" he asked, with the quiet manner of a man making a request sure to be granted.

Gibbs, followed by the inevitable guard, came in, and they turned to him. His silver crest was, as always, as smooth as satin, but he looked ill-groomed and haggard; worst of all, he looked beaten. There were lead-colored circles about his dark, anxious eyes, and his manner had uncertain nervous apprehensiveness that was unlike its old imperial certainty.

"Mr. Josselyn," Ryan said, "has your wife informed you that we have found some most important testimony bearing upon your case?"

"You regard it so, Mr. Ryan?" Gibbs said lifelessly.

"I regard it as more than important. I regard it as so vital that I feel free to congratulate you upon it, Mr. Josselyn, upon a miraculous escape from an error of the law. And I hope to God," Ryan added, "that we will soon find means to get you out of here!"

"I thank you," Gibbs answered briefly. But Ellen saw his lip tremble.

"Gibbs—my dear, dear boy!" George stammered, taking both his hands.

Ellen had a quick sensation of faintness and nausea. She looked bravely at George, and smiled waveringly.

"We—we mustn't be too sure—" she stammered. A moment later the harsh, whitewashed walls and the rodded doors, the warden's desk, and the tall, bare windows, vanished. She saw them all huddled together, like a picture in a bubble, and, like the bubble, suddenly became flecked with widening black spots. Then everything was black.

CHAPTER XVII

On a quiet September morning, about a year and a half later, a young man, his pretty wife and their very small baby got out of the long train of dusty pullman coaches at the dry, sleepy little California town of Los Antonios.

After a smiling survey of the scene, during which they were apparently entirely unnoticed, the man crossed the street to the bank, and asked a question of the teller.

"Sure you can; you can phone from here," said that delicate, blonde, mustached official pleasantly. "Phone Murphy's garage, and they'll take you up there. The Josselyns who have the old Perry place, isn't it? Sure, it's about six miles out of town, up in the hills." He meditated a second, and then, with a burst of interest, he added, "Say, Mrs. Josselyn was in here about a minute ago. Know her car? It must be right outside here."

And he obligingly stepped to the door with the newcomer, and looked up and down the street.

"That's the car," he said, indicating one that had been left empty before the post office door. "If you get in there and wait for Mrs. Josselyn she'll be right out of somewhere."

"I Can't Believe We're Here!" Joe Echoed Her Thought. "In a Few Minutes We'll See Her!"

Joe Latimer went across the street again, and took the baby from its mother's arms.

"That's Ellen's car, there!" he said, smiling nervously. Lizzie did not speak. Her cheeks were burning with excitement. "I can't believe we're here!" Joe echoed her thought. "In a few minutes we'll see her!"

"Oh, don't!" Lizzie said, faintly. With the baby on one arm, and the big suitcase in his free hand, Joe went to the waiting motor, and Lizzie, carrying the little suitcase, followed. He put his wife and baby in the tonneau, but was too nervous himself to join them there, and walked up and down the sidewalk instead, turning his head whenever a screen-door banged, to look for Ellen.

Suddenly they saw her, in a doorway a hundred feet away, talking to some other marketing woman. The same Ellen, with her blue honest eyes and her sensitive, sweet mouth. There was some new quality in her face and manner: what was it?—responsibility, gravity, tenderness, Joe could not tell.

He walked up to her, and she raised surprised eyes.

"Mornin', Miss Josselyn!"

The puzzled look in her eyes changed swiftly, and she put her hands out and caught at him vaguely, as if to hold a dream.

"Joe Latimer! Joe!" She groped for her handkerchief, laughing as she wiped her eyes; tears of joy stood in his own. "But Joe dear, what brings you here! I simply can't believe it! I can't believe my eyes!" she said.

"Lizzie brought me!" Joe grinned. Ellen dropped his hand to go swiftly to the motorcar.

"Lizzie!" she echoed radiantly. Her eyes fell upon the bundle in Lizzie's arms, across which Lizzie must lean to return her kiss. "But—but—what!" Ellen stammered. "You—you two haven't got a baby?"

Joe thought that one moment was worth all the fatigue of the long trip. "Haven't we?" he said, as Ellen, standing on the curb with the precious bundle in her arms, opened the tissues that screened the tiny face, and bent her own cheek against the warm, unresponsive little cheek.

"Well, I have never had such a delicious surprise in my life!" Ellen exclaimed. "You darling!" she crooned to the baby. "What did you name him, Joe?"

"We thought a good name for him would be Ellen," grinned Joe. It was good to hear her old laugh again, and see the pleasure in her eyes as she glanced from face to face.

"Named for me? My own tiny niece! Ah, Joe, you make me proud!" She gave the baby back to Lizzie, and stood for a moment, resting her hands on the car door, and still trying to regain her breath after the surprise.

"Well, now, I'll take you home! I may have something else to do while I'm in town, but it has gone completely out of my head, if I have! I can't wait to get home, to show Gibbs what I've brought with me!"

Talking of little, inconsequent things, as those who love each other, and who meet after years, always must do at first, they drove through the dusty street, and past flat fields where great oaks threw blots of shade on the shining brown grass, and so climbed a curving road into the hills.

Here and there on the slopes a brown bungalow clung, half-hidden in trees. Ellen pointed at a sloping roof, halfway between the ridge and the shore.

"That's the house," she told them. "It belonged to a Mr. Perry, who knew Gibbs, you know, and he loaned it to us at first. But we loved it so we couldn't think of moving away, and a year ago Gibbs bought it."

"It's a wonderful life to me," Ellen admitted thoughtfully. And as she made no motion to start the car, but sat twisted about in her seat, looking down vaguely at the sea, Joe wondered again what that new look in her eyes meant. "We can't get enough of it," she added. "It's all so deliciously simple, and so free: like being children again. It's taken us back to our summers in Brittany. George and Harriet were here in—in July, I think it was. Gibbs' friends are always going and coming through San Francisco, and they come down!"

"Lord, what air!" Joe said, with a brief breath. The sweet odor of the pines was drifting through the still warmth.

"Oh, it's marvelous, Joe. December is apt to have days like this, and February is a great month for picnics!" Ellen said, eagerly. "What I wanted to say to you," she added, a little uncertainly, "was—I thought I would just tell you—"

They were appalled to hear a sudden thickening in her voice, and to see that her utmost effort could not keep her eyes from watering.

"You know that Gibbs hasn't been well, don't you?" she asked, hastily.

"You wrote that he wasn't well, some time ago—" Joe began hesitatingly.

"You'll see—a change," Ellen added. "And of course you mustn't let him see that you see it." She lost control of her voice again.

"I should think this climate would build him up again," Lizzie ventured, a little timidly. Joe looked at her gratefully, and Ellen quickly grasped the thread of comfort.

"Oh, Lizzie, it will—they all say it will!" she said, eagerly, wiping her eyes. But immediately they brimmed again, and the dark head and the crushed white hat went down on the back of the seat; she burst into tears.

"Oh, Joe—Joe—Joe! He's not going to get well!" she sobbed.

"Ellen!" Joe said, aghast.

"Oh, I know it," Ellen said presently, lifting her head, and resolutely regaining her self-control. "I know it! I am sure he does, too. I'm sorry to break down this way, but I don't often have a chance," she added penitently, with a watery smile. "I never let him see that—that it's killing me, too."

"But, Ellen, what is it?" Lizzie asked, fearfully.

Walrus Tusks Prized

Ivory carving is becoming a lost art among the Eskimos of Alaska and the ornately carved walrus tusks are much prized by collectors. A generation or so back the artisans who did the work were quite numerous, but they have gradually passed away and the young men have not learned to do it.

Sweet Peas for Porto Rico

Difference in the length of the day in the tropics and summer days of the North has been discovered as one of the chief reasons why sweet peas would not bloom in Porto Rico. This difficulty has been overcome with the introduction of a tropical sweet pea from Australia.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

Two Cars in One— An open and closed car combined

STUDEBAKER Duplex—a closed and open car combined. An entirely new-type car—developed by Studebaker and available from no other maker.

It is the most sensational—most talked-of car in America.

One minute you are enjoying the comfort and protection of a closed car—next the unhindered freedom that made the open car so popular. And the change can be made in 30 seconds by simply lowering the roller side enclosures.

Yet with all this two-fold convenience, the Duplex-Phaeton sells for no more than an open car.

The new Studebaker Big Six is strikingly beautiful—with long, low sweeping lines. It is especially designed and powered for seven-passenger service.

The Big Six Duplex-Phaeton is delivered to you with complete equipment. This even includes two highest grade bumpers, extra balloon tire, tube and tire cover—there is nothing else to buy.

But to appreciate this car you must inspect it—drive it. Test its delightful ease of operation—steering mechanism especially designed for its full-sized balloon tires.

Notice the new location of the lighting switch on the steering wheel—and many other new and unusual features.

See this car that has definitely solved the open-closed car problem.

"My God!—My God!" He whispered, reacting him. He fired first at some target over the mantel, and then somewhere else—"

"Couldn't pull the trigger—!" Gibbs said breathlessly.

"Oh, indeed he did! He fired twice, but you see those chambers were empty. And, Gibbs, he says that grandpa said to him, 'Good old Tommy!' You remember how he used to say that? Then they had some talk about soldiers, and finally your father was a spy—and the amazing thing is, Gibbs, to hear Tommy tell it—every few minutes he would put in something that the testimony had developed, and Lizzie and I would look at each other! I couldn't realize it—the importance of it, but I knew George was on his way, and that he would know! Well, and then Tom got frightened, and he tried to rouse your father, and threw the pistol in the basket, and ran out and called for Lizzie. But Lizzie, of course, didn't hear. He wasn't sure whether your father was fooling or not, but the noise of the report frightened him. He was afraid he'd be scolded for getting out of bed and going downstairs so when he found Lizzie was not in the room, he got into bed and before she came in, he fell asleep. The next day, of course, we carefully kept any of the excitement from him—"

"What does George think about it?"

"Well, I don't know. But he telephoned the district attorney immediately, and Ryan is here now talking

THE MADMAN'S IDEA

FOX VOWS VENGEANCE

OF COURSE, neither Madam Duck nor any of her family planned the downfall of Mr. Fox, but it was such an undignified tumble—as well as very unpleasant—that he vowed if he lived and had his health—and appetite—he would see to it that the duck family paid in full for his ridiculous accident.

Mr. Fox had long watched the pond where the ducks from a neighboring farm went every day for a swim. They were very plump-looking birds and many times Mr. Fox had craved one or more for his dinner.

It was not so easy to capture ducks on this pond because there was so much open space around it at one spot, and so, though he had tried, Mr. Fox had not been successful in making a catch.

The Fat Ducks Looked at Him.

But Mr. Fox had made up his mind to have one of those fat ducks or know the reason why. And so one morning he lay in wait where he could see the pond and watch for the ducks to take their daily swim.

Now there had been a very hard rain for several days which had done a great deal of damage. Mr. Fox did not know anything about this, and if he had he would not have thought that rain could damage a pond.

It had rained so fast and hard that even the ducks had stayed under cover, so when the sun came out every duck came waddling to the pond early for a swim. The pond seemed alive with ducks, Mr. Fox thought as he watched.

It was hard work for him not to make a dash in the open straight for the pond and make a spring in the midst of them, but Mr. Fox was wise from experience. So he stepped stealthily along, with eyes and ears alert, and himself hidden, until he came to the spot where the bushes were thick enough to hide him.

Mr. Fox was so keen upon getting his breakfast that he did not notice that he was creeping along on some very old boards half hidden in the muddy ground, nor did he see that one end of the boards was not on the ground at all but over the water.

This had once been a place where a boat was tied and the boards had been held up near the water ends by two small posts. One of these had fallen and the heavy rain of the past few days had washed away the earth that held the other, so that the weight of Mr. Fox was too much for the old post to hold up, and down it went, and with it Mr. Fox.

Into the mud he fell, splash! While all the fat ducks looked at him and quacked loudly as he scrambled up the bank and made off for some place where he could hide.

And this is the reason he vowed vengeance, for nothing could have convinced Mr. Fox that those ducks did not have it all planned to trap him.

"Anyway, they did not catch me," he muttered as he went along. "And if I am lucky enough to escape the gun of Mr. Man and have as good an appetite as I now have, I will make that family of ducks pay for this dirty trick. Look at my coat! All mud! It will take me all day to dry it!"

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

TALKING—ACTING

AS THE professor picked his way down the streaming street through the last violent torrents of the storm, he saw Eddie Clapper's little car standing at one almost flooded curb. The tiny runabout was packed with the squirming legs and romping bodies of seven children; they somersaulted over the wheel, they stood on their heads upon the seat, they crammed themselves into corners meant for packages and umbrellas. Then upon this confusion appeared Edward, snugly encased with a shiny rubber coat. Standing on the sidewalk at a yard's distance, Edward began to harangue the infants:

"Now you get right out of there. Don't you know that if one of you knocked the brake you might start off and kill yourselves? The engine's going and my chains aren't much use in this slippery weather. You have no right anyway to get into my car without permission. I might call the police if I wished and have you all arrested."

Here from the fruit shop where Edward had been buying peaches emerged a contess, hatless Italian. One small boy he seized by the leg, another was pushed through the far side of the car, the rest evacuated of their own accord, and the Italian without a word went back to his shop leaving Edward in possession. With an expression of "See what a fine boy am I," he got aboard in a leisurely way and drove off.

The next fall Eddie Clapper was appointed delegate to a national convention that was being held that year in a western city, and every night for two months Eddie talked at meetings of what the convention would accomplish. The professor went to hear him. Eddie was in his element as he beamed and smiled upon his already convinced audiences, and everybody had a fine time. As yet Eddie Clapper had never talked against opposition.

Then came the day of his departure. The special train that was to take the delegates to the convention had been made up, and the seats were beginning to fill. Several of his friends, among them the professor, had come to see Edward off. Quarter of an hour before starting time, he had not appeared. Ten minutes of, and he was not there. The clock hands advanced. No Edward. With three minutes left, the professor went off on a final search. Outside the station he found Eddie standing within a tight little circle of the other party. They were egging him on and drawing him out and Eddie, perfectly happy to be talking, stood there forgetful of his train and of action. Though the professor seized upon him they missed it, and for the whole session the incident afforded campaign material for the other side. But Eddie Clapper himself continued, as long as the professor knew him, to talk glibly and to act feebly.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

LUCINDA

LUCINDA is a Seventeenth century product. It is the romantic version of Lucy, a name borne by many noble ladies of that period, whom poetry preferred to address as Lucinda, under the impression that the latter was more pleasing and popular than the simple Lucy.

Lucinda, of course, signifies light. Her origin is with the Latin word lux, meaning light, which gave rise to the favorite old Roman name Lucius, one born at daylight, or one of fair complexion, as some translations would have it.

The first feminine form which paved the way for the rise of Lucinda, was Lucia. This name belonged to a virgin martyr of Syracuse, whose name of light, being indicated by early painters by a lamp or by an eye, led to the legend that her beautiful eyes had been put out. Santa Lucia was the patroness of Neapolitan fishermen, and her name was soon adopted by the Normans.

The daughter of the earl of Marcia was baptized Lucia in the time of Edward the Confessor. France received her as Lucie through the House of Blois. One Lucie, a sister of Stephen, was among those lost in the White ship. In England, Lucy was the favorite form, until the affectation of the Seventeenth century produced Lucinda.

Lucy Anne, another popular English version, had its counterpart in Italy in Luciana, and in France in Lucienne.

The amethyst is Lucy's talismanic gem. It will safeguard her from danger and contagion, and has a sobering effect upon a frivolous or high-strung temperament. Saturday is Lucinda's lucky day and her lucky number.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Requiring all children residing in the State of Michigan, between the ages of seven and sixteen years, to attend a public school until they have graduated from the eighth grade.

Amendment to Article XI of the Constitution relative to compulsory attendance at the public schools of all children between the ages of seven and sixteen years until they have graduated from the eighth grade.

Section 16. From and after August 1st, 1925, all children residing in the State of Michigan, between the ages of seven years and sixteen years, shall attend a public school until they have graduated from the eighth grade.

Section 17. The Legislature shall enact all necessary legislation to render said section 16 effective.

Authorizing the enactment of an income tax law.

Amendment to Article X of the constitution authorizing the enactment of an income tax law.

Section 3. The legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule of taxation, except on property paying specific taxes, and taxes shall be levied on such property as shall be prescribed by law. The legislature shall provide by law a scheme of taxes upon the net gains, profits and incomes of all citizens and inhabitants of this state, from whatever source said gains, profits and incomes are derived, which tax shall be graduated and progressive as follows:

There shall be an exemption of $4,000 per annum of all incomes.

Incomes of from $4,000 to $20,000 per annum shall be taxed at the rate of 5 per centum.

All incomes above $20,000 up to and including $40,000, shall be taxed at the rate of 6 per centum.

All incomes above $40,000 up to and including $60,000, shall be taxed at the rate of 7 per centum.

All incomes above $60,000 up to and including $80,000, shall be taxed at the rate of 8 per centum.

All incomes above $80,000 up to and including $100,000, shall be taxed at the rate of 9 per centum.

All incomes above $100,000 shall be taxed at the rate of 10 per centum.

The income tax law, herein authorized, shall be administered by a board of state tax commissioners.

All monies paid to a board of state tax commissioners under the provisions of this amendment shall be paid into the state treasury and shall then be credited to the general fund of the State, and shall be used for defraying the general expenses of the State government and for the payment of principal and interest on state bonds.

On or before the first day of September of each year, the auditor general shall deduct from the total amount directed by the legislature to be included in the state tax, for that year, the amount of money received under the provisions of this amendment and credited to the general fund of the state for the current year and the balance if any shall be deemed to constitute the state tax to be apportioned among the various counties of the state in accordance with the provisions of the general tax law.

Dividing the territory of the state into senatorial and representative districts.

Amendment to Article V of the constitution dividing the state into senatorial and representative districts.

SECTION 2. The Senate shall consist of thirty-two members elected for two years and by single districts. Such districts shall be numbered from one to thirty-two inclusive, each of which shall choose one senator. The House of Representatives shall consist of one hundred members elected for two years and by single districts. Such districts shall be numbered from one to one hundred inclusive, each of which shall choose one representative.

SECTION 3. The Secretary of state, the attorney general, and the lieutenant governor, acting as a board of review, shall on or before the first day of April, 1925, and every eighth year thereafter, divide the territory of the state into thirty-two senatorial districts. Such districts shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory with regular boundaries following the county, city, or township lines as nearly as possible and shall contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of registered and qualified voters. The secretary of state, the attorney general, and the lieutenant governor, acting as a board of review, shall on or before the first day of April, 1925, and every eighth year thereafter, divide the territory of the state into one hundred representative districts. Such districts shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory with regular boundaries following the county, city, or township lines as nearly as possible and shall contain, as nearly as may be, an equal

Propagating Plants by Use of Cuttings

Frame Which Uses Sunlight as Source of Heat Is Good.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The propagation of plants by the use of cuttings is one of the oldest methods known, and until recently it was considered necessary for the best results that the rooting work should be carried on in a well-equipped greenhouse, using steam coils to supply bottom heat. The lack of such equipment, however, and the expense of providing it, have been serious objections to any widespread use of vegetative propagation except with plants easily rooted out of doors. This has been overcome to a considerable extent by the development by the United States Department of Agriculture of a propagating frame which uses sunlight as a source of bottom heat. It has been found to give excellent results with the plants experimented with, including most of the standard citrus root stocks, as well as the newer hybrids.

The method and the experimental results are described in Department Circular 810, "The Solar Propagating Frame for Rooting Citrus and Other Subtropical Plants," just issued. The construction of the frame is simple and the method is economical and offers considerable promise for other groups of plants, especially of subtropical character. The use of the solar rooting frame is obviously best adapted to the warmer portions of the country having a relatively large amount of sunshine.

A copy of the circular may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Nicotine Dust Is Used in Killing Plant Lice

Nicotine dust is the substance recommended by the college of agriculture at New Brunswick for controlling the aphids which are so abundant on vegetable crops throughout New Jersey this year.

To prove the effectiveness of this substance in killing the pest a demonstration was conducted June 3 on the farm of William Hookstra, Beverly, N. J. Dust containing 8 per cent nicotine was applied with a power duster. The next day an examination showed that the killing was nearly 100 per cent.

The dust is easily applied, and as this and other trials have shown, it is thorough in its work. Application should be made after the dew is off and when the sun is shining brightly. Since the aphids are usually concealed beneath the leaves, considerable force should be used in applying the dust.

A one-horse two-row duster that will go through spaces six inches wide between the rows has just been placed on the market. This is particularly adapted to applying nicotine dust.

Growers of peas, beans, early celery, cabbage, spinach, lettuce, tomatoes, eggplant, and peppers must use increased vigilance and care if they are to free themselves from the ravages of the aphid pest this year.

Coal Oil Used to Cure Grub in Head of Sheep

Even with care some sheep will manifest grub in the head which are the larvae of the sheep bot. The symptom is a discharge of heavy, thick mucus which sometimes seals quite across the nostrils. The sheep are continually snorting to rid themselves of the grub, which is in the sheep's nasal passages or up in the sinuses which are inside of the head just above each of the eyes. To treat, lay the sheep on their back, feet up, and pour about a teaspoonful of coal oil into each nostril, hold a few minutes and the cure is completed since the grubs are killed and the sheep will snort them out. Don't let the sheep hold up its head, but just lift the nose about an inch from the ground. Just enough so the coal oil will run down and drain into each sinus.

FARM FACTS

Wet weather often brings insect pests. Watch for the signs and get your poison ready.

Rotation of crops is one of the most important things in the development of agriculture.

Find out what they didn't like and give them lots of it, is a good practice to try on crop pests.

Check up on farm records and inventories to see what it is costing to produce different crops.

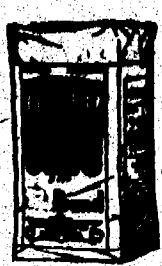

Bees never became "tame"; men simply learn their habits and turn their labor to the benefit of mankind.

Immediately following the removal of a hay crop is the best time to harrow alfalfa if the soil is not too wet to pulverize.

Ten horseshoes nailed over the stable door will not prevent the bad luck that one shoe badly nailed on a foot will produce.

In order that an unbroken supply of vegetables may be had, make another planting of beets, carrots, kale, lettuce, mustard, peas, radishes, spinach, and turnips.

Special Farm School To Start At M. A. C.
Winter Short Course Expected to Enroll Many Students
 A special "six weeks" course in agriculture will open at the Michigan Agricultural College on October 27, as the first of eleven farm courses to be given during the winter months.
 The Short Classes, as they are popularly known, are designed to give scientific and practical training for young men of the state who desire advanced training in agriculture, but who cannot for one reason or another spare the time for the regular four-year course at M. A. C. Hundreds of graduates of this winter school are now engaged in successful farming operations in Michigan, while others are holding down professional positions in connection with some phase of the industry.
 The sixteen-weeks course, which opens Oct. 27, runs for two years and gives a very complete and practical training in general agriculture. The short courses are open to all men and women over 16 years of age, without examination, but the equivalent of at least a good common school education is recommended for entering students.
 The short course students have their own organizations and athletic teams, entering into the student life of the M. A. C. campus fully during their residence at the college. All departments of the agricultural division contribute to the curriculum of the courses.
 In addition to the course which opens on Oct. 27, other Winter Courses listed in the special catalog (which may be had on application to: Director Winter Courses, M. A. C., East Lansing) include: Eight weeks course in general agriculture, Jan. 5 to March 6; Dairy production, Jan. 5 to March 20; Dairy manufactures, Jan. 5 to Feb. 28; Ice cream makers, March 3 to 14; Horticulture, Jan. 5 to March 6; Poultry, Jan. 5 to 30; Post-Graduate Veterinary, Jan. 28 to 30; Bee-Keepers, Feb. 9 to 21; Farm engineering, Jan. 5 to March 6 and two four-week Truck and Tractor courses, opening Feb. 9 and March 9.

Telling Rattlesnake's Age
 Well-fed rattlesnakes may shed their skins three or four times a year, and as the rings sooner or later become detached, it is evident that the popular belief that the number of joints in the rattlesnake indicates the years of the snake's age is unfounded.
Entirely Uncalled For
 Little Doris, visiting in the country, had been stung by a bee. She didn't seem to mind the pain so much, but the child had a sensitive nature and she felt hurt. Between her nobs she said: "I don't see what he did it for, mamma, I hadn't done a thing to him."
