Petoskey Wins Track Meet

At East Jordan Last Saturday. Locals Get Fourth Place.

A very successful Track Meeting between Boyne City, Harbor Springs, Petoskey, and East Jordan took place on the local High School Athletic Field Saturday last. In the preliminary events in the morning it was impossible to tell who would win as every school was in running. It was generally conceded that Petoskey would win the Meet through her ability to place a couple of good men in every event, a thing impossible for the smaller schools. Notwithstanding Petoskey won the Meet, Boyne City's men were the real feature and the surprise of the whole affair. Speltz and White of Boyne City easily were the all around stars, Speltz making 16 points and White 14 points. The events in which they won the above mentioned points is found in the summary. The local boys seemed over trained, and to make matters worse all the breaks of the game went against Coach Well's men. It is better to have the boys fall down in the preliminary Meet than to do it in the northern District Meet at Cadillac. However, the locals work was a little disappointing except in the relays where East Jordan seemed to be in a class by herself and won two cups to be presented for these events.

Besides the cups given for the relays, there will be a gold medal and silver medal given to Speltz and White of Boyne City as the all around star athletes, a cup for Petoskey the Tri-County Champions.

The Freshmen ran away with their relay against Petoskey and Boyne City with Paul Sommerville featuring in one of the prettiest runs of the day, making up lost ground and out distancing his competitors seven yards. The High School relay was won easily by the locals. Walker was distinctly not himself and should make a much better showing in the District Meeting, as will Thaxter Shaw, who did not do nearly as well as he had been doing in practice, possibly due to a terrific fall he took in the very first event in which he took part, 220 low hurdles. At one time it was thought he would not be able to continue in the Meet. Some of the other boys who did very well considering their experience were Alred Smith in the relay and broad jump, Best in the mile, and Wright in the dashes and relay.

It was a good experience for Coach Well's green Track men and they should make a big improvement in the next couple of weeks. The Track Meet itself was run off in fine style considering the difficulty of securing so many men who were disinterested in the schools taking part. Nobody but a grouch could kick on the treatment received at the hands of East Jordan.

The standing of the meet is as follows: Petoskey 56, Boyne City 39, Harbor Springs 29, East Jordan 25.

Dairy Meeting at East Jordan

Next Friday. Prof. Reed of M. A. C. Is the Speaker.

Put down the 22nd of May in your day book and reserve that date for at that time you will be given the opportunity of hearing Prof. Reed, at East Jordan, who is head of our Dairy Dept. But that is not all, the East Jordan business men are going to give a lunch after the meeting for all in attendance. Also there will be music, probably by the noted High School Orchestra from East Jordan and various other features which will not be made public at this time. Prof. Reed has spent considerable time in Europe studying the Dairy situation there, and at the present has been chosen as one of five judges for Yorkshire cattle in the United States. He will have a message that will interest the business men as well as the farmer.

Don't forget the 22nd of May—High School Auditorium at 8:00 o'clock slow time.

Livestock Feeders At M. A. C. May 23

Livestock Feeders' Day, an annual event at M. A. C., will be held on May 23 this year, according to announcement just made by the animal husbandry department at the college. A general invitation has been issued for everyone interested in livestock feeding to gather at East Lansing for the meeting.

Results of extensive feeding experiments conducted during the past year by the college livestock specialists will be announced at the Federals' Day. Different lots have been on feed and under careful observation in a number of classes, including calves, swine, and horses.

The program calls for inspection of the experimental pens in the morning, with discussion of the rations fed; and a general meeting in the afternoon, presided over by R. S. Shaw, dean of the college agricultural division.

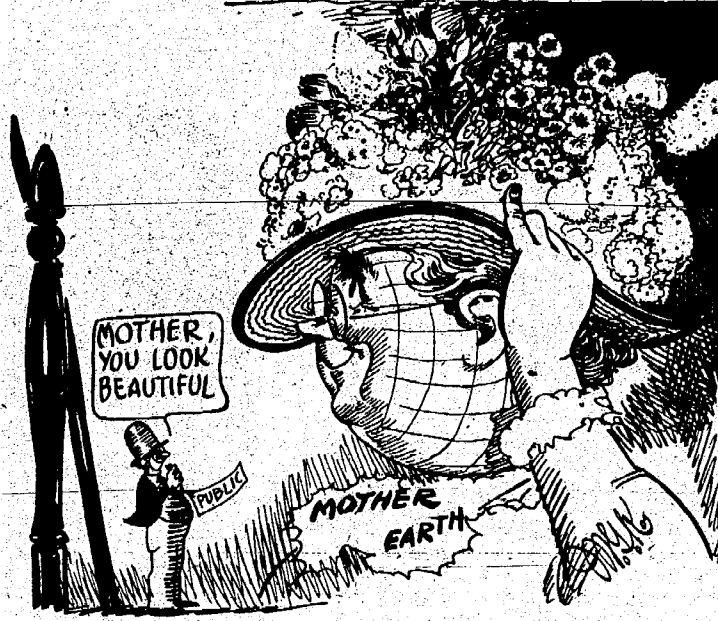

Kalamazoo—To prevent possible escape of the five Milburg bank robber suspects from the county jail when brought here for trial on a charge of venue from Berrien county a screen of heavy steel wire of close mesh is being constructed about the cage and cell block where the quintet will be confined. It is said that members of the gang have boasted they would never be held.

Lansing—Efforts to reopen the hearing on the Dodge Bros. stocks turned down by the Michigan Securities Commission, were expected to be made by Hal H. Smith, Detroit attorney, representing Dillon, Read & Co., of New York. The commission's action prohibits the sale of Dodge Brothers debentures in Michigan. This issue totals $75,000,000. It bars the sale of preference stock issue of $85,000,000.

Alpena—Fire originating in the chemical laboratory of the Alpena high school caused a loss of about $6,000. A lighted torch in the laboratory set fire to the wall and the fire ran between the walls to the attic when smoke broke out in a recitation room. The building was emptied within six seconds and no accidents occurred. Students in the new fire-proof annex were not aware of the fire until alarmed by a guard.

Lansing—Representatives of the State Public Utilities Commission will go to Washington for a joint conference with the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Michigan zone freight case. According to information received the conference may result in a final order. The zone rate case has been pending since 1923. It involves an estimated saving of between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 a year to Michigan shippers.

Fruit Demonstrations in Charlevoix County

H. A. Cardinell of M. A. C. Will Conduct Two Schools.

Sometime ago announcements were made through the columns of this paper that a spraying demonstration would be given in Charlevoix County. The weather conditions are such that the proper stage for the spraying can be ascertained and dates set. The first demonstration will be on the Douglas Tibbits farm, located 1 1/2 miles west and south of Advance, and the second one will be on Dr. Armstrong's farm, located about five miles south of Charlevoix on the Barnard road. The Tibbits demonstration will be held on the 19th of May, and Armstrong's on the 20th. They will start at 10:00 o'clock slow time and extend on in the afternoon, so plan on bringing your lunch with you and spend a very profitable day. Mr. Cardinell has devoted many years to this work and has had much experience in this work. He will personally mix the spray materials and apply to the trees, so you can rest assured it will cover the subject in all details. Put on your overalls and plan on attending.

Library Fund

The members of the Improvement Club were patronesses, with W. J. Olson's help, last Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights, and Friday afternoon, for "Abraham Lincoln" at the Temple Theatre. It was a film well worth the price and time to see. The Club was pleased to have a picture of this kind for the youth of the community, since portrayed a critical period in our national history, as well as the life of one of our greatest Americans.

The Club proceeds will be used entirely for the purchase of needed books for our Public Library; some will be fiction, but in general they will be books to be used for reference work. A list of such will be published in this paper after they are purchased. This is third effort put forth by the Improvement Club this year asking the co-operation of friends for the raising of funds for Library books.

The Club takes this opportunity to thank Mr. Olson for his generous courtesy of last week.

Expert Horsemen Wanted at The "Chicago Roundup"

Does Charlevoix county boast a good broncho rider, steer wrestler or calf ropo? Or a fellow adept at trick and fancy riding? We may now be covering a policeman's beat, employed as delivery man for a moving concern, clerking in a store or holding down an office job, but if he still has the spirit of the plains and ranges in him and thinks he's no back number, he's wanted. The Chicago Association of Commerce is putting on a "Roundup" August 15 to 23 and has asked the help of this newspaper in finding persons formerly having a part of the life of the great West.

Thirty thousand dollars in cash purses, in addition to world's championship titles, belts and trophies will go to the victors of the "Chicago Roundup" which is to be held in the Grant Park Stadium under the direction of Tex Austin, famous rodeo man, and it is thought that there may be some one in Charlevoix county who is still good enough to try and run away with a part of this money.

The "Roundup" marks Chicago's debut as the rodeo capital of America. Cheyenne and Penitton have been the two great rodeo centers of the country; hereafter there will be three, with plains laid to make Chicago the greatest cowboy town and business center, is out to outdo itself in the scale of its "Roundup," and the cream of rodeo talent will be there. All the traditional events of the Western epic will be staged, with entries from all over the country, Canada, Mexico, Argentine and Australia.

There will be none of the "circus" atmosphere at this rodeo, it is announced. No paid performers. It is a free-for-all and open to the world, and those who think that they still have some of the blood of the West in them will never have a better chance to prove it. Arrangements are going forth for the entertainment of "Roundup" visitors from this and other localities on a scale unheard of in the annals of American business. The town will be in festive humor and all comers from the least known to the most prominent are awaited by a tremendous welcome.

Any person or persons here who think they might be interested in entering the "Roundup" lists may secure a complete prize list and rules by writing the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Lansing—Approval of the state administrative board is asked by the board of managers, Michigan State Fair, of a contract with Edward P. Strong of Cleveland for operation of an amusement park at the fair grounds for the next 20 years. The contract calls for "Coney Island" entertainment stunts costing around a half million dollars. Among the larger items are a $150,000 swimming pool, $90,000 roller coaster and a $50,000 dancing pavilion.

Ispheming—The first fatality since Henry Ford began operating the Imperial Iron ore mine at Michiganame, Mich., occurred when Charles Flinnie, 30, miner of Humboldt, Mich., fell out of a bucket as it was being lowered into the mine. He fell 300 feet, dying instantly. Two others in the bucket clung on and were uninjured as it stuck momentarily in the shaft, dislodging Flinnie. Ford has had the mine five years, shipping around 300,000 tons of ore to his River Rouge furnaces annually.

Battle Creek—Thirty-four deputy wardens have been sworn in already by the local chapter of the Izaak Walton league. These will act without pay, will have the same authority as any game warden in any part of Michigan. This is the first quota of wardens appointed and it is expected that about 100 will be sworn in for this chapter. The movement, which is statewide, originated in Battle Creek when a committee appointed by the president, W. R. Skellenger, conferred with John Baird, head of the conservation department of the state.

Detroit—Elmer Cox, 36 years old, a detective from the McClellan station, was shot and killed by a man, or men, who were hiding in a small wooded lot at the Bishop road and Warren avenue, a lonely spot near the city limits, where they are believed to have been waiting to rob motorists in the habit of halting near the woods late at night. Cox was out to find the men responsible for many robberies in the vicinity in the last few weeks. His superior officers believe he died in an effort to arrest him.

Memory Contest Awards Made

Fine Program Accompanied Last Friday Event.

Last Friday afternoon, the Study Club of East Jordan completed its music memory contest, by taking charge of the High School Assembly and delivering an excellent entertainment and then presenting the prizes to the winners of the contest.

For some time the Study Club thru the direction of Miss Sanford, has been carrying on the music memory contest. The fifth, sixth and seventh grades competed for prizes. Hildegard Ellison, Mabel Hudkins, and Bea Boswell were the respective winners. The 6th grade was also given a prize for being the best as a class. The prizes were pictures of notable musicians and should serve as inspirations to the fortunate winners. The prizes were presented by Mrs. Duncanson.

Previous to the presentation of the prizes, the songsters of the Club gave several numbers and they surprised the entire audience. Never before had the students realized what excellent talent is possessed in this city. A great community choir could be developed. The comedy numbers by Miss Ruth Miller, Mrs. Secord, Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Sloan were especially well received by the student body.

In speaking of talent, a few have long known that we possessed a local poet, but Friday Mrs. Kitsman made her first public appearance in this role and recited some of her own poems. Mrs. Kitsman doesn't claim to be a Milton, she's not blind, but she certainly does make you understand what she wants to say. Mrs. Kitsman was ably presented by Mrs. Sloan.

The Study Club is to be commended on its work and accomplishments. The student body takes this opportunity to thank them for their entertainment and the school wishes to express its appreciation for the interest and effort shown in its advancement.

Former Resident Dies At Charlevoix

Keep Our Faith Green

New England has been engaged in celebrating the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the battles of Concord and Lexington. While probably in that section of the country, where the most stirring scenes of the Revolution were laid, there was proper significance of the celebration, but we wonder if that was even part true with the balance of the nation? In these days of national contentment and security we are prone to forget the heroes of that period, who dared all and sacrificed all that a nation of liberty might be conceived. Even while that celebrating was going on attacks were being made by the communistic press of this country against the government. Meetings were held all over this country of men who denounced the founders of this United States of America, men who are seeking to tear down this structure of liberty and turn it over to anarchy and ruin. We have just witnessed a revival of interest in the constitution by the school children of Michigan, which will eventually bear a tremendous harvest for love of country and principles to which it stands pledged. Communism has been creeping into this country at an alarming rate, as the vote in the last election revealed, so it behooves every real American to arise to this new danger and drive the "reds" back across the seas, where they belong. Let us foster the old spirit of patriotism so that the spirit of Paul Revere may forever ride from out of Cambridge town.

Terse Sayings On Co-operation

Co-operative marketing should be taught, not merely preached.—Walton Peet.
Co-ops do not want a crutch, but a torch. They do not ask alms, but a light.—Aaron Sapir.
When it was discovered that two people could get together—roll a heavier stone than could be done by one alone—that was the beginning of co-operation.—Calvin Coolidge.
No matter what discouragements come to co-operative marketing, no matter what of the enterprises fail—the cause itself will triumph in the end because it is everlastingly right.—Frank O. Lowden.
The longer I live the more certain I become that the best that governments can do for farmers is of insignificant importance compared with what, by carefully thought out and loyal co-operation, they can do for themselves.—Sir Horace Plunkett.

Progress Apparent

There are those who would convince the people of this country that the blue laws are here again. They are keen for rights but rather dull in perceiving obligations. Let us turn back the pages of history to the early days of one of the original colonies and we will see a few facts that will show exactly how much progress has been made.
In 1656 a Massachusetts court docket, cited in W. N. Gemmill's "Salem Witchcraft Trials," lists the following cases:
James Standish fined for being vehemently suspected of being drunk.
Henry Walton fined for saying he had as leave to hear a dog bark as to hear the Rev. Cobbell preach.
Mrs. Griffith fined for swearing.
Romert Edwards fined for excess in apparel; in wearing sleeve lace and gold buttons.
Sarah Farrige fined for wearing a silk hood.
Robert Pike fined for living here and his wife in England. Ordered to go to her.

Taking Chances

One always takes chances in patronizing peddlers but the degree of chance may vary. It is possible to buy dress goods from a peddler without loss except to the pocketbook and one's pride; a shoe purchase from a peddler may carry with it only a loss of time and money, but the man or woman who buys drugs from a peddler is taking a real chance. The drug peddler cannot be checked up by the State or Federal authorities. He is here today and gone tomorrow. His transactions are at your back door and by the time any spurious goods are discovered he is far far away. A druggist is a skilled and trained man. He knows the compositions of medicines and his advice is always valuable. Yet drug peddlers are thriving in this country, due to the American tendency to purchase from peddlers. It sometimes pays to take a chance, but never when one's health is at stake.
Says the Louisville Times: "Credit the newspapers with this, not one of 'em ever defended an unclean news article by saying, 'It is art'."

The Reason Was Plain

A story has just been made public relating to a branch railroad line in the northern part of the State, where passenger service had been abandoned following the consent of the interstate commerce commission. A number of towns and villages along the line were left out in the cold by this action, so a booster party was formed to go down to Detroit and plead for a restoration of service. After they had stated the object of their visit to the president of the company, that official asked them point blank what means of transportation they had employed to reach the city. All of the party but one confessed they had made the trip by automobile. "It is the plan you men took in getting here that forced the company to take off the train about which you complain," was the comforting assurance that the members of the party took home with them. Railroads have been the hardest hit of any industry by the automobile and unless we tote fair with them many of the main lines will have even more impaired service than is now the case. For several years the railroads of Michigan have followed the policy of laying their cards squarely on the table and the person who is not disposed to give them the best kind of a deal is hurting the community in which he lives.

Schools to Close Soon

Schools in our county, and throughout the United States, will soon hold their commencement exercises. The pupils will complete a stage of their preparation for life, a period in which they are supposed to be taught to take their stations in society.
Undoubtedly, there are good schools hereabouts. Just as certainly there are some inferior schools. The problem is to give the children of all citizens a square deal, to prepare all of them for an equal chance. Upon this rests the ultimate success of American institutions.
The young boys and girls are today living in a period of great danger to their spiritual development. Few careful students think otherwise. At no time in the history of this section have the young people needed to a greater extent, the helping hand of experience. We hope every one who reads this article will undertake a lively interest in some particular boy or girl, and earn a friendship with youth. It is a good thing for all concerned.

See Beets As Safe Crop For Michigan

That sugar beets look like a pretty safe crop for many Michigan farmers to tie to, after consideration of production and market factors which are already known, is the opinion of Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the Michigan State college.
"In spite of the fact that this has been an unusual year for the preparation of seed beds for sugar beets," says Prof. Cox, "it is apparent that the acreage will not quite equal that of last year, unless more farmers in the next week or so conclude that beets are a safe crop."
"Apparently some have been deterred from planting due to announcements of large reserves of sugar abroad and comparatively low prices prevailing at the present time. It should be kept in mind that the per capita consumption of sugar has increased in the past five years in the United States from 85 to 125 pounds per person, and also that the sugar beet acreage of the great western sugar producing states is much less this year, due to serious invasions of nematodes and beet diseases in western states last year. The European acreage is also reported to be lower. Present reserves will rapidly melt away."
"Contracts are being offered Michigan farmers for sugar beets this year similar to those of the past year, with a minimum of $7.00 a ton assured growers, and increase above that based on sugar prices. Great elements of risk that occur to other field crops do not exist in the case of beets. Labor conditions have improved, and there will be plenty of labor available to sugar companies to fulfill their part of the contract in growing the beet crop, as well as more labor for farmers. Should we have another cold wet summer, and fall, the beet crop would thrive under such conditions, while corn and beans would be injured."
"Beans, beets, and potatoes have been a great three-horse team for Michigan farmers. Best results will be secured if they are kept pulling evenly in the harness; in other words—it is not advisable to plant too large an acreage of beans and potatoes at the expense of the best crop where these crops compete. Just at present the sugar beet crop is lagging a little."
"Considering the facts that a guarantee is offered, and that Michigan soil and climate are ideal for this tariff-protected crop, are not beets, under the present conditions, a most dependable crop to tie to."

Many Resorters Are Coming

To Northern Michigan the Coming Summer Months.

Extraordinary possibilities for the 1925 summer Tourist season, if the Michigan Tourist & Resort Association is able to continue its activities in full blast, are forecast in the report of Secretary-Manager Hugh J. Gray following the start of his campaign.
The increase is approximately 30 per cent over 1924 and nearly 55 per cent over the same period in 1923. This report, made to directors of the association, states that the first two weeks of the organization's publicity work have produced the largest number of inquiries from prospective West Michigan tourists ever received in the history of the Association. The officers of the organization has received a flood of thousands of tourist inquiries and extra help has been employed to promptly handle them.
The sharp bulge in possible West Michigan business is in line with the prediction of the American Automobile Association that $2,500,000 will be expended by automobile tourists in the United States this year. It has been stated that Florida will receive half-a-million dollars of this sum, California a like amount and Colorado and Wisconsin large amounts. The launching of the West Michigan campaign for a share of this business has been vigorous and the effort resultful. But Secretary Gray sounds a warning note to this section of Michigan that the activities must be continued in full blast to get all to which the beauty and wonders of West Michigan entitle it.
Legging support of the association in one or two sections must be stiffened up if the campaign is carried through to a conclusion and if that is done West Michigan will get its full share of the summer business of the nation.
Michigan Tourist & Resort Association authorities want to see West Michigan get from six to ten per cent of the total tourist traffic of the nation this summer and that means a sum of $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 will circulate and re-circulate throughout this section in 1925.
"Our aim is high," said President Carroll Sweet. "But we will get the totals up there if we have moral and financial support of the sections that are tardy. This is a job for everyone of us, every citizen of West Michigan. Whether you work in a West Michigan factory or run a big hotel the benefit of this drive to get business here accrue to you in one way or another. The value of your home is increased by this campaign, the value of your job and its remuneration—there is no person or property in West Michigan that is not benefited by staunch personal support to carry this 1925 program through to a conclusion in full blast. I sound the cry to every citizen to put his shoulder to the wheel."

Law Enforcement!

Our idea of a novelty in law enforcement comes from the state of New York where several automobiles loaded with men, armed with axes, swooped down upon roadhouses and soft drink stands, destroying them. The press dispatch also tells of the burning of a number of road houses and wayside soft drink stands that had been raised by prohibition agents.
Right thinking citizens cannot too strongly condemn such action. We believe in the enforcement of the law, but only by constituted authority, with such aid as a citizen may legally render. The destruction of illegal resorts through illegal means is a violation of the law as destructive to good government as other want on crime.

F. O. B. FACTORY

If the body of this new Studebaker Brougham were built by an outside concern—as is the practice with most other automobile manufacturers—its price could never be $1465. But Studebaker builds all of its own bodies in the most modern body plants in the world. Thus Studebaker saves the profits which other car builders must pay to body makers. This means highest quality at lower prices.
The new Studebaker Standard Six Brougham combines smart appearance with brilliant performance and sterling dependability—at a price no other manufacturer can even approach.
Come in and see this new car—then you'll understand why it is that Studebaker values cannot be equalled.

What My Neighbor Says

Is of Interest to East Jordan Folks.

When one has had the misfortune to suffer from backache, headaches, dizziness, urinary disorders and other kidneys ills—and has found relief from all this sickness and suffering, that person's advice is of untold value to friends and neighbors. The following case is only one of many thousands, but it is that of an East Jordan resident. Who could ask for a better example?

Mrs. Maurice German says: "My back was so weak and lame I found it hard to go on with my work. I often felt depressed and irritable, too. Dizzy spells came over me, and black spots floated before my eyes. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Three boxes of Doan's Pills rid me of the trouble." (Statement given April 23, 1920.)

On Oct. 11, 1924, Mrs. Gorman said: "I never had any sign of kidney trouble since Doan's Pills cured me."

SCHOOL DAYS

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BLOCKING THE WAY

THOSE apostles of laxity who can never find time to do anything as it ought to be done go crookedly through life complaining in their semi-serious moments that they are lagging leagues behind their rivals and never getting anywhere.

They admit this without any apparent sense of shame or compunction of conscience. Sometimes to their intimates of like ilk, they boast of their shortcomings in a spirit of bravado.

A lassness that distinguishes them from what they disdainfully term the "common class," to whom they will scarcely nod a courteous good morning, seems in their minds to put them upon a worshipful pedestal.

Daily they go about their task in a slipshod manner, shunning responsibility as a hen avoids a pool of water. Everything they do is half done.

Careless in observing how the proficient save time and energy, and thus make of work a pleasure instead of a drag, these listless persons are always in trouble, scowling and finding fault, even when everything about them is cheerful.

Their desks or benches are continually in confusion, quite in keeping with their unmethodical minds.

When urgently needed no paper or tool is in sight or reach.

It is generally hidden somewhere in a disordered heap. Precious minutes are lost while searching for the elusive thing, and should the task of finding it happen to be more vexatious than usual, some innocent fellow-worker is openly charged with pilfering.

Then a storm breaks and the atmosphere is surcharged with anger, which in the customary slowness of cooling off is likely to leave the principals for days and days in sulky humors.

Persons of this character are doomed to fall in everything they undertake, except in the making of quarrels and the wrecking of friendships.

Blameful themselves, they pile their sins on the blameless. Wherever they are found there is turmoil, inefficiency, disloyalty and unhappiness, four danger signals which block the way in every track of endeavor to promotion to the higher ranks.

Another Grade

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FOLKS can't always find the word For the things to say. Now and then a man's a bird Sayin' right away. Just the thing at just the time That is proper, right and prime; But the gibberish ones by far Often poor performers are.

No, my girl, I haven't got Sense to say it right— Think of somethin', like as not, By tomorrow night— Then you'll be a hundred miles— Yes, sir, gone and took your smiles Where there ain't a chance to see Only in my memory.

I'll remember, don't you fear— I'll remember when You and me was youngsters here, Thinkin' others then In their twenties gittin' old. Goodness, how the time has rolled!— Here you are, and here I be, Twenty-one and twenty-three.

You was always smart at school— There ain't many such. Me, I guess I used to fool, Fool around too much. I was older, but one day You caught up with me—and, say, You could just have knocked me dead When you passed a grade ahead!

Guess that's what you're doin' now— Made another grade. Hitched and harnessed to the plow— I am, I'm afraid; But you're growin' ev'ry hour, Bloomin' like a garden flow'r. Life has, as it ought to do, Once again promoted you.

Folks the word can't always find For to say a thing; But up yonder look behind Where the swallows sing. You'll be busy, I expect, But just try to recollect Me—no special reason why— Just remember. Well, good-by.

Your Last Name

IS IT MOODY?

ONE authority says that Moody is derived from a personal name Múthe, while another authority assures us that Moody is an adjective nickname from the word which now means morose, but which at the time that it was first used as a name had the older meaning of valiant. Muddiman is akin to it, having originally been Moody-man or valiant man.

Undoubtedly the family is of English origin. The first to settle here was William Moody of Ipswich, England, who came to this country in the Mary and John in 1638 and first settled at Bayfield, Mass. In the home he built there, his heirs were born for the next two hundred and twenty years.

It is said that this William Moody belonged to an ancient English family which "went down with the house of Lancaster in 1471." William married Sarah Pierce and had four sons, whose names were Samuel, Joshua, Caleb and William. Joshua, a Harvard graduate, was a famous minister in his day. Caleb was the ancestor of Dwight Moody. It is the boast of the Moody family that from the time of Joshua Moody the family never lacked for an exceptionally great preacher. Joshua outshone them in the Seventeenth century, Samuel in the Eighteenth and Dwight Moody in the Nineteenth century.

POMEROY—This is an old French name derived from a word pommerai, meaning appleyard. Of course the Pomeroy's derived their name from some place called Pomeria but there are many such places.

No Increase in the Price of Firestone

FIRESTONE

FULL-SIZE GUM-DIPPED BALLOONS

The extra quality built in by the extra process of Gum-Dipping, the economy of these wonderful tires and the added mileage obtained from them during the past two years, has created such a large demand that over 75% of Firestone's mammoth production is now Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

This has greatly increased the total sales volume and the huge Firestone factories are now working on a 24-hour schedule to supply the demand.

This large volume, produced under the most economical tire manufacturing methods, permits Firestone to sell these extra-process Full-Size Balloons at no extra cost to car owners. And this in the face of greatly advanced cost for crude rubber brought about by the operation of the British Rubber Restriction Act.

Gum-Dipping means longer mileage—greater economy—at no extra cost to you!

Enjoy the safety, economy and comfort of Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords this summer. Let us equip your car now at low cost—with liberal allowance for your old tires.

The Swearing Habit

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I KNEW a woman once who in explanation of her loud and blatant profanity gave as a reason for her blasphemy that she wanted to let God know that she wasn't afraid to speak her mind. The explanation was definite if it was not one that appealed to one's sense of fitness.

Everyone who sweats has some reason, conscious or subconscious, and some of these reasons are not difficult to understand. In many cases the individual takes refuge in oaths because of illiteracy, because of lack of vocabulary. The very meagerness of his words drives him to the conclusion that he will gain force or variety by cursing. He "has a feeling" that he is driving a point home when he swears.

The bitly or the coward swears to give the impression of force or to fortify his courage. It is a sort of camouflage, which deceives only the inexperienced. It is pretty safe to slap a man in the face if he swears at you and to expect an apology. Swearing shows a self-consciousness, a lack of self-reliance, a lack of knowledge; it is like the boy in the woods whistling to keep his courage up. The boss who swears at the men he directs or instructs not infrequently does so as a means of covering up his own lack of knowledge or inexperience in directing people. The profane man is usually the excited or terrified or ignorant one. The man who swears seldom if ever inspires either respect or fear or confidence in those who are the recipients of his bullying. They have the viewpoint of the irreverent young son, who listening to an outburst of profane advice from his father, said, "Oh, pa's blowing off again."

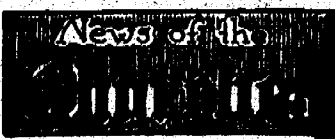

The young fellow just out of high school, just freed from the restraint of home, often feels that he shows himself a man to the extent that he is able to rip out a good oath. Swearing in his mind demonstrates the act that he has seen the world, that he is no longer a social greenhorn, that he is entitled to respect.

It is admitted that profanity is a common habit among men, but it is coming to be less in vogue than it was. It is a low, vulgar habit best suited to the ignorant, the ill-trained, and the unclean. It will go out of fashion, I feel sure, not so much because it is wrong as because it is weak. The man who swears has for the time being dropped his guard, has shown a lack of strength, a failure to control himself and the situation before him. He is under such circumstances more easily defeated, he has prejudiced his cause, he is weak and not infrequently pitiable. He is not at his best.

When a man begins to swear at you, you can be assured that you are stronger than he is.

Part IV
London and Lystria

CHAPTER XVIII.

I find myself at last, to my own great satisfaction, able to return to a part of the story in which I myself bore a part. I am no longer writing hearsay, but narrating what I actually saw and heard.

The scene of Lord Edmund Troyte's library in Grosvenor street, when Lord Norheys and his bride walked in, remains vividly pictured in my mind. Troyte sat bolt upright on the edge of a deep chair in which he had been lounging. At his elbow was a little table with the empty coffee cups and the liqueurs on it. Behind it sat Procopius Cable, staring at Norheys with an expression of angry amazement on his face. Half-way between the door and the fireplace stood Norheys and his bride. I had never before seen Viola Temple off the stage, and her appearance surprised me. I expected her to be pretty, of course. I did not expect her to look gentle, shy and even timid. A girl who has faced huge audiences hundreds of times would not, one might suppose, be frightened of three old gentlemen sitting round a fire. But she was. Norheys' attitude was protective. He held one of her hands, and kept her close beside him.

The library in Troyte's house in Grosvenor street is a comfortable and, I think, a beautiful room. There are a couple of good pictures, but for the most part the walls are covered with bookcases. Troyte has spent a great deal on books during his life, rare books, exquisite examples of printing and books which have fine bindings. I do not know that he, or indeed any one, ever reads books of that kind. It is generally easier, and pleasanter, to buy a modern edition of an old author if you want to read him at all. But there is no doubt that the presence in a room of good books, good from a bibliophile's point of view, creates an atmosphere which is very agreeable, especially after dinner.

A Persian carpet, one of the best I have ever seen, covers the floor of the library. Some good chairs, Chinese Chippendale, stand with their backs against the bookcases. But Troyte is too sensible a man to sacrifice comfort to artistic feeling. Round the fire he had deep leather-covered chairs of thoroughly satisfactory late Victorian design.

I, the fifth person present, and by far the least important, leaned back in my chair and gazed feebly.

"Unless it's Emily's curate who's gone to Lystria," I repeated, "I don't know who it can be."

Procopius Cable turned and glared at me with ferocity and contempt. I had been guilty of an ill-timed attempt at a joke in the middle of a very serious crisis. I stopped giggling abruptly and murmured an apology. After that, for a while, nobody spoke.

Troyte was the first to recover his self-possession. He rose from his

SAGE TEA TURNS
GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it dabbles so naturally, and evenly, that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustreous.

chair and walked over to where Norheys and his bride were standing.

"My dear Viola," he said, "that stupid husband of yours has never introduced me to you, so I must introduce myself as your uncle. Won't you come over to the fire and sit down?"

He took her by the hand and led her to his own chair. He set her in it and placed a footstool at her feet. The recognition had been a little long in coming, but there were excuses to be made for the delay. Nothing could have been more courteous than Troyte's manner when he got over the shock of her sudden appearance and made up his mind to accept the inevitable. The girl looked up at him with timid gratitude and blushed in the most charming manner.

"Good old Uncle Ned," said Norheys, "I knew you'd take it like a man. What I always said to Viola was this: Uncle Ned may be a member of parliament and a cabinet minister and all that, but he's still a gentleman."

Cable, his hands thrust deep into his trousers pockets, stood scowling. "What's happened in Lystria?" he said.

"It seems to me," said Norheys, "that some other blighter has chipped in."

Cable strode over to Troyte's writing table, seized a pen and began to scribble at a terrific pace, faster than any one I've ever seen write, except on the stage. He talked while he wrote, another thing which reminded me of the theater.

"I shall wire to Berlin at once. Casimir is still in Berlin. I shall wire to King Wladislawa. I shall wire to the patriarch in Lystria."

"Seems a pity, doesn't it?" said Norheys, "to butt in like that. What I always say is: If a thing's done, then it is done, even if it happens to be the thing which a fellow would rather wasn't done."

Troyte passed his hand over his forehead anxiously.

"There'll be trouble in the Balkans," he said. "I don't see how this business can end without fresh trouble in the Balkans."

"The marriage has probably not taken place yet," said Cable. "We may be in time to stop it."

"Even if we do," said Troyte, "there'll be trouble."

"I don't see why," said Norheys. "Of course I'm only an outsider, and this is your job, Uncle Ned. But I don't see why. It seems to me things ought to settle down. These mountain fellows in what-you-call the place—"

"Lystria," I prompted.

"The good old Lystrians," said Norheys, "wanted a king, and they've got one. That dusky queen of yours, Uncle Ned, wanted a husband and she's got one, or will very soon if we don't interfere. He may be a wrong 'un. Seems rather as if he is, but I don't see why. I don't see that it matters to us. The great thing is not to start interfering with other people's business. That never does any good."

Troyte, who was seriously troubled, murmured something about a war in the Balkans which it might be impossible to localize. Cable crossed the room from the writing table with three sheets of note paper in his hand.

"This," he said, holding out one of them, "is a telegram to Casimir. The other two are to the king and to the patriarch. Can you get them sent off at once, Lord Edmund?"

"I think so," said Troyte. "I can send them round to the Foreign office, and they'll get them off for me. But I doubt if there'll be any operators on duty at this hour in the postoffices abroad. I shall have to write some telegrams myself. I must communicate at once with our ambassador in Berlin, and with our ministers in Prague and Bukarest."

"Seems a pity, doesn't it?" said Norheys. "After all, Uncle Ned, that fellow, whoever he is, evidently wants a princess. And what I always say is: Why shouldn't he have her if he does?"

"The patriarch will probably have him shot out of hand when he gets my telegram," said Cable bitterly.

"I hope not," said Norheys. "He may be quite a decent fellow, not a wrong 'un at all. And it isn't every one who'd take on that princess of yours, Uncle Ned. Lots of men don't like it."

"I've told you all along," I said, "that the princess Calypso is as white as you are."

"Still, there's always a risk," said Norheys. "A throw-back, don't you know. What scientific Johnnies call atavism. You never can tell when a perfectly coal-black baby might turn up. Horrid things, black babies. What I always say is that if a fellow is prepared to take the risk, why not let him? No particular business of ours, is it, if the babies turn out to be black, or even brown?"

Troyte was attending to Viola, taking her coat from her, offering her cushions, trying to induce her to drink champagne. Cable grew impatient.

"Perhaps," he said, "you will phone these telegrams through to the Foreign office, or would you rather I sent a messenger with them?"

Troyte got up and went to the telephone. Norheys talked on, addressing no one in particular.

"What I can't see," he said, "is why we should butt in. So far as I can make out, I'm the only one of us with a shadow of a grievance, and I don't want to trot it out. I can't wait take an action for breach of promise against an Indian queen. I'd look such an ass, wouldn't I, Uncle Bill?"

He turned to me because Troyte was at the telephone and Cable had turned his back on us.

"I know you'll say she's not an Indian," said Norheys, "but Persian seem to me just as bad."

"She's not Persian, either," I said.

"All Asia Minor is more or less Persian," said Norheys, "and, anyway, I don't want to take an action against her. I don't believe I could even if I wanted to, on account of having got married myself before she did. So that's that; and there's no use worrying."

Troyte was talking fast to someone in the foreign office.

"There'll be the devil of a fuss," said Norheys, "if Uncle Ned stirs up all these ambassadors and people. And they won't like it. Nobody would like it, I say, Uncle Ned!"

Troyte, working steadily through Cable's telegrams, waved an impatient hand at Norheys.

"It's all very fine," said Norheys to me. "Uncle Ned may say what he likes, but they won't like it. No ambassador would like being pulled out of his bed at this hour of the night and set on to chase a princess up and down the Himalaya mountains, as if she was a goat or a chamola or something of that kind. And what I always say is: If nobody wants a thing done, why do it? There are lots of unpleasant things every fellow has to do. Why chip in with unnecessary ones and make everyone uncomfortable?"

"Notify the legations at Sophia," said Troyte into the telephone, "and Prague and Bukarest, and Warsaw, and Budapest, and Belgrade—"

"Just listen to him," said Norheys. "Jolly glad I didn't go into the diplomatic service. They wanted me to. You remember that, Uncle Bill? But I was firm about that. 'Not my line at all,' I said. 'Hate complications and always did.' Now I see I was quite right. I simply couldn't stand being set on to persecute some poor girl who'd run off with the chauffeur. And I expect that's what's happened. Looks like it anyhow. What I always say is: If a girl wants to marry a chauffeur, let her, and be jolly thankful it's no worse."

Cable had edged over to the table at which Troyte was sitting at the telephone.

"Tell them," he said, "to engage places for us in the Warsaw express. We must go tomorrow."

"I suppose we must," said Troyte with a sigh.

"Of course we must," said Cable. "Heaven knows what muddle there'll be if we're not there. It's a complicated business and you and I are the only two people who understand the whole of it. Tell them to book two sleepers for us."

"I say," said Norheys. "I say, Uncle Ned, are you really going off to this what-you-call-em place to see the princess?"

Troyte took no notice of this, so I answered for him.

"He must," I said. "As minister for Balkan affairs, it's his duty to have his hand on the helm when the ship is in the rapids."

Norheys turned to his wife, who had been sitting quietly and very comfortably where Troyte left her.

"I say, Vi, old thing, what about it?" She understood him at once, though I confess that I did not.

"I should simply love it," she said, "and you promised that we should have a honeymoon."

"Right," said Norheys. "I say, Uncle Ned, tell him to book four sleepers, will you. Vi and I are going to trot along with you."

Troyte very nearly dropped the receiver in his astonishment. I was a little startled myself. The very last place a man ought to take his wife for a honeymoon is into the middle of a Balkan war, and that, if I could trust Troyte's judgment, was just what there was going to be.

"You can't go with us," said Troyte. "I'm d-d if you do," said Cable.

"You ought to be pleased to have us," said Norheys. "We'd cheer you up and all that when you're feeling a bit down and out."

"You've done mischief enough already," said Cable. "You shan't go near Lystria if I can stop you."

"I don't suppose you can stop us," said Norheys. "I say, Uncle Ned, do book those sleepers. I promised Vi that she should see the black princess, and she wants to, don't you, Vi?"

"I should like to see Lystria," she said.

"So there you are, Uncle Ned," said Norheys. "You can't go back on Vi when she comes rushing home all the way from Paris just to tell you, that she'd married me. Very few girls would have done that."

"I protest strongly," said Cable.

"That's no use," said Norheys. "If Uncle Ned won't book the sleepers for us we'll have to go without them. I've got my passport all right. You gave it to me yourself, Uncle Ned, and I'll manage to slip Viola through somehow. You generally can, you know, if you tip the right man. Besides, I might come in useful. You never know. That princess has run off with the chauffeur and the Lystrians may not want him for a king. It's a bit awkward for them. A fellow who's touching his hat to you one day and you have to take yours off to him the next day. Nobody likes to be let in for that sort of thing. Well, you know, if the worst comes to the worst and they still want a king, I'll be there."

Cable, who had been drumming impatiently with his fingers on the table, moved over suddenly and looked at Norheys. I do not know whether he actually thought that it might still be possible to make Norheys king of Lystria. If the thing were possible, it would certainly be a way out of a nasty situation. Even the Balkan war might be averted.

"I always said," said Norheys, "that I'd no objection to being a king, so long as I didn't have to marry that princess. Well, that part of the program is off now. But if the Lystrians don't care for the chauffeur, why not pop me and Viola on to a couple of thrones? Not that we want to hoof out the princess. We don't. Only just in case she happens to have done herself in by slipping off with the chauffeur. And that's the sort of thing it takes a girl a long time to get over—especially if she happens to be a princess—why, in that case what I say is: Why not us?"

Cable is an adventurer with no sense of responsibility and little regard for convention. He may have seriously contemplated financing another revolution in Lystria and setting up Norheys as a king at the end of it. But Troyte is a serious statesman. He could not possibly have regarded Norheys' plan as worthy of consideration. Nevertheless, he agreed to take the young couple to Lystria. It was Viola who persuaded him.

She left her seat, went over to him in the prettiest possible manner, put one arm round his neck and set her

"Do Take Us," She Said. "We Want to Go Most Awfully, and I Ought to Have a Honeymoon, Oughtn't I?"

cheek quite close to his. "Do take us," she said. "We want to go most awfully, and I ought to have a honeymoon, oughtn't I?"

Troyte picked up the telephone receiver again.

"Hullo!" he said. "Yes, Foreign office. Lord Edmund-Troyte speaking again. Did I say two sleepers on the Warsaw express? Well, four will be wanted. Engage four."

"Say five," I said; "I'd rather like to go, too."

Troyte took no notice of me. He laid down the receiver, crossed the room holding Viola's hand, and sat down.

"Why on earth do you want to go?" said Cable.

"Well," I said, "I'm thinking of applying for shares in the oil company of yours, so, of course, I'd like to look into things for myself. And Lord Norheys is my godson, so if you're going to make him a king, I ought to be there to help to crown him. Godparents have duties as well as rights. And, besides, I want to find out who that princess has run away with. I believe myself that my sister Emily's curate has got her, and that Janet Church has gone along with them to be bridesmaid."

I picked up the telephone receiver, and asked for the Foreign office. Cable growled. Troyte lit a cigarette and poured himself out a glass of brandy. Norheys clapped me on the back.

"Good old Uncle Bill!" he said. "I always knew you were a sport. Tell us all about that curate, won't you?"

"That the Foreign office?" I shouted down the telephone. "Yes, I'm speaking for Lord Edmund Troyte. Please engage five sleepers in the Warsaw express tomorrow instead of four. If they haven't that number vacant tell them to put on another coach. Yes. A whole coach. Never mind about the expense. Mr. Cable will settle that whatever it is."

BRIEF NEWS OF WORLD EVENTS

French Troops Rout Invading Moors After Sanguinary Engagement

Paris—The columns of French troops led by General Colombat and Col. Freydenburg established contact with the main body of the Rifian army invading French Morocco from the Spanish zone near Bibane, directly north of Fes, and a sanguinary battle was fought. General Colombat slowly drove back the Moors whom he reported were "well organized and well armed and wearing uniforms." This was one of the most important engagements that have taken place between the Rifians and the French. The former showed themselves exceedingly able tacticians, withdrawing in good order despite heavy bombardments by airplanes and mountain batteries. The French casualties were four officers and 18 soldiers killed and 50 wounded, while the Rifians lost 500 dead.

Ford Sued for $12,000,000

Jackson, Miss.—W. J. Miller, state revenue agent, has filed in the Chancery Court of Hinds County here, a suit against the Ford Motor Co., charging a criminal conspiracy to violate the anti-trust laws of Mississippi, and seeking to collect penalties totaling $12,000,000. All local Ford dealers in Mississippi and the banking institutions with which they transact business are made co-defendants. The state revenue agent seeks to attach the funds of the company on deposit to guarantee payment of penalties.

Senator Mows Capital Lawn

Washington—Senator Norris, of Nebraska, is an old hand at cutting hay. Now that congress is on vacation, the senator has a lot of spare time, but no hay. So as the next best thing, he essayed the role of official grass cutter of the capitol, and neatly mowed the broad green stretch adjacent to the senate office building. "It would be good exercise," remarked the senator afterwards, "only all they have here is an automatic grass cutter, and that belongs in the same stable with electric horses."

Germans Charge Election Fraud

Berlin—Official protest has been entered by the Socialists against the validity of the election to Field Marshal Paul Von Hindenburg as president of Germany. The Socialists charge many irregularities and demand that the election be declared void. This action, however, does not seem to worry the Nationalists, who the circumstances were such as to say it will be difficult to prove that affect the result of the vote, in which Von Hindenburg received a plurality of 904,151.

Riding Horses in Demand

Washington—While the number of riding horses bred in recent years has decreased enormously army officers say the kind and type of this day is far superior in quality and breeding than in the past. Not only is there a demand in the army for good riding horses, say officers of the quartermaster corps, but horseback riding, polo and hunting are greatly on the increase and a good, well-bred riding horse is bringing a better price than at any time in the history of the United States.

Post Office Receipts Grow

Washington—An indication of improved business conditions throughout the country is shown in the postal receipts of 50 leading cities, totaling $29,083,231 in April, as compared with $26,918,448 in April, 1924, an increase of $2,164,783, or 8.4 per cent. The Post Office Department announced. Dayton (Ohio), led all other cities in the volume of increase, the receipts in April amounting to $184,168, an increase of 29.57 per cent.

Arrest Evolution Teacher

Nashville, Tenn.—A dispatch from Dayton, Tenn., says that J. T. Scopes, science teacher in the Rhea high school, was arrested on a charge of violating the new Tennessee law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the state public schools. George W. Rappleyes, Dayton business man, was the complainant. It was stated that the defense would attack the constitutionality of the new law.

Specialists To Treat Indians

Washington—Secretary of Interior Work has instructed the Indian bureau, to make a complete survey of every Indian family living on government reservations for indications of trachoma, eye disease which has been particularly disastrous among the red men. Eye specialists will be sent to each reservation to treat those found afflicted.

Riots Follow Lisbon Election

Lisbon—Disorders have broken out again in Lisbon and the streets were patrolled by cavalry, occasional revolver shots are heard, a few persons have been wounded and many arrests have been made. The disorders began as a result of the elections.

LONGER LIFE FORESEEN FOR NEXT GENERATION

Washington—Three score years and ten. That, in the next generation, will be man's average length of life, according to the belief expressed by leading delegates to the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons here. "It is our hope that we will be able to now teach man how to reach the biblical mark of three score years and ten," said Dr. William J. Mayo, noted Rochester, Minn., surgeon. Medical science has lengthened man's life 12 since the Civil War, he said.

Gasoline Price Cut in East

New York—The Texas Company, largest of so-called independent oil companies, has cut gasoline prices two cents a gallon for retail delivery. The reduction is effective only in New York City, Stamford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass. It was said at the company's office the reduction was made to "meet local conditions." The 8 cent drop in gasoline is the largest individual price cut in years and brings the delivery price down to 21 cents a gallon against 24 cents a gallon charged by other companies in New York.

France Decorates World Filers

Washington—Lieutenant Leigh Wade and Leslie P. Arnold, two of the army world filers, were decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor by Emile Daeschner, French ambassador of the United States. In presenting the decorations, the ambassador told the aviators the crosses were but a slight token of the admiration their wonderful feat had aroused in France. The ceremony took place at the French embassy in the presence of Brigadier-General Pechet, assistant chief of the army air service.

Budget Bureau Plans Cut

Washington—The administration plans to cut governmental running expenses at least $300,000,000 during the next fiscal year, it was learned at the budget bureau. This cut can be accomplished and still permit a 12 per cent slash in taxes which the administration plans to recommend to congress, it was declared. Estimated cost of the government for the year ending June, 1926, is $3,287,551,000. This figure can be materially reduced if federal departments will wield the pruning knife unsparingly.

Annapolis to Teach Aviation

Washington—Orders have been signed by Secretary Curtis D. Wilbur establishing aviation courses at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, under which all graduates hereafter will be trained as pilots or observers. The action was in line with recommendations of the special board appointed by the secretary at the request of the President last September to study the relative values of the various naval weapons, including battleships and aircraft.

Moro Revolt Feared

Manila—Ominous reports that Moro chiefs in Mindanao province were withdrawing with their followers to fortified positions in the Mindanao jungles and were defying government orders, have caused Governor General Leonard Wood to suddenly end his northern inspection trip and return to Manila. The governor general is expected to leave for Mindanao soon.

Counterfeit Band Located

Mexico City—A band of skilful counterfeiters, who have flooded Mexico and United States cities, has been found in a remote village in Guerrero state; Southern Mexico, the American embassy has been informed. Mexican secret police, co-operating with Americans, were said to have the counterfeiters surrounded.

Ask Ford's Advice on Shoals

Washington—Henry Ford and his associates are among those asked by President Coolidge's special commission on Muscle Shoals for observations on disposition of the power project there. A meeting is to be held early in June and the commission is getting ready for its deliberations at that time.

Train Stops For Prince To Sleep

Cape Town, Union of South Africa—The Prince of Wales intends to get plenty of sleep during his trip through South Africa. The program for the next few days provides that the special train upon which he is traveling shall halt for 12 hours each night in order that he may sleep undisturbed.

Dawes Will Continue Fight

Washington—Vice-President Dawes will personally carry his crusade for changes in the senate rules to all parts of the country this summer. The vice-president's tour will take him to Alabama, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Kansas, the far west and probably again into New England.

Coat Frocks Reveal New Style Points

Following the general trend of the mode, and especially the lead of other frocks, the new coat-frocks are departing from straight lines and too-simple simplicity. In their shaping they recognize the existence of a waistline, and show a disposition to cultivate its acquaintance, and in their adornment they have taken up with all the new details of decoration. Diversity of collar-and-sleeve treatments that distinguish late arrivals among other frocks have been promptly appropriated by the coat-frock. Here is an example in navy twill. Note the vestee and undersleeves of georgette, the embroidery on collar and wrist bands, the scalloped edges of the "v"-shaped front opening, repeated on the sleeves, and accented by small buttons—all of these are important style points.
