Clothing Project For Charlevoix County Started

Mrs. Louise H. Campbell, State Home Demonstration Leader Present.

An organization meeting was held at the Library in Boyne City on the 29th of April at which time Mrs. Campbell explained the organization of the Charlevoix County Clothing Project to a group of 27 women who represented the cities and rural districts. This work is conducted by the Extension Service of our Agricultural College and has been very successfully carried on in several Counties in the Southern part of the State. In the same manner as the County Agent largely works with the farmers, this work is available for the women from our Home Economics Dept. to improve the home life and to impart instruction in clothing work.

This is the first time in Charlevoix County that there has been any assistance given for the women and was only possible by the Counties of Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego, and Antrim co-operating which made it possible for us to have Home Demonstration Specialists who will work in these four counties for two months starting the 14th of May. If you are interested in receiving the benefit of this work get in touch with the County Agent, Boyne City, and be enrolled or see the leader in your community which will be announced at a later date.

Rejects Alimony

It is interesting to observe the Peggy Allenby, actress, divorced from Robert Armstrong, actor, did not ask for alimony, saying "I don't need any." Baring her own living and with an independent income she told the truth. She said some other things worth repeating. Here they are: "I think some women have an awful nerve to cease loving a man but go right on loving his money."

Certified Potato Seed Men To Meet

Members of the Michigan Certified Seed Potato Growers Association, a co-operative group of farmers raising seed stocks, under inspection, will be held at Cadillac on Friday, June 12, according to announcement made here this week by J. W. Weston, extension specialist at M. A. C. and corresponding secretary of the association.

An educational program will supplement the business sessions of the annual meeting, it is said. Minor changes in the by-laws of the organization, details of the five year contract plan for distribution of the certified potato seed stock, and a report of the pool for the past season will be among outstanding transactions at the meeting.

The certified Seed Potato Growers Association and the Michigan Potato Producers Association are the two farmers' groups producing seed tubers under an inspection system carried out by the extension division at the state college. A committee, headed by H. C. Rather, secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, was recently appointed to head up all potato inspection and certification for the state.

As a result of the proved worth of the certified tubers, a marked increase in the quality of potato seed planted in the state is said to be apparent.

Readers Want Crime News

One of the oldest daily newspapers in North Carolina, the Fayetteville Observer, recently announced that, as an experiment, it would omit crime news for fifteen days. We understand that the paper had an exclusive field, that no competing newspaper could take its business.

At the end of six days the paper resumed the printing of crime news, although there had been no decrease in circulation. The readers voted for the publication of crime news by a vote of sixty to one, and the management gave up the experiment, which was undertaken "as a result of public pressure."

Opinion as to the wisdom of publishing crime news varies with individuals. The resulting discussion has not yet clarified the subject. Perhaps the best way to determine what to do is to follow the lead of the North Carolina daily and give reader what they want. They pay their money and are entitled to their choice.

Tom Simms, paragrapher, says the way so many young fellows are ruining their health with cigarets you would think they expect another war.

Rum Runned Loses Money

Some time ago Sir Broderick Hartwell, an English baronet, invited the British public to participate in a scheme to supply booze to thirsty American throats through the process known familiarly as rum running. Some 800 individuals it is reported, lured by prospective profits of 120 per cent, went into the scheme, which resulted in a signal failure, "owing to the intensive campaign" of the patrol on the Atlantic coast.

The London Star, writing of the venture, says, "precious little sympathy need be wasted" on the losers because "most of the English people will regard it as quite a satisfactory situation." Further condemning the effort the paper says:—

"This country does not believe in prohibition but it does believe in respecting the laws of other countries and the organized effort of this British baronet and his friends to defeat the extremely interesting and respectable experiment of the United States is a scandal. This whiskey running affair is a sneaking, furtive affront to a friendly nation which is trying out a notable moral experiment. We hope this blow will put an end to the whiskey running."

H. S. Operetta Well Received

Great Credit Due Those Who Had Charge

The operetta, given by the High School Chorus, last Monday night, was a very decided success. The affair was well attended and all were more than satisfied. The city orchestra played for the entire operetta and were a very deciding factor in making it a success. This group is to be congratulated on their ability and co-operation as made the orchestra possible.

A very interesting love plot ran throughout the play and was well acted. The characters showed exceptional ability and training in the use of gestures and in stage position.

Harry McHale took the part of the father and carried off his part in a high hand. Howard Snyder and Erling Johnson who were gallant young heroes, did well, as they usually do. Amos Jackson and Richard Collins, the rogues who furnished the comedy, were past masters, and could not have been better. Margaret Gunderson and Sylvia Tushon were most charming. The Spanish ladies as were Reva Williams and Margaret Buwen. All four were enchanting.

As Spanish dancers, Dorothy Clark, Freueria Shaw and Betty Kitsman were par excellence.

To Miss Bardwell of the Domestic Science Department, a lot of credit is due. She and her department made all of the costumes. Arthur Weiss the annual Training Department also came in for their share as they built the scenery. To Miss Gertrude Sanford who trained and engineered the whole affair there must be given the credit of the master mind. This will probably be Miss Sanford's last production of this kind for the East Jordan High School as she is leaving this year. Miss Sanford has been doing a very splendid work and the school will feel a great loss in her departure.

Thinks Parent Should Rule

One man in the U.S., at least believes there is such a thing as parental authority. He is Magistrate Frederick B. House who recently fined a boy for speeding and also the father, who was riding in the car, for permitting him to speed. The car belonged to the latter.

Wonder where Judge House has been living lately? Doesn't he know that the "old man" has only one function in these days and nights of jazz, and that his pleasure in life is to be permitted to pay for the frolics of his children? Of course, an occasional parent is blessed with a son, who advises him in a friendly manner, and, at times, becomes chummy, but, as a general rule the modern child does not permit its parents to interfere with its life, liberty or pursuit of happiness and stop only enough to tell the said parents where to get off, where to go and how to stay put.

Laws Governing Youth's Labor

Dep'y Cornell Inspects East Jordan Industries

S. C. Cornell, Deputy State Inspector of Grand Rapids, was in East Jordan the past week making annual inspection of our local industries. Mr. Cornell finds that in this district the laws governing the employment of women, and boys and girls before their 18th birthday, is not thoroughly understood, and calls the public's attention to the following regulations.

- 1.—No boy or girl under 14 years of age may be employed at all in the State of Michigan.
- 2.—A boy or girl after their 14th birthday and until their 17th birthday must have a working permit.
- 3.—A boy or girl between their 17th and 18th birthdays must have a Certificate of Age.
- 4.—The employer must keep a register and record in it the name, birthplace, age, and place of residence of every person employed who has not passed his or her 18th birthday. (Any blank book will do for this purpose.)
5. The Working Permit or Certificate of Age must be kept on file by the employer at his place of business.
6. Working Permits and Certificates of Age are issued without any cost by the Attendance Officer of the Board of Education.
7. No woman or girl and no boy before his 18th birthday, can work more than ten hours in any one day, nor more than 54 hours per week.
8. No boy or girl before their 18th birthday may be employed unless the occupation has been approved by the State Department of Labor at Lansing as not being injurious to health or morals, or unduly hazardous.
9. Compensation Law does not cover a minor who is illegally employed; that is, one who is employed without a Working Permit, or a Certificate of Age, or without the approval mentioned in Paragraph 8.

Many Applications for Citizens Military Training Camps

The Adjutant General of the Army at Washington, D. C. has just released the information that 2500 formal applications had been received by the Commanding Generals of the nine Corps Areas on April 20, 1925, for attendance at the 43 camps to be held throughout the United States and Porto Rico for the Citizens' Military Training Camps this summer. This number represents 50 per cent of enrollments desired. On the same date last year but 1600 applications had been received, indicating that the privilege of attending these camps and the necessity for making early application, to be sure of a place, is beginning to be more generally appreciated by young men and their parents.

While the enrollment for the entire United States is 50 per cent of the number desired, in a number of the Corps Areas the percentage of enrollments desired is far in excess of this percentage. For the Sixth Corps Area, which includes the states of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, the percentage of enrollments has reached 78 per cent, and at the rate that applications are reaching Headquarters at Chicago the entire number desired will be filled by May 20, 1925.

Any healthy normal young man between 17 and 24 years can attend these camps, where the cost of transportation to and from the camp is paid by the government; also food, medical attention, uniforms and laundry is provided without cost to the young man attending.

The Commanding General, Sixth Corps Area, at 1819 W. Pershing Rd., Chicago, Ill., will furnish information about the camps that will be held at Camp Custer, Mich., and Jefferson Barracks, Mo., from July 23 to August 21, 1925, for training the young men from Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin.

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE has been a great deal written in recent years on the proper rearing of children, but when it comes to the bringing up of parents, a problem that is quite as difficult and as harassing as the rearing of a child, the inexperienced youth is left without a pilot to steer his difficult and rock-infested course. There is a crying need for a full and reliable text on this subject. The work should include, also, helpful suggestions for the control and direction of obstreperous maiden aunts, or indulgent grandmothers, and should show how to inhibit persistently generous and soft-hearted bachelor uncles. The writer of such a text, if he has given the proper study to the subject, will have recognized at a glance the added difficulty which the child of a single parent encounters in properly rearing his charge, as compared with the youth who has under his control the normal number of progenitors. The child with but one parent to look after will find it next to impossible to develop in him the normal amount of selfishness and the proper backbone and if he is also burdened with a couple of maiden aunts or a grand mother, the situation for the youth is all but hopeless.

My greatest source of trouble, as an executive officer, comes from the overindulgence and badly-brought-up parent or guardian. For example, take the case of Hay. He was looked upon as a selfish, irregular, purposeless student, when in point of fact he would have been a credit to himself if it had not been for his badly reared parents. His mother was so spoiled that she could not live without seeing him once a week or so. She was afraid he was ill fed, so she gave him dinners; she did not feel that he had the right amount of the right sort of social life, so she made him week-end parties; and the father sent him more money than any boy in college can safely spend.

There are all sorts of ill-trained and badly spoiled parents. Usually the worst trained parent of all is the self-made man. He is either like Everhart's father, stern, stubborn and determined that since he himself got where he is by rigid economy and sacrifice, without education and without help from any source, his son must travel the same road. So Everhart fires furnaces and washes dishes for his board and stinks in his studies, while his father increases an already generous bank account, and prides himself that he is helping his son to be democratic and self reliant. Or, perhaps, he is like Wiley's father, who got through college by the most menial sort of toil, who scarcely had enough to eat or to wear, and who now coddles his boy in college until he is one of the laziest and most selfish pigs I know. Both Everhart and Wiley have suffered from badly-trained parents.

Walkers' Traffic Lights
A London newspaper reports that so great has become the automobile peril in that erstwhile land of quiet lanes and remote byways that people walking at night on busy highways wear over their shoulders small red glass disks that reflect the lights of automobiles approaching from behind, thus indicating to the drivers that a pedestrian is ahead on the road.

STUDEBAKER

New Standard Six Coach

$1295

f. o. b. factory
[with full-size balloon tires]

STUDEBAKER has $60,000,000 invested in plants in which Studebaker cars are manufactured complete, including all bodies, both open and closed. No other large automobile manufacturer that we know of makes all of his own bodies.

This means that Studebaker saves the profit of outside parts makers and body-builders. Thus the price of this new coach is not burdened by an extra profit. At $1295 it represents a value no other automobile manufacturer can equal.

And no other manufacturer can offer a coach of such fine quality at the price. For every coach that Studebaker builds carries with it traditions of fine craftsmanship that have existed in Studebaker plants since 1852.

Compare this coach with other cars which sell at much higher prices. This will prove that Studebaker values are unequalled.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

Governor Entertains Legislators With Harmony Dinner At Country Club

Lansing—Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck has reversed himself in the matter of entertaining as chief executive of the State. At each of his three inaugurations he cut out the customary festivities, simply taking the oath of office New Year's Day, then starting work for the two-year term. No inaugural balls or formal receptions. The reversal of his policy was when he had all the members of the Senate and House, and their wives and other women of their families, also many State officials and their wives and legislative clerks, altogether about 300, at a dinner at the Lansing Country Club.

It was a strictly informal affair; no dress suits or tuxedos. Just the ordinary everyday attire that the senators and representatives wore in their daily occupation for the past four months of passing or killing bills. The Governor made a three-minute talk; in the course of which he complimented the members of both houses for the harmony that provided and the constructive work done during the session.

State Tax Levy Increased

The state tax levy for the coming two years will be somewhere between sixteen and twenty millions annually. The levy last year was fourteen and a half million dollars.

From figures obtained from the senate finance committee, it appears that appropriation bills will total $59,000,000 for the next two years.

From the corporation tax and other revenue sources aside from the annual state tax going into the general fund, the state will receive nine and a half million dollars a year, it is conservatively estimated. This reduces the tax levy to $20,000,000 yearly.

Further reductions are expected when Governor Alex J. Groesbeck applies the veto to a million or so of the appropriations, as it is reported that he will do. This and the possibility of the corporation tax and other fees going close to $12,500,000 mark, will place the state levy somewhere near $16,500,000 a year, it is believed by several of the committee members.

Condemnation Bill Passed

The Atwood condemnation bill, stripped of its most radical features by a half-dozen amendments, was passed on general orders. The bill was buried in the house judiciary committee after several attacks were aimed at its radical departure from usual condemnation practices. But the governor wanted it passed to expedite condemnation proceedings along Woodward avenue, where a wider highway from Pontiac to Detroit is being constructed. The committee was urged by word from the executive office to release the bill.

City Advertising Limited

The Senate passed the Woodruff Bill to permit the common councils of cities to spend not more than $50,000 a year for advertising their city. As introduced, the bill called for a straight four mill tax, which would have meant that the Detroit Council could have authorized the spending of about $9,800,000 a year in advertising. The limit of $50,000 was imposed in committee.

Increase State Normal Funds

Vastly increased appropriations for the maintenance and operation of the four State normal colleges agreed to by the Legislature. The House adopted the report of a conference committee, appointed to settle House and Senate differences on the appropriations, authorizing increases totaling more than $500,000 over the grants made by the 1923 assembly.

Solons' Pay Raise Passes

The senate by unanimous vote passed the Palmer joint resolution calling for the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people raising the legislators' pay from $800 to $1,200 a term. This amendment will be submitted at the November 1926 election as the resolution had previously passed the house.

Senate Passes Flogging Bill

The Wood Whipping Post Bill, providing for the flogging of men convicted of robbery while armed, was passed by the Senate by a vote of 17 to 12, the smallest majority the bill could receive and still pass. It has gone to the House. Prospects for its passage there are not bright.

Anti-Bribe Bill Introduced

Representative Fred Ming, of Cheboygan, introduced a new bill in the house of representatives. It will be the last this session, aside from probably a few strictly factitious, that are expected customarily on the last day of the session. It masqueraded under the title of an anti-bribe bill. In introducing it, Ming simply made a gesture of reprimand toward suspicions that have been whispered that some members had been guilty of unethical conduct. There is not sufficient time left in which to pass it.

NEWS DISPATCHES FROM EVERYWHERE

Lake Boat 'Kelly Island' Goes Down With Nine Of Crew Aboard

Sandusky, O.—Nine members of a crew of 16, including Captain William J. G. Slackford, were drowned when the sandboat "Kelly Island" listed and went to the bottom of Lake Erie, 35 miles north of here. The seven survivors were rescued by a Canadian fishing smack and taken to the Point Pelee life-saving station.

The "Kelly Island" was owned by the Kelly Island Lime and Transportation company of Cleveland. It dug sand from the bottom of Lake Erie between Sandusky and Point Pelee.

The survivors stated that just as the crew finished taking on a load of sand and was pulling in the hose through which the sand is sucked from the bottom, the boat began to take in water on the starboard bow. She pitched and before all the crew could clear she was on her way to the bottom.

The boat was launched in 1911. She was entirely of steel and the largest of eight in the company's fleet. Captain Slackford, who was 60, had been in command of her for six years. He and all of those drowned with him leave large families.

Sailors' Bonus Urged

Washington—Legislation to provide a monthly payment out of the treasury for American sailors on American ships in the foreign trade will be recommended to Congress by Chairman O'Connor of the shipping board, as the main point in a program for building up the merchant marine. Under the plan, a maximum of $20 a month would be paid to sailors, and Mr. O'Connor estimated that the annual cost of the treasury would not exceed $6,000,000.

Bare Plot to Kill Chamberlain

London—Additional guards have been assigned to protect Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain, presumably in connection with the discovery of a plot against his life.

The news of additional police protection for the foreign secretary came from official quarters but there was much reticence about discussing the nature of the supposed plot. It was intimated that some details were discovered outside of London.

Voile and Val Lace in Summer Frocks

At the head of the procession of summer finery for little girls, comes a gay company of voile frocks in light colors. They are as cheerful as a bed of tulips and as practical as bread and butter. Some of them are trimmed with val laces, and others with outline embroidery, tucks, needlework or hemstitching. Pink, blue, yellow, green, and pretty shades of red in different shades, make a choice of color that will please every one. One of the new models for a little girl of seven or more, is shown in the frock pictured. It is of shrimp pink and so simply made that the picture tells the whole story of its design. For those who choose silk, crepe de chine is recommended for this dress.

Your Conversation "MACARONI"

The first macaroni which was made in Italy was of diverse and jumbled shapes. It was brought to England about 1790 by certain young men who affected the foreign ways and habits which they saw in their travels. The name was transferred to these young fops, who were then known as "macaroni."

WHAT IS YOUR HEALTH WORTH?

Regardless of what your vocation may be, whether it be lawyer, preacher, clerk or farmer, you cannot confront the tasks set before you if you do not enjoy good health.

Remember to do justice to yourself and those about you, you have certain duties to perform and it takes that health-giving force that has been given to us, before we can do them.

Is it natural to suppose that the engineer who constructs large buildings, bridges and other mammoth structures, would go to the hospitals for men to do the work for them, would they go to the Old Men's Home for them? It isn't very likely they would, is it? No, they want the strongest men they can get, and if the men they do get are not equal to the tasks they soon employ someone who is.

It is to be remembered that this does not only apply to the mechanic or laborer, but to the man or woman in every day life. If we are compelled to earn a livelihood and are not equal to the task set before us, there is always someone who is, and the sooner we come to realize this the more useful we are going to be to those for whom we work and to those who are depending upon us for their existence and to ourselves. That's it—ourselves.

How many men and women are there in this good old world of ours that are even useless to themselves? How many are there who still lay in bed when they should be getting up? Don't misunderstand me at this point, because this class of men and women are divided into two kinds, namely, the downright lazy man and woman, and the other, those who for some reason unknown to themselves just simply feel all in; just think, possibly they have had eight or ten hours sleep and I can safely say they feel more tired than they did when they went to bed. Now these people are to be pitied, because ninety-nine per cent of them can be helped; if they really knew it, and they are quite a large number who are being helped because they have discovered the way through Chiropractic adjustments.

Now let us get back to the engineer, his buildings and bridges again. He does not want the man who comes to work tired; no sir, he wants the man who comes to work full of vim and vigor, who is equal to the task he puts before him and that man, no matter how far down he was when he started on that structure he is soon going to get to the top, and he is going to stay there. This is made possible because he has the vitality to stick and the fellow who has no pep is going to stay on the first rung of the ladder.

Let us now look at life at another angle. How many of us have started to build bridges and castles of our own and had them go to smash before we had the foundation laid. Yes sir, went all to pieces. Why, I'll tell you why, we just didn't feel right, we didn't have the vital force in back of us. We started out good and strong but soon we found we were not equal to the task.

Who is it that wins the foot races? Who is it that wins the football games? Who is it that becomes the captains of our large industries? It certainly is not the weakling. Then who is it?

The men with that vital force that has been given them to use. They are the ones, and if for any reason that vital force which has been given to you is locked up so that it cannot express itself, then go to some Chiropractor who is trained in the science of unlocking it, and then go on your way.

What is your health worth? And don't forget, he who serves best profits most. Don't envy the fellow who has good health, acquire it yourself. See your Chiropractor.

KNOWING ONE'S SELF
 By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"I'D LIKE nothing better," Rust said to me when we were boys a good many years ago, "than to be able to run a farm of my own; I know I could make money," and he launched into a narrative of detail in an endeavor to prove to me just what, in such a case, he was sure he could accomplish. Even with my boyish inexperience, I felt that Rust's plans were chimerical, and I entertained the gravest doubts as to his being able to carry them out if he were given the chance. He has had a farm to manage, for these years, but he is still a poor man.

It is a valuable asset, and a rare one, I sometimes think, for a man to be able adequately and justly to estimate his own strength and his own weakness, to know what he can do best, and to know also, what his limitations are.

A wise old man whom I once knew used to say in speaking of the somewhat difficult and treacherous game of poker with which he had considerable practice, "If a man does not know the cards, he ought not to play the game." I am sure that many men whom I have observed in the game of life have had a very faulty appreciation of the value of the cards which they were holding in their hands, and sometimes threw away their ace and were disappointed when they did not take the trick with a two-spot.

When I was engaged in the teaching of composition and an eager boy came to me at the beginning of the semester with the statement, "I know I am going to manage your course all right, because composition has always been my easiest subject." I knew almost to a certainty that I had struck a man who could not spell, who had no knowledge of even the elements of grammar, and whose literary possibilities were pretty hopeless.

Powers was a good illustration of the man who did not know himself. He was an unusually dramatic and magnetic speaker; he had an excellent brain, good training, and an attractive physique. He was deeply and sincerely religious and possessed one of the most winning personalities I have ever known. As a preacher he could have had any crowd at his feet. He was obsessed, however, with the idea of being a business man; yet every business which he touched collapsed under his hand. He began life with a modest fortune, but at fifty it was gone; he had sunk it all in first one visionary scheme and then another; but he still kept on, convinced that ultimately he would make his fortune.

There are reasons, I have no doubt, why few of us know ourselves less well than we should. We all hate criticism; we take advice unwillingly. We attempt the things that we want very much to be able to do without considering seriously how well fitted we are for the accomplishment of these things. We listen to the flatterer with a more willing ear than to the candid friend who sometimes not very kindly points out to us the faults we are loath to admit.

NEW ASSISTANT AIR CHIEF ASSUMES POST

BRIG. GEN. JAMES E. FEHET

Washington—Brigadier-General William Mitchell, ousted from his post as assistant chief of the army air service, because of his too strenuous fight for a separate air force, has dropped back to the grade of colonel and was succeeded by Lieut. Col. James E. Fehet.

Col. Fehet automatically becomes brigadier general, immediately upon taking up his new duties, General Fehet stated he, too, believed in a separate air service. But he qualified his statement by saying that he did not believe the time was ripe yet for a complete separation of the service from the army and navy.

Safety Campaigns Planned

Washington—Extension of its safety campaign work and motor vehicle legislation formed the outstanding subjects for consideration at the conference here of secretaries of clubs affiliated with the American Automobile Association. Nearly 200 secretaries were registered for the two-day meeting, which is the first of its kind since the amalgamation of the present association with the National Motorists Association. With the amalgamation, the association membership has increased to 600,000, with 700 clubs and branches.

Cabbage and Tubers Affect Milk Flavor

Fed Immediately After the Milking Not Harmful.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cabbage and potatoes, though not grown generally for dairy feeds, are often fed to dairy cows to supply succulence in the ration and to dispose more economically of these products during periods of low prices. Like other succulent feeds they tend to affect the milk with undesirable flavors and odors when fed under certain conditions of quantity and time.

In order to determine the amounts of these feeds that may be fed, as well as the time of feeding, without affecting the flavor of the milk, the United States Department of Agriculture conducted a number of tests, the results of which have just been published in Department Bulletin 1297.

From these tests it is concluded that dairy cows may be fed as much as 24 pounds of cabbage immediately after milking without imparting any objectionable flavors or odors to the milk. On the average, however, the feeding of 14.8 pounds of cabbage within one hour before milking will cause objectionable flavors in the milk, and an increase in the amount of cabbage fed will intensify the flavors produced. Proper aeration, however, will reduce strong abnormal flavors to some extent, and some of the slightly abnormal flavors may be eliminated.

When dairy cows consume an average of 14.8 pounds of potatoes one hour before milking, slightly abnormal flavors and odors may be produced in the milk. They are slight, however, and would seldom be perceived by the average consumer. Increasing this amount to as high as 28.7 pounds does not increase the abnormal flavors. That amount may be fed immediately after milking with no effect whatever on the flavor of the milk.

A copy of this bulletin may be secured free of charge, while the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Thorough Study of Oil Emulsion as Insecticide

A thorough study of oil emulsions for use as insecticides has been begun by the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture during the past year, and important progress has been made, especially toward increasing the stability of emulsions in hard water and lime-sulphur solutions. The investigation of miscellaneous insecticides has been continued at the laboratories in Washington and at the nearby field station at Silver Spring, Md., and co-operative tests on a commercial scale are made by the Washington laboratories and various field stations on new or improved preparations. What appears to be a new contact insecticide which will in many instances be a suitable substitute for nicotine at a lower cost has been developed by two officers of the bureau co-operative. This insecticide mixes well with oil emulsions and, it is believed, will make an excellent spray for the delayed dormant treatment for the simultaneous control of the San Jose scale and apple aphids.

Inoculate Alfalfa Seed

Be sure to inoculate your alfalfa seed. Alfalfa culture for inoculation can be procured from most of the agricultural colleges at a very small cost and is absolutely necessary for a good stand. Do not attempt to grow alfalfa either on sloping or level ground water frequently lies for considerable time as it will partially, if not wholly, be killed out after the water disappears. It is more a question of cultivation than soil, as the land must be thoroughly worked up, giving it a final weed-killing harrowing right before seeding.

Generally wheat land will make excellent alfalfa soil, unless it happens to be underlaid with hardpan.

Farm Hints

Good cows are kept; poor cows maintained.

Those who wish to start the year wrong will buy cheap seed.

Wet days in spring are well spent in cleaning and oiling the harness.

Though sunlight costs nothing, it is about the most valuable thing you can give your chicks.

If you fail to beautify your premises with flowers and shrubbery, you cheat yourself and your visitors.

In starting a new crop year it is well to remember that the incentive to agriculture is not chiefly profit but the satisfying of the human interest in creative production.

All crops except timothy give better yields when they are grown in rotation than when grown in continuous culture. Experiments at the New York State College of Agriculture show.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

The youths of Pontiac had an opportunity to inspect first-hand the workings of civic and court jobs when for a limited time boy scouts and high school boys were acting manager of the city, secretary of the Board of Commerce, business manager of the schools, chairman of county board of auditors and many other important jobs in the city to which they had been assigned. The idea was carried out at the suggestion of the Rotary Club which sponsored Boys' Week. The boys thoroughly enjoyed the experience.

Transfer of the Flint Baseball club of the Michigan-Ontario Baseball league from Otto H. Powell to a group of business men, represented by Thomas J. Halligan, president of the league. Suitable financial arrangements were made whereby the club will become the property of Flint citizens. A large down payment was made, and the last installment will come with the close of the season. Sixteen players and all equipment at the park and of the team were included in the deal.

High school attendance at Gladstone was reduced about 75 per cent when the girls staged a walkout in protest against a faculty order forbidding them to wear rolled stockings. The boys of the high school were already on strike, because the faculty ordered them to wear neckties or stay away. They paraded without ties through Gladstone, Munising and Escanabe, on foot and in automobiles, their necks adorned with red kerchiefs. They shouted defiance at school officials.

The last government office in Michigan has been closed, it was announced by George C. Jackman, register of the office at Marquette. Three tons of records of the office which was opened late in the 'fifties, have been forwarded to Washington where Michigan residents will transact business in the future. The Marquette land office has been the only one in Michigan since a fire in 1888 destroyed the office in Grayling. Records that were saved from the fire were transferred to Marquette.

Western Michigan is planting an increased acreage of early potatoes this spring, according to reports from counties in the potato producing regions. Reports from Montcalm county are to the effect that more early potatoes are being planted in April than ever before. Although this is due, in part, to the early season, growers are said to be anxious to have more spuds ready for market late in the summer.

Announcement of the proposed car transfer of the enclosed car plant of the Buick Motor company from Detroit to Flint was made by Harry H. Bassett, president and general manager. The consolidation of the Buick factories in this city will mean an increase in the production schedule of about 250 cars daily and the employment of more Flint workers, the announcement indicated.

The Ford Motor Co. air transport line between the Ford plants in Detroit and Chicago, which was established two weeks ago has begun to operate on a schedule of daily round trips. Hitherto the line had operated on a schedule of round trips on alternate days. Daily flights were made possible by the delivery of a second plane, the "Maiden Dearborn II."

Holland Post of the American Legion will extend their tree planting operations, begun last year when they planted 200 trees along the highways leading into Holland. A campaign for funds to carry out a similar program this year is already under way and with the raising of the necessary resources the setting of the trees will start.

One of the most active clean-up campaigns the city has known is predicted for Mt. Clemens this year by the city commissioner following the success of the parade of school children in behalf of the campaign here. Nearly 2,000 students, carrying banners with clean-up slogans, marched through the down town streets.

The plant and building of the St. Clair Republican, a weekly, which has been published for many years, has been practically destroyed by fire. R. D. Harmer, editor and publisher, places his loss at $12,000, partially covered by insurance. Mr. Harmer is undecided as to his plans for the future.

A deposit of 2,500,000 tons of Fullers Earth, valued at $13 a ton, will be taken from the ground on the Harrietta property, near Cadillac, according to an announcement made by J. W. Evans, Cleveland chemist, who has organized the Michigan Fuller's Earth Corporation to exploit the project.

At a special school election at Charlotte, the proposed bond issue $250,000 for a new high school was defeated 890 to 233.

Count Albert found the word he wanted, marked it by digging his thumbnail into the paper, and then handed the book to Tommy. Like most Lystrian words, it was thickly covered with accents, and the letter X was in it several times. The English translation was given as: "Impostor—pretender (historical). One who assumes an identity other than his own. Deceiver."

Count Albert frowned severely to show that he meant everything the dictionary said. The two soldiers held their rifles at the present to show that they meant it all too.

Count Albert took up the second volume of the dictionary and looked up another word. This time the English translation was: "Arrested." To prevent any possibility of mistake, he pointed first to Tommy, then the two soldiers, and then once more to the word. Tommy had no excuse for not understanding what his position was.

Count Albert looked out a third word, and once more handed the book to Tommy. This was a short word, consisting of three letters, one of which was an X, and three accents. It meant: "Place of execution," and, according to Count Istvan's Shakespearean tutor, might also be translated: "Gallows, scaffold or guillotine." Count Albert nodded grimly and pointed to the soldiers. Then he said, "Please."

"But not at this hour," said Tommy firmly. "It's simply never done as late as this. The regular time for shooting a man is dawn and that's passed for today. There won't be another till tomorrow. Besides, you're bound to give me some sort of a trial."

He took the dictionary with the intention of looking out "shoot," "down," "tomorrow" and "trial," believing in that way to make his meaning clear. Unfortunately, there was no English-Lystrian part of the dictionary, so the book was useless to him. Count Albert, with the air of a great nation which delivers an ultimatum to a troublesome little tribe, turned to leave the room. Tommy jumped out of bed and stopped him. He could not speak Lystrian and he could not use the dictionary. But he was not quite at the end of his resources. He tore out a blank sheet from the end of the dictionary and wrote a letter.

"Ad Reverendissimum beatissimum, excellentissimum Patriarchum, Lystriae, Archiepiscopum, cum Janetta Ecclesia (Miss. Church) conversari volo."

Then he remembered that both Count Istvan and Count Albert used the word "Please" with extraordinary frequency in the most unlikely connections. It was evidently a word to which the Lystrians attached great importance. The ancient Romans apparently did not, for he could not remember a Latin equivalent for it. He added "Si vis" to the end of his letter, and then, in order to make it quite plain that he wanted to be polite, wrote, "Bitte. Si vis plait, please." He handed the note to Count Albert.

"Patriarch," he said. "Beatitude. Archbishop, please."

Count Albert scowled, but he took the note. He walked over to the door, opened it, turned, said a farewell "Please," to Tommy, and then went out, leaving the two soldiers on guard.

Tommy got up and dressed. That took him nearly half an hour. Then he smoked a pipe. Then he looked out of the window for a while. The view was entirely uninteresting, for his room looked out on a small courtyard, but it cheered him to observe that there were no signs of the erection of a scaffold. In all the romances he had ever read the scaffolds for the execution of the heroes are put up under the windows of their cells, and they are obliged to listen to the sounds of hammering and sawing even if they have enough strength of mind not to look out.

At ten o'clock the door of his room was opened and a soldier came in bringing some breakfast. The Lystrians, alone among central, southern and eastern Europeans, have a good idea of what breakfast ought to be. Except that there was no marmalade, Tommy could not have done better in a first rate London hotel.

At half past ten, before he had finished eating, Janet Church was shown in. Tommy greeted her with an eager flood of questions.

"What's happened?" he asked. "Why am I shut up? Why did that see, Albert Casimir, wake me up this morning by scowling at me. Why did he shove the great dictionary with the word 'impostor' in it—an enormous dictionary in two volumes? Why did he threaten to hang me or shoot me or guillotine me? I don't know which he meant; but he certainly interfered to execute me in some way. And what's the Lystrian for marmalade? I'd like some just to finish off a really good breakfast."

"Who are you?" said Janet.

"I'm the Reverend Thomas A. Norreys, M. A., said Tommy. "You saw my passport in Berlin, so you ought to know."

"Not Lord Norreys?"

"I've told you, I've told the other Casimir, I've told the king, I would have told the princess if she'd have listened to me—I've told every one I've met that I am not Lord Norreys. It would be just as sensible, in fact more sensible, to insist that I'm Colonel Reard. But no matter what I said, nobody ever believed me, except that pompous ass, Von Steinfeldt. I think he did. If necessary I'll swear I'm not Lord Norreys. I'll swear it on Casimir's dictionary if you like, and that's the most impressive looking book I ever saw."

"What convinced me? I'd like to know; for I never could manage to do it myself."

"Two telegrams arrived this morning early," said Janet. "One from Count Istvan Casimir, sent from Berlin, and one from Lord Edmund Troyte, from London. A motorcycle brought them. They said that you're an impostor, and that the real Lord Norreys is in London. Lord Edmund Troyte is Lord Norreys' uncle, so he's certain to know."

"I expect he'll be Miss Temple's aunt soon. I mean to say, she'll be his niece, if half I've heard about her is true. I never was so plagued about anything in my life as I have been about that woman. How did the princess take the news?"

"The patriarch awakened her about seven o'clock to tell her. She came into my room about two minutes later and I never saw a girl so pleased."

"I call that heartless of her," said Tommy. "Worse than heartless, malicious. I never did her any harm. Why on earth should she be pleased at my being hanged?"

"She's not pleased at that. She doesn't think you will be hanged. Nor do I. What delighted her was the thought that you really had nothing to do with Miss Temple."

"If she would have listened to me," said Tommy, "she'd have known that long ago. However, I'm glad she doesn't want to hang me. Perhaps she'll let me out of prison. Why have they shut me up?"

"I've just told you that," said Janet. "They believed you were Lord Norreys and when it turned out you weren't, they imprisoned you, of course."

"I don't see any 'of course' about it. They can't mean to imprison everyone who turned out not to be Lord Norreys. If they did that the prisons would be horribly overcrowded. Don't you think that you could explain that to the patriarch?"

Janet looked doubtful.

"It's a complex idea," said Tommy. "and probably quite new to him. Still, with your knowledge of German—"

Janet had no doubt at all about her ability to explain anything in German.

"I'm afraid," she said "that the patriarch isn't as good at German as he thinks he is. He can understand simple things all right, but when anything unexpected is said to him he doesn't take it in. After the princess and I were dressed this morning he came in and had a long consultation with her. They were still at it when I left. They began in German, but the princess had to give up and talk Lystrian after half an hour or so."

"Were they talking about anything very abstruse? Metaphysics, for instance?"

"They were talking about you," said Janet. "The princess said that she was extremely glad to hear that you were not Lord Norreys, because nothing on earth would have induced her to marry him. She told the patriarch all about Miss Temple and showed him some letter or other."

"I know all about that letter," said Tommy. "How did the patriarch take it?"

"He said the princess was perfectly right, and that no man who behaved as Lord Norreys did could possibly be allowed to be king of Lystria. I gathered that he thought there'd been enough of that sort of thing when the late king was here. I hadn't heard it before, but from what the patriarch said I understand that King Wladislaws was a thoroughly immoral man."

"All the same," said Tommy, "I don't think the patriarch ought to have talked that way to the princess about her father."

"The princess evidently felt that way herself," said Janet. "She changed the subject abruptly, and—well, she beat about the bush a bit, and it was rather hard to make out exactly what she meant. But I think she was trying to explain to the patriarch that she had no objection to marrying you. Of course, that wasn't a thing she could very well say straight out in plain words, and evidently the patriarch didn't quite grasp what she was at."

"How did it end?" said Tommy. "I'm not asking simply out of curiosity. It's really rather an important matter with me."

"I can't tell you how it ended," said Janet. "That tall count man came in who sat at supper with you last night."

"Albert Casimir."

"That's his name. He came in and told me that I might come here to see you."

"I wish you'd waited a little," said Tommy.

"I waited as long as I could. I was practically ordered out of the room. But I shouldn't have been such a pig if I'd stayed. They were all three talking nothing but Lystrian. As soon as the princess realized that the patriarch was taking in what she said, she spoke German and spoke Lystrian. So did the count. All I can say is that if sounded as if they were arguing."

"It always is if people were arguing with a language one doesn't understand. Generally, they appear to be quarrelling. Which side was Casimir on, the princess or the patriarch's?"

"It seemed to me," said Janet, "that they were all three on different sides."

"Well," said Tommy, "I suppose it's all settled by this time. I wish I knew how."

"From the way they were speaking," said Janet, "I should say the discussion might go on for hours. They all seemed to have a lot to say."

"I wish you'd go back," said Tommy. "and try what you can do in the way of influencing the patriarch."

"I don't see that I've any right to interfere."

"Still, I think you ought to try. It's a frightfully serious thing for me. As far as I can make out, I'm either going to be hanged or married."

"I'm afraid I've no influence with the patriarch."

"Oh, yes, you have," said Tommy. "as a representative of the League of Christian Churches, you must have. Suppose you were to offer the patriarch to make him president of a world conference of religions, to be held at Chicago or some place like that where a conference of the kind might be held. He'd love that. And at the same time you could tell Casimir that I don't in the least mind whether I'm king of Lystria or not. If I'm allowed to marry Calypso I'd every bit as soon go home as stay here."

"That young woman," said Janet. "is totally unsuited to be a curate's wife."

"She is," said Tommy. "I know that. Perhaps it would be better for you to say to Casimir that I'd make quite a good king from his point of view—give him any amount of balls and dinners, keep up the opera, not have any income tax, and all that sort of thing. The late king told me exactly what he wanted and I'm prepared to do it. It will be easy enough to talk over Casimir. The real trouble is the patriarch. Look here, Miss Church, if you manage to persuade him, I'll promise faithfully to use all my influence as king to unite the Lystrian church to any Christian body in the world you choose to name. Even if we have to wait till the present patriarch dies and I have the appointment of a new one, we'll pull the thing off in the end."

That must have been a strong temptation to Janet. I dare say she would have given way to it and gone to the patriarch with a proposal that he should be president of some sort of world conference. Whether he would have accepted the position or not no one will ever know. Before Janet had made any reply to Tommy, Count Albert Casimir entered the room.

He immediately ordered the two soldiers who stood on guard to go away. He spoke to them in a manner that was actually savage. Just as if they had forced their way into Tommy's apartments against orders which he had repeatedly given them.

Then he marched over to the window, where Tommy was standing, and saluted. After that he marched back to the door, flung it open, stood to attention at one side of it and said, "Please."

It was evident that Tommy was at liberty again.

Janet, eagerly questioning Casimir, scarcely pausing to translate his answers to Tommy, got an outline of what had happened.

The princess had carried her point. Casimir, who did not much care who was king of Lystria, so long as there was a king of some sort, backed her up. The patriarch, who was a kind hearted old gentleman and really fond of the princess, had given way in the end.

Best Feed for Pulletts

Pulletts at Cornell University college of agriculture lay best when fed three parts of hard grain to two parts of mash by weight. It is very necessary to feed green food in some form, such as sprouted oats, beets or cabbage. A small amount of milk is a valuable addition to the ration, and helps to keep the birds in good condition. The birds should never be starved, but on the other hand they should be hungry at feeding time.

Geese Thrive on Grass

Geese will thrive on almost any kind of pasture grass that a cow will eat. An orchard in clover sod makes an ideal range. Any meadow composed of red clover and alsike mixed, will make a good pasture for geese. If you have low land pasture it is probably abundantly seeded by nature with the grasses that thrive on such soil and that will be good for geese.

FOR INACTIVE KIDNEYS.

Landon Taylor, Dorchester, Iowa writes: "I can truthfully say the FOLEY PILLS are the best I ever used. I had lots of trouble with my kidneys, but now I feel fine." FOLEY PILLS a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys are the best to use when the kidneys are in need of a good flushing.—Hite's Drug Store, adv.

Poultry and Swine Tubercle Cure Infected Fowls and Animals Were Disp.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the widening knowledge concerning the nature of tuberculosis, live stock owners are rapidly putting methods of eradication into practical use. The close relationship between fowl and swine tuberculosis is illustrated by a recent occurrence in Michigan. The facts were obtained by the Michigan Agricultural college in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture.

A shipment of hogs from a certain farm proved to be badly infected with tuberculosis. An inspector who visited the farm applied the tuberculin test to the remaining hogs and found practically all of them tuberculous. He also found the chicken flock on the farm badly affected. Acting on the inspector's advice, the owner disposed of the entire flock of chickens, restocking with day-old chicks in the spring. Meanwhile he had also disposed of the tuberculous hogs and cleaned and disinfected the premises, especially the poultry buildings and yards.

New Pest of Bees Found in a Maryland County

A new pest of bees, Braula coeca Nitzsch, popularly called the bee-louse, has been found present in considerable numbers in Carroll county, Maryland, and in a few other places in the United States. It is undoubtedly imported from Europe with queen bees, and while it is not, so far, to be regarded as a serious menace, beekeepers will do well to take steps to eradicate it from their colonies when discovered. Braula is not a true parasite, according to the bureau of entomology, but it is capable of weakening a bee colony by taking its food and by tormenting the queen bee. It lives on the honey carried by the bees, not on their blood, as was at one time supposed. It is found singly on the workers, and in numbers on the queen bee, but seldom on drones.

United States Department of Agriculture Circular 834, "The Bee Louse, Braula Coeca, in the United States," by E. F. Phillips, apiculturist, contains a description of the species, its distribution, feeding habits and methods of control. This circular may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Rotation Will Cut Loss Due to Soil Erosion

Prof. M. F. Miller, head of the department of soils, college of agriculture of the University of Missouri, presented interesting figures on losses due to soil erosion in a talk made at the annual meeting of the Kansas Crop Improvement association at the Kansas State Agricultural college. Professor Miller and his associates in the Missouri agricultural experiment station have found that on an average Missouri soil having a slope of about 3 1/2 per cent, the entire surface soil to a depth of 7 inches would be lost in 50 years of continuous cultivation of corn, in about 150 years under continuous wheat culture, and in about 250 years in fields rotated to corn, wheat, and oats. Sod land, that is, land in permanent pasture or native sod, would require 3,400 years for the same loss to take place, according to the Missourians' estimates.

FARM NOTES

Greens in the garden are better than greenbacks in the pocket.

It costs more to do without good farm machinery than to buy it.

"Feed your soil and your soil will feed you," say the soil fertility men.

Weed seeds are costly to the farm in price paid for them and in loss of value to the crop grown.

The good farmer lays his battle plans for the insect and disease war of the approaching summer.

An indoor pump might deprive one of some outdoor exercise, but where is the farmer who would miss that?

The bull in the China shop has nothing on the scrub bull in the good herd when it comes to destroying profits.

He saves 58 cents a ton who hauls his manure direct to the fields, the Ohio agricultural experiment station has found.

Better gardens and home butchering and canning may save more money for the farmer than raising food to sell cheap.

The best way to meet the dairy cow's mineral needs is to apply lime and phosphorus, in the form of ground limestone and acid phosphate, to the soil, and thereby grow more high mineral roughages, such as clover and alfalfa.

Buy Red Crown
The High-Grade Gasoline
and You Buy More Miles per Gallon

Many think of motor performance in terms of "car"—as a matter of fact it is the gasoline in the tank that plays the leading part, for gasoline is the propelling force.

To appreciate this, recall that embarrassing incident of being "out of gas." As gasoline is the leading factor in performance, we are up to the point of quality.

Red Crown is the standard, high-quality gasoline. It has stood the test of time; been proved and approved by millions of motorists.

It will produce more power—more speed—more mileage—per gallon, at a lower cost, than any other gasoline you can buy because the arrangement of the boiling point fractions is scientifically correct.

It vaporizes to the last drop—it delivers a bigger value per dollar spent than any other commodity we know.

Mother's Cook Book

Mary had a little lamb
With fleece as white as snow;
The rest of all the tragedy
Perhaps you may not know.
It followed her to school one day,
According to the book;
Alas! the school where Mary went,
They taught her how to cook.

SEASONABLE FOODS

FOR a luncheon or dinner dish the following will be enjoyed:
Browned Pressed Veal.
Cook three and one-half pounds of veal and one-half pound of lean pork until the meat falls from the bones. Season and reduce the liquor to three-quarters of a pint. Pour this over the meat and mix thoroughly, then pack in a pan. When cold, slice, dip in egg and crumbs and brown in butter.

Banana Fluff.
Cut seven bananas into slices, sprinkle them with lemon juice and shredded coconut; let stand an hour on ice. Put the fruit through a fruit press and add one cupful, lacking a tablespoonful, of powdered sugar. Fold into the mixture the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and turn into a freezer; turn until it begins to turn hard, then add a pint of cream that has been whipped until stiff.

Cream Cheese and Walnut Salad.
Make small balls of cream cheese and put together with a walnut on each side. Arrange on lettuce and serve with French dressing.

Creole Soup.
Take one quart of tomatoes, three pints of water, one-fourth cupful of rice, one large onion, one tablespoonful of curry powder, three slices of carrot, one tablespoonful of beef extract and one tablespoonful of sugar. Cut the vegetables fine and cook with the water and tomatoes for half an hour. Strain; rub as much as possible of the pulp through the sieve. Return to the fire, add the rice, salt, pepper, sugar, beef extract. Cook the butter and flour with the curry powder to a cream, then stir it into the soup; cook for another half hour. The curry may be omitted if not liked.

Curried Bananas.
Put a cupful of desiccated coconut into a dish with a cupful of milk; if the fresh coconut is used add its own milk, if enough. Peel and slice a half-dozen bananas and put them with two tablespoonfuls of butter in which a tablespoonful of curry has been heated; brown lightly. Add a teaspoonful of the essence of anchovies, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and, last of all, the coconut and milk. Simmer for fifteen minutes, then stir in a well-beaten egg. Serve in a well of freshly boiled rice.

Master Chauncey Daves Appleton

MRS. LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON, recently visited Grant's tomb. She gave a passing glance at it, and then said: "What a pity to waste all this fine grass when it would keep a cow."

When Lysander John Appleton gets across his wife gets no sympathy from Daysey Mayme. "You married him," she will remind her mother. "Whatever made you marry a man like that?" Then Mrs. Appleton replies in a low mumble, and Lysander John knows she is apologizing to her children because she didn't marry a prince, or a duke, or at least a banker.

Daysey Mayme Appleton, though a devout member of church, can't resist the desire to be revenged if some one offends her. A girl recently stole her bean, and Daysey Mayme got a sweet revenge. She cut up a loaf of baker's bread into thin slices, put ham between, and tied them with baby blue-ribbon. Then she made some lemonade and invited 12 girls in to spend the afternoon, and left the hated one out. Oh, it was sweet when she passed the ham sandwiches tied with baby blue ribbon, and watered the lemonade a little more, to reflect on what her rival was missing. "She will be sorry," said Daysey Mayme, when she returned to the kitchen with an empty plate, "when she finds out what she has missed."

Seven Michigan Names Added To Telephone Hall of Fame List

The Theodore N. Vail bronze medal has been awarded seven employees of Michigan Bell Telephone company, who last year performed outstanding acts of public service beyond the line of duty required of them. They are: top, left to right—Nathan C. Strong, Hillsdale and Yvonne E. Farman, Marine City. Center, James Walter Ryckman and Frank W. Mikolajeska, Detroit. Bottom, Eulia M. Diem, Marine City; Maxine Turner, Carleton and Elsie T. Pettier, Mt. Clemens.

VAIL MEDALS GIVEN TELEPHONE WORKERS

MICHIGAN BELL HONORS SEVEN EMPLOYEES FOR OUTSTANDING ACTS IN PUBLIC SERVICE

RISKED LIVES TO SAVE OTHERS

Seven employees of the Michigan Bell Telephone company, four women and three men, have been awarded the Theodore N. Vail bronze medal for 1924. It is announced by Franz C. Kuhn, president of the company. Letters of commendation for meritorious acts performed last year have been written eight others.

The awards were made for the performance of outstanding and unusual acts in the public service and in the application of practices and principles a knowledge of which was acquired in the line of duty. The medals are given as follows:

- Eulia M. Diem, operator, Marine City.
- Yvonne E. Farman, operator, Marine City.
- Elsie A. Pettier, night operator, Mt. Clemens.
- Maxine Turner, operator, Carleton.
- Nathan C. Strong, plant man, Hillsdale.
- Frank W. Mikolajeska, cable splicer, Detroit.
- James W. Ryckman, plant man, Detroit.

The citations announced by the Committee of Award, Theodore N. Vail Medal, show that in each case the act meriting presentation of the medal, while performed in the line of duty, was not required by duty but was inspired by unselfish devotion to public service and humanity.

Eulia M. Diem and Yvonne E. Farman were working at their switchboard in the Marine City central office, early the morning of January 5, 1924, when fire started in an adjoining building. They notified the city officials and fire department and, business people whose properties were threatened, and called nearby towns for assistance in fighting the blaze. Not until the central office was in flames, did the two brave young women leave their posts.

ed burglary and the capture of one of the band of criminals. Maxine Turner, whose mother is the operating agent for the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. at Carleton, stayed at her switchboard, during the dark hours of the morning of July 25, and, by her calls to townspeople and to the fire departments of nearby communities for aid in a fire emergency, saved the business section of Carleton from destruction.

Nathan C. Strong, of Hillsdale, in charge of service maintenance saved the life of a janitress, September 10. The woman's clothing had taken fire and Strong succeeded in putting out the flames. He was badly burned.

Frank W. Mikolajeska, of Detroit, saved the life of a drowning companion at White Lake, on August 3, 1924. The victim of the accident had gone down the second time before Mikolajeska could reach him. Artificial respiration, practice of which was learned in the telephone First Aid course, restored consciousness.

James W. Ryckman, hearing cries of distress from the Clinton River, Mt. Clemens, the morning of July 4, rushed to the bank of the river, and seeing a woman's hair floating on the surface of the stream, plunged in and saved the life of the victim.

The eight letters of commendation, inspired by unusual performances in the line of duty but not sufficiently outstanding to call for the medal award, were written to the following:

- Lee O. Gallagher, lineman, Flint, for attempting to save the life of a fellow employee who was electrocuted when he touched a live wire.
- Evelyn Giles, operator, of Fenton, prompt action in a fire emergency.
- Joseph Wagner, formerly a cable splicer's helper, Detroit, for saving a little girl from probable drowning in the Fox Creek canal.
- Andrew Johnson, installation foreman, Detroit who, through the practice of artificial respiration, restored to consciousness a laborer employee of the Detroit City Gas Co., who had been overcome by gas in a trench.
- Gordon L. Mast, lineman, Battle Creek, for an act similar to that performed by Mr. Johnson.
- Mrs. Clara Armstrong, operating agent at Athens, for prompt and intelligent action in connection with an attempted burglary.
- Sadie and Daisy Cairns, operators, Farmington, for prompt and intelligent action when the Farmington State Savings bank was held up.

The Theodore N. Vail medal award was established four years ago by Mrs. Vail to perpetuate among the quarter million employees of the Bell system, the high ideals and principles of service of the System's former head.

Fashion Indorses the Ensemble Suit

Evidently the ensemble suit has come to stay for some time, and perhaps it will maintain a permanent place, along with mannish tulle suits, in the mode. Just now it fits in with the trend of fashion, which has set toward feminine styles and away from severity of line or somberness in color.

Here is an ensemble suit that is practical and adaptable. Made up of twills, kasha or flannel, and in one of the season's popular colors, the long coat will serve for wear with other frocks as well as with the companion piece. Printed silk and material like that in the coat are combined in the dress pictured, the colors in the dress, selected to harmonize with that chosen for the coat. Tan, navy, wood, sand, gray, light green and all the natural shades are recommended for the coat.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully lark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffing, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take occasionally, says a noted authority, what tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush out the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Save Resistant Chestnut Trees

Blight Is Steadily Spreading Over Country, Killing Many.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
The chestnut blight is steadily spreading over the country, exterminating the American chestnut as it moves. The financial loss has been very heavy for owners who failed to cut their dead chestnut before it deteriorated, and the United States Department of Agriculture and state forestry departments have been active in advocating timely utilization.

Resistant Tree.
However, a few chestnut trees have appeared to show a marked degree of resistance to the blight, and it is desirable that the more resistant trees be located and preserved. Some of these may prove to be the starting point for a new growth of chestnut. A tree should have resisted the blight under natural conditions for at least ten years before it can be regarded as worthy of consideration as a resistant tree. Many trees will throw off blight cankers and apparently be doing well for a few years and then quickly succumb to the disease. The office of forest pathology, in the bureau of plant industry of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, is interested in receiving reports of exceptionally resistant American chestnuts, that is, trees which survive after nearly all of the chestnuts in the vicinity have been killed. Unusually resistant trees are recorded and examined at some later date. Nuts and grafted trees from the most promising are planted in an experimental orchard at Bell, Md., for further testing.

Interested in Trees.
This office is also interested in reports of Japanese and European chestnuts which have survived the attacks of the blight. The removal of infected limbs and the cutting out of trunk cankers on these foreign chestnuts, will materially assist them in throwing off the disease. The office of forest pathology is, however, primarily interested in trees which are naturally resistant.

Different Varieties of Common Vetch Compared

Common vetch and its varieties is the subject of a new publication just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture as Department Bulletin 1289. The bulletin discusses and compares the different varieties as to seed and straw yield, rate and time of seeding, method and depth of seeding, viability of seed, winter hardiness and numbers of other factors.

Common vetch is a native agricultural crop of the Mediterranean region but was introduced into the United States as early as the eighteenth century. It is rather exacting as to temperature and soil conditions and the portions of the United States to which it is particularly adapted are limited. As a commercial crop it is confined to the region in Washington, Oregon, and California having mild winter temperatures. Only the most hardy varieties will survive the average winter of the South Atlantic and Gulf Coast states. Not enough experimental work has been done to determine the limitations of the several varieties in the last-named region, but it seems probable that when properly handled the most winter-hardy strains can be grown in limited areas at least.

Ventilation Important in Keeping Apple Crop

Fruit must be considered for storage long before the harvest, according to Prof. D. B. Carrick, New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, in calling attention to the condition of some fruit now being taken from storage. Insects and diseases must be eliminated by correct spraying and care.

The fruit should be mature when picked, but not overripe. Of the two it is better to have the fruit slightly underripe, as it ripens slightly after picking. Fruit must be carefully handled, for, when the skin is broken, the decay organisms may enter. The fruit should not be allowed to stand in the sun after picking, but should be cooled as soon as possible.

Have Tools Ready

The degree of success in home gardening and also the amount of pleasure derived from working in the garden is largely determined by the kind of tools used. The variety of labor-saving hand tools is large and they are inexpensive. Look over the equipment of tools on hand and repair them if necessary. In selecting new tools particular soil conditions should be kept in mind, as all tools will not work under all conditions. If your garden is one-fiftieth of an acre or larger in size you should have a hand wheel hoe.

AWAKES OLD WINTER

OLD WINTER had been pretty cross when he blustered down from his cold North. He came early, too—before the last fall flowers were ready to leave the garden—and though they fussed and fussed and told Old Winter it was not time for them to go, he only blustered the more and said he would not have such gay goings on.

One Little Bird Began to Pipe His Song.

friendly sun warmed him and he began to pipe his song.
"Won't have it," roared Old Winter, blowing his cold breath on the little bird, and as if that was not enough he called his brother Old North Wind, to help him scare the birds and straggling flowers away.

"Now I will see if we can have a little peace and quiet in the land," said cross Old Winter. "How my sister, Summer, can dive in such a noisy world I do not understand—squirrels a-chattering and brooks a-babbling, bees a-humming and birds singing their heads off."

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

SEA-GOING ROOSTERS

THE crowing of a cock at sea, when the bird is especially vociferous, is thought by sailors to be an omen of good luck—a prosperous voyage for a merchantman; victory for a man of war. A crowing cock predicted to Themistocles before the battle of Salamis his great naval victory. On board Admiral Rodney's flagship when he achieved his great victory over De Grasse in 1782 was a cock which crowed lustily each time the admiral fired a broadside which was, to the sailors, an assurance of success; and on one of the ships at the battle of Fort Fisher in the Civil war was a cock whose constant crowing was taken as an omen of the capture of the fort.

In more ancient times the sacrifice of a cock was supposed to insure favorable winds for mariners and today those who search for a dead body in Norwegian streams take along a cock in their boat which is supposed to crow when the shallop arrives over the place where the body is.

Among sailors of the northern races the cock's reputation as a harbinger of victory when he crows amid the din of battle is evidently a reminiscence coming down from the days of the Vikings. For in the old Norse myth of Ragnarok, that last great battle, the Norseman's Armageddon, the cock is represented as crowing lustily amid the conflict, heralding the regeneration of the world and the reign of the sons of Odin. So, also, we may see why he crows in a boat when it reaches the place where a sought-for drowned body lies, for his crowing at Ragnarok awakened the dead god, Baldur.

The belief of Themistocles that the crowing of a cock promised him victory at Salamis, and the modern superstition among sailors that the crowing of a cock on board ship portends good luck, as well as the modern land superstition that the crowing of a cock when it is raining means that soon the sun will be shining, comes from quite another source than the belief in the bird's shrill clarion as a harbinger of victory amid the din of the sea fight. These latter superstitions are derived from the fact that the cock was the sacred bird of Apollo, the sun-god, the mighty protector from evil and master of prophecy. They are relics of sun-worship.

"No, sire! Quiet for me and stillness, such as my big white blanket brings, is the sort of life I like, and now we will have it around here for a while anyway."

Then Old Winter threw his big white blanket over all the land and crawled under it and went to sleep. So still and quiet did he make things that he forgot all about his home in the cold North or that he must get up and let Spring reign in his place.

But when it was time for Spring to make her appearance she tripped along the edge of the meadows and fields and found Old Winter still asleep.
"He must wake up and go home," she said, and then she gently shook him. "Get up! It is time for me to begin my work."

"Go away and let me alone," said Old Winter, peeping out to see who was disturbing his comfort. "O, it is you, is it? Now, if you do not run back home I'll throw my big white coat over you and freeze you."

But Spring was not afraid of him. She always had just so much fussing to put up with from Old Winter, so after shaking and coaxing awhile and still Old Winter remained stubborn she ran off to get Mr. Sunman's help, and the next morning all the birds were chattering and the crocuses were peeping out even through the snow.

The squirrels began to chatter and brooks began to babble and gurgles as they saw Old Winter feebly trying to cover Spring with his white coat.

At last she jumped away and began to laugh and all the springtime visitors joined her, until Old Winter caught up his ragged white coat and with his hands over his ears ran off to his home vowing he would get even with them for making such a racket and disturbing his sleep.

But Spring knew that if she had stayed away even another month Old Winter would not have been willing to leave even then, for he was a grouchy old fellow and loved to have his own way, and once he settles in a place it is hard work to get him to move.

MONTAGU D'ARCY

"THREE of my volumes of Irving missing," lamented Ella, "and each one is a first edition."
"Of course they're first editions," answered Bridget. "Montagu D'Arcy never borrows any but first editions."

Ella groaned. Then he got out his hat and stick and walked round to the D'Arcy house. In the library he waited for the notorious Montagu. The corners of the room were piled with books, and along the tops of the rows on the shelves they were huddled in horizontally. Ella did not see how anything as individual as his three Irvings could ever come forth from that confusion. So, when D'Arcy appeared all smiles and cordiality and promised that the borrowed volumes should be sent back, Ella had his misgivings.

He was not surprised when two weeks passed and nothing happened. Again he called at the D'Arcy house. Alone in the library, he made a hasty and hopeless search down the shelves. Then, with a sense of welcoming back one given up for dead, he came upon his Irvings. When word came that D'Arcy was not at home, it was all that Ella, the super-courteous, could do to leave his beloved Irvings behind.

After that Ella made periodic visits to keep track of the prisoners. D'Arcy always managed to make it impossible to rescue them without discourtesy. Then, one day as Ella was leading up to the point of the books, D'Arcy interrupted casually: "Oh, by the way—I know you won't mind—I lent your copies of Irving I borrowed the other day to Jones. No one appreciates good books like Jones, you know, and these Irvings of yours are good."

"That's true," sighed Ella, now definitely giving up his first editions as "missing."
At the club that night he found a rueful group of friends discussing recent casualties in their libraries. All had suffered losses. In the course of conversation some one mentioned Montagu D'Arcy as a connoisseur.
"Yes," put in a bitter voice, "of other men's books."
Then the plan was hatched. It was noted that Montagu, who had a fixed aversion of returning, was nevertheless as ready a lender as he was a borrower. A careful list, therefore, was made of the chief missing treasures of each man present. Gradually they agreed, Ella should borrow back Smith's books, and Smith Ella's; Brown would rescue Doctor Williams' pet Poe's poems and Doctor Williams Brown's volume of modern plays. Then there would be a grand exchange of rightful owners.

A month later it was a disconsolate D'Arcy that came one day to see Ella. He didn't know what had happened—people wouldn't even talk books with him any more. Now, that Bryant of Ella's up there—might he borrow—
But Bryant was otherwise engaged. "Verily," thought Ella, "the habit of borrowing hath its own reward!"

Aid Greenhouse Men in War on Insects

Much Progress Has Been Made During Last Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Of especial interest to greenhouse men are the studies of greenhouse insects and problems of greenhouse fumigation conducted by the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. Distinct progress has been made in this field during the past year. Among some of the insects on which work has been done may be mentioned the larger bulb fly, the cyclamen mite, the Cattleya fly, and the tip moth of pine seedlings.

Life history studies of the larger bulb fly have been started, and experiments conducted in the disinfection of bulbs from the insect. The larvae appear to be very resistant to vacuum fumigation with carbon disulphide at the rate of 4 and 10 pounds per 1,000 cubic feet of space. Control experiments intended to test the efficacy of nicotine, sulphur, oil emulsions, soap sprays, pyrethrum, hydrocyanic acid gas, carbon disulphide, etc., against the cyclamen mite have been begun. Fumigation against the Cattleya fly with hydrocyanic acid gas has not thus far proved of value in any of its stages, and other control methods are being studied.

Investigation in the general field of fumigation have included the testing of various dosages and exposures on a variety of plants, such as orchids and various bulbs. The killing power of calcium cyanide for certain greenhouse aphids compares favorably with equivalent dosages of sodium cyanide. Under greenhouse conditions it was found that overnight fumigation at the rate of 1/4 ounce of calcium cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of space gave 100 per cent kill for three species of aphids. A higher proportion, combined with high humidity, caused severe burning of many varieties of plants.

Pennsylvania Improves Cattle Feeding Methods

Cattle feeding methods in the Lancaster district have been changed completely in the past ten years because of the results obtained in steer feeding at the Pennsylvania State college, states Dr. John M. Thomas, president of the college, in a report on "The Service of the Pennsylvania State College to the Commonwealth."
"The old method has been changed to the modern method as developed at the experiment station," says President Thomas. "According to the best available information, only 10 per cent of the cattle feeders in the Lancaster district had silos on their farms in 1914. Approximately 80 per cent of all the cattle feeders in that district are now using silos in their steer feeding work. This change in the method of feeding has resulted in more economical production and has meant many thousands of dollars to the cattle feeders of Pennsylvania."

"The experimental work in maintaining a beef-feeding herd has been a stimulus for the establishment of more such herds in Pennsylvania, the number of which is constantly increasing."
It appears from observing these tests that, if the original silage was put up in good condition, that is, not too mature or dry, it may be transferred without additional water to another silo when occasion demands.

Value of Silage Varies With the Price of Corn

Silage made from corn that will yield 50 bushels per acre is worth from $6 to $6.50 per ton, depending when the corn was put into the silo. Corn that is put into the silo when it is denting and all the leaves are green will weigh more than it will when it is more nearly ripe and some of the husks and leaves have begun to dry.

The value of a ton of silage always varies with the price of corn per bushel and also upon the quality of the corn. When corn is put into the silo before it is in the glazing stage, it is not worth as much as it would have been if it were more mature.

Improving Live Stock Breeding

Reports and Comments From Stockmen in Various Parts of Country.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An unusual amount of sound counsel on questions of live stock breeding is contained in recent reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from stockmen throughout the country. The reports and comments were invited by a questionnaire on methods of improving farm live stock. The following terse statements seem suitable for consideration by farmers seeking to improve their herds and flocks:

Some Statements.
"The choice of a herd sire will likely make or break you in the dairy game. If you pick a good one, the price you pay is of little consequence; if you pick a poor one, you will pay too much even if you get him for nothing."

"Pure breeds are better sellers and make more meat for the amount of feed and length of time."
"When young, untested stock is sold, the breeder should keep in touch with the purchaser, so that if the stock does not turn out as it should through no fault of the purchaser, the breeder can make the deal right. It pays directly and indirectly, aside from the fact that it is the fair way to do."

"Pregnant individuals first and pedigree second."
"None but high-producing cows are profitable and the use of pure bred sires is the shortest road."

High Utility Value.
The detailed report to which the foregoing comments were incidental shows briefly that pure bred live stock has high utility value from a production and market standpoint, and that it costs but little more to produce high-class animals than the ordinary kind. The investment and other factors which appear sometimes to increase production costs are offset by early maturity and other important savings due to improved breeding.

Good Silage Keeps Well When It Is Transferred

That good silage can be successfully transferred to another silo if necessary was proved at the Ohio experiment station as an outcome of a fire which burned a large live-stock barn and two wooden silos in connection with it, leaving the silage unprotected. The silage thus exposed was transferred to empty and partially filled silos, being blown into them through a silage cutter. Three men in the silo did a thorough job of tramping.

In filling one of the silos water was added at the rate of one pound to every thirteen pounds of silage; no water was added to the silage in the other. The silage from both silos, which has since been fed, was of excellent quality.
