Many Features At County Fair

Larger And Better Exhibits Than Ever.

The largest cattle exhibit in the history of the fair is assured with breeders from Ellsworth, Central Lake, Bellaire, and Kewadin, bringing in their best. Charlevoix County will have to travel a fast pace this year if she wins the blue ribbons over her competitors.

Then the Cow-testing Ass'n. exhibit will be of great interest. There is not a fair in this section that is offering the inducement for good grade cows of known production that our County is. $150.00 will be divided among the breeders in this class with the Grand Championship Female attracting a prize of $25.00, both P. B. and Gr. Cows being eligible. The exhibit is complete in itself having premiums for bulls and all ages with the Females.

The cattle farm is having many improvements made on it and will show the cattle up to much better advantage than previously.

Another exhibit that will be highly interesting and instructive will be the Calf Club. Sixteen boys and girls in Charlevoix County are the proud owners of high class calves which they are paying for themselves and will be on display. The three major breeds of dairy calves are represented and are of various ages. It will take 10 years off your age just to see what these young people are doing and their enthusiasm.

Don't forget the Exhibit of the Ladies Clothing Project. It will be complete and convey to the public the results of the good work they have secured.

The work of the Girl's Canning Club will also be on exhibit. These girls have canned 30 or more quarts of fruits and vegetables and are also keeping accurate records of their work.

A feature of this exhibit will be a practical canning demonstration given by 3 teams consisting of two members each. These girls will demonstrate the proper methods of procedure in canning and explain the different steps fully. These Demonstrations will be given Thursday afternoon in the Educational Bldg.

Last of all but not the least don't miss the big Live Stock Parade Thursday noon, when all the prize winners will be on parade. All judging will be done Wednesday. Plan to attend both Wednesday and Thursday.

Salvation Army Tag Day Tomorrow

A Salvation Army Tag Day will be conducted this Saturday to finish the drive here.

Solicitation will be finished by tonight. So far, favorable reports came to Mrs. M. B. Palmeter, Chairman, from the business and residential committees.

The Home Service Drive is for the purpose of securing money to carry on the Salvation Army work in Charlevoix County and the State of Michigan. Two rescue homes in which last year nearly 500 unwed mothers found a haven of refuge are benefitted by this appeal. Also children's homes where girls are trained morally, mentally and physically.

Last Christmas 15,000 baskets of food were provided to deserving needy families, every home being previously investigated and only deserving ones received assistance. 18,000 children received clothing, such as stockings, caps mittens and other necessities, as well as candy, nuts and fruit.

The Salvation Army knows no creed and all needy deserving people always find a friend in the Salvation Army at the time of need. Buy a Tag, and give generously to support this work.

A Boom On In Charlevoix Co.

Charlevoix, Mich., Aug. 24, 1925.

"Uncle George" is going up and down the street proclaiming that there is a boom on in Charlevoix County. Why? Because dead men are being raised and sleeping men are being awakened.

There is talk now of selling the east side of Bridge Street in Charlevoix to be used for and turned into a Park. And there is talk about a 20 foot concrete road around Pine Lake.

Geese Whizz! and a couple of Golly Damns!! If that is all going to materialize then let's all hop to it, boys, and do it up brown! Make Charlevoix County the beauty spot and greatest spot in Michigan.

I have found out that the way for a man to rightly enjoy himself is to maintain a universal, ready and cheerful compliance with all that is good and that nobody need feel ashamed of doing anything that is good.

We must know that the word "impossible" has no place in the brave man's dictionary. Kickers may kick, but the brave man—the good man—combined with right thinking and right doing will always be in the fore-ground when the crucial hour arrives and then there he will do his work and he will do it right.

This must prove itself in our coming strife for a Park in Charlevoix and for a good reinforced concrete road around Pine Lake all within the confines of Beautiful Charlevoix County in the State of Michigan.

While Charlevoix is looking out and deciding for its own best interests, Charlevoix County does not have to do so for it is plain to be seen and well understood. There is no objection to this vital question of a Good Concrete Road around Pine Lake for it will be the making of the prettiest County in the State. The road may cost a million or a million and a quarter of dollars but by the time the road is finished the property will have so increased in value that the cost of the road would drop into the background when compared with the property valuation. Surely the property would increase in value far above the two million dollar mark. The County alone will not be benefited by this change; the great State of Michigan will also reap the benefits. Why? Because it will bring thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands of automobiles and motorists into the northern part of Michigan who will not be merely satisfied with seeing the Southern Peninsula but many will visit the great Northern Peninsula as well.

I have been keeping tab on the people I have met here this year and out of one hundred and fifty practically one hundred and twenty have told me that this is the first time they have ever been in Charlevoix and they all admitted that it was the choicest, prettiest, and most beautiful place they had ever seen since they left home. One prominent man from Grand Rapids told me he came up M13, that it was all gravel, dusty and dirty—that he was going back on M11 and that he'd never come again until we had G. R. C. R. (Good Reinforced Concrete Roads).

Say, Readers, don't you all think this is a pretty damned good sensible letter? Sure it is! Get your shoulders to the wheel, all of you, and make the upcoming Charlevoix boom a real one!

I said in my previous letters on the subject of Good Reinforced Concrete Roads that they could be built for $20,000.00 per thousand. I should have said $22,000.00 or $23,000.00. This means nothing to me personally but everything to every one of you.

Standard Grades To Help State Potatoes

That Michigan's new standard grades for potatoes will result in a marked boost for the crop in the State, particularly in regard to the reputation of the wolverine tubers in out-of-state markets, is the general opinion of men who have studied the situation in recent weeks.

By act of the last state legislature, standard grades were adopted to regulate the sale of potatoes, with inspection and penalties provided for. This law became effective August 27, and is now in operation throughout the State.

Potato grading is not new for the State, Federal Grades having been adopted in 1923 by order of the State Commissioner of Agriculture. The new law, however, gives Michigan her own grading law and places the work upon a definite and permanent basis.

"Potato grading has already done much for the Michigan crop," says J. W. Weston, specialist with the crops department at the Michigan State College. "Poorly graded stock before 1923 hurt the reputation of the Michigan tubers on markets such as Pittsburg, Cleveland, Toledo, and Detroit. The result was apparent in sales and lower prices than those received by growers from other States.

"The grading work during the last two years is estimated to have resulted in great financial gain to the State growers, and the definite Michigan grades now in effect should be of far-reaching benefit in re-establishing Michigan's potato reputation on the country's markets"

HARD COAL STRIKE ORDERED BY LEWIS

158,000 Anthracite Workers to Quit—828 Miners Affected.

Philadelphia.—A suspension of mining in the hard-coal fields on September 1 was called by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

The suspension was called because the union was unable to obtain from the operators a 10 per cent wage increase, adoption of the check off, equalization of wages for day workers and various other demands which they made conditional to renewal of the wage contract expiring August 31.

The order involves a walkout of 158,000 men, of whom about 10,000 will probably be left in the mines for maintenance work, such as the prevention of flooding and cave-ins.

On the basis of state figures for 1924 the suspension would affect 828 mines, operated by 185 companies, controlling, altogether, 272 collieries.

Lawson, Publisher, Leaves $2,505,000 to Charities

Chicago.—Under the will of the late Victor F. Lawson, which was filed for probate Tuesday, the Chicago Daily News, principal asset of the Lawson estate, passes to the control of the Illinois Merchants' Trust company, which is given full power of management, including power to sell the newspaper.

Specific bequests of $4,775,000 are made under the terms of the will, and of this sum $2,505,000 is apportioned for benevolent purposes. The biggest bequests are left to the Chicago Congregational Mission and Extension Society, the Theological Seminary at the Young Men's Christian association. These total practically three-quarters of the entire estate. The other one-quarter of the residuary estate is left to Iver-N. Lawson, a brother of the late publisher, who also was left $200,000 and the income from a trust fund of $300,000. Relatives, friends and employees also share in the estate.

French Advance After Fierce Fight With Riffs

Paris.—Some of the fiercest fighting of the whole campaign marked the attack by the French Nineteenth army corps on the Branes tribe north of Taza. The rebels, strongly backed by small groups of Rifian regulars, occupied an extremely well organized system of trenches and, despite the terrific aviation and artillery bombardment they have sustained for the last week, they were determined not to cede an inch. Largely through the aid of tanks, for the Sirocco handicapped the aviation except in the early morning hours, the infantry gained the first day's objective, advancing three miles over a front 18 miles long.

They don't make motor trucks large enough to lift the load men some times are compelled to carry on their minds.

Nature is certainly peculiar. Ever notice how too many peddlers will make the grass grow in the village streets?

School Makes Fine Beginning

Classes Run Regular Schedule Commencing Last Tuesday.

A striking feature in the opening of the local schools is the fact that classes were running regular schedules the first morning after enrollment. Tuesday morning the full forty-five minute periods were spent in class recitations. Most schools figure about one week for adjustment of schedules, classes, and other school routine. Great credit is due the Principals, Mr. Waggoner in High School, Miss Clark in the Central Building, and Mrs. Hager on the West Side and their assistants for having things moving so devoid of flourishes and efficiently at once. In fact, the spirit of the student body and faculty of the local schools this year seem to bubble over with enthusiasm and action and if the beginning is any indication of what the schools are going to do the coming year it should be the best year in the school's history. It's early to get many echoes of the impressions made by the new teachers but every indication is that they will more than live up to expectations, even though the smaller cities expect a great deal from their teachers.

According to Principal Waggoner, not only did things run regularly at once but every department in the High School had their correct proportion of the total student body. No prejudices whatever were indicated by the students in signing up for their courses which surely is a distinct compliment to the High School staff.

Just as much can be said for the pupil in the manner he has taken hold. It would be quite difficult to find a student body with better all around qualifications than those found in the local schools. Indications are that ninety-nine out of a hundred pupils are here to give their best. They seem to catch the spirit of the times for never has there been a time when as much is expected of boys and girls as today. The enrollment varies with each year. The upper grades of the High School are larger than they have been before while the Junior High has ten or fifteen less than usual. Most of the grades in the Central Building are a little smaller than last year up to this time while the Kindergarten has many less than a year ago. The enrollment on the West Side holds up to the usual numbers. However, the enrollment which will be found at the bottom of this article will no doubt be largely increased in the next ten days. From the very fact that school has run regular from almost the first day will make it all the more difficult for the pupil that starts late, for it will take him weeks to recover the lost ground. It is doubtful if any job will repay him the quarter what his school work would later on.

The Board grants annually permission to use one day and a half in any manner the Superintendent sees fit, allowing the school to go to the Fair. It is thought best to dismiss school the three afternoons—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

No definite school activities have had a chance to organize at this early date. Many of the High School boys are anxious that football practice start, yet according to a ruling of the M. I. A. A. no football work can be done until after Labor Day. Next week will see the boys out in their football togs, under the tutoring of Mr. Waggoner. It is hoped that East Jordan citizens will note the school exhibit at the Fair. They have applied for double the space of a year ago and hope to give a good indication of what is being done from the Kindergarten up. With a week to prepare the exhibit, some of the departments are handicapped. This is especially true of the Domestic Science department for the reason that most of the things made in this department are used throughout the summer which make it impossible to display many of the things done in that department. This is true of many of the other departments as well. However, it is expected that the East Jordan Public Schools will make more than the usual impression by the work displayed.

SAYS UNIFORM LAWS ARE NATIONAL NEED

MacChesney Warns Against Violating States' Rights.

Detroit, Mich.—Col. Nathan William MacChesney of Chicago warned a convention of national commissioners on uniform state laws, holding their convention here, that unless the various states voluntarily make their own laws uniform along progressive lines there will be a constantly increasing and determined effort to have congress enact general laws on subjects of the country's general concern, thus perilling the nation's fundamental democracy.

Colonel MacChesney, who is president of the national conference of commissioners, warned against the growing encroachment of the federal government on states' rights and quoted President Coolidge to the effect that this encroachment is due to the fact that the states have not discharged their full duties. Mr. MacChesney declared that unless the states meet their responsibilities through uniform state laws they must lose still further their prestige and power.

Cadets Seize Canton; Arrest 100 Officials

Washington.—Whampon cadets occupied Canton on August 25 and arrested more than 100 Cantonese officials, who were alleged to have been implicated in the assassination of Lin Chung Hol. This information was contained in a message received by the State department from Consul General Jenkins at Canton. Cadet leaders are said to adhere strongly to communistic ideals, while General Li and his followers are of the more conservative faith. Departmental advices received from Consul Sokobin, at Harbin, said that the release of Dr. Harvey Howard was expected within ten days.

He was divorced by his former wife, Mrs. Sophie Meldrim Coy, in Paris last December. The bride gave her age as twenty-seven, and this is her first marriage. She is a native of Boston.

They were taken in two groups and sent across the Red river to Moorhead, Minn. The alleged "wobblies" come to the section every fall as part of the harvest-hand rush. Those showing no inclination to go to work were taken into custody.

PLANES CRASH IN AIR; TWO KILLED

Army Flyers Crushed to Death When Machines Collide Near Chicago.

Chicago.—Two United States army airplanes, piloted by officers who had won prizes at Camp Grant earlier in the day for superb handling of their machines, crashed 500 feet above the government flying field at Maywood.

Lieut. T. P. Smith, pilot of one, and his passenger, William L. Heptig, a wealthy Board of Trade member, were killed when their plane became unmanageable and plunged, burning, to the ground. Both leaped, striving to open their parachutes, but the distance was too short to allow of the parachutes opening.

The two men's bodies struck the earth and were crushed a few hundred feet from Edward Hines Memorial hospital, filled with war veteran patients. Heptig was president of the Illinois chapter of the National Aeronautical society, captain in the reserve corps, and head of the grain brokerage firm of William L. Heptig & Co. Lieutenant Smith was attached to the United States flying corps of Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill.

Lieut. Robert W. Douglas of Selfridge field, Mount Clemens, Mich., pilot of the other machine, managed to keep control of it and to coast in safety to the landing field, although the propeller had been broken off in the collision.

Gov. Small Reviews 33rd Division at Camp Grant

Camp Grant, Ill.—The air service was the feature of the Governor's day celebration at Camp Grant and made up in the amount of attention it received for the slenderness of its representation.

Seven planes, furnished through the chief of the air force of the sixth corps area, Maj. L. H. Drennan, were a spectacular element which cast into the shade the efforts of the entire thirty-third division, although the division turned out with a review and field maneuvers to welcome the governor to camp.

With Governor Small, who reviewed the 9,000 troops in training here, were General Foreman, Adj. Gen. Carlos Black and Gen. C. C. Hammond, chief of the military bureau, who had come from Washington for the day.

Hammond Police Capture 3 Alleged Counterfeiters

Chicago.—Three Chicagoans, alleged leaders in the $500,000 plot to flood the country with bogus $20 bills, were captured near Hammond after a thrilling chase by police in commandeered automobiles. Shots were fired at the fleeing car before it was brought to a halt. One thousand dollars in the bogus money was found under the floor mat in the tonneau. The men are alleged to have attempted to bribe the arresting officers, offering them a bundle of crisp, new bills. All were turned over to federal agents, and were taken to Indianapolis. They said they are Sam Mirabile, thirty-eight; Vincent Cholis, twenty-two, and James Capibanna, eighteen. Mirabile, according to the arresting officers, is a prominent Chicago real estate broker.

Last Tribute Paid to Ambassador Bancroft

Chicago.—Funeral services were held over the body of Edgar A. Bancroft, late American ambassador to Japan, in the Fourth Presbyterian church.

Prominent Chicago business men, who had known Mr. Bancroft during his long and honorable career in Chicago, diplomatic and state dignitaries, professional men and others filled the auditorium as Dr. James G. McClure, president of McCormick Theological seminary, began the services. Among the notables present were Vice President Daves, the Japanese ambassador and his staff, and J. Butler Wright, assistant secretary of state, who acted as the representative of President Coolidge; Chief Justice Taft and Secretary Kellogg.

Pat Powers, Former Head of Old League, Is Dead

Belmar, N. J.—Dr. Patrick Thomas Powers of Jersey City, a former president of the Eastern Baseball league, which later became the International organization, died of diabetes here. He was sixty-three years old. Powers organized the first six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden and promoted those events for years. He also organized the old Eastern league, and in 1914, when the "outlaw" Federal league was formed, he headed the Newark team of that organization.

He glanced into the room under-neath hers and saw that it looked like a drawing-room. The windows seemed easy to force if necessary, but he decided first of all to try the ivy outside. But it was useless for a man of his weight. Just at the bottom it supported him, but as soon as he started to climb it gave way at once. Twice he got up about six feet, twice he fell back again as the ivy broke away from the wall. And after the second attempt he looked up at the anxious face of his wife above.

"No go, darling," he muttered. "And I'm afraid of making too much noise. I'm going to try and force this window."

By a stroke of luck they had not taken his clasp-knife, and by a still greater stroke of luck he found that the catch on the window had been broken, and that it proved even easier to open than he had thought.

The next moment he had vanished into the drawing-room. And how he noticed that that strange noise which he had heard while standing on the lawn was much louder. As he cautiously opened the door and peered into the passage the very faint hum became a steady drone, while with each successive thud the floor-boards shook a little.

The passage was in darkness, though light was shining from under some of the doors. And as he crept along in search of the stairs he heard voices proceeding from one of the rooms he passed. Evidently a fairly populous household, it struck him, as he tested the bottom stair with his weight to see if it creaked. But the staircase was old and solid, and the stair carpet was thick, and at the moment Hugh was not disposed to linger. Afterward the house seemed to promise a fairly fruitful field for investigation; at present Phyllis was all that mattered. So he vanished upwards with the uncanny certainty of all his movements at night, and a moment later he was standing on the landing above.

It was a long, straight corridor, a replica of the one below, and he turned in the direction in which he knew her room must lie. And he had only taken a couple of steps when he stopped abruptly, peering ahead with eyes that strove to pierce the darkness. For it seemed to him that there was something in the passage—something darker than its surroundings. And at that moment something sprang out of the darkness, and he found himself fighting for his life.

For a second or two he was at a disadvantage, so completely had he been taken by surprise; then the old habits returned. And not a moment too soon; he was up against an antagonist who was worthy of him. Two hands like iron hooks were round his neck, and the man who gets that grip first wins more often than not. His own hands shot out into the darkness, and then for the first time in his life he felt a stab of fear. For he couldn't reach the other man; long though his arms were, the other man's were far longer, and as his hands went along them he could feel the muscles standing out like steel bars. He made one supreme effort to force through to his opponent's throat and it failed; with his superior reach he could keep his distance. Already Drummond's head was beginning to feel like bursting with the awful pressure round his throat, and he knew he must do something at once or lose. And just in time he remembered his clasp-knife. It went against his grain to use it; never before had he fought an unarmed man with a weapon—and as far as he could tell this man was unarmed. But it had to be done and done quickly.

With all his force he stabbed sideways at the man's left arm. He heard a snarl of pain, and the grip of one of the hands round his throat relaxed. And now the one urgent thing was to prevent him shouting for help. Like a flash Drummond was on him, one hand on his mouth and the other gripping his throat with the grip he had learned from Osaki—the Jap in days gone by, and had never forgotten. And because he was fighting to kill now he wasted no time. The grip tightened; there was a dreadful wringing noise as the man bit into his thumb—then it was over. The man slipped downward onto the floor, and Drummond stood drawing in great mouthfuls of air.

But he knew there was no time to lose. Though they had fought in silence and he could still hear the monotonous thud and the beat of the engine, at any moment someone might come upstairs. And to be found with a dead man at one's feet in a strange house is not the best way of securing a hospitable welcome. What to do with the body—that was the first insistent point. There was no time for intricate schemes; it was a question of taking risks and changing it. So for a moment or two he listened at the door of a room, then he gently opened it. It was a bedroom and empty, and without further hesitation he dragged his late opponent in, and left him lying on the floor. By the dim light from the uncurtained window, he could see that the man was almost deformed, so enormous was the length of his arms. They must have been six inches longer than those of an average man, and were almost as powerful as his own. And as he saw the snarling, ferocious face upturned to his, he uttered a little prayer of thanksgiving for the presence of his clasp-knife. It had been altogether too near a thing for his liking.

He closed the door and stepped across the passage, and the next moment Phyllis was in his arms.

"I thought you were never coming, old man," she whispered. "I was afraid the brutes had caught you."

"I had a slight difference of opinion with a warrior outside your door," said Hugh, grinning. "Quite like old times."

Then he grew serious. "No time for hot air now, old thing; let's have a look at this jolly old chain effect of yours. Once we're out of here, you shall tell me everything, and I'll eat several pounds of mud for having been such an unmitigated idiot as to let these swine get hold of you."

He was examining the steel chain as he spoke, and gradually his face grew grave. The chain, which was about six feet long, was fastened at one end to a big staple in the wall and at the other to a bracket which encircled his wife's right wrist. And the bracelet could only be opened with a key. Any idea of breaking the chain or pulling out the staple was so preposterous as not to be worth even a moment's thought; so everything depended on the bracelet. And when he came to examine it more carefully he found that it had a Yale lock.

He sat down on the edge of the bed, and she watched him anxiously.

"Can't you get it undone, boy?" she whispered.

"Not if I stopped here till next Christmas, darling," he answered heavily.

"Well, get out of the window and go for the police," she implored.

"My dear," he said still more heavily, "I had, as I told you, a little difference of opinion with the gentleman outside the door—and he's very dead." She caught her breath sharply. "A nasty man with long arms who attacked me. It might be all right, of course—but I somehow feel that this matter is beyond the local constable, even if I could find him. You see, I don't even know where we are." He checked the exclamation of surprise that rose to her lips. "I'll explain after, darling; let's think of this now. If only I could get the key; if only I knew where it was, even."

"A foreigner came in about an hour ago," answered his wife. "He had it then. And he said he'd come again to-night."

"He did, did he?" said Hugh slowly. "I wonder if it's my friend the Italian. Anyway, kid, it's the only chance."

Say something; get him into the room and then leave him to me. And if for any reason he doesn't come I'll have to leave you here and raise the gang."

He rose and paced softly up and down the room trying to think what was the best thing to do. It was a maddening circle whichever way he looked at it, and his fists clenched and unclenched as he tried to make up his mind. To go or to wait; to go at once or to stop in the hope that one man would come up and have the key on him. Commonsense suggested the best course; something far more powerful than commonsense prompted the latter. He could not and would not leave Phyllis alone. And so he decided on a compromise. If when daylight came no one had been up to the room, he would go; but he would wait until then.

And he was just going to tell Phyllis what he had decided, when he heard a sound that killed the words on his lips. A door had opened below, and men's voices came floating up the stairs.

"Lie down, darling," he breathed in her ear, "and pretend to be asleep."

Without a word she did as he told her, while Hugh tiptoed over toward the door. There were steps coming up the stairs, and he flattened himself against the wall—waiting. The period of indecision was passed; unless he was very much mistaken the time of action had arrived. How it would pan out—whether luck would be in, or whether luck would fall was on the lap of the gods.

The steps paused outside the door, and he heard a muttered ejaculation in Italian. Apparently he was concerned over something, and it suddenly dawned on Drummond that it was the absence from duty of the long-armed bird that was causing the surprise. In the excitement of the moment he had forgotten all about him, and for one awful second his heart stood still. Suppose the Italian discovered the body before he entered the room, then the game was up with a vengeance. Once the alarm was given he'd have to run the gauntlet of the whole crowd over ground he didn't know.

But his fears were groundless; the nondiscovery of the watcher by the door took the Italian the other way. His first thought was to make sure that the girl was safe, and he flung open the door and came in. He gave a grunt of satisfaction as he saw her lying on the bed; then like a spitting cat he swung round as he felt Drummond's hand on his shoulder.

With every ounce of weight in his body behind the blow, Hugh hit the Italian on the point of the jaw. Without a sound the man crumpled up and pitched on his face.

And now there was not a moment to be lost. At any moment one of his pals might come upstairs, and everything depended on speed and finding the key. Hugh shut the door and locked it; then feverishly he started to search through the Italian's pockets. Every thing up to date had panned out so wonderfully that he refused to believe that luck was going to fall him now, and sure enough he discovered the bunch. Phyllis was free, and he heard her give a little sob of pure excitement.

He heaved the Italian onto the bed, and snapped the steel bracelet onto his arm. Then he slipped the keys into his own pocket, and crossed to the window. The engine was still humming gently; the thudding noise was still going on; nothing seemed in any way different. No light came from the room below them, everything had worked better than he had dared to take him on the point of the jaw with mathematical precision, another mathematical law began to operate elsewhere—the law of gravity. Something fell from a ceiling onto a table in the room below that ceiling, even as in days gone by an apple descended into the eye of the discoverer of that law.

The two men seated in the room below the ceiling in question failed to notice it at first.

Then one stared upward and gave a little cry of horror. Slowly spreading over the white plaster was a great crimson stain, whilst from a crack in the middle the steady drip fell onto the table.

"There's been murder done," he shouted hoarsely and dashed out of the room. Doors were flung open, and half a dozen men rushed up the stairs after him. There was no doubt which the room was, and headed by Yulowski they crowded in—only to stop and stare at what lay on the floor.

"It's the Greek," muttered one of them. "He was guarding the girl. And someone has severed the main artery in his arm."

With one accord they dashed across the passage to the room where Phyllis had been. In a second the door was broken in, and they saw the unconscious Italian lying on the bed.

"The Black Gang," muttered someone fearfully, and Yulowski cursed him for a cowardly swine. And it was his hoarse voice that Drummond heard shouting for the power to be switched on, as he turned and darted across the lawn.

Completely ignorant of what had taken place, he was just as ignorant of what was meant by switching on the power. His one thought now was to get away with Phyllis. A start meant everything, and at the best he couldn't hope for a long one. With his arm through hers he urged her forward, while behind him he heard a confused shouting which gradually died away under the peremptory orders of someone who seemed to be in command. And almost subconsciously he noticed that the thudding noise had ceased; only the faint humming of the engine broke the silence.

Suddenly in front of him he saw the fence which had caused him to wonder earlier in the evening. He was not five feet from it, when it happened—the amazing and at the moment inexplicable thing. For months after he used to wake in the night and he sweating with horror at the nearness of the escape. For it would have been Phyllis who would have gone through first; it would have been Phyllis, who— But it did happen—just in time.

He saw a dark shape dart across the open toward the fence, an animal carrying something in its mouth. It reached the fence, and the next instant it bounded an incredible height in the air, only to fall backward onto the ground and lie motionless almost at Drummond's feet. It was so utterly unexpected that he paused instinctively and stared at it. It was a fox, and the fowl it had been carrying lay a yard away. It lay there rigid and motionless, and completely bewildered he bent and touched it, only to draw back his hand as if he'd been stung. A sharp stabbing pain shot up his arm, as if he'd had an electric shock—and suddenly he understood, and with a cry of fear he dragged Phyllis back just in time.

He Had Only to Lower Phyllis Out of the Window and Let Her Drop on the Flower Bed Below.

hope. He had only to lower Phyllis out of the window, and let her drop onto the flower bed and then follow himself. After that it was easy.

"Come along, darling," he said urgently, "I'm going to lower you out first—then I'll follow. And once we're down, you've got to tree up your skirts and run like a stag across the lawn till we're under cover of those bushes. We aren't quite out of the woods yet."

They were not indeed. It was just as Phyllis let go, and he saw her lick herself up and dart across the lawn that he heard a terrific uproar in the house below, and several men came pounding up the stairs. He vaulted over the windowsill himself, and lowered himself to the full extent of his arms. Then he too let go and dropped onto the flower bed below. And it was as he was picking himself up, preparatory to following Phyllis—whom he could see faintly across the lawn waiting for him, that he heard someone in the house shout an order in a hoarse voice.

"Switch off the power at once, you d—d fool; switch it on at once!"

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain; get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular, of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also, to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Fall Styles Becoming to Mature Figures

When style edicts for fall were announced and the simple, straight-line frock demoted to the rear ranks of Fashion, there was much misgiving in the minds of many matrons. What would plaited or flaring skirts do to the full figure—how could the new lines be managed to slenderize the stout woman? These were the important questions that occupied the thoughts of stylists and fashionables. Look at the picture of the new fall frock, shown here, and see how satisfactorily the questions have been answered. This is a French gown and reveals once more the ingenuity with which the French solve style problems. Note the long bodice, the skirt fullness brought to the front, the long sleeves, straight-hanging tie and unbroken line of the scarf that hangs from neck to hem. Nothing could be more becoming to a full figure.

Saginaw—Saginaw voters approved an initiatory ordinance granting the street railway lines here an increase in fares from four to three tickets for a quarter. The vote was less than 6,000 and the proposition carried by a margin of 113 votes over the required 60 per cent majority.

Muskegon—Five high school youths who participated in 30 robberies here and surrounding cities, pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge John Vanderwerp. Linfred Standley, 17 years old, who organized the ring after reading Robin Hood fiction, admitted responsibility for the enterprise.

Traverse City—Alberta Davis, 11 years old, was taken into custody by officers on the street here and taken to the county detention home pending an investigation of circumstances that led her to leave her home at Grawn, 12 miles south of here. She said that her mother and stepfather had quarreled with her.

Owosso—A bull that objected to a ride to the slaughter house put Bernard Clark, a driver for a local packing company, in the hospital. The bull strated to thrash around in the truck and diverted Clark's attention. The truck went into a ditch and Clark went through the windshield. Two cords in his right arm were severed.

Detroit—Mrs. Thelma Halman, 37 years old, wife of George A. Halman, a plant manager for the Fisher Body Corporation lost her life while swimming in Lake St. Clair off Belle River, near the Halman summer home, when she dived from the rail of her 26-foot motor boat, the Thelma II, and was drawn beneath the craft into the whirling blades of the propeller. Her body was taken from the water by her husband, who was swimming with her.

The old-fashioned gent who ust to gaze with care up and down the village street before slipping into the town tavern, now has a son who openly boasts of having a private bootlegger.

What a difference in the speed of a car, when a man is bragging about it to a friend or telling it to the Judge.

SULPHUR CLEARS ROUGH, RED SKIN

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ-destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

Pretty Pajama Sets of Crinkle Crepe

No one has more decided opinions and preferences concerning clothes than the college girl, who is being outdone for her sojourn at school. It will do no harm to humor her whims—when they are within reason—and thus add a few extra thrills of joy to a heart that is easily elated—or depressed—over trifles.

Many girls prefer pajamas to nightgowns, and many pajama sets indicate this choice. Here is one of light pink cotton crinkle crepe, decked out with little bows of black baby ribbon. The short sleeves and the trousers have narrow frills to finish them, made of net or point d'esprit lace. Crinkle crepe is soft, pretty, easily washed, and need not be ironed. The ribbon bows are removable, being fastened on with tiny safety pins.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW
Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe. Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.
