A Course in Home Making

A Michigan woman has given Vassar College a half million dollars for the establishment of a course in home making. While there is a tendency on the part of some people to believe that such a course is not needed we do not know of a course that should have a more important place in the curricula of schools and colleges. Of course, all the married ladies of our personal acquaintance are excellent home makers and could not be surpassed. At the same time, we occasionally hear that this is otherwise in other parts of this republic and that there is an evident and urgent need of such training.
If the making of a home is to be the glory of a woman's life, it seems logical that a young girl, being trained for life, should receive the advantage of past experience in home making. Such a course would include many important truths as to bodily health, correct foods etc. If taken up by young girls and its lessons practiced in their future homes, it would probably add ten years to the average life span.
So far, no American city has taken a mosquito census.
A week end at the resort hotels is our idea of spending money.
It is a good time for someone to write a new oration for the fall crop of declaimers.

"Dead" Crooks Are Alive

Fingerprint experts of the Federal Department of Justice say that it often happens that men with criminal records appear at morgues to identify bodies or unknown dead as their own in order that they may continue their criminal professions while the police believe them dead.
Occasionally a criminal, after capture is finger-printed and it is discovered that he is "dead". This is interesting and reveals an ingenuity on the part of the criminal that should serve better pursuits.

THE LOMBARDS
TWO programs will be given by the Lombard Entertainers on the fourth day of the Chautauqua. Harry Lombard, who has for eight years been leading baritone with the English Opera Co., is well known for his splendid voice, as well as for his ability as a comedian of high rank. He is ably supported by Miss Jessie Vyvian, soprano, pianist and reader. Their program in the afternoon, which precedes the work of the children of the Junior Chautauqua, and their entertainment prelude to the lecture by Joel Eastman in the evening, offers many surprises and much variety. Vocal solos, duets, humorous impersonations, rag pictures, lightning oil paintings and clever sketches will be presented from a platform elaborately set with imported Japanese tapestries. The Lombards invariably delight their audiences.

"Two bob!" cried the other wrathfully. "Two bob, you miserable sheeny." For a moment or two he spluttered inarticulately as if speech was beyond him; then his huge hand shot out and gripped the clerk by the collar. "Think again, Archibald," he continued quietly, "think again and think better."

But the assistant, as might be expected in one of his cuttings, was prepared for emergencies of this sort. Very gently his right hand slid along the counter toward a concealed electric bell which communicated with the staff upstairs. It fulfilled several purposes, that bell: it acted as a call for help or as a warning, and according to the number of times it was pressed, the urgency of the matter could be interpreted by those who heard it. Just now the clerk decided that two rings would meet the case; he disliked the appearance of the large and angry man in whose grip he felt absolutely powerless, and he felt he would like help—very urgently. And so it was perhaps a little unfortunate for him that he should have allowed an ugly little smirk to adorn his lips a second or two before his hand found the bell.

The man facing him across the coffee bar saw that smirk and lost his temper in earnest. With a grunt of rage he hit the other square between the eyes, and the clerk collapsed in a huddled heap behind the counter with the bell still ringing.

For a few moments the big man stood motionless, listening intently. Then, with an agility remarkable in one so big, he vaulted the counter and inspected the recumbent assistant with a professional eye. A faint grin spread over his face as he noted that gentleman's condition, but after that he wasted no time. So quickly and methodically in fact did he set about things, that it seemed as if the whole performance must have been cut and dried beforehand, even to the temporary indisposition of the clerk. In half a minute the latter was bound and gagged and under the counter. Beside him the big man placed the pair of boots, attached to which was a piece of paper which he took from his pocket. On it was scrawled in an illiterate hand:

"Have took a fare price for the boots, yer swine." Then quite deliberately the big man forced the till and removed some money, after which he once more examined the unconscious man under the counter.

"Without a hitch," he muttered. "Absolutely according to Cocker. Now, old lad of the village, we come to the second item on the program. That must be the door I want."

He opened it cautiously, and the subdued hum of voices from above came a little louder to his ears. Then like a shadow he vanished into the semi-darkness of the house upstairs.

It was undoubtedly a house of surprises, was Number 5, Green street. A stranger passing through the dingy office on the ground floor where Mr. Atkinson's assistant was wont to sit at the receipt of custom, and then ascending the stairs to the first story would have found it hard to believe that he was in the same house. But then, strangers were not encouraged to do anything of the sort.

There was a door at the top of the flight of stairs, and it was at this door that the metamorphosis took place. On one side of it the stairs ran carpetless and none too clean to the ground floor, on the other side the picture changed. A wide passage with rooms leading out of it from either side confronted the explorer—a passage which was efficiently illuminated with electric lights hung from the ceiling, and the floor of which was covered with a good plain carpet.

Along the walls ran rows of bookshelves stretching, save for the gaps at the doors, as far as a partition which closed the further end of the passage. In this partition was another door, and beyond this second door the passage continued to a window tightly shuttered and bolted. From this continuation only one room led off—a room which would have made the explorer rub his eyes in surprise. It was richly—almost luxuriously furnished. In the center stood a big roll top writing desk, while scattered about were several armchairs upholstered in green leather. A long table almost filled one side of the room; a table covered with every imaginable newspaper. A huge safe flush with the wall occupied the other side, while the window, like the one outside, was almost hermetically sealed. There was a fireplace in the corner, but there was no sign of any fire having been lit, or of any preparations for lighting one. Two electric heaters attached by long lengths of flex to plugs in the wall comprised the heating arrangements, while a big central light and half-a-dozen movable ones illuminated every corner of the room.

In blissful ignorance of the sad plight of the clerk below, two men were sitting in this room, deep in conversation. In a chair drawn up close to the desk was no less a person than Charles Latter, M. P., and it was he who was doing most of the talking. But it was the other man who riveted attention: the man who presumably was Mr. Atkinson himself.

At first he seemed to be afflicted with an almost phenomenal stoop, and it was only when one got nearer that the reason was clear. The man was a hunchback, and the effect it gave was that of a huge bird of prey. Unlike most hunchbacks, his legs were of normal length, and as he sat motionless in his chair, a hand on each knee, starting with unwinking eyes at his talkative companion, there was something menacing and implacable in his appearance. His hair was gray; his features stern and hard; while his mouth reminded one of a steel trap. But it was his eyes that dominated everything—gray-blue and piercing, they seemed able to probe one's innermost soul. A man to whom it would be unwise to lie—a man utterly unscrupulous in himself, who would yet punish double-dealing in those who worked for him with merciless severity. A dangerous man.

"So you went to the police, Mr. Latter," he remarked suavely. "And what had our friend Sir Bryan Johnstone to say on the matter?"

"At first, count, he didn't say much. In fact he really said very little all through. But once he looked at the note his whole manner changed. I could see that instantly. There was something about the note which interested him."

"Let me see it," said the count, holding out his hand. "I left it with Sir Bryan," answered the other. "He asked me to let him keep it. And he promised that I should be all right."

The count's lips curled. "It would take more than Sir Bryan Johnstone's promise, Mr. Latter, to insure your safety. Do you know whom that note was from?"

"I thought, count," said the other a little tremulously—"I thought it might be from this mysterious Black Gang that one has heard rumors about."

"It was," replied the count tersely. "Heavens!" stammered Latter. "Then it's true; they exist."

"In the last month," answered the hunchback, staring fixedly at his frightened companion, "nearly twenty of our most useful men have disappeared. They have simply vanished into thin air. I know, no matter how, that it is not the police; the police are as mystified as we are. But the police, Mr. Latter, whatever views they may take officially are in all probability unofficially very glad of our friends' disappearance. At any rate until last night."

"What do you mean?" asked the other. "Last night the police were balked of their prey, and McIver doesn't like being balked. You know Zaboieff was sent over?"

"Yes, of course. That is one of the reasons I came around tonight. Have you seen him?" "I have not," answered the count grimly. "The police found out he was coming."

Mr. Latter's face blanched: the thought of Zaboieff in custody didn't appeal to him. It may be mentioned that his feelings were purely selfish—Zaboieff knew too much.

But the Count was speaking again. A faint sneer was on his face; he had read the other's mind like an open book. "And so," he continued, "did the Black Gang. They removed Zaboieff and our friend Waldoek from under the very noses of the police, and like the twenty others, they have disappeared."

"My G—d!" There was no doubt now about Mr. Latter's state of mind. "And now they've threatened you," agreed the count. "And you, I am glad to say, have done exactly what I should have told you to do, had I seen you sooner. You have gone to the police."

"But—but," stammered Latter, "the police were no good to Zaboieff last night."

"And it is quite possible," returned the other calmly, "that they will be equally futile in your case. Candidly, Mr. Latter, I am completely indifferent on the subject of your future. You have served our purpose, and all that matters is that you happen to be the bone over which the dogs are going to fight. Until last night the dogs hadn't met—officially; and in the rencontre last night, the police dog, unless I'm greatly mistaken, was caught by surprise. McIver doesn't let that happen twice. In your case he'll be ready. With luck this cursed black gang, who are infinitely more a nuisance to me than the police have been or ever will be, will get bitten badly."

Mr. Latter was breathing heavily. "But what do you want me to do, count?"

"Nothing at all, except what you were going to do normally," answered the other.

"Hullo! What's up?" From a little electric bell at his elbow came four shrill rings, repeated again and again.

The count rose, and with systematic thoroughness swept every piece of paper off the desk into his pocket. Then he shut down the top and locked it, while the bell, a little muffled, still rang inside.

"What's the fool doing?" he cried angrily, stepping over to the big safe let into the wall, while Latter, his face white and terrified, followed at his side. And then abruptly the bell stopped.

Very deliberately the count pressed two concealed knobs, so sunk into the wall as to be invisible to a stranger, and the door of the safe swung open. And only then was it obvious that the safe was not a safe, but a second exit leading to a flight of stairs. For a moment or two he stood motionless, listening intently, while Latter fidgeted at his side. One hand was on a master switch which controlled all the lights, the other on a knob inside the second passage which, when turned, would close the great steel door noiselessly behind them.

He was frowning angrily, but gradually the frown was replaced by a look of pained surprise. Four rings from the shop below was the recognized signal for urgent danger, and everybody's plan of action was cut and dried for such an emergency. In the other rooms every book and paper in the slightest degree incriminating were hurried pell-mell into secret recesses in the floor which had been specially constructed under every table. In their place appeared books carefully and very skilfully faked, purporting to record the business transactions of Mr. William Atkinson.

In the big room at the end the procedure was even simpler. The count merely passed through the safe door and vanished through his private bolt-hole, leaving everything in darkness. And should inconvenient visitors ask inconvenient questions—well, it was Mr. Atkinson's private office, and a very nice office too, though at the moment he was away.

Thus the procedure—simple and sound; but on this occasion something seemed to have gone wrong. Instead of the industrious silence of clerks working overtime on affairs of financial import, a perfect babel of voices became audible in the passage. And then there came an agitated knocking on the door.

"Who is it?" cried the count sharply. It may be mentioned that even the most influential members of his staff knew better than to come into the room without previously obtaining permission.

"It's me, sir—Cohen," came an agitated voice from outside. For a moment the count paused; then with a turn of the knob he closed the safe door silently. With an imperious hand he waved Latter to a chair, and resumed his former position at the desk.

"Come in," he snapped. It was a strange and unwholesome object that obeyed the order, and the count sat back in his chair.

"What the devil have you been doing?"

A pair of rich blue-black eyes, and a nose from which traces of blood still trickled had not improved the general appearance of the assistant downstairs. In one hand he carried a pair of hobnail boots, in the other a piece of paper, and he brandished them alternately while a flood of incoherent frenzy burst from his lips.

For a minute or two the count listened, until his first look of surprise gave way to one of black anger.

"Am I to understand, you wretched little worm," he snarled, "that you gave the urgency danger signal, not once but half a dozen times, merely because a man hit you over the nose?" "But he knocked me silly, sir," quavered the other. "And when I came to, and saw the boots lying beside me and the till opened, I kind of lost my head. I didn't know what had happened, sir—and I thought I'd better ring the bell—in case of trouble."

He retreated a step or two toward the door, terrified out of his wits by the look of diabolical fury in the hunchback's eyes. Three or four clerks, who had been surreptitiously peeping through the open door, melted rapidly away, while from his chair Mr. Latter watched the scene fascinated. He was reminded of a bird and a snake, and suddenly he gave a little shudder as he realized that his own position was in reality much the same as that of the unfortunate Cohen.

DRAMATIC RECITAL AT CHAUTAUQUA

ARTHUR MACMURRAY

THOSE who have heard Arthur MacMurray are certain to want to hear him again. To those who have not heard him, it can only be said that they have in store a rare treat. First of all he is a strong, thoughtful man. In his recitals, he uses no bombastic methods or buffoonery of any kind. His interpretations are marked by rare dignity and a quiet demeanor that bespeak the attitude of the scholar and the maturity of the actor. On the fifth afternoon of the Chautauqua he will present a dramatic recital of General Lew Wallace's famous novel, "Ben-Hur," in which he gives the essence of the story in a thrilling dramatic form with the tedious details left out.

First to Forecast Eclipse

The first man, so far as historical records show, to calculate the time of an eclipse in advance was Thales of Miletus, who lived 640 to 585 B. C. He prophesied an eclipse which, according to modern reckoning, took place March 28, 585 B. C.

Now—a One-Profit Car. in the Quality Field

STUDEBAKER has achieved one-profit manufacture in the quality field. This marks a new era in the automobile industry. Studebaker's achievement eliminates unnecessary profits running up to $500 on a single car. It banishes double overhead. It results in quantity production of quality cars. It vitally affects pricing by establishing a new criterion of value in the fine car field.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago practically all "manufacturers" of automobiles were nothing more than assemblers. They purchased motors, bodies, tops, axles, etc., from parts makers who were the manufacturers in reality.

On this basis it was easy to become an automobile "manufacturer," and more than five hundred makes of automobiles have had their day in the American market and disappeared. They are represented only by "orphan cars" with practically no resale value.

Notwithstanding this writing on the wall many manufacturers still assemble their product, piling profit upon profit for the ultimate purchaser to pay. Each profit which a maker pays to a body builder or parts supplier enters into his costs just as though he had spent the money for steel or plate glass or upholstery. Although it represents no value he not only passes it on to the purchaser but figures his own profit on top of it.

The Ford is a one-profit car and reigns supreme in its field. In the fine car field Studebaker—and Studebaker alone—now offers the American public one-profit values.

During the past seven years, when demand exceeded supply, Studebaker has been plowing earnings back into plants and machinery until we are now able to make this announcement:

Foundries, stamping mills, machine shops, are now complete. As final links in the chain of one-profit production, the enormous Studebaker body plants have been operating for months at peak capacity. Resources totaling one hundred million dollars are concentrated on the production of this one-profit car.

No other individual manufacturer in the world (except Ford) possesses such facilities for the complete manufacture of automobiles.

That is why Studebaker is able to put finer steel, finer wood, finer upholstery, better workmanship, hundreds of thousands of miles of reserve transportation, into every car—yet keep down the price to you.

This sound manufacturing principle not only holds down price, but it insures a better car regardless of price. The car is not a patchwork, but a unit.

Last year at the New York and Chicago automobile shows four well-known automobile manufacturers exhibited coaches mounted with the same body—a body made from the identical dies, jigs and fixtures. Certainly these manufacturers must have sacrificed engineering advantages in chassis construction to accommodate this "standardized" coach body built by an outside supplier.

Contrast this with Studebaker, where the entire car is designed and built as a unit—and engineered complete. This construction means (1) longer life—(2) greater comfort in riding—(3) greater freedom from repair expense—(4) greater resale value.

With the advent of this one-profit-overhead plan of motor car manufacture, it is folly today to buy a car by the same comparisons you used yesterday. Today you must measure all cars with this "one-profit" Studebaker.

One-fourth of all American passenger cars built today belong in the fine car field—a total of 57 different makes selling above one thousand dollars.

There are 21 Studebaker body styles available on three different chassis. The Standard Six Models, 113-inch wheelbase, 50 h.p. engine, $1125 to $1600 f.o.b. factory. The Special Six Models, 120-inch wheelbase, 65 h.p. engine, $1450 to $2120 f.o.b. factory. And the Big Six Models, 127-inch wheelbase, 75 h.p. engine, $1875 to $2650 f.o.b. factory.

And you may buy your Studebaker today with the assurance that it will not be arbitrarily stigmatized by any act of ours as a "last year's model." Instead of spectacular annual announcements of "new yearly models," Studebaker has adopted the policy of keeping its cars up-to-date in body styles and chassis design every day in the year. Therefore, buy your Studebaker now!

Cadillac—The Cumber-Diggins Lumber Co. has offered the city of Cadillac a large acreage of cut-over land in Colfax township, Wexford county, for reforestation under direction of the Izaak Walton league. One other similar tract recently was offered the city by another donor.

Lansing—The State of Michigan will derive $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 additional taxes from charitable institutions under the Evans benevolent society taxation act adopted by the 1925 legislature. The new law becomes effective August 28. Reports on which the tax levy can be based will be required of all benevolent organizations.

Saginaw—Initiatory petitions asking a vote of the people on the question of an increase in street car fares here have been filed with the city council. The petitions are carrying more than 2,000 signatures in excess of the charter requirements. They ask that the ticket fare for the Saginaw Transit Co. be increased from 8-14 to 8-13 cents.

Grand Rapids—William B. Leeds, son of the former tinplate king and of Princess Anastasia, of Greece, recently spent a day here as the guest of Dr. Ferris N. Smith. Leeds, who is reputed to be worth $75,000,000, found more interest in donning surgeon's garb and watching an operation at a local hospital than in being lionized by society.

Lansing—Sleeping sickness, known to the medical profession as lethargic encephalitis, has been the cause of 16 deaths in Michigan within the first four months of the present year, with 37 cases reported. Compared with the figures of 1923 and 1924, when the number of cases reported was 65 and 45 respectively, the present incidence appears rather high.

Port Huron—The flat water rates of the city will be increased about 22 per cent July 1, and metered water rates will be increased about 40 per cent. It is proposed to increase the revenue from the waterworks department from $115,000 to $165,000 to meet the interest due on a water bond issue of $338,000 made in 1917 for improvements and extensions.

Battle Creek—Continued search for William E. Porter, wealthy glass manufacturer who disappeared from the Battle Creek sanitarium has failed to prove whether he is dead or alive. During the four days of hunting in rivers, lakes and with the use of three bloodhounds, no trace has been found of the missing man, who was under treatment for a nervous collapse.

Port Huron—J. S. Gray, managing editor of the Adrian Telegram, was re-elected president of the Michigan Associated Press Editorial association in annual convention here. Besides re-electing all other officers, is of interest to East Jordan Folks.

What My Neighbor Says

When one has had the misfortune to suffer from backache, headaches, dizziness, urinary disorders and other kidney ills—and has found relief from all this sickness and suffering, that person's advice is of untold value to friends and neighbors. The following case is only one of many thousands, but it is that of an East Jordan resident. Who could ask for a better example?

Mrs. Maurice Gorman says: "My back was so weak and lame I found it hard to go on with my work. I often felt depressed and irritable too. Dizzy spells came over me, and black spots floated before my eyes. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Three boxes of Doan's Pills rid me of the trouble." (Statement given April 23, 1926.)

On Oct. 11, 1924, Mrs. Gorman said: "I never had any sign of kidney trouble since Doan's Pills cured me."

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur
Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.
Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

The Chamber of Commerce is co-operating and asks that the Petoskey wives and cottagers telephone the Chamber of Commerce the minute one peddler appears, giving the name of party telephoning, the street and telephone number. Set Civilization Back

The Vandals were a Teutonic race formerly inhabiting the southern shores of the Baltic, who, about the beginning of the Fifth century, ravaged Gaul and overran Spain and northern Africa. In 455 they pillaged the city of Rome, mercilessly despoiling it of its treasures of art, literature and civilization. The Vandals established themselves in northern Africa, but their kingdom was overthrown in 533 by Belisarius.

Heavy Toll of Illness

In the United States an average of 3,000,000 persons are ill every day.

Auction Sales "In Reverse"

"Dutch" auctions, in which the property is offered at a certain price and lowered by degrees until a bid is forthcoming, were once common, and still are in some countries. A law of Henry VIII's time, afterward confirmed by Charles I, prohibited the conducting of auction sales by all persons except certain licensed officials known as outropers.

Had Passed Away

Returning from his visit to the seashore little Dean told the family about the ocean. "Why," he exclaimed, his eyes big with excitement, "it jumped and leaped all around! I brought some of it home to show you. Now just look," and he produced a big bottle of sea water, the contents of which he poured into a pan, where it lay inert and lifeless. "Huh! that's funny," he said. "It must have died coming home."

Imperial Syncopators Present

Unique Chautauqua Programs

RARELY is an opportunity afforded to enjoy programs of such wide and pleasing variety as those offered by the Imperial Syncopators on the third day of the Community Chautauqua. This band of musicians through its annual tours and through its radio broadcasting, has become one of the country's most popular musical organizations. While the Imperial Syncopators specialize on modern American rhythmic music, the old tunes also receive their share of attention. One of the novel features of their program is what they call "Ye Olde Timers' Contest" in which a medley of old-time tunes are played and the members of the audience, using score cards previously distributed, mark the tunes that they recognize. A Community Chautauqua phonograph record is awarded to the person having the most nearly perfect score.

Another interesting feature of the program has been given the title "1861 vs 1925." In this number, songs of our fathers and grandfathers are contrasted and vie for popularity with the audience against the modern songs and tunes of today.

Many other novel features are included in the programs which are made more pleasing by the aid of special color lighting effects.

Beach Suits Reveal Gay "Futurist" Silks

Here is pictured another of those newly arrived beach suits of printed silk, that do so much toward making their wearers highly decorative parts of beach scenery. These pretty suits are not so revealing as the regulation swimming suit which follows the lines of the figure—whatever it may be—with merciless fidelity. Beach suits undertake with great success, to do a little flatter.

Among them have appeared the new "futuristic" silks, in vivid and beautiful colors, and the reader is referred to the picture for details of approved patterns. They are much mixed up as to design, and only the futurist can explain them, but why worry about explaining beauty? Often short black satin tunics are worn with the colorful overgarment.

CRIME FROM THE PHYSICIAN'S VIEWPOINT

DR. HENRY BLACKBURNS
HENRY Black Burns is a storyteller and a word picture painter of exceptional power. United States Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, expressed the opinion of the multitude when after hearing Dr. Burns he said, "He is the Evangelist of sane thinking." In his Chautauqua address this summer, "Chords and Discords," Dr. Burns is discussing modern crime—its cause and it's cure, from a physician's viewpoint.

Do you realize that disregard of law is growing more and more common? What are the reasons for such a state of affairs, and what does it portend? Are criminals born or made? In either case, is there a practical remedy? Or a solution of the criminal problem?

Dr. Burns is not an alarmist, but a man who is studying a problem and seeking a solution. He is not a pessimist but rather an "optimist who can keep his feet on the ground." His message is distinctly worth hearing.

Of Wartime Origin
The term "Anzac" as applied to the colonial soldiers of Great Britain during the World war, is formed from the initial letters of the words "Australian and New Zealand Army Corps." The phrase was used by General Birdwood in a telegram dispatched from the Gallipoli peninsula. Some have sought to interpret it as being composed of the initial letters of the British colonies—Australia, New Zealand, Africa and Canada.

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist. Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water
Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; and to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.
