"Bagdad" Surpasses All Other Films

Newspaper criticisms of Douglas Fairbank's glorius fantasy of the Arabian Nights, "The Thief of Bagdad," which will begin its engagement in this city at the Temple three days starting Wednesday, April 15th indicates beyond question that this is the most extraordinary moving picture that has yet been made. Almost every critic of New York, Philadelphia and Boston proclaimed it as being an unparalleled photoplay. The critic of "New York Times" said: "It is a feat of motion picture art which has never been equalled." So also the "Herald-Tribune," which said, "It is the greatest film ever made." The critic of the "Boston Post" said: "It is foolish to compare this marvelous fantasy with any other photoplay production." "The Boston Traveler" said: "It is so far ahead of all others that there is no comparison to be thought of." "The Philadelphia North American" said: "You have to see it to believe it. Not merely ahead of its field, it creates a field of its own."

So far we know there is no successful quarantine against the spring poets.

This is the time of the year when the fish begin to move out of the old swimming hole.

The land will soon respond to the story of the wonderful yields that are to be harvested this fall.

Harvey Bowen Pioneer Here Passes Away

Harvey Bowen passed away at his home on Bowen's Addition, this city, last Tuesday noon, April 7th, following an illness from high blood pressure and paralysis.

Mr. Bowen was one of the early residents of this community, locating here some 46 years ago. He platted and recorded the addition to East Jordan that bears his name and was for years active in the upbuilding of our city. Deceased was born at Metrusch, Ontario, March 16, 1880, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. James M. Bowen. He removed with his parents to Ogdensburg, N. Y., when a child, at the age of 16 years he went with his parents to Wisconsin. In the early "seventies" he came to Charlevoix County, later on moving to this locality where he has since made his home.

On January 29, 1879, he was united in marriage to Miss Laura Hawkins at Charlevoix. He is survived by the wife, and the following sons and daughters:—William, Eugene, Claude and Clinton Bowen—all of Detroit; Irvie at East Jordan; and Mrs. Ruby Whitford of Blaine, Washington. Also by one brother, David Bowen of Onaway; and a niece, Mrs. Ratliff of Onaway. Since becoming of age, he was a member of the I. O. O. F.

Funeral services were held from his late home Thursday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Henry Hiles. Interment at Sunset Hill.

MISS HARRIET MALPASS PASSES AWAY AT MUSKEGON

The many friends here of Miss Harriet Malpass were shocked to hear of her sudden death last Thursday, April 2nd, at her home at 1976 Clinton Street, Muskegon.

She had been ailing for some time and was in the habit of dropping to sleep at odd times during the day. That day she was alone in their home and had placed a pan of water over a gas stove for heating. Evidently she fell asleep while waiting for the water to heat. The water boiled over putting out the blaze, and when found she was dead from the gas fumes.

Miss Harriet was a daughter of M. and Mrs. James Malpass, former East Jordan residents. She was born and grew to womanhood in this city. Always of a happy disposition she made a host of friends here who sincerely mourn her untimely death.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at Clock's Mortuary.

Those from East Jordan attending the funeral were: Mrs. Kate Bretz, W. E. Malpass and son, Ted, Mrs. Charles Malpass and children, and Mrs. Ralph Greenman.

Junior Play

"Aaron Boggs, Freshman."

Aaron is brought to college by his "paw"—a member of the school board "to hum in Splintermille." Aaron is a fine "speaker," but when asked to deliver "Spottycus to the Rominy Gladiators," he hashfully says, "I forget that one, paw." When he is hazed by upper classmen, Lizzie Maud, his fairy princess, rescues him from the catastrophe, and a prominent senior, Beau Carier, is thrown in the lake. Beau receives a telegram, which explains that Aaron, instead of a green, country hick, is the grandson of Stephan J. Boggs, a multi-millionaire. Lizzie Maud is very disgusted when she sees the college skirts hunched around "her Aaron." Cherry and Happie make fudge and incidentally love, Cherry forgetting Harold of Dayton, and Happie forgetting Gladys. As to Aaron and Lizzie Maud—just come and see what happens.

The play will be given at the High School Auditorium, April 20th. 25c and 35c.

She Used Her Eyes

Old Mrs. Green was down at the wharf at midday seeing her niece off on a trip. Glancing aloft she remarked: "Well, they'll soon be starting, my dear. Both funnels are smoking and they wouldn't want both funnels just to get lunch."—Boston Transcript.

CLEAN UP WEEK

East Jordan, April 12-18

A Proclamation By The Mayor

WE MAY SOON expect outside visitors to be passing thru and inspecting our city and it is highly important that we make everything "Spick and Span."

I therefore urge that everyone make a special effort during the next few days to "Dress Up His Own Corner" so as to make the best possible appearance.

The City will have teams and men out all next week if necessary to collect such material as cannot be burned and which is placed in solid containers near the curb.

The City asks everyone to do his part willingly and well, but unsanitary places must be cleaned up at once.

HOWARD P. PORTER

World War Veterans May Join The Officers' Reserve Corps

Veterans of the World War have an opportunity to qualify for a commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps through attendance at Citizens' Military Camps. The War Department has just announced a change in regulations which will permit the attendance of World War veterans in the Blue Course, C. M. T. Camps. The age limits for the Blue Course are 19 to 31 years. This will be welcome news to many World War veterans who have been extended to join the Officers' Reserve Corps, but have hesitated about appearing before the examination boards, due to the fact that they do not feel they can pass the necessary examination. By attending the Blue Course in a C. M. T. Camp they will get thirty days' training that will refresh them in Military subjects, so that they will be able to pass the examinations for the Officers Reserve Corps. What is better than this—they will get thirty days in the out-of-doors with good, wholesome food, expenses for transportation to and from camp, lodging and medical attention while at camp, paid by the Government.

The Citizens' Military Training Camp in the Sixth Corps Area, for the Blue Course, will be held at Camp Custer, Michigan, from July 23 to August 21, 1925. There will also be training for young men at Camp Custer, who have had no previous military training. The young men from southern Illinois who had no previous training will be trained at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., the camp being held from July 23 to August 21, 1925.

World War veterans who are interested in attending the C. M. T. Camp should communicate immediately with the Commanding General, Sixth Corps Area, at 1819 West Pershing Road, Chicago, Illinois, as the number that can be trained in the Blue Course is limited.

Truck Farmers Hear Fine Talk

Prof. Starr Gives Interesting Address In This City.

Professor Starr, Extension Specialist in Vegetables, led a highly interesting discussion on the vegetable situation in this State at the meeting of farmers held at East Jordan on April 1st. He gave many pointers that will surely be of great benefit to those in attendance and explained in detail some of the experiments that his department is performing to discover the best varieties to use under our conditions. The main trouble in selecting various varieties from seed firms is the fact that they all state that their particular varieties are the best and how is a farmer to know who is right and who is wrong. In a short time the results will be made public and will clear this uncertainty.

Prof. Starr particularly recommended the growing of Asparagus. He said there is not enough being grown at present to satisfy the demand and that this condition will hold true for some time yet. Last year 12c per pound was paid at Canning Factories and at this price a good profit can be realized. Traverse City will see Asparagus this year and no doubt Central Lake and Ellsworth will soon follow suit. As high as 6,000 lbs. per acre have been secured by some growers. As the vegetable is more largely grown the price will not hold up to 12c per lb. but Prof. Starr did not think that price would go below 8c.

The following remarks were given on the cultivation of Asparagus:

1. Sow seed in spring, 1 lb. will furnish plants for about one acre. Soak seed for three days before sowing as seed germinates very slowly.
2. Next Spring transplant roots in a trench 10-12 in. deep in a 5 foot row with 2ft. apart in the rows. As growth takes place gradually cover the trench until finally the trench is leveled off with the rest of land. Clean cultivation is necessary in all cases.
3. Next Spring work well and disc to chop up the old stalks.
4. After taking crop off, which is around 1st of July, it is desirable to fertilize. This increases the quality and quantity of the next year's crop. At this time all the benefit goes for the next year's cutting. 4-8-6 fertilizer is recommended and not exceeding 1200 lbs. per acre. The best variety to grow is the Mary Washington as it is most resistant to rust which is about the only trouble we experience. Kill the beetle with Arsenate of Lead.

In connection with Sweet Corn use a 4-8-6 fertilizer at about 200 lbs. per acre on the hills. Plant early as the first coming on the market. Alpha is the best variety followed by White Cob Cory and the Golden Bantam.

Sure Crop Wax seems to be the best variety for String Beans.

With Tomatoes the Earlians, John Bear, and Chalks Early Jewell are best. As prevention for blight use Bordeaux Mixture on new plants and then usually one more application will be all that is necessary.

"Ignorance, Credulous Superstitious!"

You have heard of the aboriginal people, inhabitants of a volcanic isle, who used to sacrifice human beings to appease the mountain's god when the rumblings of the giant warned that the lava was about to overflow the hillside. You have said in your mind that they were ignorant, credulous, and superstitious, and that their religion was entirely wrong.

What do you think of the Rev. Harold M. Cordell, of Indiana, who tells the people of the stricken town of Griffin that "God visited the affliction upon the wicked" and that He caused the "tornado to wipe Griffin off the map." In ignorance, credulity and superstition the reverend has nothing whatever upon the aborigines. In religion, also, we doubt if he has anything better than they.

To Advertise Tea

A titled British gentleman is in this country to advertise tea, hoping to induce the American public to drink the beverage in greater quantities. He is to spend several hundred thousands of dollars. He admits that ninety per cent of his expenditures will be for newspaper advertising, where he says experience shows that he gets the best results.

This little bit of news is published for the elucidation of our handbill, signboard merchants.

Many Bibles Printed

Last year the Bible house of the American society printed almost three million copies of the world's best seller. It seems, opinions to the contrary, that many people insist upon reading the book.

The publication of so many copies is quite in contrast with the era when the ownership of the Bible meant punishment. It is strange that modern believers so often fail to understand the great hardships endured by others that they might get the Bible for personal reading.

Making Money

Gloria Swanson is said to have a new contract with the movie makers giving her $17,500 every seven days. This is what may be called good pay for one uninterested in the business from an investment standpoint.

How many nurses, school teachers and mothers will it take to equal the compensation of the actress? What greater contribution does she make to society than the hundreds of the classes named whose combined compensation does not equal hers?

The lesson to be drawn from these facts, as to money making, is this: If you want big money amuse the public. Service is idealistic but it is seldom cashable.

Developing The Aerial Mail

The post office department is preparing to let private contracts for carrying mail by airplanes, under an act passed recently by Congress, which becomes effective next July.

Private individuals or companies will be permitted to establish routes, carrying mail, express and passengers. As compensation for mail carrying they will receive four-fifths of the carrying charge, which will leave the government its usual two cents per ounce.

The author of the act, Representative Kelly, of Pennsylvania, believes that it will mean the beginning of commercial aviation, and from now on there will be tremendous development. We hope he is right.

Missing Witnesses

In seeking to get at the bottom of the Teapot Dome affair, and in its effort to restore to the navy valuable oil lands, the government is now prosecuting a suit at Cheyenne. Four witnesses, wanted by the government, are missing. They include:

H. M. Blackmer, chairman of the board of the Midwest Refining Company, who has been in France for a year and has no intension of returning to testify.

James E. O'Neil, president of the Prairie Oil and Gas company, who has been in France for more than a year, expressing the same opinion as Blackmer's.

Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company, of Indiana, who disappears for places unknown, while his secretary announced he is "south bound" and it is believed he is headed for South America.

These three are American citizens, high in the management of the oil industry. If there is nothing to hide, if there has been nothing criminal, or illegal, then there should be no reason why high officials should skip the country. Patriotism, so abundant in wartime, should abound occasionally in peace. If the government has been wronged in the oil leases the men higher up ought to be anxious to testify. Their refusal to do so and their absence indicates a degree of guilt which nothing can remove from the public mind.

High taxes, high life, high interest—the highs have it.

Some city folks are inclined to make fun of their country neighbors. This is a sign that the city man's grandfather was a good plow hand.

would be authorized to erect and maintain sanatoriums for the treatment of tuberculosis according to the bill, sponsored by Charles E. Greene of Richmond, which passed the Senate by a vote of 28 to 0. Taxes for such purposes could not exceed one mill. The State should pay $1 per day for each patient in such hospitals.

Favor New Apple Grades

By a vote of 28 to 0 the Senate voiced its approval of Senator Leland's simplified apple standards bill which reduces the number of grades from 7 to 4. While apple growers and packers have failed to reach an agreement as to just what they would consider as a perfect grading system for Michigan apples, it is understood that most of the interested individuals and organizations are fairly well satisfied with the Leland bill in its present form.

Without a single vote to spare, the House passed, 51 to 40, Rep. Harris's bill to increase hunting licenses from $1.00 to $1.25. The purpose of this extra fee is to provide revenue to pay taxes on state owned game preserves and refuges, as provided by a companion bill which was also passed by a close vote after being once defeated. In the past these lands, being state owned, have not been on the tax roll. Often they were located in poor communities, so the tax rate was oppressively high on the other property situated in the same assessment district. Under the proposed plan the state owned game reserves will be assessed as other property and the tax rate will apply, but the state will foot the bill.

Pass Primary Fund Bill

Seeing the justice the Bohn bill to provide a more fair and equitable system of distributing the primary school fund, the House approved by a 83 to 6 vote this important measure which will afford much needed relief to the poorer school districts of the state. The Bohn bill is far more conservative than the Meggison bill which was considered by the 1923 Legislature. Under the terms of the Bohn proposal 95 per cent of the fund will be distributed on the school census basis as at present, while the remaining 5 per cent will be divided among the more needy districts according to a carefully worked out method specified in the bill.

This 5 per cent will amount to approximately $750,000. It is said that Wayne county will loose nearly $300,000 under the Bohn bill, yet several of the Wayne members voted for it because they could see its justice and could realize that its enactment would help to insure an equality of educational opportunity in Michigan. Kent members declared that it would cost their county between $25,000 and $30,000 annually, but they gladly supported it, believing it to be for the best interests of the state. The bill had previously passed the Senate and now goes to the Governor.

Very broad powers are given the Commissioner of Conservation by the terms of Rep. Ming's bill which has passed the House 69 to 19. This measure provides that the Commissioner shall have full authority to open and close hunting and fishing seasons in any part of the state, whenever he deems such action to be necessary for the protection of desirable forms of wild life.

Camp Custer—Camp Custer needs improvements and needs them badly, was the comment of Brig. Gen. Benjamin A. Poore, new commandant of Custer, upon his first visit here.

Battle Creek—A new theatre, to cost between $300,000 and $400,000, and to be one of the largest and finest equipped in Michigan is to be built by W. S. Butterfield, it has been announced.

Ionis—Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck has denied a request of the governor of Indiana for the extradition of Albert O. Rogers of this city, on a warrant for passing worthless checks by the Terre Haute, Ind., police.

Port Huron—Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways and the Grand Trunk Railway, will come here April 20 to address the members of the St. Clair District Transportation club.

Muskegon—The Continental Motors Corporation has issued a call for all its former employees to return to work. Increased production has caused night forces to be added in some departments. Three thousand men are now employed.

Lansing—Work has begun on clearing the site for the construction of the new Hotel Olds, a community project. The hotel will provide 300 rooms and will be 12 stories, the highest building in the city. The estimated cost is $1,000,000 and it is to be completed by April 1, 1926.

STAR

Running-in-oil and Timken Bearings

This new STAR, with either Timken Tapered Roller Bearings or "NO-OIL-EM" Bearings, running-in-oil, has great efficiency as a pumping power in 8 to 10 mile winds.

As you know, any mill will pump water in high winds, but the windmill that will provide water in the lighter breezes is the one you want.

The Star can do this because it has a scientifically designed wheel. The fans have just the right curvature and are properly spaced.

Bearings running in oil, with a flood of oil for cross-head, guides and pitmans, reduce friction to the minimum. The better features of the old Star, two gears, two pinions and two pitmans, are retained. This gives a direct center lift to pump rod and equalizes the load on working parts of the mill. Star is pivoted on ball-bearing turn table.

Come in and see this new Star. You will be interested in seeing how effectively it is lubricated, and we know one erected on your place will prove a better water pump than anything you have used in the windmill line. May be fitted on any tower.

RESULTS THAT LAST!
Proven by East Jordan People.

Thousands of kidney sufferers have tried remedy after remedy with only temporary benefit. That's mighty discouraging! But one kidney remedy has earned a reputation for lasting results and there's plenty of proof right here in East Jordan.

Read the experience of one who used Doan's Pills years ago and now makes her endorsement even stronger.

Mrs. Henry Ribble, Bridge St., East Jordan, says: "I had a lameness in my back and when I stooped, knife-like pains took me across my kidneys. I felt nervous and depressed and headaches and dizzy spells were frequent, too. I saw Doan's Pills advertised and I used a few boxes from Gidley & Mac's Drug Store. They cured me." (Statement given April 23, 1920.)

On Oct. 11, 1924, Mrs. Ribble said: "The cure Doan's Pills made for me has stood the test of years. It is a pleasure to recommend them."

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

Senate Approves State's Buying D. G. H. & M. Railway Property

Lansing—By a unanimous vote, the Senate passed the Howarth Resolution declaring the intent of the state to purchase the property of the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railroad. The vote was taken after the bill had been reported out of the Committee on Rules and Resolutions with a recommendation it be passed. The vote which brought the resolution out of committee with recommendation of passage was unanimous, although it is understood that Senator George G. Hunter of St. Johns, chairman, was opposed to the recommendation, as was one other member. Finding themselves outnumbered, they agreed to make the vote unanimous.

Split On Rapid Transit Bill

After lengthy discussion members of the Wayne delegation in the house and spokesmen for the Detroit rapid transit commission were still disagreed as to what financial limitations should be incorporated in the new enabling act that has been drafted at the governor's suggestion and which it is proposed to introduce in place of the bill that the governor had threatened to veto because of belief that it was unconstitutional. The legislators plan for financial restriction of the rapid transit commission roughly would provide for the raising of a $60,000,000 fund and the building of approximately 12 miles of railway.

Solons Indulge In Horseplay

The roguish atmosphere of April Fool's Day provided self-entertainment for 30 members of the Michigan state senate. Senator Harvey E. Penney of Saginaw, and his anti-gas station bill were the objects of the sprightly remarks. While the boyish capers were enacted into legislative history 30 members of the senate, seven newspaper correspondents and an unlimited number of senate employees looked dubiously at cigars passed through the chamber by Senator Walter Truettner, of Bessmer. The cigars failed miserably to explode.

Primary School Bill Passes

A new system of distributing the primary school fund was enacted into law, save for the Governor's signature, by the legislature. The Bohn-Carter-Turner measure, providing that 5 per cent of the fund be set aside for distribution to the poorer counties under the so-called Escanaba plan, passed by the House by a vote of 33 to 6. It had previously passed the Senate. The change will permit the apportionment to the counties which need State aid in the most of about $750,000 a year, in addition to their regular quota of the fund.

Prohibition Enforcement Out

That prohibition-enforcement in Detroit and other parts of Michigan will be curtailed this year was indicated when the senate finance committee reported out an appropriation bill allowing only $150,000 for this branch of law enforcement. At the same time it was announced that the department of public safety is to be reorganized under the direction of state administrative board.

State Fair Number Approved

The appointment of John W. Smith, of Port Huron, as a member of the board of managers of the State Fair was confirmed by the Senate on presentation by Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck. Several other appointments to minor boards, made by the Governor since the adjournment of the 1923 Legislature, were referred to the Committee on Executive Business.

Senate Passes Courts Bill

The Callender-Wood-Darin County Court Bill, aimed to effect a reorganization of Justice Courts in counties of 100,000 or more inhabitants, and pointed particularly at Detroit, passed the Senate by a vote of 22 to 8. The measure is now in the House. The new bill changes the name of the court to the County Court, and makes it a state institution.

Finance Measure Amended

Senator Charles E. Greene, of Richmond, asked a reconsideration of the vote by which his bill to license and regulate finance corporations was passed by the Senate. The reconsideration was granted and Mr. Greene presented an amendment to the bill, specifically exempting real estate companies and private banks from the operation of its provisions. In this stage, the bill was repassed by a unanimous vote.

Governor Calls Conference

Gov. Alex. J. Groesbeck took a hand in the legislative appropriations tangle when he called a conference of the Senate Finance Committee, the House Ways and Means Committee, Lieut. Gov. George Welsh, Speaker Fred B. Wells and Henry Croll, Jr., director of the budget, in the offices of the State Administrative Board in the State Office Building. The immediate cause of the conference, it was reported, was the question of rebuilding the State Sanatorium at Howell.

Registration, which is free to any radio listener who will write to the Board of Short Courses, M. A. # King Tommy

By George A. Birmingham

"She's not my aunt."

"I meant to say that aunt of Lord Norheys?" said the king. "She looks as if she'd be a little difficult to get rid of. But I'll manage that for you. I'll manage it at once. I'll take Miss Church off to lunch with me in the restaurant car and I'll fix things up so that you and Calypso will have to lunch later. That will give you a clear hour all to yourselves. You ought to be able to explain away Miss Temple in less than an hour."

Tommy hoped and believed that he would be able to explain to the princess that he was not Lord Norheys, if he got a chance of talking to her. But he remembered the note she had flung at him in the Mascotte. It seemed to him quite likely that she would not allow him to talk to her at all.

"But even if you take Miss Church away," said Tommy, "will the princess talk to me?"

"Of course she will," said the king. "She'll love to. She takes after her mother, and the late queen was almost passionately fond of talking to me, especially about Miss Temple—I mean of course whoever the Miss Temple happened to be at the moment. The number of times she talked to me on that subject would amaze you. And Calypso is exactly like her mother in many ways. I assure you, my dear boy, whatever else you may have to complain of in married life, you'll never have it to say that your wife won't talk to you. And the same thing is true of the patriarch."

CHAPTER XIII

The Princess Calypso, it appeared, was not so fond as her mother had been of talks on uncomfortable and embarrassing subjects.

The king took Janet Church away to the restaurant car. By an exercise of skill and tact of which only a man trained as a king would have been capable, he left Calypso and Tommy behind. They were safe from interruption for an hour. Tommy ought to have been able to explain his position to her. He failed, because Calypso refused to listen to him.

She turned her back on him and stared out of the window. This was discouraging, but Tommy was not going to be defeated by her manner. He took the corner seat opposite her. Calypso immediately got up and crossed to the other end of the compartment. Tommy did not venture to follow her the whole way. He sat down in the middle of the seat opposite to her.

"I hope," he said, "that you will allow me to explain myself, to tell you who I am and what I'm doing here. This letter which you wrote to me—"

He took from his breast pocket the note which Calypso had thrown to him in the Mascotte. She was staring steadily into the corridor outside, and she did not turn her head; but she knew perfectly well what Tommy was talking about.

"I don't want to listen to any explanation," she said, "and I've nothing to say to you except what I said in that letter. Go back to Miss Temple."

"But you must allow me to explain," said Tommy.

Calypso had no answer to give him except a muttered repetition of the words, "Go back to Miss Temple."

"I must say this," said Tommy. "I'm not the man you think I am."

"You're a very heartless and cruel man," said Calypso. "If you weren't heartless and cruel, you wouldn't be breaking Miss Temple's heart. Why won't you go back to her?"

"I can't go back to her, because I've never spoken to her and I don't know who she is."

"How can you say a thing like that when you're deserting her?"

Tommy, in his eagerness to be listened to, had edged his way across the carriage until he sat exactly opposite to Calypso. She crossed the carriage again to get away from him and once more Tommy followed her half way.

"I don't want to worry you," he said, "but I think you really ought to listen to me."

"You are worrying me. You're doing worse, you're persecuting me."

"The last thing in the world I want to do is to annoy you in any way. But for your own sake as well as mine, and for Lord Norheys' sake, and for Miss Temple's sake you ought to listen to me."

"I won't," said Calypso, "and if you're a gentleman you'll go away."

"I'll go away if you like, after you've heard what I've got to say."

"I thought all Englishmen were gentlemen," said Calypso.

"Not quite all. I've met one or two who weren't. And I'm Irish, not English."

"If you won't go away, I must," said Calypso.

She stood up as she spoke, intending to go out into the corridor. But to do that she would have been forced to pass quite close to Tommy. He was leaning forward in his eagerness to make her listen, so she might have to touch him as she passed. She hesitated.

"If you like," said Tommy, "I'll telegraph to Miss Temple and ask her to say that she doesn't know me and doesn't want to have anything to do with me."

"How can she say that, when she wrote to me that she loved you with all her heart?"

She began to push past Tommy. But he proved that he had a gentleman's consideration for her feelings. Rather than allow her to go out into a draughty and uncomfortable corridor, he got up and went there himself. He stayed there snoking unhappily until the king and Janet Church came back from the restaurant car. Then Tommy went off and had his own luncheon. Calypso contented herself with a few biscuits and an apple which Janet Church produced from her bags. Wherever Janet travels she always carries biscuits and apples with her.

The king made himself very agreeable to Janet in the restaurant car, and no monarch in Europe has better manners than he has. Perhaps he had never before exerted himself to be agreeable to a lady of Janet's age and appearance. The result was excellent. Janet was pleased and flattered.

"I am so very glad," he said, "that you are accompanying my daughter to Lystra. I feel that I can rely on you, on your kindness, your discretion, your wisdom. When all is said and done, a young girl cannot have a better companion than an English lady. My dear wife was English."

"I'm Scotch," said Janet.

"My dear wife," said the king, "was half Scotch, and if there's anything in the world to be preferred to an English lady as a companion to a young and impressionable girl, it is a Scotch lady."

A waiter flung three dishes of varied hors d'oeuvres on the table. The king helped Janet tenderly to a sardine, an oily slice of tomato and a small salted eel. Then he ordered a bottle of Burgundy.

"At a time like this—" he said, "after all, marriage is a great occasion in a girl's life. The help and advice of a wise lady a little older than herself—you won't mind my saying a little older, will you?"

"I'm fifty-two," said Janet, "and not in the least ashamed of it."

"I knew you wouldn't be ashamed of it. I could see that at once. Your firm mouth, your clear, far-seeing eyes. Your calm strong outlook upon life, your profound idealism—"

Janet is far less sensible than she looks. She bridled with pleasure at the king's compliments. He filled her glass with Burgundy, and Janet so far forgot herself and her principles as to sip it without saying that all continental water is poison.

"A young girl," said the king, "is apt to take exaggerated views of things which you and I regard as—what shall I say?—not right, certainly not right. But inevitable."

The waiter whisked away Janet's plate, gave her another and dumped an enormous spoonful of omelette on it. She sipped her Burgundy again. The king's manner was caressing. The wine was strong. The omelette was excellent. But it takes more than wine, food and caresses to dull Janet's conscience.

"If you're alluding to that unfortunate young man's entanglement with a London actress—" she said.

"Young men," said the king, "will be young men."

"They ought not to be," said Janet firmly.

"However," said the king cheerfully, "I'm not really nervous about Calypso. She'll get over it after a while. Her poor dear mother always got over it after a while."

"Got over what?"

"Come now," said the king, "you can hardly expect me to answer that. Of course you said you were forty-two, but—"

"Fifty-two," said Janet.

"Even so," said the king, "you can scarcely expect me to answer that question in detail. Even at the age of forty-five, if you really are forty-five—"

"Fifty-two."

"At any age," said the king, "such confessions are embarrassing, embarrassing for both of us. Besides, it isn't only with Calypso that I want you to use your influence. There's the patriarch. Do you know our patriarch?"

"I hope to. I'm going to Lystra in order to enlist his sympathies in our great movement."

"And I'm sure you'll succeed," said the king. "Our patriarch is full of sympathy with all good causes, and I'm certain that your movement is one of the best."

Janet helped herself to some of the veal which a waiter was pushing at her in a large dish. The king refilled her glass. She had sipped away almost half of what was in it.

"It's the establishment of world peace," she said, "through the medium of the United Christian Churches."

"In that case," said the king, "you can count with certainty on our patriarch. There's nothing, absolutely nothing, he likes better than the establishment of world peace except perhaps the Unity of Christian Churches, though perhaps he's a little inclined to take the view that the other churches should unite with his and not his with them. I mean to say, he thinks that if there's to be a compromise, it must be on the basis of every one else giving way. But all ecclesiastics are like that. Our patriarch isn't peculiar."

"When we speak of the union of churches," said Janet, "we mean a concordat based on the essentials of the Christian creed."

"Of course," said the king, "and you'll find our patriarch absolutely agrees with you about that so long as you don't ask him to shake hands with the Megallon Archimandrite. He might draw the line there, though, as I said, he's always on for anything really good. A good cause simply fascinates him. If he has a weakness—as we all have—it is that he's not so fond as he might be of the things which aren't quite so good as the Causes. Take young men now. As you very rightly said a few minutes ago, young men are young men."

"I said they ought not to be."

"But they are," said the king, "that's what the patriarch cannot be got to see, but I am sure I can rely on you to put the thing before him in the proper light. After all, Miss Temple is a long way off. It isn't as if she is in the least likely to turn up in Lystra."

"I fear that I can scarcely undertake—"

Janet was softened, perhaps for the first time in her life. If it had not been for the wine, the good food, and the king's charming manners, she would no doubt have replied to him much more blankly than she did. She might even have spoken fiercely.

"I fear," she said, "I cannot undertake to persuade the patriarch that Miss Temple doesn't exist."

"Well, perhaps not," said the king. "After all, the patriarch is a very difficult man to persuade. I never could do it. I dare say it will really be better if he doesn't hear about Miss Temple at all. And he never will if Calypso doesn't tell him."

"I shall not consider it my duty to tell him," said Janet. "My business with him—"

"Is world unity through peaceful Christian churches."

"World peace," said Janet, "through the Unity of Christian Churches."

"Quite so," said the king, "and even if it had been World Churches Through the Unity of Christian Peace, it would still be far more important than our little affairs. Still, if you persuade Calypso not to tell the patriarch—"

If Calypso had been there he might have said that the king, like poor old Lear's worst daughter, gave "sweet oiled and most speaking glances" to Janet. I doubt very much whether any one had ever made eyes at her before. The treatment had a certain effect.

"I shall not," said Janet, "advise that the patriarch be told."

I dare say Janet's conscience was gnawing her a little. She had drunk a glass and a half of Burgundy and the king was putting a liqueur glass full of cognac beside her coffee. That was enough to make her uneasy. She had promised to conceal, or help in concealing a scandal. I suppose she had never before in her whole life agreed to do such a thing, and no doubt the thought of it was unpleasant. By way of compounding with her conscience and so quieting it, she made up her mind to say something really nasty about Tommy.

"He Pretends to Be a Curate," Said the King.

"Are you aware," she said, "that the young man about whom we have been speaking is not what he pretends to be?"

"He pretends to be a curate?" said the king.

"Exactly, and I'm perfectly certain he's nothing of the sort."

"I thought not," said the king. "I thought not. I'm glad you've confirmed my suspicion."

"I've known many curates," said Janet, "perhaps hundreds of them, and I've never known one yet who behaved as this one does. He drinks cocktails in the morning and goes to the Mascotte in the evenings."

"The patriarch wouldn't dream of doing such things," said the king.

"Which makes me certain that he's not a curate or indeed a clergyman at all."

"That," said the king, "is more the sort of way a young man like Lord Norheys might behave."

"Very possibly. I don't know Lord Norheys."

"At the same time," said the king, "it is not our business to expose the unfortunate young man. Deplorable as his conduct is, I don't see that we need warn the patriarch against him."

"For the sake of the reputation of the Church of England," said Janet, "I feel that I ought to make it clear that he is not one of our clergy."

"If he does anything scandalous while he is in Lystra," said the king, "kisses a housemaid, or anything like that, of course you'll have to tell the patriarch and Calypso too, that he isn't a clergyman. You'd be bound to do that for the sake of the Church of England. But if he behaves with ordinary decorum—After all, he may have good reasons for pretending to

Thought for the week:—

Memories are the treasures that change cannot touch. The day of delight ends, the happy group breaks up, the music ceases, the wonderful experience passes, but it is a shallow nature that finds only cause for bewailing the joys that are transitory. Memory is a great artist making un fading pictures, and by its aid the pleasures we have known become a store of lasting riches. They are ours forever.

Needed Compass Change

The United States Geological survey says that a compass should be changed about one degree every 20 years. This change is necessary, as the magnetic pole toward which the needle of a compass points and the North pole are not the same. The magnetic pole shifts, and therefore the change must be made in the compass to make up for the shift of the magnetic pole.

Porcupines Annoy Railroad

The government's Alaska railroad has to fight porcupines. Rubber in any form is to the porcupine what waste paper and rubbish are to the American goat, popular for lunching purposes, and the railroad officials have ordered rubber hose in pumping stations and all rubber fixtures to be hung on high poles.

be a clergyman. I'm pretending to be a head waiter in order to earn my living. There's nothing really wicked about that. I don't see that either you or I are bound to tell the patriarch that he's not a curate."

"So long as you know the facts I don't see that it's anybody else's business."

"And I do know them thoroughly."

"I felt bound to tell you," said Janet, "but I don't see that I need tell anyone else."

"Thanks," said the king.

Part III.—Lystria CHAPTER XIV

It took Casimir two days to complete his arrangement for the reception of the princess at the Schloss. The little party—Tommy, the princess and Janet Church—stayed in the best hotel in Breslau. The king took rooms for them before he went back to Berlin, a bedroom for Tommy, two bedrooms and a sitting room for the ladies. The head waiter of the Mascotte is an important person in hotel keeping and restaurant circles in Germany. Tommy's party was treated with the greatest courtesy and consideration.

But the two days in Breslau were not very pleasant for Tommy. He saw but little of the princess, and he never saw her alone. They met at meals; but Janet Church was always there. Afterward the princess and Janet either retired to their own sitting room, or took a walk without asking Tommy to go with them. He got no chance of explaining himself to the princess or trying to convince her that he knew nothing of Miss Temple. This worried him. On the other hand, the princess' manner became gradually more and more agreeable. The extreme hostility with which she had greeted him in the Mascotte and afterward in the train gave way to ordinary politeness and at last to friendliness.

Janet, of course, was with the princess all day and talked to her incessantly, almost always about world peace and the Unity of Christian Churches. This would have inclined any girl to feel kindly toward a young man, even if he were the callous breaker of another girl's heart. And Calypso came to be doubtful whether Tommy had really broken Miss Temple's heart. Janet, when her mind could be diverted from the Union of Churches, dropped hints about Tommy which set Calypso wondering. She said, for instance, that Tommy was not the man he professed to be. So far as Calypso knew, Tommy professed to be Lord Norheys, and she thought that he might be somebody else gave her a queer little thrill of pleasure. If he were not Lord Norheys, then he was not bound in honor to marry Miss Temple.

She began to look at Tommy with interest, at first as a man whom it might be her duty to marry, later on as a man whom she might be content to marry even if it were not her duty. Her view of Miss Temple changed in an odd way. It occurred to her as possible that this London dancer might be one of those wicked women who lure young men into entanglements and then hold them to their half-made promises. She came by degrees to think of Miss Temple as a nuisance, some one who had no right to be there at all, certainly no right to interfere with Lord Norheys' life. Tommy could not fail to observe the change in Calypso's manner, and the thought that her feelings toward him were becoming more friendly filled him with a determination to go through with his adventure whatever happened.

There were difficulties. One, trifling in itself, but singularly embarrassing, met him almost at once.

On the evening of his arrival, while he was smoking a pipe before going to bed, Tommy was greeted by a cheerful, intelligent looking young Englishman.

"Excuse me, sir, but aren't you Colonel Heard?"

Tommy was not Colonel Heard any more than he was Lord Norheys; but he knew he had Colonel Heard's passport in his pocket and his party were entered in the hotel register as Colonel and Mrs. Heard and Miss Osborne. The king had done that for them before he went back to Berlin.

"My name," said the stranger, "is Allen. I don't think we've ever met."

"Never," said Tommy firmly, thankful that Allen was not one of Colonel Heard's oldest friends.

"But when I saw your name in the hotel register," said Allen, "I thought I'd introduce myself. I'm doing Reparations, you know."

He gave that piece of information as if it formed some excuse for having seen Colonel Heard's name in the register book. Perhaps it was an excuse. Any one concerned with Reparations is bound to be filled with curiosity and ought to investigate everything he comes across. How else is he to know whether the conquered nations can or cannot pay the fines imposed on them?

"I hope," Allen went on, "that you'll introduce me to Mrs. Heard. I'd like to tell my sister that I've met her."

Tommy could not do anything else but promise to introduce Allen to Mrs. Heard next morning. But he could not help wondering which of his two ladies were the better suited for the part. Janet Church was almost the age that colonel's wives generally are. But Tommy knew that he himself looked absurdly young. There cannot be many instances of colonels of twenty-six years old married to ladies of fifty-two, and Janet looked every day of her age. On the other hand, one of his two ladies had to pose as the secretary of the Graves Registration commission. Calypso did not look like a secretary and it would be difficult to convince any one that she was chiefly occupied with graves. Janet, with her face and figure, looked exactly like a lady who spent her time in typing letters about tombstones. Tommy made up his mind that Calypso must be Mrs. Heard.

"I want to thank Mrs. Heard," said Allen, for all her kindnesses to my sister in 1915. She was like a mother to the girls in that canteen, and she kept a tight hand over them, too. Quite right. They needed it."

The date gave Tommy a shock. In 1915 Calypso was at the utmost fourteen years of age and could not possibly have kept a tight hand over any one, except perhaps the inhabitants of a dolls' house. Tommy altered his plan. Janet would have to be Mrs. Heard. But he was by no means certain of how Janet would like that. She had already accepted the position of his aunt, and it is distinctly laid down in the Prayer Book that an aunt may not marry her nephew. Janet, with her strong ecclesiastical instincts, might very well object to committing herself to a breach of the marriage laws of the Church.

In the end Tommy got out of his difficulty in a way which struck him as neat. He led Allen across the dining room at luncheon next day and brought him to the table where the princess and Janet sat.

"Allow me to introduce Mr. Allen to you," he said. Then, turning to Allen, he murmured: "My wife, and my secretary, Miss Gisborne."

That left Allen to decide for himself which was the wife and which the secretary. He was puzzled. He looked at Janet and then at Tommy. He looked at Calypso, and thought of his sister and the other unruly maidens in the canteen. At last he decided in favor of Janet.

"I want to thank you," he said to her, "for all your kindness to my sister."

Janet took that very well. She had been kind, after her own fashion, to so many different people that she could not possibly recollect them all. She inquired graciously for Miss Allen, and received an account of her marriage to a young officer she had met at the canteen.

The introduction passed off surprisingly well; but Tommy was by no means done with Allen. That evening they met again.

"Ever see any of the fellows from the old regiment nowadays?" said Allen.

Tommy would have been glad to know what the old regiment was. He wished very much that he had thought of asking Casimir and the king for a little more information before he undertook to be Colonel Heard.

"I ran into Simpson the other day," said Allen. "You remember Soapy Simpson and the old Frenchwoman in the rest billets behind Givenchy?"

"Rather," said Tommy heartily, "that's how he got the name Soapy, wasn't it?"

"Was it?" he said. "But there wasn't any soap in that business, was there?"

"It may have been cheese," said Tommy. "One gets confused about these things."

"Oh," said Allen, "you're thinking of Collins. They always said it was an account of that cheese that you recommended Collins for the D. S. O."

"That," said Tommy, "is a gross slander. As a matter of fact, Collins' recommendation for the D. S. O. went in before any one heard a word about the cheese."

He felt that he owed that much to Colonel Heard's reputation. Whatever Collins had done about the cheese, whether he had eaten it, refrained from eating it, stolen it, or baited a mousetrap with it, no conscientious colonel would have recommended him for a D. S. O. on that account alone.

"Oddly enough," said Allen, "I heard from Collins the other day. I suppose you know he married that little red-haired V. A. D. who used to be at Wimereux."

"I always expected he would," said Tommy, "though in my opinion she was a great deal too good for him. Can't imagine what any girl could do in Soapy Simpson's case."

"It was Collins who recommended her, not Simpson. Did I say Simpson?"

"Oh, Collins," said Tommy. "That's different, of course. What's Collins doing now?"

"He and she are running a chicken farm in Monte Carlo," said Allen, "making quite a good thing out of it, I believe."

After that Tommy escaped and went to bed. But Allen came at him again the next morning. He had a passion for reminiscence, and seemed to have known every single officer in "the old regiment" except Colonel Heard himself. Young Bright had come to grief over a dud check which he cashed in a night club in London. Tommy expressed great regret for his fate. Poor Styles was still limping about and would never get back the use of his leg. Tommy regretted that, too. After a while Allen got back to the subject of his sister, and Mrs. Heard and the canteen.

Control of Animal Parasites Studied

Coal Tar Creosote Solutions Found to Be Best.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Various methods of treating horses for infestations with biting and sucking lice were tested by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, during the last fiscal year, in the course of studies in the treatment and control of external parasites of live stock. The best results were obtained by dipping or spraying with coal-tar-creosote solutions or arsenical dip.

Coal-tar-creosote solutions are found on the market as stock dips under various trade names with instructions on the labels for dilution. The arsenical dip is the same as that used for destroying cattle ticks, and is used in the same dilution.

Tests with sulphur-dioxide gas to cure sarcoptic mange proved to be unsuccessful. Treatments with gas concentrations as high as 10 per cent and consisting of two hours' exposure on four different days at five-day intervals failed to cure advanced cases. Other degrees of concentration and with treatment at different intervals likewise gave negative results.

The Department of Agriculture is making exhaustive investigations of the numerous kinds of parasites—both external and internal—that affect domestic animals, and also maintains an "index-catalogue" of the published literature on parasites, which is believed to be the most complete of its kind in existence. It includes data on animal parasites found in all parts of the world.

Eliminating Horse From Metropolitan Centers

"City use of horses is on the decline," says Dr. Carl W. Gay of the University of the State of Ohio, in a recent lecture at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. He says, on the other hand, that the reverse is true on farms.

Doctor Gay said that the horse breeders of the country have been following a policy of blind optimism by making themselves believe a horse boom lies around the corner. The traffic problem in the large cities is so acute that the horse-drawn vehicles are becoming fewer and fewer, so that the breeders must look to the farmer as a purchaser.

In order to fulfill the farmers' demands the small mares should be bred as well as the larger ones to obtain the desirable wagon-type of horse. The wagon type is becoming more and more recognized as the most desirable farm horse, as it is a horse which combines draft ability with speed on the road. For the farmer with no pride of ancestry or hope for posterity, the mule is even more efficient than the horse, Doctor Gay says.

While Doctor Gay is pessimistic about the future use of the city horse, he is just as optimistic when looking at the farm-horse proposition. A sane, safe policy for farmers of the East is to breed their own replacements. "Deal in the present needs, not in uncertain features" is the speaker's advice.

Brome Grass a Valuable Crop for Pasture Land

Brome grass is more valuable for pasture than for hay. It will do fairly well on very light soil, as it stands drought well. It starts slowly. For this reason sow with clover and timothy. Sow with nurse crop.

The clover and timothy make most of the crop the second year; after that the brome makes most of the crop. If sown without other grass, sow 10 to 15 pounds of seed per acre. In a mixture as suggested above, sow five or six pounds per acre.

Sweet clover and brome make a very good mixture for pasture. Sow from six to eight pounds sweet clover, four to five pounds timothy and five pounds brome per acre. It is not hard to get rid of.

FARM FACTS

If at first you don't succeed, buy better seed.

A man is as old as he feels but a gardener is always young.

It's time to begin thinking about feeding next winter's dairy cows.

Before planning to increase production, make sure that the product can be sold.

Using poor seed, or untested seed, may be cheap in first cost, but it's expensive in the long run.

While New York is not a beef-cattle state, the latest census shows 63,170 beef cattle in the state.

An important form of co-operation on the farm is co-operation with the weather to get things done under right weather conditions.

To get early muskmelons—the kind that bring the best prices—start the seed under glass in veneer bands, and transplant to the field.

The farmer who merely guesses that his seed corn will grow, may get another guess coming. The get-

$500,000,000 Gain by Better Feed

BETTER FEEDING INCREASES PROFITS 60%

OVER $500,000,000 extra profit can be made each year by dairy farmers through the employment of better feeding methods. This would mean a saving of about $111 for each of the four and a half million dairy farmers of the United States, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. The truth of this experiment is borne out by a feeding experiment carried on during the past year by the University of Minnesota.

Over a year ago the dairy division of the university purchased four average cows for which records were available of feed received, and of milk and fat produced, covering two years for each cow. The cows received good care on the farm of the original owner but were not on a scientific feeding ration. The university immediately placed the cows on a feeding ration suitable for their needs. Within a year production per cow had increased 86.7 per cent.

On the farm of the original owner the cows produced on the average of 4,667 pounds of milk containing 182 pounds of fat, the products per cow amounting to around $87.86. The feed cost totaled $49.46, leaving a profit of $37.80. At the university farm the average production was 6,375 pounds of milk, containing 259 pounds of butter fat and valued at $124.32. The average feeding cost per cow was $61.42, an increase of 24 per cent, leaving a profit per cow of $62.90. The returns over feed cost per cow gained 60 per cent over those of the two previous years.

On the owner's farm the cows were on pasture six months of the year and were fed timothy hay for roughage, plus five pounds per day of a grain mixture made up of 90 parts bran, 80 parts middling, 18 parts molasses feed, and 4 parts oilmeal. At the university farm the cows were on pasture 5 months of the year. They were fed corn silage and alfalfa hay as roughage, plus a grain ration, according to production, made up of oats, 2 parts, corn, 1 part, and barley, 1 part.

At the most, not more than 5,000,000 dairy cows are on proper feeding rations, the Creamery Institute believes. There are at least 20,000,000 average cows in the United States, they say, from which an added profit of $25 per year could be had by proper feeding.

"Chinook Wind"

This is a name given to a strong, warm wind and dry south or west wind descending the eastern slopes of the Rocky mountains into Montana and Wyoming, evaporating or melting the snow and bringing great relief in cold weather. The name was probably given it because it blew from the territory occupied by the Chinook Indians.

Also a Counter Irritant

A feminine newspaper writer says no two people can live together in matrimony without friction and without getting on each other's nerves. But people must marry, and some of them must live together, friction or no friction, nerves or no nerves. It seems to us that under such circumstances children are not only a great help, but necessary.—Houston Post-Dispatch.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.
