R. N. Holsaple To Speak At Methodist Church

R. N. Holsaple, superintendent of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league is to speak at the Methodist church here next Monday evening commencing at 7:00 o'clock on "Prohibition Law Enforcement and Observance." Mr. Holsaple carries with him on this trip into northern Michigan the greatest temperance film ever released, "Lest We Forget" as part of the program at the church, he will show this spectacular movie.

"Lest We Forget" is a filming of the story written by Dr. Jas. K. Shields author of "The Stream of Life" and "A Maker of Men." The film is based on actual happenings in the experience of Dr. Shields. Drama and tragedy are combined to remind those who see it of the days of the saloon and the evils swarmed about it. It is one of the most forceful arguments for temperance and prohibition, and at the same time one of the most interesting films, to ever be shown on a movie screen.

Passing of Aged Citizen At Boyne City

J. P. Ekstrom an old time resident of this part of the county was taken by death in the hospital at Charlevoix Monday morning. The deceased was born in Stockholm, Sweden, May 26, 1847 and was therefore 78 years of age. He came to this country in 1866 and located in Chicago. On June 21, 1871 he was united in marriage in Chicago to Miss Caroline Hurtig of Gottenburg, Sweden, who died Aug. 7, 1902. On May 10, 1904 he was united in marriage in Chicago to Miss Augusta Dahl of Gradedstad, Sweden. The family moved to their farm home near Boyne City in 1888. There were seven children born to the first union, five of whom are living, Emmanuel G. Ekstrom, John L. Ekstrom, both of Boyne City, and Joseph G. Ekstrom of New Carlisle, Indiana, Mrs. Edna House of this city and Mrs. Ruth Kotesky of Horton Bay together with his widow, Mrs. Augusta D. Ekstrom.

Ill health for a number of years gave the family and friends notice of his weakening condition. He was taken to the hospital last Wednesday.

Funeral was held at 2 p. m., Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank House in this city, conducted by Rev. C. W. Sidebotham, pastor of the East Jordan Presbyterian Church, of which church Mr. Ekstrom has been a member for many years. Interment was in Sunset Hill, East Jordan.—Boyne Citizen.

Evolution and Women

The Roumanian Minister to Washington, Prince Antonie Bibesco, is by no means a fool. While many have been trying to decide whether men evolved from monkeys, or were created from dust, the Roumanian Prince comes forward with the opinion that "it has been left to America to produce women both beautiful and brilliant," and, regardless of the evolution of our men, "the American women must have come from Heaven."

This entitles the Prince to one half of the votes of the voting population. You can guess which half.

Marquette—The state prison commission is searching for some more effective way of keeping criminals within the walls of the branch prison here. A plan to place a high voltage wire fence along the top of the present prison wall is being considered, according to Alton T. Roberts, a member of that body. Construction of a sharply barbed overhanging fence also has been suggested. Governor Groesbeck is insisting that something be done and the commission is to act at once.

Menominee—Ruth Silvernale, 18 years old, a student at Northwestern University and a daughter of John L. Silvernale, superintendent of the Menominee schools, and Wellaley McCormick, 18 years old, a student at Culver Military academy, and a son of G. W. McCormick, president of the Menominee River Sugar Co., were rescued from drowning when their sail-rigged cat-boat tipped over a mile from shore here. The rescue was effected by members of the crew of the U. S. gunboat Wilmington.

Advertising is a good thing if you have something to sell at an attractive price.

At Last They Have Agreed

Owosso — Although three new school have been built here in the last three years, Owosso's school tax rate will be lower for 1924-25 than in 1921-22, the budget adopted by the city commission reveals. The rate will be $15.16 on each $1,000 of assessed valuation, against $17.39 in 1921-22. The budget totals $250,000, or $25,000 less than that of last year.

Lansing—Permission has been given a voting machine company to install three of its machines in city precincts for a test at the next election. It was announced at the city hall. One of the machines has been in the city hall for some months to allow citizens an opportunity to inspect it. If the machines prove satisfactory, it is expected they will be installed throughout the city.

Lansing—No charter hereafter will be granted by the State Department to any proposed new building and loan association which does not capitalize for $1,000,000 or has fewer than 15 members on its board of directors. This was one of the rules announced by Charles J. De Land, Secretary of State, before a meeting of building and loan representatives held in the Senate Chamber here.

Marshall—Interurban lines will not be discontinued in this locality if the M. E. R. is granted permission to operate buses paralleling its own lines. Instead, interurbans will carry freight and perhaps some passengers, while the buses will handle the burden of passenger travel between Jackson, Marshall, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo, according to a statement by J. J. Mahoney, superintendent of M. E. R.

Muskegon—Charles Hackley Lee, 35 years old, heir to the millions of Charles Hackley, pioneer lumberman, and Paul A. Peterson, garage owner, were killed by a runaway speed boat, shortly before the opening of the Theatrical Colony Yacht Club's annual regatta. Lee and Peterson were thrown from Lee's speed boat, Sneaky, while making a short turn. Rescuers kept back by the runaway speed boat which kept running for more than two hours in a small circle.

Almost any young lady can tell when a young man is about to propose.

Detroit—Within two or three years a large fleet of trans-atlantic freighters may be plying between Detroit and foreign ports. The maiden ship arrived in the city bringing a cargo of steel rails from Antwerp. She is the steamer Anders, belonging to the Lane company of New York. City At the Hotel Tuller, Frank Lane, president of the concern, stated that his company was prepared to bring to Detroit the European imports the city needed and would carry its exports abroad.

Lansing—Both state and federal supreme court decisions will be sought on the validity of the Michigan statute of 1923 prohibiting an owner from fishing on posted property where other persons are barred, according to John Baird, director of the state department of conservation. Baird's department obtained a warrant for the arrest of Frank Collins, Toledo sportsman, who fished on his land in Lake county after he had posted it to keep other persons from enjoying similar privileges.

Fremont—A new trial is in prospect for Mrs. Alice Dudgeon, once convicted of the murder of her son-in-law Romie Hodell, and once the victim of a jury disagreement in a second trial. William J. Branstrom, former Newaygo county prosecutor, who prosecuted both cases against Mrs. Dudgeon, said that he could not consent to an order of nolle prosequi, dismissing the charges against Mrs. Dudgeon, in the light of her first conviction and the fact that the jury in the second trial stood eight to four for convicting again.

Fascism is a success! Over in Italy, last week, an opposition deputy was mobbed on a public road. We couldn't have done better ourselves! Italian civilization is saved.

A man may be captain of his own soul, but he never reaches that point where his wife thinks he can get along without her services as a major general.

Lake Champlain to Be Bridged

Joint commissions of the New York and Vermont legislatures are in conference over the plan to build two bridges over Lake Champlain, because the ferry service is slow and inadequate. The New Yorkers want the first bridge built to be a drawbridge either from Chimney Point, to Fort Frederick, N. Y., or from Crown Point to Bridport, Vt. This view of the lake is from Crown Point, with Chimney Point on the right.

Antrim County Farmers Will Hold Picnic

The annual Antrim County Farmers Picnic will be held next Thursday, Aug. 13th, at Snowflake.

Prof. Butterfield of Michigan State College is scheduled to deliver an address. A base ball game is planned for the forenoon and a picnic dinner at noon.

A large number of both Antrim and Charlevoix County farmers and their families are planning to attend.

Sheep Coming Back In State

More Michigan farmers are handling sheep and there has been an increase in the number of lambs saved this year of 15.8 per cent, according to Verne H. Church, government agricultural statistician assigned to Michigan.

The percentage of sheep saved this spring is indicated of a general expansion in the sheep breeding industry Church's report said. From the country as a whole the number of lambs saved is 5.5 per cent greater than last year.

Michigan is the leading lamb feeding State east of the Mississippi river, feeding not only all of its own native supply but some from nearby States and large numbers from western ranges. Nebraska is the only State in the Union normally marketing a larger number of finished lambs than Michigan.

According to the report, there is a marked difference between the native states and the western range states as to the percentage of lambs saved in proportion to the number of breeding ewes. In the "native" states the percentage is 99.8; for the western states, 78.9; and for the United States, 85.6 per cent. The Michigan percentage is 99.5, or nearly the same average as all "native" states.

OTIS J. SMITH,
City Clerk.

We would like to know who selects the pictures that are sent to the press.

We fear a new war is brewing in Europe. Germany and France exchanged kind references about each other last week!

A Michigan editor arises to remark that a man can see a silk stocking forty rods away in dense traffic, while out in the wide open country he can't spot a freight engine using forty box cars for a tail.

The supreme court has ruled that you can't use the evidence of your nose as a lawful excuse to invade a man's home in search of home brew. What a blow that is to the next door neighbor who has put up with the smell.

Mebbe the evolutionist's belief is like that of the old lady in the runaway who said she left everything to Providence until the britchin' broke and then she looked out for herself.

What has become of the old-fashioned housewife who sat to can up a couple hundred quarts of fruit along about this season of the year?

The old-fashioned gink who sat to grow a generous crop of alfalfa on his chin now has a grandson that goes about with a mustache that looks like a dab of courtplaster on a wart.

Help Prevent Fires

"Every time timber burns we all lose," is but one of the many signs that have been placed along the highways of Michigan by the State Conservation department in their campaign to reduce losses in Michigan by the forest fires that have raged annually in this state since most of the lumbering timber of the northland was lumbered off in the old days of that industry. It has been estimated that the loss in 1924 in the United States reached the almost appalling total of $636,372,872. This was at the rate of ten and a half million dollars weekly, much of which could have been prevented with only ordinary precaution. Michigan cannot afford to lose any more of its already remaining scanty supply of standing timber and it is your duty to aid in helping to preserve that which remains.

Farmers Don't Need Them

It is altogether likely that the next session of Congress will witness the passing of the so-called Farm Bloc. The average American farmer resents being petted and coddled by the government and, like every other business man, desires to be left alone to work out his own economic problems. He is no longer in danger of being swept off his feet by politicians who seek to use him as a dummy around which to work their pet schemes for special legislation. He has learned the folly of attempting to regulate prices by law and sees in such attempts an economic folly in which the public pays a terrific price. Treat the farming industry in the United States like any other business and it will continue to prosper and bring us unbounded wealth and happiness.

Shoe Peddler Enroute

Within the next few weeks Michigan is likely to be invaded by a small army of shoe peddlers, who make a house-to-house canvass for what is claimed special bargains in both men's and women's shoes. In one community they solicit for ladies' slippers, while in others it is for a new style of men's oxfords. A special outdoor shoe for men is also one of their leaders. It will be for you to scrutinize their wares very closely in case they should invade this community. Other places report a lot of dissatisfied people who were led into purchasing through their specious arguments.

The Theorist's Dream

In a recent communication to a number of Michigan newspapers Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, advocates a plan providing for giant electric power plants for the purpose of supplying power in vast quantities to the people. He argues this can be done partly from water power, but chiefly at huge coal burning stations near the mouths of mines. This, he says, is being done in his own state and the movement is now on foot to extend the same system to other states.

Governor Pinchot's scheme is but a thinly disguised attempt at state ownership of power companies, something that Michigan with wise foresight has kept aloof. It is easy to argue state ownership, in addition to state supervision, which we now have, but it is another matter to conduct such state owned utilities on a profit-making basis. The history of private owned companies in Michigan reveal a tremendous struggle to earn even a nominal return on the money invested. In the face of that history it is hard to see where state ownership, with its usual lax method of doing business, would be a good thing for the people of this state to undertake.

Beggars Find Business Poor

Begging, as a business, is practiced by many people in this country. The poor "cripple" that you fling a dime to may not be what he seems. Investigations in New York and Chicago have revealed that many apparent unfortunates ride in automobiles and enjoy "good business."

A recent investigation by R. H. Freund of Chicago, discloses the fact that beggars there receive from $5.00 to more than $11.00 a day. Freund observed ten beggars, and found them receiving an average of $2.42 an hour. He interviewed seven mendicants and was surprised to find much complaint on the part of the "old-timers" who were indignant because beggars from other cities were entering "their field" and "ruining" business.

Wanted: To see a fat job, open to politicians, left to seek a man.

Australia Welcomes Fleet

Australia is now celebrating the visit of the American fleet and the press in that country is emphasizing the blood relationship of the people of America and Australia. The Victorian Parliament has adjourned for three weeks to enable its members to participate in the welcome.

The visit of our fleet to Melbourne and Sydney is full of meaning to the Australians, and is visible evidence to them of their community of interest with the United States. The warmth of the Australian welcome is an indication of the importance attached to our friendship by the island colony. The looming shadow of Japan casts a gloom across the future path of Australia and because the United States' position in regard to Japanese immigration is without flaw in the eyes of Australians, the people of that Commonwealth look to us for assistance in the event of trouble.

Call Meeting For Market Gardeners

Michigan market gardeners will gather at M. S. C. on Wednesday, July 26, for the second annual gardeners day, according to announcement made this week by George Starr, specialist in charge of vegetable work at the college.

Several hundred men, from market gardening centers all over the State, are expected for conference.

After inspection of the extensive experimental work being carried on in the college horticultural plots, the visiting gardeners will meet in round-table conference in the afternoon. Problems of the market gardener will be taken up, with members of the horticultural staff at M. S. C. leading discussion.

Varietal work to develop better strains of vegetables for the market gardener is expected to prove of particular interest. The commercial growers themselves join in the planning of these test programs, in order that the most practical phases of experimental work may be included.

Studebaker Cuts Prices

Important Reductions on All Models.

South Bend, Indiana, August 1.—Studebaker today announces reduced prices on all models. Reductions range from $50 to $405. The new prices include all regular equipment on Standard Six, Special Six and Big Six Models except that bumpers, extra tire, cover and motometer are no longer furnished on Big Sixes.

Commenting upon the price reduction, an official of The Studebaker Corporation of America said: "Studebaker's one-profit manufacturing system is the direct reason for this reduction in prices. Under this system we manufacture all vital parts for Studebaker cars in our own plants. This saves the extra profits which many manufacturers have to pay to outside parts and body makers. We give purchasers the full benefit of these savings in manufacture."

"Only two automobiles in America are made on this one-profit basis—the Studebaker in the fine car field and the Ford in the low-price field. Only in these two cases does one company in its own plants and with its own centralized organization make all bodies, all engines, all clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, gray-iron castings and drop forgings."

With only one manufacturing profit instead of many included in the purchase price, Studebaker is able to build a better car and to offer it at a much lower price. The public appreciates this fact. Studebaker sales are today rising to a new high peak instead of declining as is usual during the summer.

"The cars on which these new prices are announced are the identical cars which have given Studebaker tremendous sales volume. There is no sacrifice in quality of materials or workmanship. We have brought out no new yearly models to sell at new prices. It is Studebaker policy to keep our entire line of cars constantly up-to-date without the announcement of 'yearly models.'"

"The new prices are a striking tribute to Studebaker's one-profit production system. Savings made possible by this system enabled us to announce new low prices on January 8th of this year. Now we are able to make further reductions. As a result Studebaker one-profit cars today offer greater values than ever before."

Cow-Testing Assn. Reorganized

The Cow-test Assn. gives every indication of having its best year in existence if interested, enthusiasm, and quality of herds mean anything to work of this kind. Last year proved to be a mighty successful and beneficial season as the testimonials of several members at our recent dairy picnic will interest. This work is proving to be more popular each year as shown by the fact that there are 110 Assn. in the state, operating at present and more being organized every day.

The Assn. in Charlevoix Co. is very fortunate in being able to secure Mr. Clarence Mullett to start the new year off and to assist with the Dairy Exhibits at the coming County Fair. Mr. Mullett has endeared himself with all the members by his conscientious work and readiness in offering advice, suggestions, and guidance with their dairy problems.

The new year began August 1st with 25 herds on test consisting of around 325 cows. The membership is as follows: East Jordan—Murphy Bros., Wm. Severance, Ole B. Omland, S. Ulvund, Fred Wurn, Arthur Shepard, Dan Swanson, Elmer Murray, Lawrence Jensen, Ben Swatts, Boyne City—August Behling, Harry Behling, Wm. Spencer, Peter Jensen, Charlevoix—Loeb Farms, Geo. Meggison, Elmer Ingalls, Wm. Withers, Arlo Wickersham, Bert Elliot, Orchard Bay Farms, Ironton—Breezy Point Farm, Walloon Lake—Edward Jensen.

Bean Club Members Visited

On the 24th of July Mr. P. G. Lundin Ass't State Club Leader was in the County inspecting the fields of Beans which the members have planted and are caring for. During the day nearly all the members were visited. The members have Certified Robust Beans secured by the County Agent and keep an accurate account of the acreage, quality, yield, and exact dates of all the operations put on their field. On the 14th of August there will be an elimination contest at Gaylord to pick out the best team of 3 members each to represent Northern Michigan at the Detroit Fair with all expenses paid. At Detroit the best term is given a trip to Chicago to the Livestock and Grain Show. The County Agent will choose the best 3 from this County to represent us at Gaylord. Mr. Lundin reported much interest among the members and assured us we have an excellent chance to have the best team.

Calf Club Members Visited

The membership was divided into 3 different groups, one meeting at Boyne City at the home of Howard Fineout, another at Bert Elliotts, Charlevoix, and last at Wm. Severance, East Jordan. Mr. Nevels Pearson, State Calf Club Leader, was present and gave the members instructions as to how to fit and show their animals.

One of the requirements of the Club is for each member to show their calf at the County Fair, and it is essential that each member know how to show to the best advantage. The members are deeply interested in their work and Mr. Pearson states we have an excellent bunch of calves in the Club. The three best members in this section will be given a fine trip to Detroit and the best team there will be sent to Chicago to Livestock Exposition as a reward, so let us hope Charlevoix County will be selected.

Second Poultry Demonstration Held

Mr. J. A. Hannah, Poultry Culling Expert gave a Poultry Demonstration at the farm of Wm. Sanderson, Ironton on 29th of July at which place the poultry leaders of the county to the number of 31 were in attendance. As has been announced previously each of the leaders attends 3 different all-day schools held in various places, then at the conclusion each will put on a public demonstration in each community.

During the forenoon Mr. Hannah discussed the subjects of feeding, housing, and incubation, while in the afternoon culling was practiced entirely. The leaders are becoming more enthused each meeting and are surely getting much useful information.

A German scientist has discovered that earthworms are capable of producing musical sounds. If the lowly fish bait were able to connect a full pipe orchestra the most of us wouldn't be out in the morning to hear even the closing overture.

One-Profit Studebakers —at even lower prices

THESE Studebaker Motor Cars, on which new prices are herewith announced, are the identical cars which have given Studebaker tremendous sales volume and thereby lowered production costs.

New prices include all equipment now on our various models, except that bumpers, extra tire, cover and motometer are no longer furnished on Big Sixes.

There is no sacrifice in materials nor in workmanship. Studebaker has brought out no new yearly models built to sell at new prices.

These are the same Studebakers on which we were able to announce new low prices on January 8th of this year.

The following table forms a striking tribute to Studebaker's one-profit production.

But little Janet still stood by the table watching him thoughtfully.

"What are you thinking about?"

"I was thinking about a rather peculiar coincidence," she answered quietly. "You were too worried over the diamonds to notice it—but it struck me instantly. The leader of this gang—this huge man whom Zadawa killed tonight. Did you notice what his Christian name was? It was Hugh—Zadawa heard one of the others call him by name. Hugh, mon ain; Hugh—and a huge man. A coincidence, I think."

The man gave a short laugh.

"A very long one, my dear. Too long to bother about."

"It would be a pity if he was dead," she went on thoughtfully. "I would have liked to see my Hugh Drummond again."

"If he has been killed, if your supposition is correct," returned the man, "it will do something toward reconciling me to the loss of the diamonds. But I don't think it's likely. And incidentally he is the only side-show I am going to allow myself during this trip."

Little Janet laughed softly.

"I wonder," she said, "I wonder. Let us, as you say, go to bed."

CHAPTER VII

In Which Hugh Drummond Makes a Discovery

The prospect in front of Count Zadawa alias Mr. Atkinson was not a very alluring one, and the more he thought about it the less he liked it. Either the diamonds were blown to dust, or they were in the hands of the authorities. In the first event he had the Reverend Theodosius to reckon with; in the second the police. And for preference the police won in a canter.

He was under no delusions, was the hunchback. This mysterious man who signed all his communications by the enigmatic letter X, and whose real appearance was known probably only to the girl who was his constant companion, so wonderful and varied were his disguises, was not a person whom it paid to have any delusions about. With a shudder Count Zadawa remembered the fate of certain men he had known in the past, men who had been employed, even as he was now employed, on one of the innumerable schemes of their chief. No project, from the restoration of a monarchy to the downfall of a business combine, was too great for the man who now called himself the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor. All that mattered was that there should be money in it. Why he should be interesting himself in the spread of Communism in England it was not for Count Zadawa to inquire, even though he was the head of that particular activity. Presumably he was being paid for it by others; it was no business of Count Zadawa's.

And as he undressed that night in the quiet hotel in Bloomsbury where he lived the hunchback cursed bitterly under his breath. It was such a cruel stroke of luck.

He had already decided that his only method lay in going down to the office next morning as usual. He would find it, of course, in the possession of the police, and would be told what had happened. And then he would have to trust to luck to discover what he could.

Punctually at half-past nine the next morning he arrived at 5 Green street. As he had expected, a constable was standing at the door.

"Who are you, sir?" The policeman was barring his entrance.

"My name is Atkinson," said the count with well-feigned surprise.

"May I ask what you're doing here?"

"Haven't you heard, sir?" said the constable. "There was a bomb outrage here last night. In your office upstairs."

"A bomb outrage?" Mr. Atkinson gazed at the constable in amazement, and a loafer standing by began to laugh.

"Not 'art, guv'nor," he remarked cheerfully. "The ole ruddy place is gone to blazes."

"You dry up," admonished the policeman. "Move along, can't you?"

"Orl rite, orl rite," grumbled the other, shambling off. "Not allowed to live soon, we won't be."

"You'd better go up, sir," continued the constable. "The inspector is upstairs."

Mr. Atkinson needed no second invitation. Viewed by the light of day which came streaming in through the great hole in the wall the ruin was complete. In the center—and it was there Mr. Atkinson's eyes strayed continuously even while he was acknowledging the greetings of the inspector—stood the remnants of the desk. And as he looked at it any faint hope he may have cherished vanished completely. It was literally split to pieces in every direction; there was not left a hiding-place for a pea, much less a bag of diamonds.

The inspector was speaking and Mr. Atkinson pulled himself together. He had a part to play, and whatever happened no suspicions must be aroused.

"I feel quite staggered, inspector," His glance traveled to a sinister-looking heap in the corner—a heap roughly covered with an old rug. The wall above it was stained a dull red, and from under the rug stretched out two long streams of the same color—streams which were not yet dry.

"What on earth has happened?"

"There seems very little doubt about that, sir," remarked the inspector. "Evidently their idea was burglary. What happened, then, of course, it is hard to say exactly. Presumably they started using explosive to force your safe, and explosive is funny stuff even for the expert."

The inspector waved a hand at the heap in the corner.

"And he—poor devil, was quite an expert in his way. One of the three men, Mr. Atkinson—or what's left of him, Ginger Martin—an old friend of mine."

For a moment Mr. Atkinson's heart stood still. One of the three men? Then, where in Heaven's name, were the other two?

"One of the three, inspector," he said at length, steadying his voice.

"But what happened to the others?"

"That is the amazing thing, sir," answered the inspector. "I can't but think that though three men entered the office downstairs, only Martin can have been in here at the time of the explosion." He pulled back the blood-stained rug, and with a shudder Mr. Atkinson contemplated what was underneath. The mangled remnants had formed one man and one man only. Then what, he reflected again—what had become of the other two?

They had been in there—the leader of the Black Gang and one of his pals. There was no trace of them now. Wherefore, somehow, by some miraculous means they must have escaped, and the soul of Count Zadawa grew sick within him.

Suddenly he became aware that the inspector was asking him a question.

"Why, yes," he said, pulling himself together, "that is so. I was leaving this office here, and had removed almost everything of value. Only some diamonds were left, inspector—and they were in that desk. I have somewhat extensive dealings in precious stones. Was there any trace of them found?"

The inspector laughed grimly.

"You see the room for yourself, sir. But that perhaps supplies us with the motive for the crime. I am afraid your diamonds are either blown to pieces, or in the hands of the other two men, whom I have every hope of laying my hands on shortly. There is no trace of them here."

In the hands of the other two men! The idea was a new one, which had not yet come into his calculations, so convinced had he been that all three men were dead. And suddenly he felt a sort of blinding certainty that the inspector—though in ignorance of the real facts of the case—was right in his surmise. Diamonds are not blown to pieces by an explosion; scattered they might be—disintegrated, no. He felt he must get away to consider this new development.

He crossed over to the jagged hole in the wall and looked out.

"This has rather upset me, inspector," he said, after a while. "The South Surrey hotel in Bloomsbury will always find me."

"Right, sir!" The inspector made a note, and then leaned out through the hole with a frown. "Get out of this, you there! Go on, or I'll have you locked up as a vagrant!"

"Orl rite, orl rite! Can't a bloke 'ave a bit o' fun when he ain't doing no 'arm?"

The loafer, who had been ignominiously moved on from the front door, scrambled down from the lean-to roof behind, and vanished away, muttering darkly. And he was still muttering to himself as he opened the door of a taxi a few minutes later, into which Mr. Atkinson hurriedly stepped. For a moment or two he stood on the pavement until it had disappeared from view; then his prowling propensities seemed to disappear as if by magic. Still with the same shambling gait, but apparently now with some definite object in his mind, he disappeared down a side street, finally coming to a halt before a public telephone-box. He gave one rapid look round, then he stepped inside.

"Mayfair 1234." He waited beating a tattoo with his penneles on the box. Things had gone well that morning—very well.

"Hello, is that you, Hugh? Yes, Peter speaking. The man Atkinson is the hunchback. Stopping South Surrey hotel, Bloomsbury. He's just got into a taxi and gone off to the Ritz. He seemed peeved, to me. . . . Yes, he inquired lovingly about the what-nots. . . . What's that? You'll toddle round to the Ritz yourself. Right ho! I'll come, too. Cocktail time. Give you full details then."

The loafer stepped out of the box and shut the door. Then, still sucking a filthy clay pipe, he shambled off in the direction of the nearest Tube station. A slight change of attire before lining up at the Ritz seemed indicated.

And it would, indeed, have been a shrewd observer who would have identified the immaculately dressed young gentleman who strolled into the Ritz shortly before twelve o'clock with the disreputable-looking object who had so aroused the wrath of the police a few hours previously in Hoxton. The first person he saw sprawling contentedly in an easy chair was Hugh Drummond, who waved his stick in greeting.

Peter Darrell took the next chair, and his eyes glanced quickly round the lounge.

"Have you seen him, Hugh?" he said, lowering his voice. "I don't see anything answering to the bird growing about the place here."

"No," answered Hugh. "But from discreet inquiries made from old pimply-face yonder I find that he arrived here about ten o'clock. He was at once shown up to the rooms of a gent calling himself the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor, where, as far as I can make out, he has remained ever since. I want to see the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor, Peter."

A ball of wool rolled to his feet, and Hugh stooped to pick it up. The owner was a girl sitting close by, busily engaged in knitting some obscure garment, and Hugh handed her the wool with a bow.

"Thank you so much!" she said, with a pleasant smile. "I'm afraid I'm always dropping my wool all over the place."

"Don't mention it," remarked Hugh politely. "Deuced agile little thing—a ball of wool. Spend my life picking up my wife's. Everybody seems to be knitting these jumper effects now."

"Oh, this isn't a jumper," answered the girl a little sadly. "I've no time for such frivolities as that. You see, I've just come back from the famine-stricken parts of Austria—and not only are the poor things hungry, but they can't get proper clothes. So just a few of us are knitting things for them—stock sizes, you know—big, medium, and small."

"How fearfully jolly of you!" said Hugh admiringly. "Dashed sporting thing to do. I must tell my wife about it. She's coming here to lunch, and she ought to turn 'em out like bullets from a machine gun—what?"

The girl smiled faintly as she rose. "It would be very good of her if she would help," she remarked gently, and then, with a slight bow, she walked away in the direction of the lift.

"You know, old son," remarked Hugh, as he watched her disappearing, "it's an amazing affair when you really come to think of it. There's that girl with a face far superior to a patched boot and positively cooing virtue from every pore. And yet, would you leave your happy home for her? Look at her skirts—five inches too long; yet she'd make a man an excellent wife. A heart of gold probably, hidden beneath innumerable strata of multi-colored wools."

Completely exhausted he drained his cocktail, and leaned back in his chair, while Peter digested the profound ut-

"I ought to have a bit of paper to write it all down on, Peter," he remarked at length. "Where are we, Peter? That is the question. Point one: we have the diamonds—more by luck than good management. Point two: the hunchback gentleman who has a sufficiently strong constitution to live at the South Surrey hotel in Bloomsbury has not got the diamonds. Point three: he, at the present moment is closeted with the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor upstairs. Point four: we are about to consume another cocktail downstairs. Well—bearing that little lot in mind, what happens when we all meet?"

A slight smile was his only answer, and Hugh continued to ponder on the obscurity of the situation in silence. That several rays of light might have been thrown on it by a conversation then proceeding upstairs was of no help to him; nor could he have been expected to know that the fog of war was about to lift in a most unpleasantly drastic manner.

"Coincidence! Bosh!" the girl with the heart of gold was remarking at that very moment. "It's a certainty. Whether he's got the diamonds or not I can't say, but your big friend of last night, Zadawa, is sitting downstairs now drinking a cocktail in the lounge."

"Amazing—though it is, it certainly looks as if you were right, my dear," answered her father thoughtfully.

"Of course I'm right!" cried the girl. "Why, the darned thing is sticking out and barking at you. A big man, Christian name Hugh, was in Zadawa's office last night. Hugh Drummond is downstairs at the moment, having actually tracked Zadawa here. Of course, they're the same; an infant in arms could see it. His wife is coming here to lunch. You remember her—that silly little fool Phyllis Benton? And they live in Brook street. It might be worth trying. If by any chance he has got the diamonds—well, she'll be very useful. And if he hasn't she shrugged her shoulders, 'we can easily return her if we don't want her.'"

The Reverend Theodosius smiled, longwinded explanations between the two of them were seldom necessary. Then he looked at his watch.

"Short notice," he remarked; "but we'll try. No harm done if we fail."

He stepped over to the telephone, and put through a call. And having given two or three curt orders he came slowly back into the room.

"Chances of success very small, I'm afraid; but as you say, my dear, worth trying. And now I think I'll renew my acquaintance with Drummond."

With a short chuckle he left the room, and a minute or two later a benevolent clergyman, reading the Church Times, was sitting in the lounge just opposite Hugh and Peter. Through half-closed eyes Hugh took stock of him, wondering casually if this was the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor. And when a few minutes later the clergyman took a cigarette out of his case, and then commenced to fumble in his pockets for matches which he had evidently forgotten, Hugh rose and offered him one.

"Allow me, sir," he murmured, holding it out.

"I thank you, sir," said the clergyman, with a charming smile. "I'm so terribly forgetful over matches. As a matter of fact I don't generally smoke before lunch, but I've had such a distressing morning that I felt I must have a cigarette just to soothe my nerves."

"By Jove! that's bad," remarked Hugh. "Bath water cold, and all that?"

"Nothing so trivial, I fear," said the other. "No; a poor man who has been with me since ten has just suffered the most terrible blow. I could hardly have believed it possible here in London, but the whole of his business premises were wrecked by a bomb last night."

"You don't say so," murmured Hugh, sinking into a chair, and at the table opposite Peter Darrell opened one eye.

"All his papers—everything—gone! And it has hit me, too. Quite a respectable little sum of money—over a hundred pounds, gathered together for the restoration of the old oak chancel in my church—blown to pieces by this unknown miscreant. It's hard, sir, it's hard. But this poor fellow's loss is greater than mine, so I must not complain."

The clergyman took off his spectacles and wiped them, and Drummond stole a lightning glance at Darrell. The faintest shrug of his shoulders indicated that the latter had heard, and was as much in the dark as Hugh. That this was the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor was now obvious, but what a charming, courteous old gentleman! It seemed impossible to associate guilt with such a delightful person, and, if so, they had made a bad mistake. It was not the hunchback who had thrown the bomb; they were up another blind alley.

For a while Hugh chatted with him about the outrage, then he glanced at his watch.

"Nearly time for lunch, I think," said the clergyman. "Perhaps you would give a lonely old man the pleasure of your company."

"Very nice of you, but I'm expecting my wife," said Hugh. "She said she'd be here at one, and now it's a quarter past. Perhaps you'll lunch with us?"

"Charmed," said the clergyman, taking a note which a page boy was handing to him on a tray. "Charmed." He glanced through the note, and placed it in his pocket. "The ladies, bless them! so often keep us waiting."

"I'll just go and ring up," said Drummond. "She may have changed her mind."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

"Thank You So Much!" She Said, With a Pleasant Smile.

terance in silence. A slight feeling of lassitude was beginning to weigh on him owing to the atrocious hour at which he had been compelled to rise, and he felt quite unable to contribute any suitable addition to the conversation. Not that it was required; the ferocious frown on Drummond's face indicated that he was in the throes of thought and might be expected to give tongue in the near future.

Even Tiny Girls Wear Ensembles

Leave it to stylists to seize upon any successful gowning fashions and interpret them in some way for tiny girls. Here is a picture that shows what has been done with the ensemble suit, the dress-and-coat-to-match idea, that has so impressed the world of fashion.

For little girls' dress-up frocks, fine voile proves to be about the best choice—it is delicate in texture, but it is sturdy. Voile in tomato red is used for the frock pictured and eyelet linen, bordered with the voile for the plain coat, which is sleeveless.

Many lovely color combinations are possible in voile, since it is made in pastel colors and all the high shades as well.

New Rates To Be Applied For

In connection with the publication of notice for application for higher telephone rates, Manager H. J. Johnston made the following statement:

The filing of these rates with the Commission and the publication of the notice in the papers is directed toward completion of the rate case which has been pending for several years, and over which there has been litigation, finally ending in the decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan dated Oct. 30, 1924. Since the decision of the Supreme Court a complete appraisal of the company's property has been made by the engineer for the Utilities Commission.

The rate schedules heretofore filed in this case are now, because of changed conditions, inadequate to meet the requirements of the business. The necessity for new rate schedules is clearly outlined in the following excerpt from the Annual Report of the company for the year 1924:

"There is included in this report a balance sheet and operating statement. Telephone Operating Revenue increased 16 per cent over 1923. Operating expense increased 14.5 per cent. While because of favorable conditions and the adoption of labor saving devices with attendant increased property costs, operating expense did not increase relatively as did the volume of business, and the resulting operating revenue, nevertheless, net earnings on book cost of plant and other assets were less than for 1923; the comparative percentages being 1924—6.85; 1923—7.01.

"An explanation of the fact that, while operating revenue increased faster than operating expense, the ratio of net revenue to assets decreased, demonstrates the soundness of Court decisions holding that the fair value of the property must be consistent with present prices for like property. If rates today were predicated upon a proper return on such fair value of the property, then property added at present prices would be assured a fair return.

"The requirements of increased earnings, per telephone, is bound to continue so long as prices for material and labor are higher than the average prices paid for labor and material which make up the existing plant. For the ten years ending December 31, 1919 the money required for new plant for each telephone added (excluding purchases and sales) amounted to $139. To earn 8 per cent on this new money each telephone added should have earned $11.12 net. For five years ending Dec. 31, 1924, the money required for new plant for each telephone added (excluding purchases and sales) amounted to $229. A return of 8 per cent would have amounted to $18.32 per telephone.

"Some of this increase in cost of plant is due to the greater complexity of the plant made necessary by the increasing use of the telephone. Part of the increase is because of municipal and state requirements as to types of construction. The adoption of labor saving types of plant increases the capital requirements per telephone and reduces the operating costs per telephone. A substantial part of the increase in cost is because of the increase in price level for like material and labor. The effect of this present relatively high construction cost with attendant relatively high fixed charges, cannot be entirely offset by increased efficiency in methods or of employees. It is therefore apparent that the revenue per telephone must be increased."

The capital requirements of the company were never greater than they are this year. When the company originally made its plans for the year 1925, it appeared that there would be a net gain of 34,000 telephones for the year. The latest estimate is that the net gain will amount to 39,500 telephones, the actual gain for six months having been 24,400. It was originally planned to spend $19,000,000 during 1925 for additions to plant. The present view is that the company will be required to spend $19,000,000 in the year to take care of public demand in a satisfactory manner. This rapidly increasing plant under present price levels expedites the situation set forth in the above report.

DERBY DAY

"Derby day" is one of the most eagerly anticipated days of the year. The first "derby" or race for three-year-old horses was instituted in 1780 and named for its founder, the twelfth Earl of Derby. It was held at Epsom Downs, southwest of London. There are a few left who think "derby" applies exclusively to headgear.

Whalen said he had no other alternative, since Article 7, Section 6 of the rules of the Michigan State High School Athletic Association forbids high school players from playing on independent teams.

IF I WERE IN HIGH SCHOOL
By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

TOM, aged fourteen, is just finishing the grammar school, and since he and I are friends, often, as we walk down together, he tells me his plans for the future and, among these, what he intends doing in high school. Sometimes I plan what I should do if, like Tom, I were to have a chance once more to enter the high school.

I should not look so eagerly for "snaps" as I did then. I know that it may seem foolish to work when one can get out of it, to take a difficult course when one can get into an easy one, but I have learned that it is only in doing hard things that we gain strength, and it is only in overcoming difficulties that we learn to depend on ourselves.

I believe I should not study so much, but I should study harder. I should try to settle myself into a lesson and stay with it without shifting around until it was mastered, even if it took an hour or two hours.

I should learn to do my work myself. In real life we must work things out for ourselves; if we find ourselves in a hard corner we must use our own wits to get out.

I should learn to speak on my feet grammatically, correctly, without using slang. The sooner one gets control of the shaking knees, the quivering voice, the halting flow of words, the better.

I should learn to play some athletic game well. Real interest and skill in athletic games is of more than passing benefit to a young fellow; it becomes a permanent interest, and later in life when the tendency grows to sit at the desk or to stick to the business, to grow fat and overfed, to the neglect of one's physical health, the old habit draws one out into the open air, renews one's youth, develops one's muscles, and banishes indigestion.

If I were again a high school boy I should cultivate as fully as possible my friendship for other boys. I should want to keep up my studies, but I should take part in general school activities rather than devote all my time to study. Above all things I should stick persistently to some one subject, and try to be something more than commonplace.

How many people know that serge takes its name from China, when it was introduced into England in 1690? The Latin name for China is Serricum, which gradually has changed into the modern word serge.

The case was that of a street hold-up and as it neared the end the prosecutor said impressively: "You see how the rascal assaulted the plaintiff. How could he go to such a length for the paltry sum of a half-dollar?" "Why not?" came from the back of the courtroom. "Half-dollars soon count up."

The BLACK GANG

Hugh returned looking worried. "Don't make it out, Peter," he said anxiously. "Just got through to Denny, and Phyllis left half an hour ago to come here."

"Probably doing a bit of shopping, old man," answered Peter reassuringly. "I say, Hugh, we're bloomed over this show."

Hugh glanced across at the table where the clergyman was sitting, and suddenly Peter found his arm gripped with a force that made him cry out. He glanced at Hugh, and that worthy was staring at the clergyman with a look of speechless amazement on his face. Then he swung around, and his eyes were blazing.

"Peter!" he said tensely. "Look at him. The one trick that gives him away every time! Bloomed, have we? Great heavens above, man, it's Carl Peterson!"

A little dazedly Darrell glanced at the clergyman. He was still reading the Church Times.

CHAPTER VIII

In Which Hugh Drummond and the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor Take Lunch Together

"Rot, Hugh!" Peter turned a little irritably from his covert inspection of the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor. "You've got Peterson on the brain. Why, that old bird is no more like him than my boot."

"Nevertheless, it's Peterson," answered Drummond doggedly. "It's just that one trick he can never shake off—that tapping with his left hand on his knee—that made me spot him."

"Well, granted you're right," conceded Darrell grudgingly, "what do we do now, sergeant major?"

"I don't know, Peter. I've got to think this out."

"You're perfectly certain, Hugh?" said Peter, who was still far from convinced.

"Absolutely, old man," answered Drummond gravely. "The clergyman over there is Carl Peterson, late of the Elms, Godalming. And the game has begun again."

Darrell gave a short laugh as he noted the gleam in his leader's eyes.

"I'm thinking," he remarked soberly, "that this time the game is going to make us go all out."

"So much the better," grinned Hugh. "We'll add him to our collection. Peter, and then we'll present the whole bunch to the zoo. And, in the meantime, he shall lunch with us when Phyllis arrives, and prattle on theology to an appreciative audience. Incidentally it will appeal to his sense of humor; there's no difficulty about recognizing us. Look out, he's coming over."

They turned as the clergyman crossed toward them.

"Jolly old tum-tum beginning to shout for nourishment," said Hugh with an affable smile as he joined them. "My wife should be here at any moment now, Mr.—er—"

"Longmoor is my name," said the clergyman, beaming on them. "It is very charming of you to take such compassion on a lonely old man."

"Staying here all by yourself?" asked Drummond politely.

"No; my daughter is with me. The dear child has been my constant companion ever since my beloved wife's death some years ago. We have just returned from a visit to the famine-stricken area," replied the clergyman. "Most interesting—but most terribly sad. You know—I don't think I caught your name."

"Drummond, Captain Drummond," answered Hugh mechanically. "And this is Mr. Darrell. I think I have had the pleasure of making your daughter's acquaintance already. She was manufacturing woolen garments for the Austrians down here, and I retrieved an elusive ball of wool for her."

"That is just my daughter all over, Captain Drummond," beamed the Reverend Theodosius. "Never wasting her time, always doing something for the good of humanity."

But at the moment it is to be regretted that Hugh was not worrying his head over the good of humanity. Inconceivable though it was, judged on the mere matter of appearance, that the Reverend Theodosius was Carl Peterson, it was still more inconceivable that the wool knitter could be Irma. Of course Peterson might have changed his daughter—but if he hadn't, what then? What had he said to Peter Darrell when the girl, recognizing him all the time, was sitting in the next chair? How much had she overheard? And suddenly Hugh began to feel that he was floundering in deep water.

He glanced at his watch and turned to Darrell.

"Confound the girl, Peter! She's nearly forty minutes late."

"Picked up a pal, old boy," answered that worthy. "Picked up a pal and they're masticating a Bath bun somewhere. Why not leave a message at the door, and let's go on with it? I'm darned hungry."

The Reverend Theodosius beamed from behind his spectacles.

"It's ever the same," he murmured gently. "But it is the prerogative of their sex."

"Well, let's toddle in and take nourishment," said Hugh, taking hold of the clergyman's arm with his hand and pushing him toward the restaurant. "By the way, what about the daughter? Isn't she going to honor us?"

"Not today," answered the Reverend Theodosius. "She is lurching upstairs with the poor fellow I told you about, whose office was wrecked last night. He is sadly in need of comfort. I understand that the police are satisfied that three scoundrels were involved in the crime. And two of them have escaped."

"Dirty dogs," said Hugh, frowning. "Now if all three had been found adhering to the furniture it might have reconciled you to the loss of those hundred acid drops."

"In fact," continued the clergyman, helping himself to some fish, "the whole thing is very mysterious. However the police have every hope of laying their hands on the two others very shortly. An unfortunate clerk who was brutally assaulted by them has confided to his employer that he believes he knows who one of the other two was. A huge man, Captain Drummond, of enormous strength; a man—well, really, do you know? a man I should imagine just like you, and a man, who, popular rumor has it, is the head of a mysterious body calling itself the Black Gang. So that should prove a valuable clue for the police when they hear of it."

Not by the flicker of an eyelid did Drummond's face change as he listened with polite attention to the clergyman's remarks. But his brain was moving quickly as he took in this new development. One card, at any rate, was down on the table: his identity as leader of the Black Gang was known to Peterson. It was the girl who had found him out: that was obvious. The point was how did it affect matters.

"An elusive person, I believe," he remarked quietly.

"I don't anticipate that it should be hard to discover him, Captain Drummond," said the clergyman mildly. "Surely with your marvelous police system"

"And yet, Mr. Longmoor," said Hugh gravely, "even though lately I have been reinforcing that system—literally helping them myself—they are still completely in the dark as to his identity."

"Incredible," cried the other. "Still we can only hope for the best. By the way, I'm afraid your wife has finally deserted you for lunch." He pushed back his chair. "I shall hope to have the pleasure of making her acquaintance some other day. And now if you will excuse me, I must run away. My correspondence at the moment with regard to the relief funds for destitute Austrians is very voluminous. A thousand thanks for the most enjoyable meal."

He bowed with a courteous smile, and threaded his way through the crowded restaurant toward the door. And it was not until he had finally disappeared from sight that Hugh turned to Peter Darrell with a thoughtful expression on his face.

"Deuce interesting position of affairs, Peter," he remarked, lighting another cigarette. "He knows I'm the leader of our bunch, and doesn't know I know it; I know he's Peterson, and he doesn't know I know it. I wonder how long it will be before the gloves come off."

CHAPTER IX

In Which Count Zadowa Is Introduced to "Alice in Wonderland"

A quarter of an hour later the two young men stepped into Piccadilly. Evidently Phyllis was not proposing to turn up, and nothing was to be gained by remaining. The next move lay with the other side, and until it was played it was merely a question of marking time. At the entrance to the Ritz they separated. And it was just as he was standing in Berkeley square, waving his stick vaguely as a material aid to thought, that he felt a touch on his arm.

"Excuse me, sir," said a voice at his elbow, "but I would like a few words with you."

He looked down, and his eyes narrowed suddenly. Standing beside him was the hunchback, Mr. Atkinson, and for a moment Hugh regarded him in silence. Then, dismissing a strong inclination to throw this unexpected apparition under a passing furniture van, he raised his eyebrows slightly and removed his cigar from his mouth. Evidently the next move had begun, and he felt curious as to what form it would take.

"My powers as a conversationalist are well known," he remarked, "amongst a large and varied circle. I was not, however, aware that you belonged to it. In other words, sir, who the deuce are you and what the dickens do you want to talk to me about?"

"Something which concerns us both very intimately," returned the other. "And with regard to the first part of your question—do you think it necessary to keep up the pretense, especially as there are no witnesses present? I suggest, however, that as our conversation may be a trifle prolonged, and this spot is somewhat draughty, we should adjourn to your house; Brook street, I believe, is where you live, Captain Drummond."

Hugh removed his cigar, and stared at the hunchback thoughtfully.

"I haven't the slightest wish to have a prolonged conversation with you in any place, draughty or otherwise," he remarked at length. "However, if you are prepared to run the risk of being slung out of the window if you bore me, I'll give you ten minutes."

He turned on his heel and strolled slowly on toward his house, while the hunchback, shooting venomous glances at him from time to time, walked by his side in silence. And it was not until some five minutes later when they were both in Drummond's study that any further remark was made.

It was Hugh who spoke, standing with his back to the fireplace, and looking down on the misshapen little man who sat in an arm-chair facing the light. An unpleasant customer, he reflected, now that he saw him close to for the first time: a dangerous, vindictive little devil—but able, distinctly able. Just such a type as Peterson would choose for a tool.

"What is it you wish to say to me?" he said curtly.

"A few things, Captain Drummond," returned the other, "that may help to clear the air. In the first place may I say how pleased I am to make your acquaintance in the flesh, so to speak? I have long wanted a little talk with the leader of the Black Gang."

"I trust," murmured Hugh solicitously

"Shall We Drop This Beating About the Bush?" Snapped the Other.

ly, "that the sun hasn't proved too much for you."

"Shall we drop this beating about the bush?" snapped the other.

"I shall drop you down the stairs if you talk to me like that, you d-d little microbe," said Hugh coldly, and the other got to his feet with a snarl. His eyes, glaring like those of an angry cat, were fixed on Drummond, who suddenly put out a vast hand to screen the lower part of the hunchback's face. With a cry of fear he recoiled, and Hugh smiled grimly. So it had been Mr. Atkinson himself who had flung the bomb the night before: the eyes that had glared at him through the crack in the door were unmistakably the same as those he had just looked into over his own hand. With the rest of the face blotted out to prevent distraction there could be no doubt about it, and he was still smiling grimly as he lowered his hand.

"So you think I'm the leader of the Black Gang, do you?" he remarked. "What are your grounds for this somewhat startling statement?"

"My grounds are these," said the hunchback, recovering his self-control: "last night my office in Hoxton was wrecked by a bomb. That bomb also killed a man."

"It did," agreed Hugh grimly.

"One of the three men who broke in. The other two escaped—how, I don't know. But one of them was recognized by the clerk downstairs."

"I gathered that was the story," said Hugh.

"He was recognized as the leader of the Black Gang—an unknown person. But today—at the Ritz, Captain Drummond—my clerk, who had brought me a message, recognized him again, without his disguise. No longer an unknown man, you understand—but you."

Drummond smiled, and selected a cigarette from his case.

"Very pretty," he answered, "but a trifle crude. As I understand you, I gather that your shrewd and intelligent clerk states that the leader of the Black Gang broke into your office last night in order to indulge in the doubtful pastime of throwing bombs about the premises. He further states that I am the humorist in question. Allowing for the moment that your clerk is sane, what do you propose to do about it?"

"In certain eventualities, Captain Drummond, I propose to send an anonymous letter to Scotland Yard. Surprised though they would be to get it, it might help them to clear up the mystery of Mr. Lator's insanity. It may prove rather unpleasant for you, of course, but that can't be helped."

"It's kind of you to give me a loophole of escape," said Drummond pleasantly. "What are the eventualities to which you allude?"

"The nonreturn to me of a little bag containing diamonds," remarked the hunchback quietly. "They were in the desk which was wrecked by the bomb."

"Dear, dear," said Hugh. "Am I supposed to have them in my possession?"

"I can only hope most sincerely for your sake that you have," returned the other. "Otherwise I'm afraid that letter will go to the police."

For a while Drummond smoked in silence; then, with a lassy smile on his face, he sat down in an armchair facing the hunchback.

"There are one or two things I have to say to you before depriving myself of the pleasure of your company. By the post following the one which carries your interesting disclosure will go another letter addressed to Sir Bryan Johnstone himself. I shall be in the office when he opens it—and we shall both be roaring with laughter over the extraordinary delusion that I—quite the biggest fool of his acquaintance—could possibly be the leader of the Black Gang. And, as if to prove the utter absurdity of the suggestion, this second letter will be from the leader of the Black Gang himself. In it he will state that he was present at 5 Green street, Hoxton, last night in an endeavor to obtain possession of the anarchist and Bolshevik literature stored there. That he took with him a professional burglar to assist him in opening the safe and other things which might be there, and that while engaged in this eminently virtuous proceeding he found that he was trapped in the room by some mechanical device. And then will come a very interesting disclosure. He will state how suddenly he saw through a crack in the door a pair of eyes looking at him. And their color—see, what is the color of your eyes?—gray-blue, very noticeable. Much the same as old Longmoor's—though his are a little bluer. And then the owner of the eyes was so inconsiderate as to throw a bomb in the room; a bomb which killed one of the men, and wrecked the desk. So that the owner of the eyes, gray-blue eyes just like yours, is a murderer—a common murderer. And we hang men in England for murder." He paused and stared at the hunchback. "This is a jolly game, isn't it?"

"And you really imagine," said the hunchback contemptuously, "that even your police would believe such a story that a man would wreck his own office, when on your own showing he had the men trapped inside it?"

"Probably not," said Drummond affably. "Any more than they would believe that I was the leader of the Black Gang. So since they're such a wretched crowd of unbelievers I don't think it's much good playing that game. Waste of time, isn't it? So I vote we play another one, all on our own—a little game of make-believe—like we used to play in the nursery."

"I haven't an idea what you're talking about, Captain Drummond," said the hunchback, shifting uneasily in his chair. For all trace of affability had vanished from the face of the man opposite him, to be replaced by an expression which made Mr. Atkinson pass his tongue once or twice over lips that had suddenly gone dry.

"Haven't you, you rat?" said Drummond quietly. "Then I'll tell you. Just for the next five minutes we're going to pretend that these two astonishing statements which the police—stupid fellows—won't believe are true. We're going to pretend—only pretend, mind you—that I am the leader of the Black Gang; and we're going to pretend that you are the man who flung the bomb last night. Just for five minutes only, then we go back to reality—unbelieving policemen."

And if during the following five minutes strange sounds were heard by Denny in the room below, he was far too accustomed to the sounds of breaking furniture to worry. It wasn't until the hunchback pulled a knife that Drummond warmed to his work, but from that moment he lost his temper. And because the hunchback was a hunchback—though endowed with Nature with singular strength—it jarred on Drummond to fight him as if he had been a normal man. So he flogged him with a rhinoceros-hide whip till his arm ached, and then he flung him into a chair, gasping, cursing, and scarcely human.

"You shouldn't be so realistic in your stories, Snooks, I shall call you Snooks," he remarked affably, though his eyes were still merciless as he looked at the writhing figure. "And I feel quite sure that that is what the leader of the Black Gang would have done if he had met the peculiar humorist who threw that bomb last night. Bad habit—throwing bombs."

With a final curse the hunchback staggered to his feet, and his face was diabolical in its fury.

"You shall pay for that, Captain Drummond, stroke by stroke, and lash by lash," he said in a shaking voice.

Drummond laughed shortly.

"All the same, old patter," he remarked. "Tell old Longmoor with my love—" He paused and grinned. "No, on second thoughts I think I'll tell his reverence myself—at the appointed time."

"What will you tell him?" sneered the hunchback.

Maccabees Hold Convention

Washington—The Maccabee fraternal order in quadrennial convention here elected officers for the ensuing term and adopted a resolution designed to bring about more complete centralization of the organization's management. A. W. Frye, of Detroit, was re-elected supreme commander.

The resolution provides for placing "all affairs of the order except those purely local in character" under direction of the supreme office of the Maccabees in Detroit.

Hoover Backs Aviation

Washington—Secretary Hoover, in his annual report to Congress, is expected to recommend comprehensive legislation that will take aerial transportation out of its present uncertainty.

While feeling that this country is not keeping pace with foreign nations in the development of commercial aeronautics, Hoover holds that property backed with governmental sanction, the United States will take the lead as it has in other industrial and commercial pursuits.

Pontiac—C. E. Titonson was re-elected school trustee by a vote of 339 against George Richardson, 285, and F. Homer Newton, 285. His term is for three years. The vote was the largest ever polled in Pontiac. The proposal to supply free textbooks in the schools of the city was defeated by a vote of 419 to 377.

Flint—Chief of Police James Cole of Flint, whose department is among the pioneers in the United States in the use of radio for tracing criminals, will keep in touch with his work while he is at the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs at Indianapolis, by means of the local wireless station.

Saginaw—The prosecutor's office is considering what action to take relative to Sunday night dancing in this county. Two places, Riverside park and Indiantown, operated in defiance of the old "blue law." Officers took the names of a number of persons who were present. The dances were orderly and well patronized.

Kalamazoo—At the end of the first ten days of the summer session, Western State Normal has the largest enrollment in the history of the school's summer terms, according to John C. Hoekje, registrar. The total enrollment to date is 1,902, which is 18 more than the record breaking enrollment of the 1924 summer term.

Detroit—Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck and H. E. Whittenberger, general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway lines west of Detroit and St. Clair Rivers, conferred on removing the company's tracks eastward for the stretch of several miles adjoining Woodward avenue south of Birmingham, where the company's present right-of-way is needed for the widening of Woodward avenue.

Alpena—Each year traffic counts have shown a steady increase in travel on the state highways in the vicinity of Alpena, and this year will be no exception to the rule, as evidenced by the report of one road patrolman south of Mikado, who counted 726 automobiles passing on M-10 within a period of two hours. The counts are used by the state to determine the wear on the roads and amount of maintenance needed.

Spring Lake—More than 50 resorters at this fashionable summer resort narrowly escaped death when the ferry boat Comet, operated on Spring Lake, between here and Grand Haven, caught fire some distance from shore while making a trip. The flames spread so rapidly that the crew barely had time to bring the boat to the dock here before it was enveloped in fire. All of the passengers jumped ashore, unharmed.

NEWS DISPATCHES FROM EVERYWHERE

Court Writ Saves Russell Scott From Gallows For Second Time.

Chicago—After all hope had been given up for the second time, the life of Russell Scott, condemned to hang for the murder of Joseph Maurer, has been spared from the gallows. Judge Joseph B. David, convened a special session of court and issued a writ of habeas corpus staying the execution until time had been given to inquire into his sanity.

Scott escaped the gallows by an even narrower margin than the previous week, when Governor Small issued a week's reprieve upon receipt of a telegram purporting to be from Scott's brother, Robert, stating that he was the guilty one and that he was on his way to Chicago to give himself up. The brother has not been located. Last minute efforts to save Russell Scott came to a head four hours before the hour fixed for the execution, when attorneys and friends of the condemned man started a hunt for a judge who could be persuaded to issue a writ of habeas corpus staying the execution.

Judge David agreed to sign the petition. The writ was drawn up by Scott Stewart, one of Scott's attorneys. It contained an affidavit from Scott's father, saying that Scott had become insane since he has been in jail.

Governor Small and the state board of pardons and paroles had refused further clemency.

American's Death Stirs U. S.

Washington—America's demands for a responsible central Chinese government strong enough to protect foreign lives and property will be made more severe following the killing of the American, Morgan Palmer, in the Sungari river district and the seizure of Dr. Harvey Howard.

Officials see in the Palmer case added necessity for bringing about a strong Pekin government, capable of maintaining order throughout China, as the present provisional regime is not.

This demand will be included in the answer which the United States and the powers are about to make to the recent Chinese note asking for abolition of extra territoriality and satisfaction for the Shanghai killings.

New Evolution Suit Filed

Washington—The question of evolution was thrown into the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in an injunction suit against public school officials and Frank White, treasurer of the United States.

Loren H. Wittmer, an employee of the Internal Revenue Bureau, precipitated the issue, charging that the teachings in the schools violated a provision of the District of Columbia appropriation bill which stipulated that no funds be expended for salaries of those teaching "disrespect for the Holy Bible."

Wittmer says he is on the side of science.

Indians Sue United States

Washington—A suit for $68,707.34 against the United States has been filed in the United States court of claims here by Indian tribes of Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and Washington, for land alleged to have been taken from them by the government.

It was announced by the department of justice. The Blackfeet, Blood, Piegan and Gros Ventre Indians of Montana and the Nez Perce tribe of Idaho and Washington charge that the government took their hunting grounds from them without their consent and without compensation, in violation of treaties.

Australia Greets U. S. Fleet

Sydney, New South Wales—With huge crowds lining the piers and manning every point of vantage to extend welcome, a detachment of the United States fleet reached Australian waters here.

Dominion and municipal authorities joined in the official greetings, a feature of which was a welcome by government airplanes, who met American fliers from the ships and acted as honorary escort into the harbor.

Cable Rates Cut

Gothenburg, Sweden—Wireless transmission of messages has so developed in Sweden that the government's station at Grimeton now sends about 95 per cent of all telegrams from Sweden to the United States. The receiving station, on the other hand, gets only about 40 per cent of the telegrams coming from the United States. In order to meet the new competition the cable companies have reduced their rates.

Admiralty Wins In Cabinet

London—The cabinet crisis over the cruiser program is seemingly settled with a partial victory for the admiralty. In best informed circles it was thought the resignations of the first lord of the admiralty and Earl Beatty were inevitable, but the navy men won.

The admiralty laid down as an irreducible minimum four big cruisers, to be commenced in the present fiscal year.

Getting Round to Things

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE gate which should have barred the entrance to Grandfather Hall's front yard hung by one hinge all through my boyhood. I do not now recall what untoward act of ours rent it from its moorings, but be that as it may, for years it sagged dejectedly half open and half shut and offering an easy access to all the marauding animals which ran loose.

Grandfather meant to adjust the difficulty, which was after all only the matter of a few nails and five minutes of time, but he never got at it. "Aren't you going to fix that gate?" Grandmother would ask. "The straw cattle were in the garden this morning, and ate up my cabbage."

"I'll do it," grandfather would reply, "when I get round to it."

When he was carried out to lay him in the cemetery up on the hill back of the house, the gate was still sagging. He never got round to it.

The Burton house burned down a few weeks ago, converting into an insignificant pile of ashes about all of Burton's worldly possessions.

"How much insurance did you carry?" I asked him, for if anyone needed to carry insurance, it was Burton.

"I had it fully insured for a long time," he answered sadly, "but the policy expired last month. I meant to get something to renew it, but I didn't get round to it."

As I recall the story, the grasshopper had had the best of intentions. He realized that winter was coming on, that he ought to have the furnace fixed and the winter supply of coal in and the potatoes and turnips and canned fruit stocked up, and his winter underclothes put into shape, but he was so busy visiting and serenading his friends and having a good time generally that he never got round to it. When he went to the ant for help he found that that provident person had done nothing more than look out for himself.

I suppose the foolish virgins had meant to fill up the kerosene cans, but there were so many other interesting things to do that they failed to get round to it, and they found themselves stumbling along in the dark.

It is so with many of us. We mean to get our teeth fixed, or to pay our taxes, or join church or mend the broken step in front of the house, but we put it off until it is too late or entirely forgotten. We come to when the dentist tells us that the only thing to be done is to have an artificial set of teeth, or some one falls down the front steps and breaks a leg.

It is carelessness or laziness or thoughtlessness which keeps us from doing these things. We could all find time, if we would for doing those things which ought to be done. If grandfather had taken a few minutes from his reading of "Confucius" the gate would have been mended, and if the grasshopper had sung a few bars less he might have had food for the winter.

"PHILANDER" The first "Philander" was a Dutch knight who flirted madly with the trusting young affections of the Lady Gabriina without ever having the slightest intention of sealing his vows with a wedding ring. Mock serious love-making on the part of a male "coquet" has been known ever since as "philandering," pronounced, "fill-an-der-ing."

FAITH AND FAILURE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I DON'T remember much about chemistry. I had it in my junior year in college, met with a good many disasters of glassware and chemicals, and passed the course after the ordinary amount of mental struggle. A few formulae linger in my memory, but these are not connected with any scientific interest which I might have, but rather with undergraduate escapades made vivid and exciting because of the introduction of chemical accessories.

I do, however, remember my professor of chemistry and the fact that he was a man of faith. He believed absolutely in the principles which he tried five times a week to elucidate to us. Crucibles and test tubes filled with liquids that should have mingled with the utmost friendliness might be blown into splinters in unexpected explosions, salts might fail to crystallize and regular phenomena refuse to occur; his faith was unshaken; failure did not undermine its foundations.

"The experiment has failed," he used to say, "but the principle remains the same." In the old Sunday-school library which I patronized when I was a small boy there were many stories of virtues, honest youths, which I read with eagerness and interest. And never was faith followed by failure. Always virtue had its reward; always the experiment was successful; always the good little boy got the gold watch or the Shetland pony or the beautiful New Testament with his name on the cover. In real life it is not always so. Sometimes, virtue must be its own reward; sometimes faith must, for a time at least, face a bitter defeat.

I was talking recently to a friend of mine who has helped as many young people in financial trouble as anyone else I know. I know that many of these have imposed on him, have ignored their obligations, and have broken faith with him sadly.

"I should think you would never trust anyone again," I said to him, referring to an especially annoying experience with ingratitude which he had recently gone through. "Failure is simply a means of strengthening one's faith," he replied. "I believe in human nature. I want to help young men. I'm not going to lose faith in the world even if a score of men are dishonest with me. The majority can be depended on."

Job was a thoroughly good fellow. His neighbors would have said so; his family would have confirmed the opinion. He had performed his duty, as far as he had understood it, to God and to man. He had gone even farther than mere duty, and, according to human standards, he was entitled to some consideration by his Creator. He seemed to get little, but he kept his faith even though he failed.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active. Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

THE VOICE OF A PROPHECY

A COMPANY of a division of colored troops was in heavy marching order awaiting the word to start for the front. It was to be their first actual contact with the enemy. One of the privates had somewhere picked up a copy of the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

"Doos dat dar paper say anything about us boys?" inquired a sergeant.

"It sho' do," answered the private, improvising. "It sez yere dat twenty-five thousand cullid troops is goin' over de top tonight supported by fifty thousand Frenchmen."

From down the line came a third voice, saying:

"Well, I knows wut tomorrow's edition of dat paper's gwine say. It's gwine say, in big black letters, 'Fifty thousand Frenchmen tromped to death by twenty-five thousand niggers.'"

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

A SOUP should be served in every family at least once a day. With the wealth of vegetables and meats one may have a different one nearly every day of the year, using fruits for hot weather.

Celery Soup.
Cut up three cupfuls of celery into small pieces, bruise with a potato masher, cook in boiling water until tender, then rub as much as possible through a sieve. Scald two and one-half cupfuls of milk with a slice of onion, then remove the onion and add the milk to the celery pulp and liquor. Bind with three tablespoonfuls of butter, cooked with three tablespoonfuls of flour; season with salt and white pepper and add a beaten egg just before serving.

Stewed Beef Heart and Prunes.
Pour boiling water over a beef heart and let it stand for ten minutes. Trim off the fat and arteries and cut into pieces for stewing. Dredge with flour, brown in a little fat and place in a deep Scotch kettle with enough hot water to cover. Add one cupful of soaked stewed prunes which have been pitted, season with salt and pepper and stew slowly until tender, using care that it does not burn.

Pear and Cream Cheese Salad.
Arrange halves of canned pears with a cube of tart jelly in the cavity of each, place round side up on a new lettuce. Cream a brick of cream cheese, adding enough of cream to soften so that it may be spread like frosting over the pears. Dip a knife in boiling water occasionally to make the process easier. Serve with a spoonful of mayonnaise on the side of the salad plate.

Ocean Chicken Pie.
Take a large can of tuna fish, flake it and mix with the following: Two tablespoonfuls of flour stirred into two tablespoonfuls of butter bubbling hot; when well blended add one cupful of milk, season to taste. Cook two sliced carrots, one medium-sized onion chopped; two small, diced potatoes and a cupful of peas. Line a baking dish with a rich pastry, put the vegetable in layers with the fish, mix with the white sauce. Cover with an upper crust, leaving an opening an inch wide for steam to escape.

Hot Steam Chowder.
Take one-half pound of salt pork cut into small cubes and fry in a deep fat until well-browned; add it medium-sized onions sliced, and fry these until brown; now add three quarts of boiling water, six large potatoes cut into dice, one-half a can of tomatoes, boil until the onions and potatoes are tender, then add one tablespoonful of minced parsley and two tablespoonfuls of minced celery; add three dozen clams chopped fine, their juice, and salt and pepper to season. Serve with slices of lemon. This serves twelve persons. And fish may be cooked in the same way, if clams are not to be obtained.

Beef Souffle.
Prepare two cupfuls of white sauce and let it stand to cool. Take two cupfuls of chopped beef (the rougher portions may be used for this), mix with one teaspoonful of salt, the same of chopped parsley, and onion juice. Add two beaten egg yolks to the meat, beat the whites until stiff and carefully fold them in after adding the white sauce, and one cupful of fresh bread crumbs. Turn the mixture into a well-buttered baking dish and bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes. Serve at once in the dish in which it was baked.

Your Last Name IS IT HUBBARD?

THIS is a surname derived from a very old English personal name, the original form of which was Hygebeorht, with the meaning of bright mind. Hugh and Habert are derived from this source.

Among the surnames derived from Hygebeorht are Hubert, Hubbard, Hibern and Hobart.

A William Hubbard, born in Ipswich, England, in 1594, was the progenitor of many of the Americans of the name. Apparently he was a Puritan. At all events, he left home at the age of thirty-six, in 1635, to make his home in the new world. He settled in Boston. His eldest son, William, who was fourteen years old when he came to the new world, was one of the first students at Harvard and graduated fourth in the class of 1642. He was minister of the church in Ipswich, Mass., wrote a valuable history of Massachusetts Bay colony, and acted as president of Harvard for a short time. He married a daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, also a prominent New England divine.

Chester D. Hubbard, United States congressman from Connecticut before the Civil war, was one of his descendants, as was Joseph S. Hubbard, a celebrated astronomer.

Elbert Hubbard, of East Aurora fame, was a descendant of a George Hubbard, Englishman, who settled in Connecticut in 1620, 15 years before William Hubbard.

Among the Hubbards in this country there have been many congressmen, senators and governors. John Hubbard was governor of Maine, Lucius F. was governor of Minnesota. Richard B. Hubbard, member of a Virginia family of the name, was governor of Texas, and a Richard D. was governor of Connecticut.

In England the name is an old and distinguished one, being the family name of the first Lord Addington, born in 1805, who was the son of a rich Russian merchant, member of an old Essex county family of Hubbard.

"Chaperon"
The word chaperon is not feminine, although it is generally applied to a woman. It means a hood, and when used metaphorically signifies that the married woman shields her youthful protegee as the hood shields the face.

Cause of Pellagra
Recent investigations of the United States public health service have demonstrated that pellagra—the disease that was for a long time thought to be caused by eating spoiled corn—is caused by living on an unbalanced food.

The Planet Mercury

Mercury is the smallest planet, and the nearest to the sun. Owing to its proximity to the sun it is difficult to see it with the naked eye. Its mean distance from the sun is 36,000,000 miles, while that of the earth is about 94,000,000 miles. Mercury completes a revolution of its orbit in 88 days; it is about 3,000 miles in diameter; and its mass is only about one-eighth that of the earth.
