Fire Destroys Dwelling & Contents

The dwelling on Bowen's Addition, known as the former Tom Barber place was destroyed by fire at an early hour Friday morning of last week.

The building was owned by the Peoples State Savings Bank of this city. Charles Case of Boyne City had just rented the house and on Thursday moved his household goods into same. He was alone in the house at the time of the fire, which evidently originated from a defective stove pipe.

Both the building and household goods were insured. Mr. Case taking out insurance on his effects that Thursday morning.

Governor Grants Reprieve To Scott On Eve Of Execution

Chicago—Governor Len Small has granted Russell Scott, condemned to hang for the murder of Joseph Maurer, a reprieve of one week. The governor was said to have taken the action on the recommendation of Will Colvin, head of the board of pardons and paroles, after a mysterious message was received from Detroit, purporting to come from Robert Scott, brother of Scott, in which it was stated Robert was the guilty man, and that he was ready to give himself up.

The reprieve came at the very eleventh hour when all hope for Scott seemed dead, when he himself and his relatives, his wife, and his father, had given up all hope.

It was understood Governor Small decided, following receipt of the message from Detroit to take no chances of a miscarriage of justice and he then ordered the delay, pending investigation of the message.

Shepherd Wins Probate Fight

Chicago—The fight to keep from probate the will of William Nelson McClintock, millionaire orphan, leaving his million dollar estate to William Darling Shepherd, his foster father, who was recently acquitted of his murder, is apparently ended.

The termination of the fight as far as probate of the instrument is concerned, came when attorneys for McClintock's nine Iowa cousins who are contesting the will, refused to question Shepherd within the limits defined by Probate Judge Henry Horner.

Petain Goes To Morocco

Paris—Marshal Petain has been ordered to Morocco. The country realizes the importance of the decision of the government to send the man who once commanded the whole French army during the great war to confer with the resident general, Marshal Lyautey. The military gains of Abel-el-Krim are causing much worry for the French chiefs at the front.

Like Premier Painleve, on his recent visit to the front, General Petain flew from Toulouse to Rabat.

Gold Rush In Siberia

Stockholm—The rush to the new gold fields in Aldan Yakutsk is so great, according to a miner newly returned from eastern Siberia, that the old Amur fields are practically deserted. The new fields are situated 400 miles north of the Amur railway.

A ship's captain, an engineer, a steward and a few others came over from Ohkotsk in 1923 and struck rich alluvial soil.

Planes Frighten Samoans

San Diego, Cal.—The island government of American Samoa is in temporary difficulties with the natives as a result of American aircraft activities during the visit of the battle fleet. The appearance of airplanes inspecting Pago Pago and nearby islands sent the terrorized natives into hiding in the bush and many villages were broken up.

Asks Million Now

Detroit—Mrs. Doris Mercer Kresge, second wife of Sebastian S. Kresge, has reduced the amount of her claim against the five-and-ten cent store according to word from New York. King from $7,000,000 to $1,000,000. An amended bill of complaint, embodying the figure, has been filed in court by her attorney.

Tuskegee Gets Donation

New York—A million dollars in securities has been turned over to the Hampton-Tuskegee endowment fund by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in fulfillment of a recent pledge. It was announced. Mr. Rockefeller's contribution swelled the fund to more than $4,500,000. The goal is $5,000,000.

Gasoline Trains on B.C.G. & A.R.

Expenses Being Cut To Minimum Says "Boyne Citizen"

On July 1st, the new gasoline propelled trains on the B. C. G. and A. R. commenced their summer schedule. Each of the trains was on time at each station. This performance proves their power to the satisfaction of owners and the traveling public also.

These cars will also provide suitable mail services here and across the state, which has slowed down for a year or more on account of the necessity of reducing the number of steam drawn trains.

With the rapidly diminishing supply of forest products from off the line of the B. C. G. and A. the management of the road found it necessary to reduce the train service which in turn reduced men in all departments or in other words, costs have been reduced to the minimum with the belief that the cost of operating the road would be met by its earnings.

W. H. White, president of the company, states that the road has suffered with all other roads by a loss of passenger business owing to the automobile and that much of the freight business, which helped support the road for many years, has been turned over to trucks, especially in the fair weather season, by the merchants of Boyne City. If the practice is to continue the north railroad cannot exist. It is generally known that the railroad must be supported by the business it finds to do. If there is not enough earned then it must stop running.

A crisis in the affairs of the B. C. G. and A. is the belief of many citizens, and the substitution of the gasoline cars for the more expensive steam drawn trains in the last reduction of expenses that can be made. If the road is worth having a move should be made immediately to call a public meeting and have the matter discussed. It would not take long, with all the facts fully understood to make an effort to keep the road in operation.—Boyne Citizen.

Steamship Is Junked

Historic Kansas, Familiar Ship
Locally—Dismantled.

Built in 1870, named Champlain, rebuilt in 1885 following disastrous fire just outside the port of Charlevoix, renamed the City of Charlevoix, later owned by the Michigan Transit Co. again renamed "Kansas," destroyed by fire, caused by defective wiring, less than one year ago at Manistee, the wreck sold to the Michigan Lumber Co., who in turn are now selling machinery and equipment piecemeal to purchasers, such is the synopsis of this steamship history covering a period of fifty-five years.

This old ship was constructed at a shipyard in Cleveland, Ohio, for the Central Vermont steamship lines and was placed in service on the run between Ogdensburg, N. Y., and Chicago as the Champlain and for fifteen years ran safely escaping accidents, even of a minor nature, incident to the shipping service until the memorable disaster a few miles off this port in 1885 when more than a score of lives were lost, nearly all residents of this city.

The Kansas entered and cleared from the port of Charlevoix thousands of times during her period of service and was known by every local citizen and by thousands of transients equally well.

She was known as a staunch, reliable ship and officers equally well known provided for the comfort of her passengers, and leaves a record unequalled in point of time and safety of any ship that has sailed the Great Lakes.

Her dimensions according to government registry shows as follows: Length 185.5 ft., breadth 33.3 ft., depth 12.6 ft., gross tons 835, net tons 588, horsepower 750.—Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Umpire Wins Game

Hands It To Traverse on Silver
Platter, Sunday.

The Traverse City-East Jordan base ball game here last Sunday went to Traverse City by a 2 to 0 score. Both teams were evenly matched and the contest was one of the best ever played on the home grounds.

In the third inning however, Umpire Day of Traverse City made a decision that robbed East Jordan of two runs. When the local team protested this decision the Traverse aggregation started to "pack up" and play the old game of threatening to "go home." Rather than disappoint the large crowd present the East Jordan management allowed the decision to stand.

In the third inning with Gunderson and H. Kamradt on bases, Gaines threw wild, the ball going to the back stop netting. Gunderson and Kamradt raced home only to be ordered back by Day who claimed the rules on the Traverse City diamond (which has no back-stop) only allowed one base on a passed ball. The Traverse team has played here many times in the past and this is the first time such a ruling has been made on the local diamond in games with Traverse City.

"Mutt and Jeff"

A treat is promised the amusement going public of East Jordan in the appearance in this city next Wednesday of Bud Fisher's cartoon comedy, "Mutt and Jeff," in Havana, a play that is a dramatized form of the newspaper cartoons that appeared in the leading papers throughout the country last summer.

This year is the first that Michigan has been played with the tent-show and the date for East Jordan has been set for Wednesday night, July 29th. The location of the tent will be on the West Side, in the usual place, where tent shows locate.

Got Idea Worth While

The saw is said to have been invented in ancient Rome by a man named Talus. He came upon the jawbone of a large snake, and employed it to cut through a piece of wood. He then formed an instrument of iron similar to the snake's jawbone and this was the first metal saw. Sawmills came into existence in central Europe early in the Fifteenth century.

Newspaper Code

The Southern newspaper Publishers' association agrees that a newspaper's first duty is to print the news honestly and fairly to all, unbiassed even by its own editorial policy, and expands that principle in the following code:

"Recognizing honest differences of opinion exist, we may vigorously maintain our own position without denouncing others as dishonest and unfair.

"Decency should be the guiding star in the printing of news, editorials, advertising and all feature articles or demonstrations.

"Is it fit to print and to be read by my own mother? should be the test rather than will it sell more papers?"

"Consideration for the unfortunate and for guiltless victims of the faults of others.

"No story justifies needless damage to a good reputation nor wanton pain to an innocent.

"Respect and tolerance for those of different regions, races and circumstances of life.

"Honesty in all dealings, whether with readers, advertisers, employees or competitors.

"Truth first, last and always."

The best thing about this code is the larger number of newspapers already living up to it.

To appreciate this modern journalism critics should hark back to "the good old days" of personal journalism and bitter partisanship, and observe the amazing growth not only in completeness of news reporting but in the spirit of fairness and tolerance with which the news is handled.

"With Tears Streaming"

A wealthy New Yorker recently advertised for a "pretty, refined girl about fourteen years old" for adoption. The next day he was swamped with applications. It seems that years ago, he adopted two little girls, both of whom have been as well treated as money and kindness allowed. Subsequently, the man and his wife separated and each took one of the adopted children. The new offer is made in order to secure a playmate for his "child."

Many parents eagerly sought to give their child to the wealthy man and the first applicant was a mother who was willing to give up her daughter. Towards the end of the interview the rich man questioned the little girl and kindly asked her if she was willing to leave her mother. With tears streaming from her eyes, she shook her head. Some mother!

The rich man wishes a poor child because he believes she will be healthier and "do better in world affairs" than a rich child.

Abolishing War Profits

Bernard M. Baruch has given $250,000.00 for the study of the possibility of maintaining world peace by taking the profit out of war. In his opinion, based on his war experience the next national emergency ought to see the mobilization of materials and dollars as well as of man power.

General Pershing writes that "the knowledge on the part of the fighting men that there will be no war profiteering but that the entire nation was organized in every respect would be of inestimable value to the morale of the armies."

Mr. Owen D. Young suggests that there exists a possible contributing cause of war in the possible war profits of industry and says that an absence of such profit "would tend to repress that jingoism which encourages war and, if war were begun, to shorten rather than prolong it."

"We do not see where any remarks from us would strengthen the argument set out by these three eminent citizens of this Republic. We hope that our readers will remember the points made and that the next war in which this country engages will be a general service of patriotic people, including those on the home front as well as those in the trenches.

POULTRY DEMONSTRATION HEED ON JULY 14

The first of the series of a 3 day poultry school was held on July 14th at Arthur Guilds, Charlevoix. Attendance was 27 and represented all sections of the County. Mr. J. A. Hannah, Poultry Specialist, was present and conducted the school in his usual high capable manner.

Instead of having several 2 hr. demonstrations in the County as in the past we are giving the poultry farmers the benefit of 3 days instruction, at which times the subject of culling will be discussed and practiced in detail. Also Feeding, Housing, and Managing will be considered. In return each leader will put on a public demonstration in their respective communities so that the work will be within reach of all.

All poultry enthusiasts present were loud in their praise of the demonstration and are anxious to attend the next two meetings.

DAIRYMAN'S PICNIC WELL ATTENDED

The annual gathering of the Dairyman of the County was held July 15th, under ideal conditions. This year's picnic was sponsored by the Cow-testing Ass'n. and represents one added milestone to their list of accomplishments.

The crowd assembled at the Breezy Point farm at 10:00 o'clock fast time where practical judging demonstrations were conducted by Mr. J. C. Wells, Dairy Extension Specialist. First on a ring of four mature cows, then on a Sire, and lastly on a ring of three calves. The last was conducted for the benefit of the Charlevoix Boy's and Girl's Calf Club and attracted the praise of all present.

Promptly at 11:30 p. m. o'clock the caravan started for Whiting Park where the picnic dinner was well taken care of. The feature of the afternoon program was the talk by Mr. Wells. He drove home several things concerning dairying that will be of great benefit especially the value of Cow-testing work. The feed value of milk was emphasized, the importance of good feeding, the necessity of using good Sires, and the knowledge of being clean and sanitary with milk production.

Clarence Mullett, Cow-tester for the last two years gave an interesting talk on what the Cow-testing Ass'n. has accomplished for the members and what the Cow-tester does in his work.

The value of Cow-testing to the members was proven by testimonials that were given by Geo. Meggison, Charlevoix. Dr. Simmons of Loeb farm, Arthur Shepard of East Jordan, and Dan Swanson of East Jordan: all of who were strong in their praise of this type of work.

It was very gratifying to hear what the Bank of the County thought of dairying and their willingness to assist in the dairy program.

Glen Townsend, Pres. of the Bankers Ass'n. of the County voiced the sentiments of the banks in a highly capable manner. He assured us that they are for dairying, but emphasized the need of more business judgement among the farmers if they were going to succeed. They backed Calf Club work to the limit and henceforth will act as sponsors for the Club, as well as making it possible to have attractive premiums at the County Fair.

A fitting climax was the ball game after the program. Who won? No one knows, but oh what a game.

For All Trade

Forward looking merchants are now straining at the horizon in expectation of good business this fall. Most of them are buying stock in anticipation of the trade demands and many of them are equally alert in planning a definite advertising program. It is sufficient to say, that the wise advertiser will get the business.

In this connection, we wish to suggest to our local merchants that they cultivate a regular and persistent policy of advertising. It is much better to hammer everlasting at a buyer than to spurge a season's expenditure in one or two supreme efforts. Keep your name in print and you will bring customers to your store. If you have the goods and the prices you will make sales, but the function of advertising for local stores is to attract customers only; the stock and the prices must be right in order to sell them.

Four Arrested With Two Trucks of Brewery Junk

East Jordan Men Taken In Petoskey, Friday A. M.

(Petoskey News, July 17.)

A sensational arrest of four men wanted for stealing old iron, machinery and engine room parts from the old brewery building, north of the city took place at 2 o'clock Friday morning on the streets of Petoskey. Sheriff Carpenter and Police Officer Kurtz apprehended four men aboard two trucks and soon had the men in jail and the two trucks loaded with junk in the Sly garage.

Officers say the four men admit having taken the junk from the old brewery building, from which much valuable brass, copper and iron fittings have been missed from time to time in the last year.

The men taken were Lance Kemp, 32; Ira Olney 28; Ray Olney 23; Archie Olney 21, of East Jordan.

The men were discovered working at the plant by Frank E. Hazelton, who was at his new home at the intersection of highways M11 and M13. Mr. Hazelton was unable to get connections with the Sheriff's home here, and called Angus Fochtman, who drove in by another route and informed the officers.

The property is owned by the Petoskey Brewing Company.

Reports from autoists who passed during the late night are that several touring cars were seen leaving the ground shortly before the trucks pulled out.

It is believed officers will make a search at East Jordan and other places for copper and brass parts of the brewery equipment, engines, etc., which have been stolen within the last few months.

The brewery building was practically destroyed by fire some time ago.

Held for trial in Emmet county circuit court the four young men who were apprehended by Sheriff Carpenter and Police Officer Kurtz in this city Thursday night, are being held in the county jail until they can secure bail. The four are charged for the theft of boiler and machinery parts from the old brewery building and their two trucks, with the cargo aboard, are being held as evidence. Taken before Judge Montgomery Thursday they waived examination and after being questioned by the prosecuting attorney Wade B. Smith, were held for trial. The young men say they were enroute home from the northern Peninsula when they decided to take on the loads of stuff from the Brewery. Bail was fixed at $1,000 for each man, with two signers necessary on each bond.

May Take Seed Crop Of Alfalfa In State

A chance for many farmers of the state to harvest a profitable alfalfa crop this year, if they see fit to let part of the second crop go for seed, is shown by observations made throughout the state by members of the crops department at Michigan State College.

"Conditions so far have been excellent for the development and pollination of the alfalfa flower," says Prof. J. F. Cox, of the college staff. "If the same condition continues, a heavy set of seed should develop where the alfalfa is not cut for hay.

"Many alfalfa growers find it profitable to allow part of their alfalfa acreage to make a seed crop, Michigan grown seed has met with unusual favor during the past few years and is in strong demand, particularly the Grimm Hardigan and the LeBeau varieties.

"The second crop should be cut for seed when fifty to seventy-five per cent of the seed pods are brown. After curing for a week or ten days, or longer, it is ready for threshing, using the ordinary clover huller with alfalfa seed screens.

"Yields of from one to five bushels per acre are secured. Under favorable conditions, an average yield of three bushels of seed can be expected. The straw secured from threshing makes excellent roughage for cattle feeding.

"Dry weather at blooming time usually favors seed production, and to date general seasonal conditions would lead us to expect an unusually favorable alfalfa seed year for Michigan.

"The clover seed crop of the state will undoubtedly be short; hence, wherever alfalfa shows a promise of setting seed it should prove a dependable crop."

And then just as the tension was becoming unbearable there came the interruption. Outside in the passage, clear and distinct, there sounded twice the hoot of an owl. To Mr. Latter it meant nothing; to the frightened little Jew it meant nothing; but on the count the effect was electrical. With a quickness incredible in one so deformed he was at the door, and into the passage, hurling Cohen out of his way into a corner. His powerful fists were clenched by his side; the veins in his neck were standing out like whipcord. But to Mr. Latter's surprise he made no movement, and rising from his chair he too peered round the door along the passage, only to stagger back after a second or two with a feeling of sick fear in his soul, and a sudden dryness in the throat. For twenty yards away, framed in the doorway at the head of the stairs leading down to the office below, he had seen a huge, motionless figure. For a perceptible time he had stared at it, and it had seemed to stare at him. Then the door had shut, and on the other side a key had turned. And the figure had been draped from head to foot in black.

Charles Latter was immoral rather than cowardly: he was a constitutional coward with a strong liking for underhand intrigue, and he was utterly and entirely selfish. In his way he was ambitious; he wanted power, but, though in many respects he was distinctly able, he lacked that essential factor—the ability to work for it. He hated work; he wanted easy results. And to obtain lasting results is not easy, as Mr. Latter gradually discovered. A capability for making flashy speeches covered, with a veneer of cleverness is an undoubted asset, but it is an asset the value of which has been gauged to a nicety by the men who count. And so as time went on, and the epoch-making day when he had been returned to parliament faded into the past, Mr. Latter realized himself for what he was—a thing of no account. And the realization was as gall and wormwood to his soul. It is a realization which comes to many men, and it takes them different ways. Some become resigned—some make new and even more futile efforts: some see the humor of it, and some don't. Mr. Latter didn't; he became spiteful. And a spiteful coward is a nasty thing.

It was just about that time that he met Count Zadowna. It was at dinner at a friend's house, and after the ladies had left he found himself sitting next to the hunchback with the strange, piercing eyes. He wasn't conscious of having said very much; he would have been amazed had he been told that within ten minutes this charming foreigner had read his unpleasant little mind like a book, and had reached a certain and definite decision. In fact, looking back on the past few months, Mr. Latter was at a loss to account as to how things had reached their present pass. Had he been told when he stood for parliament, flaunting all the old hackneyed formulae, that within two years he would be secretly engaged in red-hot Communist work, he would have laughed the idea to scorn. Anarchy, too: a nasty word, but the only one that fitted the bomb outrage in Manchester, which he had himself organized. Sometimes in the night, he used to wake and lie sweating as he thought of that episode.

And gradually it had become worse and worse. Little by little the charming Count Zadowna, realizing that Mr. Latter possessed just those gifts which he could utilize to advantage, had ceased to be charming. There were many advantages in having a member of parliament as chief liaison officer.

There had been that first small slip when he signed a receipt for money paid him to address a revolutionary meeting in South Wales during the coal strike. And the receipt specified the service rendered. An unpleasant document in view of the fact that his principal supporters in his constituency were coal-owners. And after that the descent had been rapid.

CHAPTER IV

In Which a Bomb Bursts at Unpleasantly Close Quarters

It was perhaps because the thought of failure never entered Hugh Drummond's head that such a considerable measure of success had been possible up to date—that, and the absolute, unquestioning obedience which he demanded of his pals, members of the Black Gang, and which they accorded him willingly. As they knew, he laid no claims to brilliance; but as they also knew, he hid a very shrewd common sense beneath his frivolous manner. And having once accepted the sound military truisms that one indifferent general is better than two good ones, they accepted his leadership with unwavering loyalty. What was going to be the end of their self-imposed fight against the pests of society did not worry them greatly; all that mattered was that there should be a certain amount of sport in the collection of the specimens. Granted the promise of that, they willingly sacrificed any engagements and carried out Hugh's orders to the letter. Up to date, however, the campaign, though far from being dull, had not produced any really big results. A number of sprats and a few moderate-sized fish had duly been caught in the landing-net, and been sent to the private pool to meditate at leisure. But nothing really large had come their way. Zaboloff was a good haul. But the Black Gang, which aimed merely at the repression of terrorism by terrorism, had found it too easy. The nauseating cowardice of the majority of their opponents was becoming monotonous, their strong aversion to soap and water, insanitary. They wanted big game—not the rats that emerged from the sewers.

Even Drummond had begun to feel that patriotism might be carried too far, until the moment when the address in Hoxton had fallen into their hands. Then, with the optimism that lives eternal in the hunter's breast, fresh hope had arisen in his mind. He had determined on a bigger game. If it failed—if they drew blank—he had almost decided to chuck the thing up altogether. Phyllis, he knew, would be overjoyed if he did. "Just this one final coup, old girl," he said, as they sat waiting in the Carlton for the awe-inspiring relatives. "I've got it cut and dried, and it comes off tonight. If it's a dud, we'll dissolve ourselves—at any rate, for the present. If only—"

He sighed, and his wife looked at him reproachfully. "I know you want another fight with Petersen, you old goat," she remarked. "But you'll never see him again, or that horrible girl." "Don't you think I shall, Phyl?" He stared despondently at his shoes. "I can't help feeling myself that somewhere or other behind all this that cheery bird is lurking. My dear, it would be too ghastly if I never saw him again." "The next time you see him, Hugh," she answered quietly, "he won't take any chances with you."

"But, my angel child," he boomed cheerfully. "I don't want him to. Not on your life! Nor shall I, Good Lord! Here they are. Uncle Timothy looks more like a mangel-wurzel than ever." And so at nine-thirty that evening, a party of five men sat waiting in a small sitting-room of a house situated in a remote corner of South Kensington. Some easels stood round the walls covered with half-finished sketches, as if it were a room belonging to a budding artist such as Toby Sinclair. Not that he was an artist or even a budding one, but he felt that a man must have some excuse for living in South Kensington. And so he had bought the sketches and put them round the landlady. The fact that he was never there except at strange hours merely confirmed that excellent woman's opinion that all artists were dissolute rascals. But he paid his rent regularly, and times were hard, especially in South Kensington. Had the worthy soul known that her second best sitting-room was the rendezvous of this Black Gang, it is doubtful if she would have been so complacent. But she didn't know, and continued her weekly dusting of the sketches with characteristic zeal.

"Ted should be here soon," said Drummond, glancing at his watch. "I hope he's got the bird all right." "You didn't get into the inner room, did you, Hugh?" said Peter Darrell. "No. But I saw enough to know that it's beyond our form, old lad. We've got to have a skilled crackman to deal with one of the doors—and almost certainly anything important will be in a safe inside."

"Just run over the orders again," Toby Sinclair came back from drawing the blinds even more closely together. "Perfectly simple," said Hugh. "Ted and I and Ginger Martin—if he's got him—will go straight into the house through the front door. I know the geography of the place all right, and I've already laid out the caretaker clerk fellow once. Then we must trust to luck. There shouldn't be anybody there except the little blighter of a clerk. The rest of you will hang about outside in case of any trouble. Don't bunch together, keep on the move; but keep the doors in sight. When you see us come out again, make your own way home. Can't give you any more detailed instructions because I don't know what may turn up. I shall rig myself out here, after Ted arrives. You had better go to your own rooms and do it, but wait first to make sure that he's roped in Ginger Martin." He glanced up as the door opened and Jerry Seymour—scientific of the R. P. G.—put his head into the room. "Ted's here, and he's got the bird all right. Unpleasant-looking bloke with a flattened face." "Right," Drummond rose, and crossed to a cupboard. "Clear off, you fellows. Zero—twelve midnight." From the cupboard he pulled a long black cloak and mask, which he proceeded to put on, while the others disappeared with the exception of Jerry Seymour, who came into the room. He was dressed in livery like a chauffeur, and he had, in fact, been driving the car in which Ted had brought Ginger Martin.

"Any trouble?" asked Drummond. "No. Once he was certain Ted had nothing to do with the police he came like a bird," said Jerry. "The fifty quid did it." Then he grinned. "You know Ted's a marvel. I'll defy anybody to recognize him." Drummond nodded, and sat down at the table facing the door. "Tell Ted to bring him up. And I don't want him to see you, Jerry, so keep out of the light."

Undoubtedly Jerry Seymour was right with regard to Jerningham's make-up. As he and Martin came into the room, it was only the sudden start and cry on the part of the crook that made Drummond certain as to which was which.

"Bilme!" muttered the man, shrinking back as he saw the huge figure in black confronting him. "Wot's the game, guv'nor?"

"There's no game, Martin," said Drummond reassuringly. "You've been told what you're wanted for, haven't you? A little professional assistance tonight, for which you will be paid fifty pounds, is all we ask of you."

But Ginger Martin still seemed far from easy in his mind. "You're one of this 'ere Black Gang," he said suddenly, glancing at the door in front of which Jerningham was standing. Should he chance it and make a dash to get away? Fifty pounds are fifty pounds, but—He gave a little shiver as his eyes came round again to the motionless figure on the other side of the table.

"Quite correct, Martin," said the same reassuring voice. "And it's only because I don't want you to recognize me that I'm dressed up like this. We don't mean you any harm." The voice paused for a moment, and then went on again. "You understand that, Martin. We don't mean you any harm, unless—and once again there came a pause—"unless you try any monkey tricks. You are to do exactly as I tell you, without question and at once. If you do you will receive fifty pounds. If you don't—well, Martin, I have ways of dealing with people who don't do what I tell them."

There was silence while Ginger Martin fidgeted about, looking like a trapped animal. "What do yer want me to do, guv'nor?" he said at last.

"Open a safe amongst other things," answered Drummond. "Have you brought your tools and things?" "Yus—I've brought the outfit," muttered the other. "Where is the safe?" "Ere?"

"No, Martin, not here. Some distance away in fact. We shall start in about an hour. Until then you will stop in this room. You can have a whisky-and-soda, and my friend here will stay with you. He has a gun, Martin, so remember what I said. No monkey tricks." With fascinated eyes the crook watched the speaker rise and cross to an inner door. Standing he seemed more huge than ever, and Martin gave a sigh of relief as the door closed behind him.

The entrance to Number 5 Green street proved easier than Drummond had expected—so easy as to be almost suspicious. No lights shone in the windows above: the house seemed completely deserted. Moreover, the door into the street was unbolting, and without a moment's hesitation Drummond opened it and stepped inside, followed by Martin and Ted Jerningham. The long black cloak had been discarded; only the black mask concealed his face, as the three men stood inside the door, listening intently. Not a sound was audible, and after a moment or two Drummond felt his way cautiously through the downstairs office to

How this One-Profit Coach

is built by Studebaker on the sturdy STANDARD SIX CHASSIS

SUPERFICIALLY other coaches may resemble this Studebaker Standard Six, but the resemblance will not stand analysis.

Only two cars are made on a one-profit basis—Ford in the lowest price field and Studebaker in the fine car field. Only in these two cases are all bodies, engines, clutches, gear-sets, springs, differentials, steering gear and axles designed, engineered and manufactured by one company.

Contrast this with the average car, where the extra profits of many outside parts and body makers must be included in the purchase price.

These profits are part of the production cost of the car—the same as the steel and wood of the body. They do not buy materials nor workmanship—they do not make any car one whit better.

Studebaker has achieved one-profit manufacture through years of far-sighted management and through sacrifice on the part of stockholders. Earnings which might have been distributed have been retained in the business to build one of the largest gray iron foundries in the world, to erect stamping mills, forges, etc., to purchase the finest labor-saving machinery, to construct enormous body-building plants.

As a result, resources totaling one hundred million dollars are concentrated upon the production of one-profit automobiles such as this Standard Six Coach.

What does it mean to you?

To you, as an automobile buyer, this means:

1. A Lower Price.

2. A Better Car.

A LOWER PRICE, because Studebaker does not need to pile its profit upon the profits of outside parts manufacturers and body builders.

A BETTER CAR, because it is a thoroughly co-ordinated, harmonious unit. Every part designed, engineered and manufactured under one management, to work more efficiently with every other part.

A better car because Studebaker can afford to use finer upholstery, better steel, higher grades of lumber, more painstaking workmanship in hundreds of unseen places.

Scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation are built into every Studebaker. When the car which looked like an equal value while it was new, is breaking up, the Studebaker is breaking in.

That is why in Arizona—out where desert heat and rugged mountain trails test automobiles to the utmost—Studebaker sells double its normal portion of cars. Every county in Arizona which has bought an automobile for its sheriff has bought a Studebaker.

This coach is not a one year car. As a splendid example of the facts stated above, we offer the Standard Six Coach. To appreciate this car you must see it and ride in it. We urge you to do so immediately. It is called a coach, but is in reality a roomy five-passenger coupe.

It is a car that will give you faithful economical service. It is built to yield dependable, comfortable transportation for years and years.

Buy now—no more "yearly models"

This is the time of the year when men have hesitated to purchase an automobile, fearing that the car they bought in July would be made obsolete artificially by the announcement of new yearly models in August or September. Studebaker has discontinued the custom of presenting yearly models. Instead, Studebakers will be kept up to the minute in body styles and chassis design regardless of the calendar.

Come in NOW—and see this sturdy, dependable, one-profit Coach.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, say well-known druggists here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

The impossible has been accomplished, a car came nearly to the top of Hayden Heights but could not get up because of the want of gas, but Sunday evening Omar Scott and family of the Fire Tower motored to the top; now there is no reason for not improving this town road which would make a drive on three sides of Whiting Park and on the whole length on the East side. Now if the road across from East to West which is talked of for this year's improvement is made, nothing could be nicer.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Faust returned to Detroit Thursday after visiting their son, Elmer Faust and family at Hayden Park for ten days. While here they obtained the option of the Geo. Simmerman farm which they expect to buy very soon and occupy next spring.

Two letters received last week from Cash A. Hayden, dated May 29, Balavia Is. of Java, and the other Singapore, June 9, contains very interesting accounts of some of his experiences.

There were 80 at the Star of Hope Sunday School, July 19, after the regular session Dr. Vail of Oak Park, Ill., talked very interesting for a few minutes. Every one felt repaid for the effort to get there.

A very distressing accident occurred Thursday at the Will Sanderson farm. Mr. Sanderson was just finishing mowing and the team was almost stopped when Mrs. Sanderson's little nephew, Harry Hudson Jr., who with his mother and brothers, sisters, grand parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Mosley of Macon, Ga., are spending the summer, ran in front of the sickle bar to show his uncle a flower. The knives cut one half of an inch into the side of his ankle. Dr. Mosley gave first aid but did not have his instruments. The child was taken to Dr. Parks where it was dressed and has hopes the foot will not be stiff. Junior with his mother, is staying in East Jordan with Mrs. J. P. Seiler who is another sister of Mrs. Hudson's.

If I am rightly informed, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Leu, nee Fay Shepard are spending their honeymoon on a motor trip.

Ed. Stollard of Pleasant View farm Star Dist. has sold his farm in Mountain Dist.

Public Service Company To Connect Elk Rapids Line To One North.

The Michigan Public Service company announces the addition to its string of power plants through northern Michigan, of the Elk Rapids plant located in Elk Rapids, near Traverse City. Plans now include the instruction of a line to connect the Elk Rapids plant with the Cheboygan-Pellston line constructing a 33,000-volt transmission circuit. This will connect Boyne City, East Jordan, Ellsworth and Central Lake with the line running down the west side of the state which now ends near Bay View at Round Lake.

With the addition of the Elk Rapids plant, the line will be one of the longest in this part of Michigan and will supply unlimited power to the various cities along the route.

Lansing—The state administrative board released $50,000 of the $270,000 appropriation for a horticultural building at the Michigan State college.

Flint—The Detroit United Railway, which operates the street railway system here, has made a tentative offer to sell the railway to the city. The offer was in the form of an advertisement in a local newspaper.

Muskegon—Promoters for a new bank at Muskegon Heights announced a state charter would be applied for and that $40,000 of capital stock already had been subscribed. Stanley Risk, one of the promoters, said the bank probably would be opened within two months.

Muskegon—Many citizens thronged the city commission chamber recently to protest against the sale and removal of Pigeon Hill, largest of the Lake Michigan sand dunes. The dune has been purchased by private interests with the intention of removing it for commercial purposes.

Lansing—Investigation of the recent daring escapes from the branch prison at Marquette, in which Eddie Weisman, Isadore Londe, Vance Hardy and Joe Defflorio shot their way over the walls, was coupled with a report in the state capital that Warden James P. Corgan shortly would offer his resignation.

Negaunee—Puzzled as to how to proceed with the case of Fred Ross, 15 years old, charged with the murder of Joseph La Plante, Thomas Ciancny, prosecuting attorney of Marquette county, has telegraphed Attorney General Dougherty, asking for his interpretation of the state law, relating to minors charged with murder.

Jackson—When Edward E. Marshall, 28 years old, stepped through the gate at the prison where he had just completed a six months' sentence for passing a worthless check, he was placed under arrest by Sheriff R. V. Rogers, of Glasgow, Mont., on a charge of grand larceny. The sheriff and his prisoner have departed for Montana.

Lansing—Steps which may lead to the removal of all projecting signs, including expensive electrical displays, from the streets of Lansing were taken at a recent meeting of the Merchants' bureau here. It was voted to name a committee to visit all the merchants in an effort to obtain a "gentleman's agreement" to remove the signs.

Monroe—The city fire department is not to make any more runs outside of the corporate limits of Monroe unless such trips are sanctioned by the mayor and fire chief, the city commission decided. This action was taken largely because it was feared that the apparatus might be damaged on its runs into the country and the city would be in danger in case of fire.

In most Munch cats the tails are represented merely by a tuft of hair without any remnant of bone. City Attorney Fitch made an investigation and filed a complaint for violation of the city ordinance. The men pleaded guilty and heavy fines were imposed.—Charlevoix Courier.

ward the night of staffs that led to the rooms above.

In single file they crept up the stairs, Drummond leading. The door at the top was ajar, and for awhile they stood in the carpeted passage above listening again.

"Along this passage are the clerks' offices," he explained in a low voice to the other two. "At the far end is another door which we shall probably find locked. Beyond that is the inner office, which we want."

"Well, let's get on with it, guv'nor," muttered Ginger Martin hoarsely. "There's no good in 'angin' about." Drummond switched on his electric torch, and flashed it cautiously round. Doors leading off the passage were open in most cases, and all the rooms were empty; it was obvious that none of the staff were about. And yet he felt an indefinable sense of danger which he tried in vain to shake off.

Somehow or other, he felt certain that they were not alone—that there were other people in the house. But Ginger Martin had no such presentiments, and was rapidly becoming impatient. To open the door at the end of the passage, if it should prove to be locked, was such child's play as to be absolutely contemptible. He wanted to get on with the safe, which might take time, instead of fooling round in a passage listening for mice.

Without a sound, the crackman set to work; his coarse features outlined in the circle of the torch, his ill-kept fingers handling his instruments as deftly as any surgeon. A little oil here and there; a steady pressure with a short pointed steel tool; a faint click.

"There you are, guv'nor," he muttered, straightening up. "Easy as kiss yer 'and. And if yer waits till I find me glove I'll open it for yer; but Ginger Martin's finger-prints are too well known to run any risks."

Still no sound came from anywhere, though the click as the lock shot back had seemed horribly loud in the silence. And then, just as Martin cautiously turned the handle and pushed open the door, Drummond stiffened suddenly and switched off his torch. He could have sworn that he heard the sound of voices close by.

Only for a second—they were instantly silenced; but just for that fraction of time as the door opened he knew he had heard men speaking.

Once again the three men stood motionless, listening intently, but the sound was not repeated. Absolute silence reigned, broken only by the noise of their own breathing. And at last, after what seemed an interminable pause, Drummond switched on his torch again. The passage was empty; the door of the inner office was just in front of them. Almost he was persuaded that he must have made a mistake—that it had been his imagination. He peered through the keyhole: the room was in darkness. He turned the handle cautiously; the door gave to him; and still with his torch held well in front of him, he stepped into the room, turning the light into every corner. Not a trace of anyone; the inner office was absolutely empty. He flashed the light all round the walls, as far as he could see there was no other door—not even a window. Consequently the only way out was by the door through which they had just entered, which was obviously impossible for anyone to have done without his knowledge.

"It is all right!" he muttered, turning round to the other two. "Must have been my mistake. Now then, Ginger, let's tackle the big desk, first."

As he spoke he moved into the center of the room, his torch lighting up the big roll-top desk.

"Right-ho, guv'nor. Keep the beam on the keyhole."

The crook bent over his task, only to straighten up suddenly as all the lights went on.

"Yer d—d fool!" he snarled. "Switch 'em off! It ain't safe."

"I didn't put 'em on!" snapped Drummond.

"Nor I," said Jerningham. "For a moment or two no one spoke; then Ginger Martin made a wild dive for the door. But the door which had opened so easily a few moments before, now refused to budge, though he tugged at it, cursing horribly. And after a while he gave it up, and turned on Drummond like a wild beast.

"You've trapped me, yer—swine. I'll get even with you over this if I swing for it!"

But Drummond, to whom the presence of actual danger was as meat and drink, took not the slightest notice. His brain, ice-cold and clear, was moving rapidly. It had not been a mistake, he had heard voices—voices which came from that very room in which they now were. Men had been there—men who had got out by some other way. And Ginger Martin was trapped—all of them. More out of thoughtlessness than anything else, he brushed the swearing crook aside with the back of his hand—much as one brushes away a troublesome fly. And Martin, feeling as if he'd been kicked in the mouth by a horse, ceased to swear.

It was uncanny—devilish. The room empty, save for them, suddenly flooded with light. But by whom? Drummond felt they were being watched. But by whom? And then suddenly he heard Ted Jerningham's voice, low and tense.

"There's a man watching us, Hugh. I can see his eyes. In that big safe door."

Like a flash, Drummond swung round, and looked at the safe. Ted was right; he could see the eyes himself, and they were fixed on him with an expression of malignant fury, through a kind of opening that looked like the slit in a letter box. For a moment or two they remained there, staring at him, then they disappeared also, and seemed to become part of the door. And it was just as he was moving toward this mysterious safe to examine it closer that with a sudden clang, another opening appeared—one much larger than the first. He stopped involuntarily as something was thrown through—into the room—something which hissed and spluttered.

For a moment he gazed at it uncomprehendingly as it lay on the floor; then he gave a sudden, tense order.

"On your faces—for your lives!" His voice cut through the room like a knife. "Behind the desk, you fools! It's a bomb!"

CHAPTER V

In Which the Bag of Nuts Is Found by Accident

It was the desk that saved Drummond, and with him Ted Jerningham. Flat on their faces, their arms covering their heads, they lay on the floor waiting, as in days gone by they had waited for the bursting of a too-near crump. They heard Ginger Martin, as he blundered round the room, and then—suddenly it came.

There was a deafening roar, and a sheet of flame which seemed to fill the room. Great lumps of the ceiling rained down and the big roll-top desk cracked in places and splintered into matchwood, fell over on top of them. But it had done its work; it had borne the full force of the explosion in their direction. As a desk it was past; it had become a series of holes roughly held together by fragments of wood.

So much Drummond could see by the aid of his torch. With the explosion all the lights had gone out,

They were at the back of the house in some deserted mews, and rapidity of movement was clearly indicated. Already a crowd was hurrying to the scene of the explosion, and slipping quietly out of the dark alley, they joined in themselves.

"Go home, Ted," said Drummond. "I must get the others."

"Right, old man." He made no demur, but just vanished quietly, while his leader slouched on toward the front door of 5 Green street. The police were already beating on it, while a large knot of interested spectators giving gratuitous advice stood around them. And in the crowd Drummond could see six of his gang, six anxious men who had determined—police or no police—to get upstairs and see what had happened. In one and all their minds was a sickening fear, that the man they followed had at last bitten off more than he could chew—that they'd find him blown to pieces in the mysterious room upstairs.

And then, quite clear and distinct above the excited comments of the crowd, came the hooting of an owl. A strange sound to hear in a London street, but no one paid any attention. Other more engrossing matters were on hand, more engrossing that is to all except the six men who instantaneously swung half round as they heard it. For just a second they had a glimpse of a huge figure standing in the light of a lamp post on the other side of the street—then it disappeared. And with astonishing celerity they followed its example. Whoever had been hurt it was not Drummond; and that, at the moment, was all they were concerned with.

By devious routes they left the scene of the explosion—each with the same goal in his mind. And within an hour six young men, shorn of all disguise and clad in immaculate evening clothes, were admitted to Drummond's house in Brook street by a somewhat sleepy Denny.

They found Hugh arrayed in a gorgeous dressing gown with a large tankard of beer beside him, and his wife sitting on the arm of his chair.

"What happened, old lad?" asked Peter Darrell.

"I got handed the frozen mitten. I asked for bread, and they put across a half-brick. To be absolutely accurate we got into the room all right; and having got in we found we couldn't get out. Then some one switched on the light and bunged a bomb at us through a hole in the door. Quite O. K., old girl!—he put a reassuring arm round Phyllis' waist—"I think we'd be still there if they hadn't."

"Is Ted all right?" asked Toby Sinclair.

"Yes, Ted's all right. Got a young load of bricks in his back when the ceiling came down—but he's all right. It's the other poor devil—Ginger Martin." His face was grim and stern, and the others waited in silence for him to continue.

"There was a big desk in the room, and the bomb fell on one side of it. Ted and I gave our well-known impersonation of an earthworm on the other, which saved us. Unfortunately Ginger Martin elected to run round in small circles and curse. And he will curse no more."

"Dead?" Peter Darrell's voice was low.

"Very," answered Drummond quietly. "The poor blighter was blown to pieces. If he'd done what I told him he wouldn't have been, but that's beside the point. He was working for me, and he was killed while he was doing so. And I don't like that happening."

"What do you propose to do?" demanded Jerry Seymour.

"Well, there, old son, at the moment you have me beat," conceded Hugh. "I sort of figured it out this way. Whoever the bird is who bunged that bomb, he recognized me as being the leader of our little bunch. I mean it was me he was staring at through the door, with eyes bubbling over with tenderness and love. It was me that bally bomb was intended for—not Ginger Martin, though he was actually doing the work. And if this cove is prepared to wreck his own office just to get me out of the way—I guess I must be somewhat unpopular."

"The reasoning seems extraordinarily profound," murmured Peter.

"Now the great point is—does he know who I am?" continued Hugh. "Our great difficulty before Zaboloff was kind enough to present us with the address of their headquarters was to get in touch with the man at the top. And now the headquarters are no more. No man can work in an office with periodical bowlders falling on his head from the roof, and a large hole in the wall just behind him. I mean there's no privacy about it. And so—unless he knows me—he won't be able to carry on the good work when he finds that neither of my boots has reached the top of St. Paul's. We shall be perted again—which is dreadful to think of. Why, we might even pass one another in the street as complete strangers."

"I get you," said Peter. "And you don't know him."

"Not well enough to call him Bertie. There's a humpbacked blighter up there who calls himself a count, and on whom I focused the old optic for about two seconds the other evening. But whether he's the humorist who bunged the bomb or not is a different matter." He glanced up as the door opened. "What is it, Denny?"

"I found this bag, sir, in the pocket of the coat you were wearing tonight." His servant came into the room carrying the chamols leather bag, which he handed to Drummond.

The door closed behind him, and Hugh stared thoughtfully at the bag in his hand.

"What's that?"

Right in the center of the beam, lying in the middle of the floor, was a small chamols leather bag. It seemed unhurt, and, without thinking, Hugh picked it up and put it in his pocket. Then switching off the torch, they both clambered through the hole, dropped on to a lean-to roof, and reached the ground.

For just a second they had a glimpse of a huge figure standing in the light of a lamp post on the other side of the street—then it disappeared. And with astonishing celerity they followed its example. Whoever had been hurt it was not Drummond; and that, at the moment, was all they were concerned with.

By devious routes they left the scene of the explosion—each with the same goal in his mind. And within an hour six young men, shorn of all disguise and clad in immaculate evening clothes, were admitted to Drummond's house in Brook street by a somewhat sleepy Denny.

"What happened, old lad?" asked Peter Darrell.

"I got handed the frozen mitten. I asked for bread, and they put across a half-brick. To be absolutely accurate we got into the room all right; and having got in we found we couldn't get out. Then some one switched on the light and bunged a bomb at us through a hole in the door. Quite O. K., old girl!—he put a reassuring arm round Phyllis' waist—"I think we'd be still there if they hadn't."

"Is Ted all right?" asked Toby Sinclair.

"Yes, Ted's all right. Got a young load of bricks in his back when the ceiling came down—but he's all right. It's the other poor devil—Ginger Martin." His face was grim and stern, and the others waited in silence for him to continue.

"There was a big desk in the room, and the bomb fell on one side of it. Ted and I gave our well-known impersonation of an earthworm on the other, which saved us. Unfortunately Ginger Martin elected to run round in small circles and curse. And he will curse no more."

"Dead?" Peter Darrell's voice was low.

"Very," answered Drummond quietly. "The poor blighter was blown to pieces. If he'd done what I told him he wouldn't have been, but that's beside the point. He was working for me, and he was killed while he was doing so. And I don't like that happening."

"What do you propose to do?" demanded Jerry Seymour.

"Well, there, old son, at the moment you have me beat," conceded Hugh. "I sort of figured it out this way. Whoever the bird is who bunged that bomb, he recognized me as being the leader of our little bunch. I mean it was me he was staring at through the door, with eyes bubbling over with tenderness and love. It was me that bally bomb was intended for—not Ginger Martin, though he was actually doing the work. And if this cove is prepared to wreck his own office just to get me out of the way—I guess I must be somewhat unpopular."

"The reasoning seems extraordinarily profound," murmured Peter.

"Now the great point is—does he know who I am?" continued Hugh. "Our great difficulty before Zaboloff was kind enough to present us with the address of their headquarters was to get in touch with the man at the top. And now the headquarters are no more. No man can work in an office with periodical bowlders falling on his head from the roof, and a large hole in the wall just behind him. I mean there's no privacy about it. And so—unless he knows me—he won't be able to carry on the good work when he finds that neither of my boots has reached the top of St. Paul's. We shall be perted again—which is dreadful to think of. Why, we might even pass one another in the street as complete strangers."

"I get you," said Peter. "And you don't know him."

"Not well enough to call him Bertie. There's a humpbacked blighter up there who calls himself a count, and on whom I focused the old optic for about two seconds the other evening. But whether he's the humorist who bunged the bomb or not is a different matter." He glanced up as the door opened. "What is it, Denny?"

"I found this bag, sir, in the pocket of the coat you were wearing tonight." His servant came into the room carrying the chamols leather bag, which he handed to Drummond.

The door closed behind him, and Hugh stared thoughtfully at the bag in his hand.

"What's that?"

Right in the center of the beam, lying in the middle of the floor, was a small chamols leather bag. It seemed unhurt, and, without thinking, Hugh picked it up and put it in his pocket. Then switching off the torch, they both clambered through the hole, dropped on to a lean-to roof, and reached the ground.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water seals and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, can not injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN

Dayton, Tenn.—Branding the theory of evolution as without sufficient foundation and as tending to "rob children of their faith in God," W. J. Bryan is leading the forces of the state in its prosecution of John T. Scopes, high school teacher, for violation of the state law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the public schools.

The case has attracted national attention by reason of the prominent men who have entered the fight on both sides. One of the most brilliant legal battles in the history of the profession is expected.

Primate of Canada Dies

Quebec—Cardinal Beign, 89 years old, primate of the Catholic church in Canada, died after a week's illness. He was stricken with uremia on July 12 after he had laid the cornerstone of a new church in the arch diocese of Quebec. Improvement in his condition was reported by the attending physicians during the week. Later he became partly paralyzed and gradually sank.

The romantic rise of Louis Nazaire, Cardinal Beign, from the unpretentious surroundings of a Levis farmhouse, where he was born, to membership in the Sacred College of the Roman Catholic church is without parallel in the religious history of Canada.

Aviators Volunteer Services

Paris—A number of adventurous Americans, including some who saw service in the World war in the Lafayette escadrille, probably will soon be found fighting under the banner of the Sultan of Morocco.

For various reasons, the French war ministry has decided not to accept the volunteered services of the Americans for service in the French army, but the ministry is arranging for the Americans to see service under the Sultan of Morocco. It is understood the Americans have agreed to this program.

Anti-Evolution Bill for U. S.

Dayton, Tenn.—An anti-evolution bill following the spirit, if not the letter of the Tennessee law under which John T. Scopes is being prosecuted is expected to be introduced in the next congress by Representative J. Will Taylor, of this state, or Representative W. Upshaw, of Georgia.

The leader in the movement for proscription of the doctrine of evolution is Walter White, superintendent of schools in Rhea county, and the chief prosecuting witness against the young high school teacher.

Doheny Interests Appeal

Los Angeles—Attorneys for the Pan-American Petroleum company and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, E. L. Doheny concerns, took an appeal to the United States appellate court at San Francisco from his decision in the Elk Hill oil cases.

The court ordered the companies to pay the government approximately $350,000 as a result of balancing accounts between the government and the Doheny concerns.

Four Killed in Gang War

Chicago—Guns blazed again in Chicago, bringing death to four men, three of them outlaws. Two others were seriously wounded, and they lie close to death.

In two of the gun battles, the victims were killed by policemen, who are following recent orders to shoot first and ask questions afterward. One of the men killed was a gangster known as the enemy of the notorious Genna brothers.

Blast Perils Many

Chicago—Hundreds were panic stricken and a whole north side section of the city was shaken when a gasoline barge of the Texas company on which were 90,000 gallons, exploded with a terrific and terrifying blast and a roar of flames which leaped 400 feet into the air.

The fire was checked, however, without doing much damage to other property.

"Lively Ball" Gets O.K.

New York—The National League managers in executive session agreed to continue the use of the present so-called lively baseball despite the epidemic of home run hitting which has been raging in the major leagues.

MEXICO SIGNS POST PAID

Washington—A postal convention providing for the exchange of collection-delivery parcels between the United States and Mexico, effective August 1st, has been signed by Mexico and is awaiting the signature of President Coolidge.

HEADS NAVAL WAR COLLEGE

Washington—Rear Admiral R. Pratt who is in command of the fourth battleship division has been selected to command the naval war college, at Newport, R. I. Orders assigning him to that post are expected to be issued upon the return of Secretary Wilbur to Washington next month.

ALIEN LAW IS BENEFIT

New York—The first year of the new immigration law, providing for selection overseas, resulted in far less congestion at Ellis Island, more humane conditions, more intelligent examinations, less discomfort and fewer deportations, according to Henry H. Curran, immigration commissioner at the island.

BARONESS KILLED BY FALL

New York—Baroness Helen Zur Muehlen, of Java, Dutch East Indies, was killed by a fall from a window on the seventh floor of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The Baroness, who was about 28 years old, was Helen Carruthers, of New York, before her marriage. The Baron is at present in Java, where he expected to be joined by his wife.

FOX BUYS COAST THEATRES

Los Angeles—Sales of the interest of Adolph Ramish in the West Coast Theatres, Inc., comprising 120 playhouses throughout California, to the William Fox Corporation, was announced here by representatives of M. Gore, president of the organization. No figure was stated. The estimated value of the theatres involved is approximately $18,000,000.

AIR COMMITTEE FORMED

Washington—Developments of air transportation took another step forward with the appointment of a public relations committee, headed by Will H. Hays, former postmaster general. This announcement was made by Howard E. Coffin, president of the National Air Transport, Inc., the new $10,000,000 commercial air line to be inaugurated this fall between New York and Chicago, with an overnight package freight service between those points.

CRITICISM

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

IT IS surprising how many things and people one may discover to find fault with if one cultivates the proper frame of mind. It takes neither genius nor unusual intelligence to detect error or discover imperfections. In fact, I have sometimes thought that the more imperfect the critic the more likely he is to see the shortcomings and the weaknesses of others rather than to be impressed with their admirable qualities. Where one man begins to accuse another of trickery and falsifying, I have not infrequently had my own suspicions. I have never known a man found guilty of stealing who did not think the practice of theft quite common, if not universal among his fellows.

Most of the criticism which we hear every day of individuals and of organizations is offered with the mistaken idea that it reveals superior knowledge, a keener intellect, and a better judgment, and a keener insight into human nature than that ordinarily shown. The fellow who criticizes the member of the basket ball team who falls in making a basket, or the minister whose sermon is not up to standard, or the government or college official who is not running public or educational affairs to his liking, usually does so in a way to give the impression that he knows a tremendous lot about basket ball, or public speaking, or political or college matters, and that if he would only take a hand in any one of these activities, he could show the public a thing or two. There is no form of conceit so colossal as that shown by the self-constituted critic.

Most of the criticism we hear is entirely destructive. It preys upon the weaknesses and frailties of human beings, without trying in any way to remedy them.

Eager as we are to criticize others, very few of us accept criticism of ourselves willingly or react to it logically. If you indicate to the boss at the breakfast table that the coffee is cold or the biscuits underdone, she very likely meets the criticism by asking sarcastically if you posted the letter which she gave you yesterday, or by reaching across and picking a bunch of lint from your coat collar. It is the same principle which accuses the small boy, who, when caught in a lie and accused of it, meets the accusation by telling his accuser that he is "another."

We criticize too much, both private and public individuals; we take personal criticisms badly.

It appears that we must look to blouses for the required touch of color in suits this fall and that blouses will donate color notes that are soft and light. New arrivals are shown in pastel shades, to be worn with formal or semiformal suits in black or navy blue. These blouses are usually encircled with some embroidery in tapestry colors and the tapestry effect is enhanced by the introduction of gold thread among the colors. The long sleeve and higher neckline, as sponsored by the mode in dresses, have been taken up by blouses, with what good effect may be gathered from the blouse illustrated.

Die at Heine's Grave
Heine, famous German poet, lies buried in Montmartre cemetery. His tomb is the mecca of many love-sick French people. Police records show that every year at least twenty suicides are committed at his grave by unlucky lovers. This year, the number having exceeded the usual average, the police have decided to station a policeman at the grave to prevent young people from taking their lives there.

Cartier, the Pioneer
The first effort to cultivate the soil of Canada was made by the discoverer, Jacques Cartier, who, in 1541, had an acre of land cleared near where Quebec now stands, and had it planted with turnips, cabbage and lettuce seeds. The first public garden was Adam's garden in Halifax, N. S., established in 1783. The present public gardens in Halifax are the pride of the city and the admiration of all visitors.
