EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1926.

No. 15

Dicken Wins For Mayor

Gidley, Sedgman and Ross Elected Aldermen.

East Jordan cast 604 votes for Mayor last Monday, Hugh W. Dicken receiving a majority of 70. Considering the bad condition of our roads and sidewalks the total vote cast was remarkably good. The vote for mayor was divided as follows:

Wards	Dicken	Bechtold
First	77	26
Second	85	85
Third	175	156
Totals	337	267

In the contest for Alderman in the first and third wards, James Gidley received 60 and Joseph Mayville 38 votes in the first ward; in the third ward James Ross received 177 votes to Arthur W. Farmer's 122. The second ward returned Sidney Sedgman to the Council by an uncontested vote of 128.

Justice of the Peace Herbert C. Blount was re-elected to full term uncontested.

Supervisors and Constables

First Ward—Supervisor—Wm. F. Basha—Constable—Frank Gorman
Second Ward—Supervisor—W. R. Barnett—Constable—Wm. Breakey
Third Ward—Supervisor—Richard Lewis—Constable—Fred Vogel.

Offices of Supervisors and Constables were uncontested.

South Arm Township Elects Ticket No. 1

At the South Arm annual election last Monday only some 90 voted were polled owing to the highways being blocked with snow. All candidates on Ticket No. 1 were elected as follows:

Supervisor—Charles P. Murphy
Clerk—William G. Murphy
Treasurer—Arthur Shepard
Highway Com'r—Irving Crawford
Justice of the Peace (full-term)—Robert Gunselus

Justice of the Peace (to fill vacancy)—Martin Ruhling

Member Bd. Review—Robert Gunselus

Constables—Earl Danforth, Patrick Murphy, Gerald Nice, Joseph Whitfield.

Saginaw—Oil has been discovered here in the sixth well drilled in the local field. This well, drilled by the Sun Oil Co., lies farther north than any of the five wells thus far drilled by local companies, all of which are on steady production. The Berea grit, the oil bearing formation, was encountered in the Sun well at a depth of 1,827 feet, a point eight feet higher than in the deepest well and 15 feet lower than the shallowest.

Washington—First Lieutenant Newton B. Bush, Infantry, United States Army, who has been stationed at Grand Rapids as an instructor in the Michigan National Guard, is to be transferred to the Hawaiian department of the army, a war department order announced recently. The officer is to leave Grand Rapids in time to take transport from New York May 18. He will be assigned to the infantry after arriving in Honolulu.

Lansing—Mayor Alfred Doughty has announced that, owing to the present attitude of the city council, he will not appoint a successor to Municipal Judge William F. Steinkohl, who has tendered his resignation, to take effect April 15, because the judge claims he cannot live on the $2,400 yearly salary he is now being paid. Judge Steinkohl has proven very satisfactory in the office and, it is believed, would reconsider his resignation were the emoluments of the court increased.

Traverse City—Thirty thousand pine seedlings will be planted in the municipal forest this month, according to announcement by the reforestation committee of the Isaac Walton league. This means that 30 acres of land now unproductive or, at best, covered with inferior forest growth, will be given a planting of white and Norway pine. This is by far the largest planting to be made in the state this spring, excepting in the state forest preserves.

Lansing—Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, chairman of American forest week committee, has named T. F. Marston, of Bay City, as Michigan chairman of forest week, April 18-24. It has been announced here, in accordance with President Coolidge's proclamation, forest week will mark an effort to encourage forest creation and conservation. Under Marston's leadership it is planned for forest week to have commercial tree culture emphasized in many schools, dinner clubs, women's clubs and recreational associations.

Gets Title Page In Illinois Book

Ellis R. Kleinhaus, East Jordan's landscape gardener, scored a "bull's eye" when the State of Illinois recently issued its annual Arbor and Bird Days book.

The book contains some seventy pages replete with pictures and articles relative to the subject.

On the title cover of this volume is a fine picture of a fountain and bird bath designed and erected by Mr. Kleinhaus last summer at the Eveline Orchards, near this city.

Mr. Kleinhaus has for many years past devoted himself to a study of landscape gardening, and, as the years go by, his services are being more sought for by those who realize his competency.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Traverse City—For the first time in history, mail was carried recently from Leland to North Manitou Island by motor car, Tracy Grosvenor, the regular mail carrier, and Louis Moser, engineer at the island coast guard station, making the 14-mile trip in one hour and twenty-five minutes.

Lansing—Thirsty citizens of Michigan who are looking forward to the sale of the new medicinal beer sanctioned by Lincoln C. Andrews, who is in charge of federal prohibition enforcement, must abandon hope, for "if it's beer, they can't have it, and if it's not beer, they won't want it," as one official put it.

Lansing—Harold Waples, of Ironwood, has been appointed assistant attorney-general, it has been announced by Attorney-General Andrew B. Dougherty. He succeeds Homer Quay, recently resigned. The new assistant attorney-general, who will begin his duties immediately, was prosecuting attorney of Iron county for four years.

Alto—The local school building was destroyed by fire the morning of April 1st, with a loss estimated between $7,000 and $8,000. Lack of water handicapped the fire fighters. Only two or three pupils were in the school when the fire was discovered about 7:30, and they hastily got out of the building. None of the building's contents were saved.

Jackson—Fred R. Harris, city manager of Escanaba for the last four years and before that chief engineer of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission has been elected city manager of Jackson to succeed Harry A. Freeman, who was removed from office recently two weeks after his appointment. The vote of the city commission on appointing Mr. Harris was unanimous.

Grand Rapids—The Rotary Club, which is directing observance here of Boys' Week, May 1 to 8, has arranged with City Manager Fred H. Locke for boys to fill administrative offices in the city hall during a portion of one of the days of the week. Three years ago, during a week dedicated to the Boy Scouts, picked Scouts filled all city hall offices and conducted the affairs of the city for an hour.

Port Huron—Expert tests made by the chief chemist of the Imperial Oil company, Sarnia, of oil taken from the well of the St. Clair-Sanilac Prospecting company, which "came in" recently, show that it is of a high quality, it is declared. Officials of the company have estimated the daily production of the well to be 50 barrels. The company is one of several concerns prospecting for oil in this vicinity.

Detroit—"More teachers of the beaten anvil type, and less of the French pastry type," was offered as the panacea for the general indifference towards scholarship in high schools, by G. E. Ganiard, superintendent of Mt. Pleasant schools, at the final session of the department of superintendents and school board members of the Michigan State Teachers' association which met here recently.

Grand Rapids—An annual physical examination of every individual was urged by the secretaries' conference of the Michigan State Medical society, during its meeting here. If every person would submit to a yearly examination and if doctors would keep a card index of all their patients, many deaths would be averted, life would be prolonged for the average individual and "hit and miss" medical advice would disappear, they said.

Lightning Change Artist

Scout Training Worth While

In 1925 more than 18 men were rescued from death by the prompt action of alert Boy Scouts. Other scouts rendered similar services in slighter degrees.

There should be an organization of scouts in every community. It should have the backing and support of the public. The boys should have, available to them, the best adult leadership that the community can afford.

A typical illustration of the value of the scout training occurred in a Pennsylvania school house last year. A scout was examining an open knife when a friend jostled him accidentally, forcing the sharp blade into his leg. It severed an artery, but the boy kept his head, and coolly fashioned a tourniquet of his handkerchief and a pencil. He applied this, stanching the blood until he became so faint that another boy had to hold the pencil.

A physician, who arrived shortly, said that had it not been for the boy's knowledge of first aid the injury might have proved fatal. The scout training was worth something to this scout. It is worth much to your boy, and you should see that he gets it.

The Easy Road

Is the habit of installment buying an asset or a liability to the average American home? This is a question that has been discussed lately and opinions in the matter are almost as varied as there are phases to the subject.

There is no dispute over the fact that installment buying has been made easy during the past few years. With a few dollars in his pocket a man may walk down almost any Main Street in the country and be able to assume obligations beyond his ability to pay for in a number of years. And there are thousands upon thousands of instances where this very thing has happened. Retail credit associations have discovered such a widespread prevalence of this sort of buying that it threatens some day to result in serious disaster.

Nobody will question the advantage of buying on a "dollar-a-week" basis, where the goods or articles purchased are distinctly to the advantage of the purchaser, but when luxuries beyond the reach of the individual are indulged in simply because of the small down payment and a promise of future settlement, both the seller and buyer are bound to suffer. It is believed by leading economists that the point of saturation has not yet been reached and they are sounding a warning against this practice of buying and selling that they may have the desired effect before it is too late. The installment purchase privilege is many times a sound convenience. More times a curse. "Caveat Emptor."

Stanton—The four youthful bank robbers, who have terrorized Northern Michigan towns recently and who were captured at Belding, must serve five to fifteen years at Ionia. The sentence was pronounced by Judge Royal Hawley in Stanton circuit. The judge said because of their youth he would not give the four life sentences, and recommended a maximum of seven years.

Flint—Dr. Hugh A. Stewart, of Flint, who served as State Senator from the Thirteenth District in 1917 and 1918, has announced he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the senatorship from Genesee county in the primary election in September. He says his platform will be reduction of state taxes. Warren J. Hinkley, the present senator, has not announced whether he will be a candidate for renomination.

Saginaw—Death visited the humble home of Mr. and Mrs. John Steck, 807 Bernard street, five times in six days, the last time claiming the six months' old baby of the family. The other four children died of pneumonia following an attack of measles. Frederick, 9 years old, and William, 7, alone remain of the seven children, and little hope is held for Frederick, who has been sick of pneumonia. William is out of danger.

Mystery Ship Goes Ashore

This mystery ship, "P. C. 71," which went ashore on the rocky coast south of the Tyne, England, is now in the hands of ship wreckers, as it was found impossible to float her. The picture shows a crane, erected on top of a cliff, lifting out some of the engine-room gear.

Test Cows Show High Production Averages

Average production records for 25,000 cows under official test in Michigan cow testing associations during 1925 were 7,559 pounds of milk and 292 pounds of butterfat, according to figures just released by the dairy extension men at the Michigan State college.

More than 300 herds in the state averaged over 300 pounds of butterfat per cow, and prediction is made by A. C. Baltzer, in charge of the cow testing work, that herds in the state test associations will average above the 300 mark in the future. High marks made in the cow test herds are taken as evidence of what can be done by correct feeding, care, and selection of dairy animals.

Find State Pioneers In Alfalfa Culture

Early chapters in the romance of alfalfa's development to a position of crop importance in Michigan have been brought to light recently in connection with work of the farm crops department at the Michigan State College.

H. F. Probert, leading farmer of Jackson County and a famous cattle man, told the story the other day of his 25 years experience with alfalfa. Mr. Probert was talking over the college radio station during a radio program, and his "alfalfa pointers" proved particularly interesting to those who have watched the great increase in acreage of this crop during recent years.

There are records of successful alfalfa culture in the state long before Mr. Probert's start a quarter of a century ago, but the Jackson man tells a story of alfalfa worth which is hard to beat.

Fields which are 25 years old which are still producing are to be found on the Probert farm, and there are authentic records there of production of eight tons of hay to the acre during a single season. Mr. Probert is also said to be the first man in the state to use ground limestone to correct soil acidity.

Waterman Auction Sale Postponed

Owing to the impassable roads, the Waterman Auction Sale, scheduled for this Friday, April 9th, has been postponed to Tuesday, April 20th. The display advertisement appearing in last week's issue of The Herald, will again be published in the issue of April 16th, with changed date.

Lansing—Michigan creameries were given 30 days in which to report plans for ridding Michigan streams of their pollution at a meeting held recently by representatives of creameries in Lansing. The creameries, like numerous other industries, were summoned to appear for a conference with representatives of the Attorney-General's office, the State Conservation Department and the Department of Health to decide upon methods of ending stream pollution.

Ann Arbor—That graduates of Michigan high schools make better records in college than those of any of the other 19 states in the North Central association, was the assertion made by Prof. C. O. Davis, of the Education school of the University of Michigan, in an address before members of the Michigan Schoolmasters' club. Nearly 2,500 members, school teachers and educators from the entire state, gathered here recently for a three-day session of the club.

Charlevoix—Postmaster G. W. Weaver, of this city, disheartened by the late spring parting of the United States weather bureau telephone cable between Charlevoix and St. James, and the breaking up of the ice in Lake Michigan, thus severing all communication with Beaver Island, is making every effort with the postoffice department at Washington to procure temporary airplane service to that point. Captain Weaver already has taken up the matter with the postmaster general and Congressman Scott.

Serge From China

Two textiles owe their names and origin to France; these are creosote and cambric, the first of which came originally from the Normandy town of Creton, while the second is still manufactured at Cambrai. Serge was introduced into this country from China in 1680. The Latin name for China is Sérica, from which the modern word "serge" has gradually evolved.

Air Mail To Beaver Island

First Flight Made Monday, April 5th.

The first airplane mail delivery to Beaver Island was made from Charlevoix Monday by Capt. J. F. Donnellan of Chicago in the Hissco standard ship sent here by the Air Transport Co. The plane took off at 2 o'clock, under ideal weather conditions, carrying Pilot Donnellan, Capt. John McCann, well known on Beaver Island as guide, and six sacks of mail weighing 480 pounds.

The flight to St. James was made north almost to Cross Village and then west.

The islanders had received word of the airship over the radio and had a landing place ready. After lunch the return trip was made straight across 30 miles of open water, the plane arriving here at 4:30.

The only casualty of the day was the death of a horse that had made more than 100 trips with mail to Cross Village. The horse had been driven out to the landing place on the ice and dropped dead, apparently from joy, as the mail was unloaded.

Postmaster G. W. Weaver, who put the first sack of mail into the ship, is well-pleased with the initial flight and expects authority from the postmaster general to continue the service until navigation opens.

Postmaster Weaver Monday morning awaited official word from Washington before dispatching the mail.

Capt. Donnellan, according to the local postmaster, represented the Pathé News and the National Air Transit Co., and made the trip from Chicago here on the initiative of the companies he represents.

The Beaver islands had been without communication with the mainland for about two weeks, ever since breaking up the ice forced discontinuance of dog team transportation over the ice. The weather bureau cable from here to the Beaver was severed during the winter.

Sells Boat, Contract

Capt. Donnellan, accompanied by a mechanic, left Lawton Sunday after having been forced down and held in the snow there since Friday. He stopped at Grand Rapids and Cadillac on his way here.

James E. Sanford, widely known lake captain, has sold his passenger and freight steamer, James E. Sanford, to Capt. John N. Chambers of Chicago, formerly of Mackinaw Island. Captain Chambers' nephew, Thomas G. Chambers' who will be first officer, is associated in the purchase.

Included in the sale is the government mail contract between Charlevoix and St. James, Beaver Island, which terminates June 30, 1927.

Automobile Shieks

With the advent of warm weather and good roads comes once more the automobile shieks and would be mashers. Everybody knows them—the heart crushers who nightly prowl up and down the leading streets inviting girls who do not know them to go riding.

Most of us are wont to look at this matter quite calmly; perhaps we "smile" at the autos that ply up and down the streets of our town seeking like wolves girls foolish enough to imagine they can take care of themselves, girls perhaps daughters of neglected parents. But when the final catastrophe arrives and the story is told in papers we froth and demand prompt dealing with the criminals.

But those shieks and mashers are quite as criminal in intent before as after the fact. Just why they should be permitted to roam like beasts of prey unchallenged is one of the non-understandable matters of alleged social protection. In the smaller cities and towns practically everyone of them is known to the police and to the street-wise by face and by repute. They flourish because they are permitted and condoned. It is idle to say that they can not be curbed or chased out of town or put in jail for "disorderly conduct" covers a wide range and leaves much to the authorities.

In Children's Modes

Tafteta Is Featured

Always sure of a welcome, tafteta silk comes and goes in the mode, and everyone rejoices when it arrives. It is equally becoming to grandma and all of her family, down to the youngest granddaughter. It is thrice welcome for little girls' dresses, where one finds it combined with woollens or used, alone for dressy frocks, and in great demand for party frocks. One of the nice things about tafteta is its adaptability to trimmings. The pretty frock pictured is an example, trimmed with puffs of tafteta shirred over cords at their edges. Tafteta also makes the ruffles that adorn the ribbon belt. It is used in little ruffles, fringed ruckings and plaitings and no other trimming is prettier.

Small Grain Seeded to Withstand Frost

Order of Resistance Wheat, Oats and Barley.

Observations made at the Nebraska experiment station and reported in Bulletin 201 show that the order of spring frost resistance is spring wheat, oats and barley. The Nebraska station agronomists suggest, therefore, that the grain be seeded in that order. At the Nebraska station, at Lincoln, the best results have been secured by seeding small grain during the last week in March or the first week in April. Eastern Nebraska corresponds in season to much of Iowa and Illinois and other middle-western states, and the Nebraska recommendations ought to be of interest to farmers throughout the Middle West.

Results at the Nebraska station indicate that the best rates of seeding per acre are eight to ten pecks for oats, six pecks for spring wheat and eight to ten pecks for barley. Little difference in yield was found between broadcasting and drilling.

From the standpoint of using the grains as nurse crops, the average date of ripening is of interest. At the Nebraska station, barley has ripened earlier than any other spring grain, the average date for barley being from July 2 to 4. Early oats has, on the average, ripened about July 7, spring wheat about July 10 to 13, and late oats on July 14. When grown as a nurse crop, barley has an advantage of several days over other spring grains.

The Nebraska agronomists found that whenever a good quality of grain is obtained from the threshing machine free of noxious weed seeds, or trash, fanning or grading is not regarded as important in preparation for seeding. Use of an established treatment for smut is always desirable, and especially when smut is known to have appeared in the preceding crop.

Milk House Is Decided Advantage to Dairyman

A milk house on the dairy farm properly fitted with separator, tester, hot and cold water and ice box with sink and drains is a decided advantage to the dairyman, but many of us are unable to afford such equipment. Many of us have milk houses supplied with well water but may not have ice. An ice house with ice supply is a thing to look forward to but without one it is necessary to keep the cream at a low temperature until it is made into butter or taken to the creamery.

If no milk house is on the farm, a handy place can be fitted up for temporary use in caring for the cream by enclosing the windmill frame. The four posts make a good framework for support and an opening can be left for the rod to work through at the top. This will keep the sun off and the running water will keep the place quite cool. The door should be kept closed either by a spring or a weight on a rope so the wind will not whip it open. This little precaution will also avert the danger of leaving it open by carelessness and will help to keep out the flies.

With a good floor and troughs arranged for drainage it can be made quite sanitary. A tank can be obtained having a lid, and large enough to set two or four large cream cans in, and by running the pipe directly from the pump into this tank then another pipe from there out into the stock tank the water will be kept circulating and cool and keep the cream at a reasonably low temperature. Such an equipment as this is quite cheap and will answer the purpose very nicely until a milk house can be built.

Poultry Feeds Favored for the Coming Season

Professor Card of the Michigan State college uses the following formula for compounding the rations for the college flock. Poultrymen will be interested in having this formula for preparing their feeds for the coming season.

The Mash.

Corn meal	325 lbs.
Finely ground oats	325 lbs.
Wheat bran	325 lbs.
Wheat middlings	325 lbs.
Alfalfa meal	220 lbs.
Meat scrap	300 lbs.
Dried buttermilk	100 lbs.
Calcium carbonate	60 lbs.
Fine salt	20 lbs.

The nutritive ratio of this ration is 1:42.

Scratch Feed.

Craiked corn	1,000 lbs.
Wheat	1,000 lbs.

The nutritive ratio of this ration is 1:17.

FARM NOTES

Lice and mites cut down winter egg production. Your county agent has directions for dipping and spraying.

Every possible encouragement should be given to the production of home-grown feeds so far as this means cheaper feeds.

Pasture undoubtedly aids in furnishing some of the nutritive factors which make skim milk such a superlative feed for young pigs fed in dry lot.

Every farmer plans to keep his engine busy as many days as possible throughout the year, because a working tractor is a dividend payer, while an idle engine is a losing investment.

Copper Sulphate for Sheep Worms

Method of Control Devised by Scientists Gives Good Results.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A method of controlling stomach worms in sheep devised by scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture and tested on farms for the last three years has given excellent results. The treatment consists in dosing the sheep once every 25 days with a 1 per cent solution of copper sulphate.

Losses From Worms.

Following good results at the department's experiment farm near Vienna, Va., the bureau of animal industry arranged with owners of 12 farm flocks in Schuyler county, Missouri, to try the method under ordinary farm conditions. At the beginning of the experiment, all owners reported they were experiencing serious losses from stomach worms.

While the experiment was in progress no change was made from the former usual practice of grazing, which consists in the use of permanent pasture throughout the year, except in the fall, when the flocks are allowed to run in fields and meadows from which the crops have been removed. During the last year no sheep or lambs under treatment were seriously affected by the stomach-worm disease.

Treatment Does Good.
 The second generation of sheep which have developed under the copper-sulphate treatment are larger than their dams, have grown better wool, and have sold without culls. Buyers of feeder lambs from the dosed flocks have recognized their outstanding condition and paid top prices for them. These favorable results were observed among more than 2,000 sheep.

Full directions for using the treatment, which is comparatively simple, may be obtained on application to the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

Early Spring Is Proper Time to Prune Orchard

Warm days during March can be profitably spent in renovating the fruit trees. Moderate pruning every year encourages annual fruiting and is much better for the tree than heavy pruning every three or four years. The work should not be delayed until growth starts in the spring.

Trees which have not been pruned regularly and have grown too bushy and dense should receive a rather heavy thinning of medium-sized branches in the outer portions of the tree. If possible, avoid removing large limbs because this leaves the tree thin in places and too dense elsewhere. All dead, diseased, broken, injured, crossing and rubbing limbs should be removed as far as possible. When young trees have been properly pruned until they reach bearing age, only moderate pruning of small branches is required to keep the tree properly thinned. Sunlight will then be admitted to the central portion of the tree.

In the pruning of young trees keep the head low. Also avoid having two branches leave the trunk at the same point. Four or five main branches should be saved, and as far as possible so selected that they will be evenly distributed around the tree as well as up and down the main trunk. In all your pruning work use sharp, efficient pruning tools. Make all cuts clean and close and wax or paint all wounds that are over an inch in diameter.

Does Not Pay to Grind Alfalfa Hay for Cows

Experiments conducted by the dairy husbandry section of the Iowa agricultural experiment station indicate that it doesn't pay to grind alfalfa hay when it is to be fed to dairy cows. At least it wasn't profitable in these preliminary tests. Eight cows were used in the experiment.

The use of ground alfalfa did not increase the yield of either milk or butterfat in these tests and, in addition, there was a greater amount of ground hay refused by the cows than of the unground hay.

It cost $3.50 per ton to grind the alfalfa and there seems little likelihood that this figure could be reduced on the average farm, those in charge of the test say. The grinding cost, they state, represents from 20 to 25 per cent of the market value of the hay on the farm in the average year.

Corn Good Animal Fuel During Severe Weather

Corn is cheap, about a cent a pound. One can get fine-burning soft coal for less than a half-cent a pound.

Animals are going to keep up their body heat during cold weather. They can do this with corn at a cent a pound if the owner can do some of it for them with coal at half the corn price.

If the chill is not taken off of the cow's drinking water with coal or wood, she will warm it to 98 degrees with corn. If the pigs are forced to drink water or milk in which there is some ice, they are going to melt the ice with corn at a cent a pound. If the chickens have a warm mash at noon, just that much corn is saved. Eggs come faster.

All the way around, trading coal for corn on a fuel basis is good business.

WILSON

(Edited by Mrs. O. D. Smith)

Fine Spring weather but a shower of hot water would be welcome.

The Alton pupils had a 3 days vacation last week owing to the big storm.

Mrs. Ida Hayner and grand son, Harold, were both quite ill with the grippe last week.

It was necessary to get the big snow plow before the state road could be cleared after the storm last week.

Miss Retta Lavalley of East Jordan spent part of her vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Hayner in this place.

Mrs. Stick of East Jordan has resigned her school in the Knop Dist., where she has taught since last September.

Conn. and Alice Nowland who are attending school in Boyne City spent their Easter vacation at their home on the Hill.

Chas. Hayner resumed his job in the Standard Oil Station in East Jordan last Saturday. He is driving back and forth with his car at present.

Mrs. Henry Timmer and baby daughter of Jersey City arrived here last Sunday, and are stopping with their aunt, Mrs. O. D. Smith while superintending repairs and improvements on the Hudson place which the lady purchased last fall. Her nephew, Robert Alvin, accompanied her and is enrolled in the Alton school this week.

An attendance of 74 at the Wilson township election. Following are the officers elected for the ensuing year: Supervisor, Albert Trojaneck; Clerk, E. S. Brintnall; Treasurer, Chas. Holt; Highway Com'r, W. McGeorge; Justice, Harry Behling; Board of Review, Chas. Shepard.

C. E. Osterout, Bert Hubbard and R. C. Bennett were Kalkaska visitors last week attending the school of instruction.

Mr. Pinney was held in Alba a few days by the severe storm of last week which stopped railroad traffic on the M. C. branch to East Jordan.

Miss Beatrice Russell is home for awhile after spending the winter in Flint.

Chas. Osterout spent the week end with his parents, returning Tuesday to his school near Flint.

Mr. Badder made a business trip to Jackson last week returning Saturday and bringing with him his little son.

An all day session of the farmers institute was held Tuesday at the high school auditorium with H. C. Moore of the M. S. C. as the main speaker. The Federated Aid served dinner at the school house.

Henry Goodwell had a narrow escape while skidding logs on a steep hillside. The log rolled onto him pinning him down in the snow. The heavy snow and brush probably saved his life as the log was a large one nearly two feet in diameter. Men dug the snow away and pulled him out but to all appearances he was not seriously hurt.

The contest between the two divisions of the L. A. ended in the losing side giving a supper to the winners in the near future.

Election passed off quietly there being only one ticket and no opposition except for overseer.

Misplaced Sympathy

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

SIR ESMÉ HOWARD, British ambassador to the United States, in a recent address to a group of students of journalism in the Middle West, among other things, criticizes us for showing a misplaced and misguided sympathy for those upon whom sympathy is wanted or who are not entitled to it. There is, as he says, too much gush and slush in our attitude toward violators of the law or of social conventions.

We are especially sympathetic with the young who violate law, not realizing that the best possible thing that can happen to a youthful delinquent is to be caught early in his irregularity and to be forced to pay a reasonable penalty for his dereliction. There is nothing else that will go effectually put the quietus upon cribbing in school, or lying, or violation of conventions or the criminal violation of law as for the violators to be made to feel that their acts have cut them off from the confidence and sympathy of the public and especially of their friends.

I suppose there has not been a criminal, within the last twenty years, no matter how depraved, who, when it appeared that he was about to be brought to justice, did not find the mails flooded with gushing letters of sympathy and commiseration for what he was about to suffer. The theory of not kicking a man when he is down has been carried to the limit, in our misplaced sympathy for the criminal, until most violators of the law could very easily draw the conclusion that they are martyrs deserving of properly adjusted halos, rather than delinquents entitled to the condemnation of respectable and law-abiding citizens.

The same thing is true of the violators of regulation and law to a lesser degree. Newlin is caught cribbing on a final examination in college and is dismissed.

"Hard luck, old chap," his friends say as they put the sympathetic arm around him. "It's a darned shame you got caught. Of course, they have to make an example of someone, and so they picked you out."

Newlin goes feeling like a martyr who has been sacrificed simply for the sake of upholding a foolish law, rather than a penitent realizing that in the future he will live an honest life.

Helderman was sent away from the university for pretty well defined moral irregularities. Half the men in Helderman's class, good fellows many of them, too, petitioned the faculty to let Helderman come back at once, though they knew he was guilty and that his influence as an undergraduate had always been bad. More than that, a dozen or more prominent citizens, who claimed at least that they knew all the details of the case, expressed their sympathy for the unfortunate boy, and their hope that his penitence might be reconsidered and perhaps commuted or entirely omitted.

We are altogether too sympathetic with those people who through their own irregularity or lack of principle get themselves into trouble.

Causes of Fire Loss

Divided into two classes, the chief causes of fire are: Strictly preventable—Defective chimneys and flues, fire-works, etc., gas, hot ashes, coals in open fires, matches, smoking, open light, petroleum and its products, rubbish and litter, sparks on roofs, steam and hot-water pipes, stoves, furnaces, boilers and their pipes. Partly preventable—Electricity, explosions, sparks from machinery, incendiarism, lightning.

Early Use of Sugar

It is reported that the manufacture of sugar cane is older than history and that reference to it is found in the Sanskrit of ancient India. The Greeks and Romans used sugar at one time for medicinal purposes only, obtaining it from India at great cost.

Some Good in It

GETTING ON WITH PEOPLE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

ATKINSON is having a rather serious time just now because he cannot get on with his instructor in zoology. Atkinson lives at some distance from the campus, and he enjoys both lying in bed in the morning until the last minute and then eating his breakfast in a leisurely manner. He has a good appetite. As a result he not infrequently arrives at the natural history building some minutes after the roll is taken and is therefore marked absent. The instructor, who is not always punctilious in keeping his own engagements, refuses to cancel the absence even when made aware of Atkinson's tardy arrival, and this procedure irritates the boy.

He wants to get out of the class; he wants to take up some other subject; he thinks the instructor unreasonable, and he can't get on with him. Last year it was the same in mathematics, and next year there will be some sort of clash in philosophy, for it has never occurred to Atkinson that he might adjust his own desires and preferences and idiosyncracies to suit his instructor. He might get up a little earlier in the morning, he might give a little less deliberate attention to his breakfast, he might hasten his steps when approaching the class room. In fact it would be quite possible for him to study his instructors at the same time as he is applying himself to his books, and do so, too, with marked profit to his final semester grades. The art of getting on with people hasn't yet appealed to him.

Potter is almost an exact duplicate of his father in physique and in temperament. Each one is arrogant and high-tempered and hard to get on with, and hell bent to have his own way. As a result they are at loggerheads all the time. The boy is really all right, but when the father is domineering the son is insolent. Where there might be friendship and sympathy and companionship, there is constant working at cross purposes. The boy hates to go home. After an absence of two or three months he can get on with his father for a day or two, and then the storm breaks.

Neither one seems to have tried to understand the other, to bear with the other's foibles, to overlook his weaknesses, so there is constant wrangling and unhappiness, where there might be comfort and peace and satisfaction.

There is the old story of the man and his wife who were both firebrands but who seemed always to get on happily with each other. When asked how under such dangerous circumstances such happy results were attained the man replied:

"When she flashes fire, I throw on the water, and vice versa. We have agreed that only one of us shall get angry at a time, so there can never be a quarrel."

It is possible to get on with anyone if we will only study him carefully enough. The devil is said to have his good traits. Success in all lines, happiness itself, depends upon our learning to get on with people.

Quit Spending

The startling announcement is made by the National Industrial Conference Board that there has been an increase in state and local taxes of 34 per cent during the last three years. While the National government has set about the gigantic task of lowering the cost of Federal government we go blindly upon our way issuing more bonds and indulging in an orgy of spending unknown in the history of state, municipal and county government.

Everyday some new project is hatched for spending the taxpayer's dollar and unless this is checked we are going to be in for a long period when the interest charges alone on our indebtedness will be practically confiscatory to the average citizen and taxpayer. There are some projects that are necessary and must be met, but in the majority of cases can be dispensed with without any great harm to the public. It is time that we gave serious thought and attention to the subject of home economics.

Babson Credits

Prohibition

Roger W. Babson, writing in the Cleveland Plain Dealer of February 12, declares that both friends and enemies of prohibition must agree that the increased purchasing power of the masses which has been so general since the war is largely due to prohibition. "Increased wages," continues Mr. Babson, "are not responsible for this increased purchasing power because higher wages mean higher prices and do not materially affect the volume of goods purchased. When, however, a man takes money formerly thrown away on harmful drink and use it for buying a home, an automobile or any other merchandise, he is greatly aiding all legitimate industry."

"This means that at least a billion dollars formerly spent in saloons each year, and from which only the brewers benefited, have gone into new buildings, automobiles and the hundreds of other lines which have expanded so rapidly since prohibition went into effect."

"If whiskey and beer did not harm they might be classed by economists with other luxuries, such as fur coats and radio sets. An impartial examination of the situation, however, shows there is a great difference—economically, as well as morally—between a luxury, like a radio set, that does no real harm, and a luxury, like beer, which has ruined so many."

"Intemperance has not only raised havoc with millions of individuals, but every manufacturer knows what it has cost general industry. Although drinking may have increased among students and the would-be-smart set, it has ceased to be a harmful factor in the manufacturing and business world."

"Saloon has given way to the chain grocery store. Prohibition has not only increased purchasing power, but it has reduced manufacturing and distributing costs, from which everyone is greatly benefiting today."

"Even enemies of law enforcement admit that prohibition was perhaps the greatest factor in causing the great upward movement in the normal business line as indicated by the business charts. They claim, however, that it was simply a stimulant or something which could be used only once and that prohibition has no cumulative effects. I am sure that statistics would show such conclusions to be absolutely wrong. The effect of prohibition on stimulating business is as great today as ever and, furthermore, is cumulative in its effects. I say this because a large proportion of the money heretofore expended for drink is not now going into things which can be classed as luxuries but rather into homes, life insurance, savings, bank accounts and other forms of investment. Such money is productive and is doubling every twelve to fifteen years. There is probably no one factor which would more quickly bring about a business panic and a period of unemployment as a nullification by legislation of prohibition and a return to the saloon with its accompanying poverty and disease."

After listening to some of the arguments one is led to believe that some people would even be willing to fight in order to get into the World Court.

Historic Posts Of The Past Fort Gratiot, Michigan

(From April U. S. Army Recruiting News.) The early military history of the posts along the northern frontier of the United States is inseparably connected with the history of the discovery and early settlement of the same region. As is well known, the French were the explorers and subsequent occupants, and they brought with them the habits and national traits peculiar to that people.

From a military point of view the geographical importance of the site upon which Fort Gratiot, Michigan, was built, was very early appreciated. The spot was first occupied by a frontier trading post, which was taken possession of in 1686 by M. Du Shute, then commanding at Mackinac, under instructions from the French governor general, Count Frontenac.

During the period the English were making strenuous efforts to connect their interests in the vicinity of Hudson Bay with those of New York. These people hemmed in French, looking ultimately toward their entire extinction along the St. Lawrence. The occupation of Fort Gratiot, (Fort St. Joseph in those days) had, therefore, a double purpose, one to thwart the English schemes, and the other to protect the French Indians in their forays and hunts and serve them as an asylum against their enemies.

In 1701 the post was abandoned, since the Sieur de La Mothe Cadillac had established Fort Pontchartrain where Detroit now stands, and since the latter site was considered the more strategic, being located on a narrow strait between Canada and Michigan. The former post was not again occupied as a military post until 1763, when the English began to make permanent settlements in the country.

In 1701, soon after General William Hull became governor of the territory, the fort was garrisoned by the forces of his command. Immediately after the surrender of the English troops in 1813 to General Harrison, at Detroit, the site was again without military occupation; but in May, 1814, a party arrived from Detroit consisting of Major Forsyth, Captain Cobb and a detachment of forty men. This party had instructions from General Harrison to locate the post and erect fortifications. The fort thus established was rebuilt in 1828 upon the plan which was continued until its abandonment after the Civil War.

Situated in the Indian country, Fort Gratiot was naturally close to the various Indian troubles which flared up from time to time. The greatest of these was the Conspiracy of Pontiac, when the federated tribes of the Ottawa, Pottawatamie, and Ojibwa, assisted by the Wyandots, attacked many of the frontier settlements in 1763, just after the English had firmly established themselves in the country.

Pontiac, chief of the Ottawas, had laid a gigantic plan for all the tribes from the Great Lakes to the mouth of the Mississippi to rise simultaneously and strike the English towns. He personally led the attack upon Detroit, a few miles from Fort Gratiot, holding that place in a state of siege from May 9 to October 30, 1863, when he withdrew, having been unsuccessful. The same sort of resistance was encountered along the entire frontier, as a whole the conspiracy failed signally.

In the War of 1812 General Hull surrendered disgracefully to the British general, Brock; the capitulation including Detroit, Fort Gratiot, at Port Huron, and in fact, all the territory surrounding. Hull was tried by court-martial at Albany, New York, and sentenced to be shot for his cowardly conduct in not firing a shot against the British, but the sentence was remitted by the President because of Hull's service during the Revolution.

CHESTONIA

(Edited by Jesse Morse)

Nice weather Sunday for Easter.

There were 45 people present at Easter services Sunday.

Garl Brown returned Saturday from Detroit.

Lloyd Riley walked to Bellaire from Mt. Bliss in about four hours last Saturday.

Earl Gould's people took dinner Sunday at the Allison Pinney home and attended Sunday school afterwards.

Oscar Beebe was able to sit up some Saturday and slept better Saturday night. It is hoped he is now on the upward road to recovery.

Lloyd Riley has brought his brothers radio set over to Earl Gould's home and installed it and will probably be getting music in the air before long.

Misses Leone Kratchovil and Louise Hunt spent Sunday visiting Doris Hunt at the Sydney Thompson home.

A good many people were kept home on account of lagrippe, but a good crowd attended Easter services nevertheless. A short program was rendered by members of the Sunday school.

The following officers were elected Monday at the Jordan township election: Supervisor, Wm. Severance; Clerk, Edd. Nemecek; Treasurer, Frank Hauey; Highway Comm., A. Chanda; Constables, Mrs. Kratchovil and Levi Myers.

PENINSULAR

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

Marion Russell of Ridgeway farm is quite lame caused by a horse stepping on his foot.

Daniel Reich tore his hand very painfully Tuesday evening on a broken grip on a stable fork.

Orval Bennett returned from Flint Saturday, where he has been employed for several months. He had to go to Mackinaw City and come back to Boyne Falls because of the blockade storm.

The worst storm of the season struck us Wednesday and Thursday.

Our mail carrier made the full trip Monday, April 5th, the first time since March 30. But he managed to bring us our mail part way every day.

Miss Dorothy Jarman of Knoll Krest has been quite ill with a sore throat but is better now.

Geo. Jarman of Knoll Krest reports the arrival of 13 O. I. C pigs in one litter Easter Sunday.

The Jolly Reading Club meeting that was to have been held at the James Annot home Friday evening was again postponed because of the bad roads.

Dr. Pomroy of Boyne City was on the Peninsula Monday testing cattle.

Frances Russell of Ridgeway farm spent the week end with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Mose LaLonde in Chaddock Dist.

Frank K. Hayden of Orchard Hill spent the week end in East Jordan with his wife and little daughter at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hitchcock.

Mrs. A. Reich of the Lone Ash farm and Mrs. Elmer Faust of Mountain Ash farm drove to East Jordan Sunday and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hitchcock.

The Peninsula ice harvest was finished April 5th and is in splendid condition 24 inches thick and as clear as window glass.

Kenneth and Alice Russell of Ridgeway farm were absent from Star school Monday because of illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Loomis and daughter, Pauline of Gravel Hill, and Mrs. Mercy Woeful, and Phyllis and Geo. of Gravel Hill were Easter guests of Geo. Jarman and family at Knoll Krest.

Peninsula friends are interested to hear of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. John P. Seiler, old residents of Knoll Krest.

Fifty were in attendance at Star of Hope Sunday School Easter Sunday. The principle part of the program was a dialogue by Misses Mildred Wageman, Saddle Murphy, Frances Gould, and Alice Gould, which was very well rendered. There were ever so many short recitations.

Quite a bunch from Star Dist. walked to the Mountain school house Saturday afternoon, some more than 3 miles, to rehearse for the Easter program.

Mrs. Richard Hosgood of Mountain Dist. is so far recovered from her recent illness to attend Sunday School Easter.

Mrs. Will Scott is still too ill to attend Sunday School.

Mrs. Will Sanderson of North Wood attended Sunday School Easter the first time in several weeks because of illness.

Mrs. Lyle Wilson is still very poorly being confined to her bed part of the time.

Mountain School was closed Monday and Tuesday because of the school house being the Polls of Eveline township.

Miss Sadie Murphy, Mountain school teacher, visited home on the East Jordan Elsworth road from Sunday to Tuesday evening.

Vera Stauley visited her mother, Mrs. Laura Stauley, in Boyne City from Friday to Tuesday.

Iola Gaunt who spent her Easter vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Ernest Loomis at Maple Lawn farm returned to Boyne City Sunday evening.

The Floyd Moore family who have occupied the David Staley farm at Dave Staley Hill expect to move to East Jordan Friday.

A very unusual birthday party was observed Wednesday March 31 at the Three Bells school house celebrating six birthdays: Katherine Wageman, Marie Moore, Clara Leu and Charles Looze were 13 years old and Meria Moore and Lester Lemm were 8 years old. They had a pot luck dinner and played games.

Peninsula is proud of its lamb crop although it is too early to make any where near a full report as the largest and best flocks have not lambd yet, some of the flocks can be enumerated. A. B. Nicloy of Sunny Slope farm reports 20 lambs from 11 ewes. F. K. Hayden 24 lambs from 18 ewes, some of them yearlings but the brag crop is F. H. Wageman 14 lambs from 7 ewes, five single, one pair and a set of triplets all doing well. Alice Cury has 26 lambs.

Eveline township cast 30 votes as there was only one ticket and nothing else to vote on.

The Peninsula school census taken before March 31st is: Three Bells 24, Star 29, Mountain 17.

The one thing noticeable for Easter was the absence of Spring hats and the wearing of over coats and winter furs.

BOHEMIAN SETTLEMENT

(Edited by Archie E. Bussa)

Miss Helen Hammond and Miss Ella Marvan were visitors at our school last week.

Miss Anna Korton returned to her home last week.

Election today—Monday.

BENNETT SCHOOL NEWS

We are still having lots of fun sliding—April 6th.

Margaret Kidder has been chosen secretary of our Club in place of Opal Bolser who has left our district.

Our black boards have been decorated with a pretty new spring border of blue and pussy willows.

There was no school Monday afternoon so as to allow the teacher to vote.

We are busy for an exhibit.

The under lying meaning of "The Call of Spring" is rather difficult to explain.

Murray walked aft to where Peter and I stood, uncertain what to do next.

"Have you seen her?" he asked. "I think she is in that group of priests and nuns under the stern lantern." I said.

He compressed his lips, a habit he had whenever he must turn to some task he did not overly care for.

"This a trick I shall find as distasteful as O'Donnell did our colloquy just now," he said shortly. "But we must be about it without delay. Our cannonade will have been heard ashore in Hispaniola with this wind. We must gather our loot and away."

The silence was oppressive as we ascended the poop ladder. A last babble of Latin ended on a hysterical note. The Spanish captain stalked to the far side of the deck, rumbling curses, and fixed his gaze upon the purple hills of Hispaniola. Behind the steering-wheel the black flock of religious gathered closer under the great, gilded lantern which crowned the high, pulpit-like recess intended to protect the helmsman; and amongst those cowed heads and shapeless swathed forms the slim grace and sunny blue eyes of Moira O'Donnell were as patent as the growing fear with which her father met us.

"Don Ascanio has placed the conduct of matters in my hands. What is next? Must you—?" he began.

He gestured expressively toward the vessel beneath us.

"It seems— I— I find myself— 'Tis a nauseating prospect— Several hundred men—and priests and nuns, Murray— Aye, a cardinal sin, one I'll never have absolution for, whatever betide—"

"You concern yourself without cause," said Murray soothingly. "We have arranged it differently, and to that end I shall act a part with your daughter which you must support, aye, to the offering of violence. And now, tell me, where is the treasure?"

"In the lazaret,"

"Master Saunders!" called my great-uncle, "Take fifty men and break out a quantity of treasure from the lazaret of the prize."

"Aye, aye, sir," returned Saunders and the pirates fell over themselves in their alacrity to have a hand in his business.

My great-uncle concluded the cleaning of his sword, crossed to the larboard railing and tossed the bloodied handkerchief overboard.

"Oh, Master Martin," he hailed the mate on the poop of the Royal James. "Be so good as to have a whip rigged from the foreyard-arm to sling aboard the treasure which Saunders is breaking out."

"Aye, aye, sir, I'll attend to it all myself," Martin assured him. "—my eyes for a— and all the Twelve Apostles, blast 'em for a— lot of—"

deck. "But we must play our little comedy here. You, chevalier, are cast for the Anguished Parent. I am the Aged Libertine. Peter is the Mute with the bowstring—he gentle; Peter Robert—humph! I scarce know how to describe your role, Robert. You, shall we say, are to be Youth? You shall be Youthful Wantonness, and did we adopt all the exigencies of the plot 'twould be necessary for you finally to strive with me for the possession of the maid. But we will waive that anon. Play up to me, nephew! You, too, Peter!"

He left us and walked with a mincing gait, entirely different from his real catlike prowl, up to the black-garbed cluster surrounding Mistress O'Donnell.

"Stap me, a fair piece, this!" he drawled. "Too far to bloom unseen. Come hither, mistress!"

But the maid answered him so dauntlessly that it made the blood prickle in my neck.

"A black shame on you, old enough to be the father of me and these others here! I know you for what you are, Captain Rip-Rap, and if you will be thinking I am one to fear you it is a sorry wakening you will have. Oh, you might better be down on your knees, asking pardon for the wickedness you have wrought, than plotting fresh evil, and threatening holy folk with your dreadful torments!"

"So you recognize me?" said my great-uncle. "'Tis an honor, mistress. But I fear you have heard much to my prejudice, and I must press you to visit my ship and learn the contrary."

"Step forward, colonel, and defend her," I muttered under my breath to her father.

He had the grace to blush, but he acted upon my suggestion with a semblance of sincerity.

"Sir, sir, what is this you do?" he cried. "Certes, there is some limit to your law-breaking! The maid is my daughter."

My great-uncle went through his snuff ritual with an artful exaggeration which was comical to one who knew him.

"Unfortunate!" he drawled. "I wish I could sympathize with you, sir."

And to me—

"Robert, you will conduct the lady to the lazaret."

For the first time Mistress O'Donnell's glance lighted fair upon my face.

"Master Ormerod!" she gasped. "You'd best come quietly, mistress," I snapped.

She flung her hands to fend me off, and the fat monk and the two nuns cast themselves upon us, the monk striking at my head with his heavy crucifix and the nuns scratching and clawing so that I was put to it to protect my eyes. They were surely three of the bravest people who ever lived, and but for Peter they would have worsted me.

The big Dutchman waded stolidly into the confusion, shoved O'Donnell from his path, upset the monk and pushed the two nuns out of the way.

"You take der little gal, Bob," he squeaked.

She struggled with all the strength in her lissome body, but I pinned her hands and tossed her over my shoulder—and then her father attacked me, with the Spanish captain, whose patience had been exhausted by this last outrage.

Murray drew his sword and forced the Spaniard back and Peter slung O'Donnell over his shoulder as easily as I had the maid.

"I got him, ja," he announced to Murray.

My great-uncle sheathed his sword. "Carry him along," he said. "Since he is so much concerned as to his daughter's fate, we will permit him to watch it. Afterward, it may be, he can afford us some additional amusement. Stap me, a most persistent fellow!"

A line of pirates staggered across the decks, backs stooped beneath burdens of portly casks and iron-bound chests, wire-wrapped and padlocked, each a dangle with leaden seals impressed with the arms of the Spanish king. They leered at my writhing captive, but they all looked quickly away as my great-uncle descended to us.

"Can you manage her alone?" he asked me curtly.

"I'll manage her or go overboard with her," I barked.

He smiled.

"The right spirit, lad! Tut, tut, mistress," as she wrenched a hand free and dug at my eyes. "You concern yourself for nothing. We have but played at a game. Observe your father's attitude."

"The greater his shame!" she hissed. "That he should have suffered you to take me alive!"

"We are friends," urged my relative, lowering his voice. "'Tis but a pretense we make—"

"Friends! Ah, you are friends to the Powers of Evil!"

"Be patient a little longer, Moira," pleaded her father from his perch on Peter's shoulder. "I'll explain—"

She went of a sudden entirely limp and burst into a passion of weeping.

"Oh, padre, padre, to think of you a coward! 'Tis worst of all!" O'Donnell swore helplessly.

I climbed by way of a carrounade on to the larboard bulwarks, holding Mistress O'Donnell with one arm while I took a strand of rigging with the other; and even as I collected myself to jump the gap that separated the two vessels she twisted free of me and would have slid over-side—to be crushed to death, most likely, for the two hulls were continually grinding together. I caught her in the nick of time, letting go my clutch upon the rigging, and was near to being dragged down with her, coasting back and forth as aimless as a feather blown by the wind. So that, what with her struggles and my own loss of balance, I gritted my teeth and jumped most precariously, hit or miss, and, I am bound to admit, landed upon the James' bulwarks, rather by good fortune than skill.

I dropped to the deck in no very pleasant mood. "An ill recompense for one that hath been at pains to spare your father's reputation, mistress," I growled, as surly as any pirate of the crew. "You might have been my death."

She looked at me, too surprised to answer at once, and before she had recovered herself, my great-uncle and Peter joined us, Peter still placidly carrying Colonel O'Donnell like a flour sack.

I Caught Her in the Nick of Time.

Murray cast a swift glance of appraisal around his ship.

"We have come through very creditably," he remarked. "Martin, let me know as soon as the prize's treasure is all aboard."

He turned to us.

"The curtain is ready to fall upon our comedy. Will you accept my arm, Mistress O'Donnell? A glass of wine and a bite of sailor's fare will taste better than Robert's ear, which your hunger prompted you to nibble. Fie, fie, my lass!"

She stared at him with utter horror, yet suffered him to place her hand upon his arm. The spirit was gone out of her, exhausted by the strain she had been subjected to. She was like a butterfly spiked on a thorn.

Something of the same sensation must have affected my relative, for he patted the limp hand on his arm with a truly paternal kindness.

"Come, come, did I not say the comedy was ended?" he chided her. "You are as safe here as in your Spanish convent. But the deck is too public for our revelations. We will seek the seclusion of the cabin, and there the complete tale shall be unfolded for your reassurance, with your father a witness to support it."

She shook her head.

"I—I—know not what you mean."

"To be sure," he agreed. "But you soon shall. Peter, good friend, prithee take three steps within the companion-way and there deposit Colonel O'Donnell with decent propriety upon the two limbs Nature intended for his locomotion. Ah! Excellent! Allow me, mistress!"

Ben Gunn and the two negro lackeys ushered the party to their seats. Mistress O'Donnell sank into hers with a weariness that was pathetic. She was quite regardless of her surroundings. Peter took his accustomed place at the opposite end, and I sat beside her.

"Let me give you a glass of this aqua vitae, my lass," said my great-uncle. "'Tis efficacious for fatigue and the merraine. See, I taste it myself. 'Tis quite all right. You, too, chevalier? Excellent! Perhaps you will pass the flask to Master Corlaer yonder. And Master Ormerod yonder—my nephew. But I believe you and your daughter have had previous acquaintance with him."

O'Donnell muttered something none too civil, but the maid bestirred herself, and her eyes examined me again with the mingling of horror and stupefaction which governed her mood.

"How come you here?" she asked. "You—you are you also a pirate?"

"I am a captive as surely as yourself," I returned. "Aye, more so."

"A captive!" she exclaimed, her interest fanned alight. "But surely you—"

My great-uncle interrupted her.

"Please, Mistress O'Donnell! Our tale is sufficiently complicated. Let us not make it more difficult to comprehend by confusing it at the beginning with side-issues. First, that there may be no misunderstanding, 'tis true that I am he who is known as Captain Rip-Rap."

She shrank away from him in a renewed access of terror.

"I have already told you that you have no cause to fear me," he went on gently, "and to prove that to you I will add that I am an outlaw—what is called a pirate, although I detest the word myself—because I am a Jacobite. I believe, too, I may claim your father as my friend."

He looked inquiringly at O'Donnell. The Irishman drained his glass.

"'Tis true," he assented. "This gentleman is one Andrew Murray, who was out in the '15 and was afterward in a tangle in New York province on the score of intrigues with our friends and the French, Moira. He hath been a good servant to King James."

"But for why will you have been the death of all the poor folk on the Santissima Trinidad?" she cried.

"'Tis regrettable that Spaniards had to die, lass," answered my great-uncle, lowering his voice to a proper depth of emotion. "But I call to your mind that Spain has not helped the Good Cause as she might when there was a bonny chance of fetching the Stuarts home."

"That is God's truth," she admitted with quick passion, "but I am thinking 'tis not overhonest."

"You talk nonsense, Moira," blustered her father. "Is it not better that this treasure should be employed to recover England and all the lands pertaining to the English crown for their rightful rulers—who will assist in the restoration of the True Faith—than it should be poured into the pockets of the king's favorites at Madrid? Why, lass, there are great lords, aye, a prince of the Church, no less, that set the seal of their approval to what we do. The people of Spain will be thanking us for the use to which we turned their treasure—and then we'll pay it back," he added with a happy inspiration.

"Odds, that we will!" indorsed my great-uncle. "What's a million and a half pounds to royal Spain? Aye, or to an England that waxes grandly prosperous under wise Stuart rule?" She was silent.

His suave manner conveyed subtly an implication of the importance he attached to her approval.

"I would not inflict a dose of the material philosophy of age upon one so young and charming, my dear," he went on; "but possibly you will forgive me if I indicate to you the regrettable circumstance that the ideal is seldom attainable. In order to secure the means for re-establishing King James and what your father so quaintly terms the True Faith in the British isles, it hath been necessary for a gentleman of questionable legal status—myself—associated with others of yet more dubious antecedents and repute, to procure the death of divers Spanish persons, who, of themselves, had never wrought any harm against us or the cause we served. 'Tis by precisely such contraventions of precedent and lettered laws that epochal events are brought about. I trust my reasoning is clear?"

O'Donnell emptied a glass with an impatient growl that masked an oath.

"You are wasting time, Murray. Moira is a good lass, and my daughter; but what she thinks of this venture—"

"—is of considerable importance to me," my great-uncle protested. "I was compelled in the beginning of our acquaintance to give her a wrong impression of my character, and I am extremely desirous to have her good opinion."

"But why is Master Ormerod a captive? Why does he say I am a captive, if—"

"You are not a captive," returned my great-uncle. "At least, I say that under the impression that, as your father's daughter and a devout Jacobite, you would not, whatever your personal feelings might be, undertake to interfere with our plans."

"I am wondering are you all mad," she said blantly.

"You may well say so!" I exclaimed.

"The truth is this, mistress: Master Murray hath besides his own ship's company a second band of pirates the which are restless beneath his thumb. He desired me to be his lieutenant to help him hold them in restraint, and—"

"You restrained them bravely aboard the Santissima Trinidad!" she said.

"That was to save you!" I declared.

"'Tis true, and I'm saved," she echoed sarcastically.

"Yes, you and your father," said Murray gravely. "Colonel O'Donnell risked everything on this coup of ours. To protect him 'twas essential he should never be known he was privy to it. We had the choice of two means to that end. One was to strike the Santissima Trinidad with all hands except yourselves. The other was to arrange to remove the two of you in such fashion as to establish your innocence. I am free to say the first was the easiest course. The dictates of humanity, however, prevailed.

How he rolled that last sentence. "And what do you know of humanity that soaked the decks of the Santissima Trinidad with blood?" she answered. "You that the Spaniards cite as a byword for cruelty and wickedness! I will not believe a word that you say. I will not believe any man here. You are all smirched with the same badness."

Peter leaned his great bulk forward upon the table.

"Don't talk no more, you," he commanded the Irishman. "Neen, I talk! Little gal, Bob and I we don't come with Murray because we like to. He makes us. Ja! He uses us. He uses your father. He uses you. But when we are with him we do what we can to take care of you. It is not good for little gals to be on pirate ships. Neen!"

He leaned back.

"Dot's all."

Her blue eyes dwelt seriously upon his vast, flat face, with its insignificant features bled here and there.

"I believe you," she said.

"Stap me," jeered Murray. "Our Peter is discovered a squire o' dimes—a preux chevalier. Peter, you ha' disguised your talents. We must know more of them."

"Ja," said Peter vacantly.

Mistress O'Donnell rose.

"Sir—" she addressed my great-uncle—"you will be excusing me if I do not linger for more conversation. What you do hath no concern with me. I am very distraught, and my heart is sick with the black sorrow, and I—I—" she swayed a little—"would lie me down and—weep."

I slipped from my seat and steeled her.

"Take her to your stateroom, Robert," said my great-uncle. "You must lodge with Peter."

He rose, himself, bowing with the fine courtesy which became him nobly.

I guided her as far as the stateroom door. She thanked me faintly as I opened it for her, and I was abruptly impelled to recover her friendship.

"What I tried to tell you was the truth," I murmured, the words spilling fast from my tongue. "Indeed it was so! Peter Corlaer had the right of it. We two are no pirates, and all that we ha' done has been intended to make smooth your way."

There was a wistful light in her eyes as she lifted them under long, black lashes.

"God send you be honest, sir," she said. "I—I must wait to judge. The world is gone all twirly-round. Even the padre—"

She choked back a sob.

"You will not misunderstand," she ended with quiet dignity, "if I say no more that maybe already ha' said too much."

Now that the state is extending its rule to the counties we wonder if it will still be necessary for the old-fashioned individual to get up in meeting and speak about our free and untrammeled citizenship?

The young men took George Gladis, ice cream parlor proprietor, up on a wager when he offered them a hot chocolate if they would take the icy dip. They evidently didn't believe in refusing recently to take a "dare," so donned their bathing suits and hiked to the channel in back of the Alhambra Hotel, where they proceeded to carry out their wager. Swinton ducked into the water all over, but Belling went him one better by swimming out into the channel and back through the floating ice. # SWEATERS and SLICKERS

Mrs. Brown—"Good morning Mrs. White. I've been trying all morning to get you. I think there must be something the matter with our telephone. I'm in a great hurry, haven't but a minute to talk. Aren't the streets just dreadful? And because its such bad getting out I'm trying to clean house. What did you say? Yes, yes I heard something about it but I'm in such a hurry today I really haven't time to listen. I'll call you up this evening and want you to tell me all about it. Terrible, wasn't it? I thought they were getting along so nicely. I really must stop. I almost forgot, have you seen the New SWEATERS at the East Jordan Lumber Co. Store? For Boys and Girls, either Plaid or Plain. They are so much prettier than these heavy flannel "Lumber Jacks." And the New SLICKERS, they are so pretty that they are quite dressy. All sizes. I must stop, good-bye, I'll call you later. I'm going to a party this afternoon and must get ready, Good-bye. What did you say? Good-bye.

Hello, did you know they are going to have a $1.00 Day at the Co. Store soon?

U. S. PERMITS SALE OF 3 PER CT. BREW

Two Large Breweries to Make Medicinal Drink—Sold at Drug Stores.

Washington.—Plans of the administration to crush widespread violations of the prohibition laws, embodied in a bill offered in the senate by Senator Goff of West Virginia, propose heavy fines, jail terms and more drastic search and seizure provisions. The measure was accepted at the capitol as the answer of General Andrews to the growing agitation in congress for modification of the Volstead act.

Washington.—Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, dry czar, has dashed the hopes of the thirsty who expected legal high-power beer as a result of permits granted for sale of 3.75 per cent malt extract.

Supporting the statement made by Prohibition Director James E. Jones, Andrews declared this tonic, containing 25 per cent of solids, "is by no stretch of the imagination a beer."

Officials permitted reliable manufacturers to restore these tonics to the market so they would be available to persons who need them, Andrews said.

If attempts should be made to use them as beer they could instantly be withdrawn from the market, he added.

Washington.—Permission has been granted by the prohibition division of the bureau of internal revenue to two large breweries to manufacture a malt liquor containing 3.75 per cent alcohol by volume and 25 per cent malt solids, to be sold to the public through drug stores without prescriptions or dealer permits.

The permits, it was learned, were issued on a "six months' trial" during which the brewers are required to "aid" the prohibition division in the prevention of the sale of the malt liquor to the public for "beverage purposes."

Director of Prohibition James E. Jones gave his consent to the new brew after chemists of the bureau of internal revenue had reported that the tonic could not be used as a beverage.

The chief difference between the new tonic and the old was explained. The malt extract contained in it is so high that it would be impossible to take the fluid as a beverage. It could be taken only in small quantities. The output is limited, it was explained, and the manufacture would be far more expensive than that of beer. A twelve-ounce bottle would cost 30 or 40 cents.

The tonic is described as a sort of sweet, sirupy substance of heavy appearance. It is intended for use principally in hospitals and by prescription of physicians, the main purpose being for convalescents. Malt tonics, it was explained, were used to a great extent for medicinal purposes before the Volstead act. Prohibition officials said there seemed to be a real need for something of this kind.

The permits were issued to the two breweries, it was said, after conferences between their representatives and representatives of the government. The permits were issued a fortnight ago and already one company, it was also learned, has written to wholesalers announcing it had been allowed again to manufacture the product with an alcoholic content of 3.5 per cent and a solids content of 25 per cent. In the letter the company wrote that the product would be "palatable, but not potable to an extent that it can be used as a beverage."

The letter said that wholesalers would be permitted to sell the product in quantities of five cases weekly to small druggists and twenty-five cases weekly to large druggists, and added that it "hoped it will find its way into legitimate channels."

No official regulation covering the manufacture of the malt liquor, as it is already called, has been issued by the prohibition department, and accordingly, it was said, there are no requirements for dealer permits or bonds to govern its sale.

Prior to prohibition the general run of beers contained from 3 to 6 per cent alcohol by content and 4 to 7 per cent of solids. Beck contained 10.05 per cent solids and 4.58 per cent alcohol. American beer of the larger type was in three classifications—3.48 per cent alcohol and 5.08 per cent solids, 3.56 per cent alcohol and 6.50 per cent solids, and 4.12 per cent alcohol and 7.43 per cent solids.

Aged Couple Wed in Air

"King of Deauville" Dead

Paris.—Eugene Cornuche, proprietor of resorts at Deauville and Cannes, known as "king of Deauville," is dead, aged fifty-eight.

For Killing Americans

Washington.—Arrest of four Mexicans believed to have slain Rex McIlhene and wounded two other Americans near Mazatlan, Mex., has been reported to the State department by Ambassador Sheffield at Mexico City.

Last of Seventeen

Berkeley, Cal.—George W. Rumble, eighty-one, who claimed to be the last survivor of the 17 men who escaped from the Andersonville prison during the Civil war, is dead here.

LEADS LIQUOR FOGS

Women foes of liquor will call a national rally in Washington. Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the woman's national committee for law enforcement, is making the plans.

TAX INCOME CLOSE TO HALF BILLION

Almost $60,000,000 More Than Collected Last Year.

Washington.—Final income tax collection figures for the March quarter, the first under the reduced rates of the new revenue law, showed a total payment to the government of $490,660,000.

This is almost $60,000,000 more than was collected a year ago under the higher rates and is $100,000,000 more than treasury officials estimated would be collected for this quarter.

The collections assure a surplus at the close of this fiscal year, June 30, which probably will be applied to the public debt. The unexpected increase in returns despite the reduced tax rate was attributed by Acting Secretary Winston to the "unusual income and profits resulting last year from the period of prosperity."

The New York federal reserve district reported the largest collections of the 12 districts with $160,802,311. The latest figures on collections by district, which do not take into account final telegraphic reports, follow:

Chicago, $90,104,966; Cleveland, $43,080,713; Philadelphia, $38,280,525; Boston, $36,204,331; San Francisco, $31,368,845; Atlanta, $22,958,029; Richmond, Va., $22,931,211; Kansas City, $14,727,600; St. Louis, $13,929,856; Dallas, $9,947,255; and Minneapolis, $8,816,251.

The collections take into account both personal and corporate income tax payments. An increase also was reported in miscellaneous tax collections, but several of these which were repealed by the new law did not go out until the end of March.

Names Board to Act on Plans for Arizona Dam

Washington.—Secretary of the Interior Work cleared the way for construction of the $5,500,000 Coolidge dam, designed to open to agriculture 100,000 acres of arid land in the Gila River valley, Arizona, by appointing a board of consulting engineers to pass upon specifications. The board will comprise Maj. Gen. L. H. Beach, for five years the War department chief of engineers, now retired; Col. W. C. Langfitt, chief engineer of the A. E. F., and Andrew J. Wiley, an Idaho irrigation engineer.

Spring Planting Plans Same as Last Season

Washington.—Spring planting plans, the Agriculture department announced, "reflect a balance and stability which represent, to some extent, a measure of the ground gained since 1921."

"Of the three main feed grains, corn, oats, and barley, the reported intention is to plant 157,500,000 acres against 155,000,000 last year. The contemplated increase is in oats and barley, the intended corn acreage being practically the same as last year."

Votes to Impeach Judge

Washington.—By an overwhelming majority—306 to 60—the house voted to impeach Federal Judge George W. English of the eastern district of Illinois, for misdemeanors and misbehavior in the conduct of his court at East St. Louis, ending a three days' fight on the floor.

Florida Air-Mail Service

Tampa, Fla.—Air-mail service to the four Florida cities—Miami, Fort Myers, Tampa and Jacksonville—was inaugurated when planes hopped off from Miami and Jacksonville.

Ammunition Intercepted

New York.—Twenty-seven thousand rounds of small arms and rifle ammunition designed for the battles of a new Mexican revolution were seized by customs inspectors, who raided the freighter Cauto and arrested three alleged ammunition smugglers.

Children Die in Fire

Topoka, Kan.—Three small children of Ralph Brace were burned to death when the Brace farmhouse caught fire.

Marshall—Tracy C. Horton, principal of the Homer high school, has resigned to take effect at the close of the school year. He has accepted a position in Howell, his home town.

Monroe—Roland Raymo, his wife and two children were driven from their home here during a fire of undetermined origin. The four jumped from the window of a bedroom on the second floor when smoke filled the house. Firemen saved the home.

Adrian—Adrian College was closed March 25 for two weeks because of the prevalence of influenza among the students. It is hoped by this means to prevent a serious epidemic. Several of the cases are quite severe, but no members of the faculty are affected thus far.

Albion—Dr. Washington Gardner, former United States representative and United States Commissioner of pensions, has gone to the sanitarium at Battle Creek for rest. He recently underwent an operation at Ann Arbor for eye trouble. Dr. Gardner celebrated his 51st birthday a few days ago.

Grand Rapids—Rep. At Dykstra has placed before the city commission a protest against the municipal administration becoming a party to the performance of any unnecessary labor on Sunday. He said that on Sunday while returning home from church, he discovered employees of a contractor at work in a sewer excavation.

Lansing—Before leaving for Detroit to take a trip to Durango, Mexico, to visit his brother, C. C. Groesbeck, Gov. Alex. J. Groesbeck announced that prison labor would be used on State roads to the same extent this year as last season. The peak number of prisoners employed on the roads last summer was 700.

Lansing—Michigan farmers this year will plant 30 per cent more spring wheat, one per cent more corn, seven per cent more oats, two per cent less hay and 10 per cent less barley than they did last year, according to a report, made public by the Michigan Co-operative Crop Reporting Service. The potato acreage will be about the same as last year, according to present indications.

Lansing—Traffic between Monroe and Jackson and Toledo and Ypsilanti may be halted indefinitely due to the dilapidated condition of a bridge across the Raisin river in Monroe county, over which M-50 and M-65 cross, has been reported to the state highway department. In spite of the division engineer's warning highway authorities have not yet closed the bridge or ordered it condemned.

Detroit—The American Car & Foundry Motors Co., combining the resources and staff of the Fageol Motors Co. of Knt. O., and the Hall-Scott Motors Co. of Berkeley, Calif., in a $24,000,000 development, has decided to locate its main plant for the manufacture of motor buses and motor coaches in Detroit, according to an announcement made here by C. S. Sale, president.

Adrian—Denying whispered criticisms that they were prudes for bringing to the attention of Adrian college officials the fact that 10 men students had drunk liquor at their dance, members of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority declare their action was backed only by a desire to uphold the traditions of the college, their own ideals and the law of the land. The names of the men students, who were suspended from classes until April 6, were not divulged.

Owosso—Frank Yeoman, 45, of this city, waived examination in justice court and was bound over to circuit court on a charge of altering auto license plates. Officers say he had changed his 1925 license plates to read 1926. The alleged changing of the plates was discovered when Yeoman was arrested on a charge of driving while drunk. He paid a fine of $60 and lost his license for one year, on that charge. Four others were arrested with him for being drunk.

Mt. Clemens—The First Pursuit Group of Selfridge Field will leave here April 20 for Fairfield, O., to take part in the 10-day maneuvers of the bombardment and combat groups of Langlin and Chanute Fields, a program designed to test the efficiency of the first line of defense now possessed by the Army air service. It is expected, according to Capt. Vincent B. Dixon, acting commander of Selfridge Field, that about 12 pursuit pilots will be named to fly in the maneuvers.

Detroit—More than $350,000 worth of war time insurance has been reinstated or converted by Michigan former service men since the United States Veterans' Bureau began its campaign two weeks ago to acquaint men and women who served in the World war with the privilege held out to them by the government of obtaining insurance at rates substantially lower than those offered by private companies. It is stated by the Michigan regional office of the bureau at 318 Jefferson avenue.

Ypsilanti—With seven deaths reported over one week end, a special warning has been issued by the Ypsilanti health department regarding the prevalence of pneumonia, which has reached almost the proportion of an epidemic here. A couple of days of absolute rest in bed at the first symptom of approaching illness is the recommendation of local physicians. The pneumonia followed an outbreak of influenza which is estimated to have caused 1,000 cases of illness at one time here during the past two weeks.

SIDE LINES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

GILMORE was in the insurance business in a good-sized town where insurance had been worked very little. It was an excellent territory in which, with the proper effort, he could have made something worth while. As it was, he was doing well and accumulating a creditable bank account. He didn't wear himself out talking insurance; in fact, he got interested in a side line—Christmas cards and embossed stationery—and I used to think that he gave more time to his side line and showed more interest in it than he did in his main business.

When a prospect began to yawn a little and to grow restless under the insurance line that Gilmore handed out, he would introduce Christmas cards or the latest styles in writing paper and the uncertain insurance prospect would fall for what he considered the lesser evil and order a few cards. Gilmore finally gave so much time to his trifling side line that his insurance business went onto the rocks.

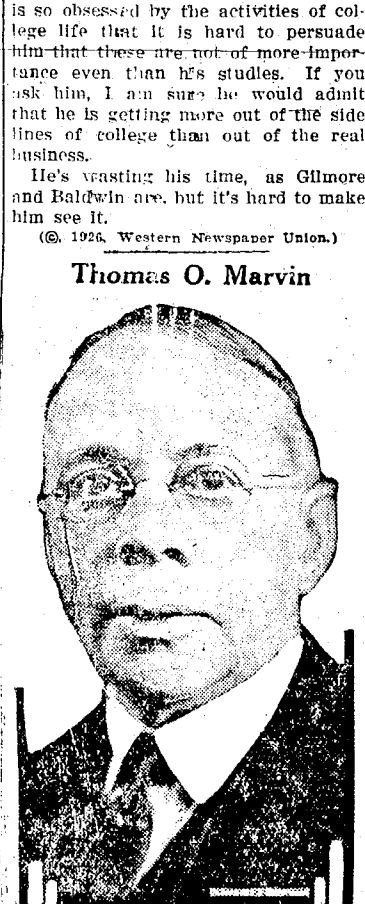

Baldwin was a lawyer, or at least that is what the gilded sign over his doorway indicated—"J. C. Baldwin, attorney at law," the legend said—but Baldwin was more devoted to his side lines than to the mysteries and intricacies of a legal practice. He was chairman of the social committee of the Country club, and that duty consumed a considerable part of his time. He was president of the village Rotary club, and did a lot of work on the board of trustees of the Presbyterian church, and held high offices in four or five secret and fraternal organizations of the town, and he was an active Republican. His main side line, if I may so denominate it, was his fraternity. In college Baldwin had developed the idea that the two great moral and political influences in the world were his fraternity and the Republican party. He allowed his wife to devote herself to politics while he looked after the fraternity. He was the high and mighty potentate of that organization and made long trips over the country and many inspirational talks, and did much eating at banquets given in his honor and much writing of papers. There is no doubt that Baldwin did a good work in these side lines, but in the meantime the law business suffered, and the financial returns from the side lines were quite inadequate to meet the family needs.

Mason, in college, is giving so much time to the side lines of society and athletics and religion and politics that he has little or no time for the real thing for which he came to college. He is so obsessed by the activities of college life that it is hard to persuade him that these are not of more importance even than his studies. If you ask him, I am sure he would admit that he is getting more out of the side lines of college than out of the real business.

He's wasting his time, as Gilmore and Baldwin are, but it's hard to make him see it.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

"Fox, Lion, and Dog" Because the validity of the election of Pope Boniface VIII (1294-1303) was questioned he was said to have come in "like a fox." SEE GREAT DANGER FROM MELTING SNOW

Greater Portion of Country Covered—Streams Rise.

Chicago.—From the Rocky mountains to the New England states, snowfalls of varying depth have been the program the past week, and many streams threaten severe damage, some already reported out of their banks. Officials of the weather bureau expressed fear of danger of heavy floods, especially in the Mississippi valley, in event of a quick thaw.

In the region west of Chicago the snowfall was the heaviest on record for this time of the year. Western Illinois reported 21 inches in three days, an all-time record. Roads leading into numerous small towns throughout the state and the entire Midwest have been blocked, and much suffering has resulted from shortage of fuel and food.

At St. Joseph, Mo., a new record was established with a fall of 13 inches; and St. Louis reported that practically all roads in northern Missouri have, for several days, been blocked by high drifts. Sleet and some rain featured the storms which have followed in close succession.

The heavy fall of snow on the eastern slopes of the Rockies in Colorado forced the eastward-bound air-mail planes down at Rock Springs, Wyo. The storm in the far western states reached its worst pitch around Great Falls, Mont., where very cold weather accompanied the snowfall.

While the extreme southern section of the country escaped the fury of the week's blizzards, unusual weather conditions have prevailed in nearly every section.

Governor Davis Denies Part in Boodle Deal

Topeka, Kan.—Testifying in his trial on a charge of bribery, former Gov. Jonathan M. Davis of Kansas declared that his son, Russell Davis, had acted without his knowledge and consent in accepting $1,250 in delivering a pardon to Fred W. Pollman, convicted banker.

The son, who is being tried jointly, had asserted on the stand previously that his father knew nothing of the acceptance of the $1,250. Young Davis said it was a case of taking advantage of an opportunity to make "some easy money"; that he learned by accident that his father was issuing a pardon to Pollman, and that he merely got his father's consent to deliver the document and on this account took the money that Pollman had offered.

To Use Airplanes to Kill Off Mosquitoes

Washington.—Marines stationed at Quantico, Va., plan to fight mosquitoes this summer with airplanes.

Sawdust soaked in water containing arsenic is the new weapon to be used against the pest, and it will be scattered over the creek and swamp lands from airplanes. Experiments have demonstrated its effectiveness against mosquitoes, Commander McLean said, and far from proving harmful to vegetable, fish, fowls or persons, it will serve as a tonic.

Will Collect Friendly Flies

Washington.—Not all kinds of flies deserve to be swatted, and the Smithsonian Institution will collect in Guatemala a few that are on man's side in the fight for supremacy.

Fire Destroys 400 Homes

Manila.—More than 3,000 persons have been rendered homeless by a fire, which destroyed 400 houses in the town of Kamagayan, Cebu province. The small houses, mostly constructed of nipa and bamboo, burned rapidly.

Business Section Burns

Sioux City, Iowa.—Fire practically wiped out the business section of Center, S. D. The loss was estimated at $200,000.
