Farm Crops Meetings

Series of Three to be Conducted in Charlevoix County.

Plans have been completed to conduct a series of three meetings in the County for assistance to farmers in their problems concerning their choice of crops to raise, the proper kind of crop rotations to use, and the future of the alfalfa and clover seed industry.

Mr. C. E. Skiver, Extension Specialist in Farm Crops, will be the speaker and is particularly fitted to discuss your crop problems with you.

The first meeting will be held at the Charlevoix Court House on April 5th, at 8:00 o'clock in the evening, slow time.

Second at East Jordan K. of P. Hall on April 6th, at 9:30 a. m. slow time.

Third meeting at Boyne Falls Town Hall on April 6th, at 1:30 p. m. slow time.

Many farmers are making a success with certified alfalfa and sweet clover seed, with seed potatoes, beans and cereal crops; let's hear how they do it and possibly your conditions are such that you can probably do likewise. Many are having difficulty in getting a good stand of alfalfa and clover. Many are in doubt as to what crops are best suited for this County and many other problems.

By all means plan to attend your nearest meeting. It will mean dollars and cents to you. Don't forget the dates and hear Mr. Skiver.

U. S. SAFETY BODY ADOPTS NEW CODE

Three Legislative Proposals Would Govern Issuance of Cards.

Washington.—A uniform traffic code for the guidance of motorists and pedestrians throughout the country was adopted at the concluding session of the second national conference on street and highway safety.

The suggested uniform vehicle code adopted is divided into three parts: A uniform vehicle registration and certificate of title act; a uniform motor vehicle operators' and chauffeurs' license act, and a uniform act regulating operation of vehicles on highways. They are designed as models for adoption by the several states.

The registration act provides for creation of a motor vehicle commissioner at the head of a separate department to enforce the provisions of the act. The department would keep records open to public inspection, post notices of stolen vehicles, revocations of license, etc.

Driving a car without the owner's consent or knowledge, even though without intent to steal, is made a misdemeanor. Receiving or transferring stolen vehicles is made a felony. Willful damage of a vehicle is a misdemeanor.

The operators' and chauffeurs' act provides that every person who operates a car must have a permit. Licenses cannot be issued to persons under sixteen years of age, to persons who have had licenses revoked before the expiration of one year, to habitual drunkards or drug addicts, to the feeble minded or epileptics, or to "any one suffering with such physical or mental disability or disease as will serve to prevent such person from exercising reasonable control over a motor vehicle."

The act regulating operation of vehicles sets the following speed limits: Approaching within fifty feet of a grade crossing, passing a school during hours, traversing a street intersection or rounding a curve where vision is obscured, fifteen miles an hour. Speed is restricted to fifteen miles an hour in business districts, and to thirty-five elsewhere.

Governor Winant of New Hampshire urged the 1,000 delegates to the conference, including representatives of forty-six governors, to take the initiative in placing the recommendations before the various states and municipalities.

Secretary Hoover, in a closing address, warned that if progress was to be made centralized government should be discouraged in favor of government "by stimulation of the local community to its responsibilities and the education of the local community to intelligent action." He declared the work of the conference, if universally adopted, undoubtedly would result in a diminution of traffic laws.

Supley LaLonde Passes Away

Supley LaLonde passed away at his home in South Arm township Saturday, March 27, following a lingering illness. He was born in Orchardville, County Gray, Canada, March 20th, 1855, his parents being Supley and Catherine LaLonde.

At the age of fifteen years his parents moved with their family to Charlevoix County and located near East Jordan. On December 17, 1876 he was united in marriage to Amelia Metz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Metz of South Arm township, and to this union were born four children, three of whom have grown to man and womanhood.

He devoted his time to the development of lumbering and agriculture activities of East Jordan; finally locating on a farm northwest of this place where Mrs. LaLonde passed away in 1888. Three years later he was united in marriage to Pauline Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Addis of South Arm township on January 30th, 1891.

After making a success of farming and feeling in need of a rest he sold the farm in 1918 and moved to East Jordan. After residing there a year he felt the call of the country and again moved on a farm west of East Jordan. Due to ill health, and later being confined to his bed for some time death found his plans unfinished.

Deceased is survived by his wife and three children, namely—Mrs. Frank Addis of East Jordan, Mrs. Bert Mullen and William J. LaLonde of Traverse City. Also by the following brothers and sisters:—Mrs. Angeline Dufore, Joseph and Gus LaLonde of Ellsworth, Dick LaLonde of Gallion, Ohio, Mrs. Mary McTavish of Petoskey and Andrew LaLonde of East Jordan. Also five grandchildren—J. Lawrence and James E. Addis of East Jordan, and Rose, Frances and Donna LaLonde of Traverse City.

Funeral services were held from St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of which he was a member, Tuesday, March 30th, at 9 a. m. conducted by Fr. D. M. Drinan. Interment at Catholic Cemetery.

Gooding Bill Loses 46-33 in Senate Vote

Washington.—The middle western commercial interests won a decisive victory when the Gooding long-haul-short haul bill went down to defeat in the senate.

The vote was 33 to 46. Those voting for the bill included 18 Republicans and 15 Democrats. Against the bill were 30 Republicans, 15 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Labor member.

By this action the senate declines to deprive the interstate commerce commission of discretionary power to authorize transcontinental railroads to make rates to the Pacific coast from the Middle West to enable them to meet competition of water lines operating through the Panama canal.

Effect of the legislation, if passed, would have been to make permanent the recent decision of the commission forbidding the transcontinental lines to reduce their rates from Chicago and the Middle West to Pacific coast points to meet boat competition.

Defeat of the bill leaves the commission free to permit departures from the long-and-short-haul provision of the law when it determines that evidence has been submitted that justifies such departure.

The main support for the Gooding bill came from the senators from the so-called intermountain states, the Republican and Democratic "radicals," and members from states in the lower Mississippi valley.

Women Demand Law Barring Santa Claus

Vanvouver, B. C.—The Vancouver city council and the Vancouver Retail Merchants' association were confronted with a resolution passed by the Vancouver Parent-Teacher association asking that impersonations of Santa Claus be discontinued. Disillusionment of children, when promises made by the jolly saint in department stores remain unfulfilled on Christmas day, was given as the reason.

American Stoned to Death

Mexico City.—Joe Hall, an American employed by the Mexican National railways, was "brutally stoned to death" by unidentified persons, the American embassy was notified by Vice Consul Ives at Mazatlan.

To Keep Theaters Closed

St. Petersburg, Fla.—A popular referendum here defeated efforts of Sunday amusement advocates to open theaters and other places of amusement on Sunday.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Owosso—Rep. William P. Strauch, of Vernon, has announced his candidacy for a fourth term in the state legislature. He says that if he is returned to the house, he will introduce a bill providing that all highway expense be borne by a gas tax and that automobile licenses be issued at a nominal cost for the life of the car.

Grand Rapids—Mandamus proceedings brought by Sheriff William L. Smith to compel County Clerk Edward L. Wagner to receive his petitions for a place on the ballot as a candidate for a third term will be argued before the State Supreme Court April 5 or 6, according to Peter A. Hartesvelt, assistant prosecuting attorney, who will represent the county clerk.

Escanaba—Protesting that the establishment of "blue laws" in the District of Columbia would "set up a bad precedent for the rest of the nation which will lead to religious bigotry and intolerance," citizens of Escanaba and Delta county have voiced their opposition to such legislation to congress through resolutions presented by Senator Ferris, Democrat, of Michigan.

Lansing—Improvements in many of the state parks were authorized by the State Administrative Board. A tentative budget of $129,000 was presented by the State Conservation Commission and accepted by the board. The board's authorization calls for the expenditure of $15,000 for improvements in the Muskegon

State Park; $15,000 at Grand Haven, $25,000 at St. Clair, and similar amounts at 18 other parks.

Petoskey—On recommendation of the Emmett County Bar Association, Circuit Judge Frank Shepherd has appointed Albert T. Washburn prosecuting attorney for Emmett County, effective April 1, succeeding Wade B. Smith, who recently resigned due to poor health. Washburn, tetter for two years at the First State Bank, was admitted to the bar in September, 1925, having been graduated from the Detroit College of Law in June, 1924.

Mt. Clemens—Frederick Dean, a student at the Dickinson school here, has been judged by Dr. R. W. Johnson, of Detroit, "the perfect example of a child with perfect teeth." The decision of the Detroit dentist was made at the dental clinic sponsored by the Professional and Business Woman's Club of this city. It was said at the clinic that if dentists could reach children of school age a great amount of suffering in later life could be prevented.

Menominee—Twenty-seven boys and girls, ranging in age from 14 to 21 years, most of them students of the Marinette (Wis.) Junior high school, have been arrested in connection with delinquencies under investigation by Marinette authorities. Other boys and girls, the investigators have learned, are involved in the "parties" in which liquor was indicated as a factor in the delinquencies. Many of the children and youths are from prominent families.

Society Finds New Thrills

Thrill seekers search for excitement even under the ocean's surface. Although divers in charge of salvage operations on the schooner Muriel, wrecked at Balboa Beach, Cal., recently, are having a hard time raising the derelict, they're doing a land-office business in thrills, purveyed to society girls at the fashionable watering place near Los Angeles. Here's Miss Nanette Butterworth getting ready for her first close-up of the submarine world.

Mrs. Delbert Turk Passes Away

Mrs. Delbert Turk passed away at her home in this city Monday afternoon March 29th, leaving an infant son born that morning.

Estella Clair Clifton was born at Fair Oaks, Indiana, June 16, 1895, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Clifton. She moved with her parents to Beaverton, Mich., in 1907.

On June 19th, 1913, she was united in marriage to Delbert Turk of Rapid City, at Beaver Creek. They made their home at Rapid City for several years, coming to East Jordan in 1918, where they have since resided.

Deceased is survived by the husband and the following children:—Martha, age 11 years; Violet 6 years; Donald 4 years; Delbert Jr. 2 years; and Harold the infant. Also by her father, Samuel Clifton of Elizabeth, Ark.; and the following brothers and sisters:—Harold Clifton of Pontiac, Mich.; Charles Clifton of Bryant, Ark.; Darold and Gladwin Clifton of Elizabeth, Ark.; Mrs. Violet Stephens of Elizabeth, Ark.; Mrs. Edna Thomas of Checotah, Okla.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God Chapel Thursday afternoon. Interment at Sunset Hill.

Port Huron—Thirty-one miles of new road for St. Clair county is on the building program for 1926. Nine miles of this new construction work will be concrete to be laid by the State and will include two miles on M-27 from Bunce Creek to Huron boulevard in Marysville, three miles from the southern city limits of St. Clair to Recor's Point, another mile extending from the north city limits of Marine City to the gravel gap and three miles from Pearl Beach to Perch Point.

Lansing—Despite numerous rebuffs received in the past on like applications, railroads in Michigan continue to file applications and hold hearings before the Michigan Public Utilities Commission for discontinuance of station agent service at many of the small towns in the state. Lack of adequate revenue is given as the reason for such applications, the plan of the railroads being to demand pre-payments on all freight shipped to such towns and have passengers pay on the trains.

Sault Ste. Marie—The first step for the opening of the navigation season on St. Marys river was taken recently when workmen at the locks began preparing the Sabin lock for filling. Putting the lock into operation this early is for the purpose of testing the emergency dam above the lock. The ice is thick above and below the locks and shows no signs of breaking. Walking is still the favorite method of communication between the Soos and a team of horses occasionally crosses the channel.

Ferndale—Planning a uniform lighting system from Ferndale to Pontiac, Village Manager Carl E. Peterson, President Robert E. Lewis and Commissioner Ray W. Donahue, of Ferndale, will go to Cleveland to select a suitable type of lighting post for wider Woodward avenue. L. V. Belknap, Oakland county engineer, will accompany the three to verify the selection so the same design will be adopted for the highway. The commission recently sold a $50,000 bond issue to Joel Stockard & Co., of Detroit.

Awarded 2nd Place in State Calf Club Work

Charlevoix County is justly proud of the accomplishments of Rex Supernaw, member of the Boy's and Girl's Calf Club of 1925. The splendid work completed by this boy has added to the achievements of this County, as well as Northern Michigan.

For the first time, Club Championships have been awarded to Northern Counties, as Antrim has the Potato Club Champion, Charlevoix second place in Calf Club work, and Antrim Third in Canning Club work and this should be an incentive for an increase in Club Work this year.

Rex owns a Jersey Calf, won first prize at the County Fair in his breed. Grand Champion over all calves and completed his project, as a result was selected as Charlevoix County Champion.

Come on boys, who will win this honor this year.

Test Seed Corn

The Agricultural Department of the East Jordan High School finds that most of the samples submitted for testing prove poor in germination. The average of all samples so far tested is about 85 per cent.

If you wish, the school will test small samples for you and mail you a report. We can not at present advise where good seed corn can be obtained, but will help you find what you want if you care to have us.

By the way, Lester Danforth, son of Earl Danforth, has some project grown oats, grown from pedigreed Wolverine seed last year which will make good seed. They weigh up heavy and won second place at the annual exhibit held at the Michigan State College this winter.

Methodists Beat Out Masons for Third Place

(Received last week too late for publication.)

In the final game of the Indoor schedule, the Methodists took the Masons into camp, thereby winning third place for the season. Everyone on the Methodist team seemed to have their bating eye and had no trouble in hitting the ball. Sedgman pitched good ball for the Masons but the breaks of the game went against him.

In the second game of the evening, the re-organized K. P. team played the Masons and won out after a hot contested game. The score might have been different if the Masons had not played a game just previous to this one. Sedgman was just about all in when he started in the box for the Masons but held out until the fifth when Sailer went in and finished the game for the Masons.

Mrs. Joe Anderson will leave Saturday for Detroit with her little grand-daughter. She expects to visit in Detroit a week or ten days.

BENNETT SCHOOL NEWS

(Delayed)

The seventh graders had a test no "Princeton" Monday morning.

Anna Derenzky who has been sick with a bad cold, is able to come to school again.

The Bennett school girls have organized a Club. The name is The Blue Bird Club. Our aim is to promote health and happiness. Lottie Kidder is our president; Fern Gardiner, vice-president; Opal Bolser secretary. We meet every Friday night. Miss Martha Wagbo meets with us and is helping us learn to sew. We are making each of us a slip.

Allice Wilson is in school again after being absent on account of the illness of her baby brother.

Some of the members of our girls' club, accompanied by Misses Wagbo and Cady went on a hike Sunday afternoon. We went through the swamp road. Finding a dry pine stump we built a fire, cooked bacon and made sandwiches. We hope to go on another such trip when the roads are good.

Ann Arbor—John P. Rowe, who completed his course at the University of Michigan last month, will have his degree withheld for one year as the result of action taken by the university committee on discipline. Rowe, it was charged, was guilty of disorderly conduct on board a Michigan Central train bound from Detroit to Ann Arbor.

Detroit—A bill authorizing the erection of a veteran's bureau hospital at or near Detroit at an estimated cost of $1,250,000 has been introduced in the house by Representative John B. Sosnowski. The proposed hospital will be a modern structure and will be used to provide additional hospital and out-patient dispensary facilities for persons entitled to hospitalization under the World war veterans act of 1924.

Monroe—The pageant of historic Monroe will be represented on the bank of Plum Creek in which territory part of the Battle of the River Raisin was waged in 1813 in which hundreds of American soldiers were scalped by the Indians. The site is a mile south of Monroe city and the use of it has been donated by Benjamin Breening, the owner. The pageant will be given on the evenings of June 23 and 24.

Monroe—Seven slot machines of the 5 and 25 cent variety were seized in Erie township by Lieutenant Orva Jackson and Troopers Leslie Maycock, Lawrence Dan and Atwood Pearl. The machines were located in garages, a restaurant and oil stations. Machine were taken to the barracks at South Rockwood where they will be destroyed and the money turned over to the general fund of the state.

Ionla—Ionia free fair fans will be treated to exceptional pyrotechnics this year, according to Fred A. Chapman, secretary, who has changed the program from the one announced a few months ago. He has engaged the first showing in Michigan of "1776," held to be one of the best patriotic spectacles ever produced. It has been the policy in the past to take the production shown at the state fair the year following.

Owosso—Fred Kingsland, 23 years old, formerly a student at the Central Michigan Normal School, at Mt. Pleasant, may not live to realize his greatest ambition—to win a college degree—when achievement of that ambition seemed certain. Kingsland was forced to leave school last spring to earn money to pay for further schooling. A short time ago he fell while trimming an apple tree and his back was broken. Physicians say his condition is serious.

Ypsilanti—David Greer, 35 years old, of Jackson, fireman on a Michigan Central freight train is in Beyer hospital with injuries received when he jumped from the train. The train was derailed at Geddes between here and Ann Arbor when it struck a section gang's motor car which they failed to place on the siding. An east bound freight also crossing at the same time was hurled from the tracks and over 30 cars were burning at one time.

East Lansing—J. R. McColl, of Detroit, chairman of the building committee of the State Board of Agriculture, submitted the general plans for the new $600,000 chemistry building which will be constructed at Michigan State College to the board at its last monthly meeting. The sketches were approved and sent back to the architects, in order that the detailed plans might be made. The new building was authorized by the State Legislature at the last regular session.

Ypsilanti—One hundred and two students are expected to graduate from the State Normal College here at the close of the winter term March 25, according to a preliminary list prepared by C. P. Steimle, registrar of the college. Of these six will be granted Bachelor of Arts degrees, six Bachelor of Science, 84 life certificates to teach and four limited certificates, while two will graduate from the conservatory of music. Last year at this time 125 students completed their courses at the college.

Port Huron—Three damage suits against Rudolph Wurlitzer, Cincinnati musical instrument manufacturer, were settled out of court recently for $2,500. Last summer members of the Wurlitzer family were driving to the Wurlitzer summer home near Harbor Beach when their car collided with a truck operated by Mivert Symon. Edward Symon, a nephew, was riding with Mivert Symon. Both were injured. Damage suits were brought by the two Symons and Edward's father for $25,000 each.

COOLIDGE'S FATHER IS LAID TO REST

Simple Rites for President's Parent; Interred in Family Cemetery.

Plymouth, Vt.—The funeral of Col. John Calvin Coolidge, sturdy Vermont pioneer, was held from the home in which he had lived for so many years and in which, three years ago, he had sworn his distinguished son as President of the United States.

In keeping with the wishes of the colonel, so often expressed, and also in keeping with the wishes of President Coolidge, the services were simple. Immediately after the funeral the President returned to Washington.

Rev. John White, the Episcopal minister who conducts services at the church across the road from the colonel's house, officiated. Everything except the precise time for the rites had been dictated by the colonel himself several weeks before he died.

There were no hymns at the funeral. The President insisted upon this. There were no hymns for his mother when she was buried, he recalled, and he wanted none for his father. There were no church services. The simple rites were inside the old home, after which the body of Colonel Coolidge was taken up to the little cemetery on the hill a quarter of a mile away.

The colonel died while his son Calvin was speeding by special train to his bedside from the White House in the vain hope of clasping his father's hand in farewell. The President was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, their son John, and party.

At the deathbed were Doctor Gram, Mrs. May Johnson, the nurse; the colonel's housekeeper, Miss Pierce, and Deputy Sheriff Angus Macaulay. All these had been his faithful attendants during his illness.

Both houses of congress, government officials and foreign diplomats paid tribute to the memory of the President's father. From all parts of the country came thousands of messages of sympathy to President and Mrs. Coolidge.

The senate adopted a resolution of condolence on the motion of Senator Dale (Rep., Vt.), and adjourned without transacting any business. The house adopted a resolution offered by Representative Garret (Dem., Tenn.), the minority leader.

Three weeks before his death Colonel Coolidge transferred to his son, Calvin, the farm on which members of the Coolidge family have lived for generations. The farm consists of 225 acres with the white farmhouse which was the President's boyhood home.

The colonel died ostensibly penniless, although a man of substance. Neighbors say that all property other than the land was made over to the President during his lifetime. Plymouth never knew the value of the Calvin G. Coolidge estate, and the same secrecy was maintained in the case of the colonel's property.

In addition to the homestead, the President owns the lime kiln lot which is the Coolidge sugar orchard. This tract he inherited from his grandfather.

Carcinoma, a form of cancer, was given as the cause of Colonel Coolidge's death. It affected the region of the bladder, his physician said, with myocarditis, an inflammation of the heart muscles, a contributing factor.

NOTHING IN THE SHOW WINDOW

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE little shops in Florence and Naples and Venice have always had an attraction to me. There is an alluring fascination in the window displays which one sees as he walks along the streets—a fascination which it is almost impossible to resist. There is a disillusionment often, however, when one enters the shop. The stock is all in the window, one finds; there is no reserve, no variety from which to choose. The goods in the window have been beautifully displayed, but that's all there are; if you want to buy anything it must be taken from the window; if you want to look the stock over, you'll have to go out and look in. It's very disappointing. People are often like that; they carry all their stock in trade in the show window; they have nothing in reserve. They make a good first impression, but when you look into their characters there is nothing to back it up.

The man who puts nothing in his show window is as negligent and foolish as the one who puts it all there. He may have a good stock of goods, but he makes no display to the passing public.

Raymond runs such a store. He has really the best stock of goods in town, but as you go by his shop window you see nothing to indicate that fact. There is no taste shown in the arrangement of the window, no attempt to put the best foot forward. The window looks untidy and unattractive; the articles displayed are jumbled together and heterogeneous. A stranger would always walk by the store.

If he should happen to drop in by mistake, however, he would find that Raymond had beautiful things for sale, well selected and of great variety. He simply doesn't know how to show them off to good advantage.

Milliken is by far the best trained lawyer in town. He has a keen analytical mind and an almost unerring judgment. His knowledge of the law and his skill in handling it are unusual. He is a very shy man, however, who generally keeps in the background. When he walks into a public gathering, he takes a back seat; if conversation or argument is under way he is more than likely to listen and let the other man do the talking. Though he may know more about the subject under discussion than all the group put together, it is only when he is asked that he shows his stock in trade.

He is himself not an attractive figure. He is careless in his dress, he is slovenly in appearance, and his office is unattractive and not kept in such a way as to make a good impression upon those who come into it.

Here is a man who has the best stock of legal goods in town, but who ignores the advantages of the show window. He does not know how attractively to display his goods and so he has little trade. Only the chance customer who drops in inadvertently does business with him. What he needs is a window decorator.

117,135,817 TO BE POPULATION JULY 1

Figures Will Show Increase of 11,426,197 Since Enumeration in 1920.

Washington.—The population of continental United States will be 117,135,817 next July 1, the census bureau has estimated, the figure being an increase of 11,426,197 since the last federal enumeration in 1920.

Since last July the bureau recorded a gain of 1,757,723. The estimate was based on actual census counts in eight states last year, and on data concerning births, deaths, immigration and emigration since 1920.

Using as a scale the distribution of population increase between 1910 and 1920, the bureau has estimated the population of each state, substituting state census figures where state counts were made last year and omitting calculations for states which recorded decreases between 1910 and 1920.

States which counted population last year were Florida, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, New York, North Dakota, Rhode Island and South Dakota.

The bureau has not yet tabulated the population of the large cities, but will do so later, using the system of arithmetical progression which has been found the simplest and, in the majority of cases, most accurate formula.

Population estimates and actual counts by states, showing New York and Pennsylvania retaining their rank of first and second, respectively, follow:

Alabama, 2,526,001; Arizona, 444,708; Arkansas, 1,903,048; California, 3,316,450; Colorado, 1,058,722; Connecticut, 1,600,491; Delaware, 240,274; District of Columbia, 527,890; Florida, 1,317,160; Georgia, 3,138,982; Idaho, 522,175; Illinois, 7,202,983; Indiana, 3,124,490; Iowa, 2,422,015; Kansas, 1,820,890; Kentucky, 2,524,210; Louisiana, 1,198,591; Maine, 790,053; Maryland, 1,580,208; Massachusetts, 4,197,288; Michigan, 4,395,651; Minnesota, 2,651,806; Mississippi, 1,790,618 (1920 population); Missouri, 3,498,143; Montana, 694,965; Nebraska, 1,384,703; Nevada, 77,407 (1920 population); New Hampshire, 453,008; New Jersey, 3,680,482; New Mexico, 388,140; New York, 11,303,296; North Carolina, 2,857,340; North Dakota, 641,102 (1920 population); Ohio, 6,000,140; Oklahoma, 2,342,474; Oregon, 877,477; Pennsylvania, 9,613,570; Rhode Island, 692,794; South Carolina, 1,826,021; South Dakota, 659,346; Tennessee, 2,467,679; Texas, 5,312,001; Utah, 513,711; Vermont, 352,428 (1920 population); Virginia, 2,518,589; Washington, 1,538,228; West Virginia, 1,669,324; Wisconsin, 2,884,734; Wyoming, 235,689.

Sunday Baseball Now Legal in Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky.—Sunday baseball, both semiprofessional and professional, now has legal approval in Kentucky.

The state legislature on its last day before adjournment passed over Governor Fields' veto the Strange-Hamilton law repealing a portion of Kentucky's blue law statute which prohibited playing of baseball and participation in other sports on Sunday.

Governor Fields returned the measure to the legislature with his veto message and it was passed over his veto in the senate and sent to the house, where, after lacking by two the necessary constitutional majority, it was called up again and passed with two more votes than the constitution requires to override the veto of the chief executive.

Police Chief Faints Trying Tear Bullets

Chicago.—Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker fainted while testing a tear bullet, the invention of a Cleveland chemist. Upon recovery, the chief was so impressed with the efficiency of the invention that he recommended the purchase of 500 bullets for his men.

The tear bullets cost 50 cents each and are as effective as tear bombs, which cost $7 apiece, it was said. They are fired from police revolvers and fumes from the bullets cause the temporary stupefaction of all those within a radius of 15 feet.

When Chief Schoemaker fired one of the bullets in a room at the detective bureau, he and Sergt. Joseph E. Hogan were temporarily knocked out.

Paroled Convict Robs 60 Homes in St. Louis

St. Louis.—James Beauvais, thirty-five, confessed to police he had committed sixty residence burglaries here since last November 30, the day he was released from Joliet (Ill.) prison, where he served a part of an indeterminate sentence following conviction at Peoria, Ill., on a burglary charge.

Mexico City.—The American consul at Mazatlan has notified the embassy here that Rex Mellpoune was killed and E. Heldenkamp seriously wounded by bandits near Ixtlan, in the state of Nayarit.

Rear Admiral Betty Dead

Charleston, S. C.—Rear Admiral Frank Edmund Betty, retired, died here after an attack of influenza. He was born in Aztalan, Wis., in 1853 and was retired in 1915.

Considered by many to be the most beautiful society girl in the national capital, Miss Betty Byrne, daughter of Mrs. Stanton Peele, wife of Justice Peele, is planning to forsake afternoon teas and bridge parties to seek a career in the movies, according to a recent announcement. Miss Byrne, a leader in the younger set of Washington, was chosen by President Coolidge as a typical beauty to represent the national capital at a convention in Texas a few years ago.

CHAPTER X

The Treasure Ship

There was no hint of triumph in my great-uncle's manner as the sloop came about and lay to under our lee quarter; nor did he exhibit excitement when she unloosed the small boat she towed astern and a half-dozen swarthy fellows commenced to pull it toward us. He indulged in a pinch of snuff and took his station by the starboard rail at the break of the poop. Peter and I followed him. Besides us there was only Martin, who stood aft by the man at the wheel.

The rowboat was as infinitesimal as an insect in those tossing wastes; but the man at the steering-oar guided it with uncanny skill, up the toppling crests that threatened to crush it, down the dizzy steep that bade fair to hurl it to the ocean's oozy bottom, and brought it to rest a scant fifty feet from the James' hull, his long sweep fending and twisting to maintain the position. He was very dark and lean, with bare, corded limbs and a sneaky trunk covered by the remnants of a cotton shirt and trousers. His hair was a stringy black. His voice, when he spoke in answer to a sign from my great-uncle, was harshly rhythmic, but what he said I could not understand, for both he and Murray used Spanish.

My great-uncle asked two questions, both brief, and he answered as briefly. My great-uncle waved his hand again; he dug his steering-oar into the crest of one of the monstrous surges, and the little boat shot away like a round-shot from a gun. A few moments later we saw them make fast to the sloop and leap aboard, one by one. The sloop, hauled her wind and beat off to westward in long, slanting tacks, and the James was once more alone in the western mouth of the Mona passage, Hispaniola a blur in the north and Porto Rico somewhere out of sight southeast of us.

Murray dusted a second pinch of snuff into his nostrils as he turned from the rail.

"Our three weeks' waiting hath not been in vain," he said. "The Santissima Trinidad was to sail from Porto Bello within the forty-eight hours after Diego put forth. She will be up with us in another five days. The fools have delivered her into our hands. By her sailing orders, so Diego told me, she must hug the south shore of Hispaniola, that she may be within easy run of Santa Domingo in case of accident. As for the night, she'll be lighted up like Bagdad's towers."

"Ja, it's all right if dot Englishman we sighted last week don't find a frigate," said Peter.

Murray's face fell a tittle.

"Yes, we have always that to reckon with," he acknowledged. "Stay me, I see not what the fellow could have suspected to send him hitting from us."

"If he suspected us, why not some of the other craft that have passed us on our beat?" I interjected. "There ha' been plenty."

My great-uncle pointed to the white ensign floating from the misen-track.

"They were all Spaniards or Frenchmen," he answered. "They took us for a king's ship. No, there's little chance of interference. If there is—" his jaw squared—"I'll hunt the Santissima Trinidad into Cadiz port."

Nothing happened that day or the next. And so three more days passed with increasing tension. The look-outs in the cross-trees were relieved every two hours, that the men's vision might be fresh and unstrained. The sixth day was like its predecessors, blazing hot, bubbling the pitch out of the deck-seams, a gentle southeast breeze barely sufficient to keep the sails drawing. Daylight found us farther to the south than we usually plied, since Murray feared the Spaniard might have missed his reckoning and shifted the designed course he was to follow.

Noon observation saw us returned to our customary station, and to guard against the possibility that the Santissima Trinidad had passed us in the heat haze whilst we were beating up from the south my great-uncle ran down the wind into the mouth of the passage for several glasses. We encountered a fishing-perlagna then, and the Indians of its crew shouted back to Murray's question that no great ship had entered the passage that day. So back again we beat to windward the whole weary afternoon.

In the shadowy hour that precedes the dawn the hall came from the mast-head—

"Lights ho!"

"How do you make them?" Murray trumpeted.

"Red and yellow, over and under," answered the main cross-trees.

"Very good," replied my great-uncle.

"Master Martin, pipe all hands to breakfast, and serve an extra ration of rum."

"Aye, aye, sir," sighed Martin.

"And here's to luck, — my eyes!"

The dawn came all at once, as if a magician had waved his wand. The red disk of the sun lifted over the horizon. And it was day. Westward, perhaps half a league, a great ship was wallowing toward us before the freshening wind. The coloring of her figurehead sparkled in the level rays which touched her dmy canvas and turned the sails to cloth-of-gold. The gaudy banner of Spain flapped with a splendid insolence in the pure light.

"She is heavy-laden!" exclaimed my great-uncle, staring at her through his prospect-glass.

"Heavy-armed, too," I added, pointing at the band of cannon along her sides.

"We'll make light of that," he answered. "But I shall have to pay somewhat for my Quixotic promise to you, Robert, to spare her crew. Ho, Coupeau, pass the word that the prize must not be pierced betwixt wind and water. I would bring down a spar or two at the beginning of the action, but concentrate your fire upon her decks."

"Oul, m'sieu!"

"But what of O'Donnell and his daughter?" I exclaimed. "On a shot-swept deck!"

"Tut, tut, my boy! You concern yourself needlessly. 'Tis a risky business and cannot be otherwise. What part do you and Peter purpose to play in the action?"

I was about to answer hotly that we would have naught to do with pravity when Peter said—

"Maybe we better go aboardt der Spaniard and catch der little gal, ja."

"An excellent idea," returned my great-uncle, looking expectantly at me. "I shall lead the boarders myself, and in the confusion I may be hard put to it, single-handed, to direct the fighting and save the O'Donnells from injury. If you two—"

"We'll do it," I said ungraciously. Then I nodded to the white ensign at the main peak.

"Will you fight under false colors?"

"They are not false," he retorted with tightened lips. "We fight for England today."

"England and Flint and Long John Silver and Bill Bones and Martin and Coupeau and—"

"Myself? Perhaps. But if those you have named share in the rewards of victory 'tis that England may profit thereby and the Good Cause triumph. What doth it matter, if King James return to London?"

"What indeed?" I echoed sarcastically, yet impressed against my will by his deadly earnestness.

A white puff of smoke jetted from our fo'c'sle, and a crackling explosion smote our ears. Coupeau had fired the first shot from one of the chase guns, long eighteen, beautiful bronze pieces of prodigious range. Involuntarily we all focused our eyes upon the treasure ship, and a cheer from the gun-crews applauded the flapping rent that showed in the bulge of the Spaniard's foretop.

"Excellent!" murmured my great-uncle.

The Santissima Trinidad staggered for an instant like a man who has been struck unexpectedly by one he supposed to be a friend. Then she yawned to give us a full view of her colors; and as she yawned, broadening the target, Coupeau fired again. 'Twas a low shot, fired as the James dropped into the trough betwixt two waves, and all we could see of it was that apparently it plowed into the waist.

The Spaniard fired a gun to leeward and put over his helm, aiming to cross our bows and head up for Santo Domingo. Plainly he did not know what to make of the incident. To all appearances the Royal James was a king's ship. She showed the English naval ensign. So he evidently decided that hostilities must have broken out between the two countries, and in obedience to his sailing orders endeavored to avoid a fight and make for the nearest fortified Spanish port.

But the James sailed two feet to the treasure ship's one; and splendidly handled, we overhauled her within a glass of the first shot. In the meantime Coupeau kept pecking away at her, and as we came within range of our main battery her foretop-mast crashed, covering her fo'c'sle with a tangle of top-hammer.

This was too much for her people, and she put up her helm, brought her entire battery to bear and let fly at us with all her starboard metal. 'Twas a poorly managed salvo, yet three or four round-shot swished across our decks, and an eighteen-pounder smashed a couple of men to jelly just forward of the poop.

Coupeau, working like a madman with his chase guns, was firing both together, laid on the same target, and now he succeeded in cutting down the foremast about twenty feet from the deck, sending the heavy spar and billowing canvas a-tumbling after the fallen topmast. The bulk of the wreckage fell overboard, dragging the Santissima Trinidad down by the head and forming a sea-anchor to hold her stationary.

My great-uncle smiled with grim satisfaction.

"Ho, Saunders!" he hailed the second mate, who was stationed amidships. "Rig grappling-irons on the larboard bulwarks. We'll round the Spaniard as he lies. Let go your broadside, Coupeau!"

The gunner ran to the open main-batch and bellowed the order down to the gun-deck. The planks seemed to spring under our feet. A thunderous series of detonations shook the James' whole fabric. The smoke-clouds were first driven away, then thickened to an impalpable mist, and the acrid stench of salt-peter and brimstone was choking in the nostrils. I had a wavery glimpse of a vast gilded figurehead, a heap of torn canvas and rigging.

We headed up into the wind with much creaking of yards and slatting of sails, and I heard faintly a clamor of wailing outcries from the smoke-bank that masked the Santissima Trinidad. Almost at once our broadside roared again, the red flames from the gun-muzzles licking out like hungry tongues.

The Spaniard blindly returned our fire as the James felt her way toward him, the thunder of the two broadsides overpowering, numbing like the roaring of two beasts fighting in the night. I felt my great-uncle's hand on my arm; his voice was low, but distinct.

"We shall soon be broadside on with her," he said. "The O'Donnells will be on the poop. You had best get forward, Robert. If we board from about the foremast 'twill place you strategically to seize upon them. You and Peter had best carry arms. I fear the Spaniards will not seek to differentiate betwixt you and my wicked self."

"Ja," assented Peter. "We go." Amidships we encountered Saunders and a horde of men pouring up from the gun-deck to augment the boarding parties. Peter and I tarried to select weapons from a rack by the mainmast. He took a boarding-pike, and I contented myself with a cutlass.

Murray, having inspected the grappling and ascertained that hooks had been rigged from our yard-arms to clutch the Spaniard's rigging, rejoined us. He was dressed with his usual exquisite taste in watered gray silk, with white silk stockings and gray shoes with jeweled buckles. He wore no hat; and his white hair was clubbed and cued. The only weapon carried was a dress-sword, which he held unbeathed.

"An end to our immediate worries soon, Robert," he announced cheerfully. "The action has gone perfectly. I would not have varied a move so far. We have not lost a dozen men.

A final blast from our guns tore the smoke-clouds to shreds, and a vagrant wind-puff snatched them aside. 'Twas like the drawing of a curtain at a play. The treasure ship lurched helplessly not twenty fathoms distant, her rigging in tatters, her spars split and wounded, her fo'c'sle and foredeck one red litter, her bulwarks splintered, gunports blown in, guns dismounted.

The two ships joined together, and in response to wind and helm the Royal James swung broadside on against the Spaniard, our bowsprit becoming entangled in her mizzen rigging. A dozen grappling-irons clattered in air and ground their hooks into her bulwarks. There was a brisk popping of small-arms, an exchange of threats and shouts of defiance.

My great-uncle, regardless of the firing, mounted the breach of a cannon which elevated him above the bulwarks, and Peter and I climbed into the fore-rigging, whence we had a fair view of both decks. The larboard bulwarks of the Royal James were crowded with men. Stripped to the waist, their lowering faces smuttled with powder-stains, their hairy chests barred with tattooing, their backs more often than not scarred by the cruel welts of the lash, they tussled for first place and clung with their bare toes wherever there was a bit of running gear or an inch of space, gripping cutlasses in their teeth to leave hands free for pistol-work or to steady themselves as they waited an opportunity to leap the narrowing gap between the vessels.

My eyes strayed to the Spaniard's decks. Little knots of men ran about confusedly. A stolid-looking fellow aimed a pistol at me and a ratline over my head fell apart. Officers were driving the sailors forward to meet us. A man in a laced coat and perwig was shouting orders from the poop, and my pulse quickened, for at his shoulder was the lantern-jawed face of Colonel O'Donnell—aye, and in the rear of both a skirt fluttered in the midst of a huddle of raven-black figures, priests and nuns.

"Jump!" squeaked Peter in my ear. We jumped together, but my great-uncle was ahead of us. He leaped all of ten feet, sword in hand, alighted on the Spaniard's bulwarks, poised himself a moment and dropped into the center of a ring of foes. Before he had recovered his balance he had parried the slash of a cutlass and pinked an antagonist in the throat. And he beat down a leveled pistol as I gained the treasure ship's deck, inclined his head to avoid a murderous blow, ran the man through and almost in the same breath stepped a pace to the right to engage a fourth opponent—and all this with the cool precision of a fencing-master, unharmed, a flush of obvious enjoyment on his pallid cheeks.

But I saw no more. My task was to fight my way aft and protect the O'Donnells' and Peter and I turned our backs upon the struggle amidships. One wave of the pirates stormed in Murray's wake; the rest followed Peter and me. They were as brave as they were vicious, and we made rapid progress and were nearly at the foot of the poop-ladder when Murray's whistle shrilled behind us. I realized, too, that both O'Donnell and the officer in the laced coat were shouting volubly, the one in English and the other in Spanish, trying to make themselves heard above the din.

"asks parley," came in broken phrases from O'Donnell. "cannot understand—regrettable mistake—" "Der Spaniard wants quarter," grunted Peter.

Indeed, those of the Santissima Trinidad's men who had been resisting us promptly fung down their arms, glad of the excuse to quit the fight; but the wolves of the James' crew were not schooled to show mercy, and they killed three poor fellows before Peter and I could knock up their cutlasses.

Murray's whistle blew a second time. There was a sudden hush, punctuated by the grinding of the two vessels, the thudding of unshod feet as more of the James' pirates dropped aboard the treasure ship, the gagging cries of the wounded, the nasal sing-song of a priest pattering Latin prayers.

I seized the opportunity to look around. We were too close under the poop to see what went on beyond the rail directly overhead; but the main-deck, fore and aft, was a pitiful spectacle—cluttered with wreckage and dead men and bits of men and women wounded in every conceivable fashion, its yellow-sand carpet gemmed with carmine pools and rivulets.

My great-uncle, as immaculate as when he had ascended the James' bulwarks, stood a little ahead of the mass of his followers, his serene face and rich clothing in startling contrast with their nakedness and frank brutality. A trickle of blood dripped from the point of his slender sword. His attitude was that of an honorable man who wishes to be reasonable in a difficult situation.

"I believe I heard an appeal for quarter," he said quietly.

"Sir, you did," replied O'Donnell. "I have spoken for the gentleman beside me, Senor Don Ascanio de Hurtado y Custa, who is captain of this vessel."

"I am honored, sir," returned my great-uncle. "And yourself?"

O'Donnell did not altogether relish the playing of his part. He bit his lip and hesitated an instant before he answered.

"I am Colonel O'Donnell, an officer in the service of his Most Catholic Majesty."

"Ah; and what can I do for you, gentlemen?" inquired my great-uncle. O'Donnell hesitated again and conferred with the Spanish officer.

"Sir," he said then, "Don Ascanio asks you by me: Since when have your country and Spain been at war?"

"To the best of my knowledge, they are not at this present," my great-uncle answered blandly.

"Then to what cause must we attribute this—this—unwarrantable attack?" demanded O'Donnell.

"I am afraid," replied my great-uncle almost with sorrow, "that I am unable to satisfy your curiosity upon that point."

The Spaniard burst into a declaration of passionate intensity, which Murray interrupted.

"I am so fortunate as to comprehend the noble Spanish tongue," he said. "Would you be so kind, Colonel O'Donnell, as to acquaint your friend with the fact, and to assure him that I regret he must accept the situation as it stands? I am desirous of sparing the lives of those of his people who survive, but at a pinch I will slay them all to compass my intention."

"And what is that?" asked O'Donnell.

"To relieve Don Ascanio of the consignment of treasure he carries," answered my great-uncle. "When it is aboard my ship, he shall be at liberty to continue his voyage."

O'Donnell proceeded haltingly to translate this statement. He never finished it. The Spaniard launched a fresh torrent of curses, broke his sword across his knee and tossed the pieces overboard. My great-uncle nodded sympathetically.

"'Tis an unpleasant plight, I know," he said. "Had Don Ascanio not discarded his sword I should have been delighted to yield him an opportunity for such satisfaction as one gentleman may give another."

"However—I must stipulate further, Colonel O'Donnell, that the crew of the Santissima Trinidad shall be placed in confinement for so long as suits my purpose. Any resistance must cause additional bloodshed, which, I am sure, you will agree is unnecessary."

"Don Ascanio will say no more," returned O'Donnell. "He washes his hands of the whole proceeding. Abandoned by his crew—"

"Enough," interrupted my great-uncle.

He rattled off a sentence in Spanish, and there was an answering rattle of arms thrown on the deck. He spoke again, and the Santissima Trinidad's men all shifted to starboard and marched into the fo'c'sle, herded by a bristle of pirate cutlasses.

Charm of Needlecraft in Simple Tub Frocks

All the signposts of fashion point in the direction of tub frocks for summer, made of various washable materials and for many different uses. Since freshness is a perennial charm in summer clothes, the designers of sports and afternoon frocks have centered attention on materials that can be laundered. The new rayon fabrics are in demand for sports dresses, but voile and other sheer fabrics maintain their popularity for afternoon wear. They are usually made in soft pastel colors and adorned with needlework which gives them a touch of elegance.

Back Lame and Achy?

The Advice of This East Jordan Resident Should Help You to Get Well.

Do you suffer nagging backache? Feel dizzy, nervous and depressed? Are the kidney secretions irregular; breaking your rest? Likely your kidneys are at fault. Weak kidneys give warning. You have backache; rheumatic twinges. You feel weak, tired, all worn out. Heed the warning. Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Here is an East Jordan case. Fred Nelson, prop. shoe repair shop, Bridge St., says: "I had attacks of kidney trouble that had me feeling mighty miserable. My back was lame and sore and when I stooped sharp twinges darted across my kidneys. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. After using Doan's Pills the trouble was driven away." Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mr. Nelson had. Foster-McMillan Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

PROPOSES NATIONAL PROHIBITION POLL

Senator Edge Demands Referendum on Issue in November, 1928.

Washington.—Prohibition is to be given a public airing before a senate committee the two weeks beginning April 5. This was determined by the senate judiciary committee, which approved with only a single dissenting vote the program recommended by its subcommittee of five for hearings on pending measures for modification. The first week will be reserved for presentation of arguments from wet forces; the second week is set aside for the dries.

Washington.—The house unofficial committee for modification of the Volstead act will give the senate judiciary committee first whack at testimony on prohibition and will defer its own hearing set for this week. The committee will co-operate fully with the senate official body and, in addition, has appointed a spokesman to present its views and those of the modification senators to the committee, which will begin its sessions on April 5.

Washington.—A practicable plan to give the American people their first opportunity to express themselves on national prohibition at the polls in the general elections of November, 1928, was proposed in the senate by Senator Walter Edge of New Jersey, leader of the wet forces in congress.

A joint resolution, sponsored by Edge, which would require approval of the senate and house and signature of the President, outlined in detail the method for holding a national referendum on modification of the prohibition law.

Since the vote would be taken in connection with the Presidential and congressional elections, it is held it would bring out the maximum number of voters and furnish an unquestioned expression of public sentiment.

Expressing belief the dries will not be able to cite any acceptable reason why such a referendum should not be held, the wets propose to hammer away until they get action on the resolution, although it is doubtful if it can be had at the present session.

This was manifest from the reaction of the dries, led by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league. He promptly turned thumbs down on the proposal.

The resolution specifically provides that the referendum is to be held "in order that congress may obtain information necessary for the appropriate exercise of its legislative powers under the eighteenth amendment," and submits this question to the people:

"Shall the congress amend the national prohibition act so as to allow the manufacture, sale, transportation and possession of beverages containing as great an amount of alcohol as is lawful under the Constitution, provided that such amendments shall not interfere with the constitutional powers of the several states to legislate with respect to intoxicating liquors as each state may deem proper?"

The resolution was referred to the senate's judiciary committee.

President Coolidge Will Require All Details.

Washington.—Prior to taking a definite stand with respect to proposed legislation for the disposal of farm surpluses, President Coolidge will require complete details of the cost involved.

It was stated at the White House that he has asked treasury officials and experts of the Agriculture department to prepare estimates on the cost of the legislation now under consideration by the house committee on agriculture, the principal provision of which is creation of a $250,000,000 revolving fund.

When the President receives these estimates, it was intimated, he may take a definite position on the projected legislation. So far he has withheld sanction of any proposal which would commit the government dealing with the agricultural surplus problem.

Proponents of the corn-belt bill, which would finance surplus agricultural products by the levying of an equalization fee, claimed national rather than sectional support was behind the measure.

Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau federation, appeared before the house agricultural committee and read telegrams from federations in 16 widely scattered states, all of which endorsed the measure either specifically or in principle. The farm bureaus favoring the bill included Idaho, California, Nebraska, North Dakota, Michigan, Illinois, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Wisconsin, Kansas, Connecticut and Minnesota.

U. S. Tax Receipts Show Business Is on Upgrade

Washington.—The steady expansion of commerce and industry and a generally healthy state of business again has been graphically shown, in the opinion of treasury authorities, by the latest figures on revenue receipts.

Statistics made public a few days ago disclosed that, despite the uncertainty as to income tax rates that prevailed during February, the month's receipts were approximately the same as for February, 1925. Receipts last month from all sources were $98,072,347, as compared with $98,225,862 for February, 1925.

Thus far in the fiscal year 1926 the total revenue receipts from all internal sources have exceeded the corresponding receipts for the same months of the fiscal year 1925.

They all entered pleas of guilty to the charge of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Eight young girls, the oldest of whom is but sixteen years, and eleven boys, whose ages range from fourteen to eighteen, are being held for trial in Juvenile court.

Grand Rapids—Better law enforcement was asked of the state administration by the Michigan division, Izaak Walton League of America, at its annual convention here recently. Knight, assistant city manager, was named acting manager by the commission.

A Thousand Welcomes Await Sheer Frocks

A thousand welcomes—indeed, many thousand welcomes—await those dainty frocks of thin silk or other sheer fabrics, for summer afternoon, that are now passing in review in the shops. They are cheerful as to color, endlessly varied and cool as anything can be. Added to this is the important fact that they are inexpensive. Here is an example of the georgette frock—having a two-piece effect; the skirt is full at the front and narrow braid is used for its decoration. It is very pretty in any of the season's fashionable colors and is typical of the season's modes.
