To Study Corn Borer Conditions in State

Michigan sections infested with the European corn borer will be included in a special inspection trip sponsored jointly by the United States and Canadian departments of agriculture on Sept. 29 and 30, and Oct. 1, according to an announcement made here this week by Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at the Michigan State College.

While corn borer infestations have been heavier in Ohio and Ontario than they have in Michigan, the situation in the southeastern section of the State is serious enough to demand close attention from all who are interested in Michigan's corn crop. A quarantine has been in force this summer in an effort to prevent spread of the pests, which in some sections of Ontario are said to have resulted this year in virtual destruction of the crop.

Prominent government and state authorities will unite on the inspection trip in an effort to determine the exact situation and to make plans for future steps to control the corn borer.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

First Game Law

The Bible furnishes the first game law. For the protection of doves, pigeons, sparrows, quail, lark, and such birds used by the Israelites as food, Deuteronomy 22:6 says: "If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in any tree, or on the ground, thou shalt not take the dam with the young, but shall let the dam go and take the young."

When a man makes a big profit he becomes satisfied with the world.

Lyceum Auspices Senior Class

East Jordan To Have Five Number Course.

The Senior Class of the East Jordan High School is to have charge of the Lyceum Course for this year. They have contracted with the Interstate Lyceum Bureau for five excellent numbers. They are determined to make this year's lyceum a financial success and they ask the co-operation of all the friends of good clean entertainment. The people of this town have been educated to appreciate good movies and the Senior Class feels sure that this same appreciation will be shown toward a Lyceum Course. During the next week a careful canvas of the town will be made and some one person will ask you to buy a ticket.

The remark has been made that this town didn't have enough education to appreciate lyceum. The Senior Class proposes to show the world.

Supporting Home Industries

This newspaper has always preached the support of home industries and has repeatedly asked local citizens to patronize local merchants. In so doing, it is moved to hope that such a common practice will insure to the benefit of all the general prosperity.

Local merchants should not and do not expect our citizens to pay them higher prices for goods which can be obtained elsewhere at lower cost. They do challenge, however, the accuracy of the comparisons in prices and what they desire is fair competition.

Cheapness in price is not necessarily conclusive evidence of a good purchase. The lasting quality of goods bought can only be determined upon trial. Goods bought by mail from residents of other states have behind them no immediate ely available guarantee which our local stores afford.

Merchants who complain of the mail order evil, should not lose sight of the ease with which a buyer shops by mail. Looking over a catalogue is sometimes far easier than asking tired clerks to display various goods. Writing out an order is sometimes simpler than spending one's time in the effort to discover where one can buy an article. The secret behind mail order business lies in these factors which local stores can overcome only by convenient arrangement of their goods for the inspection of possible buyers and prompt and courteous reception to all customers by clerks who really show a welcome. Again, it will be necessary for the local firms to let the public know what they have to sell. This may be done in whatever manner the manager thinks best, but it should be done incessantly and opportunely.

To Stimulate Enthusiasm for Education

American Education Week, under the joint auspices of the United States Bureau of Education, the National Educational Association, and the American Legion, will be observed this year November 16 to 22. Special features suggested for the various days are: Monday, The Constitution; Tuesday, Patriotism; Wednesday, School and Teacher; Thursday, Conservation and Thrift; Friday, Know Your School; Saturday, Community and Health; and Sunday, For God and Country. Since the custom was introduced in 1920 by the United States Commissioner of Education, its observance has widely increased. Suggestions for programs, descriptions of successful methods, and other useful material may be obtained at nominal prices from the Supt. of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Father Sage Says:

After being informed of the cost of hiring a famous singer, a theater manager billed her as a "golden voiced" soprano!

It is funny how a man's opponents are usually crooks and knaves.

Built for Round-the-World Trip

Here is Alton S. Kubitzki of Los Angeles with the cigar-shaped submarine he is building and in which he intends to take a trip around the world. It is 47 feet long and of wood, and the inventor says he will need but 20 gallons of fuel for the globe encircling voyage.

Western Electric Buys Boardman River Plant

A business transaction that may be of inestimable importance to the future of Traverse City, was consummated in that city last week when all of the properties of the Boardman River Electric Light & Power Co. were sold to the General Power & Light Co., of Chicago, a corporation that owns and successfully operates 21 similar properties in as many American cities. The purchase price was not announced. The Boardman River company, which controls two dams on the Boardman river was founded 35 years ago.

National Dairy Show Draws Michigan Men

The National Dairy Show, leading exposition of the year for dairy men of the country, is attracting unusual interest from Michigan farmers this year because of the fact that the show is to be held in a neighboring state, Indiana.

Many Michigan dairymen are planning to drive to Indianapolis between October 10 and 17 for the show, it is said by dairy specialists at the Michigan State College.

The state will not only be represented by cattle exhibits at the exposition but will also have delegations of Boys and Girls club and college judging teams in the judging competitions.

Helping This Town

Local citizens, always engaged in an effort to qualify as loyal boosters, are usually inclined to count as progress only the visible and material things. There are many other necessary requisites to progressive growth and the development of the splendid city.

One of these essentials, in our opinion, is a spirit of hospitality which will welcome strangers into our midst. Newcomers can hardly become attached to a community where the citizens fail to extend to them a generous welcome and in which they are able to make only superficial friendships. We do not mean that the people of a community should receive with rapture every immigrant and grant at once immediate social recognition, but very often citizens fail to offer to strangers who have proper credentials, a reception that is their due.

Another intangible asset in the growth of every town or city is a spirit of cooperation on the part of business men. Too often in cities as small as ours, there is in evidence a lack of sympathy toward some who are trying to succeed and the determination on the part of those holding responsible places in business life to prevent others from becoming equally "prominent." Few local citizens are patriotic enough to desire the growth of their city at the expense of what they consider their personal or professional prestige. This spirit is a severe handicap always.

The small town rivalries that often disrupt social, religious and civic relations are certain to permanently affect a town or city and prevent it from becoming a good place for others to live in. This is especially undesirable in the eyes of newcomers, who will be glad to hunt new cities for their homes and businesses. Just how to prevent these rivalries which occur, of course, in large as well as small cities, is hard to say. It would seem, however, that a community in which there has developed a proper religious atmosphere would be possessed of the spirit necessary to prevent undue magnification of incidental and inevitable differences in local opinions.

If autos increase in number think of the saving in unnecessary houses.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Hillsdale—At a special election held in Jonesville, voters cast an overwhelming majority granting a 20-year franchise to the Southern Michigan Light and Power Company to furnish light and power to that village.

Bay City—Paul Payne, 9-year-old son of Daniel J. Payne, of Hampton township, owes his life to the presence of mind of his younger brother, who pushed him into a stream when his clothes caught fire following a gasoline explosion.

Marquette—Two guards on the wall of the State Branch Prison here prevented the escape of three prison inmates who attempted to gain their freedom in much the same manner that Eddie Weisman and three pals made their sensational getaway last June.

Battle Creek—Frank S. O'Grady, a gateman here for the Michigan Central railroad, lays modest claim to the smallest farm in the world. His ranch is about a yard square, and contains a corn crop of one six-foot stalk with a single ear on it. O'Grady says he hopes the ar is red.

Petoskey—One of the first steps in the general campaign to lengthen the summer tourist season in this region has been taken by the Pere Marquette railway in providing through Pullman service out of here until October 31. In other years the closing of the tourist season usually was set for late September.

Lansing—School children must be taught to walk on the left side of country roads and to look to both right and left before crossing every thoroughfare, Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, and Frank F. Rogers, State highway commissioner said in a joint letter to school teachers.

Cadillac—Potato prices are expected to be much higher this season, according to George Wager, sales manager of the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange here. Home grown potatoes near the large markets are about exhausted, Mr. Wager said, and this will tend to hasten the demand for shipments.

Grand Rapids—William Koffman, Algoma township farmer, was just $25 poorer and considerably wiser when he lost his temper because his neighbor's cows ignored a fence and overran his crops. He maimed several of the cattle with buckshot from his shotgun. He pleaded guilty in Circuit Judge Perkins' court.

South Haven—The English ship, Erington Dunsford, loaded with clay, is due to arrive at this port October 5. Former shipments of clay for use by Kalamazoo paper mills have been docked at Michigan City, but through efforts of the Chamber of Commerce cargoes hereafter will be unloaded here. The Dunsford will be the first ocean-going vessel to dock at this port.

Muskegon—Muskegon has quit furnishing fire protection to North Muskegon and the suburb has purchased a new fire truck. The city hall was remodeled at considerable expense to accommodate the truck. The truck arrived recently and the entire populace turned out to see the truck driven into its new home. Then it was discovered that the truck was so large it could not be put inside the city hall.

Owosso—The city commission will within a few weeks pass an ordinance putting into effect the zoning plan which has been prepared by Irving C. Root, Flint city planning expert. The decision was reached following a hearing in which virtually no changes were suggested. Under the plan the city will be divided into zones for one family and two-family dwellings, apartments, business houses and industrial plants.

Alma—Classes were put under way at Alma college with an enrollment in the four classes that is close to the 300 mark, and is approximately the same as attendance figures of a year ago. An exact check is not possible yet, but it is believed that the record of last year when over 62 per cent of the students enrolled were men, is even exceeded this year. It is a record that few co-educational institutions in the country show.

Lansing—The State government will proceed at once to purchase and condemn land necessary for a 200-foot right-of-way on Gratiot avenue, from Mt. Clemens to Eight-Mile road, a 200-foot right-of-way on Grand River avenue, from Redford west to the Farmington cut-off, and a 120-foot right-of-way on Grand River avenue, from the Farmington cut-off to the village of Farmington. Recommendations for these purchases have been approved by the state administrative board.

Lansing—The state public utilities commission has authorized the Ford Hydro-Electric company to incorporate and do business in Michigan. The company, which is one of the Ford string of hydro-electric projects, has its headquarters in Wisconsin. The Michigan company is capitalized at $25,000, all of which is taken up by the Ford interests. A power plant is being developed on the Menominee river near Iron Mountain. Property owners in the vicinity of the project may protest the use and condemnation of floodage land.

SCHOOL DAYS

YOUR Last Name

IS IT WHISTLER?

WHISTLER, by some thought to be the greatest name among all American artists, is in reality a name of Irish origin. That is to say the first Whistler in this country was Maj. John Whistler, who was born in Ireland in 1756.

Coming here when a young man he served in the Revolution and retired after the war to Hagerstown, Md., with his wife. He was breveted major. His son, George Washington Whistler, was grandson, through his mother, of Sir Edward Bishop of England. He was born in 1800, and was educated at the United States Military college. His wife was Mary Fisher, and his second Anna Matilda McNeill, and it was by her that he had a son named James Abbott McNeill Whistler, who was destined to bring the name into lasting prominence in the history of American art.

James Abbott McNeill Whistler was born in Russia, where his father was engaged as consulting engineer. It is an interesting thing that Whistler was not married until he was fifty-four.

WESTON—This is a name from places in various parts of England. It was also a personal name in the Seventh century.

LAVILLE—A French name, meaning in ville, the city.

CATT—An animal name, pure and simple. A family of Norman origin in England, called first Le Chat, the French for cat. Then the name became Le Cat, and then Catt. Kett is another form of the name.

WHO SAID

"The man whose purse is empty can sing before the robber."

THIS bit of philosophizing on the advantages of being poor was uttered by Decimus Junius Juvenalis, the great Latin writer of poetical satires, whose sayings are best known as the work of "Juvenal"—the popular form in which his name has been handed down through the ages.

Facts concerning the birth, life and death of this famous personage of antiquity are very obscure and are of doubtful authenticity. He is supposed to have been born at Aquinum, a Volscian town in Italy, about forty-two years after the birth of Christ. Who his parents were is not known, but history relates that he was the adopted child of a wealthy freedman. This man furnished the funds with which Juvenal was enabled to support himself while studying with the philosophers at Rome. By profession Juvenal was a pleader, or, as we would say today, a lawyer.

History further relates that he was exiled from his native land and took up his residence in Egypt. Just why he was forced to leave Rome is not stated, but it is a safe assumption that a man of Juvenal's discernment soon saw much to condemn in Rome and did not hesitate to criticize. Such being the case, Juvenal was fortunate that exile was his fate for many others of his time suffered execution for the same offense.

No detailed account of Juvenal's life in Egypt can be found other than that he was put in charge of a cohort of infantry and died while in the discharge of his duty. The only works of this writer and poet that are in existence are 16 satires, composed in hexameters which give a powerful and somber picture of the corrupt condition of the Roman society of his day. It is likely Juvenal's indignation, expressed so forcefully in these satires was responsible for his exile.

Translations of his works have been made by Gifford and by Dryden, the English poet.—Wayne D. McMurray.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

AN ABIDING CONFIDENCE

YOU may often wonder at the success of some envied friend of yours who apparently goes straight without faltering or making any visible mistake.

And it may be, too, that it is he or she who is not counted in your exclusive set as being specially brilliant, who in some way or another manages to keep pace with the head line of the profession in spite of the ill winds of gossip, and holds securely his or her place without any perceptible sign of losing it.

Sometimes it must be admitted that you are burning with jealousy and not infrequently angry.

The contented smile on his or her face is disquieting to you, even though you really try to be charitable and big-hearted.

It cuts deeply into the soul and exposes the raw surface to the biting wind of hate; it sets up a sense of smarting pain just at the moment when you would settle down for the evening with a companionable book.

Like many other envious humans, you fail to look beneath the unruined surface for the cause, being more or less inclined to attribute it to "dumb luck," so away you go continuing in the irritating chase of illusions.

The difference between you and your friend is that through all of his or her trials, he or she has an abiding confidence which has been nursed in trouble and adversity until it has become a lusty offspring of faith.

And this same little glad-eyed spirit is waiting for you, ready at your first invitation to clasp your hand and lead you safely wherever you may want to go, if you will but trust him, wanting nothing for the helpfulness but your loyalty and an abiding confidence.

Mother's Cook Book

For the Children

GOOD food habits are an important part of personal hygiene and thrift. Children acquire such habits by having suitable amounts of suitable foods served to them and then being expected to eat what is set before them.

Seasonal Foods. During the hot weather we like to reduce the amount of meat used, but do not eliminate it entirely. Jellied meat, pressed meat, veal loaves, spiced beef and sliced cold meats find a large place in the menus.

Ham Mousse. Soften a tablespoonful of gelatin in enough cold water to cover. Pour over it a cupful of boiling stock, stir until dissolved, strain and pour the liquid over two cupfuls of chopped ham. Let stand until it begins to thicken, then fold in one cupful of whipped cream. Turn the mixture into a wet mold. Serve on lettuce.

Vegetable Salad. Slice tomatoes and cucumbers and place them on head lettuce that has been well chilled. Pour over a French dressing, using five tablespoonfuls of oil and two of tarragon vinegar and one-half cupful or less of grated cheese, broken in bits. Stir until well blended, adding salt if needed and a few dashes of cayenne.

Belgian Hash. Soak one-half cupful of prunes, one-half cupful of currants, over night, add two finely chopped pig's hocks that have been cooked until the meat falls from the bones, add one-half cupful of sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of vinegar and one-fourth of water. If the vinegar is very acid, use half of each. Add grated nutmeg and a little salt. Put into the oven and cook until the liquid is absorbed.

MODERN EDUCATION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THINGS are done better in the schools now, so those who ought to know assert at least, than they ever were. Psychologists, and pedagogues, and architects, and trained nurses have worked hard to look after the child, to tell how to house him in school, what and how to teach him, and how to make him play systematically whether he wants to or not.

We teach him something about almost everything in these days. He can draw cartoons of his teachers, and design and make his own pajamas, and play the saxophone, and bake biscuits, besides knowing something of Journalism, and stenography, and basket ball. The extent of the knowledge with which the high school graduate has at least had mental or physical contact is amazing.

As I look back upon the conditions under which I was taught as a boy and consider the educational training of those who acted as my teachers, and compare these things with the conditions of today, I marvel that I ever learned anything. Until I entered college I had but two teachers who had been farther than the eighth grade in their own education. I had one teacher who had had a year or two of high school and another who had graduated from a second-rate college.

We learned only a few things in those illiterate days, but what we learned we learned very well. We could spell and we enjoyed being it, and learning to spell as we did standing upon our feet, we learned to pronounce common words correctly. Only a small per cent of the young people who come to college today can spell "accommodate" or "sophomore" or "transferred" or "athletics" or "received" or a score of other words which we use almost daily. Not 10 per cent of the young people in college whom I know can pronounce "discharge" or "penalize" even if they were members of the A. E. F. or played upon the village football team, or "illustrate" or "data."

We learned to manage figures pretty easily even "in our heads," to reason and to work out difficult problems. I asked a college freshman a few days ago to give me the square root of 100, and after spending ten minutes with pencil and paper, he gave it up as too much for him. I could have done it at ten in my head and so could any other normal boy in my class.

We learned to parse words and to diagram and to analyze sentences, and to determine the various relationships between them. These are almost unknown accomplishments today, and words and phrases and clauses in present-day compositions go wandering off by themselves, as does the modern young person, without any regard for their parents' or other linguistic relatives.

We were taught to read aloud in telligent, and I personally was made in some way to like reading. A few days ago, I asked a college sophomore who was getting along badly, to read a paragraph aloud from his textbook and it might have been in a foreign tongue for all the sense he made of it.

I am not criticizing modern education, I'm just saying that forty years ago children were taught some things accurately that the child today doesn't usually know.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then get fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even for fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

Mrs. Sisco-Howard of Boyne City came Wednesday to assist with the house work at the home of A. B. Nicoloy.

Marion Russell is helping the Lew Brys on their hay bailer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Hayden are now at home at Orchard Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Hayden, Mrs. J. W. Hayden and son Robert, of Orchard Hill motored to Petoskey Sunday where they were dinner guests of Mrs. Bessie Newton and son George. The whole party motored to Harbor Springs and returned in the evening.

Mrs. A. Reich went to East Jordan Saturday and had some teeth extracted by Dr. Bechtold.

Mrs. Mercy Woerful is now domiciled at Gravel Hill south side, so the children can attend Star school.

Mr. Fuller and family who have occupied the Arthur Gust place in Mountain Dist. this summer, are moving into the Gillmuth farm, locally known as the old Tillson farm in Three Bells Dist. which they have rented.

J. P. Seiler of East Jordan visited his farm, Knoll Crest, also the Will Sanderson family in Mountain Dist. Sunday.

There were 42 in attendance at the Star of Hope Sunday School, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira McKee of Star Dist. visited at the David Gaunt home in Three Bells Dist. Sunday. Mrs. Gaunt is quite poorly.

Mrs. Will Walker and daughter Ruby of East Jordan spent a few days at their farm home near Intermediate lake.

Miss Irene Holben was an over Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Miles.

CHESTONIA

Box social, Friday evening Oct. 2nd.

Fred Sweet's new house is going up rapidly.

Ernest Williams was a business visitor at East Jordan Monday.

The Kluder entertainment last week Wednesday evening was well attended.

Edd Sutton's little child has been quiet ill, and Harry had to be absent from school.

Rev. Rawlings of East Jordan holds services at the Church of God every Thursday evening. All invited.

The school will hold a box social at school house on Friday evening, Oct. 2nd, benefit of the organ fund. Everybody from town and surrounding country are invited.

The school was closed last Thursday forenoon on account of the teacher attending the funeral of his sister-in-law at Central Lake.

Here's hoping that East Jordan makes a favorable impression on the Normal Board when they visit that place Oct. 2nd. Among other things their hosts advertising their qualifications to the visitors should bear these: we want the North Central Normal because we have a fine water supply, two railroads that can be made to accommodate students coming from all directions; fine boating and bathing facilities, good housing facilities and lots of material for making more, good auto roads in every direction, fine site. And last but not least, public spirited citizens who are ready to help in an educational way; proof, our fine school building and equipment.

It is consolation to know that it will take at least six months to develop another crop of bathing beauties.

CENTRAL LAKE

(Edited by Jesse Morse)

The bridge work is about completed.

Marion Davis, wife and child of Virginia, later of Flint have been visiting friends and relatives here.

Rev. Green the new M. E. pastor has arrived. A reception at the church is planned for him this week.

The Muckle and Yongedike families took a motor trip out Jordan way the first of the week.

Undertaker Hiram Dawson of Ellsworth conducted the funeral of Mrs. Effie Morse here last Thursday. He is an ideal undertaker. Everything is so carefully planned and moves off so quietly.

We never saw a greater profusion of flowers at a funeral than at Mrs. Morse Thursday. Ralph Easton, of Arizona, a brother-in-law, had telegraphed an order to Petoskey and flowers came from there. The Bay View Gleasers, Bay View neighbors and Central Lake friends had contributed. Most touching was a bouquet with a card saying, "From Louise and Billy," children of the mail man. The services held at 10 o'clock at the home of Guy Morse by Rev. Allord, were largely attended. Twenty cars went to the cemetery. The sadness of the accident had aroused the sympathy. There was scarcely a dry eye among those gathered to pay their last respects. Mr. Morse and daughter Doris are undecided as to what they will do. The farm and home have been leased to Mr. O'Dell and family of this place, who have moved onto the place.

Has Been Working For Good Roads Some Forty Years

I came here to rest. In fact I came expecting to remain only a few days and then go on to Nova Scotia. But after supper I started for a walk down Bridge Street. The first seven people we met, one after another said that they were mighty glad to see us and hoped we would stay, and here I am and the summer all gone.

I immediately started talking Good Reinforced Concrete Roads around Pine lake and found them all eager for it, which accounts for the many letters I have written and here goes another.

I think I find most help in trying to look on all interruptions and hindrances to the work that I have planned out to accomplish as discipline, and to trust that time will be given to me to finish it. To be courageous and keep quiet about it although many times I often find hard work to do it. In other words, if at first you do not succeed try, try, again. So I know that it will only be a question of time before we will be riding around Pine lake on a Good Reinforced Concrete Road.

Remember this is not a one man's job we all have to put our shoulders to the wheel and work with a vim if we expect to get it.

We read in Ecclesiastics IX, 10, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." All taxpayers must unite, and fight for the right with all their might. They must demand from these in authority that they will no longer stand for the waste of their road tax money. If you could hear and could talk with as many men who are connected with and engaged in road work as I am, and hear what they have to say, you would exclaim Amen, so mote it be. In a former letter I made a mistake in questioning the cost of our concrete road as I have learned today the road only cost us 26,000 dollars per mile instead of 30,000 dollars. As we only paid 15 per cent of the road it only cost the county 3,900 dollars per mile instead of 4500 dollars. So you see how much what we have lost by not building the balance of the seven miles at that price. We bonded for $350,000. $100,000 each for Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix, and $50,000 for Boyne Falls. The thirteen miles of road that we have built has cost us $3900 per mile amounting to $50,700, which leaves us virtually $55,000 to finish the road on Dixie Highway which should be done right away quick. I don't know whether you have ever heard this or not. It is a dead sure thing that it will do you no harm to hear it again, and it may help you to keep it in mind for future reference.

"Uncle George and Charlie Ferguson returned from a trip to their old homes in Norwood in seventeen (17) minutes both sober and happy. Now compare this with old time means of travel by team, carriage, wagons on old dirt roads and the best time ever made to Charlevoix was one hour and twenty minutes and often when the weather was bad it took from three to four hours to make the trip. Surely comparisons are odious.

You old timers will remember how Uncle George used to talk about weeds. Cut them down and burn them up just before they go to seed was one of his many slogans. And while Uncle George swears occasionally he can't do this weed question justice for they are growing all over the world. He tells a story of the early days when Grandfather Meech, his son, Fred, and Freds son, "Dar" were all parting to go to the River Jordan on their frequent fishing trip. Grandmother Meech did not want her husband to go because she wanted the garden weeded and hoed. Grandmother was stubborn and said, "Well I've been married nigh onto 60 years and I haven't heard nothing but fish, fish, fish, to which Grandfather replied well I've been married nigh onto the same length of time and all that I have heard is weeds, weeds, weeds. This story is a fact and occurred in my presence. Grandfather Meech was a man of large physique, good form, and great strength and his name appears in the state history of Vermont as being the best Brook Trout fisherman in the state and he was very proud of it.

When I was in business I always carried a "Memo" book in which I made notations for things to be done and material purchased. Then when I was seated at my desk out came the little book and all matters were promptly attended to. I had an average memory but the book was a great help and I recommend the habit. This may account for my letters being somewhat jumbled. They ought not to be so, when writing on roads because I have been doing this for forty-two years. The old files of the Charlevoix Sentinel will show this. This reminds me one of the times when I came up from my home to Charlevoix, Bridge Street was a mud hole. The water stood in the street about where the Masonic Temple now stands six to eight inches deep. I told the business men instead of having a canal to drive a team through, that they should have a steamboat or hard road streets, and if they were business men they would have them but that they only had two business men in town, Effie Berdan who ran a Dry Goods store and the late lamented Mrs. Baker who was running a blacksmith shop. And after saying this I had to get out of town pretty lively.

I am willing to admit I am a card crank but not a card shark, for instance. A great many of you know I began the manufacturing of shoe lasts and cutting dies in 1872, and continued the same until 1915. I had to think out a trade mark and decided, "I Die but still I Last." This card I sent out to all the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers in the West without my name signed to it. This kept them guessing until two or three weeks later I sent out my cards and circulars. I am now enclosing my card that I made up when building concrete roads in 1917, and every school teacher should use this card when teaching the children.

Where the Roads?
Hordes of auto now remind us We should build our roads to stay, And departing, leave behind us Kind that rains don't wash away. When our children pay the mortgage, Fathers made to haul their load, They'll not have to ask the question, There's the bonds, where are the roads? Uncle George H. Van Pelt, Advocate for Good Reinforced Concrete Roads, Fireproof Hotels, and America for Americans.

P. S.—Please cut out this letter and keep it for future reference. Florida has nothing on Good old sound reliable Michigan. Property will sell in Charlevoix Co for more money in 1926 than it is selling for now 1925 whether we build a Good Reinforced Concrete Road around Pine lake or not, but if we do build this road there are plenty of places that will sell for from $500.00 to $2,500 per acre and all adjacent property will advance in proportion—Signed Uncle George H. Van Pelt.

Double the Mileage at Half the Cost

Only a few years ago a 32 x 4 cord tire listed over $50.00. Today, you can buy the highest quality 32 x 4 tire—a Firestone Gum-Dipped Cord—for about $26.00.

Last spring crude rubber cost tire makers around 40 cents a pound. Today, it is over 90 cents a pound.

It was not so long ago that 7,500 miles represented the average life of a cord tire, while today, 15,000 miles—and more—is only the usual performance for a Firestone Gum-Dipped Cord.

Due to large, concentrated production, specialized machinery and simplified factory methods, together with economical distribution, Firestone is able to keep tire prices low—no matter where the price of crude rubber goes.

And, because of special Firestone processes, chief among which is Gum-Dipping, motorists are today getting thousands of extra miles by using Gum-Dipped Cords.

Gum-Dipping is an exclusive method used by Firestone. It is an extra process, carried out in special Gum-Dipping plants, after which the cords are put through the usual calendering machines. Gum-Dipping insulates and impregnates every fiber of every cord with rubber, and practically eliminates internal friction and heat, and builds strength and endurance into the tire.

In the day-in and day-out service of taxicabs, buses and trucks—on the cars of hundreds of thousands of motorists everywhere—Gum-Dipped Cords are giving unheard-of mileage, dependability and satisfaction.

Get ready for the coming months of slippery pavements and bad roads. Assure yourself of greater safety, comfort and economy by equipping now with Firestone Full-Size Gum-Dipped Balloons.

CHAPTER XV

In Which the Threads Are Gathered Up

It was a week later. In Sir Bryan Johnstone's office two men were seated, the features of one of whom, at any rate, were well known to the public. Sir Bryan encouraged no notoriety; the man in the street passed him by without recognition every time. But with his companion it was different: as a member of several successive cabinets, his face was well known. And it is safe to say that never in the course of a life devoted to the peculiar vagaries of politics had that face worn such an expression of complete bewilderment.

"But it's incredible, Johnstone," he

"But it's incredible, Johnstone," he remarked for the fiftieth time. "Simply incredible."

remarked for the fiftieth time. "Simply incredible."

"Nevertheless, Sir John," returned the other, "it is true. I have absolute indisputable proof of the whole thing. And if you may remember, I have long drawn the government's attention to the spread of these activities in England."

"Yes, yes, I know," said Sir John Haverton a little testily, "but you have never given us chapter and verse like this before. Incredible," he muttered. "Incredible."

"And yet—the truth," said the other. "That there is an organized and well-financed conspiracy to preach Bolshevism in England we have known for some time; how well organized it is we did not realize. But as you will see from that paper, there is not a single manufacturing town or city in Great Britain that has not got a branch of the organization installed, which can if need be draw plentifully on funds from headquarters."

Sir John Haverton nodded thoughtfully.

"I must go into all this in detail," he remarked. "But in the meantime you have raised my curiosity most infernally about this Black Gang of yours."

Sir Bryan leaned back in his chair and lit a cigarette.

"There are one or two gaps I haven't filled in myself at the moment," he answered. "But I can tell you very briefly what led us to our discoveries at that house in Essex of which I spoke to you—Maybrick hall. About six days ago I received a typewritten communication of a similar type to one or two which I had seen before. A certain defect in the typewriter made it clear that the source was the same, and that source was the leader of the Black Gang. Here is the communication."

He opened a drawer in his desk, and passed a sheet of paper across to the cabinet minister.

"If," it ran, "jolly old McIver will take his morning constitutional to Maybrick hall in Essex, he will find much to interest him in that delightful and rural spot. Many specimens, both dead and alive, will be found there, all in a splendid state of preservation. He will also find a great many interesting devices in the house. Above all, let him be careful of an elderly clergyman of beneficent aspect, whose beauty is only marred by a stiff and somewhat swollen neck, accompanied by a charming lady who answers to the name of Janet. They form, the peerless gems of the collection, and were on the point of leaving the country with the enclosed packet which I removed from them for safe keeping. My modesty forbids me to tell an unmarried man like you in what portion of dear Janet's garments this little bag was found, but there's no harm in your guessing."

"What the devil?" sputtered Sir John. "Is it a practical joke?"

"Far from it," answered the other. "Read to the end."

"After McIver has done this little job," Sir John read out, "he might like a trip to the north. There was an uninhabited island off the west coast of Mull, which is uninhabited no longer. He may have everything he finds there, with my love.—The leader of the Black Gang."

Sir John laid down the paper and stared at the director of criminal investigation.

"Is this the rambling of a partially demented intellect?" he inquired with mild sarcasm.

"Nothing of the sort," returned the other shortly. "McIver and ten plain-clothes men went immediately to Maybrick hall. And they found it a very peculiar place. There were some fifteen men there—trussed up like so many fowls, and alive. They were laid out in a row in the hall."

"Enthroned in state, in two chairs at the end, and also trussed hand and foot, were the beneficent clergyman and Miss Janet. So much for the living ones, with the exception of an Italian, who was found peacefully sleeping upstairs, with his right wrist padlocked to the wall by a long chain. I've mentioned him last, because he was destined to play a very important part in the matter." He frowned suddenly. "A very important part, confound him," he repeated. "However, we will now pass to the other specimens. In the grounds were discovered—a dead fowl, a dead fox—and three dead men."

Sir John ejaculated explosively, sitting up in his chair.

"They had all died from the same cause," continued the other imperturbably—"electrocution." But that was nothing compared to what they found inside. In an upstairs room was a dreadful looking specimen more like an ape than a man, whose neck was broken. In addition, the main artery of his left arm had been severed with a knife. And even that was mild to what they found downstairs. Supported against the wall was a red-headed man stone dead. A bayonet fixed to a rifle had been driven clean through his chest, and stuck six inches into the wall behind him. And on that the body was supported.

"But, my dear fellow," sputtered the cabinet minister, "you can't expect me to believe all this. You're pulling my leg."

"Never further from it in my life, Haverton," said the other. "I admit it seems a bit over the odds, but every word I've told you is gospel. To return to the discoveries. McIver found that the house was the headquarters of a vast criminal organization. There were schemes of the most fantastic descriptions cut and dried in every detail. Some of them were stupid: some were not. I have them all here. This one"—he glanced through some papers on his desk—"concerns the blowing of a large gap in one of the retaining walls of the big reservoir at Staines. This one concerns a perfectly-thought-out plot on your life when you go to Beauchamp hall next week. You were to be found dead in your railway carriage."

"What?" roared Sir John, springing to his feet.

"It would very likely have failed," said Sir Bryan calmly, "but they would have tried again. They don't like you or your views at all—these gentlemen. But those are the least important. From time immemorial wild, fanatical youths have done similar things: the danger was far greater and more subtle. And perhaps the most dangerous activity of all was what I have spoken about already—Maybrick hall was the headquarters of these poisonous proletarian Sunday schools. But in addition to that there was forgery going on there on a big scale; money is necessary for their activities. There were also long lists of their agents in different parts of the country, and detailed instructions for fomenting industrial unrest. But you have it all there—you can read it at your leisure for yourself. Particularly I commend to your notice, the series of pamphlets on Ireland, and the methods suggested for promoting discord between England and France, and England and America."

Sir Bryan lit a cigarette.

"To return to the personal side of it, McIver, engrossed in his search, paid very little attention to the row of mummies in the hall. They certainly seemed extraordinarily safe, and one can hardly blame him. But the fact remains that, at some period during the morning, the Italian, who, if you remember, was padlocked in a bedroom upstairs, escaped. How I can't tell you; he must have had a key in his pocket. They found the padlock open, and the room empty. And going downstairs they found the chairs recently occupied by the clergyman and Miss Janet empty also. Moreover from that moment no trace of any of them has been found. It is as if the earth had opened and swallowed them. Which brings us to the packet enclosed with the letter from the leader of the Black Gang."

He crossed to a safe and took out the little chamois leather bag of diamonds.

"Nice stones," he remarked quietly. "Worth literally a king's ransom. The pink one is part of the Russian crown jewels; the remainder belonged to the Grand Duke Georgius, who was murdered by the Bolsheviks. His son who had these in his possession, died ten days ago of an overdose of a sleeping draught in Amsterdam. At least that is what I understood until I received these. Now I am not so sure. I would go further, and say I am quite sure that even if he did die of an overdose, it was administered by someone else. And it was administered by the beneficent clergyman calling himself the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor—the most amazing international criminal of this or any other age—the man who, with Miss Janet and the Italian, has vanished into thin air, right under McIver's nose."

"And you mean to say this man has been in England and you haven't laid him by the heels?" said Sir John incredulously.

"Unfortunately that is what I mean," answered the other. "The police of four continents know about him, but that's a very different thing from proof. This time we have proof—these diamonds; and the man has vanished—utterly and completely. He is the master mind who controls and directs, but very rarely actually does anything himself. That's why he's so devilishly difficult to catch. But we'll do it sooner or later."

The cabinet minister was once more studying the typewritten communication from the leader of the Black Gang.

"It's the most astounding affair, this, Johnstone," he said at length. "Most astounding. And what's all this about the island off the coast of Mull?"

Sir Bryan laughed.

"Not the least astounding part of the whole show, I assure you. But for you to understand it better I must go back two or three months, to the time when we first became aware of the existence of the Black Gang. A series of very strange disappearances were taking place; men were being spirited away, without leaving a trace behind them. Of course we knew about it, but in view of the fact that our assistance was never asked to find them, and still more in view of the fact that in every case they were people whose room we preferred to their company, we lay low and said nothing."

"From unofficial inquiries I had carried out we came to the conclusion that this mysterious Black Gang was a reality, and that, further, it was intimately connected with these disappearances. But we also came to the conclusion that the ideals and objects of this gang were in every way desirable. Such a thing, of course, could not be admitted officially; the abduction of anyone is a criminal offense. But we came to the conclusion that the Black Gang was undoubtedly an extremely powerful and ably led organization whose object was simply and solely to fight the Red element in England. The means they adopted were undoubtedly illegal—but the results were excellent. Whenever a man appeared preaching Bolshevism, after a few days he simply disappeared. In short, a reign of terror was established amongst the terrorists. And it was to put that right I have no doubt that the Reverend Theodosius Longmoor arrived in this country."

Sir Bryan thoughtfully lit another cigarette.

"To return to the island, McIver went there, and after some little difficulty located it, out of the twenty or thirty to which the description might apply. He found it far from uninhabited, just as that letter says. He found it occupied by some fifty or sixty rabid anarchists—the gentlemen who had so mysteriously disappeared—who were presided over by twenty large demobilized soldiers commanded by an ex-sergeant-major of the Guards. The sixty frenzied anarchists, he gathered, were running a state on communist lines, as interpreted by the ex-sergeant-major. And the interpretation moved even McIver to tears of laughter. It appeared that once every three hours they were all drawn up in a row, and the sergeant-major, with a voice like a bull, would bellow:

"Should the ruling classes have money?"

"Then they answered in unison—'No.'"

"Should anyone have money?" Again they answered 'No.'"

"Should everyone work for the common good for love?" 'Yes.'"

"Whereat he would roar: 'Well, in this here island there ain't no ruling classes, and there ain't no money, and there's dam' little love, so go and plant more potatoes, you lop-eared sons of Beelzebub.'"

"At which point the parade broke up in disorder."

Sir John was shaking helplessly.

"This is a jest, Johnstone. You're joking."

"I'm not," answered the other. "But I think you'll admit that the man who started the whole show—the leader of the Black Gang—is a humorist, to put it mildly, who cannot well be spared."

"My dear fellow, the cabinet is the only place for him. If only he'd export two or three of my colleagues to this island and let 'em plant potatoes I'd take off my hat to him. Tell me—do I know him?"

Sir Bryan smiled.

"I'm not certain; you may. But the point, Haverton, is this. We must take cognizance of the whole thing, if we acknowledge it at all. Therefore shall we assume that everything I have been telling you is a fairy story; that the Black Gang is non-existent—I may say that it will be shortly—and that what has already appeared in the papers is just a hoax by some irresponsible person? Unless we do that there will be a cause célèbre fought out on class prejudice—a most in-judicious thing at the present moment. I may say that the island is shut down, and the sixty pioneers have departed to other countries. Also quite a number of those agents whose names are on the list you have left out on shores during the past few days. It is merely up to us to see that they don't come back. But nothing has come out in the papers; and I don't want anything to come out either."

He paused suddenly, as a cheerful voice was heard in the office outside.

"Ah! here is one Captain Drummond, whom I asked to come round this morning," he continued, with a faint smile. "I wonder if you know him."

"Drummond?" repeated the other. "Is he a vast fellow with an ugly face?"

"That's the man," said Sir Bryan. "I've seen him at his aunt's—old Lady Meltrose. She says he's the biggest foot in London."

Sir Bryan's smile grew more pronounced as the door opened and Hugh came in.

"Morning, Tum-tum," he boomed genially. "How's the liver and all that?"

"Morning, Hugh. Do you know Sir John Haverton?"

"Morning, Sir John. Jolly old cabinet merry and bright? Or did you all go down on Purple Polly at Goodwood yesterday?"

Sir John rose a little grimly.

"We have other things to do besides backing horses, Captain Drummond. I think we have met at Lady Meltrose's house, haven't we?"

"More than likely," said Hugh affably. "I don't often dine there; she ropes in such a ghastly crowd of bores, don't you know?"

"I feel sure, Captain Drummond, that you're an admirable judge." Sir John turned to Sir Bryan Johnstone and held out his hand. "Well, I must be off. Good-morning, Johnstone—and you've thoroughly roused my curiosity. I'd very much like to know who the gentleman is whom we've been discussing. And in the meantime I'll look through these papers and let you know my decision in due course."

He bustled out of the office, and Hugh sank into a chair with a sigh of relief.

"The old boy's clothes seem full of body this morning, Tum-tum," he remarked as the door closed. "Indigestion—or don't the elastic-studded boots fit?"

"Do you know what we have been discussing, Hugh?" said the other quietly.

"Not an earthly, old man. Was it that new one about the girl in the grocer's shop?"

"We've been discussing the leader of the Black Gang," said Sir Bryan, with his eyes fixed on the man sprawling in the chair opposite.

Not by the twitch of a muscle did Drummond's face change; he seemed engrossed in the task of selecting a cigarette.

"You've been in Deauville, haven't you, Hugh—the last few days?"

"Quite right, old man. All among the fairies."

"You don't know that a burglary has taken place at your house in London?"

"A burglary!" Drummond sat up with a jerk. "Why the deuce hasn't Denny told me?"

"A very small one," said Sir Bryan, "committed by myself, and perhaps he doesn't know. I took—your typewriter."

For a few moments Hugh Drummond stared at him in silence; then his lips began to twitch.

"I see," he said at length. "I meant to have that defective 's' repaired."

"You took me in, old boy," continued Sir Bryan, "utterly and absolutely. If it hadn't been for one of the men at Maybrick hall turning king's evidence, I don't believe I should have found out now."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" asked Drummond after a pause.

"Nothing. I was discussing the matter with Sir John this morning, and we both agreed that you either deserved penal servitude or a seat in the cabinet. And since neither course commends itself to us, we have decided to do nothing. There are reasons, which you will appreciate, against any publicity at the moment. But, Hugh, the Black Gang must cease."

"Carried, nem. con., Tum-tum. It shall automatically dissolve today. Now, one for you. Why did you let Carl Peterson escape? I nearly killed him that night, after I'd bayoneted the Russian."

"How did you know he had escaped?" demanded Sir Bryan.

Hugh felt in his pocket and produced a note.

"Read it," he said, passing it across the desk.

"It was a pity you forgot that there might be another key to the padlock, Captain Drummond," it ran. "And Giuseppe is an old friend of mine. I quite enjoyed our single."

Sir Bryan returned the note without a word, and Drummond replaced it in his pocket.

He rose and grinned at his friend.

"It's deuced good of you, old man, and all that . . ." The eyes of the two men met.

"If it was found out, I should be looking for another job," remarked Sir Bryan dryly. "And perhaps I should not get the two thousand pounds which I understand the widow of the late Glinger Martin has received anonymously."

"Shut-up," said Drummond awkwardly.

"Delighted, old man," returned the other. "But the police in that district are demanding a rise of pay. She has been drunk and disorderly five times in the last week."

The fish was hooked on an ordinary steel casting rod with a light silk casting line on a vamp minnow. The "old granddaddy muskie of them all" battled for his life for over an hour before succumbing to the reel and line. He was brought to the wall in a net. All Blouses Promote the Two-Piece Mode

Juniper dresses, blouses and sweaters (to be worn with separate skirts) help to maintain the prestige of the two-piece mode in apparel for ordinary daily wear. The return of navy to favor this fall is another factor that contributes much to the success of blouses. This conservative but spirited color, is the best of all selections for utility wear and makes a fine background for enlivening trimmings. A blouse of navy canton crepe is shown in the picture with handings of Persian crepe. It is very simple to make and very pleasing in design. Worn with navy worsted skirt, with inverted plaits at the front and sides. It makes an irreplaceable costume for business or day-time wear.

FRENCH BLAST RIFFS FROM EL BIBANE PEAK

Take Rock-Rimmed Fortress From Tribesmen After Terrific Fighting.

Fes, France; Morocco.—Bombs and bullets from 150 airplanes and 10,000 men blasted 1,000 Rifians from the rock-rimmed fortress atop El Bibane peak when the French launched a furious counter attack against the precipitous stronghold.

The twenty-five air squadrons, including naval goliaths, bombed the heights for hours before the ground forces advanced. Bibane had been captured the day before by a sudden Rifian assault, and the French sought vengeance. While the planes dripped death from above, field guns hurled shrapnel into the Rifian position, 2,500 feet above the valley.

When the infantry was unleashed against the Rifians, after artillery and aerial preparation, the soldiers halted only long enough to bring their machine guns into place before rushing forward for the crazy, scrambling assault on the peak where they hoped to obliterate the memory of the costly defeat by a liberal shedding of Rifian blood. The enemy replied with a burst of concentrated rifle fire, but the attackers covered the first 500 yards with slight losses.

Reaching the outer works, the French clambered over, smashed through the Rifian barbed wire and poured into the fort.

The Rifians fled helter skelter down the eastern slope, hoping to escape into the defiles on the other side of the valley. But they were caught at the bottom, where the slope eases into the valley contour, under the fire of armored cars and tanks and the Mehalla native cavalry, which had girdled the mountain while the battle was proceeding on the summit. These horsemen took many Rifians prisoners.

The bulk of the infantry, in one attacking column, climbed crests a mile to the north of Bibane.

Bayonets and grenades forced the Rifians out of the blockhouse at Dar Renuch; and for the first time the attackers could see the Rifians massed at the summit of El Bibane. By noon the engagement was over, and the defenders who had escaped capture were fleeing into the jagged country to the north.

Coolidge Approves the Action Taken Against British Solon.

Washington.—Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, has been refused admission to the United States to attend the interparliamentary union here next month as a British delegate.

Secretary Kellogg announced that instructions had been cabled to London to revoke the passport visa already granted Saklatvala. He explained that this action was taken under the immigration law because of inflammatory and revolutionary speech by Saklatvala in parliament and elsewhere.

Mr. Kellogg's announcement was issued after he had conferred with President Coolidge.

The decision to exclude Saklatvala is in conflict with the view of Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee. The senator said he thought it was neither necessary nor wise to exclude the Communist.

In announcing his decision Mr. Kellogg said:

"The department has instructed the London consulate general to revoke the visa granted Saklatvala on the ground that his admission is inconsistent with the immigration law. It is reported that he made the following statement:

"I am going to America as a friend of the working classes. British imperialism ought to crumble in the dust. I am out to work for a revolution and for the day when the workers will control the whole world. But before this comes you will have to face the cold steel."

A Bargain In Quality
Fine One-Profit Studebaker Coach
—at a new low price

THIS Standard Six Coach has always been a wonderful value—a leader of the Studebaker line. Yet on August 1st, its previous low price was reduced one hundred dollars. Today you can buy the same fine car without a single change in equipment or construction—at this new low price which only further emphasizes the Studebaker policy of offering you a "bargain in quality."

$1299.42 Delivered for Cash in East Jordan
Or, under Studebaker's fair and liberal Budget Payment Plan, this Coach may be purchased out of monthly income with an initial payment of only $656 Down

Here is a truly fine coach—built throughout from quality materials and careful workmanship. Fine northern white ash and hard maple are used in body construction. We pay a premium to obtain the toughest grades of steel. The upholstery is a durable woolen fabric—the windshield and windows are real plate glass. Extra equipment includes a gasoline gauge, clock, stop light, etc.

According to the rating of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce this Standard Six Coach is the most powerful car of its size and weight. Full-size balloon tires and an especially designed steering mechanism add to its riding and driving ease. A completely machined crankshaft gives perfect engine balance and reduces vibration to a minimum.

Yet this Standard Six Coach sells for no more than competing cars—its low price is made possible by the Studebaker policy of one-profit manufacture.

There are only two cars manufactured on this one-profit basis. Studebaker in the fine car field, and the Ford in the low priced field. Only in these two cases does one company in its own plants make all bodies, all engines, all clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

This one-profit policy not only eliminates the extra profits of outside parts and body makers—but it also makes possible unit-built construction. All parts for Studebaker cars are designed, engineered and built as a unit. And being built as a unit they function as a unit—which results in years longer life, scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort, lower repair costs and much higher resale value.

But the only way to judge this Standard Six Coach is to see it—to actually sit behind the wheel and drive it through the thick of traffic, over the steepest hills and rough country roads. Then, and only then, can you completely appreciate its amazing power, its velvet smoothness and wonderful riding qualities.
