EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1924.

No. 44

East Jordan 13 Charlevoix 0

E. J. H. S. Win Decisive Victory In Contest Last Friday.

With her full strength in the game for the first time this season East Jordan struck her top form and took the fast Charlevoix High School Football team into camp to the tune of 13 to 0 last Friday.

Although some fancy plays were tried the old army game did nearly all the ground gaining. After Charlevoix's showing last week when they outplayed Traverse City in the second half of their game, Charlevoix reigned favorites.

East Jordan received on the ten yard line, Shaw returned fifteen yards, and a ten yard pass was made from Walker to Shaw. A sensational run by Smith for fifty yards brought the ball to Charlevoix's ten yard line where it was lost on downs.

Early in the second quarter this same Smith on crossbucks went thirty-five yards, then ten yards for the first touchdown. The ball see-sawed in mid field until the second half when early in the third quarter Shaw ran fifty-five yards through the whole Charlevoix team to the five yard line where Captain Walker pushed it over.

The Charlevoix team played well and seemed to show best with the forward pass by which they came nearly scoring on East Jordan, missing the ball behind the Jordan line at one time by inches which would have given them a touchdown. The game was clean throughout. In fact, the relation between the two towns is very fine. The boys from Charlevoix are clean sportsmen and deserve commendation for the way they have conducted themselves in their athletic relations with East Jordan.

Cleveland Roe, manager of the Charlevoix team, and Clyde F. Suelenberger, manager of the East Jordan team, are largely responsible for the pleasant relations existing between the two towns, by the businesslike way in which they agree on and secure officials in plenty of time so there is very little if any rag chewing.

Hallet did the steller work for Charlevoix. In fact, his work is rather outstanding for a resort town team. For East Jordan, the work of Snyder at Guard and Duffey at Tackle, opening holes for crossbucks, their playing was of a high order. Somerville on End playing, his first game in a number of weeks after having a bad knee, played a whirl wind of a game at End, materially strengthened the team by his presence.

The work of Alfred Smith at Half bordered on the sensational, and received some special comment from the officials on his work.

The score:
Charlevoix—0 0 0 0
E. Jordan—0 6 7 0 13
Referee—Lee of Petoskey; Umpire, Rev. Alberts of Petoskey; Head Linesman, Malpass of East Jordan.
Time of Quarters: 15 minutes.

Harbor Springs comes for the big game of the year Saturday. Harbor is considered by all critics as the best team in this section of Michigan, having defeated Petoskey, Boyne City and other strong contenders. East Jordan shows by her work of the last game or two that she is distinctly in the running. Harbor Springs indicate that they expect a terrific battle by their care in picking officials.

The boys have not been supported by East Jordan fans as well as they should be. Here's an opportunity to see one of the championship battles of northern Michigan with a good chance of the Jordan team putting over a win. In fact, the boys expect nothing but a win. Let us be sure that Harbor Springs does not have more routers on the ground than ourselves. This would not be difficult judging by the last two or three crowds.

Everybody out for the big championship battle!

Lasting Cookies

The first batch of cookies I ever made I mixed "by ear," writes a correspondent of the Chicago Journal. I thought the idea was to get as much flour into the dough as possible. I did. They were anemic looking, and hard as marbles. A couple of months later I came across a few of them in the cookie jar. I took one of the pale, hard slabs, addressed it to a friend, put a stamp on it and mailed it. My friend's baby cut two teeth on it. It broke a window pane with it and it is still a treasure of his toy box.

Who Owns These Cars?

Two Autos "Owned" By East Jordan Residents Replevined.

Two representatives of the Louis Rose Buick Company of Detroit, through Charlevoix County Circuit Court order, replevined this week an automobile purchased by L. G. Balch of this city from Elmer Alexander, and an automobile purchased by J. W. Foster from the same party.

On the car purchased by Mr. Balch there is claimed to be due the sum of $550.00. The attachments were made first of the week, Sheriff Chas. Novak taking charge of the machines. The suing company putting up a $5,000 bond.

Mr. Balch states to The Herald that he has nothing whatever against Mr. Alexander for his part in the transaction. He states that he purchased the car of Mr. Alexander in August and says that Mr. Alexander delivered to him a clear title to the car, signed by the Detroit Company. That he filed with the State Department the necessary blanks and has received from them a clear title to the car.

Mr. Balch states that the gentlemen representing the Detroit Company claim that a lien on the car has priority over the so-called clear title.

Mr. Foster states that his dealings with Mr. Alexander were likewise satisfactory.

One of the outgrowths of the mixup is the action of Mr. Alexander, through his attorneys, Clink & Williams, commencing a suit against the Louis Rose Buick Co. of Detroit, claiming $5000 for alleged slanderous statements.

The next session of Circuit Court for Charlevoix County will be held the coming February, at which time the differences will be ironed out.

Salvation Army Tag Day Saturday, Nov. 1st.

There are thousands of institutions in this old world for the betterment of mankind. Churches to feed the soul's longing. Schools to fit one for the greatest task of life, but with all these, there are some that fall by the wayside. We have failed in our religious work to keep all in the way which leads to glory. So we are very thankful for the Salvation Army and its work of lifting those that fall. Some, yes many are fed and given free lodging, many fall beyond the parent grasp beyond the reach of the church. But here is an organization that reaches down deep, far beyond our reach as churches to rescue the fallen. The homes for the poor, needy and fallen are cared for by your subscription, [as you have been called on by the committee from the Ladies' Relief Corps.] We want all to participate in a gift of some kind. When you meet the lassies on the street Saturday, buy the little tag and in doing so you may help some mother's son or daughter to see the better things of life. Some one must give them a helping hand. Let it be us.

BOYNE CITY VOTES BONDS FOR $25,000 COMMUNITY HALL

(Boyne Citizen)
On Tuesday, Oct. 21, was held the election which decided if Boyne City was to have a Community Hall and Gymnasium.

The total vote cast was 356 of which 286 were favorable to the enterprise, while there were but 70 dissenting ballots cast.

The new building is to be erected at the corner of Main and Grant streets, on property already owned by the school district. It will be 60 by 120 and the cost of the structure is to be approximately $25,000.00.

The need for such a building has long been felt in our city. When constructed it will be available for local talent plays, dances, concerts, lectures as well as organized men's and women's gymnasium classes.

Of course the main purpose of the building is to provide physical training headquarters for the students of our schools.

This contemplated building will contain two large general meeting rooms, a gymnasium floor eighty feet by sixty feet, with a twenty one foot ceiling, and a commodious stage on the first floor. The basement will contain the shower and locker rooms, boiler room, and probably game rooms.

It is expected that work on the new building will be started at once.

Can't Frighten Him

MRS. CHAS. E. HAWLEY PASSED AWAY THURSDAY, OCT. 23rd.

Mrs. Charles E. Hawley passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clarence Valencourt, in this city last Thursday, Oct. 23rd.

Emma Jane Knous was born August 8th, 1862, in Morrow County, Ohio, her parents being Solomon G. and Elizabeth Knous.

On Sept. 18th, 1882, she was united in marriage to Charles E. Hawley of Riverdale, Mich. To this union were born six children, five daughters, Mrs. Carl Brenner of Kendallville, Ind., Mrs. Will Borst of Alba, Mich., Mrs. Clarence Valencourt, Mrs. Francis Sonnabend and Mrs. Chas. Moore, and one son, Arthur, all of this city. Two sisters, Mrs. Mary Lamson of Frederic, Mich., Mrs. Anna Thompson of Helena, Montana, and five brothers, William, Fred, John, Edd and Mitchell Knous, all of Lane, Idaho, also survive besides a number of grandchildren, neices and nephews to mourn her loss.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Oct. 26th, from the Methodist Church in this city, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Henry Hiles. Interment at Sunset Hill.

MEANEST MAN IN TOWN IS SKUNK POISONING DOGS

The dog poisoner is at work again according to the Charlevoix Courier. Several valuable animals on the north side are victims of his fiendish art and one dog in the valley was saved only by the speedy application of first aid methods. Strychnine was the poison used.

The Courier has more than once had occasion to denounce this dirty form of villainy in its columns. It is hard to bring the perpetrator of this dastardly business to justice, owing to difficulty of detection but it is well for him to know that he has the contempt and detestation of not only the dog lover, but of every honest and decent-minded citizen. Judged by a standard of sheer meanness and cruelty, many of the higher crimes pale into insignificance.

If the dogs annoy this creature, whoever he or she may be, he has access to the law. He does not need to debase himself below the level of the poorest cur to get redress.

MISS INGA ANDERSON AND ERNEST G. SMITH UNITED IN MARRIAGE.

Miss Inga Anderson of East Jordan and Ernest Grant Smith of Charlevoix were united in marriage at the Congregational parsonage in Charlevoix, Saturday evening, Oct. 18th. The pastor, Rev. C. W. Long, officiating.

Following the installation of officers in the Maccabee Lodge at Charlevoix Tuesday evening, Oct. 21, members of the lodge and friends charivariated the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Grant Smith at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith on Antrim Street and carried them off to a bonnetous supper at Mont Wither's restaurant, where Mrs. Max Fralich favored the assemblage with a song, "Here Comes the Bride." The young couple were then escorted home in Isabel Hendrickson's sedan.

GAS ON STOMACH MAY CAUSE APPENDICITIS

Constant gas causes inflammation which may involve the appendix. Simple glycerine, buckthorn bark, etc., as mixed in Adlerika helps any case, gas on the stomach in TEN minutes. Most medicines act only on lower bowel but Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes all gas and poisons. Excellent for obstinate constipation and to guard against appendicitis.—GIDLEY & MAC, Druggists.

Supervisors Close Work

Several Important Actions Taken During Annual Session

The session of the Charlevoix county Board of Supervisors, which commenced Monday morning, October 13th, with Hon. William J. Pearson, of Boyne Falls, in the chair, and closed Saturday Oct. 18th, were productive of the usual amount of routine business and some important appropriations and measures among which were the following:

An electric washer, a new kitchen range and a dozen mattresses were purchased for the sheriff's quarters and the jail.

George McMullin appeared before the board in the interests of George R. Hemingway, proprietor of the Charlevoix County Nurseries, relative to the widening of the road from the east approach of the Ironton ferry to the foot of Riffenburg hill, asking the board for their consideration and financial assistance. The matter is now under advisement.

The board appropriated the sum of $1,800 for the furtherance and promotion of extension work by the Charlevoix county agricultural agent.

An appropriation of $1,000 was made for the purpose of assisting in the maintenance of the Charlevoix Hospital for the coming year.

They also appropriated from the general fund to the County Agricultural Society the sum of $2,000 to assist in carrying out county fair work during the coming year.

A safe was ordered purchased for the judge of probate's office.

The sum of $1,100 was appropriated for the use of the County Park Commission for permanent improvements to the Whiting County Park and June appropriation of $500 for this purpose was also ratified and ordered paid.

The County Park Commission was also authorized to make arrangements with the state conservation department for the erection of a steel fire tower in Whiting Park, to be used by the fire warden as an observation tower.

The Michigan Children's Aid Society was awarded an appropriation of $350 and the hospital school for crippled children at Farmington, $350.

The name of Jacob E. Chew was placed in nomination to serve as superintendent of the poor for a three year term. A unanimous ballot was cast, electing Mr. Chew to that office.

W. L. Fuehrer was nominated and unanimously elected county school examiner for a term of two years.

D. F. Meech, W. F. Tindall and Herman Goodman were nominated to serve as county election canvassers for a period of one year. A unanimous ballot was cast.

The chairman appointed each supervisor in his respective city, ward or township a member of the committee to care for indigent soldiers and sailors.

The name of S. M. Rose was presented to succeed himself as park commissioner for a five year term. He was elected by unanimous ballot.

The name of W. H. White, of Boyne City was placed in nomination to fill vacancy caused by the resignation of F. O. Barden as a member of the County Park Commission. He was elected by unanimous ballot.

A tax fund of 2 1/2 mills on each dollar of assessed valuation of Charlevoix county in 1924 was voted to be raised, the fund to be known as a county sinking fund, the moneys so raised to be used for the purpose of retiring county road bonds and federal aided bonds, the paying of the interest due on said bonds and for no other purpose unless authorized by the County Sinking Fund Commission.

The county clerk was authorized to rent the county property on Mason St. and collect rents therefrom monthly in advance.

A county road tax of 3 1/2 mills on the dollar was assessed against the taxable property of the county for the construction and maintenance of roads for the years, 1924-25.

Projected road work for next year included the following:
Completion of the East Jordan and Peninsula road in Eveline township; estimated cost, $5,420.

One half mile of road from the Manacelona road to the East Jordan and Central Lake road in South Arm township; estimated cost, $2,000.

One mile or more on the Marion Center road in Marion; estimated cost, $6,600.

Approximately one mile on the King's Highway in St. James.

Approximately one mile on the Horton Bay north road in Bay township, $4,500.

Approximately one and one half miles on the Wildwood Harbor road in Evangeline and Melrose townships, $10,200.

One mile on the Boyne Falls and Deer Lake road in Boyne Valley, $2,260.

Three quarters of a mile on the Wilson road in Wilson township, $3,400.

It was also voted that six mill on each dollar of assessed valuation of the county of Charlevoix, according to the present assessment rolls of said county shall be raised by taxation on the taxable real and personal property in said county, to be expended for county purposes and to be known as county taxes.—Charlevoix Courier.

State Wheat King Crowned For 1924

Branch County Farmer Pro- ducers 4,000 Bushels

With a record of having produced more than 4,000 bushels of exceedingly high grade wheat, Ralph Arbogast, of Union City, in Branch County, is being hailed as Michigan's wheat king for 1924. Those familiar with agricultural conditions over the state are convinced that Arbogast raised more good wheat than any other man in the state.

Eighty-eight acres of Red Rock, the well known variety developed by the late Professor F. A. Spragg, of the M. A. C. crops staff, were included in Arbogast's wheat acreage, twelve acres more being planted in an experiment with a bald red wheat which is under trial at the Agricultural college. Forty acres of the Red Rock yielded 47 bushels per acre, another 40 acres producing 37.7 bushels to the acre.

The wheat, according to H. C. Rother secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association and extension specialist at M. A. C., was all of good quality, weighing more than 60 pounds per bushel, being bright in color, and showing entire freedom from rye, cockle, chess and mixtures or weeds of any kind.

This exceptional wheat growing performance is said to be the result of only of the favorable season but also of Mr. Arbogast's cropping system, in which alfalfa and clover play an important part. A liberal use of acid phosphate and the use pure seed of the most productive varieties are other reasons given for the Branch County man's success.

Coon Hunters Are Prosecuted

Deputy Game Warden Deuell and Stephenson have been actively engaged, during the past week, in the prosecution of hunters who have been shooting coon out of season.

Justice Collins court in Charlevoix was the scene of the final encounter between the wardens and the hunters.

On Friday, Elmer Alexander pleaded guilty and was fined $50.00 and costs amounting to $12.00; he was also sentenced to spend twenty days in the county jail. However the jail sentence was suspended and he was placed on probation for three months.

On Monday of this week, Dalton Gay W. M. Swafford and Henry Alexander pleaded guilty and were each fined $15.00 and costs of $5.00. Inasmuch as the coon pelts were confiscated, the ammunition used by the four gentlemen was expensive.—Boyne Citizen, Oct. 22.

Notice to Electors

Owing to the urgent demands from a large number of citizens from all parts of the County, I will comply with the demands made and will be a candidate for the office of County Treasurer at the General Election Nov. 4th. My name will not appear on the regular ballot, but slips that can easily be placed in their proper position on the regular ballot, will be furnished for use of voters. Thus the matter is in the hands of my friends. I will fully appreciate your active support and vote.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WM. FLANDERS

Salary Grab of 1873

The "salary grab" by members of congress in 1873 stirred up the whole country. Near the end of the term an increase in salary was voted congressmen, and the outgoing congress made the bill retroactive.

Tong War Brings Many Arrests

Since the recent outbreak of the Chinese tong war in Chicago, New York and other American cities the police have been busy rounding up oriental gang men who may have participated in the killings. Here are a few of the many suspects nabbed by the Chicago police. All of them were carrying pistols.

Machines Waste Valuable Grain

Loss of Time and Money Prevented by Good Care of Thresher.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
If a man in New York were to buy a ticket for San Francisco and then walk to Chicago before boarding the train you would think him foolish indeed. Yet, is not the farmer who plows his fields and sows his grain, cares for it through the long summer and carefully harvests the crop, only, upon threshing the bundles of loaded grain, to blow a large part of it over into the straw pile, liable to the same accusation? Inefficient operation of threshing machines is responsible for a great many bushels of wasted grain, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Time and Grain Lost.
Any standard threshing machine will do its work with very little waste of grain or loss of time, if kept in good condition, adjusted properly for the particular job on which it is engaged, furnished with the proper amount of power applied correctly and watched intelligently while in operation. Nevertheless, it is true that a great amount of time is lost and a large amount of grain wasted unnecessarily in threshing.

All thresher manufacturers have endeavored to make their machines as efficient as possible and the construction such that they will give a minimum of trouble. However, there are so many parts to a threshing machine, and it must work under such a wide range of conditions, that numerous adjustments must be left for the operator to make in the field, and careful attention is required for its successful operation.

If a machine fails to separate all of the grain from the straw it is usually due to one or more of the following causes: (1) The machine is not being run at its proper speed, (2) the cylinder fails to thresh all of the kernels out of the heads, (3) the separating mechanism is not level, or (4) the blast is not adjusted properly.

Crop Owners Interested.
Naturally the thresherman is not so vitally concerned in getting every bushel of grain from the straw as is the crop owner, because it only means two or three cents to him for each bushel saved, whereas to the crop owner it means the price of the entire bushel, a matter of 50 or 60 cents, or more, depending upon the kind of grain being threshed and the price of it on the market. The crop owner, therefore, should be versed in the operation of the machine and at least know whether the separator man has his machine adjusted for the most efficient results possible.

Farmers' Bulletin 991, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, has been written for the information of farmers who have grain threshing to do, and discusses the various points to watch in the efficient operation of the threshing machine. A copy may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Three Great Objects of Cultivation Discussed

In urging the proper tilling of the soil, the New York State College of Agriculture points out that cultivation has three main objects: Killing weeds, loosening the soil and saving moisture; further, this is said to be probably the order of their importance.

Weeds must be kept down and the earlier they are disturbed after germination the easier they are killed. The critical time is the period between planting and the time when the crop is large enough to cultivate without covering the plants.

For corn and potatoes, the tillage with the harrow or weeder is likely to be the making of the crop so far as cultivation is concerned. The start the crop gets on the weeds is likely to be maintained, especially in the rows.

Assuming good fitting of the soil and a reasonably good tith, two inches is the maximum depth of cultivation desirable. Greater depth is likely to stimulate weeds by bringing up more seeds.

Make Good Fly Sprays

Solutions of any of the standard coal tar dips make good fly sprays. Add fish oil and whale oil to prevent the hair from becoming harsh or rough. A formula for making this fly spray is the following:

5 pints coal tar dip 5 pints whale oil
5 pints fish oil 5 pints oil of tar
5 pints coal oil

Dissolve three pounds of laundry soap in water, add the above materials. Add lukewarm soft water to make 30 gallons.

Spray for Potato Beetle

The Colorado potato beetle is controlled by spraying with 2 pounds of powdered arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water. This spray should be put on when the insects first appear. The various worms that feed on the leaves of cabbage can also be controlled by this spray.

Growing Chinese Cabbage

Chinese cabbage is best planted in August when the soil is more suitable to its growth and it will furnish an abundant supply of greens for salad until killed by freezing weather. It may also be used for cold slaw or cooked like cabbage or greens.

Farmer At Alba Wins After Long Uphill Struggle
Now Owns Largest Barn in His Community, Housing 50 Cattle
No capital does not always mean certain failure, especially if one knows how to capitalize on the natural resources of the land and knows how to co-operate with nature.
Resident's of Alba's prosperous potato center have proof of this in the success of Robert Kitchen and his family. Kitchen came to Alba nine years ago with more ambition than money, settled on a 200-acre farm two miles north of here and started out to mine a small fortune out of the ground growing potatoes, beans, alfalfa and sweet clover. It was a hard struggle during the first few years, to be sure, with sickness entering the family and his debts pyramiding at an alarming rate, but Kitchen did not lose faith in nature and the soil. He's coming out on top.

Today this hard working farmer has the largest basement barn near Alba, owns one of the most productive farms in Antrim County, and boasts a faithful wife and six happy children, each the picture of health.
The barn on this farm stands out as a monument to the efforts of Kitchen and his family who have worked hard to lift the mortgage from their farm. Other men with less courage probably would have failed, old timers say, but Kitchen possessed the proper measure of determination to make a go of farming, no matter what conditions he might encounter.

He produced more than 3,500 bushels of certified seed potatoes last year and now is harvesting another good crop. His barn houses 50 head of cattle and his fertile acres produce enough feed to sustain such a herd.
Much of Kitchen's success can be attributed to the kinds of crops he grows in combination with livestock farming. He cut hay from 90 acres of alfalfa and 20 acres of sweet clover this season. Beans and potatoes are his cash crops. He had 20 acres into certified seed tubers this year. He also grows enough corn to fill two large silos.
A silo, Kitchen declares, is a mighty good investment for any livestock farmer, especially in northern Michigan where the winters are long and the growing seasons sometimes short.

"Why I always heard they were very exclusive. How did they entertain you?" "Oh, I didn't stop long," said Snobb. "Only called with a bill for groceries."

"Well, he was sick, after that terrible two months, you know," Ellen said, reflectively. "He looked—don't you remember how he looked? And then one day Doctor Cutter said, just casually, 'I'd go somewhere where it's hot and dry, Ellen. He's been under a terrible mental and physical strain and he's managed to get a heavy cold, and there's a little affection of the lung.' Joe, how could I ever dream it was that! We came to Santa Barbara, and the Perrys wrote us about Los Angeles and Gibbs did seem better; he ate well, and usually slept pretty well—"

Her voice dropped to utter silence, and they could hear the steady, soft rush of the sea again. "But after awhile," Ellen presently went on, "I saw he wasn't gaining—I saw that he wasn't gaining! He began to have bad nights, and he didn't eat so well—I! After awhile I wrote the Santa Barbara doctor, and he wrote back that just before we left Gibbs had been in to see him, and that he thought he could not improve upon his instructions, then; to sleep in the open air, and live simply, and not catch cold. So Gibbs knows, but he never spoke of that call to me.

"Lately," she finished, "he has been keeping to his couch a good deal; he doesn't join us in gardening or picnics, as he did last year. Well! I only wanted to warn you. Perhaps it is my own fancy, partly. And, Joe—what a year we have had! A whole year of paradise, nothing but each other, and Tom, music, and books and the garden, and the ocean! It has blotted out all the bitterness—wiped out the past. The Perrys called the house 'Arcady,' and we've kept the name—at first for convenience with the tradespeople, but now because we know it fits!"

She started the car down the grade, presently turning in at an opening in a stone wall that was so smothered in vines, so closely surrounded with the color scheme of greens and browns about it as to be almost invisible. "Oh, pretty!" Lizzie said, involuntarily.

"This is the house," Ellen smiled. "Welcome, you darlings! Give me that angel, Lizzie, I want to show her to Gibbs!"

She led them through the wide side hall, where great logs waited in a stone fireplace, and bowls of flowers glowed in a tempered light.

A glass double door gave upon the great front veranda, and here Ellen ran with the baby.

"I want you to meet Ellen Latimer, Gibbs—"

It was well that they had been warned of what change they might find in him, for Lizzie caught a quick breath as she saw him, and it required all Joe's presence of mind to go forward and greet him naturally.

He was still handsome—Gibbs would always be that. But he was painfully thin, and seemed strangely aged. His dark, splendid eyes shone in a thin face whose temples blazed sometimes with an uneasy color. The ring he always wore was loose on the fine long hand. His hair was an even silvery white.

His manner was changed, too. There was a gravity, a sweetness and a certain heroic serenity about him that seemed to lift them all into the plane of simple endurance and renunciation. Lizzie and Joe knew, as they settled laughing into porch chairs to talk to him; that Ellen's worst fears were none too grave.

Like Gibbs himself, they must accept the thing as a finality. There was no dispute. They found themselves suddenly confident and gay, as human beings, forced to accept their own helplessness, usually become. This was in the nature of a catastrophe; it was almost as if they had come to California to find that Gibbs was dead.

The exquisite hours went on. Below the dark, cool space of the porch the Pacific spread in glittering band. The little crescent of white sand that was their own beach was bared by a lazily receding tide. The garden odors and the resinous smell of the pines were permeated by the bracing salt breath of the sea.

When Pong, the house-boy, in his plum color and pale green, came noiselessly to the porch to announce luncheon, Tommy burst in, sturdy brown Tommy, frantic with excitement at seeing his adored uncle and aunt again. He was with difficulty persuaded to rush off and transfer some of the dirt on his hands to a towel, and returned with the center lock of his bushy hair dampened and combed, amid a tumbled mass that had not been touched.

Yet even in Tommy Joe saw the change that a great shadow brings to even the children of a household. He was all tenderness and devotion with his father, and he had a most unchildish fashion of entering into his mother's shadow from the sinking sun, and a lingering twilight fell fast and soft over the scene. The house-boy, Pong, came noiselessly to the porch to announce luncheon, Tommy burst in, sturdy brown Tommy, frantic with excitement at seeing his adored uncle and aunt again. He was with difficulty persuaded to rush off and transfer some of the dirt on his hands to a towel, and returned with the center lock of his bushy hair dampened and combed, amid a tumbled mass that had not been touched.

"He plays wonderfully!" Lizzie said, when the simple air died away. "He plays well for such a child," Gibbs conceded. "And he loves it, which is half the battle. I hope Ellen will make a musician of him!"

Lizzie winced away from the quiet intimation that Ellen alone must control Tommy's destiny.

Gibbs was silent again; the others knew that he saw the Ellen of the years to come with the growing boy beside her.

CHAPTER XVIII

Two or three days later Gibbs proposed a beach luncheon. Ellen, brightly indifferent when he first suggested it, was fired with sudden enthusiasm and delight when it transpired that he himself planned to go, too.

"Oh, he is better!" she said over and over again, as she buttered bread and trimmed oiled paper.

They set off in a straggling line: Tommy leaping ahead with his dog, and circling them as senselessly; Gibbs and Joe following, the latter with his tiny daughter held safely in his arms.

"I have never seen a man as infatuated with a tiny scrap of humanity as Joe is with the baby!" Ellen smiled.

"Does it make you jealous, Lizzie?"

"Oh, Ellen, no!" Lizzie said, horrified. "I didn't realize—I don't think he did—what the baby was going to mean!" she added presently. "The night she was born—I'll never forget his face! I had been ill, you know, all the time, and I had thought sometimes that I mightn't live, and that that was the way it was all to end! And then came that fearful pain and—bewilderment—"

"I know!" Ellen nodded. "And when I suddenly came out of it all, and found there was nothing wrong, but a sweet little girl asleep in a crib, why, it all seemed to clear itself!" Lizzie explained. "I said to myself, Ellen, that the past was gone. I was Joe's wife, and Ellen's mother, and the happiest woman in the world! If God forgives us, sometimes I think it's a sin not to forgive ourselves. So if ever I find myself blue, I just think that."

"And the consequence is, that you don't find yourself blue!" Ellen said gaily.

"Oh, I'm too happy! Joe—" Lizzie said. She gave Ellen a bride's half-shamed, half-mischievous smile—"Joe is an angel!" announced Lizzie.

Then they were at the beach, and the center of a joyous activity. Gibbs was settled, with the plaid, on a warm curve of rocks, where he pulled his cap over his eyes and watched them all placidly. Lizzie found another natural chair, where she sank down with her baby, gazing with dreamy content at the glittering water, steeped in the peace that the tugging, busy little lips at her breast seemed to enhance rather than interrupt. Then little Ellen was settled on the pillows under the umbrella, and Lizzie gaily joined the workers. A hundred times, on this memorable happy day, Ellen found herself watching Lizzie's little white figure, her happy, youthful face. Lizzie was just twenty; what might have been her destiny at twenty?

The tireless, sweet green water rose and fell; each wave formed an emerald arch of itself before it broke with a long, splitting crash, to rush in, level and incredibly swift, flinging upward against impeding rocks, and curving over the white sand. Gibbs watched it a delicious lull of body and soul. So much of it—such splendidly wasted beauty and energy, year after year. How pitiful was even the fullest, even the longest human life, against this glorious miracle that went on year after year throughout the centuries, that had been as old as the world when Padre Junipera Serra walked along these shores.

Joe clattered near him on the rocks. He tilted the cap over his eyes a trifle and glanced at the absorbed group by the fire.

"Manage to speak to me alone a minute, sometime, will you, Joe?" Gibbs said.

Joe, not moving his eyes from the defiant crab that had wedged his little body tightly in a crevice of rock, cleared his throat.

"Sure!" he answered gruffly.

Ellen also had her word alone with Joe. It was after luncheon, when Lizzie had curled up like a child on a patch of warm sand, and fallen asleep, and Gibbs was apparently dozing. Tommy was wading along the bubbling line of foam, and the baby slept on.

"You knew Harriet and George were here last summer, Joe?" Ellen ventured. "Do you ever see Harriet now?"

"No," he answered, indifferently. "She's a queer sort of girl. What's she doing—collecting plates?"

"She has a remarkable china collection," Ellen admitted, laughing at his tone.

"China collection! What's that for a woman to do!" Joe stretched comfortably in the sun. "Oh, well," he said leniently, "that's all right, if she likes it. Harriet's nice enough, but she's spoiled by too much money."

"Yet you liked her very much once, Joe," Ellen suggested, from the depth of deep amusement and satisfaction.

"Oh, yes—kid love! I never really loved any one but Lizzie," said Joe. Ellen saw that he really believed it, and of it." "But, Joe, I don't see why she wouldn't!" "Oh, he had a tremendous hold on her. You see his name was mixed up with hers in the whole business. If she didn't care for him, she never should have been away from home the night of the accident! I suppose he simply forced her hand. Funny thing," Joe added, reminiscently. "When I first met her she had all the cards: beauty, youth, a rich man's wife. Now she's married to a man four years younger than herself, who isn't exactly a testotater, you know, and whom she supports—well, that's coming to her."

"Poor Lillian!" Ellen said, thoughtfully. Her eyes went to Gibbs, dozing on the rocks, and a sorrowful look filled them. "I wish I hadn't hated her!" she said softly.

"You haven't much to regret!" Joe assured her, rolling over for a nap. They did not speak again until the car grated on the sandy road a few feet above them.

"You could have a slice of Arcady," Ellen promised eagerly; "we've twenty acres here, and there are dozens of house-sites!"

"We'll see," Joe yawned again, blinking at the sun. "By the way, Ellen," he added, more animatedly. "You knew that Lillian had remarried?"

"Just that, through George. Have you heard anything more? It was Lindsay Pepper, of course?"

"It was Lindsay Pepper. But the strange thing, young George Lathrop told me, was that she didn't really want to do it. She and the old lady don't hit it off at all well, and all his money comes from his mother. Besides that, Lillian would rather have been a rich widow, you know—at all events, she did deliberately try to get out of it." "But, Joe, I don't see why she wouldn't!" "Oh, he had a tremendous hold on her. You see his name was mixed up with hers in the whole business. New Type of Car Stirs Automobile World

It is an open car one moment and 30 seconds later same car is entirely enclosed. Studebaker Duplex ends need of hunting for side curtains in the dark and storm

A new type of car has stirred the automobile world as has nothing since the abandonment of the "buggy" style of body building.

It is the Studebaker Duplex, so called to indicate that it is an open car one moment, and 30 seconds later it is an enclosed car.

Like all great advances in the industrial arts, it is "so simple in operation, it is a wonder it wasn't thought of before" — — —

Particularly since its need has been growing, year by year, ever since automobiles were made.

Many people all of the time, and most people part of the time, want an open car—to bring to their riding the fresh crispness of the country air, and a free and untrammelled association with the great outdoors.

Yet for these same people, the snug comfort of the closed car, shutting out the storm and the wind and the cold, has been at times a necessity.

Two cars in

The Studebaker Duplex is both cars in one. Just pull down the roller enclosures concealed in the roof of the car. In 30 seconds the open car has been made an enclosed car.

No hurried efforts to put up curtains; no hunting for the right one while the storm beats in; no mixing them up in the dark; no exposure through holes torn in them while trying to obtain, for the emergency, the protection given by a closed car — — —

Just pull down the roller enclosures giving instant enclosed car effect.

The body is built substantially—sides, corners and roof frame are of steel. The roof has curved steel sides and back; hardwood front. Steel, U-shaped cross beams, six of them, support the waterproofed, duplex fabric top and its linings. Here is permanent beauty, no sagging tops.

But Studebaker, on which the whole vehicle-using world has come to depend for reliability, would not rest on only one real contribution to the value given the public.

It must give all that engineering ability could devise.

Striking new features

So there are offered three distinct models of cars, to meet each of the three fields of demand—the Standard Six, with 113-inch wheelbase and 50 horsepower motor; the Special Six, with 120-inch wheelbase and 65 horsepower motor; the Big Six, most magnificent and luxurious of its products, with 127-inch wheelbase and 75 horsepower motor.

Duplex bodies are available on each line. In addition, closed models have workmanship and materials and beauty of line so far above the price class of the car, they must be seen to be appreciated.

Of scarcely less importance than the Duplex feature are other improvements such as, automatic ignition system, lighting control on the steering wheel, new location of emergency brake, improved one-piece windshield and many others.

The body lines, steering mechanism, and even the fenders of the new Studebaker were designed especially for genuine balloon tires. Thus the body lines harmonize with grace and beauty hitherto unattained, even by Studebaker.

Come in and see these new cars.

TO THE VOTERS OF MICHIGAN

Advertisements are appearing daily in the newspapers urging the people to vote against the Public School Amendment, claiming that it will cost $70,000,000.00 to put it into operation and that it will raise taxes. This statement is absolutely false and without foundation in fact and is put out by the parochial school interests of Michigan to scare the public into voting against the most important measure that has ever been put before the people of Michigan for their consideration.

In the State of Michigan there are 25,755 teachers, an average of 24 children to the teacher. In those other than the Public Schools there are 105,182 children in attendance and 2460 teachers or an average of 42.4 children to the teacher. When the Public School Amendment passes and the legislature enacts a law to make it effective, not another teacher need be hired in the public schools and the average throughout the state would be 28.5 pupils per teacher. Surely, this is not beyond the ability of any Public School teacher.

James Hamilton, head of the Public School Defense League is authority for the statement that the parochial schools of the country have furnished 65% of all our criminals, the Public Schools 5%, and foreigners and illiterates 30%. This means that many millions of dollars are being spent each year in prosecuting, housing and supporting criminals who received their elementary training in the parochial schools or who have no schooling whatever. Your duty to your country as a matter of National protection demands that you vote YES for the Public School Amendment.

Even granting, for the sake of argument, that it will cost more for public education when the amendment passes than it does now, do you know of any better way for your money to be spent than in training our boys and girls in the true principles of our government, teaching them the proper respect for our laws, the true meaning of our National traditions, a lasting love and respect for our flag, in short, training them to be good, loyal, law-abiding American citizens? Is it not better to spend your money in this way than in prosecuting criminals, building penal institutions to to house them and in supporting them while there.

Remember, the Public Schools, although educating over 80% of our children, have furnished only 5% of our criminals. The Public School Amendment instead of raising taxes will lower them and at the same time reduce crime. Think it over. Is it not well worth while?

Vote YES for the PUBLIC SCHOOL AMENDMENT

Discount Firm Held Solvent

Court Restores Peace Between Stockholders, Officers; Abbott Remains as President.

After hearing of two week's duration before Circuit Judge Arthur Webster, the General Discount corporation, has been adjudged in a state of solvency and all differences between the directors and what the latter termed as a "disgruntled element," among the shareholders have been ironed out without a receivership.

A special advisory board comprising bankers and businessmen and including one member to represent any dissatisfied share holders, will be appointed without delay to co-operate with the officers and directors in their move to restore the corporation to a firm, substantial basis.

Testimony adduced during the two weeks of litigation, revealed the company solvent with assets set at more than $2,000,000. The stockholders share represents but $50,000 of this, it was further stated. The liabilities are not excessive, the officers showed the court, adding that "disgruntled share holders" had prompted the suit when dissatisfied with recent dividends. Charles S. Abbott will continue as president.

When proceedings terminated, Judge Webster declared his desire to act in the best interests of 4,000 shareholders and urged opposing factions to get together and avert financial loss. The "peace" parley followed.

A group of eight stockholders precipitated the original action in their demand for the appointment of a receiver. Judge Webster was able, however, to bring the warring parties together for what purports to be an amicable settlement and a continuance of the company.—Detroit Free Press.

They all saw that the day had thred. Gibbs. He was a little stiff as Joe helped him to the car, and there was an anxious look in Ellen's eyes until she had him established in the spacious, pleasant order of the porch again, and was personally superintending his slow drinking of a glass of milk.

But he seemed to recover rapidly. Presently he was smiling and listening again in his usual way, and Ellen went off with Lizzie, to share the delight of preparing the baby for bed, and to talk over little Ellen's last meal for the day.

Tommy, in a glorious splashing and spattering, was profusely watering the garden, and Joe came over to the couch and sat down by Gibbs' side.

"I'm afraid our descending on you this way has been a good deal of a tax," Joe said regretfully.

Gibbs had been lying with closed eyes, and the sunken hollows about them filled Joe with concern. But now he opened them and smiled, and stretched out a hand to clasp Joe's fingers.

"Always welcome, at any time, dear boy," he said kindly. "But more than ordinarily welcome now. I had thought of sending for you—but one puts things off—and there's always the danger of alarming Ellen—"

Never had Joe felt the other man's extraordinary charm as he felt it now, when Gibbs Josselyn, at the end of a perfect September day, confided to his care the things he loved best in life.

"You see, old man, she's going to need you soon. And that is why I am glad you are really interested in establishing yourself in Los Angeles. She'll go away, for awhile, but she loves this place—and if you and Lizzie and a troop of children are here—"

"You and Lizzie will look out for her," Gibbs added, after a silence. "And the baby will do more than any one! And I think of her, with books, and her garden, and Tommy, and Tommy's music— He's an odd child, but she understands him, and his mistakes won't be the ordinary mistakes—"

He smiled at Joe, and somehow Joe smiled back, although the younger man felt tears hot behind his eyes.

"Won't be my mistakes," Gibbs said musingly. "It was all too easy for me. It was always plain sailing, and that's not—not exactly disciplinary, you know. I never cared much about the other fellow's troubles—Ellen's the one for that—and now, lying here, Joe, for the past few months, it's come to me as a sort of revelation that even in this I'm having it easy. If I've never had any particular pity for the fellows who haven't enough money, or had sick wives, or had to sit on an office stool eight hours a day—I certainly can't expect the world to stand still with sympathy because one man happens to be going out a little ahead of time!"

Joe could find nothing to say, and after a moment Gibbs spoke again, more briskly:

"Well! There was another thing I wanted to say to you, and I'll say it, and then we needn't take this up again. George Lathrop was here last summer, and we went into this a little. He seemed to feel that we might be making too much of this, and he sent a specialist down from San Francisco—Ellen never knew why he came; he happened to have been in Williams with me, and his wife came, and all that. But that's not the point: the thing is that I know how George feels about Ellen; he's always adored her. I mean that he makes a sort of a little patron saint of her. Every other woman in his life is judged by Ellen. Now, some day—she'll be lonely; Tommy'll need a man's hand, George will be his guardian, anyway—some day, George will tell her—he can't help it—what she is to him! And that's where I want you to use your own judgment, Joe. I can't tell her this, of course. And also there's a chance that she may honestly not want to marry any one! But if she lets any thought of me—"

"You might tell her then," he added, in a low tone, "that the purest and best and sweetest thing in my life was what she gave me—that no man ever owed a woman the debt I owe her!"

The voice stopped. It was twilight now; there was no more sunlight under the oaks; and Tommy and his hose were gone. The ocean moved like molten lead, wrinkling softly into opalescent gray and blue and silver.

"Well!" Gibbs said briefly. "That's all."

In the long silence Lizzie slipped out and buried the glimmer of her white gown in a wide porch chair.

"If this isn't Heaven!" she breathed, contentedly. A moment later Tommy's little twilight concert began. They could see a pool of warm red light about the piano, in the big sitting room, and Ellen's bent-dark head and the little dark head over her shoulder.

"There will be a splendid moon tonight," Gibbs told them.

He and Ellen watched it together, hours later, when Tommy was long in bed, and when Lizzie and Joe had stumbled away, as happily tired and

The Higher, the Colder

Temperature decreases with elevation because the air gets drier and higher as we ascend and quickly loses the sun's heat. Nearer the earth the heat is held by the heavy moist air that hangs on it.

Just as sleepy as Tommy, the child, was. Then Gibbs sat in her favorite seat, a low hammock beside his couch, so that her arms lightly rested against him, and their fingers were laced. They had no light, and could look across the low, broad rail of the porch, straight into the sleeping garden, and down the sloping sides of the little canyon to the sea.

"Et in Arcadia ego," Ellen said. "We've had more than one Arcady, Ellen," her husband answered. "And this has seemed to me not less perfect, somehow, because it is not to last!"

He heard the quick rise of her breast, and felt a faint tightening of her fingers.

"It has seemed right, somehow, to spend this year with you and Tommy, here—hasn't it been a perfect year?" "I won't allow you to talk so, Gibbs," she said, determinedly, but unsteadily.

"Just this once!" he answered, and she could tell by his tone that he was smiling. His wonderful smile—the smile he had given little snubbed Ellen Latimer, when he drove her to New York in his car!

"No formal goodbyes," Gibbs said. "Not that! For if you don't know what you are to me, Ellen, what I've felt as you poured all your goodness and sweetness and faith over me—"

With a sudden movement she laid her face against his hand, and he felt that her eyes were wet.

"Gibbs, please—!" "Well, I won't. But there's one thing—! When Tommy's older, tell him the truth. There's a time in a boy's life when it makes a lasting impression on him to realize that you— you can't play with fire. You pay, one way or another. I'm paying this way. There's too much else for a man to do, Ellen—too many things need changing—for any sane man—or any woman, to go right on into the thirties with the egotism of the teens. And that brings me to the other thing. Some day, if you feel like it, I wish you'd do something for some kid who has gotten himself in wrong with the authorities—I don't know exactly how—I wonder, now lying here, how I could ever have lived in a big city, and not realized that there are fellows who haven't anything like my natural advantages, and who get up against misunderstandings and misinterpretations—"

"I thought," Ellen said steadily, "that when you are better, if I ever go back, I'd go to Mary Cutter, because she is interested in all that sort of thing, and just follow the cases in some court. One couldn't do much, of course. But there would always be something, a visit to a mother, or perhaps a word here or there—"

"What a little saint you are, Ellen! Just a little inspired saint, that's all!" Gibbs exclaimed. "That's just what I mean. The law is all right, of course. It must be what it is. But I tell you, Ellen, that it's enough to drive the decency and the good out of any man. The coldness, the carelessness, the smells, and dirt—"

"You must forget all about it," she said. "You never did anything to deserve a prison experience—it was all a horrible mistake!"

"It was a mistake from a human standpoint," Gibbs conceded thoughtfully. "But I don't know about my record in a higher tribunal. I wonder how many of the fellows serving life terms now ever had an angel for a mother, and a saint for a wife, clothes and friends and warm food from the hour they were born, always money to buy prestige and service and preference—! Ellen, if I had my life to live over again, do you know what I think it would be? According to the principle that until every other man had it, I didn't want it, and until every other child had it, I didn't want my son to have it—what ever it was, travel, clothes, education, toys, everything!"

"I suppose that's loving your neighbor as yourself," added Ellen's thoughtful voice.

"Well, you go to old George, and he and Mary Cutter will help you find the cases you're after—" Gibbs was beginning again. But she laid her hand lightly over his lips.

"Don't talk that way—not as if—!" Her cheek was laid against his hand again. He put his free hand softly on her head. And even though her thick, dark hair Ellen felt the chill of his fingers.

(THE END)

VAIN RED ROSE

ONE morning in a garden there was a little dewdrop that wanted to get away from the sun's hot breath that it might stay in the garden all day, so it nestled close to a beautiful red rose and whispered: "Hide me, beautiful rose, in the soft petals of your lovely gown."

The rose was very vain and thought only of her own beauty, so she told little dewdrop to creep close inside and nestle in her heart, for she wanted to keep it until moonlight flooded the garden when her lover, the nightingale, would come to sing to her his love song.

Away down deep in her heart crept little dewdrop, thinking that red rose must love it to let it rest in her heart and that when night came it would shine on one of the beautiful red petals of the rose and they would be the most admired of all the garden folks.

But it did not know the cold, vain heart of the beautiful rose and all day long she kept dewdrop from peeping once into the garden, as it longed to do, for fear of losing the fewer she wished to adorn her beauty at night.

By and by when the moonlight crept into the garden making it almost like day the big red rose opened and told dewdrop to rest upon one of her soft petals.

"Tonight I shall be the loveliest rose in the garden, for I can see that none of my sisters wears a jewel. How fortunate you are, little dewdrop, to have me near you!"

Just then the sweet tones of the nightingale's love song filled the garden and red rose swayed a little in the breeze that the jewels might sparkle in the moonlight and make her more beautiful in the eyes of her lover.

When the nightingale flew closer, and told the vain rose she was indeed the most beautiful rose in the garden she tossed her proud head and down tumbled the poor little dewdrop to the ground.

"Now see what you have done!" said the angry rose. "After I sheltered you all day you repay my kindness in this way." Never a word did she ask about the poor little dewdrop that lay trembling on the ground below.

"Rose, dear rose," cried the dewdrop, "do bend over and help me to rest again on your soft cheek!" "Bend over, indeed," replied the rose. "Why, you foolish thing, I might break my slender stem. You have spoiled my evening by tumbling off and you expect me to help you."

"But don't you love me, Rose, dear?" asked the dewdrop, who had been all day close to her heart and had grown to love her deeply.

"Love you!" exclaimed the vain rose. "Why, you silly little drop, I only saved you from the sun that you might make me more beautiful at night when the nightingale came to sing to me."

The nightingale had ceased his singing and had heard what the vain rose said, so he flew down to the dewdrop and lifted it in his bill and carried it to another rose more fragrant than the red rose but not so beautiful.

Into the very heart of the pale pink rose the nightingale dropped the dewdrop. "Here you will find sweetness that will be worthy of your love," said the nightingale. "Here will I come each night and sing my love song, for the red rose has no heart for love. It is filled with vanity."

For her vanity and cruel treatment of little dewdrop the proud red beauty not only lost her jewel but her lover.

THE professor was waiting for his long-distance call. Meanwhile he was getting in on other connections.

"Give me Main 3162 right away. I have exactly a minute to spend on this, and I don't wish to be kept waiting," came a high-pitched, nervous voice.

"Main 3162," answered Central imperturbably. "No, no! You've made a mistake! That isn't the right number at all! I said Main 3261."

"Main 3261," repeated Central, her measured tones calm and courteous. "I beg your pardon."

"Give me the manager!" screamed the one in a hurry. "That's twice you've gotten it wrong. 3162, 3162 is what I've kept asking you for. And I told you I was in a hurry."

"The manager," agreed Central unruffled. "Is this the manager?" the professor heard next. "I've been trying for half an hour to get Main 3261. Central pays no attention to what I say. This is the worst exchange in the city. And I'm in a hurry. I told Central I was in a hurry. I want Main 3162!"

Then the professor's call came through and he left to take the subway downtown marveling at telephone technique in the face of public pigishness.

There was a rush in the subway. Ahead of him was a lady of uncertain years with yellow, yellow hair, and a very tight skirt. The train had come in on a curve and there was a wide gap to step across. Mildly walked with her head in the air.

"Watch your step! Watch your step! WATCH YOUR STEP!" The cry just saved her from going square through to the track below.

She turned with a withering glance to the guard.

"What is your number? Such impertinence! What is your number, I say?"

"Four-seven-six, lady. Watch your step!"

The last the professor saw of her she had squeezed into a seat ahead of a foreign woman carrying a little baby, whom the same guard was helping aboard.

On the train, as he thought over the day, it was the public about whom the professor felt pessimistic. It seemed to him that those who serve the public have, on the whole, acquired the habit of professional courtesy, while the manners of some of the public themselves sometimes are for private use only.

in Spirited Hats

The mode seems to have turned its barb upon demure and unassertive millinery. Fashion is indulging in spirited and picturesque hats, some of them worn at a jaunty tilt while others are dignified, but wayward. Shapes are subtle and very generally becoming, materials rich and varied. Velvet, brocades, metal tissues, felt, velours and satin, with combinations of many fabrics, insure a mid-winter season of brilliant headwear.

A soft velvet hat shown here is a debonair, off-the-face shape that is popular. As trimmings go, it is very simply finished with an ornament of ribbon plaited about a mystic crown. Below it one version of the Spanish sailor in hatter's plush shows just how adorable a sailor can be. It is trimmed with sequins about the brim, edge and moire ribbon that extends over the crown and ends in long ties.

"JUNE" noted for roses, June bugs and June brides is a souvenir of the once proud and haughty "Junius" family who owned many chariots and went to the public baths with the best of the Romans. Famous people nowadays have cigars and soaps named after them. "June," "July" and "August" were the compliments bestowed on the "Junius" family while Julius and Augustus Caesar each named a month in their own honor.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRDING KING

THE EMPTY CRADLE

Rock the cradle empty
Children will be plenty.

THIS rhyme, slightly changed in the wording in various localities, is common all over the United States and Canada. It indicates superstition which is based purely upon the sympathetic magic of our primitive ancestors—that branch of sympathetic magic known as homeopathic—like producing like.

The custom of rocking an empty cradle in order to increase the population has its counterpart in the customs of savage tribes existing in a primitive state all over the world today—which indicates that we are a trifle primitive as yet ourselves. In some sections while it is admitted that rocking the empty cradle will produce "babies a-plenty," it is also believed that if there is already a baby in the family the rocking of its empty cradle will work it mischief. Some say it will kill the child. This is because it was believed by primitive man that a baby's soul was, as yet, very closely connected with its body and great care must be taken that it be not charmed out of it.

The idea of the transmigration of souls—sometimes faintly indicated, sometimes definitely expressed—appears to have existed in the various conceptions of primitive man regarding the mysteries by which he was surrounded and confronted. Now rocking the empty cradle in an attempt to conjure a soul to take human form might conjure away the loosely attached soul of the existing body. So don't rock the cradle for more babies until the existing one has grown too old to use a cradle.

A LINE O' CHEER

By John Kendrick Bangs.

A RULER

I DO not care how small I be,
How insignificantly wee,
I'm going to fill my place as well
As though within my little shell
There lay a Universe, and I
The Ruler of the spacious sky
Flung all about, that when the day
Shall dawn when I must pass away
I shall have put the job well through
That on this earth was mine to do.
