CANNING FACTORY ASSURED EAST JORDAN

LONG CHERISHED DREAM NOW A REALITY.
LOCATION NEAR FLOORING PLANT.
WILL MEAN ADDED REVENUE FOR FARMERS, GARDENERS AND TOWNSPEOPLE.

The much-discussed Canning Factory for East Jordan, which has been under consideration for some time past, came to fruition last Friday, March 12th, when final steps were taken toward organization.

East Jordan's newest industry—The East Jordan Canning Company—has been organized under the corporation laws of Michigan, with the following officers:

President—W. P. Porter.
Vice-President—W. A. Stroebel.
Treasurer—George Carr.
Secretary—R. C. Supernaw.
Additional Directors—James Votruba and Howard Morgan.

All the officers and directors are business men of East Jordan with the exception of Mr. Morgan, who is of Traverse City.

Will Outline Program

A meeting of the officers and directors will be held in the near future when many important details will be arranged. The location of the plant will probably be near the East Jordan Flooring Plant as the East Jordan & Southern Railroad has adequate switching facilities in that section.

It is planned to start building operations as soon as the weather permits. The necessary machinery for the opening operations of the plant will probably be purchased in the near future.

Will Start This Summer

It is the present plan of the East Jordan Canning Company to be in operation by mid-summer. Fruits and vegetables—it is thought now, cherries and string beans will have their first consideration. However, as yet, no definite policy has been decided upon. The whole thing evolves upon the question of just what suitable machinery may be obtained to handle the various products in an economical manner.

Growers To Co-operate

Since the proposed canning factory began to receive tangible form, The Herald has heard many kindly remarks by the produce and fruit growers of this region. They are a unit in wanting such an institution. Those interested in furnishing products for the East Jordan Canning Company should get in touch with the newly-elected Secretary, R. C. Supernaw, so that when it is finally decided upon as to just what will be handled the first year, contract blanks will be mailed them. East Jordan is in the heart of one of the finest agricultural districts of Michigan, and a Canning Factory means much to the prosperity of our farmers, gardeners, fruit growers, and our citizens in general.

Culmination of a Dream

Since The Herald publisher came to East Jordan over twenty years ago, the matter of a canning factory for this region has come up many times. Several times it appeared as about culminated, but, owing to untoward circumstances, the project failed.

During those years, The Herald has been assured by competent men in the canning industry that no place in Michigan offered a better place for a canning factory than East Jordan, for it is surrounded by the most fertile farming lands in Michigan.

Today the Canning Factory IS A REALITY. There can be no question as to its ultimate success—the farmers, the gardeners, the investors in the plant, the wage-earner required in the operation of the plant, and our citizens in general will one and all receive their share of this new prosperity.

To The Electors Of The City Of East Jordan

I am a candidate for the office of Mayor for the City of East Jordan. If I am elected will try and fill the office with credit.

Masons Defeat Holy Name

And Firemen Fall Before the All Stars Team.

Last Monday night at the High School gym the Masonic team upset the dope bucket by defeating the Holy Name. The Masons went on a batting rampage and came near knocking the cover off the ball before they let up. They pushed over five runs in the first inning and kept right at it until the last of the ninth inning when the score stood 22 to 8 in their favor. The Holy Name could not connect with Sid Sedgman's deliveries and Weisler and Nachazel were the only two Holy Name men that hit the ball at all. Nearly every man on the Masons team was around the bases at least twice during the evening with Bechtold getting his usual share of two and three baggers. Sid Sedgman pitched an unusually good game and had real support behind him every minute.

In the second game of the evening, the Firemen went down to defeat before a bunch of All Stars, made up of the following men: Bechtold, Watson, H. Whiteford, N. Whiteford, Nachazel, Ellis, Shay and Seiler.

With the Masons defeating the Holy Name last week, it makes the Masons and Methodists tie for third place. This tie will be played off next Monday night at the High School gym to decide the winner of third place. The same evening the K. P.'s will play the Masons in the first game of a three game series to decide the city's fraternal championship, so the games will continue as usual for the next remaining nights in March. As a whole the League was a big success this year with forty men getting their weekly exercise and a lot of fun every Monday night. There were at least sixty men taking part in the various games throughout the season and when you think of the size town we have here, and by having sixty men enjoy the indoor recreation for the winter months, it sure speaks well for the city to support a recreational program such as this, and next year it ought to go over bigger and better than this past year.

Below is the final standing for the season:

	Won	Lost	Percentage
Firemen	7	3	700
Holy Name	6	4	600
Methodists	5	5	500
Masons	5	5	500
Presbyterians	4	6	400
K. P.'s	3	7	300

The Methodists and Masons, being tied for third place, will play off this tie next Monday night at 7:00 o'clock to decide the third place winner. At 8:15 the reorganized Masonic team and K. P. team will battle for a three game series to decide the city's fraternal championship. Below is their lineup.

	K. P.'s	Vogel
Masons	H. Whiteford	N. Whiteford
Watson	R. Swafford	Benson
Sedgman	Kling	H. Kamradt
Bechtold	Kowalski	Davis
Ellis	Davis	Snellenberger
Shay	Scott	Cook

Florida Boom For Michigan?

Securities Commission Hears Realtors Are Coming Here

Michigan's expected resort property boom is "on" and this state will vie with Long Island, this season, as a field for summer operations of Florida real estate operators, according to information reaching the state securities commission at Lansing.

"All available information indicates unprecedented exchanges in lake shore property this summer," H. N. Duff, chairman of the commission, told the United Press today, "and we believe the lull in operations in Florida will be reflected to some extent, in this state."

Michigan brokers in the western part of the state, particularly in Grand Rapids and Muskegon, have been active for the last six months in obtaining operations on resort property and a portion of the more desirable tracts are under control of Michigan interests, awaiting the expected boom, according to Duff.

"While little dealing in options has been experienced so far," he said, "it is possible that this form of real estate speculation will be used here, as it has been in Florida. Thousands of acres of shore land are held under options by brokers now, and we believe most of the land will be sold outside the state, if at all. It seems from our observations, however, that Michigan brokers will control. The activity is undoubtedly due in part to lack of employment for operators who have been doing business in Florida, and we expect to hear of many of them in this state this summer."

"We were reliably informed, some time ago, that Michigan was to be their only field for summer operations. Since that time, however, some of the Florida companies have become interested in Long Island property and are engaged in that field."

Thomas Passenger Passed Away Last Sunday

Thomas Passenger, a well-known and esteemed resident of this city for the past 27 years, passed away at his home on the West Side last Sunday, March 14th, after a lingering illness from Cancer.

Mr. Passenger was born at Saugatuck, Allegan County, Mich., December 4, 1858, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. Peter Passenger. From Saugatuck he located at Shelby, then to Ludington, and in 1899 he came to East Jordan. On Sept. 8, 1900 he was united in marriage to Miss Lina Campbell at East Jordan. Mr. Passenger is a member of the East Jordan Moose Lodge No. 1145. Deceased is survived by the wife, and the following relatives:—two half-sisters—Mrs. Vivia Osborn of Arlington, Wash.; Mrs. T. J. Lawyer of Thompsonville, Mich.; two nephews—Frank Pratt of Shawano, Wis.; Frank A. Stubb of Shelby; a niece—Mrs. Edith Dickson of Calderwood; and three cousins—Mrs. Hanna Wood, Mrs. Anna Shepard and Henry Passenger, all of Middleton, Mich.

Funeral services were held from the Latter Day Saints Church Thursday afternoon, March 18th, conducted by the pastor, Elder Leonard Dudley. Interment at Sunset Hill.

MRS. CHARLES KNOP LAID TO REST LAST SUNDAY

Mrs. Charles F. Knop, a well-known resident of Wilson township for over forty years, passed away at her home Wednesday, March 10th, following a brief illness from a paralytic stroke.

Laura Louise Schultz was born at Belyard, Germany, Feb'y 22, 1865, her parents being Fred and Matilda Schultz. When she was 13 years of age, she located with her father and family in Chicago, Ill., in 1878, where they resided for about five years, then removing in 1883 to Wilson Township, Charlevoix County. On December 23, 1884 she was united in marriage to Charles F. Knop of Wilson Township.

Deceased is survived by the husband and the following sons and daughter:—August, Carl and Miss Matilda Knop, all of Detroit, Albert, Louise and Margaret—at home, Mrs. Rose Reidel of Boyne City, Mrs. Selma Eggersdorf and Mrs. Emma Walters, both of Chicago, Ill. Also one sister and two brothers—Mrs. Frank Behling of Wilson Township, Ernest Schultz, of Wilson Township, and Otto Schultz of Corvallis, Oregon. Also eight grandchildren.

Funeral services were held last Sunday afternoon, March 14th at the German Lutheran Church, in Wilson township, of which she was a member, conducted by Rev. Opitz of Petoskey. The remains were laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery, Boyne City.

Those from out-of-town here to attend the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eggersdorf and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Walters, all of Chicago.

Open Letter To Farmers

Co. Agr'l Agent Outlines Farm Needs Program.

Dear Farmer:
Spring will soon be here, therefore it is the proper time to get your program outlined for your farm needs. Having sent out no circulars thus far, the enclosed will contain many subjects and announcements that will be of interest to you and please spare the time to read carefully and keep for reference.

DAIRY

Figures from 18,014 cows who have completed yearly records, give us the surprising information that cows producing only 150 lbs. of butterfat a year cost $40.55 for feed and leaves as income over cost of feed $27.90; cows of 200 pounds fat, cost of feed $47.27 and $42.45 net profit; 250 pounds fat, cost of feed $53.78 and $57.82 net profit; 300 pounds fat, cost of feed $59.28 and net profit of $73.34; 400 pounds fat, cost of feed $69.35 and $105.07 net profit over cost of feed. Based on 44c cream for entire year.

This table proves that the more production from the cow the greater the net profit, and hence feeding and culling are important factors. As a farmer you can be more efficient in both, feed a balanced ration! It pays better! It increases production and production means more money—sell the poor cows! They never will make money! They take profits from good cows. Lastly breeding increases ability of cow for added production, so why not use a good purebred sire and sell the scrub where it belongs. If you want to buy better cows to improve your herd, or are interested in buying a better sire, alone or co-operating with your neighbors, drop a line to County Agent Mellenkamp at Boyne City and he will gladly lend his assistance. An effort will be made this spring to line up the stock, male or female. Also if wishing to get a current record of your cows, join the Charlevoix Cow-Testing Ass'n, costs little and means money for you. Are you interested?

CALF CLUB

Is your boy or girl interested in your farm and farm home? What wouldn't you take to interest him or her? Why don't you let him join the Calf Club? Let him feel the pride of ownership, let him have a calf of his own to feed and care for. Your boy or girl is eager to gain knowledge and help themselves. They want to learn about livestock and are anxious to train themselves to be efficient. This springs plans are laid to organize clubs throughout the County, so let the County Agent know you are interested. Last year three boys were given a free trip to the State Fair in recognition of their Calf Club work.

CLOTHING PROJECT

Last year 295 families availed themselves of the opportunity of learning many helpful and timely suggestions in sewing. Due to the splendid results, an advanced course in Clothing will be given this year, starting about the middle of April and carried on in the same way as formerly, which was to select a leader from each locality, who received the instruction from the Specialist, then gave the lesson to the local group as their representative. Glad to state new groups can be organized to take the advanced work, whether they received last year's project or not, so now is your opportunity to get this excellent course free of charge. Be sure your community is represented this year, either by you or another lady, as your representative and the safest way is to drop a card to the County Agent. Sixteen ladies are the maximum to be taught in each of the two groups and that is not many. Remember this is for everyone, City or rural, so decide now.

LIME

Did you ever test your soil for acidity? Do you realize that lime is your best fertilizer, if soil is sour and can be purchased from Petoskey at $1.00 per ton in bulk, 40 tons minimum? Also your agent can sell you a Solitex Outfit for only 25c, one you can use yourself any day of the week but Sunday and will last for two years. Limestone applied at the rate of from 1-2 tons per acre, will increase your yields and give you alfalfa and sweet clover, the two best friends you have on earth. Get your neighbor interested with you and get orders for a carload. If interested see your Agent or Co-op Manager about this new Gold Mine.

Boyne City Wins at Harbor Springs

Local Boys Do Well Considering Loss of Capt. Johnson.

Contrary to hints from one or two of the neighboring towns, East Jordan did not go to the Tournament with an overabundance of confidence, largely because of the loss of their only veteran and Captain, Erling Johnson, the Tuesday night the week of the Tournament.

There isn't a high school in the state that could fight with more courage than the boys showed at Harbor Springs, with an equal loss. Johnson is not only about the best forward in northern Michigan, but the effect on the team work and the moral of Wells' aggregation was almost irreparable, so East Jordan, rather than sobbing feeling, are congratulating themselves on the fact that their team did exceptionally well at Harbor Springs tournament, incidentally qualifying for the big tournament at Petoskey, as well as getting second place and losing the cup by the smallest of margins, largely by the poorest refereeing seen in northern Michigan in some time notwithstanding what Boyne City Citizens may think.

Some of us have watched Basket Ball for twenty years and have failed to see a game more partial than the one at Harbor Springs, with Boyne City. In fact, either we have become terribly ignorant of Basket Ball, as a whole town, or the referee is just what is hinted in the above. Time and again Boyne City men charged into the locals knocking them even to the floor, and a foul was called on them. This charging to any number of fans from East Jordan, as well as Harbor Springs, Mancelona, Central Lake, and other towns, said was deliberate. Our only hope is that we meet our neighboring city in the coming Tournament at Petoskey, and we feel that we can take their measure of on any floor that they

Clothing Project Meeting At Boyne City

To be held at Library March 26, at 1:30 p. m., slow time. This meeting is for the purpose of organizing the entire county into groups who wish to take advantage of the opportunity to receive Extension instruction in clothing. This project is a continuation of the work carried on last year and is free to all ladies in the county.

If you have been a member of a class last year or have been a local leader, or wish to enroll in a class at this time, or would like to have this instruction for your community by all means plan to attend this important meeting.

Miss Brekke, Extension Specialist in Home Economics of M. S. C. will be in attendance and explain the clothing project program as well as to assist in the organization.

Remember you are cordially invited and urged to attend. New groups will be organized and a leader chosen for your locality. Ask your neighbor to come with you and be at Boyne City on March 26, at the Library at 1:30 slow time.

B. C. MELLENCAMP,
County Agent.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the beautiful floral offering, expressions of sympathy and aid given us at the loss of our beloved wife and mother. We want to thank those who so kindly furnished the automobiles and to express our gratitude to Mr. Bissel and Miss Snyder for singing at the services. We also wish to acknowledge the assistance and cooperation rendered us in clearing the roads, making it possible for us to use automobiles for the funeral.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Nearest Fixed Star
Centauri is said to be the nearest of the fixed stars. The winner of the last Indianapolis automobile race would have to maintain his average speed about 29,000,000 yards to reach it. That doesn't allow for time out to change tires, ether. And Centauri is the nearest! Others would require considerable extra travel.

Forest Fires

The forest service has experimented with reference to forest fires, and finds that pipe heels are only second to lighted matches in their ability to start fires, and that this smoldering tobacco is much more likely to kindle forest litter, bark, rotten wood or pine needles than either a cigarette or cigar.

have a mind to choose, with the referee giving the locals half the breaks of the game.

To try to increase the locals idea that they could still play a good basket ball game East Jordan sent her Band along, not with the idea of doing a little parading but to encourage the basket ball team. Had they been real sure they could beat Boyne City or any other team at the Tournament, they perhaps would not have gone to this effort.

The first game was against Charlevoix and, as expected, Charlevoix put up a good scrap! This man Brown from the resort city is a very difficult man to stop, being so tall and strong that when he gets under the basket it is almost impossible to guard him and he therefore, made many points for his team. In this game, Best, according to statements from the newspaper men and their referee, showed without doubt that he was the best forward at the Tournament by caging twenty points for his team, three points more than the whole Charlevoix team garnered in the fray.

The whole East Jordan team played a good game against a good team and won 24 to 17.

The next game was with Boyne City in the finals Saturday night, for the locals drew a bye in the second round of the Tournament. The game started off with a bang, with East Jordan displaying real teamwork and some classy playing, running up a ten to one lead in the first quarter. The score continued 10 to 1 for a few minutes in the second quarter when it went to 11-2. By this time, the referee fouled the locals practically every instance, many times when no one would say that one should have been fouled more than another, until he put the East Jordan defense off the floor in the persons of Howard Snyder and Chris Taylor. Up to this time in the Tournament, these men played a very good defensive game as they have all the year. Both men together, haven't had over a half dozen fouls called on them in the whole season, and how they could foul eight times in a little over fifteen minutes naturally is a puzzle to any observer of the game. In fact, it was no puzzle at all to any number of fans, not only from East Jordan but from towns round about, and many of them expressed themselves in the above terms.

After that, Boyne City played practically a team of East Jordan subs finally won out 22 to 20 with the help of a basket shot by one of the local men, largely because of the referring completely upsetting the local boys. In fact, in the rest of the game the East Jordan boys were afraid to guard a Boyne City man, practically allowing him to shoot the ball at his pleasure. Such inefficiency in handling athletics is one of the great drawbacks to good sportsmanship. They played a good clean game and might have won even without the help of the official. We are, therefore, very sorry that such a condition of affairs arose for we have every respect for the clean playing of both the Boyne City, and Charlevoix teams, and we blame the referee for the manner in which the game was handled.

Dickson and Aldendeifer played steller games for Boyne City, while Best and Shedina under most discouraging circumstances played a very exceptional game, while young Barnett displayed real basket ball ability when he took the place of Chris Taylor, one of the best men in the Tournament.

The locals go to Petoskey for the Regional Tournament this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, and if things break well for them, should have a good chance to grab the cup. Petoskey has two of the best officials in the whole state to handle most of the games. McClintock, who has charge of the Tournament, hasn't a peer in Michigan and Tidy of Grand Rapids is another efficient official. We are hoping that the boys will start off well enough to bring them into the finals, in which case they deserve to have the support of their Band to help them win the final game. The treatment given the boys by Harbor Springs and Mr. D. L. Bailey from the time they were located until they returned on Saturday night was all that could be asked. In fact, we feel like congratulating Harbor Springs on the excellent manner in which they handled a very difficult proposition.

The school are very grateful to the townspeople and Mr. Balch in particular for sending their Band to Harbor Springs, and the boys, of course, fully appreciated the music of their High School Band and Mr. TerWee.

BOHEMIAN SETTLEMENT

(Edited by Archie E. Busa)

Caucus results is the talk of the neighborhood this week. We bet on the winners.

Ralph Josefik of this community is taking post-graduate work at East Jordan.

Miss Marie Nemecek returned to her school duties Monday morning after spending the week end with mother and brother.

Mr. and Mrs. James Zitka left for Detroit Tuesday where Mrs. Zitka, who has been ill for some time, will take treatments in the Ford Hospital.

Little Marie Chanda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Chanda, was brought home Monday from the Charlevoix hospital, after an operation for appendicitis. Improving nicely.

Miss Mary Korton spent the week end with her parents here.

Day by day and in every way the Settlement is getting smaller and smaller.—Miss Anna Korton is working for Mrs. Bowman of East Jordan and Miss Jennie Rebec is working in 'Duck Inn.'

According to the last report, there is "still" snow in the Settlement.

Albert Chanda has been hauling wood for the past week.

Frank Kotalik hauled a load of gas to Ironton Tuesday from the Co-op Ass'n.

A Dance in the Settlement April 10. A long time away but at least interesting.

Mrs. Mary Brezina, left for Traverse City, Saturday, where she was called by the illness of her husband.

Board of Review—Ray Nowland

Mrs. O. D. Smith received a telegram recently stating that her oldest sister, Mrs. Laura Thompson had passed away at her home in Jersey City on March 3. Mrs. Thompson was one of the early settlers in northern Michigan, coming to Echo, Antrim Co. in 1874. She also resided in East Jordan, West Side, and in Wilson Twp. for several years. She leaves 3 sisters, Mrs. J. R. Vance of Santa Clara, Calif.; Mrs. E. E. Hall of Detroit and Mrs. O. D. Smith of Afton. Also 2 daughters, Mrs. James Alvin and Mrs. Henry Timmer, and one grandson all of Jersey City to mourn her loss. Mr. Thompson passed away 31 years ago during their residence in Wilson Twp.

PENINSULAR

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

[Additional notes. Other Peninsular items elsewhere in this issue.]

The young people of the three Peninsula School Dist., Three Bells, Star, and Mountain Dist., met at the home of Ray Loomis Tuesday evening and arranged to have a box social and program at the Three Bell School house March 27th, for the benefit of the Ernest Sanda family who lost their home by fire some time ago.

Little Buster, the one and one-half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Reich who has been ill for the past week is a good deal better.

The James Arnett family received a Victrola last Wednesday from their son Wilford, who is employed in Muskegon.

Mrs. Fred Wurn was in Boyne City last week, called there by the severe illness of her daughter, Mrs. Elwin Cyr who it was thought had appendicitis, but which proved to be inflammation. She is much better now.

Mrs. Orval Bennett and little daughter, Byrel, went to Boyne City Wednesday, for a few days' visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Papineau.

Orval Bennett who has been employed in Flint for several weeks is expected home April 1st.

Ray Loomis is hauling hay from Cherry Hill farm, which he purchased.

John Newville of Boyne City came one day last week to appraise the damage done by the wind storm of early January at Ridgeway farm, when the silo was blown down and the big doors of the barn were blown off their tracks.

Mrs. Will Scott of Mountain Dist. is some better after being ill some time with a bad cold and sore throat.

Will Scott is taking the school census in Mountain Dist.

The McNess man, R. G. Short of Bay Shore is making his regular trip this week.

To The Electors Of Jordan Township

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Justice of Peace. Will appreciate your support.

Foolish Parents

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I HAVE no doubt that if I had ever had a son I should have been as foolish a parent as any whom I have known. Nancy says she is sure of it. I can understand how it happens that fathers and mothers give their children what they cry for because it is hard for me to deny a young person, not my child, anything it wants that it is possible for me to give.

Sheldon senior has as much money as he needs and almost as much as he wants, so that it is no sacrifice for him to gratify the desires of his son who has just entered college. When the boy was pledged to the fraternity that Sheldon had himself belonged to when he was in college, the older man was so pleased that he gave the boy a sporty-looking roadster to carry him to classes.

"I've seldom known an automobile to be either a moral or an intellectual advantage to a boy in college," I said to Sheldon.

"I know it's not good for the boy to have the car," he replied, "but I just cannot bring myself to deny him anything I can afford to give him, if it brings him pleasure."

Sheldon is a successful man; he holds a position of prominence and trust in the community in which he lives, but he has gotten where he is through hard work and sacrifice, and the doing without many things which would have given him pleasure. He does not want his son to reach success by the same methods as he has done. He wants him, in fact, to have none of the benefits which come from doing without things. Foolish parent!

McCready has worked for everything he has. He went no farther in school than the eighth grade, and he does not understand why his son should want more knowledge of books than he has had.

If he wants an education, let him work for it then," he says. "He'll appreciate it more if he knows how much it costs."

So, though McCready is quite able to send his son to college, he is unwilling to give the boy any help. Young McCready is fighting his own educational battles. He spends considerable time washing dishes and waiting on tables and raking leaves from lawns which might be employed in something far more useful and educative. He doesn't mind the work, excepting that when he has learned his lessons and earned his living he has no time for social pleasure, no time to play, no time for general reading. His foolish father is unnecessarily depriving him of a good part of a college education.

It is a serious matter being a parent. It requires more judgment and self-restraint than I should myself, perhaps, have had. The most foolish as I see them are those who make their children weak and selfish by allowing them no sacrifices and giving them no responsibilities, and those who rob their children of many of the pleasures of youth by giving them no help and no sympathy.

Original Juntas

The Juntas that appear in modern European history, were the provincial councils of Spain. When Napoleon sent his armies to overrun Spain in 1808 they declared against France. The word junta is the name given to the leaders of the Whig party in England during the reigns of William and Mary, and Anne, 1689 to 1714.

Jordan Trims Charlevoix

East Jordan High Demonstrates Superiority, Score 34 to 24.

[Copy received Thursday, March 11th too late for publication in current week's issue—Ed.] After three minutes play, the local High School Basketball team lead Charlevoix 8 to 2 and thereafter there was never any doubt about who would be the winner, for the locals started in with that same tantalizing, machine-like tactics that have steam rolled all opponents this year, as in a number of former games. Capt. Johnson's men simply showed that they were a real Basketball team. Judging by the last few games, there isn't a team in northern Michigan in any class, that could take them into camp.

Charlevoix presented an aggressive, clean cut bunch of Basketball players and not for one minute would we belittle the ability of the Charlevoix boys, for they are a strong team, one of the strong teams of northern Michigan but that does not qualify them to beat the present aggregation collected by Coach Wells, for, without a doubt, in the minds of the oldest fans it is the best Basketball team ever developed in the local High School. There have been brilliant individuals in some of the teams in the past but no other team can boast of five or six real Basketball players. Every man on Coach Wells' team is fitted to his position and plays it about as near right as High school boys can. It is just as hard to say that one local was a star as it has been at any other time.

Capt. Johnson and Best played steller games and accepted nearly all the chances that they had and many times in sensational style. Perhaps Best is a little more sensational in his shooting but, as hinted some time ago, Johnson really plays as consistent a game as any boy who ever played on the local floor. He has an act of getting under the basket in spite of any guard who has been against him in the past two years, both on the local floor, at Petoskey, and Ann Arbor. Johnson has shown himself to be one of the greatest Basketball players developed in northern Michigan in the past two years. Taylor covered all kinds of territory and is surely one of the best running guards in this section, while Shedina and Snyder played their usual strong game. Ross substituted for a short time and did not seem to slow up the aggregation perceptibly. Without a doubt, Ross, if called upon to take his place in the lineup at the tournament will do about as well as any of the rest of the locals. A team is just as strong as its substitutes. This may prove a valuable factor in the locals' success at the coming tournaments.

For Charlevoix, Brown played a good game, especially near the basket, while Davenport demonstrated very good floor work and was a very strong player, as is Harrington.

The drawing for the coming tournament brings the two above teams together for the third clash of the season with a good chance of the locals taking their measure again.

This makes the sixteenth game of the season for East Jordan, having won fourteen and lost two, and those only by a one point margin in overtime periods and on foreign courts. Up to the last game, which shows a strong defensive team. Snelberger refereed his usual classy game.

Following is the lineup:
East Jordan: Best, Johnson, Shedina, Snyder, Taylor.
Charlevoix: R. F. Brown, L. F. Harrington, C. Davenport, R. G. McCann, L. G. Higman.
Substitutes: Wright for Best; Ross for Snyder, for East Jordan. Beaudin for Harrington; Cooper for Higman, for Charlevoix.

Score by quarters: 8 to 2; 12 to 6; 24 to 14; 34 to 24.

The Railroad Recovery

The rail recovery has been due to intensive effort on the part of the carriers themselves. Between 1922 and the end of 1925 they spent $2,000,000,000 for improvements and new equipment. They have also steadily reduced their operating ratio. Increased efficiency has overcome to some extent the handicaps of low rates and high taxes. Taxes are enormous and are still mounting. But the industry as a whole has been mastering the difficulties created by government operation and not very friendly control. It has been reorganized and strengthened and the public attitude toward it is changing from indifference or hostility to cordiality and encouragement.

The railroads are a vital agency of prosperity and economic development. They are performing their functions satisfactorily, although receiving a very moderate compensation for their services. All they ask is a chance to do their work and pay their way. That is the least which competent government regulation ought to offer them.

Bought Neighbors' Towels By Mail

One of the best illustrations of the "mail order" joke came to our attention recently. A lady living in a small town of Belton, in the center of the textile belt of South Carolina, ordered some nice towels from a mail order house, paying 29 cents each for them. They seemed to be a great bargain.

The money went from her town, and the towels came back. They were all that had been claimed for them. On the band was a stamp, "Made by Blair Mills, Belton, S. C." The lady's next door neighbor ran the mills and she could have bought the towels for $1.95 a dozen at home.

This is merely a clear illustration of the necessity for town builders to look around before sending money away. It is also clear that merchants, having mail order prices beaten to a frazzle, will never get the business of their own neighbors, unless they tell them that they have the goods. Advertising is the merchants only warfare against the mail order houses.

Coming Of Springtime

Soon there will come the new awakening of springtime, the season of the year when nature will throw off the old garb of winter and reappear in a new dress designed for this glorious occasion. And we will tread in her footsteps. Society long ago designed dates and occasions when we should follow in the wake of the common mother to us all. We hail this transition with joy, because it means the end of the long winter months, the resumption of that life out of doors where God will set the seal of His approval upon the hillside and in the vale.

And along with the march of Springtime will come the march of changing styles. In shop windows will appear new fashions to dazzle the eye and give riotous color to the new world. There is enough of the materialistic in all of us to desire this change, because we, too, would be in tune with the things that we love. There will be the spring stye shows, the unfolding of the Creator's art, and in making our selections it is well to bear in mind that our own merchants have provided for our wants not only in keeping with the new season, but in that dependability that insures satisfactory possession. By all means consult with them first.

White Collar Bandits

When armed bandits ride up to a bank, hold up the officials at the point of a gun and rob that institution, they do at least one thing—they come out into the open in order to rob their victims. If they are caught in the act they are promptly shot down by an aroused public, or if captured later are speedily convicted and sentenced to long prison terms.

But how about the white collar bandit who preys upon the unwary and by his nefarious practices, covering every form of trickery, if able to mulct the American public every year of over a billion dollars, leaving in his wake a trail of destruction, want and misery, that is appalling. Nobody is safe against him, from the successful business man to the lone widow with her few hundred dollars to protect her against penury and want in her old age. He comes in a community like a thief in the night, selling worthless securities under promises of large returns, and there seems to be no way to combat his constant assault upon the pocketbooks of the public.

And yet there is a way, which is followed out by every would-be investor, would soon rid this country of that kind of vermin. "Before you invest—investigate." Simple, isn't it? When one of these skunks invades your office or your home tell them you will place their proposition before your banker and abide by his decision. In practically every instance you will never see or hear from them again, and at the same time have saved yourself from an unwise investment.

Remember the stock swindler has schemes without number. He's lower down in the scale of decency than the man who holds you up and takes your money at the point of a gun. Beware of him as you would the sting of a scorpion, for his very presence means financial ruin and depense. Have but one financial code, and stick to it: "Consult your banker first."

Joyous Colored Taffeta Ties Enliven the Smart Tailleur

Not every scarf is expected to be two and a half yards long and wide as this spring. To be sure, this is a very popular dimension, that is for the usual graceful scarf. Indeed he scarf in all its phases is an outstanding note in spring attire. However, there is promise of a new vogue. The smart idea is the narrower necktie type, especially for the tailored dress or street costume.

There's a knack in arranging these fancy joyous colored ties. They must be bowed and knotted with an "accidentally-on-purpose" nonchalance to add the required bit of dashing picturesqueness to the tailleur.

Plaid taffeta is a favorite fabric for the modish narrow tie. In the picture a pair of tie-cuffs completes a most charming taffeta set.

Comes from across seas the word that the chic Parisienne is wearing a necktie of colorful metal brocade. These ties are wound about the throat choker fashion, either tied in a double bow at the side or with the two short ends brought to the front.

The watch aboard the Royal James challenged us as we made fast by the larboard side-ladder, and when we climbed over the bulwarks to the deck Master Martin flashed a lantern in our faces with a gust of oaths in his absurdly gentle tones.

"By the _____, but I hoped 'twas that _____ Flint come a-seekin' mischief," he complained. "Where is Captain Murray?" I answered.

"In his cabin."

And in the same mild manner he continued to his men:

"To your stations. Remember cap'n's orders. Now these two are aboard, ye'll fire at any boat that approaches and challenge afterward."

The negro lackeys stood aside as we came to the cabin entrance under the poop; the door was open. Down the dark tunnel of the companionway with its stateroom doors on either hand Peter and I could see my great-uncle sitting at the table in the main cabin, a glass of wine at his elbow, a chart spread out before him.

I recounted briefly our conversation with Flint and the determination Peter and I had reached in consequence. He nodded agreement with it.

"You did quite right, Robert. Peter did not exaggerate the dangers inherent in the situation."

"You will excuse me," he went on, "if I return to my studies. I have much upon my mind."

We bade him good night and went to our staterooms, weary enough from the unwanted exercise of rowing. As I shut my door I noted that he was measuring distances in the Caribbean with calipers, and jotting figures upon the margin of the chart.

In the morning all hands were occupied with the task of careening the ship. 'Twas when the work was proceeding satisfactorily that my great-uncle bade Martin tell of a dozen hands who were good shots and call away the longboat.

"I marvel that you dare to leave the James in this defenseless condition," I said to him as the longboat pulled off up the anchorage past the silent bulk of the Walrus.

"There need not necessarily be danger this afternoon," he said. "'Tis all quiet ashore, and I doubt if there is a man sufficiently sober aboard the Walrus to carry a carton of powder from the magazine."

"But by evening they'll ha' slept it off," I insisted.

"True, and with it their lust for bloodshed—for the time being, at any rate. Our problem then will be to turn Flint's mind to some undertaking which will divert his attention and occupy him until we need no longer be concerned for his whimsies."

We landed south of the first river, below where Flint's party had held their carouse, and proceeded inland through a wooded valley, with hills rising to right and left of us and the Spyglass towering in the distance. The day was very clear, and the mountain's summit was a gray cone against the blue of the sky. Even our sullen, hand-dog escort of seamen became almost cheery under the influence of their changed surroundings, and with the sight of their first goat they began to whoop and shout like schoolboys. Murray, despite his age, was as spry as the youngest of us, and he never wasted a shot.

We had maintained a brisk pace on our wanderings, and we reached the site of the spring well before sunset. My great-uncle surveyed the situation with a calculating eye, estimated the stand of timber on the hillside, and exclaimed that there was no neighboring eminence whence an enemy could command it.

"'Tis all you have asserted it to be," he said. "Moreover, it gives me an idea of a way in which we may occupy the energies of Captain Flint and his lambs for the ensuing weeks of our stay."

A thread of smoke trickled up beside the mouth of the rivulet in the woods along the estuary, and I indicated it to him.

"There is Flint," I said.

"Yes," he replied absently, and kept on.

The shadows were lengthening as we stepped out of the forest into a glade on the river's bank. Several additional fires had been kindled, and around each were huddled groups of pirates much the worse for the last night's drinking-bout. John Silver was the only man who appeared to have any animation left in him. 'Twas he first saw us, and evidently spoke to Flint, who sat with Bones and several other cronies at the smallest of the fires. He swung toward us as Flint rose unsteadily and tacked in his wake.

"Come a-visitin', captain?" Silver inquired cheerfully. "Mighty kind o' ye, sir, seem' as how most o' our lads is a bit the worse for liquor and blood-lettin'. My duty to ye, Master Ormerod. I hopes I sees you and your friend well?"

"Blood-lettin'?" repeated Murray, ignoring the balance of his remarks. "The old story, eh? Well, well! You'll never learn. How many for the sailmaker's palm and needle?"

"Three, captain. And main lucky we are as—"

Flint lurched up beside him. "Stow that, John," growled his captain. "'Til do the talkin'. What's your trouble, Murray?"

My great-uncle took a pinch of snuff with his inimitable knack of expressing acute disgust without moving a muscle of his face.

"I have been a-huntin'," he replied. "Shooting for the pot. We stopped on the way to our boat to pass the time o' day with you, Flint."

Flint snorted. "Time o' day! H—! 'Tain't like you to take the trouble."

"I am a person of most uncertain proclivities," replied my great-uncle. "I hear from Silver that last night's episode was accompanied by the usual fatalities."

"Three," assented Flint. "Two o' 'em could be spared—lousy dogs. The other was Toby Welsh, as stout a fellow as we had."

"Not bad for one night's work," commented Murray.

Flint was obviously in no very beligerent mood; he could scarce stand. But he flamed up at this.

"Aye, and what d'ye expect? How many months did ye tell me I must bide here wif a crew that knows naught but how to brew the devil's broth? And how many men d'ye think will be alive by the end of the time? Cut me, but 'twill be like the song we sing o' the Dead Man's Chest!"

"I fear it will," agreed my great-uncle. "Unless you take measures to prevent it."

"Measures? There's a deal to be done in keeping twelvescore men from fighting on this chunk o' earth and rock!"

"There's your ship to be cleaned," said my great-uncle tentatively.

"'T'd ha' nutny on my hands did I call for it! They're all for a run ashore, and there'll be no working them aboardship until they ha' had their fill o' woods and mountains."

"Ah!" said my great-uncle. "Doubtless that is so. Well, if they must remain ashore a time, is it not in their own interest to erect themselves some shelter from the elements? We have often said that some day we should build ourselves a fort on the island."

"We ha'."

"I came upon the ideal spot this afternoon—a sand hillock overgrown with fine pines and oaks eastward of the swamps. It hath the airs from the ocean, a good prospect of the anchorage and the nearer waters, and there is a spring at the very top."

"And I'm to do the work!" snarled Flint.

"Your men are to do the work," corrected Murray. "I should gladly assist them in it but for the fact that my own crew will be occupied aboardship during the duration of our stay. We of the Royal James, I may point out, are laboring in the common interest no less than your people will be if they undertake the construction of the fort."

"Blas't me for a _____ feel if I care two _____ for the common interest!" cried Flint. "But 'tis true there is need of the fort, and if the men will bide ashore they should ha' a roof to their heads and a better place to camp than down here in the river vapors. I'll see what's to be done, Murray."

"You'll not regret it," replied my great-uncle. "I shall be glad to lend you aught I possess in the way of tools or advice."

The building of the hilltop fort appealed to some boyish strain submerged beneath the surface villainy of Flint's scoundrels. They went to their task with positive enthusiasm, clearing the hillock of timber, sawing and squaring the logs and erecting a substantial house of the more massive logs and after that an open stockade or paling of sapling stakes six feet high.

Murray's personal object was already accomplished. The Royal James was back upon an even keel, her bottom scraped clean, her hull fresh-painted inside and out, her rigging overhauled and canvas in order, spars tested and a weak topmast replaced, guns varnished, stores checked and stowed, sufficient great-cartridge for three actions prepared by the gunner, ballast aboard and distributed with a careful eye for sailing trim.

"As sweet and proper as though she was just from the hands of the dockyard fitters at Portsmouth," was Murray's comment on an evening about the beginning of August. "The tide ebbs on the break of dawn. I purpose sailing then."

"And you must deliver the body of your hostage beforehand," I answered as disagreeably as I could.

"Even so," he acknowledged. "'Tis regrettable, Robert, yet the time will come, I venture to predict, when you will look back with pride upon the inconvenience you suffered."

"'Til accept the inconvenience if I may 'escape the rascals alive," I retorted.

"Of that you need have no doubts," he said earnestly. "I shall accompany you, and you may hear my parting instructions to Flint. Friend Peter, will you indulge me for the space of half an hour whilst I visit the Walrus with my nephew?"

"Neen," answered Peter, and pushed away from the table. "I go too."

"No, no—"

"I go too."

"But naught was said of two hostages—"

"If Bob goes, I go," insisted the Dutchman.

Murray shook his head. "For you I might not be responsible, Peter."

"I will be responsible for myself," said Peter. "I go to der Walrus or you go out der window."

My great-uncle stared at him for a moment, then burst into laughter. "By gad, you would! And after, become captain in my place, no doubt. You are unmatchable, Peter. What do you say, nephew?"

"I'd not have Peter risk his throat with mine," I answered uncomfortably.

"I go wif' you, Bob," repeated the Dutchman.

"You see!" cried Murray. "The useless to object. Go with you he will. Well, you'll have company at least—and I shall lack a companion whose presence is not the less valuable for his silence. A good friend is Peter, Robert. I would he were mine!"

Peter rose.

"We go," he said. "Ja."

On deck Murray had the longboat called away, and we embarked in silence. 'Twas a hot night, with very little air stirring, and the ribald uproar on the Walrus was amazingly distinct. The James was like a tomb, by contrast. Not a sound came from her, and the only lights she showed were in the waist and the main cabin.

The Walrus was a blaze of lanterns from poop to fo'c'sle, but Murray halted the deck twice before he had an answer.

"Boat ahoy!" responded a husky voice then. "Why'n—don't ye come aboard?"

"'Tis Captain Murray to see Captain Flint," replied my great-uncle calmly.

"Aye, aye, sir," answered the husky voice on a quaver of fear. "We'll call him directly. Will ye come aboard, sir?"

My great-uncle turned to Peter with one foot on the side ladder.

"Are you certain you must go with Robert?" he asked. "I can assure you no harm shall come to him."

"Ja, I go."

My great-uncle's reply was a shrug of indifference, and Peter and I climbed after him to the deck. The Walrus was a revelation after the ordered discipline of the Royal James.

In a word, she was pig-dirty. Her deck was littered with all kinds of rubbish; her rigging was slack and spliced in a fashion which seemed lubberly to me, who was a lubber; her canvas was torn, poorly patched and wretchedly furled; boats, barrels, lumber, spare spars and cables lay about in entire confusion. The planks we trod on were slippery with grease. The paint was peeling from the bulwarks. There were spots of rust on the muzzle of a chase gun, which itself was hauled out of its proper position.

Flint came swaggering down to us from the poop in a condition which was in harmony with his surroundings. Like most of his men, he had discarded coat, shirt, stockings and shoes to accommodate himself to the heat of a tropical summer. His loose canvas trousers, identical with those the seamen wore, were streaked with dirt and tar. His bare calves and forearms were covered with dried blood where they had been scratched by brambles in his shore expeditions; out of the matted hair on his chest was thrust the head of a tiger, most marvelously tattooed in black and yellow. His hair was a lank frame for his saturnine face, stubbly with a week's growth of beard.

"What d'ye seek, Murray?" he growled. "Come to look us over?"

"I am come to fulfill my contract with you," replied my great-uncle. "I am sailing with the morning ebb, and I bring you, not one hostage, but two."

Flint stepped closer and scrutinized Peter and me.

"Two, eh? What do I want wif two? What good's this fat man to me? He means nothing to you."

"On the contrary," denied my relative. "Master Corlar is an old and valued enemy of mine, of whom I have hopes of making in time a friend."

"Well, he's no good to me; gut me if he is!"

"You will take both or none," said my great-uncle in the voice like a dripping icicle which he knew so well how to assume.

"Nasty, are ye?" rasped Flint. "Blas't ye for a—"

A light in Murray's tawny eyes kindled like a flame under the reflection of the battle-lanterns which were hung from the lower spars.

"Two it is," Flint ended hastily. "But ye'll never see either one o' 'em if ye don't 'make good on your bargain. I ha' supported much from ye, Murray, but—"

"You'll support more for sufficient gold," rebuked my great-uncle. "Tut, man, I read you like a book. When we first encountered you were proud to be mate of a trading brig. I have put you in the way to rank and fortune, if you know how to exploit your opportunities. Hark ye!"

"You said seven hundred thousand," snapped Flint.

"I said seven hundred thousand to be divided betwixt the two ships."

A shrewd look dawned in Flint's face.

"And where are ye a-goin' to pluck this million and a half o' treasure from?" he demanded. "You ha' said much of it, but you told me little. What course doth the treasure ship sail? Where do you lurk for her? There's wide seas betwixt the Main and the Atlantic, and ye can't stop every hole, Murray."

"You may safely trust that portion of the task to me," replied my great-uncle dryly.

He offered me his hand, and somewhat to my own surprise I found myself inclined to accept it.

"Robert," he said, "I regret exceedingly the necessity I am under of inflicting this unpleasantness upon you. I shall endeavor to provide you adequate reparation. You also, friend Peter. Remember, we are working for a greater cause than our personal enrichment."

He vaulted lightly to the top of the bulwarks and dropped out of sight on the farther side.

"Gut me, but there's times I think he believes all he says," swore Flint.

CHAPTER IX

Peter Plays at Bowls with Destiny

Darby McGraw's red head shone in the lantern light.

"Whisht, but it's Master Bob again! Now ain't this the mighty fortune to have ye with us! Ha' ye left the old devil you for good?"

He nodded his torch of hair at the vague hull of the James. Flint exploded with raucous laughter.

"The old devil you," he repeated. "—me, but it takes Darby to put the right word to a man. 'Tis what he is, blast him for the _____ he sets himself up to be!"

Darby proffered him a huge silver beaker of rum.

"I fetched this from the cabin after ye, captain," said the Irish boy in his wheedling brogue. "Troth, say I to meself, if the captain must talk with Murray he'll ha' a bad taste in the mouth o' him to be washed out, and I'd best ha' a sup o' sugar-juice handy for his needin'."

Flint seized the rum, threw back his head and drained the fiery stuff as if it had been wine.

"You said right, my lad," he answered sourly. "And I'm thinking I'll maybe need all the luck that red head o' yours can bring me. Where's Billy Bones?"

"Dhrunk under the cabin table," returned Darby promptly.

"Gut him for the souse he is! And Long John?"

"Sure, captain dear, 'twas yourself sent him ashore to keep the lads up to the fort from carvin' themselves."

"So I did. Well, I'll see to the prisoners myself then."

"Pris'ners!" protested Darby, wide-eyed. "Och, captain, ye won't be hard on Master Bob! He's as kindly a young gentleman as ever I see—and Peter there is a grand fightin' feller. Ye should hear to tales they tell o' his murderin' and slayin' with the red Injuns."

"'Til be as hard as they make me be," returned Flint. "But for tonight I must have them safe."

Peter, at my elbow, spoke for the first time.

"Ja, ja." We go. I have a wish to sleep."

"Sleep, is it?" jeered Flint. "That ye shall, my hearty! Come along o' me."

Below was a pool of shadows that scuttled and awayed as if to escape the feeble light. There was an odor, also, none too pleasant.

I drew back.

"Certes, you could lodge us securely otherwhere than this," I protested.

"No, no," answered Flint. "There's not a door aboard hath a lock would hold Darby, let alone you two. I'm sorry for ye, lad, if it's no fault o' yours that ye're here; but for tonight at least you must lie in the lazaret. Here, ye shall ha' the lantern to keep the rats off, and in the morning we'll manage different."

Peter pushed past me, and took the lantern from his hand.

"We go, ja," he squeaked. "Come, Bob."

I followed him without another word, already wondering at his extraordinary docility. A rasp clacked home in a bolt, and footsteps thudded away. I sat on the bottommost step of the ladder and peered hopelessly around me as Peter, swinging the lantern as high as the low deckroom allowed, prowled around the limited area of our prison.

A black rat as large as a cat rushed across my feet. Squeaks and rustlings sounded in the corners.

Peter returned to the ladder-foot, deposited the lantern on the floor and plumped himself beside it.

"What you t'ink, Bob?" he said blandly. "Do we stay or get out?"

"I frowned at him.

"'Tis no joke," I snapped. "I had reasons for—"

"Ja," he agreed. "Der little gal." "How did you know?" I exclaimed.

"I know," he replied with his simpering imitation of a laugh. "You t'ink der little gal is a good gal. You t'ink it is not goodt dot she be taken aboard der James. You want to be there andt be sure dot she is safe."

"'Tis true as gospel, Peter," I groaned. "I hoped to the last this ridiculous plan of Murray's would fall through in some manner, but the man has a damnable determination."

"Ja," agreed Peter. "I t'ink he takes der treasure ship, Bob. Dot's easy."

"Easy? I see not how!"

"Ja, it is easy to take her. But after comes his troubles. Much treasure is bad for pirates. We haf troubles after. Suppose we get out tonight. Suppose we get out andt back to der James. Ja?"

I looked around me skeptically at the heavy planking and stout timbers of the sides and forward bulkhead.

"It can't be done. 'Twould take a week to break out of this—and the James will be sailing in five or six hours."

"Neen," said Peter. "We get out—any time, we get out."

"How?" I demanded.

He picked up the lantern and led me forward to the bulkhead. The light showed that one of the oaken planks was slightly sprung, leaving an infinitesimal crack between its edge and the uppermost of its fellows.

"Are you planning to pry that off with your finger-nails?" I taunted him.

"Neen," he answered, and conducted

"Are You Planning to Pry That Off With Your Finger Nails?" I Taunted.

me to a corner whence the rats scudded as we approached.

He stirred his foot amongst some rubbish and turned up several long, wrought-iron spikes, such as are used to bolt together the heavier ship-timbers.

"Dot's plenty," he said.

I could hardly control the gush of relief that welled up in me.

"I believe it is," I whispered. "But oh, Peter, there is such little time!"

"Enough," he grunted. "Come! We begin."

We listened at the bulkhead for signs of life on the opposite side, but not a sound came through to us, although the clamor on the upper deck and in the poop cabin seeped into our dungeon from overhead. 'Twas stiflingly hot, and Peter's shirt care was to strip off his buckskin and leggings.

"We got to swim," he said, eyeing them regretfully. "You don't need clothes tonight, Bob."

So I followed his example, and we fell to work with our spikes upon the sprung plank, the sweat pouring in rills of moisture from our half-naked bodies, our crude tools slipping in our greasy fingers as we pried and pushed and fought for every inch of space betwixt the plank and the upright it was nailed to. Peter did all the work.

As the last nail yielded to Peter's shoulder the thin clangor of the bell of the Royal James stole down to us out of the night. Four times it rang—two o'clock!

"Get out, Bob," whispered Peter.

I wriggled through the gap in the bulkhead, and he passed the lantern after me. Its flame was burning low, but I had sufficient light to determine that I stood in a store-room crammed with casks of rum, salt meat and ship's biscuit. A door in its forward bulkhead led to another hold of the orlop deck, where were a hatch and ladder leading up to the gundeck. I crept as far as the foot of the ladder and listened to the snores of the scores of men who slept in hammocks slung between the great guns of the battery. That way lay our only path of escape.

I returned to Peter in a mood that was none too cheerful; but he was already at work with his spike, hissing like a kettle on the boil as he prodded away with its blunted point. I was able to be of more assistance to him this time, since from the farther side 'twas possible to exert a greater leverage, once the plank was sprung loose. Yet the James sounded seven bells before we were successful. Peter grunted his satisfaction.

"We got time," he said. "Whoof! So much! I sweat I slide me t'rough dot hole."

He was stripped to the buff, and his pink, hairless body was all a-glisten as he rolled into the opening. His head and shoulders made it easily, but I saw with dismay that his immense paunch was an insurmountable obstacle. He heaved and shoved and twisted. 'Twas no manner of use.

Peter backed out of his predicament to an accompaniment of squeaking grunts, and I followed him, too bitterly disappointed for words. Escape had seemed so easy—and now we were condemned to two months aboard the Walrus, very likely to exceedingly uncomfortable deaths, for I fancied that Flint was the sort of man to lose his queer mixture of fear and respect for my great-uncle as soon as they were out of touch.

"Hold der light here, Bob," said Peter, squatting on the litter on the deck, and he proceeded to extract a splinter from his foot.

"Ja, dot's goodt," he went on, standing up. "Well, we don't get out dot way."

He felt his way toward the ladder to the cabin-hatch.

"Always there is another way, Bob. If one way is not goodt, der other maybe is better. Ja! You see."

He climbed the ladder silently in his bare feet until his great shoulders were directly beneath the square of the hatch, and I heard a faint grinding of straining metal, the crackling of tortured wood.

"Ja," he panted, desisting. "We do dot. Now you be ready

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Monroe—The Monroe County road commission will receive bids here March 10 for the construction of the Erie-Bedford road, 16 feet wide and seven miles long, and the Vienna road, 14 feet wide and one mile long. Bids will be opened at 10 a. m. Both roads are to be built from Macadam and to be completed this fall.

Monroe—A petition has been received here by the county road commission asking to improve a road commencing from the village corner of Scofield on the Carleton-Scofield road, south half a mile and then east two miles and connecting with the Hells road, Exeter township. Petition was taken under advisement.

Kalamazoo—Locked in her boarding place by Normal school students, who as a joke sought to defer her marriage to H. R. Leversee, Miss Lenora Canaday, outwitted her captors by making a rope of bed sheets and lowering herself from a window to the ground two stories below. The wedding took place at the scheduled hour.

Ann Arbor—Carefully avoiding the use of the term "birth control," Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, never-the-less discussed the subject before the delegates of the American Congress of Internal Medicine here. The congress moved here from Detroit for clinical demonstrations at the University hospital.

Grand Rapids—Sentiment of the Michigan Retail Clothiers' and Furriers' Association at its convention here, apparently was opposed to general adoption of the so-called 10-payment plan of selling merchantise; but a few retailers boldly asserted they have given it their full and indorsement. One of the opponents was G. R. Rappart, of Pontiac.

Birmingham—The Briggs Investment company of Detroit has notified the village council of Birmingham that the construction of a $200,000 theater building at Woodward and Maple avenues will be begun immediately. The theater will be leased by the John H. Kunsky interests, who will equip it with furnishings costing about $100,000, including a pipe organ, it was announced.

Ann Arbor—Action that would have given the University of Michigan the new football stadium for which agitation has been carried on for the past few years, was postponed for a month at the last monthly meeting of the board of regents of the university. This is the second postponement of action on the matter, a similar course having been followed by the regents last month.

Ann Arbor—Urging that business men pay more attention to education and art in the development of a training which will fit the student entering business to more readily acquire the methods and ideas peculiar to the business he undertakes, Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, addressed the members of the Michigan Real Estate Association at the Michigan Union.

Albion—Miss Virginia Frank, of Dayton, O., Albion College student who recently was given a leading role in the opera "The Student Prince," despite a lack of stage experience, will not play for at least three weeks and will disappoint several hundred Albion friends who had planned to hear her either at Battle Creek or Jackson. She was taken ill while visiting friends here and underwent an operation at the Sheldon Memorial Hospital here for appendicitis.

Ypsilanti—The Willis Co-operative Association, an organization of farmers, has requested the Ypsilanti Farm bureau to take over the business of the Willis concern and operate it as a branch of the Ypsilanti bureau. Willis is a village southeast of Ypsilanti. The proposed merger will be passed upon by the Ypsilanti Farm bureau at its annual meeting March 3. Frank Wilson is manager of the local farm bureau which last year reported gross sales of $274,000 and net profits of $5,307.

Lansing—Fern Browers, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Browers, of Millets, a small town five miles southwest of here, burned to death when his clothing caught fire from a stove. The boy was at home alone when the accident occurred. The mother had left the house for a moment to go to a store nearby. When she returned she found the child in the doorway, his clothing a mass of flames. She extinguished the fire, but the boy had suffered such serious burns that he died within two hours.

Monroe—The committee in charge of the Monroe county historical pageant to be staged here June 23 and 24, announced that a large group of Indians from Walpole Island, Ontario, will be here and take special part in the pageant, depicting the early history of Monroe. The Indian band will accompany this delegation to play in the home-comers' parade on the afternoon of June 23 and an Indian village will be set up in the city. Bert S. Knapp is the chairman of the pageant committee and H. D. Schubert, secretary.

Alpena—Charles H. Henry, 69 years old, one of the most widely known attorneys of Michigan, died recently at his home, 303 State avenue, after a long illness of heart trouble which culminated in a stroke of apoplexy.

Birmingham—The village council of Birmingham voted recently for the sale of $99,700 in bonds to the Fidelity Trust company of Detroit. The money will be utilized for the erection of an elevated water tank and the extension of the water system.

Saginaw—W. S. Butterfield of Detroit, head of extensive theatrical interests has announced a new $500,000 theatre for Saginaw. Its policy will be combined vaudeville and motion pictures and occasional legitimate attractions. Ground will be broken in the spring. He already operates four theatres here.

Detroit—More than 1,000 dogs, including the best in the state and winners from New York, will compete in the annual bench show of the Detroit Kennel Club, at Convention Hall, Detroit, March, 5, 6 and 7. Wealthy Detroiters have donated the finest gold and silver trophies given anywhere this year.

Grand Rapids—Enacting a scene from a story they had just read, Laverne McCoy, 15 years old, grasped a rifle in the home of Herbert Lehman, 14, pointed it at his companion and pulled the trigger. The rifle discharged, the bullet entering Lehman's left chest. At the Butterworth Hospital, where the boy was taken, it was said he would recover.

Albion—Andrew W. Young, well known as a member of the G. A. R., died recently on his eighty-sixth birthday, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Leon Clyde, at Holt, Mich. He was born in Barkeith, Scotland, but after the death of both of his parents, came at the age of 10 years, accompanied by his brothers and sisters, to the United States.

Saginaw—The Attorney-General's department has decided that no proceedings will be started to remove Under-Sheriff Glenn R. Wilson, of Saginaw, for his alleged part in the Frankennuttl. revels, three weeks ago, unless ordered to do so by Gov. Alex. J. Groesbeck. Formal charges are necessary to bring the case to the executive's attention.

Jackson—The funeral of the late Charles Mortimer Peck, internationally known newspaper writer, formerly of Jackson, who died in New York Friday, was held here Monday. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. D. T. Magill, of the First Baptist church which the deceased attended as a lad. The body was laid beside those of his parents and other relatives in Evergreen cemetery.

Monroe—"Examine carefully the United States Constitution, as drafted by our forefathers," Charles C. Simons, United States district judge, of Detroit urged in an address at the second semi-annual banquet of the Hamilton-Jefferson club of Monroe county. "In recent years," he continued, "so many proposals to change the Constitution have been introduced that its entire structure is threatened."

Pontiac—Ownership of the safe found at the intersection of the Nine-Mile and Lasher roads, by county officers, was established after officers had conferred with William C. Guenshe, manager of the Fine Arts theater, 2954 Woodward avenue, Detroit. The safe was stolen from the theater, rifled of its contents and apparently dumped into the ditch. The door had been blown off.

Ypsilanti—The "dead line" after which no State Normal college co-ed is permitted to remain away from her rooming house at night without being required to explain her action to Dean Lydia I. Jones will be extended on March 1 from 10:30 p. m. to the present rule, to 11:30, unless President Charles McKenny vetoes the unanimous action of the student council, which recently voted in favor of such a change in rules.

Lansing—The last call for schools expecting to enter the district basketball tournaments has been issued by the Michigan High School Athletic Association. The entries will close Saturday, February 20, as specified by the tournament committee. This is three weeks prior to the tournament dates, March 11-12. Officials at the many district centers around the state are looking for a last minute rush, particularly by the smaller schools.

Lansing—Experts will be consulted at every step in the crime investigation to be undertaken by the Michigan legislature this year, Speaker Fred Wells of the House has declared. Answering the insinuation that the investigation is to be a sort of glorified junket trip, with almost one-fourth of the lawmakers participating and the state footing the bills, the speaker declared that special care is being taken to make anything of the sort impossible.

Escanaba—Three men are being held by the police here in connection with the mysterious strangling to death of John Granholm, a prohibition investigator and deputy sheriff who was found in a saloon and lodging house with a bootlace tied around his neck and fastened to a bed post. Fred Cross, said by the police to be the owner of the building, was one of the men held. Dan McCann, from whose boot the leather lace used to strangle Granholm was taken, was another man detained while the third was William Burnell

The Rich Case

The conviction of young Arthur Rich of criminal assault and his sentence to life imprisonment in Jackson prison stand out in the news of the day as a salutary moral lesson for young America. That rich has been convicted despite obstacles is a credit to the state of Michigan. The assignment of an assistant attorney general to aid the Calhoun county prosecutor's office was a commendable move by the state government.

Rich, on the basis of the jury's findings and the testimony, is a dangerous product of loose living. Booze has been the major factor in his downfall. He admitted under oath numerous violations of the Volstead Act. He was a notorious member of the younger "fast set," according to witnesses. In Jackson he is an eloquent exhibit against booze and brutalism, the former inspiring the latter. Let the fathers and mothers of growing children contemplate the fate of young Rich and ponder their own violations of the liquor law, which inevitably give encouragement for similar outlawry on the part of their own sons and daughters.

But more than Rich there is the picture of the unfortunate, Louise King, the victim of assault. This 20-year-old girl went out with Rich. She remained with him even after he produced booze and drank. She even sipped some of the stuff herself. She smoked cigarettes. For clarity of argument, let us concede that for a 20-year-old girl to drink and smoke and to consort with men who drink is not, in itself, a proof of moral laxity. But who is there to deny that it is a letting down of the bars which protect woman's chastity and an invitation to trouble?—Editorial from the Grand Rapids Herald.

MOTHER—TAKE NO CHANCES ON CROUP

Never put a croupy child to bed without having FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR right handy. It checks the sudden and terrifying onset of croup, relieves the strangling, choking conditions, eases difficult breathing and allows peaceful sleep. A friend writes: "I have long used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR for croup. First, I gave it to all my children, and now to my grandchildren, with the same good results." Reliable also for bronchial and "flu," coughs, tickling throat and troublesome night coughs.—Hite's Drug Store. adv.

LADIES VS. WOMEN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"A DULT classes for ladies and men," the bulletin announced, and I could not help asking myself the difference, if there is any, between a lady and a woman.

I recall reading, not long ago, a discussion between two servant girls as to the relative merits of their two mistresses, each of whom had her apparent virtues as well as her frailties.

"No matter how intoxicated my mistress may become," one of the maids affirmed, "she is always a lady." Great praise, indeed! All of which reminds me of the ancient gag concerning the gentleman at the reception who asked his host:

"Who is that lady standing by the door?"

"That's no lady," the host replied, "that's my wife."

A servant girl of one of our neighbors in commenting upon the qualities and characters of a recent guest upon whom she had waited, remarked:

"She's no lady."
 "Why?" was the query.
 "Well," was the reply, "she ain't got a lady's voice."

The old idea of a lady was one of exteriorly largely—of manners and dress and employment. A gentleman was supposed to have soft hands and fine clothes, and elegant leisure. In England, at least, he could never go into trade; he would have scorned being a plumber or a dry goods merchant, or a professional football player. His time was always his own.

A lady in similar fashion was a person—female of course—who sat prettily consistently in the drawing-room. She, too, did not soil her hands with work, she never wore cotton stockings, or went upon the streets without gloves, or carried a package home from the shop. It would not have been refined to do so. Her manners were always refined, and she never looked into the kitchen. She kept herself aloof from any contact or knowledge of the gross world and never heard or uttered an indelicate word.

Ladies were always women, but women were not always ladies. It is equally true today, excepting that the word "lady" today does not always have an appealing connotation. It suggests a high finish rather than substantial and durable construction. Ladies are well dressed, well mannered, and gentle souls, but it is women who manage their husbands, and run city politics, and conduct church bazaars. Women, not ladies, are the substantial, steady, brainy citizens who are competing with men in every profession and walk of life.

When it comes to the female engaging in business enterprises she is always referred to as a woman. And yet the term "lady" does still stand for certain social and temperamental graces. We can generally tell whether or not a woman is a lady by the way she treats her social inferiors. Some one has said that a lady treats her inferiors and her superiors as her equals and her equal as her superiors. You can generally tell whether or not a woman is a lady by what her servants have to say about her.

This is the time of year that the average man wonders who diagrammed the income tax report blanks.

A good definition of an ideal spring-time is to have warm weather come while we have a little coal.

Women who worry about the younger generation are usually those who forgot to worry about themselves.

QUIETS DISTURBING RACGIG COUGHS

Healing pine tar, pure honey, and other soothing, cough-healing ingredients, go into the making of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR. No opiates, justly feared by careful mothers, harmful, and without medical value. Read the bottle contents as given on the package and learn why FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR is the superior cough remedy, safe for children and grown persons, and reliable for coughs, colds, croup, tickling throat, nervous hacking and like irritations.—Hite's Drug Store. adv.

BREAK CHEST COLDS WITH RED PEPPER

Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints relief comes at once.

The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from a cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known. Always say "Rowles."

Ouch! Lumbago Pain! Rub Backache Away

Instant Relief with a small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

Kidneys cause Backache? No! They have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain. Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil." Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or lumbago pain.

Rub old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" whenever you have sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains, as it is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

The thing that strikes us as being funny is the way a man stays "too tired to walk" just as soon as he gets an automobile.

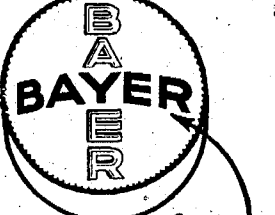

The old-fashioned hosiery advertisements seemed a trifle bold, but now they don't tell half the story.

Many a man is married now because he talks too much.
