Band Concert Great Success

Boys Make Big Improvement
Since Last Appearance

A large and enthusiastic gathering of local citizens greeted Mr. TerWee and his Band Boys Friday night at the Temple Theatre, where the movie picture of "White Fang" was put on for the benefit of the High School Band. No doubt the picture, featuring Strongheart drew a good many patrons to the theatre, yet from discussions on the street the next day, it was noticed the band seemed to be even more of an attraction. Very few city bands can hold their own with TerWee's youngsters. It is a task quite beyond the time and space allotted to the writer to point out individual abilities, so we will have to pass that over for it would be hardly fair to say TerWee's expert drummers play any more important part than other instruments in the organization.

As Mr. Thomas remarked the next day, the show seemed to be the best at hand for the purpose. However, it was not as well directed and as strong a picture as one might expect for it was built around the dog "Strongheart." In discussing the matter with Mr. Thomas, he as well as the writer were disappointed with one or two parts in the show but sometimes we have to make the best of things. Mr. Thomas, you will find is trying to pick out the very best pictures possible, considering the expense and returns from them.

As a whole, the evening was a great success for the band, of some twenty-eight or thirty pieces, would do credit to any function or organization should they be called on to repeat the concert. Very few people around about or in nearby cities perhaps realize the quality of music put up by these youngsters.

The Temple Theatre was packed from top to bottom. Perhaps a thousand people attended the show that evening and the financial results were $75.00 toward the new coats for the boys. The boys and Mr. Ter Wee are to be congratulated on the steady improvement. If they keep it up they will not only be a greater credit to the school but to themselves later on. Many of them perhaps will use their talents in other organizations at College and other places, and the coming year should see many good musical jobs thrown their way, such as playing at fairs, picnics, etc. when they can, easily buy any uniform necessary.

Mr. Thomas and the boys want the public to know they appreciated their support Friday night, and that it gives the band a real inspiration to go on to greater efforts in the future.

Central Lake Defeats East Jordan Quintet

Last Friday night East Jordan High School Basketball team was defeated by Central Lake with a score 8 to 10. The East Jordan quintet took the lead at the beginning of the game and held it until the fourth quarter, at which time the score was 8 to 2. At the beginning of the fourth quarter, Central Lake made a substitution, Delvin for Boyce, and the resulting combination managed to ring three baskets, which tied the score. In the overtime period Central Lake made the winning shot.

As long as the East Jordan team played an offensive game, they showed themselves superior, but at the beginning of the fourth quarter, they reverted to defensive game and tried to practice stalling. The results would indicate that they are very deficient in this art.

Even though they were defeated, the boys did not have their fun entirely spoiled, for the people of Central Lake clearly demonstrated that they could be generous in victory. The boys were sumptuously feasted and royally entertained. They have no alibi, and only praise for their victorious opponents.

Lineup for the game:
Central Lake—Delvin, R. F.; Boyce, L. F.; Cornet, Center; Washburn, R. G.; and Anis, L. G.
East Jordan—Johnson, R. F.; Beat, L. F.; Ross, Center; Snyder, R. G.; Shedina, L. G.
Subs—Central Lake: Boyce for Delvin, Delvin for Boyce.
East Jordan: Shedina for Ross; Ross for Shedina, Shedina for Ross.
Referee: Burt of Ellsworth.

"KIVALINA OF THE ICE LANDS" AT TEMPLE THEATRE

A pictorial record of Earl Rossman's two year stay among the Eskimos in the most Northern part of the American Continent is unfolded in "Kivalina of the Ice Lands" shown at the Temple Theatre this week.

A story of life among the Eskimos with the striking scenes of the freezing of the Arctic Ocean, breaking away of the ice floes the reindeer stampede, seal hunting and the Aurora Borealis in color. Making a very interesting picture.

Joseph Zoulek Passes Away At Chicago

Joseph Zoulek passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Blanche De-Laurentis, at Chicago, last Friday evening, Feb'y 5th, after a couple of hours illness from high blood pressure.

Mr. Zoulek was born in Bohemia, Dec. 18, 1866, his parents being Joseph and Mary Zoulek. When about 7 years old, he came with his parents to Chicago, Ill., where they resided for a short time, then removed to Traverse City, Mich.

On April 20th, 1879 he was united in marriage to Miss Anna Kucera at Traverse City. A few years later, in 1887, Mr. and Mrs. Zoulek came to East Jordan. Mr. Zoulek was a contractor. Mrs. Zoulek passed away Jan. 2, 1924 at Chicago, and her remains were brought to East Jordan. Deceased is survived by three daughters—Mrs. Jennie Venicombe of Springfield, Ill., Mrs. Emma Monk and Mrs. Blanche De-Laurentis, both of Chicago, Ill. Also by three brothers and two sisters:—Peter, Louis and Frank Zoulek of East Jordan, Mrs. Mary Valley of Traverse City, and Mrs. Carrie Christopher of Old Mission.

The remains were brought to East Jordan, Monday, and taken to the home of his brother, Frank Zoulek, and funeral services were held from the Presbyterian church, Tuesday afternoon, Feb'y 9th, conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Sidebotham. Interment at Sunset Hill.

Relatives from out-of-town here to attend the funeral were the above mentioned three daughters, also Mrs. Mary Valley of Traverse City, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Zoulek of Traverse City, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Christopher and Henry Helfferich of Old Mission.

Port Huron—The tug Columbia, which started out from Marine City to huck the ice in St. Clair river to assist the car ferry international, has given up the task. The tug was able to break through but four miles of ice in 30 hours. The car ferry succeeding in releasing herself and has returned to her berth at this port. The Columbia returned to Marine City and will again go into winter quarters.

Lansing—Vernon Fisher, salesman for an Illinois insurance company, was arrested in Muskegon at the request of Leonard T. Hands, insurance commissioner. Hands was advised by state police. Fisher is said to have been selling accident and health insurance in several Michigan towns, although the company he represents has been refused a permit to operate here. He is charged with selling insurance without a license.

Highland Park—Highland Park people will vote on a special ballot at the primaries March 1 to amend their city charter in order to join with Detroit in solving the rapid transit situation, as the result of a resolution offered by Mayor Clarence E. Gittens and adopted at a council meeting. The resolution, which provides for a contract with the rapid transit commission of Detroit for building subways to take care of the transportation question in the future was adopted unanimously.

Saginaw—Political circles in the Saginaw valley have it that Nelson G. Farrier, of Hillman, a five-term member of the state legislature probably will be a candidate for speaker of the 1927 session. Farrier has been chairman of the ways and means committee for several sessions. The only favored candidate for speaker of the next regular house is Representative Joseph W. Warner, of Washtenaw county, and it is said he will withdraw for Farrier if the upstate veteran enters the race.

Lansing—One of the measures of importance likely to come before the special session this month is the reallocation of the automobile license and gasoline tax revenues so there will be available about $2,000,000 more during the coming year for paving trunk lines than the 1926 act provides. This proposition does not contemplate any new taxes. Another proposition is for an appropriation to replace the buildings at the Central Michigan Normal School at Mt. Pleasant, destroyed by fire.

Lansing—Alex. J. Grossbeck has set Tuesday, Feb. 16, as the day for convening the Legislature in special session. The session, the Governor said, would be called primarily to ratify the agreement signed recently by himself and Sir Henry L. Thornton, president of the Grand Trunk Railway System, by the terms of which the company will remove its tracks where they interfere with widening Woodward avenue between Detroit city limits and Pontiac, and also surrender its special charter, held by the courts to be perpetual.

Masons And Firemen Win

Masons Trim Presbyterians 23 to 14. Firemen 14, K.'s. 4.

The Masons hopped on the Presbyterians for a six run lead in the first inning of their game with the Presbyterians last Monday night at the High School Gym. The Presbyterian team seemed to have wax on their fingers as they could not hang on to the ball and during the course of the game the ball was fumbled continually. The Masons took advantage of all these breaks and with the aid of good pitching by Sedgman, fielding by Watson and Jacklin, and the hitting of Bechtold, who went to bat six times, secured six hits which resulted in six runs. One of them turned out a home run due to the faulty fielding of the Presbyterians.

In the second game of the evening the strong Firemen team continued their winning streak by taking the K. P. team into camp by the score of 14 to 5. Hector McKinnon started pitching for the K. P.'s but poor support behind him netted the Firemen four runs in the first inning. He was relieved by Kowalske, who finished the game. Jack McKinnon pitched an unusually good game having 17 strike outs to his credit at the end of the game.

Below is the standings of the teams up to February 15.

	Won	Lost	Percentage
Holy Name	5	2	714
Firemen	5	2	714
Presbyterians	3	4	431
Masons	3	4	431
K. P.	3	4	431
Methodists	2	5	284

Next week Monday, Feb. 15.

K. P.'s vs. Methodists, 7:00.
Presbyterians vs. Holy Name, 8:15.

Next Wednesday evening at 7:30 the Masonic team from Boyne City plays a return game with the Masonic team here at the High School gym. The game will be free to the public. Everyone is urged to come and enjoy a good game.

"Duty Of All To Observe Prohibition Law"

In his general message to Congress early in December, President Coolidge said:

"Under the orderly process of our fundamental institutions the Constitution was lately amended providing for national prohibition. The Congress passed an act for its enforcement and similar acts have been provided by most of the states.

It is the duty of all who come under its jurisdiction to observe the spirit of the law and it is the duty of the Department of Justice and the Treasury Department to enforce it.

Action to prevent smuggling, illegal transportation in interstate commerce, abuse in the use of permits, and existence of sources of supply for illegal traffic, is almost entirely upon the federal government.

Through treaties with foreign government and increased activities of the Coast Guard, revenue agents, district attorneys and enforcement agents, effort is being made to prevent these violations, but the Constitution also put a concurrent duty on the states. We need their active and energetic cooperation, the vigilant action of their police and the jurisdiction of their courts, to assist in enforcement. I request of the people observance, of the public officers continuing efforts for enforcement, and of the Congress favorable action on the budget recommendation for the prosecution of this work."

To East Jordan

I am looking for a small live town in which to locate permanently, but am not going to the expense of moving until satisfied that the business will warrant it. I have had nearly forty years of experience at a watchmaker's bench and will guarantee all work. I will be at W. Bennett's place on Main St. one more week and if the work does not show up—good-bye East Jordan.

If the people of East Jordan want a first class Watch, Clock and Jewelry Repair Shop, now is the time to show it.

Vireos Are Fond of Caterpillars

Scale Insects and Other Tree Pests Are Relished by Birds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

During the summer almost anywhere in the United States at least one species of vireo, and usually more than one, is to be found flitting about in the trees or shrubbery. In the East and Central regions the common species is the red-eyed vireo, but the white-eyed, warbling, and yellow-throated vireos also are abundant. The Philadelphia, blue-headed, hutton, and bell vireos are more or less widely distributed.

Are Vireos Beneficial?
As with other common species of birds, the question as to whether or not vireos are beneficial is legitimately raised, and to answer it, the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture has made a study of their food habits, by examining the stomach contents of a great many of these birds.

The conclusions reached are set forth in a recent report (Department Bulletin, 1355), "Food Habits of the Vireos: A Family of Insectivorous Birds." The food of the several vireos is shown to be very similar though sometimes varying in proportions. Most of the insects eaten are either neutral or definitely injurious in their economic relations, and may be placed on the credit side of the account of these birds.

Fond of Caterpillars.
All vireos are especially fond of caterpillars. Scale insects are a notable item of vireo food, and other tree pests are freely eaten. Many destructive weevils were found in the stomachs examined, including such forms as the clover-leaf, clover-root, cotton-boll, and nut weevils, the plum curculio and bark beetles. Vireos also destroy ants and grasshoppers. Useful insects taken by the vireos include some of the hymenopterans, predaceous bugs and beetles, among which are ladybird beetles, which are almost uniformly beneficial. Although it is regretted that vireos consume as many ladybirds as the evidence indicates, yet they also devour many of the pests attacked by the ladybirds, which must, in part excuse them. As fruit eaters the vireos are practically harmless.

Those interested in the bulletin may obtain a copy, while the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C.

American Turken Found to Be Extremely Hardy

Have you ever heard of the turken? It is not a new bird but it is new to America. It has been bred for centuries in Russia, where it was the favored and protected bird of the royal family. Three of these birds were brought to California by George P. Schaefer, proprietor of "Halo Sacred" breeding farm, Menlo Park, Cal. Mr. Schaefer crossed these birds with Rhode Island Reds, the resultant issue being the much-talked-of fowl, the American turken. The economical value of the fowl is said to be very considerable, it being the producer of a high average of large white eggs, while its abundant flesh is juicy and white. The breed is extremely hardy and the chicks mature quickly. The writer has personal knowledge of a 50 per cent hatch of eggs shipped from California. The chicks were hardy and strong and easily raised, the mortality being far below that of ordinary chicks. At present the supply is limited, but for the future this may become a widely-raised breed.—Seed World.

Egg-Producing Pullets Need Good Protein Feed

For egg production pullets should have access to protein feed. The best method of supplying the protein feed is by feeding dry mash from a self-feeder. The following dry mash is recommended for your attention:
One part by weight of wheat bran.
One part by weight of middlings.
One part by weight of ground corn or corn meal.
One part by weight of heavy oats.
One part by weight of meat scrap.
Another dry mash used with success is:
Equal parts of ground wheat, oats, corn and meat scrap. The amount of meat scrap used can be somewhat reduced if milk is fed. A good scratch feed of home-grown feeds and as good as can be had is:
Five parts wheat, three parts corn, and two part oats.

Dairy Cows Need Plenty of Water During Winter

Lots of farmers who milk a few cows during the winter months, have the idea that because the water is cold, it cuts down on the milk flow. This is hardly the correct way of putting it, for you will find that the real reason dairy cows don't give full milk production when given ice water, is because they don't drink enough of it. Professor Weaver of the Iowa experiment station has found that it takes about four pounds of water for every pound of milk a cow gives, so after what temperature the water is, the water is so cold that the cows drink less, they give less milk, and the water for them, and if it doesn't make a difference.

This Country Was On A Beer Basis In 1918

Those who are fighting to substitute a "modified form of prohibition" permitting the manufacture and sale of beer and wine for the absolute prohibition law now in effect, apparently overlook the fact that this country was practically on a beer basis in 1918, the last war year. It had been on this basis for about twenty years, as shown by the United States statistical abstract. These advocates of beer declare that if beer is made available to those who desire alcoholic beverages there will be less drunkenness, less crime, less corruption in government, than there is now under absolute prohibition.

The attention of those who are inclined to believe this theory is called to conditions existing in 1918: In 1918 the drinkers in this country were drinking their alcohol in beer. The United States Statistical Abstract for 1920, page 561, gives the following figures, showing the total consumption per capita of distilled spirits, wines and malt liquors of the year 1918:

- Per capita consumption of distilled spirits, .89
- Per capita consumption of wines, .49
- Per capita consumption of malt liquors, 49.80
- Per capita consumption of all liquors and wines, 18.18

These official figures that of the 16 gallons per capita of alcoholic beverages consumed, almost 15 gallons were beer. Less than one gallon was whisky.

Would these beer pleaders have the people believe that the drunkenness, the lawlessness centered in the 177,000 saloons of that day, all the evils of the liquor traffic which became so fragrant that the people rose in their might and overthrew the traffic—would they have the people believe that these evils were all the result of the per capita consumption of less than one gallon of whisky and not of the per capita consumption of almost 15 gallons of beer?

And all this was the golden era of beer; the brewer was supreme. The manufacture of whisky had been stopped in 1917; the distiller was practically out of business. The brewer owned the saloons. He was the dominant factor in the liquor industry. He had come into his own, as he saw it. Beer ruled. It was the beer age. And it is to the return of this age that the enemies of prohibition invite the people.

The people of the United States do not have to look to the miserable failure of the beer experiment in the province of Ontario for a warning. They need only remember what the traffic was like, what it meant to society and government in the United States in 1918.

Don't Cash Checks

Don't cash the check of any stranger, is the warning that is being sent out by the mercantile associations of this state. Every day they appear in some new guise, with some new story that is expected to disarm suspicion. The other day a motherly old lady appeared in a northern Michigan city and after ordering a small amount of merchandise sent to a certain address, tendered a check in payment that was much larger than her bill. She was apparently so gentle so motherly, that never a suspicion entered the merchant's head. Later he found the check a bad one and his faith in humanity has taken a considerable drop. Regardless of the circumstances, the best plan is to pass them on to the banker and if they get by that individual their paper is pretty apt to be genuine.

Press Is Untrammelled

There is an erroneous impression in the minds of many that the Church, Big Business, and the Government exercise a sinister influence on the press. After many years of journalistic posts of some responsibility, I am happy to be able to say that I have never been approached on the ground of religious prejudice, that I never have been made aware of an opportunity through my profession to make a dollar dishonestly, and that I never have felt the menace of the official first. So much for a popular bugaboo!—Edward McKernon, of the Associated Press, writing in Harper's Magazine.

The Batangi, on the lower Congo, believe that apes are degenerated human beings. This is evolution of the inverse order.

O. L. Smith, assistant attorney general, says that in the days before license in Michigan the bootleggers put a gallon of rum and a plug of tobacco into a barrel of rainwater and sold it to the natives for whisky. Now they don't even put in the gallon of rum.

Youthful Short Jackets Stressed in Spring Suits

Short skirts and short jackets feature the new spring suits. For this we should be duly thankful, since the combination spells always a youthful silhouette. In fact the tailored jacket styles are quite cunning, introducing clever details, such as rounded corners, girlish turn-down collars, while the coloring seems to say spring in its bright tones. Not only is the model in this picture interesting in the above-mentioned details, but it claims distinction in the quality and kind of fabric of which it is styled. Hand-some tweed-like wool jersey is the medium chosen for this appealing suit. Its general tone is thistle color, but this pretty spring woolen comes in other pastel shades, especially emphasizing rose, green, also blue.

Very smart for spring is the short separate coat-jacket worn with a plaited skirt of contrasting material.

SEES RESTORATION OF PRE-WAR TRADE

Head of National Foreign Council Issues Call for Convention.

New York.—"This is the period which bids fair to see the restoration of international trade to the volume it held before the outbreak of the World war," declared James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council, in his call, issued a few days ago, to the 1926 national foreign trade convention to be held at Charleston, S. C., April 28 to 30.

"The world did more work last year than it did the year before," Mr. Farrell says, "and its trade grew correspondingly. Expanded production and the importation of raw material by the great industrial nations of both hemispheres indicate further expansion of production and consumption for this year. Every step of this recovery and advance carries with it its own problems, demanding continued study and thoughtful examination."

According to the estimates of the council, the world's export trade for the current year will exceed $28,000,000,000, thus equaling in volume, allowing for the decreased real value of money, the export trade of $19,422,000,000 done in 1913.

Mr. Farrell also announces the preliminary program of the 1926 national foreign trade convention, which is to be held on the south Atlantic coast for the first time since these conventions were inaugurated in 1914. The council has held its annual gatherings twice on the north Atlantic coast, twice on the Pacific coast, twice on the Gulf and in six cities in the interior.

The program of the Charleston convention lays special emphasis on accelerating American exports. The general and group sessions are planned to promote intensive attention to foreign trade in southern products and especially to exports originating in the southeast, where foreign trade in recent years has been increasing more rapidly than any other part of the country.

The American Manufacturers' Export association, the National Association of Credit Men, the Export Managers' Club of New York, and national banking, advertising and importing organizations will co-operate with the National Foreign Trade Council in the convention. Group sessions will cover all these phases of foreign trade, as well as export problems of the Southeast, education for foreign trade, and modern policies in export salesmanship.

Out of the 1,500 delegates to the national foreign trade convention last year at Seattle, about 1,075 were presidents and other executives of firms representing most of the important business houses of thirty-two states actively engaged in foreign trade.

Corn Sugar Act Wins Favor of U. S. Senate

Washington.—Unanimous approval was given by the senate to the Cummins corn sugar bill, amending the pure food laws to permit the use of corn sweeteners without requiring manufacturers or canners to deposit their presence by labels.

The bill, introduced by Senator Cummins (Rep. Iowa) and favorably reported by Senator McKinley (Rep. Ill.), chairman of the committee on manufactures, originally limited the proposed amendment removing the restrictions on corn sugar as a means of providing additional revenue for the disposition of corn surpluses in western states.

At the last minute, Senator Howell (Rep. Neb.) secured Senator Cummins' assent to modify the bill to include lifting the ban on fruit sugars, which he declared, citing recent bureau of standard tests, can be economically produced from artichokes, sunflowers and other plants of kindred variety.

During the debate, Senator Smith (Dem. S. C.) warned the senate that he proposes to introduce a bill which will further amend the pure food laws to permit a wider use of cottonseed oils and butterline.

Two to Arms Conference; Senate Allows $50,000

Washington.—Unanimous approval of the $50,000 appropriation for the participation of the United States in the preliminary arms conference at Geneva February 15 was voted by the senate. The house had passed the resolution. Hugh Gibson, minister to Switzerland, and Allen Dulles, chief of the far eastern division of the State department, have been selected as the principal representatives. It was stated in official circles here.

SEEKS $14,000,000 FOR AIRSHIP WORK

Dirigible Program Is Given Congress by Moffett.

Washington.—Spurred by a flood of criticism that the United States is not keeping pace with other nations in aircraft power, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics, has asked congress to provide $14,000,000 for a five-year program in developing lighter-than-air ships.

Testifying before the house naval affairs committee, Admiral Moffett recommended:

Construction of two 6,000,000 cubic-foot dirigibles at a cost of $8,000,000.

Construction of a 1,250,000 cubic-foot dirigible for training purposes at a cost of $1,500,000.

Appropriation of $4,500,000 for a dirigible base on the Pacific coast, probably in California.

He urged $1,000,000 be made available immediately for the training dirigible, $5,000 to start work on the west coast air base and $100,000 for the two larger dirigibles.

Appropriation of $1,000,000 annually for continued operation of the Lakehurst dirigible station instead of closing it, was urged.

Moffett also asked for $500,000 for experimental work in helium, which is used in dirigibles. The admiral favored San Diego, Cal., for the proposed dirigible station.

The entire program called for only a third of the cost of a battleship, Moffett pointed out.

While Moffett was appearing before the committee, Representative Randolph Perkins (Rep.) of New Jersey, examiner for the Lampert aircraft committee, told the military affairs committee America ranks third in aviation. He advocated a department of national defense, embracing a unification of air forces.

Several navy and army officers refused to testify before the Lampert committee for fear that they would be discriminated against by higher-ups who favor surface warships over aircraft, Perkins said.

EXPEDITION BY AIR TO ARCTIC REGION

Commander Byrd to Lead; Rockefeller, Ford, Aid.

Washington.—An independent expedition to explore the Arctic from the air is being organized by Lieut. Com. Richard E. Byrd of Winchester, Va., who commanded the navy section of the MacMillan expedition last summer.

The enterprise will be financed by American citizens, among those who have already pledged support being John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Edsel Ford, each of whom has offered $20,000.

Commander Byrd is negotiating now with several concerns for suitable craft for the expedition, either of the dirigible or airplane type. Each, in his belief, has good points for such an undertaking.

While it is not the plan to compete with the expedition of the Detroit Aviation society, which intends to hop off from Point Barrow, Alaska, for the North pole this year, the aims of the two are in certain respects similar. Each will look for land in the unknown region between Alaska and the North pole, and Byrd may also attempt to reach the pole.

The navy officer's primary object, however, is to explore the unknown regions north of Greenland, Canada and Alaska, using either Spitzbergen or Etah, Greenland, as a base.

$11,326,829 in Canada Booze in Eight Months

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's exports to the United States of hard liquor and beer show a decided increase in a government report made public recently. It records that in the last eight months "wet goods" exported from Canada into the United States was valued at $11,326,829.

That, despite the Canada-United States treaty, liquor flows into the United States in increasing quantities is shown in the following figures: In 1923, $6,456,284 was the value of "wet goods" that crossed the border; in 1924 it jumped to $7,891,690.

The Canadian government report credits the United States with consuming 900,000 gallons of ale, beer and porter and 455,358 gallons of hard liquor in the last eight months.

Old Teachers Dropped

Chicago.—No teacher or principal seventy years or over was at a desk in the public schools at the opening of the second half of the school year 1925-26. Under the new emeritus service rule 74 veterans, all of whom have served two decades or longer, have been formally retired. The consequent shift in positions is the most extensive in Chicago school history.

Hunt's Appointment Held Up

Washington.—The senate has postponed indefinitely its confirmation of President Coolidge's appointment of Charles W. Hunt to the federal trade commission.

$60,000,000 LOPPED OFF REVENUE BILL

Senate Agrees on Enormous Annual Tax Reduction.

Washington.—Estimates place the annual tax reductions resulting from recent action of the senate at $60,000,000.

Clearing the revenue bill of noncontroversial provisions, the senate gave tentative approval to widespread tax reductions in the first reading of the measure.

Provisions approved by the house slashing the normal income tax rates, increasing the personal exemptions, and repealing many of the miscellaneous taxes, were accepted without debate. Although still subject to amendment, none of these rate schedules is expected to be opened again.

In accepting some amendments to the house bill proposed by the finance committee, the senate approved repeal of the capital stock tax.

Provisions accepted and over which no further controversy is expected by leaders included:

Reductions in the normal income tax rates from 2 to 1 1/2 per cent on the first $4,000 of taxable income, 4 to 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and from 6 to 5 per cent on the remainder.

Increase from $10,000 to $20,000 in the amount on which the 25 per cent reduction for "earned income" may be applied.

Increase in the personal exemptions from $1,000 to $1,500 for single persons and from $2,500 to $3,500 for married persons.

Repeat of the taxes on automobile tires and parts, jewelry, cameras, photographic films and plates, firearms and ammunitions, smokers' articles, automatic slot machines, works of art, brokers, bowling alleys and billiard tables, shooting galleries and riding academies, automobiles for hire, tobacco manufacturers, deeds and conveyances.

WORLD COURT WILL CUT U. S. EXPENSES

President Coolidge Cites Advantages to Country.

Washington.—Entrance of the United States into the world court and the League of Nations' disarmament conference will not, in the opinion of President Coolidge, endanger the national sovereignty of the United States.

But the entry of the United States will help to establish the peace of the world, reduce the expenditures of the United States for armaments, promote good will between nations, and thereby add to the national prosperity at the same time that it will promote national security, the President believes.

This view of the meaning of the steps taken to co-operate with European bodies was outlined before the "business organization of the budget," by Mr. Coolidge at a recent meeting. The meeting was attended by cabinet officers, department chiefs and thousands of government employees. The meeting was designed primarily to promote economies in government.

The President declared that any safeguards put around the peace of the world promote economy, provide financial stability and economic progress. The Washington disarmament conference was cited as the first step in this direction, the President holding that it not only afforded great financial relief by stopping the competition in naval armaments, but that it has promoted international good will and confidence.

He pointed to the League of Nations disarmament conference as holding the promise of a further advance in that field.

U. S. Dry Agents Sent to State Court for Trial

Washington.—Federal prohibition agents accused of murder while enforcing the liquor laws are entitled to trial in federal courts. They must, however, be prepared to show the killing was in line of duty if they would escape trial in state courts and they may not claim federal court protection from state indictments for perjury or conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with their activities.

This is the gist of two opinions of the United States Supreme court delivered by Chief Justice Taft, which climax the clash of Maryland state authorities with a Baltimore federal district court over the right to try four prohibition agents indicted on November 19, 1924, by a county grand jury for the murder of Lawrence Wenger, an alleged moonshiner, in Harford county, Maryland.

Tots Wear Smocked Waists and Sleeveless Panty Frocks

If spring sewing for the children is down on your mid-season program, this picture should prove of great interest to you. It suggests ever so many important items in connection with tots' fashions.

In the first place, it exploits the peasant waist idea. Thus will mother see opportunity to introduce some fancy smocking at neck and sleeve—for smocking is "all the rage" this season.

Another leading theme throughout all fashiondom is color combinations. The piping of contrasting material about the little apron-top frock in this picture suggests using pale green chambray for the binding of a yellow English print slip, or turkey red on a navy linen or bright orange on a brown-and-white gingham—in fact any gay coloring among which, by the way, pastel tints are especially recommended for this season.

Mothers also will recognize the practical point of having the separate waist, as it may be worn with various suspender-trapped slips.

Spring Talks

Mrs. Brown—"Well, did you get in to see the bargains in Window Scrims at the East Jordan Lumber Co. Store? They surely are bargains, 35c, 40c and 50c goods for this week for only 25c."

Mrs. White—"No I did not see them, I heard lots about them, but Mary was sick and I couldn't leave her. I'm sorry, for I need fresh curtains this Spring. It seems to me that nothing about the house makes as much difference as the way the windows look. You know when you take the curtains down the house looks as though you were moving out."

Mrs. Brown—"These cold days are just right for staying at home and doing your spring sewing, looking over your supply of sheets, pillow slips, towels, etc and there the East Jordan Lumber Co. Store can help you again. They have an Indian Head pillow tubing that looks like linen and wears wonderfully well and is a little cheaper than the other. Then a linen finish Tubing and Sheeting that is beautiful either plain or to embroidery on. SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—The story opens in New York, about the middle of the eighteenth century. Robert Ormerod, who tells the tale, is talking to Peter Corlaer, chief of fur traders, and man of enormous strength, when Darby McGraw, Irish bonded boy, brings news that a pirate ship is "off the Hook." An old sea captain announces he has been chased by the notorious pirate, Captain Rip-Rap. The elder Ormerod tells Robert the pirate is Andrew Murray, his (Robert's) great-uncle, commanding the pirate ship, the Royal James. Murray is an ardent Jacobite.

CHAPTER II.—Next day Robert and Darby encounter a one-legged sailor, John Silver, whom Darby conducts to a tavern. Robert meets a young woman from a Spanish frigate who is seeking her father, Colonel O'Donnell. He takes her to the place she desires.

"I am not in difficulties for money, although I am like to be in difficulties shortly in connection with an embarrassing quantity of it. In fine, sir, I am upon the point of launching the coup of my career, one which will entail consequences of a stupendous character, and in the end, I venture to predict, echo in throne-rooms and chancelleries. Aye, kingdoms shall—"

"He broke off. "It is not necessary that I should go into that. Suffice it for the present if I say that I am in the position of a man who has partially tamed an unwieldy band of wild animals. My own ship I can rely upon up to a certain point, but I have associated with me—"

"That would be Flint?" interjected my father. "I am flattered by the knowledge of my affairs which you display," replied my great-uncle with one of his courtly inclinations. "Yes; I had occasion, when I first went to sea, for a competent navigator. Flint served me in that capacity until I became independent, and I then fitted him out with his own ship. We have cruised in company since. I am not betraying a professional secret when I add that he is a man whose undoubted force of personality is offset by a certain turbulence and crudeness of wit which make him difficult to handle—increasingly difficult to handle, I may say. I foresee trouble with him in the future in connection with the coup to which I have already referred. I require a young man to stand at my elbow and assist me in curbing unruly spirits. I promise a great future for such."

"Command of his own pirate craft, no doubt?" pressed my father. "That would be an offer to draw most stout youths," returned my great-uncle. "Bah, what is piracy, that you and your kind prate against it, Ormerod? Is it any worse in character than four-fifths of the business practiced in this world? What are you and those like you but men who seek to deprive others of their lawful gains that you may add to your stores, what the others possessed? I take from the wealthy, who can afford to lose, what they have dishonestly got, more often than not, and much of what I win I contribute to the Cause to which you gave your first loyalty."

"An admirable code of ethics," observed my father. "But come to the point. What will you have? That I should apprentice Robert to you to be indentured a good, honest, trusty and skillful pirate?"

"Even so."

My father sat back in his chair. "I'll not," he said.

Murray treated himself to a pinch of snuff.

"What does our young man himself say?" he asked.

"I say that you offer me no induc-

"What Does Our Young Man Himself Say?" He Asked.

ment," I answered as shortly as I could.

"Odslife," he swore. "No inducement! My dear nephew, I offer you an open, bracing life—for a brief space; a share in a brave venture; an opportunity to rehabilitate your family, to rise to place, title and honor."

"On a pirate's deck?" I jeered.

"From a pirate's quarterdeck," he corrected me gravely. "I am on my last cruise. The Royal James is to vindicate her name. Aye, in years to come she will be regarded as a shrine of loyalty and devotion, and to have sailed with Andrew Murray in her—"

"Why, sir, who remembers today of Robin Hood aught but that he was true to King Richard in adversity?"

The man's surety was amazing.

"This passes all reason," said my father wearily. "You must be insane."

"Not at all," retorted my great-uncle. "I am the leading practitioner of my profession. Winter, Davis, Roberts, Bellamy, all the more noted—"

"—all pirates of recent years, were small fry compared to me. I tell you, Ormerod, you stand in the boy's way."

"He is not a boy, but a man," snipped my father. "And able to judge his own course."

"So be it."

My great-uncle turned to me once more.

"It appears this decision is left betwixt us two, Nephew Robert," he said. "So I must inform you that I am determined to have your aid in any event—by force, if you will not accompany me reasonably."

There was a snap as a Brazil nut split apart in Peter's grip. Murray waved an airy hand in his direction.

"'Tis true that you are the most powerful man I ever met, Corlaer," he remarked; "yet I urge you not to attempt violence. I have sufficient men in the house to overpower you, and I should not hesitate to slay Ormerod or you at need. The boy is the only one of you three whose life hath value to me."

"He means it, Peter," said my father. "Keep your hands down."

"Ja," squeaked Peter.

"You were ever a wise man, Ormerod," resumed my great-uncle. "I venture to congratulate you upon the soundness of your judgment. Now for you, Nephew Robert. Come with me you shall, but I prefer that you come willingly. Therefore I lay before you these inducements: Firstly, we sail upon a venture which hath a color of state business, although a strict legalist would denounce it piratical—you see, I endeavor to deal honestly by you after my fashion; secondly, no harm is intended to you; thirdly, the rewards of our project will be singularly rich; fourthly, I design to exploit the advantages which shall accrue to me solely for your benefit—you, Robert, are my heir, and if I have need of you in the execution of my coup, nonetheless I shall be able to repay you for whatever you do in my behalf a hundredfold, both materially and otherwise. I am, after all, your nearest kin after your father, and I say in all humility my assistance is not to be despised."

"I won't go willingly," I answered.

"Even did your arguments tempt me, I should resent your threat of compulsion."

"Admirably spoken," he applauded. "Egad, I perceive you have the proper spirit. You are exactly the lad I require."

"I am the lad you'll not get," I shouted. "Call in your bravos, and I'll tear their throats out for you."

"Gently, gently," he remonstrated. "My bravos, as you term them, are not lambs, Nephew Robert, and I must warn you that the killings would not be all on the one side. If you value your father, stand fast."

And he drew from a waistcoat pocket a silver whistle, which he placed to his lips. A thin blast piped through the room, and a dozen hairy sea-dogs surged in from hall and kitchen. Raps on the two windows indicated that others mounted guard outside.

My father's face was a mask of mingled rage and fear—not fear for himself, but for me. He stared at the savage figures, the bared cutlasses, the ready pistols, almost with unbelief in the reality of his vision. And certes 'twas a weird spectacle in that orderly house in the town we of the province looked upon as the most advanced in the colonies—and became to me the more weird as I glimpsed next the hall door a grim mahogany face and a hangman look beneath a skrim of black hair, and behind the two a familiar carrot head.

"Ho, there, Darby!" I called out. "What are you doing in such company? Did you know those men for pirates when you drank with them at the Whale's Head?"

"Sure, they ha' taken me into their crew," he answered brazenly.

"And 'twas you let them into the house and betrayed your master?" returned my father sadly. "I had not expected this of you, Darby. Have we not been kind to you?"

Darby wiggled uncomfortably.

"Oh, aye; main kind, Master Ormerod," he admitted. "But they would ha' had ye, whether or no. Sure, they're a grand crew, tricky crew. And anyway, ye see, I was born to be a pirate. My troth, I was!"

Murray laughed pleasantly.

"'Tis a valiant youth, and should go far," he observed. "Moreover, he speaks the truth when he says we should have won our way in to you without his aid. The accommodation was convenient, but by no means essential."

"Where is Silver, Master Bones?" he added.

The man with the mahogany face touched his hat.

"John was seeing to it the servants was all secure, sir," he answered. "Here he is now."

A gap appeared in the ranks by the kitchen door, and the one-legged man I had met on the water-front that morning stumped in on his long crutch, as cheerfully serene as any honest householder.

"Was you askin' for me, captain?" he said. "We just finished up behind there—all gagged and roped, Bristol-fashion, safe for a day, sir."

And to me—

"My duty, Master Ormerod, and I hopes we'll know each other better soon."

"I find we shall need a cart, John," said my great-uncle.

My father turned very pale.

"You—you— My G—d, Murray, you can't kidnap the boy this way! Think! There are troops in Fort George. Once the hue and cry is raised you'll be—"

"But it will not be raised," replied Murray calmly. "I regret it, but we shall be obliged to tie up you and Peter so that you will be incapacitated until some kind friend happens to call on the morrow. By that time we shall be at sea."

I snatched up the chair upon which I had been sitting and brandished it over his head.

"Call off these scoundrels of yours or I'll batter out your brains," I snarled.

"John," he said, ignoring me, "you will be so kind as to pistol the elder Master Ormerod if his son launches a blow at me."

"Aye, aye, sir," answered Silver.

And he leveled a weapon at my father. I knew, without looking behind me, that Peter and I were covered by other men. It was Peter who spoke first.

"Put down der chair, Bob," he ordered quietly.

The man called Black Dog cast the noose of a rope over his head and jerked his arms close to his side.

"Neen, neen," objected Peter, and with no visible effort he snapped the hempen strands.

A gasp went up from the room, and there was a hasty retreat from his neighborhood.

"Pistol that man, if you must," called Murray; "but use your cutlasses, if possible."

"Neen," said Peter again. "We don't fight."

"We might as well be killed now as let them carry off Bob," said my father with a sob in his voice.

"Neen," said Peter a third time. "Dead, you stay dead. Perhaps Bob gets away from them some time. Better he be with Murray than he be dead."

"Intelligently logical," commented Murray. "I commend the sentiment to you, Nephew Robert."

Peter's little eyes glistened toward him.

"I go with Bob," he said.

"No, no," denied Murray quickly. "You were not invited, friend Peter."

"If I don't go, Robert don't go," replied Peter. "And you don't go. Perhaps I don't kill you, but if there is shooting you don't get away. Ja!"

Murray contemplated this speech.

"Your proposition then," he said, "is that you insist upon sharing my nephew's new career or else will endeavor to secure the deaths of all of us, including his and your own?"

"Ja!" answered Peter.

"You may come," decided my great-uncle. "Your muscles should prove useful. John, I fancy we shall require triple bonds on this prisoner."

"Aye, aye, sir," assented Silver.

"We ha' plenty o' stout manila. One o' you lads run back and get those coils I left by the stove. That's the proper sprike, Darby. Always willin'. You'll make a rare hand, you will. And how about makin' fast that gentleman as is goin' to stay behind, captain?"

Murray looked at my father, and from him to me.

"Have you reconciled yourselves to what I may justly style the inevitable?" he inquired suavely.

My father collapsed into his chair with a groan.

"If you will not suffer the boy to be hurt!" he exclaimed.

"My word of honor to that," returned my great-uncle very seriously. "His comfort and safety rank ahead of my own, Ormerod, for I anticipate that he is to achieve all those triumphs which fate denied me. 'Tis true I hope to sample them briefly, but—"

and for the first time a shadow clouded his face—"I am, as you doubtless know, in my sixty-fourth year, and a fickle Providence, regarding the divinity of which I am inclined to share the skepticism of the French philosophers, is scarce likely to indulge me in a very prolonged extension of life's span. Nor indeed would I have it otherwise. I feel no inclination for the senility of extreme age. Do you submit?"

My father bent his head.

"Yes—for his sake—you! Robert, no violence. We are in a cove we cannot escape for the present; but rest assured I will do everything I can to secure your release."

My great-uncle motioned Silver forward.

"Make Master Ormerod as comfortable as possible, John," he instructed. "Yes, the him in his chair. Ormerod, accept my advice, and leave well enough alone. Within a year, possibly—two, at most—the boy will be safe and advanced in fortune beyond your wildest dreams."

"Let me have him back as he is—'tis all I ask," groaned my father.

Murray took snuff.

"A highly correct attitude, sir," he remarked. "Have you more to say? Very well, John; you may affix the gag. No, not that gunnysacking. Here is a silken kerchief will do. And now, friend Peter, we turn to you—and you, Nephew Robert. I would these precautions were unnecessary. Let us trust your inclinations will become more friendly toward me upon closer acquaintance."

CHAPTER IV

An Inking of the Plot

My poor father's face, with the tears standing in his eyes, was the last object I saw in the wan light of the guttering candles. The next moment my captors lugged me into the darkness of the garden and pushed me upon a hand-cart such as was used to fetch up the frailer kinds of merchandise from the docks. Peter's immense body already occupied most of the cart's cramped space, and I was squeezed precariously between him and the near side, the which Silver perceiving he prodded Peter into a more restricted compass and then spread a tarpaulin over both of us.

"Proceed, John," ordered my great-uncle's voice. "You remember the way? The Green lane, 'tis called. Four men should be sufficient to accompany you. I will go on by another street with the rest of our party."

"Don't ye worry yourself, captain," returned Silver.

Footsteps thudded away on the gravel, and I heard the scratching of the one-legged man's crutch as he stumped in front of us and the cart jolted forward. We emerged into the Green lane, heading toward the East river, and a thrill tickled my spine as I heard the chanting tones of old Diggorry Leigh, our ward watchman.

"Tea o'clock of a clear, dark night, and the wind in the nor'west. And all's well!"

"Easy, all!" whispered Silver's voice. "Push on, ye swabs; push on! But hold your gab. I'll do the talking."

The steel piece on the butt of his crutch tinkled on the cobbles as he stumped ahead of the cart.

"Ho there, shipmate," he hailed cordially. "And does you do this the whole, livelong night?"

Diggorry's lantern-stave jingled on the ground.

"I do," he returned in pompous tones. "What keeps you abroad so late? Y'are seafaring men, I judge."

"Now I calls that clever," protested Silver with unconcealed admiration. "You sees us in the dark, and straight off you says, 'seafaring men.' I can see you're a vigilant watchman, shipmate. I'd hate to be a neefarious fellow in your town. Blow my scuttle-butt, I would!"

Diggorry's appreciation of this tribute was mirrored in his voice.

"'Tis essential that our citizens be protected," he answered. "Yet there are those who have accused me of sleeping on watch."

"Skulkers, they be—low-lived skulkers as ever was," Silver assured him. "I know how you feel. Here we've been a-workin' since sunup, a-shiffin' cargo and stowin' it aboard, and I'll lay you a piece of eight the captain never so much as serves out an extry noggin' o' rum."

Diggorry's stave jingled again as he sloped it over his shoulder.

"The wisest men are not always those in authority, friend," he said. "Ye might think, from the way some of the corporation talk, 'twas they bar the night-walkers and wasters from the city's streets! Bah!"

And his walling voice receded into Pearl street.

"What are you night-walkers and wasters a-siggerin' about?" demanded Silver of his following. "George Merry, I'll lay into you with my crutch. Put some heft behind this here blessed cart. Ain't ye ashamed o' yourselves, a-laughin' at a brave, hard-workin' watchman as keeps wicked pirates from liftin' your goods?"

A few hundred feet farther on we rattled off the cobbles onto the planked surface of a wharf.

"That you, John?" growled a voice.

"Aye, aye, Bill. Where's the captain?"

"Gone off in the jollyboat. That 'ere Spanish Irisher is a-waitin' him aboard."

Silver pulled the tarpaulin from over our heads.

"Here, George Merry, can't you and your mates handle the big fellow? Toss to his head and two to his feet—and drop him easy or he'll stove in the boat. Now, my gentleman—" this to me—"we'll pass you down, too. You must pull a strong oar with the captain for him to be so anxious to get you offshore hale and whole. It'll be place and rank for you, messmate, or a chance to swim w' the sharks."

"Where's the red-headed little Irish-er, Bill?"

"I sent him off with the captain," replied Bones. "Down w' you, John. We'll cast off."

From where I now lay, propped up in the bow with my head resting on Peter's huge stomach, I could see the wharf a few feet above and the vague figures of the pirates and behind them the shadowy outline of the warehouses and an occasional dim light. Silver lowered himself to a seat upon the stringpiece of the wharf, dropped the butt of his crutch to the forward thwart, felt about with his one leg and came to rest in front of Peter and me. The crutch he allowed to slip to the bottom of the boat, and in its place he took an oar. Bill Bones found a seat in the stern sheets.

"All clear," muttered Bill. "Give way."

The oars fended off from the wharf, and the boat crept out into the stream, where it felt the full strength of the tide, just beginning to turn. The bow bounced up as the first wave hit it, and Peter, beneath me, emitted a dismal groan through his gag. Silver, bending diligently to his oar, looked over his shoulder.

"You would come, messmate," he said.

"I would, if I could," I answered.
