Many Towns Seek Normal

Text of Bill Now In House Committee.

Great activity is being carried on in every city in Northern Michigan in an effort to present its claims as the logical site for the proposed Northern Michigan Normal School.

Petoskey is making considerable effort to attract the attention of the Lausing crowd and its Chamber of Commerce has sent booklets to all interested parties, setting forth the advantages of that city as the possible home for the school.

Cheboygan is equally active and an immense committee has been appointed to promote the claims of that city, as the site for the new school.

Manistee, Cadillac, Alpena, Frankfort, Traverse City and East Jordan are also on their toes watching the progress of the bill which would authorize the establishment of the school in Northern Michigan.

The text of the bill follows:

A BILL

To provide for the establishment, location, conduct and maintenance of a normal school in the northern part of the Southern Peninsula, and to make an appropriation for the same.

The People of the State of Michigan enact:

Section 1. A State Normal School shall be established in the northern part of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan for the purpose of instructing persons in the several branches pertaining to a public school education and in the science and the art of teaching.

Earthquake Felt Here

More Noticeable in Business Section of City.

East Jordan and Northern Michigan—as well as the entire east half of North America—experienced its first earthquake shock at 8:25 Saturday evening.

Never before in history of modern northern Michigan has anything like it been experienced. In fact, Michigan and the middle western section of the nation never was hit by a quake before.

The shock seemed to be more noticeable in the business section of East Jordan than in the residential part of the city. The motion seemed to be east and west, and shelves, goods in our stores were moved around considerable. Many became temporarily ill from the swaying motion and a few were frightened. In the large crowd at the Temple Theatre only a few noticed the vibration, the majority not knowing about it until they left the auditorium.

The vibration caused many clocks in the city to stop at the 8:25 point. Pictures on walls and electric light fixtures swayed to and fro.

From newspaper reports, just where the center of the disturbance was seems still open to conjecture. One theory, which seems plausible, was that a shifting of a fault in the bed of the Atlantic ocean caused the disturbance. Some scientists state that we may have other tremors before the earth becomes finally adjusted.

Gidley and Mac Purchase Store At Grayling

Gidley and Mac, Druggists, of East Jordan have purchased the A. M. Lewis Drug Store at Grayling. Chas. J. McNamara went over to that city, Tuesday, and is now in charge of same.

Mr. and Mrs. McNamara plan to make Grayling their future home and will move their household effects there in the spring.

Mr. McNamara has been affiliated with the drug store business in East Jordan for a good many years. He has made a host of personal friends here who are sorry to have him leave our midst, but wish the firm of Gidley and Mac utmost success in their new field.

Pharmacist, Harry Gregory, formerly of this city, has been with Mr. Lewis for some time and will continue with Gidley and Mac.

James Gidley remains in charge of the East Jordan store.

Coolidge Signs P. O. Bill

Washington—The postal pay and rate increase bill has been signed by President Coolidge. It increases the pay of postal clerks and carriers numbering more than 600,000 by about $320 each a year, adding about $68,000,000 to the government payroll. The raises are effective at once and back pay from January 1, 1925 under the new scale, will be paid as soon as possible.

Miss Abby Rockefeller Engaged

New York—Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., have announced the engagement to David M. Milton of their daughter, Abby, the richest girl in the world. Milton is a law clerk and lives in this city.

The date of the wedding has not been set, but it is assumed that the function, planned to be one of the most brilliant in Manhattan history, will be held in June.

Wreck Costs Three Lives

Newark, N. J.—Three railroad employees were killed and about 40 passengers were injured, a few seriously, in a rear-end collision between two Pennsylvania railroad passenger trains at Manhattan transfer. A local train from New York to Philadelphia crashed into the Atlantic coast line express, from New York for Washington and the South.

Review Week Music Memory

Examination Tests To Be Held The Coming Week.

This is the week for a general review of the twenty numbers on the Music Contest for fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the schools. The separate examinations for each grade will be given during the regular Music periods on Monday and Tuesday of next week, March 16 and 17. The Final test of the best ones from each grade, on Wednesday morning of the same week.

Not all of us can win a prize but we agree to having enjoyed the time spent in studying these compositions and their composers. We tell you with pride that our own "America" has produced such famous musicians and composers as MacDowell, Cadman and Sousa. We listen with pleasure to such compositions as "The Advil Chorus," "The Swan" and "The Barcarolle" from the "Tales of Hoffman" and know what they are all about. The old-fashioned Minuet so well interpreted by Beethoven is a thing of beauty as we have found, and Strauss' interpretation of the 19th century waltz in his beautiful "Blue Danube" charms with its swinging rhythm. We could tell you much more about these interesting numbers but give you the list instead and you may explore for yourself.

Charlevoix Has Big Fire Loss

Fire and Water Cause Heavy Damages Sunday Morning.

Fire declared by Charlevoix firemen to have been one of the worst to fight that they have ever experienced, broke out at about 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning in the Odd Fellow's block. The fire is believed to have started in the kitchen of the lodge room, which were on the second floor and spread from there to the second floor of the adjoining building, over the Fessenden Drug store.

The drug store, which is at the corner of Park and Bridge streets, was one of the show places of the town, and reputed to be one of the finest in northern Michigan. The first floor of the Odd Fellows' building was occupied by H. B. Jacobs grocery store and the Redpath dry goods store. None of the stores received any damage by fire, as the fire was confined to the upper floors, and much of the stock and movable fixtures were removed, but anything remaining on the lower floors was literally flooded.

The second floor of the drug store building consisted of apartments which were occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Glenn See, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Buckbee and family, and Mrs. H. Pearl. The Odd Fellows' hall was shared with all of the other fraternal organizations in the town, except the Masons. The list includes the Encampment, the Maccabees K. of P., Woodmen, Royal Neighbors, Women's Relief Corps and Rebekahs. None of the paraphernalia belonging to the lodges was saved.

The buildings are of brick veneer construction so that the firemen had difficulty in getting at the burning portions, but the progress of the flames was finally checked at about 8 o'clock. A strong northeast wind and zero weather added to the troubles of the fire fighters. Neither building collapsed, but the second floors were completely gutted, and the roof of the lodge building caved in.

The drug store building is owned by Charles E. See and the Odd Fellows' building by the lodge and the losses on both are covered, or nearly so, by insurance. The losses on the store stocks household goods and lodge property will be difficult to determine.

Grand Rapids—E. A. Mavis, chairman of the extension committee of the Grand Rapids Safety Council, who is in charge of the organization of the Central Western Michigan Safety Council, has arranged a program of organization meetings in 12 cities in this region prior to April 1. When these communities have formed locals, each will be asked to name delegates to the central council which will attempt to co-operate in enforcement of uniform traffic and safety laws.

Detroit—In a closely contested fight the Republican state central committee, in convention here, elected Kennedy L. Potter, of Jackson, as chairman in place of Burt D. Cady of Port Huron who has held that position for seven years. The vote was 568 to 507. The chairmanship was the last business before the convention to be decided. First, the composition of the new state central committee in accordance with nominations at district caucuses was fixed. Then the resolutions of the convention were approved, and nominations were made for the various state offices that are to be filled at the April 6 election.

Marshall—The wish of a dead woman that part her money, $5,000, be used to build a club house for the "Women of Marshall," may not be fulfilled for years. The Monday club, which was bequeathed the money, has no other funds. The woman Miss Elizabeth K. Hughes, asked that somewhere in the contemplated building a memorial plate to her memory be placed. She also left a bequest of several thousand dollars to the public library without specifying the purpose for which it is to be used.

Jersey Breeders Organize

Form Antrim-Charlevoix County Ass'n Last Wednesday.

The Jersey breeders of Central Lake Ellsworth and Charlevoix held a Jersey meeting at Ellsworth on Wednesday, Feb'y 25th.

Many things of interest to Jersey owners were talked about and explained by H. E. Dennison, American Jersey Cattle Club Extension man. He was assisted by Burton Mellencamp, County Agent of Charlevoix County and Mr. Jewell, County Agent of Antrim.

Mr. Mellencamp used to be official tester for the North Antrim Testing Ass'n and has made a host of friends and is boosting for better cows, especially Jerseys.

About thirty men were present. A two-county Jersey Cattle Club was organized and the following Directors appointed:

Ernest Lohm, Central Lake; George Meggison, Charlevoix; Albert Elzinga, Atwood; Mick DeKings, Ellsworth; Hubert Bearss, Ellsworth.

This locality promises to become a Jersey center of real prominence. We have a number of select grade and purebred herds having Record of Performance Record. Several bulls of good type and noted breeding have been imported here within the last few weeks.

George Hamilton
1855-1925

George Hamilton was the fourth son of Andrew and Margaret Hamilton, who were natives of Kilbirnie, Ayrshire Scotland. They came to this country in 1847 and located at Mayville, Wisconsin, where the deceased was born on Nov. 10 1856; and fell to sleep Feb. 6, 1925, at the home of his brother, James Hamilton, of Poynette, Wis. He was therefore, 69 years, 2 months and 26 days old.

He was married to Rebecca Winter of Iron Mountain, Wis., Sept. 6, 1882. There was no issue. He was ill for about two years. A brother and a sister pre-deceased him, and are buried in the Old Country, also his father, mother, his sister Anna, (Mrs. David Gibson) of Attalla, Alabama; also, two brothers, Alexander of Park Falls, Wis. and Andrew of Attalla, Alabama.

There remains to mourn his departure, his wife, Rebecca Hamilton, his eldest brother, William Hamilton, of Poynette, and his sister, Mrs. Charles Prickett, of Attalla, Ala., besides a host of relatives and friends.

The out of town friends that attended the funeral were: Mr. I. B. Winter, of Horicon, Wis., brother-in-law; Mrs. H. Osterberg, of St. Paul, Minn., sister-in-law; Mrs. Alexander Scouler, cousin of George and Jas. Hamilton, and her brother, Mr. Turner of Columbus, Wis.; Mr. Edward Bogue, nephew of Mrs. James Hamilton, from Beresford, S. Dak.

There was a good representation of the local Lodge of Masons, who provided the pall-bearers, also a nice gathering of friends and neighbors of the deceased.

A short service was held at the home of James Hamilton and the public service was held in the Presbyterian Church, Rev. R. J. Aitchison conducting the service, taking as his text, Revelation 7:17. A quartette sang by request, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Safe In the Arms of Jesus." At the close of the service the body was taken to the depot and taken to Horicon, Wis., where it was met by the Masonic Brethren, who thereupon took charge, taking it to the Lodge Room, where it was guarded and cared for overnight, the funeral taking place the next day (Tuesday) at three P. M.

The usual Masonic Ceremony, was held at the Cemetery. The Masons of Horicon, very thoughtfully provided conveyances for the friends, from the station and also the next day for funeral.—Poynette Press, Poynette, Wis.

What is a Mason Jar?

Almost any housewife, who puts up her summer fruits and vegetables in them, thinks she can tell you; but we doubt it. Here is what C. Flint, head of the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co., says a Mason jar is:

It starts in a quarry in West Virginia as common sand to which is added soda ash, from Ohio; limestone, properly ground, from Michigan, feldspar from North Carolina; niter from the mountain deserts of Chile; antimony from Utah; cobalt, from Canada and selenium from Montana. On the top a zinc cap, from Missouri, and a porcelain liner, which uses the ingredients mentioned above and fluorspar, from Kentucky, and cyrolite from Greenland.

Still, you do not know what a Mason jar is until you know the process by which these ingredients are fused and blown to shape.

"Diamond Pants Buttons!"

A Kansas editor remarks that "another big wheat crop in Kansas with prices ranging over a dollar put diamond pants buttons on the Kansas farmers."

The remark comes as the price of wheat tops all records since 1868, and equals the war prices obtaining from 1916 to 1921. Huge fortunes have been made by speculators in the grain, and a short world crop forces foreign countries to put in orders that their citizens may have bread.

Just how much of this huge profit is coming to western farmers is doubtful. The Kansas Board of Agriculture says that three-fourths of the Kansas crop was marketed last November, with prices just over a dollar. Now the soars over the two dollar mark, but it seems, as usual, that the distributors and speculators get it.

We are advised to live within our income. Now if someone will advise us where to find an income we will try the advice.

Our extra slice of pie, this week, is awarded to the local citizen who "knew" that Floyd Collins was not buried underground.

This is the time of the year that the youngsters think of the old swimming hole.

Legislature Is Ready For Real Work of Session

Potato Grading and Standards Bill Is Sent Back to Committee

Legislature was secondary to politics during the past week as the members of the 100 per cent Republican State Legislature closed up their desks at Lansing and departed for the big G. O. P. conclave, held at Detroit, Wednesday, February 25. Four short sessions held Monday evening, Tuesday morning, late Thursday afternoon, and Friday morning comprised the week's program.

Important action was taken on many leading farm bills. At the Monday evening session, when Senator Leland's bill to make the federal potato grades compulsory in Michigan came up for final passage in the Senate, it met unexpected opposition. After it had been attacked by a Detroit member and one or two others, it was referred back to the Senate Committee on Agriculture. This measure has the backing of the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange, the Michigan State Farm Bureau, State Department of Agriculture, College authorities and many other influential groups.

Senator Leland's companion bill which would give the State Commissioner of Agriculture the necessary authority to properly enforce state grades and standards of farm products, also encountered opposition and was likewise referred back to the Committee on Agriculture.

Pass T-B Bill

From the rural point of view, one of the most important developments in the House was the final passage of Rep. Espie's bill which would require the testing before they could be brought into an accredited T. B. free county.

Final debate on this bill centered around an amendment by Rep. John Holland of Gogebic, which would prohibit the sale of meat from animals condemned and ordered slaughtered. The amendment failed and the bill in its original form was passed by a vote of 75 to 1 after it had been staunchly supported by Representatives John Espie of Eagle, Orvy Hulet of Armada, Fred Ming of Cheboygan, Philip O'Connell of McGregor, Wm. P. Strauch of Vernon, and Chas. A. Sink of Ann Arbor.

Seek Primary Reforms

Bills looking toward primary election reform are arousing considerable interest. Rep. Chas. Evans of Tipton has introduced a bill proposing a revision of the primary election law, providing for party enrollment and for a pre-primary convention. Under this plan conventions would be held in advance of the primary. The choice of the pre-primary convention would automatically win a place on the primary ballot. Any faction which was dissatisfied with the result of the convention could place their favorite candidate on the ballot by petition, just as at present.

A different change in our primary law is proposed by Rep. Ate Dykstra of Grand Rapids. His bill provides in part, "No candidate for state or county office shall be declared the nominee of that political party for said office unless he shall receive a majority of the votes cast for candidates for any such office. In case no such candidate receives a majority of all such votes the names of the two candidates who have received the highest number of votes for any such office shall be placed on a primary ballot to be voted upon at a primary election, which shall be held one week from the first primary election in the same place and manner as the first primary election."

Name of College Considered

When Rep. McKinnon's bill to change the name of the Michigan Agricultural College to Michigan State College, came up for final passage in the House, it was referred back to the Committee on the M. A. C. It appeared evident that the bill in its present form would be defeated by the House so an attempt will be made to reach a compromise through proposing such name as Michigan State College of Agriculture, Engineering, Arts and Sciences.

In an attempt to stamp out foul brood and other bee diseases Rep. David H. Brake of Newaygo County, has introduced a bill to provide a fund of $5,000 for research and field work in the eradication of diseases of bees.

A measure providing that the automobile license of any driver be automatically revoked whenever he was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, has been proposed by Rep. Charles A. Sink, of Ann Arbor.

Rep. Denis G. Clancy of Hillsdale, has introduced a bill to appropriate $100,000 a year for county fair premiums. In the past this figure has been set at $75,000.

Spearing of fish in Michigan would be entirely prohibited by two bills introduced by Rep. Harold H. Smedley of Grand Rapids. One bill would abolish spearing in inland waters and allow for the taking of fish only by hook and line. The other bill would prohibit entirely the sale of fishing spears in Michigan.

In an effort to protect farmers from the marauding tendencies of hunters, Senator Norman B. Horton of Fruitridge has introduced a bill providing that "No person shall hunt in any manner on improved lands used and occupied by another without the consent of the owner or person in possession thereof."

The restoration of State bounties on wolves is proposed by Rep. David F. Morrison of Germfask. The bounty would be set at $10 for each wolf over six months of age and $3 for each wolf whelp.

Mrs. Anderson the lady member of the House, has introduced a bill "to regulate the occupation of hatters and cosmeticians; to create a state board of examiners for the licensing of persons to carry on and teach such practices" etc.

DEATH TAKES HEAD OF UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

DR. MARION LEROY BURTON

Ann Arbor—After a valiant fight of more than four months against the ravages of disease, Dr. Marlon Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, died at his home here Feb. 18. The end came suddenly and quietly while he was sleeping. The immediate cause of death was heart failure following the long struggle against pneumonia. He was 51 years of age.

Recognized as one of the leaders in educational circles, Dr. Burton's loss will be keenly felt by the whole nation and particularly by the university whose destinies he had so ably guided since 1920. In the space of five years he had inaugurated and almost brought to completion one of the greatest building plans ever undertaken by a university.

Dr. Burton will go down in history as one of America's truly great men. His rise from a newsboy to the presidency of one of the greatest educational institutions in America was achieved through persistent effort aided by a keen mind, a forceful and likable personality and an indomitable will. His career will serve as an inspiration to the youth of coming generations.

Coolidge Favors Waterway

Washington—The first definite step looking to the development of the St. Lawrence deeper waterway, by which it is planned to make seaports of Chicago and other Great Lakes cities, is provided in the rivers and harbors authorization bill, unanimously ordered reported by the senate commerce committee.

The amendment, personally recommended by President Coolidge, authorizes the executive to have a survey made of the St. Lawrence river and plans and estimates prepared in accordance with the study of the international joint commission. The president is asked to report to congress on the survey, with such recommendations as he may deem advisable.

Oil Deals Reopened

New York—Legal proceedings dealing with hitherto unrevealed alleged bribes in connection with the Teapot Dome oil scandal will be begun within a few days in Cheyenne, Wyo., and Paris, France, it has become known.

Information obtained from official sources in Washington was that government prosecutors now believe $2,000,000 changed hands when the leases were granted. It is to run down leads on this angle that the unusual procedure of court action in France will be resorted to.

The U. S. may be weak in the air but not in hot air.

An anti-tobacco movement is to be launched on a large scale soon. The best ally the movement can get is one of the present five cent cigars.

The government is trying to get up another arms conference. If this thing develops into a habit we will hardly have a motor boat left in the navy.

It costs New York from $80,000 to $100,000 an inch to remove snow on the streets. This pays because a 12-day blizzard is credited with stopping business to the extent of $60,000,000.

We are always glad to have new items contributed to our column but the writer must sign his or her name, not for publication, but to show that the contribution is sent in good faith.

Changing Popular Tastes

One of the best methods of determining what the public wants is to give them free what they ask for, and then check-up on what they request. The big radio stations consistently do this, and it is interesting to see what the manager of WEAJ, a big New York station, discovers in this connection.

The jazz age is rapidly passing says John Holman, the broadcasting manager, because in January 1923, 75 per cent of the fans asked for jazz while the same month of 1924 dropped to 35 per cent, and last month only 5 per cent of the requests were for jazz. "Good music" has jumped from 20 to 45 per cent of the requests. "Talks" show great increase in popularity, advancing from 5 to 20 per cent in popularity in two years. Symphonic music ranks second only to "good music," 30 per cent of the requests received ask for it.

In January 1923 this station received

King Tommy

Count Casimir presented his card. Tommy read the name on it—Casimir Istvan Graf—but was not much enlightened. He would if he could have read what was printed under the name. It was a large card, much larger than the visiting cards used by ladies in England, and there were four lines of small print on it, no doubt a description of Count Casimir's position in society. Unfortunately, these were in a language which Tommy had never seen before. It seemed a very queer language. There were curious curly accents over the consonants. The letter X appeared with unusual frequency. There were several R's with their faces turned the wrong way, looking very much as if some one had lifted them up, turned them over and set them down the wrong way. The same thing had happened to a couple of N's and there was a B with a curious little horn attached to it. Tommy could read Greek. He had a nodding acquaintance with the Hebrew alphabet and could distinguish between German capital B's and V's. Count Casimir's language was none of these.

"I bid you welcome," said Count Casimir. "In the words of your great Shakespeare, I say, 'All's well that ends well.'"

"I'm afraid," said Tommy politely, "that there is some mistake."

At this moment Janet Church came along the corridor, wearing a pink dressing gown, a pair of blue quilted slippers and a very ribbon cap. She was on her way to a distant bath. She saw Casimir, erect and beautiful—he is a very good looking man—in front of Tommy's door. She also saw Tommy, with the lather beginning to dry on his face.

Janet had been three days in Berlin, worrying the consul and the secretaries in the embassy for permission to go on to Mogalia. She had not received my letter about that last curate. Indeed, she never did receive it. It reached Berlin after she had gone away and was finally returned to me.

Some women would have hurried on, turning their heads the other way. Tommy was in his pajamas. She herself was most imperfectly clothed. But Janet does not suffer from modesty and she loves interfering in other people's business. She calls this being helpful, and believes it to be virtuous.

"Can I," she said, "be of any assistance to you? I speak German fluently."

Casimir turned, put his heels together and bowed to her. Then he kissed her hand. Janet, in a red dressing gown and boudoir cap, must have seen a surprising and rather a disgusting sight. But Casimir's manners were as perfect as his clothes. He would have bowed as politely and kissed her hand with the same elegant devotion if she had stepped straight out of her bath to be helpful.

"Thanks," said Tommy, "just tell this gentleman, will you, that there's some mistake. Most likely they've sent him up to the wrong room. I'm not the man he wants to see."

Janet made a long speech in German. Casimir answered her with a still longer speech. Janet replied to that, and Casimir, with an immense flow of language, answered her. Tommy declares that they talked to each other for ten minutes. Then Janet turned to him.

"He says his name is Count Istvan Casimir."

That seemed a small result of so much conversation, and gave Tommy very little fresh information. The Casimir and the Istvan he had read on the visiting card, though in reversed order. Graf he took to be the

"Tell him," he said, "that there's a mistake. He can't possibly want to see me. Ask him who he does want, and then get him to go down again and find the number of his friend's room."

Janet started again. So did Casimir. This time they talked for a quarter of an hour, fast and emphatically. There is nothing in the world so irritating as hearing two people talk to each other in an unknown language when you know they are talking about your affairs. Tommy is the best tempered of men, but even he began to feel impatient.

"He says," said Janet, turning to Tommy at least, "that he's sure your name is Norheys."

"Is that all he said?"

"That's all," said Janet.

"Well, then, all I can say is that I don't wonder the Germans lost the war. If it takes them half an hour to say 'What's your name?' they can't expect to get on at war or anything else. It must be an utterly rotten language."

Janet, who hated all Germans with a passionate intensity during the war, has been developing a strong affection for them since the peace was signed. She cannot bear, now, to hear a word said against them and has transferred her dislike to the French. When Tommy insulted the German language she turned away and stalked down the corridor toward the bath.

Casimir has an amazing facility in quotation.

"And the imperial votaress passed on," he said, "in maiden meditation, fancy free. Please."

Casimir's English accent was by no means perfect. Tommy, though he ought to have recognized Shakespeare's compliment to Queen Elizabeth, seemed to have thought that the count was still talking German. He darted into his room and picked up his phrase book. He distinctly remembered that he had somewhere seen the sentence "Please go away." That was, as I have said, a very good phrase book. "Please go away" is a thing which the traveler in a foreign land constantly wants to say to beggars, extortionate cabmen, guides, touts, and officials who want to look at passports. Tommy grabbed the book, turned over the pages quickly, and came to the sentence he wanted.

Unfortunately, the next sentence in the book was "Please sit down." Tommy, running his eyes hurriedly from the English to the German column, picked up the wrong phrase.

"Bitte setzen sie sich," he said.

Casimir could not very well sit in the world, went to the wall, the numbers of the rooms of the guests whom they sought—guests whom visitors had come to see or for whom telephone calls had been made. Busy travelers, newly arrived and filled with a sense of their own importance, crowded round the desk of the reception clerk and demanded rooms. Self-possessed elderly men, mostly fat and often Jewish, lounged in deep chairs with cigars in their mouths and surveyed the scene through half-closed eyes. American tourists eddied round the newspaper stalls in the corner of the hall and clamored for the New York Herald. It was in their eyes a sign of the well nigh inconceivable stupidity and incompetence of all European peoples that the supply of New York Herald's was insufficient to meet their demands. The desk of a harassed woman who sold concert and theater tickets was besieged by ladies who did not know exactly what they wanted but hoped to secure seats at some agreeable entertainment by asking questions in bad German. A boy, rather older than the pages, stood at the swinging glass door and drove it round on its pivot with vigorous pushes. He drove it faster and faster as more and more people passed in and out. His hope was that some time in the course of the morning he would succeed in hitting a slowly moving passer with the following wing of the door. Those who entered and left the hotel approached the whirling door very much in the spirit of medieval sportsmen who rode at the quintain.

All this delighted Tommy. He had hitherto led a quiet and uneventful life, seldom disturbed by anything more exciting than a Sunday school treat. He watched the moving figures, gazed at the strange faces, listened to a babel of different languages, and felt that this was exactly what he had come to Berlin to enjoy. For some time he was content simply to stand watching and listening. Then he began to wonder what he had better do next. He had the whole day before him. His breast pocket was stuffed with money. He had a great city to explore.

Before leaving home he had read up Baedeker's Guide to Berlin, an old copy borrowed from his sister Emily. He knew that there was a street called Unter den Linden which he ought to see, a park called the Tier Garten, an avenue called the Steges Allee, several churches and museums. There were theaters, picture galleries and restaurants, all duly named and the nature indicated by the worthy Baedeker. At the moment he felt more attracted toward a restaurant. His breakfast had been very light, and though it was only ten o'clock, he felt hungry. He wondered whether it would be possible to demand luncheon in a Berlin restaurant at that hour without exciting the derision of the waiters.

He felt a light touch on his arm and looked round. Count Casimir stood beside him.

"Just you clear off, like a good man," said Tommy. "I've had enough of you for one morning."

His mind was still full of his hotel theory, and he was quite determined not to be robbed by any plausible stranger. He turned away and walked across the hall toward the row of telephone boxes. He had no intention of telephoning to any one. Indeed, he knew no one in Berlin to whom he could telephone, nor could he have given a number in German. He merely wished to escape from Casimir.

But Casimir was not an easy man to shake off. He followed Tommy.

"You wish to go to the Mascotte tonight," he said. "Please?"

The word "Please" was evidently in constant use in Casimir's language. His repetition of it in English gave a curious effect of extreme politeness to his conversation.

Tommy had heard of the Mascotte. My nephew, Emily's eldest boy, was in Berlin for some time as a subordinate member of the Inter-allied mission of control. He knew all there was to know about the night life of the city. It is a supper place, "d-d expensive," but the dancing was "top hole." It was not the sort of dancing which the censors of the London county council would approve, but it was "top hole" and "not too, you know, only rather more so than you'd see at home."

"Please, you will visit the Mascotte."

Casimir nodded and smiled in a very confidential manner, as if he and Tommy shared a secret which no one else in the world knew anything about. Tommy revised his opinion of the man. He was not a hotel thief. He was a tout, engaged in securing customers for the Mascotte supper room. Tommy had heard of such people. He had no intention of putting himself into the hands of one of them.

"She will be there, naturally," said Casimir, "and"—another quotation, this time disagreeably suggestive to Tommy's mind—

"Journeys end in lovers meeting. Every wise man's son doth know."

This was going too far. Tommy meant to enjoy himself on his holiday. He had discarded his clerical collar in order to do so more freely, but he had no wish to pursue unknown ladies into night clubs. In order to get rid of Casimir finally he stepped into the nearest telephone box.

It was already occupied, and, since a telephone box is always a very small thing, he bumped into a lady who held the receiver to her ear. She was so intent on what she was doing that she took no notice of Tommy. He, most unwillingly heard what she was saying.

"Then let me tell you, young man, that there'll be trouble. Lord Edmond Troyte distinctly promised that my passport would be ready for me. Yes? What's that? I've been to the consulate three times and I'm going again. The consul is totally incompetent and his clerks are rude. It's your business. What? Yes. I say it's your business. You're the third secretary, you say. That makes no difference. It's your business to see about that passport."

"What on earth are you doing there and who are you?"

Janet Church turned at last to Tommy, who had bumped into her again. She was fully dressed this time and the light in the telephone box was dim. But he recognized her at once as the lady who had stood talking German in the corridor. He also realized that she was in an exceedingly bad temper. Casimir, with his suggestion of strange lady-loves at the Mascotte, was bad enough. Janet Church, thumping for the blood of the third secretary, was worse. Tommy left the telephone box hurriedly.

Casimir was waiting for him outside.

"Please," he said, "I have engaged a table for you at the Mascotte. It is catalogue—no, registered, no, I remember, you say booked; for the Graf von Norheys, please."

"I don't exactly know what a Graf is," said Tommy, "but whatever it is, I'm not one."

"Please?" said Casimir. "Ah, I see. If it were possible—in France, yes, M. le Marquis. There is no difficulty. But here, Excellens perhaps, or Prinz. Otherwise there is only Graf. It will not be understood if I catalogue the table for Herr Marquis. As your poet Shakespeare says, 'As you like it.'"

The door of the telephone box opened and Janet Church came out. Casimir, like Tommy, recognized her at once, though he had only seen her once before—and then in a dressing gown and boudoir cap. He was not particularly pleased. Perhaps she had talked to him in the morning as she had been talking to the third secretary at the embassy. He bowed to her, but he moved away.

"Please," he said to Tommy, "half ten at the Mascotte. Till then—" He pulled himself together and produced another quotation: "Now, good digestion wait on appetite, and health on both."

With another bow he turned, crossed the hall and passed the whirling glass door, narrowly escaping a determined effort of the guardian boy to hit him in the back.

Janet Church watched him till he vanished. Then she turned to Tom-down on the carpet in the corridor. So took Tommy's words to be an invitation to enter the bedroom. Tommy stood exactly in the middle of the doorway. Casimir, bowing very politely, tried to pass him. Tommy suddenly recollected that all his money, his piles of German marks, lay on the table in the middle of the room. A horrible explanation of Casimir's presence suggested itself. The man had made no mistake. He had not been sent to the wrong room by the clerk in the hotel office. He was a hotel thief. Tommy had heard of such people. They are immensely daring, immensely clever, and they adopt all sorts of ruses. They are often well dressed. They are always plausible.

CHAPTER VIII

An hour later Tommy stepped from the elevator into the great central hall of the hotel. He had discarded his clerical stock. He wore a light blue tie instead. He was still a young man, only a little more than twenty-six, not long enough in Holy Orders to have his profession recognizably written on his face. A bystander, interested in his appearance, might have guessed him to be a young barrister, or perhaps a clerk in one of the higher branches of the civil service. But so one appeared to be the least interested in Tommy's appearance, or to care what he was or what he did.

The large hall was full of people. Hotel porters in red jackets wheeled barrows of luggage in and out. Page-boys, as thickly decorated with buttons as any of their kind anywhere

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the sores right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

We were much impressed by the article in the Herald of two weeks ago in regard to raising children. The editor places the responsibility where it belongs. If more children attended Sunday school, church, and prayer meeting instead of the dance card playing, basket ball, etc., there would be less need for jails and less murder. When pupils of the school get time to do any studying has been a mystery to me. Its basket ball here, and there, finished with a dance, and a debate. About two-thirds of the school items are not about what the children are learning but which team won in the latest game.

Are You In Need Of Explosives

Local Farmers Can Secure Pyrotol at Low Cost.

Pyrotol is the new war explosive that is available at the present time for use in clearing land. It is practically the same as Sodatol both in strength, effectiveness, and price, and is highly recommended by the Michigan Agr'l. College as a substitute for Sodatol, the supply of which has been exhausted. The popularity of these war explosives can be explained by the fact that in the year 1954—1,500,000 lbs. were distributed in Michigan. If you have a large number of stumps in your field that are continually in your way in working stop and figure which is the cheapest to buy—this farm explosive and eradicate them quickly, easily, and cheaply or in all of your farm operations continue to go around, lose the use of the land, time, and labor, and no doubt your temper in addition.

Don't get me wrong, I am not encouraging the clearing of the new land but rather freeing the land you are now working of stumps and other obstructions which tend to decrease the profitable and economical cultivation of it. The per unit cost is one of the important factors in managing a successful farm and having your field clean will help to lower it.

The price of this Pyrotol is $9.75 per hundred laid down at Petoskey. On the average three sticks weigh a lb. With every two hundred pounds 100 caps will be included. Also directions as how to use it will be given away with each purchase. It was impossible to distribute a carload in one single County so Charlevoix, Emmett, and Otsego Counties are co-operating in distributing a carload—that is if sufficient orders are turned in.

Send your orders with the cash or check to your Agr'l. Agent at Boyne City. As soon as sufficient orders are received the carloads can be shipped. If we are not able to order this amount your money will be refunded. Act now.

Your Agent has a few Farm Account books on hand now which are available as long as they last. Stop in the office and get one free. After the present supply is exhausted the new books will cost 15 cents. 4 cents for postage and one will be sent.

Also have a supply of Michigan Poultry House Construction Plans available for your use. If you are thinking about building a new house this year it will pay you to have these plans sent to you.

Dynamite-Explosion Kills 600

Rio de Janeiro—Six hundred and twenty-one persons were dead, 1,379 wounded, nine women had gone insane, and damages totaling $2,000,000 had been inflicted as the result of the explosion of 88 tons of dynamite and 188,500 litres of gasoline on Cajas Isls, three miles from Rio de Janeiro.

The blasts resulted from the burning of two lighters containing 8,000 cases of gasoline. The blazing fluid spread over the harbor and reached toward Cajas Isle, where dynamite, powder and stocks of oil were stored.

SUPPOSE YOU WERE 60 TODAY

If you were sixty today many of the things which seem of little consequence or about which there "isn't any hurry" would take on a different aspect.

A savings account at sixty often has meant the difference between a comfortable and independent old age and being an unwelcome member of a relative's family.

Passes Away In Florida

Mrs. Louise Loveday-Sine Well-Known In This City.

A card to the Herald from W. Asa Loveday at Lansing, received last Friday, conveys the sad intelligence of the death of his sister, Mrs. Louise Loveday-Sine, in Florida at 10:00 p. m., Tuesday, Feb'y 24th.

Mrs. Sine had been ill for a month or so previous to her death and, we understand, was in a hospital awaiting an operation for gopher.

Deceased was a resident of East Jordan for many years and has a large circle of friends here who sincerely regret her passing away. Following her graduation from the public schools, she entered a Chicago College of expression and dramatic Art, from which she graduated with honors.

Since then she has devoted most of her time as a platform entertainer, giving readings and interpretations as well as directing amateur plays. She served with many of the leading lycium bureaus of the country and has appeared in practically every state in the Union.

On Christmas day last she was united in marriage to Charles S. Sine at Tampa, Florida. They were making their home at St. Petersburg.

Detroit—An earth tremor of great intensity was recorded over almost the entire Eastern half of the United States early in the evening of Feb. 28. The disturbance was calculated to have centered somewhere in the great Lakes region.

While no damage was reported here or throughout the state, the time system at police headquarters was put out of order. Telephone service was also interrupted in various parts of the city. Was not felt by pedestrians nor by persons on lower floors of buildings, but only in the upper stories beginning as a rule, on the fourth or fifth floor.

Reports from Quebec indicate that several buildings on the outskirts of the city were wrecked and that the roof of the Union station was partially damaged, while in Montreal many plate glass windows were broken. The earthquake was one of the most pronounced that has ever taken place in continental United States.

"The Bank On The Corner"

THE LOAFER

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"Twas the voice of the sluggard,
I heard him complain,
You have waked me too soon,
I must slumber again."

I HAVE never known what loafer it was who inspired these ancient lines, but I have always suspected that the fellow who wrote them had met Higgins. Higgins was a direct descendant of one of the seven sleepers; he was on the most intimate terms with Morpheus, and Somnus, and Ethar and all the other gods and agencies which induce prolonged and refreshing sleep.

I have called him over the telephone at noon to be told by the friend who answered that he was not up yet. I have dropped in at his house at 9 p. m. to be informed that he was rather tired and had gone to bed early. I have found him dozing before the fire at three o'clock in the afternoon, a cigarette between his lips. A loafer always smokes, though of course a great many people who smoke are not loafers. I have often wondered what became of him; he's probably dead or asleep at the switch.

We read a great deal about the dispositions of youth today—of the real devils who drink and gamble and indulge in unnamable immoralities, but most of it is bunk. The real menace of life today is the loafer—the fellow who smokes himself into stupidity before the grate fire, who wastes his hours in billiard halls and ice cream parlors, at vaudeville and moving picture shows, and in strolling about the town imagining himself in love. It is the man who sits up late at night doing nothing worth while, and who sleeps late in the morning to get over it who is most worthless of all.

The loafer can't or won't work himself, and he is seldom satisfied to loaf alone. He is a procrastinator without enthusiasm or plan or system in his work. It has never occurred to him that he has a real business to which he should give his serious attention. He could not work regularly eight hours a day on a bet. There is no place for him in the world or out of it. His only salvation is to get a job where he will have to work hard 16 hours a day.

Navy Weak In Pacific

Washington—An enemy could capture the Philippine Islands before the United States could get its fleet there, Rear Admiral Hilary H. Jones, head of the Navy general board, told the House Aircraft Committee. This admission was made only after much questioning.

Admiral Jones defended the recent report of the special Navy board on the comparative values of surface vessels, submarines and aircraft, and challenged criticism of the report made by Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell, assistant Army air chief.

KING TOMMY

my. "I've been asking questions about that young man," she said, "and I find he's in Berlin on some kind of secret mission connected with the ex-king of Lystria."

"Oh, is he?" said Tommy. "I thought he was a tout for a night club."

"That's what he pretends to be perhaps," said Janet, "but he is strongly suspected of being engaged in some royalist plot. The third secretary at our embassy told me so this morning."

If the third secretary had been discreet enough to tell Janet Church anything about anybody it must have been before she began talking to him about her passports. No young man, unless he was reduced to terror by threats of violence would have spoken to her at all afterward. But I do not think it at all likely that any diplomatist, even a third secretary, would have shouted confidential information into a telephone. It seemed to me much more likely that Janet Church had been making inquiries about Casimir from the head waiter or the hall porter. All porters of hotels like the Adlon know a great many things, both true and untrue.

"I suppose he's a friend of yours," said Janet.

"No, he isn't," said Tommy. "I mean neither of them."

He was uncertain at the moment whether she was speaking of Count Casimir or the third secretary.

"Just come over with me to a quiet place," said Janet. "I want to talk to you."

Tommy followed her, unwillingly, to a retired corner of the hall, and sat down beside her on a deep sofa. A waiter hovered round them and asked whether they wanted cocktails. Janet drove him away at once.

"I'm not asking you to tell me who you are," she said, "or what you're doing here."

"I don't in the least mind telling you, I'm a curate and I'm in Berlin for a holiday."

"Very well," said Janet grimly, "and Count Casimir is a restaurant tout, and I'm the prima ballerina of the Royal opera house in Vienna."

Janet prides herself on the power of sarcasm.

"Surely," said Tommy, "you can't be—"

He was an innocent and inexperienced young man. But even to him Janet Church did not look like a prima ballerina.

"I'm just as much a dancer as you're a curate. But, as I said to begin with, I don't want to ask questions. It's quite enough for me to know that you're an intimate friend of Count Casimir's."

"I'm not," said Tommy, "but I suppose it's no use my saying so."

"And I want you to introduce me to him."

"I'll do that with the greatest pleasure," said Tommy, "if I ever see him again. But I don't expect I shall."

"You'll see him tonight at the Mascotte," said Janet.

"I'm not going to the Mascotte."

"Oh, yes, you are," said Janet. "I heard you making an appointment to meet Count Casimir there. I shall be there too and you can introduce us."

"Very well," said Tommy, helplessly. "Be there at half past ten."

A feeling of recklessness born of bewilderment was beginning to hold on Tommy. He did not in the least want to introduce Janet Church to any one. He did not at that moment even know her name. He did not want to see any more of Count Casimir. He did not want—But a curate is only a man, and though Tommy had no intention of entangling himself with an unknown lady at the Mascotte, he thought it might be interesting to see her, speak to her, perhaps to offer her a glass of wine. Tommy was inexperienced in such matters, but he thought that any lady to be met at the Mascotte would probably expect to be offered a glass of wine.

"Of course," said Janet, "I have more or less made Count Casimir's acquaintance already." She was thinking of her interview with him in the corridor outside Tommy's bedroom. "But it's always better to have a formal introduction," she added.

Tommy was not paying much attention to what she said. He was thinking of the lady at the Mascotte and wondering whether his phrase book provided the German for "May I offer you a glass of champagne?" Champagne, he supposed, was the proper wine to offer to a lady at the Mascotte.

Height of Roman Glory

The rule of Trojan, 98 to 117 A. D., marked the height of the Roman empire. The rule following, that of Hadrian, was memorable for its peacefulness and for the fact that it was the most splendid era of Roman architecture.

Growth of Post Office

Benjamin Franklin was the first head of the postal system of the United States. When he took over the affairs of his office, there were 75 post offices, with an aggregate postal revenue of $30,000 a year. Today we have more than 53,000 post offices and about 300,000 employees. The aggregate revenue collected and expended amounts to about $800,000,000 annually.

The waiter whom Janet had chased away when they first sat down was hovering round the table again. With a recklessness which surprised himself Tommy ordered: "Bring two cocktails."

Janet turned on him with an acid smile.

"It's rather unusual," she said, "to find a curate drinking cocktails at ten o'clock in the morning. If you really are a curate you wouldn't do that."

"In These Continental Towns," She Said, "It's Generally Dangerous to Drink Water."

The waiter, who was interested in their talk, was very quick in fetching their cocktails. He set them down on a little tray in front of Tommy. Janet looked at hers with a fierce scowl. Tommy pushed the thing toward her. She looked at it again with a milder scowl. Tommy took it off the tray and set it down before her. Janet stopped, scowling.

"In these continental towns," she said, "it's generally dangerous to drink the water."

It is the British teetotaler who is responsible for the superstition that all the water on the continent of Europe is poisonous. Having accepted that as an article of faith he holds to it firmly. He is, therefore, entirely against his will, obliged to drink wine when he crosses the English channel.

Janet tossed off her cocktail. Tommy, who did not know that cocktails ought to be swallowed in a single gulp, sipped his.

Now, the effect of cocktails taken on almost empty stomachs by people unused to wine of any sort is surprising. Janet became confidential. She told Tommy that the officials of the British Foreign office had conspired together to prevent her going to Lystria, and that Lord Edmund Trovte was the head of the conspiracy. They knew that if Janet once got into personal touch with the patriarch of Lystria the Union of Christian churches would be accomplished and a great world peace established.

"They are afraid of that," she said grimly, "afraid of it because they know that a world peace would put an end to their trade of secret diplomacy. That is why I want to be introduced to Count Casimir."

It was a little difficult for Tommy to follow the working of her mind. I do not know that any one at that time could have guessed exactly what she meant. Looking back over the whole thing now it seems plain that with the help of Casimir she hoped to get into Lystria without a passport. He was, as she had somehow managed to discover, a conspirator and a secret agent. He would therefore have no objection to breaking the law and would almost certainly be in a position to do so successfully. With his help she would get into touch with the patriarch, unite the churches, establish peace, and so—

"The Foreign office won't be pleased when they hear of it," she said vindictively, "and Lord Edmund Trovte will be furious. But the first thing is to get to Lystria. And Count Casimir can do that for me if he will."

"I've no doubt that he will," said Tommy politely.

"I'm very glad to hear you say that, for, of course, you know."

"I don't know in the least," said Tommy. "I don't really know anything. Indeed, if you asked me this minute, I could not tell you where Lystria is."

Tommy finished the last sip of his cocktail. He felt elated and extremely cheerful.

"In introducing you this evening," he said, "shall I tell Casimir all about the world peace and the Christian churches, or shall I simply say that you're my aunt?"

"I am averse to any form of deceit," said Janet. But—

"There are times—" said Tommy. "He might not grasp the full significance of my mission to Lystria."

"Then I'd better tell him you're my aunt," said Tommy, "unless you'd rather I said sister."

Janet looked at Tommy. He is only twenty-six and looks younger, owing no doubt to the virtuous life he has had to lead under the eye of his sister Emily. Janet is superior to the desire to appear younger than she is, which is supposed to be a weakness of her sex.

"You'd better say aunt," she said. "Very well," said Tommy. "My aunt, who is looking after me."

"A young man," said Janet, "is the better off having an aunt to look after him in a city like Berlin. I feel sure that the Mascotte is a dangerous and undesirable place."

At half past nine Tommy drove up to the door of the Mascotte. He was received by a stately man in a handsome uniform and led up a flight of thickly carpeted marble stairs. At the top he was handed over to a supercilious young lady with startlingly red lips and very pallid cheeks, who took his overcoat and hat from him. Under the guidance of another splendidly clad retainer he passed into a very large and most impressive room. The lights were dim and faintly pink. The air was heavily scented.

Tommy looked round him a little nervously. He hoped that he might see Janet Church. Her companionship would have sustained and helped him. But she was not there. Except for six servitors in gold and purple clothes, there was no one in the room.

Two of these men took charge of Tommy. They walked one on each side of him, both a little in front of him. They conducted him across the room. At the far side of it they halted in front of a pair of heavy curtains which hung over an archway. With a solemn and dignified sweep of their arms they pulled the curtains apart to right and left. Then, bowing low, they motioned Tommy to pass on.

He entered a still larger room, very brilliantly lighted, so brilliantly lighted that for a minute he stood blinking, unable to see distinctly.

A small dapper man in evening clothes came up to him and bowed. Tommy saw that this gray hair was carefully brushed across a bald patch on top of his head. He was by no means a young man. He had small twinkling eyes and a rounded punch. But he bore himself with a certain dignity. Even when he was bowing low there was no sign of servility in his manner. This was the head waiter of the Mascotte and he led Tommy high honor by granting him this personal reception.

"Your lordship's table is reserved, one of our very best tables."

He spoke with an excellent English accent. He waved his hand in the direction in which he wanted Tommy to go and then walked in front of him. There was no mistake about the dignity of the man's bearing. It was almost kingly, just such a bearing and manner as suited the head waiter of the Mascotte.

Following the man's lead, Tommy passed between two lines of inferior waiters, all bowing low. From tables to the right and left revelers looked up and watched him pass. They whispered to each other, inquiring who it could be who was received so impressively by the head waiter and his staff. Tommy came at last to a small table set a little apart. The head waiter pulled back a large gilt chair. Tommy noticed a small card on a silver stand in the middle of the table. It bore his name, Norreys; but not the Rev. T. A. Norreys. He was described on the card as the Markgraf von Norreys. It seemed to Tommy well worth while to be a Markgraf—whatever a markgraf was—if the title secured so much consideration and respect. Tommy felt rather glad that Count Casimir had made his mistake.

The head waiter murmured confidentially in his ear:

"If your lordship will allow me to order the dinner and choose the wine—I assure you that I thoroughly understand wine."

His English was perfect, far better than Count Casimir's and he spoke it with the intonation and accent of a gentleman. Tommy felt sure that he might be trusted to order the very best food and wine obtainable in the Mascotte. But he had an uncomfortable feeling that the bill for the entertainment might be startling. His pockets were full of marks, stuffed with them. But it might very well take a trunk full of marks to pay for the dinner which the aristocratic head waiter would order. Tommy heated and made a grab at the menu, intending to make sure of the worst that could befall him.

The head waiter, a man of quick apprehension, guessed his thoughts. Bending low he whispered into Tommy's ear:

"I need scarcely say that your lordship will be at no expense, none whatever."

Then he turned and gave a series of orders in German to a subordinate who stood near.

Tommy leaned back in his gilt chair and looked round. He saw at once that he had been given one of the very best tables in the room. It stood at the edge of a great square carpet which covered the center of the floor. On the carpet itself there were no tables. But diners at tables of various sizes sat round it in parties of two or four or six. Behind the tables which stood on the edge of the carpet were others. Behind these still more, and these were set on a sort of platform a step above the floor of the room. Farther back among pillars and under archways in what Tommy thought of as broad side aisles, were other places for still more diners.

Gazing round curiously Tommy caught sight of a woman standing up at one of the farthest tables. She was waving her hand and signaling to him. At a second glance he recognized her—Janet Church. In a severe black dress, the only evening gown she took with her when traveling, she looked much out of place in the Mascotte. Having attracted Tommy's attention, she began to cross the room toward him, evidently with the intention of sitting down at his table. But this was not allowed. The head waiter caught sight of her and gave an order to one of his men. Janet Church was stopped, turned round, and conducted to the obscure and distant table which she had left.

It would interest me, though perhaps no one else, to know what Tommy had to eat and drink that night. Unfortunately, he can give me no account at all of his meal and does not know the name of the champagne he drank.

Shortly after eleven o'clock Tommy discovered what the stretch of carpet in the middle of the room was for. The band, which had been playing some of the music of Tosca suddenly struck up a dance tune. Two girls appeared from a curtained recess at the far end of the room, ran down among the tables, prousetted in the middle of the carpet, and began to dance.

Tommy had seen dancing before, on the stage at the Gayety theater in Dublin at the time of the Christmas pantomime. But this was a very different thing. There he viewed the dancers from a distance, with an orchestra and a row of footlights between him and them. They were remote creatures, unreal, scarcely flesh and blood. Here they came close to him, so close that the whirling of their skirts as they passed him fanned the air against his face. He could smell the scent from their clothes and see the heaving of their throats as they caught their breath. And the music was far more exciting than any he had ever heard.

The waiter who attended him filled his glass with champagne. Tommy sipped it as he watched the dancers. Others took the places of the first two, dancing wildly, sometimes dancing well. The music grew louder. The whole scene began to grow dim before Tommy's eyes, as a man might watch the figures in a dream.

He was awakened to the reality of his surroundings by the sound of Casimir's voice in his ear. The count had slipped over quietly from some other part of the room and had sat down at Tommy's table.

"Please," he said, "the Princess Calypso now."

Tommy was scarcely surprised at the announcement. A princess, a queen, an empress, any kind of exalted lady, except perhaps one of Fra Angelico's angels, might have danced before him there on the Persian carpet without surprising him very much.

The princess' turn was evidently the chief performance of the evening. Conversation ceased. Men sat down their glasses and leaned forward in their chairs. The music of the band sank to a soft rhythmic throbbing. A drum muttered softly. A girl in a dress shining with sequins stepped daintily down among the tables, stood in the middle of the carpet and curtsied low to Tommy.

He could have sworn that it was to him alone that she curtsied, that she took no notice of any one else in the room. He also had an unpleasant impression that she disliked, or perhaps despised him, and only curtsied to him because she was forced to do it.

Indian Superstition

The Indians believe that a fish buried in the corn hill gives a better yield of corn.

Successful Crop Production

Part Three, The Maintenance of Fertility.

If we start with the theory that a soil is well supplied with the elements of plant food at the time it is first plowed. And if we allow that the other factors of tillage are carried out to the best advantage, it only remains for the farmer to use good seed and give the crops their correct care. Now it would be a very fine thing indeed if the soil would stay in such a condition but unfortunately for us it doesn't. Plant food is taken from the soil in three ways, first through crop production, second through leaching and third through the fact that a certain percentage in some cases becomes unavailable.

The four important elements used by plant are nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and calcium. In the virgin soil these were present in abundance. They came from the soluble salts, organic matter and mineral soil particles. From time immemorial farmers have been admonished to give the soil its due. Let us see how many ways there are of doing this, first the use of barnyard manure, just what is the effect of manure on the soil. Is it the same as commercial fertilizers? The answer is no. No amount of commercial fertilizer can do some of the things manure does. Manure of the barnyard variety containing straw and other litter which adds organic matter. This adds some plant food of course but in addition it increases the water holding capacity, aeration, and is a big help to the activities of the soil bacteria.

In elements a ton of barnyard manure adds about ten pounds of nitrogen, two pounds of phosphorus and eight lbs of potassium. The ratio then of the elements added is 10-2-8. Now suppose you are growing corn and you get about 70 bushels per acre when all the crop is removed (for example corn and stover both) it removes roughly 95 lbs. of nitrogen, 16 of phosphorus and 56 of potassium. Manure then at the rate of 8 tons per acre would have cared for this removal, except for a slight amount of nitrogen. The just use of legumes as alfalfa or clover would made up for the nitrogen. But can the farmers produce enough manure to take care of all crops? Of course corn is a heavy feeder but let us put the average necessary use of barnyard manure for all crops at 5 tons per acre, even this could not be accomplished because it would be necessary to keep more live stock. More live stock would then mean more acres and the circle would still be incomplete. Now we can see why it is necessary if we are going to maintain a good supply of plant food that it becomes necessary for us to do something besides add manure.

The plowing under of stubble or crop residue aids, but not to the extent necessary. Something else must be done. There are two ways open, the plowing under of green crops and the addition of commercial fertilizers. Now if it is obvious that the field needs organic matter it will be a good, as well as a noble sacrifice to plow under a nice big green crop, otherwise it will be best to use the commercial variety of fertilizer. Of course when ever possible a legume should be sown with the express view of plowing it under. A good practice which can often be carried out in the sowing, say beans, cow peas, rape or crimson clover with the last cultivation of corn. Some times a good crop of weeds turned under will do the trick, but for this express purpose there are few farmers which are not in need of commercial fertilizer of some sort. On some it will be a phosphate, some a nitrate and others a potash fertilizer. Fertilizer needs are best determined by the use of test plots but there is another way which can be used weather permitting, notice "that weather permitting." Notice how your crops grow. Nitrogen gives length to the stem, potash gives it strength so that it does not lodge, and phosphorus makes the grain plump. This is however not a reliable method because there are so many other factors which one has to consider. As I said before the method is by test. If you would like to carry on such a test the Agr. Dept. of the High School stand ready to help. Will be at the Co-ops on the 7th and 14th to see about Better Seed.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe. Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just damp a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Dairy Cow Best Food Factory

Dairy Cow Most Efficient Protein Producer.

72-3 pounds as Milk	38 pounds as Poultry	24 pounds as Eggs	22-7 pounds as Pork	18-5 pounds as Beef	14-7 pounds as Mutton

THE cow is the most economical food factory in the animal kingdom. The hen, the hog, the beef steer, and the sheep cannot compete with her, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute, basing their estimate upon the percentage of digestible protein produced by each from an acre of land. Digestible animal proteins are the high quality protein of the human diet. The Institute points out: These proteins are the determining factor in the trend of greatest economy of food production. With the annual increase in population the animal protein supply must be increased accordingly if future millions are to be properly nourished. To provide for this increasing need will be the work of the cow, the sow, and the hen, the three farm animals excelling in the production of digestible proteins.

Officer Captures Five Bandits Single Handed and Recovers Loot

South Bend, Ind.—After a desperate battle in which he was severely wounded, Constable Elias Ackley of New Carlisle, finally wounded and captured five bank bandits who had held up and robbed the bank at Millburg, Mich., of $52,900 in cash and securities. He held the entire band prisoners in a barn for half an hour before aid arrived.

As the bandits drove into New Carlisle, Constable Ackley, who had been notified to be on the lookout, and Special Deputy Oscar Smith followed them out of town. They overtook the bandits, who then opened fire, wounding Ackley in the groin. The men abandoned the car and ran for a barn. Ackley sent Smith for aid while he kept firing at the door of the barn. Finally four of the men staggered out wounded, the fifth being too badly hurt to move.

Aid from town arrived and the five were taken into custody. All of the loot was recovered.

In view of the heavy seas encountered all the way and the severe northerly winds of the past two days this is considered a creditable performance.

Cause of Paralysis Is Lack of Mineral

Lime and Phosphates Are Needed for Strong Bones.

Many hogs suffer from what is commonly called "getting down behind." Some scientists have for years been saying that this paralysis of the hind quarters in hogs is due to lack of mineral constituents in the feed. Others have held to the theory that it was due to lack of vitamins in the ration, resulting in a weakening of the nerves. On the other hand, many farmers believe that this trouble is due to kidney worms. Recently, however, the Ohio experiment station has come to a definite conclusion as a result of a number of experiments. This station claims that the immediate cause of posterior paralysis in hogs is lack of mineral matter in the ration.

Whenever a hog does not obtain enough lime and phosphates in its ration to build strong bones or maintain the body structure, already formed, the lumbar vertebrae become so weakened that they cannot sustain the tension of the powerful back muscles. Thus some lumbar vertebrae are crushed or shortened under the strain and bulging downward they cause impingement upon the spinal cord and paralysis of the hind quarters. If taken in time, this condition can be remedied by feeding more mineral matter and by adding a little olive oil to the ration, olive oil being rich in vitamin A. But this remedy will give results only if used immediately after the paralytic condition has been observed.

Those who would avoid paralysis in the hind quarters of hogs should see to it that a good mineral mixture is supplied whenever the ration fed is deficient in mineral constituents. Hogs that are fed farm-raised grains plus all the tankage they care to eat do not stand in as much need of a mineral mixture as those that are not fed tankage, yet in some cases the addition of mineral to a ration containing tankage has given still better results than when no additional minerals were supplied.

Manure Wasted if Left Exposed in Barnyard

Manure spread on the land directly from the stable has given larger crop yields than equal amounts of manure exposed in the open yard for some time before spreading, in the many tests at the Ohio agricultural experiment station.

The average increase of crops in favor of stall manure over yard-exposed manure, both applied at the rate of eight tons, was $3.40 per acre.

In this experiment extending over a period of 28 years the stall manure is spread on a one-year-old sod in January to be plowed under for corn in early spring. An equal weight of manure is taken from the stalls at the same time and exposed in flat piles until April when it is spread on adjoining plots, after which the treatment of all plots is the same.

Tests at the station show that manure thus exposed in piles lost 35.6 per cent of the original nitrogen, 22.5 per cent of its phosphorus, and 51 per cent of its potassium. This is about one-third of its fertilizing value and readily accounts for the difference in crop yields in favor of direct application.

Owing to the addition of moisture to manure exposed to the weather this loss may be unnoticed.

Birds Need Ventilation

Even in cold weather do not make the mistake of closing the poultry house so tightly that it does not have good ventilation. Chickens can stand cold better than they can stand stuffy dampness and foul air. One of the surest ways to bring on an attack of colds and probably pneumonia is to shut the houses so tight that they do not have good ventilation. Drafts however, should be avoided.

Farm Hints

Use good clean seed for sowing the lawn.

Sharp farmers never tolerate dull tools.

Silage is a summer feed the year round.

A dairy barn doesn't need to be costly to be clean.

Snow keeps bees warm, but don't let ice form over the hives.

With a closed storage house the repairing of farm machinery is more tempting.

The prudent employer doesn't broadcast all the time; he frequently puts the receiver to his ear.

"There is nothing in which God asks so little of us and gives so much as in the planting of a tree."—Selected.

Prediction for 1925. It will be just as profitable to keep down farm expense as to increase the gross income.

Soy beans are unexcelled for planting in combination with corn for hog or lamb pasture. They make a heavy yield of seed and their erect growth prevents trampling by grazing animals, so that the crop is eaten almost completely.

Live Stock Not Improving Fast

High Percentage of Low Grades Caused by Poor Breeding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In spite of the numerous methods of stimulating the improvement of live stock and in spite of the increased profits which come from such improvement, says the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, the need for such improvement is still apparent on almost every hand. Go to any of the public stock yards, say the government observers, and you will find only a small percentage of the meat animals in the highest market grades. Only about 5 per cent of the cattle received at Chicago, the largest live stock market, grade as prime or choice. Sometimes insufficient feeding keeps down the grade, but the principal cause of the high percentage of low grades is poor breeding.

Dairying Hampered.

Similarly, the dairy industry is hampered by many inefficient cows. The average milk production of the dairy cows in this country is scarcely two-thirds that of the cows in some foreign countries, and less than one-third that of the well-bred and well-managed dairy herds here. Horses, mules, sheep, goats and poultry are equally in need of improvement.

Better Breeding Seen.

At the same time the Department of Agriculture calls attention to the possibilities for animal improvement, it does not overlook the fact that far-sighted and energetic stockmen and farmers have done much in the direction of better breeding and have developed thousands of herds and flocks to which the foregoing comments do not apply. Nevertheless, the average quality and productive power of American live stock are said to be much lower than need be in the light of what is now known of animal breeding, feeding and management.

Warning Issued Against Quack Poultry Remedies

Poultry men will do well to investigate certain remedies claimed to free the poultry flock of mites, lice and other vermin, according to a warning issued by H. C. Severin, state entomologist of the South Dakota State college.

Advertisements have appeared at various times claiming that these remedies, sold in tablet or liquid form, when placed in the drinking water, would rid the flock of both external and internal pests. These claims are ridiculous and unreasonable, according to Severin. He finds upon examination that the liquids consist of either lime-sulphur solution, which is the ordinary orchard spray, or is only a sheep dip. The tablets are composed largely of calcium sulphide with characteristics similar to lime-sulphur solution or else contain sulphur mixed with iron rust.

Poultry men have been paying as high as a dollar an ounce for this material when in reality it should cost less than two dollars per gallon. The claim is made that the fowl will get the remedy into their food tube by drinking the treated water. From there it is supposed to go into the blood system and then to the skin, where it destroys the mites. Such a claim is unreasonable and entirely unwarranted.

Acreage Grown to Corn in 1924 Shows Decrease

Eighty-four per cent of the acreage grown to corn in 1924 was used for grain, as compared with 86 per cent in 1923, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. The total area for all purposes was 105,012,000 acres of which 87,838,000 acres was used for grain. Another 6,000,000 acres were cut for silage, and 11,084,000 "hogged down" or used for forage.

Much of the 1924 corn going into silos was unfit for husking, as it was immature or frosted, the department says. Ordinarily much of the corn cut for silage could be utilized for grain, if desired. The immaturity of the crop also increased the quantity cut for forage.

Cheaper Grain Ration

The high price of corn has caused cattle feeders to look about for a cheaper grain ration. This situation demands a careful study of the feeding value of different feeds and combinations of feeds before investing. At prevailing prices of feeds, the cheapest and best grain ration that can be fed fattening cattle consists of a combination of corn, six parts, and cottonseed cake or meal, one part, these proportions by weight. There are many feeds now being offered that may cost less per ton, but they cost considerably more on the basis of actual feeding value.

Handling Gumbo Soil

The best plan of handling heavy gumbo soil which is well drained, is to seed it to alfalfa and leave it in a crop like alfalfa, which requires no cultivation, for as long periods as possible. Heaviness of the soil can also be improved by growing sweet clover and by adding manure or some other form of organic matter. The incorporation of organic matter is a much more practical method of improving it than the application of lime, says L. E. Call, head of the agronomy department, Kansas State Agricultural college.

"SPIC AND SPAN"

Housewives like to be told that their kitchens are "spic and span." Spic is a corruption of spike or nail, and span means a chip. The ships in which every bit of wood and every nail were new were originally described as spic and span. Doctor Johnson, of dictionary fame, says, however, that span is a reference to the spanners or stretchers on which cloth was placed during the final processes of weaving.

Lansing—Reports given at the annual meeting of the Michigan Livestock Co-operative Shipping Association here showed that $13,000,000 worth of livestock has been handled through the Detroit and Buffalo offices, and in addition to obtaining lower rates, the association has returned $20,366 in dividends to shippers.

Mt. Clemens—With no effort on his part being made to furnish the $10,000 bail bond demanded by Justice Dusse, Andrew Quigley is still in jail and his hearing again has been adjourned. Quigley is one of the defendants named in the warrants issued as a result of Judge Leland Carr's one man grand jury last autumn.

Detroit—In a short range pistol duel, Patrolman Edward Perrin shot to death an unidentified gunman and frustrated the robbery of the drug store at 2439 Woodward avenue, corner of Duffield street. Unaware that he was stepping into holdup or gun battle, the policeman entered the store to purchase a package of chewing gum.

Flint—Mrs. W. Earl Ross, wife of the assistant treasurer of the A. C. Spark Plug Co. of this city, was found burned to death in the kitchen of her home by the husband when he came home for lunch. The Popular Girl

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

MIDDLETON did not return to college after the Christmas vacation. He was down in his studies, his instructors said; his father did not wish him to continue, he told the fellows; he had accepted a position, the college paper announced; but the real facts were that it was a girl—a very popular girl, who had upset Middleton and put an end to his college education.

She was a pretty girl with pleasant manners and stylish clothes and a ready flow of talk and exemplary morals—if her clothes had been a little less correct and her morals a little less exemplary, she might have been less dangerous. From the time she had entered the high school she had kept a string of fellows about her, and she had played them adroitly, skillfully, and with a steady eye to her own selfish interests. If one ever tried to break away she melted immediately and gave him the impression that he was the only one for whom she had really cared, and he usually rushed back into her train.

When Barton entered college he was ambitious and gave promise of an excellent record; but she was attracted by him, and he no sooner came under her influence than he lost all ambition. He was wild after her, spent his money on her, and neglected everything to be with her. She would never let him alone, played with him in a tantalizing way, called him on the telephone if he failed to see her, and then when she had ruined him as a student and tired of him as a lover, threw him aside unemotionally and picked up another victim.

There had been several of these before Middleton came—a shy, sensitive, tender-hearted boy, easily led, easily discouraged, and in love with the girl. His attentions flattered her, and, though she did not really care for him, she was too calculatingly selfish to let him go. She smiled on him and almost insulted him in turn; she made engagements with him and then broke them without compunction if a more desired score came along. She counted on his coming whenever she backed out, and too weak to resist her, she made life for him a constant uncertainty and hell which he left college to rid himself of.

Such a man is weak, you say. Perhaps. But a real woman might have strengthened him, encouraged him, set for him ideals, or, best of all, she might have let him alone.

There are many such girls with pretty faces and curiously attractive clothes, incapable of real feeling and incapable of an unselfish thought. They come out unscathed, many people think, from these social escapades, but it is not true. They pay—every one of them. Sometimes the time of payment is long deferred, but they pay to the last farthing, cruelly, far more than their little petty popularity and pleasures are worth. When they come to the point of wanting friends there are none; when they want love and real devotion they are gone; through their drifting with sacred emotions they become incapable of feeling or appreciating such emotions, and the end is loneliness, unhappiness and neglect.
